Call Joe Rivietz
By appointment only,
905-738-4588
STAINMASTER
www.rivieraflooring.com

Benjamin Group
Through the generations ...a sacred trust
MY GRANDFATHER'S PROMISE

"Our family continues to uphold my grandfather Henry Benjamin's promise to serve our community's funeral-related needs."
Michael Benjamin
My grandfather was a Russian immigrant with a grocery store on College Street. Since he had a wagon, a rare thing in our community at the time, Toronto's first Chevra Kadisha asked for his help delivering bodies for burial. Over time, he became deeply committed to the sacred work of the Chevra Kadisha. For more of Henry's story, please visit the Benjamin Group website.
2401 Steeles Ave., West, Toronto
416-663-9060
www.thebenjamingroup.ca
The Benjamin Group companies:
Benjamin's Park Memorial Chapel; Benjamin's Landmark Monuments; The Benjamin Foundation; The Benjamin Institute; Benjamin's Lifecycle Financial Services.

Fed up with constant hypocrisy

From the editor's desk...

Last week the Globe and Mail published a 23-word excerpt from a statement Faisal Shahzad made in a New York courtroom after he was sentenced for having attempted to detonate a car bomb in downtown New York City.

"Brace yourselves," Shahzad warned, "because the war with Muslims has just begun. Consider me the first droplet of the blood that will flow."

Of course, the man was intent on further blustering widely his malevolent bombast as part of the program of slaughtering and terrorizing innocents that he some time ago set as the high purpose of his religious life.

Nor was it a histrionic charade on his part. He believed deeply in the message.

The same week, various western governments issued travel alerts warning their citizens against heading to Europe due to the possibility of terrorist actions at key tourist sites there. Media outlets of all technologies and nationalities carried news of the alerts non-stop.

It was against this backdrop of obscenely florid anti-western imagery and heightened travel anxiety that the Rosh Hashanah sermon of Rabbi Shalom Lewis of Congregation Etz Chaim in Marietta, Ga., zipped instantaneously through the invisible ether into countless e-mail accounts around the world.

The sermon was titled Ehr Kumt, ("He Is Coming," in Yiddish). The title is taken from a speech given in 1938 by the firebrand visionary of the Revisionist Zionists, Ze'ev Jabotinsky, to a gathering of Jews in the Choral Synagogue in Kovno (Kaunas), Lithuania.

Jabotinsky pleaded with his coreligionists to stir from their complacency, to rise from their inertia, to overcome their fears and leave their homes immediately before it was too late, that is, before the Nazis arrived. Hitler was marching toward them, Jabotinsky warned, as inexorably as the rising tides during a deluge. Hitler was coming, he warned.

Rabbi Lewis poignantly used the reference, explaining it in the context of a conversation he had with an elderly family friend who had actually been in the Choral Synagogue those many years earlier when Jabotinsky spoke.

Rabbi Lewis had two purposes in mind in invoking the Choral Synagogue sermon: specifically to draw a historic parallel between the situation then and the situation today; but more generally, to call our attention to the important need for us to pay more attention to the lessons of history.

He was not being an alarmist. He was forceful, yet thoughtful. The sermon was well-written, well-constructed and well-reasoned.

"We are not in Lithuania," Rabbi Lewis emphasized. "It is not the 1930s. There is no Luftwaffe overhead. No U-boats off the coast of long Island. No Panzer divisions on our borders. But make no mistake; we are under attack our values, our tolerance, our freedom, our virtue, our land."

Aware that he might indeed be sounding like an alarmist to some congregants, Rabbi Lewis also took great pains time and again to let his congregants know that he was not.

"Now before some folks roll their eyes and glance at their watches, let me state emphatically, unmistakably, I have no pathology of hate, nor am I a manic Paul Revere, galloping through the countryside. I am not a pessimist, nor prone to panic attacks. I am a lover of humanity, all humanity."

Rabbi Lewis is an experienced congregational leader. He has been with Etz Chaim for more than three decades, since 1977. In conversation with The CJN last week, Rabbi Lewis said that he had received only one note of criticism from the more than 2,500 people who heard the sermon.

Since the sermon appeared on the Internet, he has been swamped with e-mails "from all over." Perhaps a dozen, he said, have been disparaging.

It was "the constant hypocrisy of our times, especially after the Gaza flotilla incident" that convinced him to speak on the subject.

Rabbi Lewis had no qualms in identifying the enemy of our values and our freedom.

"Today, the enemy is radical Islam... Let me state that the overwhelming number of Muslims are good Muslims, fine human beings who want nothing more than a Jeep Cherokee in their driveway, a flat-screen TV on their wall and a good education for their children, but these good Muslims have an obligation to destiny, to decency that thus far for the most part they have avoided."

For those of us who doubt or question Rabbi Lewis' conclusions, he urged us to be guided by history.

"Did anyone imagine in the 1920s what Europe would look like in the 1940s? Did anyone presume to know in the coffee houses of Berlin or in the opera halls of Vienna that genocide would soon become the celebrated culture?

"We must be diligent students of history and not sit in ash cloth at the waters of Babylon weeping... We cannot be lulled into inaction for fear of offending the offenders."

The full text of Rabbi Lewis' Rosh Hashanah sermon can be found at the synagogue's website, www.etzchaim.net.

It warrants being read.

– MBD

A REENA NIGHT AT THE RACES

The Reena Foundation's Race Night for Reena at Woodbine Racetrack generated approximately $38,000 for outreach, respite and enrichment programs. From left are event attendees Samantha Rubens, The CJN promotions manager David Collin, Jennifer Israel and Heather Popliger.

EXECUTIVE TRAVEL MAGAZINE
HYATT
GOLD AWARD
Siesta Key Beach is ranked the # 2 beach in the U.S.
This winter, let the kids do the shoveling.

Nothing warms your heart more than a beautiful moment in time, when family traditions are built alongside sandcastles, and barefoot luxury becomes an everyday reality. Welcome to Hyatt Siesta Key Beach, where owning a fractional beachfront residence means enjoying our world-class resort amenities and services, with the added benefit of access to other Hyatt Vacation Club properties across the country. This winter, lose the layers and experience the warmth of a luxurious getaway that can last a lifetime, and longer.

Call 866.982.4546 today to learn more about our special offer to experience Hyatt Siesta Key Beach. Deeded fractional ownership starting at $110,000.

HYATT RESIDENCE CLUB™ SARASOTA

Real Luxury. Extraordinary Value.

www.HyattSiestaKeyBeach.com

HYATT VACATION CLUB PROPERTIES

Aspen, Carmel, Beaver Creek, Breckenridge, N Lake Tahoe, Sedona, San Antonio, Bonita Springs, Puerto Rico, Key West, Northstar at Tahoe, Siesta Key.

Experience Amica at Thornhill's October events

HELPING HANDS Brings TIFF 2009 to Amica! ~
Sunday, October 17th, 2010
Afternoon & Night showing of one of our favourite flicks! Tickets for only $5.00! Includes movie, popcorn and beverage.

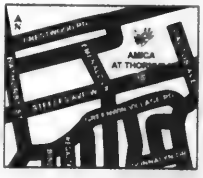
Oktoberfest Pub Afternoon ~
Friday, October 22nd, 2010 - 2:00 pm to 4:00 pm
An afternoon of entertainment, pub fare and various beer tastings.

Tea & Talk: Driving Tips for Winter Months ~
Thursday, October 28th, 2010 - 2:00 pm to 4:00 pm
Ice, snow, cold and driving don't tend to mix. Enjoy a cup of tea, while we sit back relax and learn about driving Tips for Winter Months.

RSVP is required for all events. Please call to book your spot today!

Vacation or Respite Stays starting at $89.00 a night.

Amica at Thornhill
A Wellness & Vitality™ Residence
546 Steeles Avenue West
Thornhill, ON L4J 1A2
905.886.3400
www.amica.ca



10-1390

- Luxury Independent Rental Retirement Living
- All Inclusive
- Full Service Fine Dining
- Wellness & Vitality™ Programs
- Amica VITALIS™ Assisted Living Suites & Services

AMICA

Greater Toronto Area

Former Shin Bet head issues dire warning

Terrorism will increase if peace talks fail

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Israel will face an upsurge of terrorism and further international criticism and isolation if current peace talks with the Palestinian Authority collapse, warns Ami Ayalon, the former director of the Shin Bet, Israel's domestic intelligence service.

The negotiations, launched early last month in a ceremony in Washington, D.C., under the sponsorship of the United States, were thrown into doubt after the partial 10-month-old construction moratorium in the West Bank expired, prompting the Palestinians to suspend their participation in the process.

In an interview in Toronto last week, conducted before Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu convened his cabinet to discuss the possibility of extending the partial moratorium in exchange for U.S. security guarantees, Ayalon said that if the Palestinians pull out of the talks, Israel should expect severe long-term consequences.

Ami Ayalon
[S. Kirshner photo]

"Security will deteriorate and there will be more terror," said Ayalon, who headed the Shin Bet from 1996 to 2000 and served as minister without portfolio in the Israeli cabinet from 2007 onward. He currently runs AKIM, an organization that assists Israelis with intellectual disabilities.

The chaos following a breakdown of talks might well create a situation in which Hamas eventually seizes control of the West Bank through elections or violence, noted Ayalon, a former naval commando who commanded the Israeli Navy from 1992 to 1996.

The suspension of talks would further radicalize Israeli Arabs, isolate Israel internationally and embolden Iran to lead the Muslim world, added Ayalon, who came in second to Ehud Barak in a Labor party leadership race three years ago.

Ayalon said that if the two-state option fades away and Palestinians in the West Bank are denied equal rights by the Israeli government, international opinion could well downplay Israel's struggle for security and brand Israel as an apartheid state.

An agreement between Israel and the Palestinians should be based on the People's Voice peace initiative, he said.

Jointly launched in 2003 by Ayalon and Sari Nusseibeh, a Palestinian peace activist and university professor, the initiative is based on a negotiated two-state solution.

Under the initiative, Israel would be the state of the Jewish people, while Palestine would be the state of the Palestinians. The Palestinian state would be demilitarized

Permanent borders would be drawn on the basis of the June 4, 1967, lines, and border modifications would be based on an equal 1:1 land swap taking into account security, territorial contiguity and demographic considerations.

If the initiative is implemented, Ayalon observed, Israel would retain from two to four per cent of the West Bank hugging the old Green Line.

After the establishment of agreed borders, Jewish settlers would leave the Palestinian state, which will be composed of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip. He estimates that upward of 90,000 Jewish settlers would return to their former homes in Israel.

Jerusalem would be the capital of the two states, with freedom of religion and full access to holy sites guaranteed to Israelis and Palestinians. Neither side would exercise control over the holy places, but Israel would be the guardian of the Western Wall and the Palestinians would be the guardian of the Temple Mount.

Arab and Jewish neighbourhoods in Jerusalem would, respectively, come under Palestinian and Israeli sovereignty.

Palestinian refugees would return to a Palestinian state rather than Israel, and an international fund would compensate them for their suffering.

The conflict would be terminated and all claims from both sides would end.

Ayalon said the goal of the initiative was to canvas support for its broad principles by collecting Israeli and Palestinian signatures. According to Ayalon, 450,000 signatures, of whom 190,000 are Palestinian, have been collected.

Ayalon and his Palestinian partner have not actively worked on their plan in recent years.

"According to polls, most Israelis and Palestinians are ready to accept our ideas," Ayalon said.

The initiative has been endorsed by leaders on both sides, he said, citing Ehud Olmert, Israel's former prime minister, and Tzipi Livni, Israel's former foreign minister and current leader of the opposition Kadimah party.

"People around [Mahmoud] Abbas – the president of the Palestinian Authority – and in Jordan and Egypt have told me that the parameters of an agreement will be based on our initiative."

Netanyahu has not endorsed the initiative. But several years ago, Netanyahu's current national security adviser, Uzi Arad, told Ayalon he had urged him to embrace it.

Ayalon expressed confidence that the principles of his initiative will be reflected in a peace treaty between Israel and the Palestinians.

CUSTOMER APPRECIATION EVENT

4 DAYS ONLY!

October 14th to 17th

SAVE $500

PRECOR

EFX 5.23 ELLIPTICAL

- CrossRamp® technology for Variable Stride Geometry
- Touch Heart Rate with SmartRate®
- 8 programs & 2 user IDs

OUR PRICE $2498

Reg. Price $2998

Limited quantities, see store for details.

Guaranteed Lowest Prices in North America.
Delivery & Set Up • Financing Available
For a location near you, visit fitnessdepot.ca

fitness DEPOT
your EXERCISE EQUIPMENT SUPERSTORES

RENTAL RETIREMENT LIVING AT YONGE & EGLINTON

WHY NOT START THE DAY WITH EVERYTHING?

- Independent and Personalized Lifestyle Packages
- 1 & 2 Bdrm suites with full kitchens
- Licensed Fine Dining
- Fitness Centre with Pools
- 24-hour Professional Staff
- Social & Recreational Programs
- Full Service Spa & Hair Salon
- Flexible Short Term, Respite and Trial Stays

ALL INCLUSIVE FROM $3,500/MTH

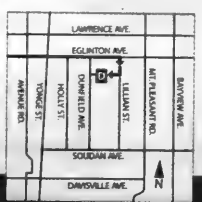
The Dunfield RETIREMENT RESIDENCE

Limited SNOWBIRD SUITES Now Available

BOOK NOW AND SAVE THOUSANDS!*

Model Suite Now Open!
77 Dunfield Ave., Toronto
Call today for more information or personal tour.
416-481-8524

*See sales representatives for details.
Prices and specifications subject to change without notice. E. & O. E. 2010.



WWW.THEDUNFIELD.COM

Greater Toronto Area

Livni says Israel should be Jewish and democratic

Continued from page 1

Livni said two diametrically opposing "visions" of Israel's future are in play in Israel today.

The first envisages Jews living in the entire Land of Israel, including the West Bank, while the second envisages Israel as a Jewish and a democratic state.

"These are two different visions," she said, defining the debate that has raged in Israel since the Six Day War. "We have to decide what vision we want."

The Jewish people have a right to the whole Land of Israel, the place where their forefathers dwelled and the place she loves, Livni said.

"In my vision, Israel should be a Jewish and a democratic state," she asserted, suggesting that an absence of peace would transform Israel into a bi-national state, the worst-case scenario.

Country must respect Jewish life outside Israel

Fleshing out her definition of a Jewish state, Livni said it should hew to Jewish values, traditions, symbols and holidays without becoming a theocracy, respect differences, uphold the importance of diversity and make it possible for non-Jews to become part of the Jewish People through conversion to Judaism.

In an apparent dig at the Orthodox rabbinic establishment in Israel, which takes a dim view of Reform and Conservative Judaism, Livni said, "Israel has to respect Jewish life outside Israel."

She added that the Orthodox in Israel, "unfortunately," are unwilling to respect "the diversity of the Jewish world."

By the same token, she noted, secular Israeli Jews are under the illusion they can be Jews merely by speaking Hebrew and serving in the armed forces.

She lamented that Orthodox and secular Jews are worlds apart in Israel. As she put it, "There is no common denominator between them."

Saying she came to Toronto as "a Jew" and "a Jewish mother" rather than as a politician, Livni thanked Jews in Canada for supporting Israel during these "difficult times."

She explained that her reason for entering politics, which she admitted she hates, was to leave her children the legacy of a secure Israel with democratic values living at peace with its Arab neighbours.

Surveying the current political landscape, she said a "huge gap" has opened up between Israel and its image abroad, a gap that must be closed.

Livni said Israel is being subjected to "a process of delegitimization," a phenomenon that affected her directly more than a year ago, when she was forced to cancel a trip to Britain or face the prospect of being arrested as an alleged war criminal.

Saying that Israel must confront this challenge to its existence, Livni warned that delegitimization affects its ability to defend itself.

In a reference to an incident last May during which Israeli commandos killed nine Turkish activists aboard a Turkish ship trying to break Israel's siege of the Gaza Strip, Livni claimed they were acting in self-defence.

Israel does not deliberately target civilians, she said.

Reiterating a plea she made to Ban Ki-moon, the secretary general of the United Nations, Livni said that Iran's president, Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, should no longer be permitted to address the UN.

Cantorial concert planned

Israel Guide Dog Centre to benefit from concert.

The Toronto Council of Hazzanim will hold a gala cantorial concert at Beth David Synagogue at 7:30 p.m. on Oct. 18.

Eight Toronto cantors will be accompanied by the David Warrack Trio as they perform songs of Israel and Broadway.

Participating cantors include Marshall Loomer from Beth David, Anna Trubashnik from Temple Emmanuel, David Rosen from Beth Radom, Ben Silverberg from Shaar Shalom, Tibor Kovari from Beth Tikvah, Eric Moses from Beth Sholom, Gerhon Silins and Katie Oringel from Temple Sinai.

A portion of the proceeds will go the Israel Guide Dog Centre for the Blind.

For tickets and information, call 416-633-5500.

When it comes to this special UJA event, don't you dare

Your

United Jewish Appeal invites you to a uniquely entertaining evening featuring writer, director, producer, stand-up comic and star of the hit HBO television series Curb Your Enthusiasm, Jeff Garlin.

Wednesday, October 27
7:30 pm

Fairmont Royal York Hotel
100 Front Street West

Tickets: $30

To register, please call Janine at 416.631.5707 or visit ujaevents.com/registration/JeffGarlin

To make your Campaign gift, call 416.631.5700 or visit ujadonations.com

Open to all community members who commit to making a gift to the current UJA Campaign 2011

Tickets selling quickly!

Dessert Reception / Kashruth observed

NEW CHALLENGES. ETERNAL STRENGTH.

UNITED JEWISH APPEAL

The Canadian Jewish news

An independent community newspaper serving as a forum for diverse viewpoints
Publisher and Proprietor
The Canadian Jewish News, a corporation without share capital
Head Office
1500 Don Mills Rd., Suite 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4

Sacrificing Lebanon on Iran's altar?

Iran's president, Mahmoud Ahmadinejad was scheduled to visit Lebanon this week. His itinerary was to take him southward merely kilometres from the Israeli border to the Hezbollah villages of Bint Jbeil and Maroun al-Ras. As reported in The CJN last week, the Iranian leader was interested in reaching even up to the border itself in order to hurl stones at Israeli soldiers on the other side, much like late professor of literature at Columbia University, Edward Said, did some years ago.

Israel, of course, is justifiably upset and worried that Ahmadinejad's visit will provoke unforeseen reactions that could lead to violent confrontation. It has sent messages to Lebanese Prime Minister Saad Hariri and President Michel Suleiman through the United Nations, the United States and France urging them to prevent the Iranian leader from reaching the border. As of this writing, the government of Lebanon had not responded to the messages.

Ahmadinejad's purpose however is far grander than merely posing for the cameras as he heroically casts stones at the "Zionist entity." He is, in fact, running cover for his Hezbollah surrogates.

The release of the report of the UN's Special Tribunal for Lebanon into the murder of former Lebanese prime minister Rafik Hariri is imminent. Pundits speculate that the report will point the finger of responsibility at Hezbollah.

But Hezbollah has made it quite clear that dire consequences will result for Lebanon if its government accepts the UN's conclusions.

As reported in the Jerusalem Post, Nawwaf al-Moussawi, a Hezbollah MP in the Lebanese parliament, warned that any Lebanese who accepted the tribunal's findings of blame for Hezbollah would be killed as a "collaborator" with Israel and the United States. In addition, Hezbollah fighters have been reportedly deployed in several "sensitive" locations throughout the country. The Iranian-controlled puppet party of Sheikh Hassan Nasrallah is determined to cause as much internal Lebanese instability as possible. Some observers charge that Hezbollah is actually preparing for the overthrow of the Lebanese government.

In both causes, Ahmadinejad would be a willing participant. Hezbollah has no independent existence today absent the largesse and the directives from Tehran. He would delight in wresting control of Lebanon away from the Lebanese and into the blood-stained hands of his Shia proxies. He would also delight in deflecting international attention away from his nuclear ambitions.

If Iran manages successfully to steal the reins of power in Lebanon for Hezbollah, it would mean victory for the Iranian leader's fellow travellers: Hamas, the Muslim Brotherhood, Islamic Jihad and Al Qaeda. It would also mean the end of Lebanon, a place that might have once emerged into a fine country had it not been sacrificed to Iran by timid and craven powers on the altar of Iran's malevolent intentions. But it is not likely that Israel would stand idly by.

25 years ago in The CJN

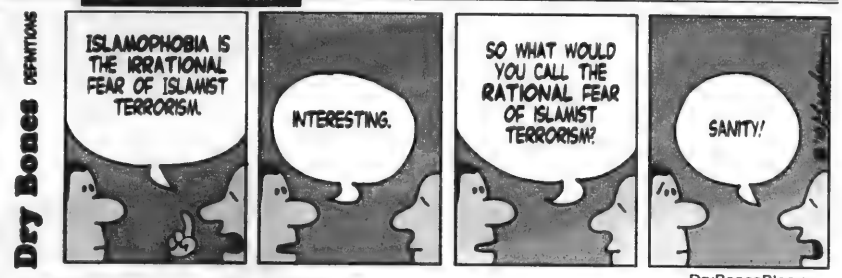
Four Palestinian terrorists who hijacked the Italian cruise liner Achille Lauro in the Mediterranean Sea surrendered to Egyptian authorities after a two-day standoff during which they killed disabled 69-year-old American Jew, Leon Klinghoffer.



Dry Bones
ISLAMOPHOBIA IS THE IRRATIONAL FEAR OF ISLAMIST TERRORISM.
INTERESTING.
SO WHAT WOULD YOU CALL THE RATIONAL FEAR OF ISLAMIST TERRORISM?
SANITY!
DryBonesBlog.com

Editorial Advisory Board: Guy Abeodi, Maurice Bennaar, Michael Brown, Donald Carr, Rabbi Michael Dolgin, Daniel Fermaa, Igor Korenzvit, Keith Landy, Hindy Najman, Lou Rosson, Alan Sandler, Rabbi Philip Scheim, Mike Shriqui, Pamela Medjuck Stein, Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, Ehud Teleni, Nelson Wiseman.

Journalist espouses extreme left views

On Sept. 20 at McGill University in Montreal, under the auspices of Canadians for Justice and Peace in the Middle East, Israeli journalist Gideon Levy was invited to speak about his new book, The Punishment of Gaza. Levy, known for espousing views typically on the margins of the Israeli political left, lived up to his reputation.

In his lecture, Levy downplayed the threats facing Israel on the front lines, fuelling the tangibly anti-Israel sentiment prevalent in the crowd. Levy, who himself acknowledges the freedom bestowed upon him as a journalist and as an Israeli citizen, still seized the opportunity to challenge the fundamentals of Israeli democracy. When speaking of the March of the Living, the annual high school student educational experience in Poland, Levy dared to say, "When Israeli students visit Auschwitz, they come back very nationalistic, if not racist." That picture he paints of Israelis is one I cannot identify with. Israeli students who visit Auschwitz return more sympathetic to the pains of the world, and with a stronger connection to their Jewish history.

Levy's final message was one of utter pessimism. He does not have hope in the renewed peace talks. He does not view them as positive nor productive, and offers a diagnosis with no prescription for a solution.

Despite Levy, Israel will still pursue peace, despite its partners and dissidents, and continue to thrive as the Middle East's only democracy.

Mitch Sohmer
Montreal

* * *

Artscroll has accomplished wonders

Prof. Martin Lockshin, in the article "The Artscroll revolution," (Sept. 16), criticized Artscroll publishers, especially for writing classical Hebrew works into English. It hurt me to read this, as I personally have witnessed the wonders that Artscroll has been able to accomplish.

Many years ago, when one had to take a ferry to get to Prince Edward Island, my family and I decided to vacation there. Knowing that there are no shuls or Jewish community centres in P.E.I., we asked the shul in Moncton, N.B., if they knew of any Jews living on the island. They gave us the name and address of a farmer whom we visited. We drove to his home on the eastern part of the island. He was very friendly and told us about the few Jews who live in P.E.I. As we were talking, another man who had been informed we were coming entered, holding a briefcase. He told the farmer that he had brought the book the farmer had been asking for. The farmer was elated. The first man opened his briefcase and, incredibly, took out an Artscroll Talmud in English! The two men told us that they live on opposite sides of the island and learn Talmud on the telephone two to three times a week! We were astounded to say the least.

Thanks to Artscroll, Jews in the farthest-flung parts of the world are learning God's Torah. What was once only comprehensible for those who had a yeshiva background is now available to all. Would Lockshin prefer that Jews remain ignorant of their heritage? (Much of the Talmud is written in Aramaic and is difficult even for those fluent in Hebrew.) Anything that facilitates the return of our brethren to their heritage should be commended by all. Especially when it comes to studying Talmud, for "there is no greater measure than this!" (Bava Metzia 33).

Mordechai Bulua
Montreal

LET THEM GO...
Ron Arad, Zachary Baumel, Zvi Feldman, Guy Hever, Yehuda Katz

1573
The number of days Hamas has held Gilad Schalit captive

* * *

CJC offers 'sensible' correction

I was much relieved when the Canadian Jewish Congress offered an informed and sensible correction to the declarations from B'nai Brith in Montreal regarding the cartoonist who drew an image of Parliament Hill with the Peace Tower in the background and what appeared to be a Star of David in the centre of its clock face ("CJC comes to defence of Le Droit cartoonist," Sept. 29).

Moshe Herscovici
Montreal

* * *

Romanian sefer Torah's origins

Did you live in Romania before World War II? If so, we need your help! The Toronto Heschel School is privileged to own a Romanian sefer Torah that survived the Holocaust and is looking for background history about it.

The sefer Torah first belonged to Rabbi Zalman Laifer of Temeshvar (Timisoara), Romania. It was written by sofer Pinchas Breuer around 1930. Rabbi Laifer (and the Torah) moved to Boro Park, N.Y., after World War II.

Our goal is continuity. We hope to uncover more background information to not only teach and inspire our students, but also to preserve our Jewish history for future generation. If you lived in Temeshvar before the war, knew Rabbi Laifer or Pinchas Breuer, we would love to talk to you.

Please contact the school at 416-635-1876, ext. 613, or e-mail torah@torontoheschel.org, or write the Toronto Heschel School, 819 Sheppard Ave. W. Toronto M3H 2T3.

Linda Wolfond
Sefer Torah Committee
Toronto Heschel School

The Canadian Jewish News reserves the right to refuse advertising that in its opinion is misleading, in poor taste or incompatible with the advertising policies of the newspaper. Acceptance of advertising does not imply endorsement by The Canadian Jewish News. The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Letters are welcome if they are brief, in English or French, typewritten with lines double spaced, and of interest to our reading public. Readers are cautioned not to make sweeping claims against persons or institutions which they cannot verify, as libel laws are very stringent. We reserve the right to edit and condense letters, which must bear the sender's address, phone number and both handwritten and typed signatures. Letters sent by e-mail must also include the sender's municipal address. cjninfo@gmail.com

Perspectives

Israel and U.S. negotiate

By LESLIE SUSSER

Following reports of an unprecedented U.S. offer of a host of assurances in return for a 60-day extension of the freeze on building in West Bank settlements, some political analysts are wondering why Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has not grabbed the deal with both hands.

According to the reports, U.S. President Barack Obama is offering Netanyahu pledges that the United States will:

- Not ask for additional extensions on the partial ban on settlement building, which expired Sept. 26;
- Commit to using the U.S. veto to prevent UN recognition of a unilaterally declared Palestinian state, if Israeli-Palestinian negotiations fail to bear fruit;
- "Accept the legitimacy" of Israel's security needs as defined by the Netanyahu government – understood as referring to Netanyahu's demand for a long-term Israeli military presence in the Jordan Valley, in the eastern West Bank;
- Broker talks with neighbouring Arab states on a "regional security structure" – a nod to Netanyahu's desire for co-operation on confronting Iran;
- Enhance Israel's security through the sale of a second squadron of state-of-the-art stealth F-35 fighters and space co-operation, including access to U.S. satellite early warning systems.

The price: Israel must agree to extend for 60 days the recently expired West Bank building freeze.

If Netanyahu spurns the offer, Israel not only would lose out on all the above, but the Americans would come out publicly in support of the 1967 borders as the basis for all future territorial negotiations with the Palestinians.

On its face, the deal would seem like a no-brainer for Netanyahu to take. So why hasn't he?

For one thing, it's not only up to Netanyahu. He needs the approval of a settlement freeze extension from his 29-member cabinet or at least his 15-member Security Cabinet, and he doesn't have enough votes yet in those bodies. While by most accounts Netanyahu is inclined to take the deal and is pushing for cabinet members to approve it, the United States first might have to sweeten the pot.

The U.S. offer followed intensive negotiations in Washington between Israeli Defence Minister Ehud Barak and an American team led by veteran Middle East adviser Dennis Ross. The idea was to affirm the U.S. commitments in a presidential letter to Netanyahu to persuade him and pro-settlement members of his government to go along with a new temporary freeze – and in so doing keep alive the direct Israeli-Palestinian peace talks launched in early September. Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas has pledged to quit the talks if the freeze is not extended.

For now, the Israeli prime minister is being pressed by cabinet hardliners not to accept the American package as is. They warn that it is all very general and that much of it will not stand up in practice.

The hardliners are suspicious, too, of Barak's motives. They believe Barak is behind the American offer because he fears that if the peace talks with the Palestinians break down, his Labor Party would be forced to withdraw from the government. Such a move would cost Barak the post of defence minister and, in all likelihood, his political future.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton and Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas in a less diplomatically tense moment last month in Washington. [IGPO photo]

As things stand, Netanyahu does not have the votes for the deal.

In the full 29-member cabinet, 14 ministers are for extending the freeze and 15 are against. In the 15-member security cabinet, the count is seven for and eight against, and in the unofficial forum of seven top advisers, three are for extending the freeze and four are against.

In Netanyahu's governing coalition, without the support of Yisrael Beiteinu, Shas, Torah Judaism, Habayit Hayehudi and Likud hardliners, the prime minister would have the support of fewer than 40 members of the 120-member Knesset.

Netanyahu's greatest political fear is of a repeat of 1999, when after making concessions to Palestinians at Wye Plantation, he lost his right-wing political support base and was roundly defeated by Barak in the ensuing election. This time, the scenario that Netanyahu wants to avoid is accepting an American package, going ahead with the peacemaking and then losing the next election to Kadima's Tzipi Livni.

Even if Netanyahu could jettison the pro-settler parties from his coalition and bring in Kadima – changing the balance of power in the government and the Knesset in favour of pro-negotiation parties, and accepting the U.S. package – it could cost him the premiership.

Netanyahu therefore is being extra careful about making any moves that could lose him large swaths of what he sees as his natural constituency.

The Israeli prime minister also has a major strategic concern. According to confidants, he fears that as soon as any new 60-day freeze ends, the Americans will put a "take it or leave it peace plan" of their own on the table. With the U.S. midterm elections over, Obama might feel able to publicly present parameters for a peace deal that Netanyahu would find impossible to accept.

Israel might then find itself totally isolated and under intolerable international pressure. That is a scenario Netanyahu hopes the current negotiations with the Americans will help him avoid.

So far, Netanyahu has spoken of ongoing "delicate" negotiations with the Americans and implied that much of what has been reported in the press is inaccurate.

As so often in the past, Netanyahu is caught between the U.S. administration and his right-leaning coalition. If he chooses his coalition, he risks losing the support of the current administration. If he chooses America, he fears he could lose his coalition and, with it, the premiership.

What Labor and Likud moderates reportedly are telling him is that it is not 1999, and that now he can have his cake and eat it, too: If he goes with the Americans and the peace process, he will win the next election hands down.

Oren: U.S. offered Israel incentives for settlement freeze extension

By BARAK RAVID
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

JERUSALEM — The United States offered Israel "incentives" geared toward encouraging Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's cabinet to extend the recently expired moratorium on settlement building, Israel's U.S. ambassador Michael Oren said in an Oct. 6 interview with the Washington Post.

"No letter was sent to the prime minister. We are not going to comment on sensitive diplomatic matters," said Benjamin Chang, deputy spokesperson for the White House National Security Council.

Late last month, a White House official denied reports that U.S. President Barack Obama had sent Netanyahu a letter proposing a set of U.S. guarantees to Israel in exchange for Israel extending a freeze on settlement construction.

However, in the first such confirmation by an Israeli official of the existence of a U.S. offer of the kind, Oren told the Post that the U.S. "administration has come back to Israel with a number of suggestions – incentives if you would – that would enable the government to maybe pass a limited extension of two or three months."

"They are talking to the Palestinians as well as trying to keep them at the table and talking to the Arab League so that it would give the Palestinians another green light to continue at the table," Oren said, adding that the result, if any, of such attempts will be received "in the next 48 hours."

The comments by Israel's envoy to the United States came as a top Palestinian negotiator said Oct. 7 that the Palestinians have accepted a U.S. proposal calling on Israel to extend a West Bank settlement slowdown for another two months.

Nabil Shaath says the Palestinians accept such a limited extension, provided the two sides can reach agreement on the borders between Israel and a future Palestine in those two months.

If there's no deal at that time, Shaath said, the settlement freeze would have to be extended further.

Shaath said that in principle, "We will not accept anything less than stopping settlement activity in total, period."

Referring to the existence of an alleged deal based on an offer by the Obama administration, Shaath said that U.S. special envoy to the Middle East, George Mitchell, denied Obama made such an offer to Netanyahu.

In an interview on Nazareth's A-Shams radio station, Shaath said Mitchell made the denial during a meeting with Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas in Ramallah last month.

Shaath reiterated the Palestinians insistence that they would not return to the negotiating table unless Israel extends a freeze on settlement construction in the West Bank and that the Arab League would support that position at its meeting this week.

During a visit to the city of Lod, Netanyahu referred to recent stalls in peace talks with the Palestinians, saying that Israel had "pledged before the international community and the United States to start peace talks."

"The Palestinians waited… 10 months, and set a precondition right off the bat, even though they committed to no preconditions," the prime minister said, adding that the Israeli government's decision "was executed swiftly. We lived up to our obligations"

Netanyahu also said he hoped the PA would "stay at the negotiations table, and I think that the important thing is that we try to advance toward an agreement that would end the conflict between us."

"But today the Palestinians are the ones who should be asked: 'Why are you walking out of the negotiations? Don't turn your back on peace,'" Netanyahu said.

Opinions

Mama's candles

Lighting candles Friday night is difficult for me. When I got married, I followed my mother's custom: light the candles, cover the eyes, circle the flames three times, and recite the blessing. This moment in time is precious to many women, as it brings with it a sense of holiness – a tie to both God, represented as the Sabbath Queen, and real women, those who have gone before us and those who have yet to be born. Lighting candles brings this sacred realm into the home. So candle-lighting is worthy of serious deliberation and action. And I'm troubled by my own actions.

Norma Baumel Joseph in Montreal

There are two ways to light candles. I began my life one way. But after I married, and my husband and I entered the rich world of Sephardi Judaism, I changed. There I learned a different custom of lighting. In Jewish law, there are two ways to light. (The difference depends on the law of what initiates the beginning of the Sabbath.) The Sephardi pattern follows the customary blessing pattern: one makes a blessing then does the deed. For example, we make a blessing called Kiddush and then drink the wine, or we bless the bread and then eat it, not vice versa. So for many Sephardim, the proper way to light candles is to make the blessing and then light the candles.

Seeing this practice and studying the laws of candlelighting convinced me to change my custom.

But I abandoned my mother's custom, and we're commanded to keep the custom of our ancestors – minhag avoteinu b'yadeinu.

I didn't worry about losing Ashkenazi customs. They're strong and getting stronger. I worry more about Sephardi customs being lost.

Regrettably, many Jews from non-Ashkenazi backgrounds have allowed themselves to be overwhelmed by Ashkenazi ritual patterns. They've abandoned the patterns of their ancestors under the guise of becoming more religious. But Ashkenazi ritual piety is not more religious than Sephardi ritual piety.

So after practising both ways for many years, I long to settle my candle bi-polarity. I respect my mother and wish to honour her. She taught me a great deal, especially about the commandment to honour your father and mother. I want to follow her example, especially in this moment of quiet reflection, of sacred space when I invite the Sabbath into my home to rekindle the lights of creativity, revelation and redemption.

My choice now isn't about ritual piety or legal rationality. It's about family, custom and lighting with women the world over. In this column, I found my answer. Thanks.

A way to make giving more meaningful

The holidays are barely over, and we sink back into routine. What can we carry with us into the new year?

Over the holidays, our congregation joins other synagogues in the Vancouver area in Project Isaiah. Congregants fill bags specific for this purpose and return them filled with goods for the Jewish food bank. The response is enormous.

Jean M. Gerber in Vancouver

After all, what does the Haftorah for Yom Kippur teach? "This is my chosen fast… share your bread with the hungry… do not turn away from people in need. Then cleansing light shall break forth like the dawn, and your wounds shall soon be healed… Then you shall call and the Lord will answer; you shall cry out and he will say, 'Here I am.'"

Certainly, fellow Jews in other cities will be equally challenged to contribute to their local food banks, thus adding to the "cleansing light" in all our communities.

For our synagogue, this is the culmination of a year in which members supported the local Jewish food bank. It was part of our year-long Mitzvah Initiative, which asked all members to make a weekly trip to the grocery store and bring food to the shul, where it would be picked up and taken to the Jewish food bank for distribution.

The initiative grew out of a decision to not just study the mitzvot demanded by Isaiah, but to put one of them into practice. The results were overwhelming, with thousands of items donated.

Now we've embarked on a second year. On Yom Kippur, special cloth bags were placed on seats in the two services that we hold to accommodate our members and their friends and families over the holidays. "Let's bag it for hunger" they proclaim. Congregants are urged to take the bags with them on their weekly shopping trips and bring the food to the synagogue, where it's placed in a special receptacle and picked up regularly in advance of the food bank days.

We don't ask for cheques. It's very easy for us to write a cheque once or twice a year for a charity, but making the mitzvah a physical act has a completely different impact.

Let me cite an example. Many years ago, we had a JNF blue box in our home, and we put money in it regularly. Once a year (at least), the boxes would be picked up and emptied by volunteers. One year, I recall that the canvasser who came to our door was surprised to receive change – and cash – from the box. No one, it seemed, was actually putting money aside on a regular basis. When he would arrive, they would sit down and write a cheque.

Now I, too, write a cheque, since no one has asked us for years to fill up a box. Why? Volunteers are in short supply, and yearly campaigns may raise much more than the volunteer-intensive methods of long ago.

Still, I miss that little box. It's really easy to write a cheque, but it's harder to remember the blue "Let's bag it for hunger" bag hanging in my hall.

This year, I will remember. The physicality of the act reminds us that there are people in our Jewish community for whom this food is indeed life. Without it, they and their households would suffer actual, physical hunger. That this can happen in a country in which grocery shelves groan with enough products to feed a Third World country – daily – should be a call to action to us all.

Isaiah's admonition resolves into one of the most beautiful passages in the Bible.

"You shall be like a watered garden, like a never-failing spring. And you shall rebuild ancient ruins, restoring old foundations. You shall be known as the rebuilder of broken walls, the restorer of dwelling places."

In a land such as Israel, where water is literally a matter of life and death, these words resonate. Where cities often were reduced to rubble and had to be rebuilt, what a promise it is of the restoration of life.

Combating hatred

It's a sad fact that some people harbour hateful attitudes toward others based upon irrational criteria such as race, religion, colour, gender, sexual orientation and other attributes. Common terms that we use to describe such discrimination include "racism," "anti-Semitism," 'Islamophobia" (hatred or fear of Muslims), "homophobia" (hatred of those with alternative sexual lifestyles) and "xenophobia" (hatred of foreigners or strangers).

Gerald L. Gall in Edmonton

Three of the terms include the suffix "phobia," meaning a fear of harm from the targeted group. However, the notion of fear is essentially a rationalization for pure hate.

Discrimination can become a generalized mindset or even a lifestyle, whereby hatred is directed at a multitude of intended victims. For example, it is not unusual to encounter an individual who is anti-Semitic as well as intolerant toward gays and people of colour. And it is unlikely that such a person would demonstrate sensitivity toward aboriginal aspirations or feel an empathy toward the daily hardships faced by disabled individuals.

What is the origin of this destructive mindset? People hate for many reasons, but most commonly, it raises the self-esteem of the bigot by putting down and marginalizing others. Attitudes toward other people in society are often learned from the example set in the home or through peer influence. Although we often look to education as the best way to counteract hatred, in the notorious case of James Keegstra, anti-Jewish propaganda was disseminated in the classroom by an influential and effective teacher who passed on his own twisted attitudes to his captive audience of students.

Essentially, hate crimes are "message crimes" designed to instil fear into the very heart of communities. History has taught us that the unbridled dissemination of hate can lead to intimidation and violence toward a targeted group.

What can we do to combat hatred? Widespread enlightened education is one answer. Another tool is to bring to justice those who cause harm to others through their prejudiced attitudes and actions. To accomplish this, we have relied upon the sparingly used hate propaganda sections of the Criminal Code, as well as the "hate speech" provisions in federal and provincial anti-discrimination legislation. Hopefully, such legal actions serve as a deterrent to others.

The City of Edmonton is engaged in a program designated Racism Free Edmonton, a collaborative effort that seeks to build a racism-free inclusive community. However, an ambitious, new initiative is currently unfolding in Alberta. Some time ago, the province informally established the Alberta Hate Crime Committee, a partnership of the Solicitor General of Alberta, the hate-crimes units of the police departments of Calgary, Edmonton and Lethbridge, the RCMP and officials of the federal and provincial government. Now, the existing structure may become formalized through a new program, the Comprehensive and Inclusive Strategies to Combating Hate Crimes: A Youth, Community and Institutional Based Action Project.

To meet the goals of this project, a new hate crimes office will be established under the auspices of the provincial solicitor general and a provincial advisory committee representing affected communities will be created. As well, community liaison committees (based on the existing Edmonton model) will be established in Calgary, Lethbridge, Fort McMurray and Red Deer.

This exciting project is integrally tied to Canada's new multicultural objectives that include the promotion of intercultural understanding and Canadian values through community initiatives, the facilitation of programs such as mentorship, voluntarism, leadership and civic education among at-risk ethno-racial youth and the support of the economic, social and cultural integration of new Canadians and ethno-cultural communities.

The need for this initiative is pressing, given that throughout Canada hate and bias crimes continue to permeate communities. For example, in 2006, 892 hate-motivated incidents were reported to police, a figure that reflects only 10 per cent of the number of incidents that occurred. It is hoped that the new Alberta project will benefit religious and racial communities that have been victimized by hate and bias crimes

There is no magic pill to end hatred, but each new ambitious initiative will contribute to that objective. Equally important, each new venture reflects the positive will of responsible officials and citizens to end the blight of hatred. That alone is a reason for optimism.

The Kirshner File

Feature film reconstructs Carlos' bloody career

A foe of colonialism who committed himself body and soul to the Palestinian cause, he was a Marxist and freelance terrorist who fought for the "oppressed" of the earth, worked for "progressive" Arab regimes such as Hafez Assad's Syria and Saddam Hussein's Iraq, and extorted a king's ransom from Saudi Arabia in a notorious hostage-taking incident in Vienna. He was Ilich Ramirez Sanchez, popularly known as Carlos the Jackal.

Sheldon Kirshner in Toronto

In a blood-splattered career spanning two decades, Carlos – a nom de guerre given to him by an official of the Palestine Liberation Organization – left an indelible mark across a wide swath of territory. But in an ignominious denouement, this mythical figure was betrayed by one of his supposed allies, Sudan, and handed over to France, which had charged him with the murders of two French counter-intelligence agents and a Lebanese representative of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine whom Carlos considered a rank traitor.

Sentenced to life imprisonment in 1997, three years after his abduction in Khartoum, Carlos has been consigned to a bleak existence of solitary confinement since then.

He will probably die in prison as a bitter old man, his days as a cold-blooded killer a distant memory.

A historical curiosity today, Carlos is the subject of a five-hour marathon feature film in three parts. Directed and co-written by Olivier Assayas, Carlos, originally conceived as a TV miniseries, is scheduled to open at the Bell Lightbox, the new headquarters of the Toronto International Film Festival, on Thursday, Oct. 21.

Although it unfolds as an action-packed reconstruction of Carlos' life as a terrorist and mercenary, disclaimers at the outset of each segment are cause for pause.

The film is basically presented as a work of fiction, his relationship with other characters has been fictionalized and "grey areas" have been omitted.

Carlos completely ignores his adolescence in Venezuela, where he was born and raised as the son of a Marxist lawyer who was an admirer of the 1917 Bolshevik Revolution and who named his other two sons Lenin and Vladimir. Nor are his years as a university student in London and Moscow mentioned, much less his pivotal decisions to offer his services to the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine and to join the PFLP as a combatant in Jordan's civil war in 1970 and 1971.

Nonetheless, Carlos covers substantial ground, picking up in Europe in 1973 when, in the opening scene, Mohammed Boudia, a PFLP member living in Paris, is killed by a car bomb allegedly planted by the Mossad. Carlos (played with aplomb by the Venezuelan actor Edgar Ramirez) meets Wadi Haddad (Ahmad Kaabour), co-founder of the PFLP, which in 1968 carried out the first hijacking of an El Al airliner.

Carlos believes that the Palestinian struggle should be taken to a global level. Haddad agrees, having previously called for its internationalization. The film glosses over Haddad's ideological quarrel with George Habash, who co-founded the PFLP and strongly believed that guerrilla warfare against Israel should be exclusively waged in Israel, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

Haddad places Carlos under the command of the PFLP representative in Paris, Michel Moukharbal (Fadi Abi Samra), a Lebanese Christian, and they plan a home invasion in retaliation for Boudia's assassination. The target in London, Joseph Edward Sieff, is a prominent Jewish businessman and vice-president of the British Zionist Federation.

Ilich Ramirez Sanchez

"Words get us nowhere," declares Carlos, calling for an international struggle uniting world revolutionaries. To this end, he enlists militants from the Japanese Red Army and the German Revolutionary Cells, both of whom play a role in future operations and one of whose acolytes he later weds.

Carlos plans his next two operations, a clownishly amateurish bombing of a Bank Hapoalim office in London and a more methodical attack on the French embassy in The Hague.

Portrayed as a supremely confident, narcissistic self-promoter and womanizer, Carlos is equally seen as a zealot, such as when he makes a passing casual reference to the "Zionist media."

Carlos' anti-Israel crusade culminates with two failed rocket-propelled grenade attacks on El Al planes in Paris' Orly Airport in 1975.

He disdains PLO leader Yasser Arafat's indirect peace gestures to Israel. In a now famous news clip, the leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization addresses the United Nations General Assembly, a gun holster on his hip, urging delegates not to let the "olive branch" of peace drop from his hand.

After shooting three French intelligence operatives, he goes into hiding in Yemen, joining Haddad there. Haddad hands him a plum assignment, entrusting Carlos with the mission of kidnapping and murdering the oil ministers of Saudi Arabia and Iran at an OPEC meeting in Austria.

Haddad claims they betrayed the Arab world by lifting the 1974 oil embargo against the United States and its allies.

Iraq appears to be implicitly involved in the plot. On the eve of the operation, an unsavoury Iraqi diplomat passes on a compliment to Carlos: Saddam Hussein considers him "a brave man."

Much of the second segment deals with the OPEC incident, which took place in the in December 1975 and resulted in the abduction of 60 hostages and the deaths of three people, including a member of the Libyan delegation.

Before this crisis ends, Carlos broadcasts a communique denouncing Israel – the "aggressive Zionist state" – and commandeers a plane bound for Libya. The Libyans order him out of the country, and every Arab state shuns him. Carlos learns a seminal lesson in Realpolitik, but he reportedly extorts $20 million from the Saudis.

Fleeing to Aden, Carlos is upbraided by Haddad for not having followed orders and killed the oil ministers of Saudi Arabia and Iran. Haddad expels his protege from the PFLP, and Carlos forms his own group, the Organization of Arab Armed Struggle, comprising Syrians, Lebanese and Germans.

The Venezuelan actor Edgar Ramirez portrays Carlos the Jackal.

The 1976 Entebbe hijacking, during which Jewish passengers were separated from non-Jewish ones on an Air France flight, is included in Carlos. It is far from certain, at least in the film, whether Carlos had a role to play in that hijacking. What is clear is that one of the German participants, Hans-Joachim Klein (Christoph Bach), who later renounced terrorism, was upset that Jews had been singled out on the hijacked aircraft, protesting that he was an anti-Zionist, not an anti-Semite.

Having broken with Haddad, Carlos is now a gun for hire. As part 2 ends, he finds himself in Damascus, conferring with the director of Syrian air force intelligence. He promises Carlos weapons, money and diplomatic cover in exchange for establishing bases in eastern Europe.

The last episode begins in Budapest as Hungarian secret service agents inform Carlos that he has become a liability. He is given the same bad news in East Berlin. World politics are changing, much to his detriment. Syria uses him to intimidate Lebanese opposed to its domination of Lebanon and to kill Muslim fundamentalist opponents. Eventually, the Syrians, as well as the Libyans, tire of Carlos.

Forced into exile in Khartoum, Carlos, now bloated and suffering from testicular cancer, is at the end of his rope. His deportation to France marks his demise as a player in international terrorism.

Carlos is lively and absorbing, several superfluous scenes notwithstanding. It is the story of a terrorist-cum-fugitive who outlived his usefulness and ultimately paid the price.

Every night I pray for Romspen's continued success.

After 31 years working at the TTC I retired in 1988 on pension and investment income.

My brother Stanley got me into Romspen 10 years ago. Today my Romspen investment has tripled in size. Combined with my TTC pension, I earn much more today than when I was working. Truth is, I would not be able to enjoy my independent lifestyle otherwise. Every night I say a prayer for the boys at Romspen to continue to be healthy and successful. My life would not be the same without them.

Marvin Feder

Introductory Seminar [illegible]

ROMSPEN
mortgage investment fund

162 Cumberland Street, Suite 300
Toronto, Ontario M5R 3N5

416.966.1100
1.800.494.0389

www.romspen.com

Polish database agreement signed

Jewish records will be searchable online

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Poland's embassy in Ottawa was recently the scene of a pivotal event in the effort to augment an important database on Polish Jews.

In a ceremony on Oct. 2, the Canadian representative of the Museum of the History of Polish Jews, Peter Jassem, and the executive director of the Jewish Records Indexing –Poland (JRI-Poland), Stanley Diamond, signed an agreement of cooperation.

Launched in 1995, JRI-Poland is said to be the largest fully searchable database of Jewish vital records accessible online, helping Jews around the world to trace their ancestral roots.

By Jassem's estimate, JRI-Poland has indexed 4.5 million records.

Diamond said the accord links the websites of two organizations and aims to provide quick access to a broad range of information.

JRI-Poland was established by Diamond, a Montreal resident, in conjunction with Steven Zedeck of Nashua, New Hampshire, and Michael Tobias of Glasgow, Scotland.

Poland's ambassador to Canada, Zenon Kosiniak-Kamysz, centre, seen with Peter Jassem, right, and Stanley Diamond. [Ela Kinowska photo]

JRI-Poland is composed of index entries from birth, marriage and death certificates in Poland from the 19th and early 20th century.

Though not containing actual documents, the database is a searchable index of original records.

Apart from the indices of vital records, the database includes information relating to more than 500 towns in current and former areas of Poland, census records, army draft lists, burials in cemeteries, Polish passports, ghetto deaths and legal announcements.

The ceremony was attended by Poland's ambassador to Canada, Zenon Kosiniak-Kamysz, and his deputies, minister counsellor Jaroslaw Kurek and second secretary Maria Zdunowska.

In a speech, the ambassador promised to cultivate Polish-Jewish relations in Canada, promote better mutual understanding and foster knowledge about Polish Jews through cultural and educational events and exhibitions.

Also present were members of the Polish-Jewish Heritage Foundation of Canada, of which Jassem is the Toronto president, and representatives of the Jewish Genealogical Society of Ottawa and of Hillel, the Jewish students' organization.

Jassem said the Museum of the History of Polish Jews, set to be built in Warsaw, will open in 2012.

In terms of importance, it will be comparable to Yad Vashem and the Holocaust Museum in Washington, he said.

DINNER CO-CHAIRS
LAWRENCE S. BLOOMBERG
MICHAEL D. HARRIS
HONOURARY CHAIRS
ELIZABETH COMPER
LESLIE L. DAN, C.M.
HOWARD DAVIDSON
SYDNEY COOPER
SAUL FELDBERG, LL.D. (HON.)
LORNE WEISS
GENERAL CANVASS CO-CHAIRS
ANTHONY HOFFER
IRA KUCHINSKY
BEN SPRINGER
ADVERTISING COMMITTEE
TONY GENCO
BILL LAMPERT
JNF FUTURE
JESSICA FENTON
JIAN MAGEN
ARRANGEMENTS
PATRICIA FRIEDLAND
JNF TORONTO PRESIDENT
NATHAN DISENHOUSE
CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD
JERRY WERGER
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
JOSH COOPER
MASTER OF CEREMONIES
BELINDA STRONACH

JEWISH NATIONAL FUND OF TORONTO
2010 NEGEV TRIBUTE DINNER
IN HONOUR OF
FRANK STRONACH
SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 2010
THE FAIRMONT ROYAL YORK HOTEL TORONTO
FOR INFORMATION, RESERVATION & ADVERTISING OPPORTUNITIES:
TEL: 416.638.7200 FAX: 416.638.7345 TOR@JNF.CA WWW.JNFTORONTO.CA
100% ISRAEL

Number Five in a Series Holocaust Education Week

LET'S MAKE SURE OUR CHILDREN NEVER ASK 'WHO IS THAT?'

Through hundreds of centuries, the Jewish People have endured unimaginable tragedies that threatened Jewish existence itself. We have survived them all, while, at the same time, cherishing our Jewish values, contributing to the world's well-being and standing strongly against new threats.

A global movement is denying Jewish Peoplehood, questioning Israel's right to exist and uprooting Jewish history.

Your support will allow UJA Federation to fund bold programs that strengthen Jewish identity among our young, familiarize them with our heroes of history like Anne Frank and inspire a renewed spirit of Jewish activism.

As we approach Holocaust Education Week, Nov. 1-9, let's work together to keep our youth proud and strong.

NEW CHALLENGES. ETERNAL STRENGTH. OneUJA.ca

So King. So Desirable!
GRAND OPENING

KING'S GATE

This weekend at 11 am sharp!

first To Freehold townhome with glorious stone and brick exteriors where the rolling hills of King meet the amenities of Richmond Hill and Oak Ridges

Energy Star Freehold Townhomes from the high $300's

SALES OFFICE HOURS:

www.besthomescanada.com
or call 905-456-7891

BEST HOMES

FLATO DEVELOPMENTS INC

Candidates differ on Israeli Apartheid Week response

Continued from page 3

Rossi, the former national director of the federal Liberal party, said he wants to review and clarify the city's non-discrimination policy, while Smitherman stated the city may not "have the wherewithal" to resolve this issue on its own.

Smitherman cautioned that there may only be one option for the Jewish community to get clarity on what constitutes discrimination at city events funded with public money: by taking the issue to the courts and the Ontario Human Rights Commission.

"There is no way to predict what the outcome of that would be," Smitherman cautioned at the FSWC debate last week.

During the debate, candidates were also asked what they would do to help Jewish students during Israeli Apartheid Week (IAW) on university campuses, although many noted that this issue falls under provincial jurisdiction.

"The mayor of Toronto is not the mayor of everything," said Pantalone, explaining that the mayor should still be part of the discussion about IAW, along with the provincial government.

"But we can't say we're going to do it all," he said, adding that the mayor can't "become the human rights commissioner of Ontario… We have to be part of the conversation, but to say we'll resolve this problem is absurd."

Ford disagreed, repeating his zero tolerance policy.

"I don't like people who pass the buck [to] the provincial legislature… To say it's not our jurisdiction, that's a cop out," he said. "When I'm mayor, I assure you there won't be any of this nonsense."

For their part, both Rossi and Smitherman said they thought the mayor had an obligation to get involved on this issue.

"The mayor should champion this issue and create discussions with universities and with police to ensure [Jewish] students feel safe on campus," Rossi said.

And Smitherman acknowledged that while this issue may go beyond the legal scope of the city, a mayor sometimes needs to "go beyond" the legislative environment.

Rob Ford

Joe Pantalone

Rocco Rossi

George Smitherman

"A mayor has the power to broker a conversation and build dialogue," he said, adding that he never once heard outgoing Mayor David Miller speak "at all" about the QuAIA issue at Pride or on IAW during his term.

"The mayor needs to step up to the plate on this issue," he concluded.

Asked about their vision to help maintain Toronto as a multicultural centre, Rossi said that as the son of immigrants, he understands the value of multiculturalism and wants to be "an ambassador" for cultural communities if elected mayor.

Smitherman said that as mayor, he'd be determined to build bridges between cultural communities and turn the city's motto "Diversity Our Strength" into a "mission statement."

Update

Alexis Wronzberg – the 27-year-old with acute lymphoblastic leukemia whose family began an urgent fundraising campaign last week – has arrived in Israel, accompanied by her mother, Debra, for a potentially lifesaving treatment.

See cjnews.com for story.

Alexis Wronzberg

ROLEX • PATEK • CARTIER
DIAMONDS
BUY • SELL • TRADE
VAN RIJK • INSTANT CASH
440-1233 vanrijk.com

CLASSIC CREATIONS

THE CLASSIC CREATIONS WATCH CELEBRATION

You are invited to attend an exclusive event to view an outstanding collection of unique and rare watches, brought to you by world renowned watch manufacturers. Brand representatives will be on hand to provide valuable information and to answer all of your questions.

Join us and share your unabashed love of fine timepieces.

1 Day Only
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 21
10:00 AM – 8:00 PM

For more information contact
info@classiccreations.com or call 416.222.0405
www.classiccreations.com

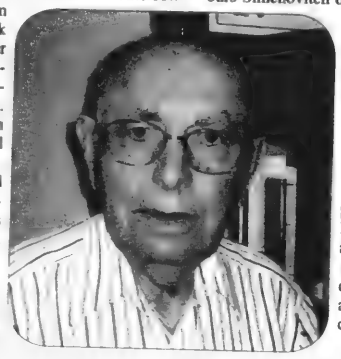
BAUME & MERCIER · BEDAT & Cº GENEVE · CONCORD · CORUM · EBEL · FRANC VILA · FREDERIQUE CONSTANT GENEVE · GUCCI · MONT BLANC · PERRELET · TechnoMarine

Book fair fetes award-winning Yiddish author

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Simcha Simchovitch's life could have turned out very differently.

The award-winning poet, author and translator – whose achievements will be honoured at an Oct. 24 Toronto Jewish Book Fair program – fled from Poland to Russia at the outbreak of World War II in September 1939, escaping the fate of his parents and all but one of his four siblings, who perished in Treblinka. He would spend seven years in Russia, finishing high school and working in a leather factory.



Simcha Simchovitch

Later, as a young husband and father working in a Montreal factory, sewing linings in women's pocketbooks, Simchovitch applied to the Jewish Teachers' Seminary, but he was discouraged from enrolling by its then principal.

His successor found Simchovitch's application by chance, sought him out, and arranged for him to receive a scholarship from Canadian Jewish Congress – "a miracle," Simchovitch says. After graduating from the seminary, where poet Irving Layton taught him English, Simchovitch worked as a Jewish school teacher in Montreal, and subsequently in Ottawa and Toronto.

But it was his parents' decision to transfer him at age 10 from a full-time cheder to a Polish school for Jewish children that had the greatest influence on his life's work. A young, leftist teacher sparked Simchovitch's interest in Yiddish literature, and he began to write poetry and prose as a teenager.

In conjunction with the book fair event, which also honours Simchovitch on his upcoming 90th birthday, he is establishing the Simcha and Freda Simchovitch Fund for Yiddish Education and Culture at the Jewish Foundation of Greater Toronto. The fund is named for him and his late wife, who died two years ago. They grew up together in Otwock, and were married for 69 years.

Simchovitch, who was born Jan. 15, 1921, grew up in Otwock, a resort town 28 kilometres south of Warsaw with a pre-war Jewish population of 12,000. He memorialized his childhood in an autobiographical novel, Stepchild on the Vistula. The book was published in Yiddish in 1990, in English four years later and in Polish by a Warsaw publishing company in 2005.

Simchovitch – who translated the work of Yiddish poet and songwriter Mordechai Gebirtig into English, in a book called The Song That Never Died – also translated his own novel into English. A friend of his translated it into Polish, which led to an invitation to return to Poland two years ago. There, he participated in a memorial to Jewish residents of Otwock who were murdered at a mass gravesite, and he spoke about the prewar Jewish history of the city.

"This was a great experience," Simchovitch said. It was his first visit to Poland since 1949.

His first book of Yiddish poetry was published in 1950, following his arrival in Montreal the previous year with his wife and young daughter. A second daughter was born in Canada.

Simchovitch's most recent poetry collection, a two-volume set called The Fiery Mountain, contains most of the poems he has written, in both Yiddish and English, 45 of which were set to music and published in 2006. Toronto singer Batsheva will perform some of them at the book fair event.

Over the years and as recently as this past summer, Simchovitch's articles and essays have appeared in the Forverts (the Yiddish Forward), as well as in Yiddish publications based in Israel and Poland.

Last year, Simchovitch – who has a BA in Yiddish and Hebrew literature from the University of Toronto, and a master's degree in Jewish history and Hebrew literature from the Jewish Theological Seminary – retired from part-time work at Beth Tzedec Congregation. Prior to working part-time, he served as librarian, and curator of the synagogue's Reuben and Helene Dennis Museum.

Simchovitch has written – always in longhand – about the Holocaust, Yiddish language and Yiddish writers, social issues from an anti-war perspective, Canada, and life in general, but his most important work is his memoir/novel about his early life, he said. "I'm so happy that it's translated in Poland… This is a monument."

"Simcha for Simcha" will take place Sun., Oct. 24 at 1:30 at Beth David B'nai Israel Beth Am Synagogue as part of the 34th annual Toronto Jewish Book Fair. Cost is $5 at the door.

JACS TORONTO
Jewish Addiction Community Services
DAILY CRISIS SUPPORT
Are you or is someone you love struggling with a drug, alcohol or gambling problem?
Thursday night Here to Help meetings at 8 PM for newcomers and family support
Saving Lives by Solving Addiction Problems.
Call 416-638-0350 for help
858 Sheppard Avenue West
Toronto, Ontario M3H 2T5
UJA FEDERATION
www.jacstoronto.org
CRA#8310878RR0001

Promenade Shopping Centre presents jeans

SUMMIT VIEW

RARE. VALUABLE.
AND BRIEFLY AVAILABLE
TO THE SWIFT.

We are about to Preview your only chance to own in the rich heart of Thornhill Woods.

PREVIEWING THIS FALL

Crescent enclave of singles and semi-towns from the upper $400's

REGISTER TODAY

416-746-1234

www.summitviewhomes.com

HEW's 30th anniversary dedicated to survivors

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

The 30th anniversary of the Holocaust Education Week (HEW) is being dedicated to the survivors who have established and programmed it.

Mira Goldfarb, the new executive director of the Sarah and Chaim Neuberger Holocaust Education Centre, part of UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, said that the majority of programs in the week-long event, running Nov. 1 through 9, will feature survivors' testimony.

"This is the first time we've established a singular comprehensive theme to the entire week," she said.

On the job for eight months, Goldfarb said that when she arrived, she immediately saw the opportunity to introduce a special theme to the annual program.

"We have to recognize survivors for their suffering and for their survival. They have become major contributors to society. That is a lesson for us, because it underscores how much loss of potential the Holocaust actually represents. How much more could have been contributed?"

Mira Goldfarb
[Michael Rajzman photo]

Goldfarb, a curator who began her career at the Jewish Museum in New York City, said that in 30 years, HEW has grown from a community-focused and generated event to a forum for international scholars and presenters. "It began 30 years ago with 30 programs, and by 1999 it featured 100 programs. Last year, about 30,000 people attended 140 programs.

"This year, we're expecting representatives from most of the major centres of excellence in Holocaust education in the world."

Goldfarb said that it was a "tremendous honour and privilege" for her to take on her job. "I embrace the role because I recognize that it is my generation that carries the torch.

"My children's generation will be the last to have direct encounters with Holocaust survivors. We have to instil in them the charge to preserve these legacies and make them relevant and inspiring to future generations."

The task goes beyond preserving memories, she said. "It is about ensuring that bearing witness translates into taking action, and being responsible for the cries of 'Never again' that have been cried out."

Fred Winegust, who was part of the original Holocaust education committee, said the idea was to have a week of education about six months after Yom Hashoah, "so there would be a commemoration every six months."

He was inspired to become involved in Holocaust remembrance after returning from the first gathering of Holocaust survivors in Jerusalem in 1981 as a reporter for a university newspaper.

"My father was a survivor, my mother was a hidden child in France, and my grandfather was a prisoner of war, so I am part of the 'second generation.'"

Eleanor Getzler, who has also been involved in HEW since the beginning, is also part of the second generation. "Growing up in Bathurst Manor, the Holocaust was a heavy part of my life."

Reading the book, Children of the Holocaust, however, "really opened my eyes," she said. "Reading the stories of these children was an awakening. We never discussed these things at home."

She said that that book planted a seed in her mind about seeing some programming that revolved around the Holocaust.

"I spoke to Rabbi Mark Shapiro, assistant rabbi of Holy Blossom Temple, and a committee was struck. We wanted to educate the public, because nothing like that had been done before."

Camp Massad
מחנה מסד

CAMP MASSAD of Canada, established in 1947, is a modern orthodox summer camp for boys and girls ages 8-16 which promotes Hebrew culture while giving campers a memorable summer camping experience in the Laurentians, north of Montreal.
Transportation to Montreal available, also 2 week starter camp.

We are having an information session in Toronto with Shlomo Benarroch and Bella Ratner

Children and parents are welcome.

INFORMATION SESSION - SUMMER 2011
Sunday, Oct. 17th, 10 am to 12 Noon

Shaarei Shomayim Congregation
470 Glencairn Ave., Toronto

RSVP to debbie@campmassad.org

For further information, please call the camp office 514-488-6610
or email debbie@campmassad.org Visit our website at www.campmassad.org

THE LIBERATION OF SOVIET JEWRY

A 25TH ANNIVERSARY RETROSPECTIVE PRESENTED BY BETH TIKVAH SYNAGOGUE

sponsored by
THE ATRIUM

THURSDAY OCTOBER 28, 2010 - 8PM
THE FIRST TORONTO SCREENING OF THE DOCUMENTARY FILM "REFUSENIK" CHRONICLING THE THREE-DECADE LONG MOVEMENT TO FREE SOVIET JEWRY.
THE FILM WILL BE INTRODUCED VIA VIDEO BY NATAN SHARANSKY. $5 at the door.

SHABBAT MORNING SERVICES, OCTOBER 30, 2010
ADDRESS BY MOSHE RONEN, VICE-PRESIDENT OF THE WORLD JEWISH CONGRESS AND NATIONAL CHAIR OF THE CANADA-ISRAEL COMMITTEE.
PANEL DISCUSSION WITH SOVIET JEWRY ACTIVISTS AFTER KIDDUSH.

SUNDAY OCTOBER 31, 2010 - 7:30PM
A CONCERT CELEBRATION FEATURING SAFAM
THE KINGS OF JEWISH-AMERICAN FOLK MUSIC WHOSE SONGS HAVE BEEN THE ANTHEMS OF THE MOVEMENT TO FREE SOVIET JEWRY.
TICKETS: 416-221-3433

ALL PROGRAMS AT BETH TIKVAH SYNAGOGUE
3080 BAYVIEW AVE. 416-221-3433

GROWING STRONG TOGETHER
You asked for it. We're making it happen. Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School is opening a second SK class in September 2011 to support the growing demand.
UJA FEDERATION OF GREATER TORONTO
Subsidies Available
OPEN HOUSES ➤ Oct 27 at 7:30 PM | Nov 24 at 10:00 AM
Please contact Judy Machtinger at judy@djds.ca

Be part of a dynamic SK – Grade 8 school where academic excellence is fostered through:
An Integrated Jewish & General Studies Curriculum
An Arts Enhanced Program
A Pluralistic & Egalitarian Approach
A Commitment to Social Justice

BAR ✡ BAT 13 MITZVAH YEAR

Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School
INSPIRING CURIOSITY HONOURING DIVERSITY CREATING COMMUNITY
416.928.3537 | www.djds.ca | 750 Spadina Ave @ Bloor

WHAT'S AT KOFFLER

koffler
centre of the arts

OCTOBER 2010

Sony Centre for the Performing Arts presents

STARS OF THE 21ST CENTURY

(A Solomon Tencer Production)

Thursday October 14, 2010
Sony Centre for the Performing Arts
1 Front Street East, Toronto

Celebrate with the world's greatest ballet dancers for one night only!

American Ballet Theatre
Berlin Opera Ballet
Kirov Ballet, Mariinsky Theatre
New York City Ballet
Paris Opera Ballet
The National Ballet of Canada

416.638.1881 x4271
gala@kofflerarts.org

CIBC MIJO RIO CAN SHOPPERS SONY NATIONAL POST A BETTER READ

We have reserved the best seats in the house for our fundraising ballet Gala. Only tickets purchased through the Koffler include the best seats in the house, an exclusive pre-performance soiree, a chance to meet the dancers after the show, and more. Get your tickets today before they are gone!

Avishai Cohen Aurora

JAZZ & WORLD MUSIC FROM ISRAEL FUSE IN A CROSS-CULTURAL JOURNEY

Tuesday, October 19 | 8 PM
Isabel Bader Theatre, 93 Charles St W
$30 advance | $45 door

The world renowned Israeli bassist and composer makes his first headlining Canadian appearance with a North American CD release tour for Aurora.

"A transcendent example of the capacity of music...to reach beyond geographical and political boundaries." – Los Angeles Times

ticketweb.ca or 1.888.222.6608

Presented together with Canada-Israel Cultural Foundation / La Fondation Culturelle Canada-Israel

Generous support provided by The Al Green Gallery and the Consulate General of Israel in Toronto.

With promotional support from JAZZ.FM91 and jcc

Toronto Jewish Book Fair

October 23 to October 31
Beth David B'nai Israel Beth Am Synagogue
55 Yeomans Road, Toronto

The 34th Annual Toronto Jewish Book Fair returns bigger and better than ever, and in its new home, Beth David Synagogue. Featuring literary giants David Grossman (pictured), Anna Porter, Tarek Fatah, George Gilder, Martin Fletcher, Savyon Liebrecht, and many more. Admission to the Fair is FREE.

TICKETS: 416.638.1881 x4281 or hredner@kofflerarts.org

KOFFLER CHAMBER ORCHESTRA

Music That Survived

Sunday, November 7 | Special Talk 2:30 PM
Performance 3:30 PM
Temple Emanu-El, 120 Old Colony Rd
$15 advance | $20 door | $10 students

Presented with Holocaust Education Week, the celebrated Koffler Chamber Orchestra performs music that survived the persecution of Jewish artists in Eastern Europe during WWII.

ticketweb.ca or 1.888.222.6608

FALL CLASSES & WORKSHOPS — MUSIC, DANCE, PAINTING, CERAMICS, CREATIVE WRITING, DRAMA

REGISTER NOW ONLINE! For a full list of all of our fall/winter classes and workshops and to register: www.kofflerarts.org

koffler
centre of the arts

Come early. Stay late.
(and bring your mother!)

4588 Bathurst Street | 416.638.1881 | info@kofflerarts.org | www.kofflerarts.org

CULTURAL SEASON SPONSOR: CIBC Wood Gundy

PRINT MEDIA PARTNER: National Post — A Better Read.

Arts. Culture. Heritage.

POWERED BY UJA FEDERATION

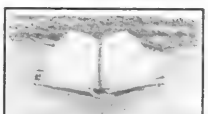
L'Chaim
CANCER SUPPORT FOR JEWISH WOMEN
Cancer?
We've "been there".
We are Jewish women cancer survivors who can "be there" for you during your cancer journey.
We provide confidential peer support to Jewish women undergoing cancer treatment.
Hotline: 416-630-0203
A project of the National Council of Jewish Women of Canada, Toronto Section

STARRY NIGHTS
VE'AHAVTA'S TIKUN OLAM
2010
AWARDS
Sunday, November 7, 2010
Toronto Centre for the Arts
Recital Hall
5040 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ontario
6:00 PM Gala Reception and Silent Auction Preview
Title Sponsor
Platinum Sponsor
BARTER NETWORK LTD
Keynote Speaker
Master of Ceremonies
Ve'ahavta will present the Tikun Olam Awards to the following inspiring individuals who have demonstrated extraordinary efforts to repair the world.
This year our honourees are:
To purchase tickets please contact Ve'ahavta at 416-964-7698
For more information visit www.veahavta.org
Starry Nights is building a community online.
Join us on Facebook to get event news and information about how you can help make this event a success at www.facebook.com/veahavtastarrynights

Jewish Life

God ain't so simple!

By RABBI YIRMIYA MILEVSKY



It would be an understatement to say that God plays a big role in people's lives. He is present in the human mind, referred to in countless conversations, and even makes an appearance on the legal tender of the United States (for Canadians, "real life was on the skating rink").

Although his prominence in the human psyche is undeniable, God is the most complex and profound entity to understand. King David notes several times in Psalms that God is good, yet wickedness makes a daily appearance in the news. How can we defend the belief that God is good and at the same time omnipotent, in view of the existence of evil in the world?

The issue of theodicy is not new. The Holocaust did not produce the dilemma, it only magnified it. The question has occupied the minds of many philosophers and theologians for centuries. Unfortunately, I am not able to offer answers. However, in my humble opinion, what must be avoided is the simplification of God.

In times of challenge, or when a person is in need, he turns to the Almighty in prayer. Prayer has enormous power. It gives the human being the ability to transcend the physical world and connect to the sublime. Homo sapiens can actually have a conversation with God!

Yet, although we tell ourselves and teach our children that we can converse with a Supernatural Being just as we chat with our neighbour, we must not simplify His essence. The neighbour we talk to is human, like we are. Thus, we expect reciprocity in the conversation. God, on the other hand, is not human. Although humanity has been granted the right, and indeed the privilege, to speak to him, we must remember the complex entity that is listening. Simplifying God and expecting a human response is a misunderstanding of prayer and in the long run can cause damage to the wonderful relationship that prayer creates.

Appreciating the complexity of God goes beyond prayer. A big part of Judaism is the concept of emunah – faith. For some, faith is a belief that everything that is going to occur will be good. However, we all know that, unfortunately, reality is not so. The years of World War II cannot be described as good, yet many holy Jews had a lot of emunah in the years leading up to the catastrophe.

Rabbi Avrohom Yeshaya Karelitz, popularly known by the name of his magnum opus, Chazon Ish, notes that faith is not the belief that all will be good, but rather, faith is the belief that nothing is a coincidence and that all that occurs is decreed by God. This explanation raises far more questions and makes emunah far more complex. Yet, what we avoid with this approach is the simplification of God.

There's an old saying regarding God: "If I would know Him, I would be Him." We cannot expect to have all the answers when discussing the most enigmatic entity. Nevertheless, we are privileged to have received a system of laws that bonds us to a Divine Being.

I personally am moved by people who journeyed through the nightmare of the Holocaust and nevertheless remained devoted to God. Questions, they have. Answers, they painfully lack. Yet they can walk into a house of worship and thank God for his kindness.

I thank the Holocaust generation for rebuilding their lives, after observing unimaginable destruction, for reconstructing Jewish institutions after experiencing the terror of Kristallnacht, and for inspiring a whole new generation to believe in an enigmatic being known to us as God.

Rabbi Yirmiya Milevsky is spiritual leader of Congregation Bnai Torah in Toronto.

A tale of two cities

Money Matters

The daily economic news is a most confusing mix, with some reports indicating a steady, if slow, economic recovery, whereas others seem to justify fears of a double-dip recession.

Whether inflation or deflation poses a greater risk to the economy, or whether more or less government stimulus of the economy is needed are great unknowns. The uncertainty over the future direction of the economy is reflected in the wild swings of global stock markets and the anemic job recovery.

Yet while many fear for their job security and entire countries face economic collapse due to enormous debt problems, others are accumulating wealth at an astonishing pace. The most recent Forbes report on the world's billionaires shows an average increase in net worth of $500 million per billionaire, with a more than twenty per cent increase of those joining this exclusive club.

As has been widely reported, many successful corporations are hoarding cash at a remarkable rate. Apple Inc. has approximately $40 billion sitting in cash (or equivalents). To put that into perspective – if we possibly can – our own Canadian government revenues are approximately $240 billion a year. That one company has almost 20 per cent of that amount waiting to be put to use attests to the amazing wealth that continues to be created.

Alas, at the same time, the U.S. Census Bureau recently reported some startling statistics: close to 45 million Americans are living in poverty, and 2009 witnessed the greatest increase in the poverty rate on record. These are shocking, tragic numbers, and to some, they may be an indictment of American capitalistic excess. Companies and their executives (and at times shareholders), some of whom contributed to the deep recession, are getting obscenely wealthy while millions of Americans are getting poorer and poorer.

However this "tale of two cities" requires a more nuanced approach. Thankfully, poverty today does not mean what it once did. It's sad, even dehumanizing, and no doubt we must do much more to address the issue. Yet poverty does not, like it once did, mean death. The same census report notes that one in six Americans are being served by anti-poverty programs. In the western world, at least, no one has to go to bed hungry, if they are willing to seek aid.

As we collectively become wealthier, our definition of poverty gets "upgraded." While 150 years ago, having running water in one's home was considered a luxury, today, even the most run-down housing developments have such necessities. While the poor of today may be rich by the standards of yesteryear, such advances do not excuse us from raising those standards even more.

This idea is reflected in a well-established, if generally impractical law that one must, once other needs are met, restore a previously wealthy person to his former position. The fact that one's basic needs are being met does not alleviate the sense of loss that the formerly wealthy may feel.

While in today's corporate climate, it's well accepted for corporations to engage in charitable activities, it's far from clear that such charity is within a corporation's mandate. As an impersonal legal entity, there are no moral obligations on a corporation, and without shareholder authorization, a corporate executive may be overstepping his authority in spending money without a profit motive. Rather, those individuals who are enriched by corporate activity have a personal responsibility to share their wealth.

Having shareholders agree to donate some billions of the trillions in cash (if you list the cash on the books of the 500 top US companies) is a most worthy goal. Thankfully, many of these billionaire shareholders have pledged unprecedented amounts for philanthropic purposes.

Send comments to rabbijay@torahinmotion.org.

Jewish Life

Torah reading by women poses dilemma for Modern Orthodoxy

Many people think that the status of women in contemporary Orthodox Judaism has stayed the same as it always was. This is not true. True, the pace of change has been much slower than in society at large. But at least outside of haredi circles, contemporary Orthodox Judaism has accommodated women's rights in several ways.

The most significant change involves the study of Talmud and other classics of Halachah (Jewish law). In the past, women's access to these works was restricted or totally forbidden. But today, mainstream Orthodox institutions offer women advanced training in Jewish law. Some institutions even train and certify women as "halachic advisers," experts to whom religious Jews can turn for authoritative rulings on the law. (Those in the know understand that these "advisers" are, in practice, quietly serving as Orthodox rabbis.)

Martin Lockshin

Establishment Orthodox synagogues have also changed. In most modern and "centrist" Orthodox synagogues today, some of the following innovations exist: women recite the Mourners' Kaddish; a young girl's coming of age as a bat mitzvah is marked in the synagogue; women serve as the synagogue's president; women teach Torah classes to men; women dance with a Torah scroll on Simchat Torah, and women chant the Book of Esther on Purim.

None of these customs existed 100 years ago. None was introduced based on the agreement of gedolei ha-dor, the putative leading contemporary Torah scholars. They all arose through the efforts of laypeople working together with their local Orthodox rabbis. And they are all a result of the influence of feminism.

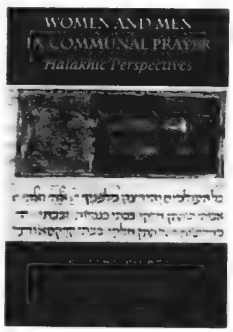
The Jewish Orthodox Feminist Alliance (JOFA) has recently published a book in English, Women and Men in Communal Prayer: Halakhic Perspectives, addressing one innovation that has generated controversy within Orthodoxy – women reading Torah at a service where men are also present. A short introduction by Prof. Tamar Ross precedes four lengthy essays – two by proponents of women reading Torah, rabbis Daniel Sperber and Mendel Shapiro, and two by opponents, Rabbi Shlomo Riskin and Prof. Eliav Shochetman. All five authors live in Israel, and all but one of them (Professor Shochetman) are native English speakers.

JOFA is to be congratulated for publishing a book that gives equal time to both viewpoints, even though JOFA's clear preference (like mine) is for the permissive position. I found the book fascinating, but I imagine that two groups of committed Jewish readers won't: (1) Jews who prefer old-fashioned sex role distinctions, from the days before women were doctors, mayors or synagogue presidents. These readers will not accept the book's implicit premise – that changes in the status of women in the last century have been good, and that, when it can, Halachah should adjust to these changes; (2) Jews who believe that egalitarianism always trumps Halachah, and that Halachah must step aside whenever it conflicts with gender equality. No one in this book makes a halachic argument for total egalitarianism (indeed such an argument would be difficult to make for someone who accepts halachic authority.)

An Orthodox service where men and women are present and share the reading of the Torah – generally referred to as a partnership minyan – is not an egalitarian service. But anyone who has prayed at such a service, for example at Shirah Hadashah in Jerusalem or at the Toronto Partnership Minyan, knows that partnership services have a very different feel than more standard Orthodox services, where women are onlookers, never active participants.

This book then speaks to a small audience: Jews who treat Halachah with reverence and who acknowledge that Halachah is a gendered system, but who nevertheless are in favour of Halachah expanding women's roles when possible.

All four essays offer detailed analysis of one very short text from the Babylonian Talmud (Megillah 23a): "Our rabbis taught: All may be included among the seven [called to the Torah on the Sabbath], even a minor and a woman, but the Sages said that a woman should not read the Torah because of the dignity of the congregation [kevod hatzibur]." The Talmud does not explain why a woman reading the Torah would compromise congregational dignity. But 1,800 years ago, when women played no public leadership roles – secular or religious – and when such discrimination was felt to be appropriate, a congregation might well have felt affronted if a woman read the Torah.



But what about today? Ten years ago, Rabbi Shapiro published the first serious halachic essay (reprinted in this book) arguing that "congregational dignity" is not a fixed, unchangeable concept, but rather a function of time, place and convention. Intuitively this seems obvious. In a synagogue in Toronto, a man leading services wearing dirty gym shorts would be an affront to congregational dignity. In a religious kibbutz in Israel – where the level of piety may be just as high as in Toronto – the same act would not be. A few generations ago, a beardless male prayer leader was an affront to congregational dignity, but not in 2010.

Rabbi Shapiro does not suggest that synagogues change their definition of congregational dignity. Instead, he advocates forming new congregations who define their own dignity to include women reading the Torah. He proves, to my satisfaction, that Halachah recognizes the right of a congregation to forgo aspects of what was historically its dignity.

Rabbi Sperber, one of the leading scholars of Jewish law today, takes the argument a step further, arguing that Jewish law considers an affront to "human dignity" (kevod habriot) worse than an affront to congregational dignity. He feels that today, excluding women from reading Torah is an insult to their human dignity.

Rabbi Riskin and Shochetman, on the other hand, argue that "congregational dignity" is not subject to waiving and that excluding women from reading Torah is not outdated misogyny, but is based on long-standing principles of Jewish law that still apply.

The book presents detailed halachic arguments as clearly as possible. Readers can judge for themselves the relative strength of the opposing positions.

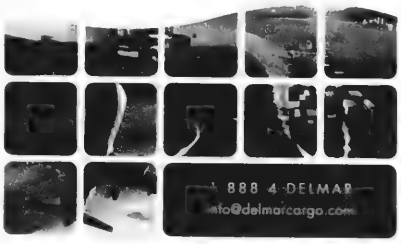
Ross' intriguing introduction acknowledges the elephant in the room, pointing out that the dispute between the essays is not simply one of competing interpretations of classical texts. As she notes, many critics claim that those who support the liberal approach are not reading the texts dispassionately, but have a preferred inclusionary result that they wish to arrive at.

Ross points out, though, that all legal systems work that way. All legal arguments derive from careful text reading and interpretation, guided by values that are dear to the scholar. She notes that just as Rabbis Sperber and Shapiro were guided in their reading by a desire to include women, so Rabbi Riskin and Shochetman were guided by competing values, including a desire to preserve Orthodox unity and to differentiate Orthodox Judaism clearly from non-Orthodox denominations.

The dichotomy that she identifies is crucial. Modern Orthodoxy has to decide: is its most crucial goal preserving Orthodox unity by keeping synagogues close to the haredi model, or is it the creation of a halachic Judaism that might appeal to women and men who hold dear the principle that a woman can be a dentist, a judge, a university president or perhaps even a Torah reader?

ManChef.ca
Peter Graben's Cooking Program for Men
Mature Gentlemen · Caregivers · Baby Boomers · Stags
· Bachelors · GenXers · Poker Nights 416-967-1818
peter@manchef.ca · www.manchef.ca

DELMAR®
www.delmarcargo.com
FREIGHT FORWARDING
CUSTOMS BROKERAGE
& LOGISTICS SERVICES



SERVICING THE WORLD COMES NATURALLY

ISRAEL 2010-2011
COMPARE APPLES to APPLES
The BEST Family Tours in North America!!!
Call us for Recent References
Bar/Bat Mitzvah Ceremony Included
All-inclusive deluxe hotels
• More days of sightseeing
• More meals
• A true family itinerary
www.israelfamilytours.com
or call Kathy ext. 345
WINTER SPECIAL 2010
BOOK NOW AND SAVE
SPACE VERY LIMITED
Dec. 16 - Dec. 30
Dec. 19 - Jan. 2/11
MARCH BREAK 2011
Mar. 9 - Mar. 20
PASSOVER 2011
April 16 - April 30
SUMMER 2011
Jun. 26 - Jul. 10
Jun. 3 - Jul. 17
Jun. 17 - Jul. 31
Jun. 24 - Aug. 7
Jun. 31 - Aug. 14
Aug. 14 - Aug. 28
FALL/WINTER
TO TEL AVIV
FROM $726 +TAX
Community Mission
May 12 - 26 2011
If you've been to Israel before or you're a first timer...
THIS IS THE TOUR FOR YOU!!
Call Kathy ext. 345
PRIVATE CUSTOM TOURS
INNOVATIVE ITINERARIES & GREAT PRICES!
No one is more experienced than we are!
DON'T TRY TO DO IT ON YOUR OWN BOOK WITH US AND SAVE!
Call Ehud Ext. 322
Air Canada online
For more tours & to book visit:
www.peerlesstravel.com
BEST AIRFARE TO ISRAEL
Don't book with anyone else before talking to us first!
PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES
YOUR FULL SERVICE TRAVEL AGENCY
905-886-5610
800-294-1663
info@peerlesstravel.com
7117 Bathurst St., Just N. of Steeles, Thornhill, ON L4J 2J6

Coast to Coast

Premier names special Manitoba rep to Israel

Reflects growing partnership with the province

BY RHONDA J. SPIVAK
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — Mel Lazareck, a business and community leader and president of the Jewish National Fund, Prairie region, received an unprecedented appointment Oct. 5 when Premier Greg Selinger named him special representative for Manitoba to Israel for economic and community relations.

It's the first time such an appointment has been made in Manitoba, and possibly in Canada, and reflects the deepening and ongoing partnership between Manitoba and Israel, particularly in the area of water technology and agriculture.

Selinger gave Lazareck a certificate confirming his special appointment at a ceremony in the premier's office attended by Lazareck; his wife, Karen; Erez Rotem, JNF's emissary for Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, and a number of the premier's advisers.

"We are recognizing the outstanding work Mel has done to build a strong relationship between Manitoba and business and non-profit organizations in Israel," Selinger said in a statement. "This appointment will help us support those activities."

Premier Greg Selinger, left, appoints Mel Lazareck to the new position of special representative for Manitoba to Israel for economic and community relations.

He added: "Manitoba and Israel have common interests in clean energy, water quality and conservation. These interests provide the opportunities to share knowledge and strengthen our education and economic relationships and partnership."

Lazareck told The CJN that the "government is making a statement in trying to develop the mutually beneficial relationship between our province and Israel."

He noted that he's not an employee of the government and doesn't receive any funding.

"I'm doing this as a volunteer for the benefit of Manitoba and Israel... This is something for me that has been ongoing, in that there's common areas of interest in water technology and agriculture, and probably to some extent [that] could involve tourism as time goes forward."

Lazareck said that there are also partnerships between institutions in Manitoba and Israeli universities "such as Hebrew University and Ben-Gurion University [BGU] in the areas of science, health and exchange programs" and he'd like to see these continue to grow.

He also highlighted the dedicated work of Christine Melnick, Manitoba's minister of water stewardship, who's been at the forefront of developing Manitoba's burgeoning relationship with Israel.

"The [business] cards Mel received from the premier are even printed in English [on one side] and Hebrew [on the other side]," Karen Lazareck said.

Rotem said that he "cannot think of anyone more deserving to be given such a special designation. Not a lot of people know about the full breadth of contribution of Mel to this community and the relationship between Manitoba and Israel, and we at JNF are very fortunate to have him as our president."

The Lazarecks are currently leading a sold-out Jewish Federation of Winnipeg mission to Israel, from Oct. 10 to 15, which features the Royal Winnipeg Ballet. Selinger, Melnick and Innovation, Energy and Mines Minister Dave Chomiak are also taking part.

In January 2010, Lazareck participated in the second Manitoba-Israel Water Symposium, hosted by JNF in Israel. The first symposium was hosted by the province in Winnipeg in August 2008.

YEHUDA SHAHAF
CANDIDATE FOR VAUGHAN CITY COUNCIL WARD 5 THORNHILL

Yehuda Shahaf has a vision to preserve the quality of life of our community and keeping neighbourhoods strong and vibrant.

Yehuda Shahaf was born and raised in Israel. He served for twenty-two years in the Israel Defence Force (IDF). His main duties as head logistics officer of the country's civil defense incorporated the planning and implementation of long-term objectives; management, maintenance and development of various civil defense initiatives with a budget in excess of $150 million.

In addition to his civil defense duties, Mr. Shahaf's responsibilities included the logistical support of approximately 50,000 soldiers and accompanying vehicles.

Mr. Shahaf has a degree in the Inter-Arm Command from the Staff College of the IDF. In addition, he graduated from Bar-Ilan University, majoring in Business Administration and Marketing.

Yehuda emigrated from Israel to Canada, with his wife and two children, in 1993 and has resided in Thornhill since their arrival. His business interests include property management, car rentals and transportation.

Yehuda is a strong candidate for Councilor in Ward 5, with a focus on resolving residents' municipal issues. He believes in promoting resolutions that address the quality of life in the area, the welfare and property of local residents. These include the implementation of strict By-laws that will prevent future developments from changing the appearance and traditional character of Thornhill, the limiting of the volume of the traffic to residential streets and immediate repair of Steeles Avenue between Dufferin and Yonge Streets. In addition, he feels strongly about reexamining the potential extension of the Yonge line subway to Steeles Avenue.

With the demographics of the neighbourhood changing as the population slowly ages, Yehuda feels that the future needs of Thornhill residents must be addressed, providing recreational facilities, home-based shuls for this segment of our community.

Yehuda Shahaf
Candidate for Vaughan City Council Ward 5

cyehuda@yahoo.com
yehuda.ca

Vote for Yehuda Shahaf!

Integrity
Reliability
Ability

March of the Living prepares to change more lives in 2011

Annual Jewish identity program supported by United Jewish Appeal Campaign

Participants of a recent March of the Living make the 3-kilometre march from Auschwitz to Birkenau.

March of the Living participants celebrate Yom Ha'atzmaut in Israel.

By Daniel Horowitz

Rarely does one have the opportunity to not only learn about history, but to actually enter into it. However, for participants of the annual March of the Living, each of whom shares unforgettable memories while visiting Poland and Israel on this annual pilgrimage, that's precisely the case.

The March of the Living, which began in 1988, is funded through United Jewish Appeal of Greater Toronto's annual campaign.

UJA's 2011 Campaign, chaired by Sherry Firestone and Jeff Rosenthal, is committed to answering the challenges faced by Jews today, in light of the global movement which has emerged, attempting to rewrite history and delegitimize Israel as a Jewish state.

Campaign dollars will provide our next generation with the tools they need to successfully take on these challenges by helping them develop a strong sense of Jewish identity, including a connection to Israel, through education, community programming such as the March of the Living, and culture.

Year after year, the March of the Living, takes great strides in connecting the next generation with their Jewish roots, from the darkest chapter in our history – the Holocaust – and shows how, despite its horrors, the Jewish People refused to yield to despair, but rose up – against all odds – and established the state of Israel.

In fact, according to a long-term study of the program, 88 percent of participants reported there was an increase in their sense of Jewish identity after participating on the March, while 87 percent reported an increase in their desire to travel to Israel again in the future.

In Poland, the March of the Living takes place on Holocaust Remembrance Day, when thousands of students march together the 3-kilometre distance separating Auschwitz from Birkenau. Then, in Israel, participants will celebrate the 63rd anniversary of Israel on Yom Ha'atzmaut – Independence Day – together with young people from Israel and around the world.

Last year, Toronto sent the largest delegation internationally, with approximately 300 participants.

This year's March of the Living is chaired by siblings, Peter and Ruth Ekstein whose mother, Anita – a child survivor – has dedicated her life to Holocaust education and is a past National chair of the March. Anita will be accompanying the students for the 11th time.

"I am extremely lucky and proud to be involved in the March, because it is an absolutely vital program which teaches Jewish students about their past and their future, and ultimately, the kind of Jew they want to be," said Ruth. "Our truly amazing survivors take us back in time to a place where Jewish life once thrived, and then horrific Jewish death followed. History, previously read in a textbook, becomes personal and entrenched in the students' hearts and minds. Without exception, they fall in love with Israel, and understand how incredibly fortunate they are to have this wonderful country as their home. They return to Toronto filled with pride for what the Jewish people overcame and for the State of Israel."

"I have been involved in community and volunteer work for close to 30 years, including many years on the Board of UJA, and it is my opinion that this is without a doubt the jewel in our community's programs when it comes to Jewish education, Jewish identity and continuity," says Peter. "Being in the camps, the mass graves and then in Israel watching the kids and the survivors interact, was one of the most transformative events in my life, because I was given the gift of being able to watch my son and the other 225 students transform. They changed and grew in ways that I know will have a long term impact on not only their own lives, but on everyone they touch and the entire community."

"As a Jewish teenager attending a public high school before the March of the Living, I did not have the same daily connection to Jewish life as many of the others on the March of the Living," says 17-year-old Westmount Collegiate student, and a participant on the March last year, Jacob Klugsberg. "But six months following the March, I still feel its impact. The memories I have, the horrors I witnessed, and the conversations I shared, are still vivid to this day."

Each year, the March of the Living participants are joined by several Holocaust survivors, each of whom relate their personal memories and experiences during the Shoah.

Last year, one of those survivors was 82-year-old Hedy Bohm who, in June, 1944, was taken by the Nazis to Auschwitz where she was separated from her parents. It was the last time she would ever see them.

"I went, with the students, and my son, Ron, to the barracks of Auschwitz, where I was held when I was only 16," she says. "It was very hard, and I was becoming very emotional from the memories, when I looked out during a big ceremony we had at Birkenau, and saw ten-thousand youngsters from all over the world, the Chief Rabbi of Israel, and cantors singing beautifully. Through the loudspeakers suddenly came Hatikvah. I looked at my son and suddenly I didn't feel like crying any more. I looked at all of these beautiful young Jewish students and the future looked bright again. It was the first year I had been on the March, and I must tell you, you don't know what an incredible experience it is until you take part. I have a new faith in our future because of what these young people are taught on the March."

"If we want our children to bear witness and learn to be proud and knowledgeable Jews, to take responsibility and action to sustain Jewish life and Israel, then I really believe that the March of the Living is the best gift we can give them," says Ruth.

The March of the Living is open to Jewish students in grades 11 and 12. There is a Young adult and Adult Mission as well. Online Registration at www.marchofitheliving.org. Registration deadline for the 2011 High School March of the Living is Monday, November 1, 2010. For more information, contact Sherri Rotstein at 416.398.6931 ext. 5359 or via email at srotstein@ujafed.org

Students memorialize Holocaust a penny at a time

By JOEL JACOBSON
Atlantic Correspondent

MONCTON — Thousands of pennies are pouring into Karen Horsman's classroom at Riverview Junior High since a campaign called Power of the Penny started a couple of weeks ago to raise Holocaust awareness.

Early in this school term, Horsman's Grade 8 class responded to an assigned book, set in World War II Warsaw, and to a documentary called Paper Clips about a group of Tennessee students who collected six million clips to represent those who died in the Holocaust.

"The children are extremely interested in collecting six million pennies, one for each of the victims," said Horsman in a telephone interview. "We have really gotten the word out to the media and have been very successful so far."

She says they hope to have boxes they can distribute to businesses and workplaces around the community, but they also realize that to reach their goal they are going to have to reach out beyond Metro Moncton.

The English language arts teacher said she and the students spent one recent lunch hour rolling 8,500 pennies. "If we get that every day, it might take us three years," she laughed. "However, the students are committed. Even those who will be gone from this school by the time the project ends want to be part of it all the way through its completion."

Grade 8 students at Riverview Junior High, in a suburb of Moncton, are trying to collect six million pennies to memorialize the Jews lost in the Holocaust. [Josee Durepos photo]

The students have already collected more than 75,000 pennies. In addition to what they'll collect and have donated in their own community, they hope for contributions from pop superstars, such as Justin Bieber and Taylor Swift and others, to whom they have written letters seeking support. They'll display pennies from celebrities throughout the school.

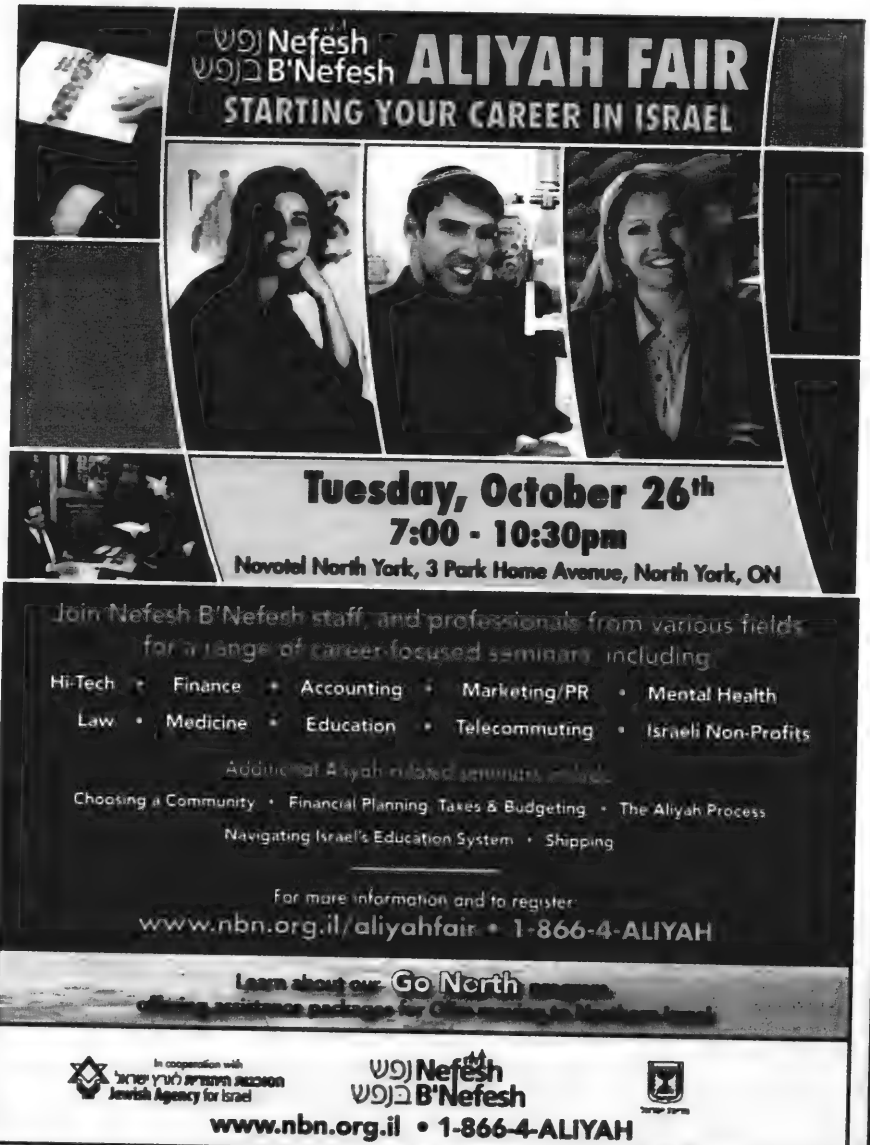
Horsman said the idea really came from the students after reading the story of the atrocities and of the paper clip project.

"They wanted to do something relevant," she said.

The goal is to raise $60,000, which would be used for a student trip to Poland to visit Holocaust sites. Horsman said they want to return from that trip and educate others about what happened.

"Most of them didn't know a lot about the Holocaust, and some still don't know very much, but this project is stressing empathy to them, and helping them understand history," she said.

"We've even turned it into a writing project, where the students studied the newspaper article about the paper clips [project in Tennesee] and analyzed how it was written, using the five Ws [who, what, when, why, where] of a news story. That even led to more conversation about the Holocaust. It's been an excellent project so far."



Nefesh B'Nefesh
ALIYAH FAIR
STARTING YOUR CAREER IN ISRAEL
Tuesday, October 26th
7:00 - 10:30pm
Novotel North York, 3 Park Home Avenue, North York, ON
Join Nefesh B'Nefesh staff, and professionals from various fields for a range of career-focused seminars including
Hi-Tech • Finance • Accounting • Marketing/PR • Mental Health
Law • Medicine • Education • Telecommuting • Israeli Non-Profits
Additional Aliyah related seminars include:
Choosing a Community • Financial Planning, Taxes & Budgeting • The Aliyah Process
Navigating Israel's Education System • Shipping
For more information and to register:
www.nbn.org.il/aliyahfair • 1-866-4-ALIYAH
Learn about our Go North
In cooperation with Jewish Agency for Israel
Nefesh B'Nefesh
www.nbn.org.il • 1-866-4-ALIYAH

ALEXIS NEEDS YOUR HELP!

Dear friends,
Alexis is a beautiful, happy young woman who at the age of 21 was diagnosed with Acute Lymphoblastic Leukemia on Sept. 28 2004. She completed 2 full years of chemotherapy and stayed in remission for 3 years, then last Aug 22, 2009 (her birthday) she discovered the telltale signs of Leukemia on her body – bruises, and sadly discovered that she had relapsed. This time however, chemotherapy alone was not an option, this time in order to survive she needed a Stem Cell Transplant, but before we could do a transplant she had to get into remission again which turned out to be very difficult, after several rounds of chemotherapy the biopsy showed that she wasn't in remission and she needed a form of chemotherapy so toxic they won't give it to you unless they feel you can tolerate it, it was very hard on her body, but it worked and on Dec 9 the 1st night of Chanukah we had a miracle - she achieved remission. Two months later she received her Stem Cell Transplant. For the next 7 ½ months Alexis recovered well, felt well and we were cautiously optimistic, then this week Sept 28th we discovered that she had relapsed again, but this time the options are limited and time is of the essence. I have been in touch with ECHO an advocate organization that helps people with Cancer find trials. They are helping us. We have learned of a treatment in Israel that gives us hope. Dr. Slavin is at the Top Ichilov Center in Tel Aviv. He is a leading researcher in Stem Cell Transplants and has developed a transplant protocol that gives her the best chance for survival, I have spoken with him and he believes that he may be able to help Alexis. Unfortunately, nothing in this world is free and there is a fee attached.

We need $300,000, this is what the JCAHO/TJC (Joint commission on accreditation of Healthcare Organizations) charges for international patients, without this money Alexis will not be able to go to Israel and get treated. Without this transplant I am afraid we will lose her. We have set up a trust account, please help us.

1. To donate at any TD BANK Bank 0004 transit 12142 account 6328765 (Hilda/Clark in Thornhill) payable to Deborah Wronzberg in Trust for Alexis Wronzberg
2. Or you can, via internet banking use interact transfer – the email reference for the transfer is damw@rogers.com and you should send a separate email to damw@rogers.com with the security question and answer;
3. Beth David Synagogue is accepting cheques payable to Beth David, 55 Yeomans Road, Toronto, ON, with memo/reference "Alexis" and credit card payments [416-633-5500];

Thank you for your support, Debra Wronzberg

Ordinary Israelis know what the real problem is

According to Reports

By PAUL MICHAELS

Pundits who fixate solely on settlements as the crux of the impasse in the peace process are providing a only a very partial account of what's at the root of the regional problem.

This is not to deny or distract from the seriousness of the settlement issue, as previous columns have noted. It is, however, to point out that a broad solution to this subject is well known to the parties and, indeed, according to several reliable reports, had been accepted during previous negotiations: about four to five per cent of the western part of the West Bank containing the major settlement blocs around Jerusalem and roughly 75 per cent of the settlers would be incorporated into Israel in exchange for a similar amount of territory being transferred to a Palestinian state. The remaining settlements deep in the West Bank would be either dismantled and their residents compensated or they could possibly remain under another sovereignty arrangement. Not easy for sure, but doable.

A recent opinion poll, however, from the Deaf Institute reveals that a small majority of Israeli Jews (54 per cent) favour continued building in existing settlements while only 39 per cent favour an extended moratorium. This is a shift from poll results just a couple of months ago indicating that a plurality of Israeli Jews favoured construction. Since other polls have consistently shown that about 65 to 70 per cent of Israeli Jews support a two-state solution, how can this apparent discrepancy be explained? The answer lies in understanding something that journalists in Israel rarely pay attention to – the attitude and concerns of ordinary Israelis. These are the pragmatic Israelis who supported the Oslo process but who saw then-Palestinian Authority president Yasser Arafat reject then-Israeli prime minister Ehud Barak's offer of Palestinian statehood at Camp David in 2000.

They're the Israelis who had to suffer through years of suicide bombings that Arafat subsequently unleashed, something confirmed by a Hamas official last month. They watched with growing disillusionment as rocket fire from Gaza only intensified after the 2005 withdrawal. Just two years ago, they watched current PA President Mahmoud Abbas walk away from then-Israeli prime minister Ehud Olmert's proposal – Israel's second official offer – of Palestinian statehood which included even greater concessions than those Arafat had rejected.

Israelis know these facts, and they have come to believe that the problem is far deeper than just settlements: namely, the Palestinians' rejection of Jewish sovereign legitimacy and their refusal to indicate that peace means the end of the conflict once and for all. Unlike the late Egyptian president Anwar Sadat, who came to Jerusalem in 1977 and spoke in the Knesset promising "Peace, no more war," Abbas refuses to signal that any deal he might sign with Israel would amount to the same pledge. In fact, Israelis see no willingness from Abbas to make any concessions or compromises at all.

Rather, what they see is Abbas' disdain for Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's call to recognize Israel as the nation state of the Jewish people (something consistent with Israel's being a democracy for its non-Jewish minorities, too). They believe that just as Netanyahu recognizes that the creation of a Palestinian state would make it the state of the Palestinian people, Abbas must be prepared to reciprocate: two states for two peoples.

Israelis see that Netanyahu took the unprecedented step of halting new construction for 10 months, but received nothing in return. They also see that international pressure just continued to mount on Israel to make more concessions, while nothing was expected from the "weaker" Palestinian side. And they understand that if all settlement activity were to stop tomorrow, there's little Abbas can do to compromise with Israel even if he had the will to do so. The Palestinians are more divided than ever between the PA in the West Bank and Hamas in Gaza, and Abbas' continued rule is far from certain, even in the former.

At the same time, numerous Israeli analysts have argued that it would be wise to abide by a further 60-day moratorium if only to get the settlement issue out of the limelight and focus on the issues that have long stymied progress. Whether observers in the West would pay attention to these other issues, given the hold that the settlement storyline has in their minds, is an open question.

Paul Michaels is communications director for the Canada-Israel Committee.

PAYLESS TRAVEL and Cruises

Israel Specialist, Professional Agents, Superior Service

Israel Culinary Tour:
Led by Rabbi Elyse Goldstein & Bonnie Stern
Feb. 7-14, 2011
Call Michelle 416-922-0116 ext. 1

Pathway of our Biblical & Cultural Heritage
Rome & Israel with Channa Sargon
May 22 - June 5, 2011

Jewish Heritage Tour - CHINA
May 9 - 24, 2011
Call Miki at 416-840-0855/1-877-840-0855 ext. 222

EL AL Economy
Oct 14 - Dec 14, Dec 25 - Mar 31, 2011 $728.00 + tax

ISRAEL WEEKLY GUARANTEED DEPARTURE TOURS
VISIT OUR WEBSITE - goisraeltravel.com

Promenade Office 905-770-3300 - Sima ext. 225
Toll Free 1-888-900-4747

Downtown Office 416-922-0116

BETH EMETH Bais Yehuda Synagogue
100 ELDER ST. - WILMINGTON & OVERBROOK - 6:00 - 10:00 pm
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 19th 2010
Planning Your Wedding, Bar Bat Mitzvah does not have to be Stressful or Expensive...
Let Us Show You How.
Meet All the Event Planning Professionals
Who Can Help Make Your Party a Success

FEATURING: UPTOWN GOURMET CATERING • CONSULTANTS • BANDS • D.J.'S • FLORISTS
MAKE UP • PHOTOGRAPHY • PARTY FAVOURS • VIDEOGRAPHY • DECOR • BRIDALWEAR DESSERTS • INVITATIONS • FORMALWEAR • JUDAICA • KETUBAH • GIFTWARE & MUCH MORE...

Free Admission • Free Parking • Free Ideas • This is An Event Not to be Missed!

Event Coordinators: LYNN COHEN 905-889-1007 • RICK LEVINE 905-881-6400

www.TorontoPartyGuide.com

WINTER SHOW: WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 19th 2011 • VISIT WEBSITE FOR DETAILS • VENDOR INQUIRIES WELCOME

JNF
Say it with Trees
"Mazel Tov on your Special Anniversary"
JEWISH NATIONAL FUND
416-638-7200

What's New

Weather: Ft. Lauderdale, Florida
TRAVEL INSURANCE
• Snowbirds
• Visitors to Canada
• Trip Cancellation
25% OFF LIMO VOUCHER TO TORONTO PEARSON AIRPORT WITH PURCHASE
416-636-3575
alana@travel-secure.com
Travel Secure

What's New deadline for Oct. 28 is Oct. 18. Deadline for Nov. 4 is Oct. 25. Phone 416-391-1836. Fax 416-391-0829. E-mail cjnwhatsnew@gmail.com.

Thursday, Oct. 14

A HERO IN HEAVEN

Screening of the documentary A Hero in Heaven, the story of Michael Levin, a man from the U.S. who went to live in Israel when he was 16. Beth Tikvah. Rabbi Jared Grover will be in attendance. 2-4 p.m. $5, includes refreshments.

Saturday, Oct. 16

AT THE MOVIES

Join Temple Har Zion for an afternoon at the movies. 3 p.m. 7360 Bayview Ave. 905-889-2252.

SHABBAT SERVICE

B'nai Shalom Congregation of Halton-Peel's monthly Shabbat service, 10 a.m. in Oakville. Conservative, egalitarian congregation. bnaishalom.ca, 905-901-9889.

Sunday, Oct. 17

BREAKFAST LECTURE

Beth David Brotherhood's lecture with Murray Goldsmith, motivational entertainer. 9:15 a.m. All welcome. $5. 416-633-5500. 55 Yeomans Dr.

YESHIVA UNIVERSITY

5771 launch of the Yeshiva University Torah MiTzion, Beit Midrash Zichron Dov: 9 a.m. BAYT, 613 Clark Ave. W. Keynote speaker is Rabbi Mordechai Willig on "Minhag Yisrael Torah Hu: Tradition, Custom and Law." 416-781-1777.

ANAPHYLAXIS WALK

Walk to Axe Anaphylaxis. 11 a.m. Cedarvale Ravine. Funds to Canadian Asthma, Allergy and Immunology Foundation. www.walktoaxe.ca.

POMEGRANATE GUILD

Exhibition of tzedakah boxes by Pomegranate Guild in memory of Beverley Colman Lokash. Apotex Centre, Baycrest. Opening at 3:30 p.m.

EVENING FOR WOMEN

Chana Weisberg speaks on "Bringing Spirituality into the Material World." 8 p.m. Thornhill Community Shul, 949 Clark Ave. W. $2 suggested.

Monday, Oct. 18

GUSTAV MAHLER LECTURE

Temple Emanu-El's fall lecture series. Mondays, 2-4 p.m. Rick Phillips, former host of CBC Radio's Sound Advice, speaks on "Gustav Mahler – The Man and the Music." $10. 416-449-3880.

BOOK CHAT

Join Vaughan Public Libraries at North Thornhill Community Centre, 300 Pleasant Ridge Ave. to discuss Small Island by Andrea Levy. Book can be picked up at Dufferin Clark Library's check out desk.

NURSERY REGISTRATION

Registration is open for Temple Sinai members for Twinkle Tots, Kiddie Ko-Op, nursery and junior and senior kindergarten. 416-487-3281 for other registration dates.

INGLOURIOUS BASTERDS

Screening of the Quentin Tarantino directed Holocaust film. 7 p.m. Beth Tikvah. $5 at the door.

Tuesday, Oct. 19

'CHURCHILL AND THE JEWS'

Temple Har Zion presents Gerald Zeidenberg: "Churchill and the Jews." 12 p.m. Bring lunch, coffee, tea and cookies served. $3, guests $5. 905-889-2252.

'HEBREW ART SONG'

Cantor Benjamin Maissner gives a musical presentation of "The Hebrew Art Song: Hebrew Language Through Poetry and Songs." 12:15 p.m. RSVP: 416-221-3433.

HEALTHY BACK

Jennifer Salter, director of Personal Lifeline Training, on "Healthy Back, Happier Life." 1:30 p.m. Beth Tzedec library. Free, registration required. 416-781-3514, ext. 225.

Continued on page 29

FROM THE AWARD-WINNING TEAM AT DIVERSICARE
Comes a community where extraordinary luxury, comfort and security are just an ordinary part of everyday living.
WELCOME TO FOUR ELMS RETIREMENT RESIDENCE

- Elegantly appointed studio, one & two bedroom suites with weekly housekeeping
- Three meals daily including snacks
- Professional staff and 24 hr Emergency Response
- Stylish amenity spaces including a Library, Media Room, Computer Lounge, Wellness Centre and Fitness room
- Brain Gym® & More – A multi-sensory Brain Stimulation Program exclusive to Diversicare
- Secure Assisted Living Floor

Call today for more information or to reserve your suite
905-738-0905
1500 Steeles Ave. West, Thornhill, ON L4J 4H6
FOUR ELMS RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
Diversicare

The Canadian SHAARE ZEDEK Hospital Foundation
a hospital with a heart

Creative Leadership & Innovation in the Global Age

Please Join The Canadian Shaare Zedek Hospital Foundation For An Evening Honouring Heenan Blaikie LLP And Its Co-managing Partner Norm Bacal

What: Cocktails + Dinner (Kashruth observed)
Featuring: General Rick Hillier, CMM, MSC, OD, Former Chief of the Defense Staff of the Canadian Forces
When: Thursday, November 18, 2010 at 7:00 pm
Where: Park Hyatt Toronto
Queen's Park Ballroom
4 Avenue Road, Toronto
Valet parking provided

For more information or to reserve your tickets call: 416-781-3584
e-mail: foundation@hospitalwithaheart.ca, web: www.hospitalwithaheart.ca

Funds raised from the evening will go to support the Dr. Jack Matloff Family Disaster & Emergency Response Center at the Shaare Zedek Medical Center in Jerusalem

Creative

Continued from page 28

INTERMARRIAGE

Beth Tikvah Men's Club hosts monthly meetings for family and friends of inter-dating or intermarried couples who want support or want to help those in similar circumstances. 8 p.m. Moe: 647-282-0277, mhorenf@idirect.com.

EYE CARE AND VISION LOSS

Learn the risk factors, precautions, treatment and research about retina diseases, macular degeneration and glaucoma. 7:30 p.m. Free. Council House, 4700 Bathurst St. 416-633-5100, info@ncjwc-ts.org.

Wednesday, Oct. 20

POMEGRANATE GUILD

"A History of Beadwork: 100,000 Years of Human Invention." An illustrated talk by Simon Waegemaekers. Shaarei Shomayim, 8 p.m. Guests welcome. $5

Other News

'ANCIENT WISDOM'

"Ancient Wisdom for Modern Living," with Esther Friedman. Oct. 18 and 25, Nov. 15 and 22. 7:30 p.m. $10 per lecture. Kehillat Shaarei Torah. 416-229-2600 ext. 3.

GERRY GALL SPEAKS

Temple Emanu-el presents law professor Gerry Gall on "Challenges to Modern Canadian Jewry: Social, Legal and Institutional." Oct. 22-24. RSVP: 416-449-3880, reception@emanuel.ca.

IMMIGRATION POLICY

Yachad branch, NCJWC Toronto section, program on Canada's immigration policy, with Toronto Star reporter Nicholas Keung. Nov. 3, 7:30 p.m. Council House. No charge but RSVP necessary. 416-633-5100.

SINGLES GAMES NIGHT

Who Wants to be a Millionaire, Rummicube, etc. $8. Refreshments and prizes. Early bird bingo 7:30-8 p.m. Oct. 24, Beth Torah Synagogue. mollie_rothman@yahoo.ca.

'ART OF ENTERTAINING'

Canadian Friends of Beit Issie Shapiro. "The Art of Entertaining," with Fay Lewis, author of Be My Guest and Craig Gruzd from Designing Trendz. Kosher tapas and desserts. Oct. 21, 7:30 p.m. Avenue Banquet Hall, 1600 Steeles Ave. W. 647-638-1959, cfobis@rogers.com.

AARON NUSSBAUM SPEAKS

University lecturer Aaron Nussbaum speaks on "The Jewish Enlightenment Movement: The Continuing Challenge." Oct. 21 and 28, 7:30 p.m. Beth David. 416-633-5500. Free, refreshments served.

'MEDITATING MONDAY'

Join Temple Har Zion to experience meditation in a Jewish context. Oct. 25, 8:15 p.m. 905-889-2252.

SUPPORT GROUP

Circle of Care support group for those whose spouses have dementia or Alzheimer's. Every Monday to Dec. 6, 10-11:30 a.m. 530 Wilson Ave. Register with Joe, 416-635-2900 ext. 472.

JEWISH THINKERS

New monthly series on the thought, worldview and influence of Medieval Jewish thinkers. Oct. 21, 8 p.m. 159 Almore Ave. Lecture on Rabbi Yehuda HaLevi by Prof. Daniel Lasker. torahinmotion.org.

DRIVERS NEEDED

Volunteer drivers needed for visually impaired seniors. Once a month, 7-10 p.m. 905-508-2892.

SINGERS WANTED

Toronto Jewish Folk Choir is looking for singers. Rehearsals every Wednesday, 7:30-10 p.m. 585 Cranbrooke Ave. 416-593-0750, tjfolkchoir@sympatico.ca.

YIDDISH FILM NIGHT

Unzere Kinder (Our Children) screening. $5 suggested. Oct. 23, 7:45 p.m. Kehillat Shaarei Torah.

CONVERSION BILL TALK

The conversion bill being debated in Israel will be discussed by Howard English at an Association of Jewish Seniors-sponsored meeting. Oct. 21, 10 a.m. Shaarei Shomayim. Members free, guests $2. Tammy, 416-635-2860.

FUNDRAISING CONCERT

Fundraiser for Beth Tikvah's choir. Safam performs. Oct. 31, 7:30 p.m. Dessert reception. For info: 416-221-3433.

KNITTERS WANTED

Jewish Women International of Canada is looking for knitters of all skill levels to provide mittens and hats for elementary school children in need. Donations of wool are also welcome. 416-630-9313.

JF&CS GROUPS

Call Shawna Sidney, 416-638-7800, ext. 6215, or visit jfandcs.com. Registration required.

Widow/widowers 65+ bereavement: For those who have recently lost a partner or spouse. Oct. 20, 1:30-3 p.m. Beth Tzedec. Also Nov. 2, 1-2:30 p.m. at 4600 Bathurst St.

Looking ahead: For newly separated or divorced individuals. Oct. 20, 7-9 p.m. 4600 Bathurst St.

The challenge of anger for women: For women to learn to express their anger in an assertive, non-aggressive way. Oct. 21, 7:30-9 p.m. 4600 Bathurst St.

Aspergers 101: For anyone wanting to know about Aspergers, with Margot Nelles from Aspergers et al. Oct. 21, 7-9 p.m. Lipa Green Centre, lower lobby, Room 9.

SINGLES EVENTS CAN BE FOUND ON PAGE 31

What's New

FOR SENIORS

Adath Israel Congregation. Wednesday social afternoons. Bridge, mah-jong, Rummikub, refreshments. $2. Everyone welcome. Pearl, 416-635-6317, or Marcia, 416-932-1229.

Active Seniors Miles Nadal JCC. Harold Troper presents illustrated talk, "Jewish Toronto: Portrait of a Jewish Past." Oct. 28, 1:30 p.m.

Connecting the generations brings together students and seniors. Kosher lunches, guided visit to Royal Ontario Museum and more.

Beginner computer course. Six students, three instructors. 416-924-6211 ext. 155.

Earl Bales Seniors Club in the Park, 416-395-7881. Casino Rama Nov. 17, departs 10 a.m. Sunday dance Oct. 24, 7-9 p.m. Line dancing Thursdays, 10-11:30 a.m. Seniors annual general meeting Oct. 18, 12 p.m. all welcome. Kosher lunch provided. Social bridge Thursdays, 12:30-3 p.m. Canasta Tuesdays and Thursdays, 12-3 p.m. Seniors woodworking – skilled craftsmen, 416-630-6487.

Bernard Betel Centre, 1003 Steeles Ave. W., 416-225-2112.

Arthritis self-management program. Oct. 26-Nov. 30. 1-3 p.m. $20 members, $35 guests. Ext. 657.

Lecture: "An Introduction to Yiddish Theatre Before 1880," Part 1, with Myra Fooden. Oct. 19, 10-11:30 a.m. $3 members, $6 guests.

Festival of the arts, Oct. 20. 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Free.

PROSSERMAN JCC

Sherman Campus, 4588 Bathurst St. 416-638-1881, www.prossermanjcc.com.

Bridle Bash Foundation and Prosserman JCC Fitness and Health present the Cycle for a Cause spin-a-thon. Live DJ, prizes, raffles and giveaways. Oct. 17, 9 a.m. bridlebashfoundation.com/spinathon Beginner bridge classes. Nov. 3-Dec. 22, 10 a.m.-12 p.m. $45 members, $60 guests.

Floral arranging, Oct. 12-Nov. 9, 10-11:30 a.m. $70 members, $85 guests.

Current events with Peter Diamant. Thursdays, 12:45-2:15 p.m.

Movie Mondays. Defiance, Oct 18. 2:30 p.m.

A Sharp Intake of Breath, reviewed by Sharoni Sibony. Oct. 19. 1:30-3 p.m.

Join Kolel for an overview of Jewish faith, history and practice from a liberal perspective. With Ira Schweitzer. Oct. 14-18, 8-9:30 p.m. Members $130, students and seniors $80. Ext. 4235 to register.

Tic Tac Two program, 9-11:30 a.m. Kailah, ext. 4351.

Shabbat Party, Oct. 8-Dec. 10, 10-11 a.m. Birth to 4 years old. Monique, ext. 4012.

MILES NADAL JCC

750 Spadina Ave., 416-924-6211, www. mnjcc.org.

Michael Bernstein Chapel services Sundays 8 a.m. and Thursdays 7:15 a.m. Kosher breakfast follows. Coleman Bernstein, 416-968-0200.

"World Music for the Armchair Traveler," with Barry Livingston. Starts Oct. 14. Ext. 0.

Mother's Circle: free workshops for non-Jewish women raising Jewish children. Starts. Oct. 14, 7:30-9 p.m. 416-658-5261.

Tickets on sale for Renee Barda: Life Begins Again! Soprano Renee Barda takes the stage with George Gershwin and Cole Porter. Dec. 11, 7:30 p.m. Ext. 0.

Start your own business. Get ideas, get inspired. Three Friday workshops with Debbi Arnold of DA Consulting. 9:30-11:30 a.m. Starts Oct. 15. 416-762-7171.

"Joseph to Nasser: The Jews of Egypt," with Diana Mingail. Oct. 17, 11 a.m.-12:30 p.m. $9, light refreshments. Ext. 154.

The Cinema of Israel lectures with Shlomo Schwartzberg. Oct. 18: "Social Portraits of Israeli Society," 7-9 p.m. $12. Ext. 606.

Planet in Focus 11th Annual International Environmental Film & Video Festival. Oct. 13-17. Al Green Theatre. 416-531-4689.

Jacobs Lounge Visual Arts Space: Polar Visions, photo exhibit by Mark Loren Freedman. To Oct. 19.

imagineNATIVE Teen Night. Dinner followed by opening night film Boy at Toronto's International Native Film and Media Arts Festival. sarahbn@mnjcc.org.

imagineNATIVE Film + Media Arts Festival. Oct. 20-24. www.imaginenative.org.

KOFFLER CENTRE

Koffler Centre of the Arts, 4588 Bathurst St., 416-638-1881, www.kofflerarts.org.

La'hit T.O. – Israeli dance troupe for dancers aged 15-19. Audition Oct. 17, 3-4 p.m. Room 211. Teme, ext. 4364.

What's New is now online, for subscribers only. You can find it at cjnews.com

Bring Any of Your Old Small Kitchen Electrical Appliances To Cayne's
This Week-End Only!
October 15th, 16th, 17th
(Clean Out your Garage, Basement, Kitchen, Shed, etc.)
• Your Appliances will be Delivered to a Waste Management Recycling Depot
• In Return You will Get up to a...
*Please Note The Recycling Plant Will NOT Accept Computers or Printers.
$70 Instant Rebate on the Purchase of a NEW Kitchen Aid Appliance
PLUS Over $6,000.00 in Instant Rebates On Select Merchandise In-Store!
Our way of saying Thank You for Properly Recycling Your Old Electrical Kitchen Appliance!
Full Money-Back Refund Policy!
Always 1st Quality!
Pay Cash 2% OFF Your Total Purchase
Cayne's
The SUPER HOUSEWARE Store
112 DONCASTER, Thornhill, Ont.
One Traffic Light North of Steeles Ave. East of Yonge St.
905-764-1188
Shop Online at www.cayneshousewares.com
Mon-Fri 9-9
Sat&Sun 10-6
BRIDAL REGISTRY

OBITUARIES
and Related Notices

Steeles Memorial Chapel

Ijusim, Motlia	Sept. 19/10	1121 Steeles Ave. W
Morgenstern, Andrea	Sept. 20/10	4 Goldfinch Crt
Fishman, Hyman	Sept. 20/10	8 Cactus Ave
Pechen, Teddy	Sept. 20/10	10 Trench St
Zelewicz, Fay	Sept. 21/10	78 Acton Ave
Hoberman, Yetta	Sept. 20/10
Galin, Murray	Sept. 21/10	3560 Bathurst St
Cappe, Lawrence	Sept. 22/10	Private
Kurchik, Genia	Sept. 22/10	Private
Avshaev, Boris	Sept. 23/10	Private
Nusinowitz, Jacob	Sept. 23/10	Private
Bafakirski, Anatoli	Sept. 24/10	Private
Rashkovsky, Leonid	Sept. 25/10	Private
Mocle, Josephine	Sept. 26/10	Private
Levin, Dr. Bert Jeremiah	Sept. 26/10	1925 Steeles Ave. E
Levy, Suzanne	Sept. 27/10	3636 Bathurst St
Zolty, Bertha	Sept. 27/10
Levy, Michael	Sept. 28/10	866 Pape Ave
Romberg, Sam	Sept. 27/10	163 Faywood Blvd
Drabkin, Boris	Sept. 28/10	Private
Gerson, Abraham	Sept. 29/10	170 Red Maple Rd.
Kurlandski, Marika	Sept. 29/10	1085 Steeles Ave. W.
Galant, Icek Jake	Sept. 30/10	7440 Bathurst St.
Kopolovic, Sam	Oct. 2/10	429 Walmer Rd.
Slater, Freda	Oct. 2/10	18 Steeles Ave. E.
Bonder, Abraham	Oct. 2/10	205 Cummer Ave.
Salganov, Boris	Oct. 2/10	Private
Posner, Manuel	Oct. 3/10	7300 Yonge St.
Serfaty, Rica	Oct. 3/10	12 Rockford Rd.
Reynes, Etya	Oct. 3/10	Private
Kaufberg, Bluma	Oct. 3/10	7440 Bathurst St.
Trefler, Jerry	Oct. 3/10	1 Canyon Ave.
Yagadayev, Ilya	Oct. 3/10	Private
Weinstock, Israel	Oct. 4/10	343 Clark Ave. W.
Teich, Mary	Oct. 4/10	333 Clark Ave. W.
Jacob, Tryphosa	Oct. 4/10	53 Harrison Rd.
Lichtman, Joey	Oct. 5/10	109 Rockwood Cres.

The unveiling of a monument to the memory of the late

MORRIS SINGER ז"ל

will take place

Sunday, October 17th at 12:30 p.m.

Bathurst Lawn Memorial Park

Apter Section

Relatives and friends are invited to attend

The unveiling of a monument to the memory of the late

HAROLD LOYD SILVERSTEIN ז"ל

will take place

Sunday, Oct. 17th at 11:00 a.m.

Mount Sinai Memorial Park

Pride of Israel Section

Relatives and friends are invited to attend

ALEF'S FAIRLAWN MONUMENTS

NOW TOGETHER TO SERVE OUR JEWISH COMMUNITY

Two trusted names, Alef Monuments and Fairlawn Monuments are now merging to better meet our customers' needs. Come and visit our new showroom.

Alef's Fairlawn Monuments
3331 Bathurst St. (at Fairlawn)
416-784-5268

QUALITY MONUMENTS, FACTORY PRICES

The unveiling of a monument to the memory of the late

JACK RISENMAN ז"ל

will take place

Sunday, October 17th at 12:00 p.m.

Pardes Shalom Cemetery

Beth David Section

Relatives and friends are invited to attend

SHIVA MEALS • BRIT MILAH • HOME • OFFICE

SHORT NOTICE & SAME DAY SERVICE • DELIVERY AVAILABLE

416-789-7651

3457 BATHURST ST.

www.milknhoney.ca

COR

milk 'n honey

THE DAIRY RESTAURANT

דער יידישווינקל

דזשערי קעין

אברהם רייזען

וואָס האָט ער געוואָלט פֿון דער יידישער שפּראַך?

פֿון דזשערי קעין

הײַ יאָר פֿיַיערן מיר הונדערט יאָר זינט די ערשטע וועלטלעכע קינדער שולעס האָבן זיך נעגרינדעט אין ניו יאָרק, מאַנהעטאַן, טאָראָנטאָ, און חיניפּעג. די שולעס האָבן אָפּגעשפּיגלט די פֿאַרשידענע באַוועגונגען וואָס האָבן געבּרויזט אין די אַרבעטער פּלעצער, גאָסן און היימען פֿון די ניַי געקומענע עמיגראַנטן. זאָל זיין לינקע פּעולי ציון, רעכטע פּעולי ציון, בונדיסט, אָדער קאָמוניסט, אין אַלע די קינדער שולעס הוי יידיש האָט נעהערשט האָבן אויך נעהערשט די פּאָעמעס, לידער און מעשׂהלעך פֿון אַברהם רייזען.

רייזען, געבּאָרן אין קרעדנאָוו חיים רוסלאַנד, איז נעוווען אַ קינד פֿון אַ ליטוואַישער היים. דער טאַטע, זיין שוועסטער שׂרה און זיין ברודער זלמן, זיינען אַלע נעוווען שרײַבער. צו פֿערצן יאָר איז אַברהם נעוואָרן אַ לערער אין קרידנאָוו און צו דיבעצן אַ לערער אין מינסק. אין זיין יוגנט איז ער נעוואָרן אַן אַנהענגער פֿון דער משכּילישער באַוועגונג און פֿון דער סאָציאַליסטישער פּאָליטיק וואָס האָט פֿאַרכאַפּט אַזוי פיל פֿון דער יידישער יוגנט וואָס האָט געזוכט אַן אויסוועג פֿון די פֿרומע פֿאָרמען פֿון שטעטל לעבן און אַן אַרײַנפּיר צו דעם לעבן אין לערעם פֿון דער מאָדערנער וועלט. אין איינע פֿון זיינע ערשטע לידער האָט ער געשריבן:

זאָל יעדערער צוליגן פֿעסטער זיין האַנט,
מיר וועלן די הויכע, די פֿינצטערע וואַנט –
צעברעכן די וואַנט...

רייזען האָט דעביוטירט אין פֿרצעס די יידישע כיבליאָטעק אין 1891. ער האָט אויך געשריבן פֿאַר דער ערשטער יידישער צײַטונג אין רוסלאַנד, דער פֿרײַנד. ער איז אין גיכן באַקאַנט געוואָרן אין די שרײַבערשע קרײַזן און אויך דער יידישער גאָס. נאָך זיין דינסט אין דער רוסישער אַרמיי איז ער געוואָרן דער רעדאַקטאָר פֿון פּרצעס יום-טוב בלעטלעך. אָבער רייזען האָט געפֿונען דעם פֿאָרמאַט צו ענג אין האָט אַרויסגענבן אַן אַנטאָלאָגיע, דאָס ייִדישׂע ליטעראַטור-פֿאָלק, וווּ ער האָט נעקענט צוזאַמענברענגן די אַרבעטן פֿון פֿאַרשידענע יונגע שרײַבער אין פֿאַרשטעלן זייערע מיינונגען תּען די טעמעס אוּן פֿראַבלעמען וואָס זיינען נעוווען היכסיק פֿאַר יידן וואָס לעבן אין צוואַנציקסטן יאָרהונדערט. צוזיך די פֿראַבלעמען איז נעוווען די פֿראָגע תּען יידיש. איז עס אַ ליטעראַטור? איז עס אַ שפּראַך גלײַך מיט אַלע אַנדערע שפּראַכן? האָט יידיש דאָס זעלבע וערט וי העברעיש?

אַברהם רייזענס ענטפֿער איז נעוואָרן דער פֿונדאַמענט פֿון זיין ליטעראַרישן און קהילותדיק לעבן:

"יידיש איז ניט נאָר אַ מיטל צו בילדן די יידישע מאסן, טאָר אַ ציל פֿאַר זיך, אַז זי וועט דינען אויך דער יידישער אינטעליגענץ, אוּן וועט אויף אזא אופֿן אָפּשפּיגלען אַלע שטרעבונגען אוּן שטרעמונגען פֿון דער גרויסער וועלט, אַזוי אז דער יידישער אינטעלעגענט זאָל ניט דאַרפֿן אין העכערע פֿראָגן זיך ווענדן צו די ליטעראַטורן אין אַנדערע שפּראַכן וואָס פֿאַרפֿעמדט אים פֿון יידישן פֿאָלק." אָט די מיינונג האָט נעהילכט פֿון רייזענען בשעת זיין אָנטיַיל נעמען אין דער טשערנאָוויצער שפּראַך קאָנפֿרענץ.

רייזענס בײַטראָג צו אונדזער שפּראַך אוּן ליטעראַטור איז צו גרויס צו באַאַנטלען אין איין קאַפּיטל. איך פֿראָביר דאָ בלויז צו דערמאָנען וויי ער האָט אָנגעפֿאַנגען אוּן וואָס ער האָט נעמאַלט פֿון אונדזער מאַמע לשון. מיר וועלן צוריק קומען צו רייזענען אין אַ קומענדיקן קאַפּיטל. רייזען איז אָוועק פֿון אונדז אין 1953.

אויב איר האָט נעראַנקען וועגן אונדזער וויקל שרײַבט דורך פּאָסט אַדער בליץ- פּאָסט: info@thecjn.ca

Obituary

Longtime Legion chief combined 'heroism, humility'

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

A stalwart of the Royal Canadian Legion's General Wingate Branch 256, originally known as the Jewish Brigade, died recently in Toronto.

Sam Romberg, president of the Wingate branch for 20 years until 2009, succumbed to complications from diabetes on Sept. 27 at Baycrest Hospital. He was 87. Some 70 years ago, Romberg lied about his age to fight for the freedom of the world, Rabbi Philip Scheim said in a eulogy.

Sam Romberg

The rabbi, who knew Romberg as a congregant of Beth David B'nai Israel Beth Am Congregation, said he embodied both heroism and humility. He remembers him as an "unassuming guy… a very gentle, soft-spoken, kind, grandfatherly type," he told The CJN.

Romberg served in an armoured tank unit in the Canadian Army during World War II and received five campaign medals. In 2002, he received a Queen's Golden Jubilee Medal, awarded to citizens who had made significant contributions over the previous 50 years. In August, Romberg was awarded the Palm Leaf, considered the Legion's highest honour.

A native of Toronto, Romberg was a tank operator for most of the war, serving in the United Kingdom, France, Belgium and Germany. He was injured by friendly fire from an air attack during the Battle of Normandy, suffering shrapnel wounds in his back.

Romberg's son, Wayne, who travelled with him and other veterans to Europe in 1990 for the 45th anniversary of the liberation of Holland, said his father was overseas for about five years. When he returned to Canada after the war, Romberg worked as a cab driver until his retirement at age 65.

His involvements with the Wingate branch included its annual poppy fundraising campaign, which he worked on with his wife, Aileen. He also served on the cemetery committee, and was instrumental in organizing programs such as Shabbat services and Passover seders for Jewish patients in the Sunnybrook Hospital Veterans' Wing.

As well, he used to visit schools and speak to students about being a veteran, his son, Barry, told The CJN. An award-winning jazz drummer, Barry recalls that his father got him his first gig at a Jewish organizational dinner when he was about 12 or 13.

"I started playing in little groups, and he'd always shlep us around," Barry told The CJN. As well, he added, his father would keep copies of his 1988 album in his trunk and sell them to customers. "He was a great guy," said Barry. "I don't think I ever heard him say anything bad about anyone. There's not too many people like that."

Romberg leaves Aileen, his wife of 58 years, sons Barry and Wayne, grandchildren Ashley and Max, and sister Lyla Puro. He was predeceased by his brother, Izzy.

The Board of Directors and the staff of the Ashkenaz Foundation would like to extend a sincere apology to Mr. Saul Berman and the Miriam Berman Fund for Yiddish Education at the Jewish Foundation of Greater Toronto for the error that occurred in Mr. Berman's greeting which appeared in the 2010 Ashkenaz Festival program book. A corrected greeting appears below.

זײַט אַלע באַגריסט
און א גוט יאָר

מרים בערמאַן פֿונד פֿאַר יידיש

The Miriam Berman Fund for Yiddish Education at the Jewish Foundation of Greater Toronto

SINGLES EVENTS

DEADLINE:
Wednesday 4 p.m. 8 days preceding issue date

For rates or to place an ad call 416-391-1836

The CJN encourages readers to direct any queries on events to the event's organizers

Games Jewish Singles Play!
Sun., October 24, 7:30 pm.
Beth Torah, 47 Glenbrook. $8.
Call Mollie 416-733-3634 or mollie_rothman@yahoo.ca

Vacations for Jewish singles (30s, 40s, 50s)
AMAZING JOURNEYS
NEW YEAR'S HAWAII CRUISE; Dec 25-Jan 1. 5 Islands-7 Nights in paradise. Priv. group tour options, special group events, exceptional hospitality & a great group of Jewish singles. Over 70 already booked!
NCL NORWEGIAN CRUISE LINE ship registry Bahamas
www.amazingjourneys.net 412-571-0220
info@amazingjourneys.net

Shaar Shalom Singles
(in conjunction with the Intersynagogue Singles (45+) Presents a wonderfully entertaining speaker
Rebbetzin Fran Salzman
the first Jewish female R.C.M.P. officer
"One Woman's Experience in the R.C.M.P."
SUNDAY, Oct. 24, 2010, 7:30pm
Shaar Shalom Synagogue
2 Simonston Boulevard
(1 light north of Don Mills & Steeles)
A Mix and Mingle will follow the speaker. ADMISSION: $6 includes coffee and cake
For information: please call David 416-224-9494

The security of a GIC. A 7.25%* rate of return.

Yes, really.

[Suitable for ages 60-80.
Minimum investment $50,000.
Certain conditions apply.]

*Rate based on a 70 year old male

GIC Income Exchange Inc.
Call for details
416.787.1366

aish
AISH TORONTO & AISH JERUSALEM
GALA DINNER

RAISING Leaders
INSPIRING & IMPACTING THE JEWISH WORLD

A Tribute to the Canadian Parents of Current Aish Rabbis & Leaders

Tuesday November 9, 2010

GUEST SPEAKER
Charles Krauthammer
PULITZER PRIZE WINNER
WASHINGTON POST COLUMNIST
FOX NEWS COMMENTATOR

WITH
David Shore
CREATOR AND EXECUTIVE PRODUCER OF "HOUSE"

HONOREES
Dr. Harvey & Mrs. Myrtle Coopersmith
Mr. Ami & Mrs. Renee Farkas
Mr. Frank & Mrs. Lyla Schwartz
Mr. Marvin & Mrs. Cecile Shore
Mr. Joel & Mrs. Phyllis Zelcer
Mr. Bernie & Mrs. Mary Fran Zeldman
Mr. Alan & Mrs. Michelle Zelunka

FOR MORE INFORMATION AND/OR TO PURCHASE DINNER TICKETS
905-764-9340 | aishleaderdinner@gmail.com

Feature

With luck and chutzpah

By BERNARD RUBIN

My family is probably one of the few Jewish families in the world who can say their grandparents were actually saved by the Nazis.

In honour of the approaching Holocaust Education Week, I would like to share some of my family's unusual experiences during World War II.

Before the war, my parents lived in Antwerp. The family legend is that my father was very smart because, knowing Adolf Hitler was going to invade Belgium, he left before the German invasion in 1940 by smuggling himself into New York – illegally, of course – on a cattle boat.

Some members of our family believed he was smart because he knew he should get out of Europe and into New York, and then help my mother get across the Atlantic.

The true story may be somewhat murkier. Some of my older relatives recall that my father immigrated to New York because he owed too much money and wanted to avoid debtors' prison – which meant, of course, that his illegal entry to America had nothing to do with the Nazis!

Which story is true?

All I know for sure is that he was in New York when Hitler invaded Belgium, and my mother was not with him. Rather, she was stuck in Antwerp under German occupation, with my sister, who was then five years old.

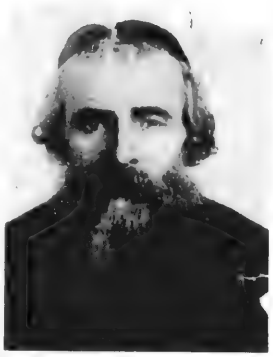
How did she get out of Europe?

The United States was neutral, but there was an embargo against dealing in diamonds with the Germans. (My father was a diamond dealer.) This was because the Germans would hoard their diamonds to hide their wealth, in case they lost the war.

A man named Von Klemm, German foreign minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop's brother-in-law, knew of my parents and used my mother as a "pony" – his vehicle to ship diamonds to the United States. He would send letters to my father in my mother's name postmarked "Berlin" to create the impression that my mother was sending diamonds to my father, when it was actually Von Klemm sending them.

My father then devised what he thought was a great plan to get my mother out of Europe. He sent his partner's wife to the State Department. There, she advised the officials: "I have a friend who is an illegal alien and thus cannot come forward because of his status. However, his wife appears to be sending him letters postmarked "Berlin," but she is really in Antwerp. It has something to do with diamonds. What should we do?"

This was before the days of computers, yet the story has



Bernard Rubin's grandfather and grandmother

it that the State Department employee responded: "You are Abraham Rubin's friend. We know he is in the States. Have him come forward. We will make him a citizen and we will get his wife, Frimet, (my mother) over here to testify against Von Klemm."

That's how my mother got a visa to the United States. But she still had to find a way to escape from Europe.

The family stories about her escape are legendary.

My mother was in Vichy, France, when the Nazis took her and my sister to the train station for their final deportation. She was told that everyone in the station was being repatriated to their country of origin: in my mother's case, Belgium. She noticed, however, that everyone at the train station was Jewish and concluded that something was amiss. So she bribed a German guard (with a diamond, of course) saying: "My daughter is ill and needs to be seen by her own doctor. I promise to return with her tomorrow."

How she got so lucky we'll never know, but the German guard took the diamond and let them go.

She then found her way to Marseille, then Casablanca, and ended up in Lisbon, Portugal, with boat tickets for her and my sister to safely journey through Cuba to New York to join my father. In New York, she would be required to testify against Von Klemm.

Continued on page 34

Reserve Now!
SHOMRAI SHABBOS CHEVRAH MISHNAYOS
120th Anniversary Dinner
RABBI & REBBETZIN YACOV FELDER שליט"א
MR. & MRS. BENTZION HEITNER
MR. & MRS. HARRY MARDER
MR. & MRS. MOSHE REICHMANN
MRS. ROCHELLE REITER
MRS. BONNY SILVER
MR. & MRS. JACK WEINBAUM
RABBI DR. AVRAHAM TWERSKI
Wednesday November 17, 2010
FOR MORE INFORMATION:
email shaindy@rogers.com or call 416.879.2065
Building the Toronto Jewish Community Brick by Brick

OPEN HOUSES

prossermanjcc
daycare & preschool

Wednesdays,
October 20 and 27
November 3 and 10
9:30 - 11:30 am

18 months to 5 years old programs

At the Prosserman JCC Daycare and Preschool all children are educated in a Jewish environment, encompassing all the essential building blocks and values so important to living a happy, healthy and successful Jewish life.

Our new facility is more than a bright, open space in which children learn, play and interact with each other, the new daycare and preschool enhances each child's individual learning experience.

Sherman Campus / David & Esther Freiman Childhood Education Centre
4588 Bathurst Street / 416.638.1881 x4351 or x4250 / kids@prossermanjcc.com www.prossermanjcc.com

MAZEL TOV
ROCK!

Hard Rock
CAFE
TORONTO

Mother succeeded in retrieving her handmade rugs

Continued from page 32

My mother had a lot of chutzpah. When she was in Lisbon, she decided she wanted her handmade rugs from Belgium to be shipped to New York as well.

Even though Portugal was neutral during the war, all mail in and out of the country was screened by the Germans. Given that she could not use the mail, my mother asked a German Jew to come with her to the German Embassy to translate her request that her rugs be sent promptly to New York.

Although she had chutzpah, her powers of persuasion were not quite as effective. The man refused to go with her. "Are you crazy?" he asked her. "We are running away from Hitler and you want me to go into the German Embassy because of your rugs! I'm not going there. They could kill us."

Never one to back down, she went alone to the embassy, or maybe she took my six- year-old sister with her. The non-Jewish taxi driver was so afraid of the Germans that he did not pull up alongside the embassy, but dropped her off a block away and just pointed her in the right direction.

Inside the embassy, a polite, vice-ambassador, clicking his heels, addressed her by name. He took note of all the details of my mother's rugs and told her there would be no problem!

When my mother and sister were on a boat halfway across the Atlantic, she received a cablegram from the Nazis informing her exactly when and on what ship her rugs would arrive in New York. Believe it or not, the rugs eventually did arrive in New York, true to the German Embassy official's word.

The final part of my mother's odyssey concerns her parents. Her father was a Satmar Chassid with a long beard and payot, a haredi Jew. I had always been told that my grandparents were hidden in a gentile home for the aged in Antwerp. But the story did not make sense to me because I knew my grandfather refused to shave his beard and demanded to eat only kosher food. This behaviour would have endangered the lives of everybody in the home by drawing attention to the fact that Jewish people were being hidden there.

> 'Are you crazy? We are running away from Hitler and you want me to go into the German Embassy!'

Last year, my older cousins, who are in their 80s, told me this story was incorrect.

But the real story is just as bizarre. They said a Nazi general, Alexander Von Falkenhausen, an aristocrat related to the Queen of Belgium, was in charge of occupied Belgium and northern France. The queen summoned him and berated him, saying it was beneath his dignity as an aristocrat to round up and kill Jews. Not wishing to disappoint the queen, and as a way to save his own hide, he found a way to placate her as well as the international community.

He picked a hospital that he would put on display, and ordered that everyone in the hospital be protected and given full religious freedom.

As it happened, my grandparents were outpatients at this hospital, receiving insulin injections. In 1942-43, the International Red Cross periodically visited Antwerp and Von Falkenhausen would take them to "his hospital" and point at my grandfather to deny the Red Cross accusations about genocide. He would say to the visitors: "What are you talking about? Do you see that man over there with the big beard and the black outfit? Is he Jewish enough for you? Look. He is drinking his ceremonial wine on Friday night and reciting his Sabbath prayers."

Von Falkenhausen's Nazis allowed the Jews in that hospital to "be" Jewish without being harmed, and as a result, my maternal grandparents lived to almost the end of the war.

On Christmas Eve, 1944, however, there was a terrible – and sadly ironic – accident. My grandfather did to himself what the Nazis had failed to do. He was drinking tea in the kitchen and he fell asleep. The gas shut off, then came back on. There was no pilot light to ignite the gas, and it seeped quietly into the room. He was found dead at the window, trying to open it to get air. He had accidentally gassed himself.

A sad end to his story.

Bernard Rubin is a dentist who lives in Toronto.

JOIN MYRNA & JOHN DANIELS AT THE State OF THE Union
Luncheon
In support of
FRIENDS OF SIMON WIESENTHAL CENTER FOR HOLOCAUST STUDIES
KEYNOTE SPEAKER David Frum
Political journalist, author and advisor to former President George W. Bush
INT'L SPEAKER Melanie Phillips
British journalist, author & Wall Street Journal writer
Wednesday, November 10, 2010
at The King Edward Hotel, 37 King Street East, Toronto
EVENT CHAIRS John and Myrna Daniels | DEAN AND FOUNDER, SIMON WIESENTHAL CENTER Rabbi Marvin Hier | PRESIDENT AND CEO, CANADA Avi Benlolo | HONOURARY CHAIRMAN Samuel Belzberg | CHAIRMAN Gerald W. Schwartz
BOARD OF DIRECTORS Lawrence S. Bloomberg, Paul Bronfman, Tony Comper, Gordon R. Diamond, Joel Feldberg, Ron Frisch, Dr. Max Glassman, Malka Green, Rabbi Marvin Hier, Rabbi Meyer H. May, Philip Reichmann, Jill Reitman, Honey Sherman, Alex Shnaider, Allan Silber, Raymond Stone, Cecil Yolles, Honourary Members, David Asper, Hon. Bob Rae, Isadore Sharp, Lawrence Tanenbaum, Mark Waldman BOARD OF GOVERNORS Garry Foster, CHAIRMAN Ron Appleby, Joe Gottdenker, Allen Grinberg, Sheldon Heilin, Howard Kerbel, Tom Koffler, Helene Korn, Alan Lechem, Markus Luft, Larry Maher, Joel Matlin, Howard Meyer, Faye Minuk, Oded Orgil, Dr. Rose Rahmani, Rick Sacks, Henry Schnurbach, Mike Sereny, Dorothy Shoichet, Harry Silverberg, Hal Silverstein, Marilyn Slawin, Arthur Stern, Mark Teitelbaum, Charles Wachsberg, Mark Weisbarth, Eddie Weisz, Eric Weisz, Maryka Weisz
For more information: Call Elaine at 416-864-9735 or Email emartyn@fswc.ca | www.fswc.ca

And now for something completely different: HEEBONICS

Author brings humour to solving the Mideast conflict

Gregory Levey, 32, is the author of How to Make Peace in the Middle East in Six Months or Less Without Leaving Your Apartment.

By Miriam Cross
Special to The CJN

Gregory Levey can't seem to escape the Middle East.

The bizarre events of his 20s, that saw him apply for an internship at the Israel Mission to the United Nations and end up in Jerusalem writing speeches for prime minister Ariel Sharon, are far behind him.

His 2008 memoir about his experiences, Shut Up, I'm Talking: And Other Diplomacy Lessons I Learned in the Israeli Government, was meant to be a lighthearted account of a job that saw him go from law student to quasi-diplomat during a tumultuous two years in the region's history.

But it also turned him into a sounding board for anyone with a view on the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

"Since I got back from Israel, with all the journalism I've done, most of it on the Middle East, and then with that book, I get so many people harassing me," he says in his office at Ryerson University in Toronto, where he now works as a professor in the school of professional communication.

"Everyone needs to give me their opinion on the Middle East, whether they're Jews, non-Jews, Arabs, political types, right wing, left wing. I get e-mails, phone calls – people have shown up here looking for me," he says, gesturing down the quiet hallways snaking past his office – the antithesis of the daily chaos he faced in the Israeli prime minister's compound.

Whatever it is that makes people so eager to talk about the conflict, Levey, 32, says he's sick of it, and has decided to take matters into his own hands the way he knows best: through humour and writing.

His new book, How to Make Peace in the Middle East in Six Months or Less Without Leaving Your Apartment, which was released on Sept. 7 by Free Press, is the result.

"The premise of the book is that fine, I'm going to escape this whole thing by just solving the conflict myself," he says. "And I don't mean writing about how it should be solved, I mean actually going out and trying to solve it."

That meant making approaches to the White House, diplomats, spies and alleged terrorists, trying to get the former adviser to ex-Palestinian Authority president Yasser Arafat and friends of the Israeli prime minister in the same room and spending weeks on the phone to Ramallah.

But it also meant going undercover as an evangelical Christian, partying with a mysterious figure who calls himself the Peaceman and recruiting his neighbourhood Palestinian grocer as his adviser, so clearly, Levey is having a bit of fun with his peace process.

His levity was partly an effort to keep his own sanity – the whole book is about a topic he is trying to escape, after all – and partly to offer a different perspective on the hostilities.

"There's enough tragedy, and it's serious enough, and I don't need to contribute to that," he says. "I just thought that I could bring a different voice we don't normally hear, which is a humorous voice, to the extent that's possible."

That isn't always easy to gauge, as Levey has discovered. While Shut Up, I'm Talking was reviewed largely positively, thanks to his flair for finding laughs in his fish-out-of-water experiences, a tongue-in-cheek article he wrote for Newsweek in 2009, where he suggested that President Barack Obama make George W. Bush his Middle East envoy, saw him deluged with angry letters and called "the stupidest person on earth" by a former Bill Clinton aide. The incident still makes him roll his eyes when I bring it up.

For his second book, balancing the "super-funny, goofy parts" with more substantive material was harder. "I had to craft the narrative," he explains.

In contrast to his laugh-out-loud style of prose, Levey is quiet and unassuming in person, friendly but reserved during our interview. He grew up in Toronto and attended Hebrew day school, but his interest in religion waned and he's now a firm atheist. After composing speeches for world leaders (and just scraping through his law degree at Fordham University), Levey secured a job at Ryerson in 2006 and is now finishing his PhD in creative writing at St. Andrew's University in Scotland.

With closely cropped black curls that he occasionally lets grow into long spirals and a slim, wiry frame, Levey looks (and is) closer in age to his students at Ryerson than his colleagues. But after two years of "complete insanity," as he describes his tenure with the Israeli government, this didn't faze him. "Really, it would have been hard to find something that would have been too strange after that," he says.

Levey rarely misses his old world, though speechwriting did have one unexpected benefit: it helped give him a voice.

"I think that really taught me how I wanted to write, which is a much more conversational, sharp, to-the-point kind of writing," he says.

He applied the same concepts to a screenplay that is currently being shopped around by a Hollywood producer. According to the observations of Susan Cody, former chair of his department, he also follows that sensibility in his day-to-day work life.

"He speaks, I think, only when he can make a distinct contribution," she says. "He knows what he can bring to a problem-solving meeting and brings that, but does not talk to add quantity, to make an impression or to socialize."

What contribution, then, will his new book make? He's up-front about its contrivances and that its primary purpose is simply to entertain. So does he think How to Make Peace can actually make a difference?

"Well, you don't know if I made peace or not yet," he asserts with a smile, and the way he says it, you almost wonder.

"Leaving that aside, no, nothing ever makes a difference. But maybe people will see the opposing sides as a little more human – which is sort of the point."

Correction

The Heebonics story "Brandeis graduate new camp director at Kadimah" (Sept. 22) contained incorrect information. Eve Rudin is the director of camp excellence and advancement at the Foundation for Jewish Camp. We apologize for the error.

FAMILY MOMENTS

Mazel Tov

The Canadian Jewish news

Mazel tov Dov & Genia Brykman on your 60th wedding anniversary!! Love from your children Manny and Esther, and the entire Brykman and Milstein families.

Sol & Belle Zulauf will celebrate their 60th anniversary on Oct. 21. Love, Debra, Randi, Leslie, Erwin, Ron, Sandra, Lindsay, Daniel, Matthew, Nicole, Jonah, Kaley and Jessica!

We happily announce the engagement of our children Brenda & Michael. Mazel tov from Carol & Glenn Bowman and Nancy & Marvin Budd.

Mazel tov on the engagement of Simone and Micha. With lots of love from the Chitiz, Milner, Blankstein, Rajsky, and Barber families.

Happy fourth birthday to our very special big boy! We love you, Judah, and we are so proud of you! Love always, Mommy & Daddy.

Rebekah, you turned 12 on Oct. 11. You are turning into a young lady. We are proud of your accomplishments. Mom, Dad & Josh.

SEND US YOUR PHOTOS!!

Email your digital photos to cblackman@thecjn.ca or go online to WWW.CJNEWS.COM and click the Family Moments button!

Class Acts

SHARING THE HARVEST: Showing their commitment to tikkun olam and the environment, Grade 1 students at Associated Hebrew Schools' Kamin Education Centre in Thornhill tend to the school's very own vegetable garden, whose produce is given to the Kavanah Garden at the Lebovic JCC in Vaughan. In addition to donating fresh vegetables, students from all grades will also begin collecting food items for donation to Kavanah's upcoming food drive.

POGO RUN

Students at Leo Baeck Day School's Thornhill campus participated in the annual Leo Baeck-POGO (Pediatric Oncology Group of Ontario) Run, in which students raised funds for families with children who have been diagnosed with cancer. Pictured, from left, are Jakob Brooker, Ethan Luepana, Brandon Tessler, Jake Rakusin, Benji Saltz and Lauren Walter.

TERRY FOX RUN: Robbins Hebrew Academy middle school students – from left, Courtney Marks, Alison Shapiro and Brianna Allice – prepare banners for the school's annual Terry Fox Walk. Celebrations at the school focused on tikkun olam and involved all students. This year, in addition to the walk, older students heard from cancer survivors who shared their stories, and younger students watched a Charlie Brown video about a young student's struggle with, and recovery from, leukemia.

Harbord grads hold 60th anniversary reunion

BY CYNTHIA GASNER
Special to The CJN

The 1950 graduating class of Harbord Collegiate Institute will mark its 60th anniversary at a reunion brunch at the Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue on Sunday, Oct. 17.

Harbord was once the hub of Jewish teens in Toronto – from the late 1920s to the mid-1950s, 90 per cent of the school's student population was Jewish, mainly with roots in eastern Europe.

"After we celebrated our 50th anniversary in 2000, a group of classmates decided that we would enjoy each other's company every few months at lunch," says Helen Klingman, a Harbord graduate and a retired principal who compiled a historical overview of the school in an essay titled Memories of Harbord Collegiate.

Klingman says the driving force for the 60th reunion came from the lunch group, and various members of the group are participating in planning and organizing the reunion.

"It's their support and enthusiasm that has carried us through the years to this 60th reunion milestone," she says.

"Over the last 10 years, we've lost some of our classmates, but that has made it all the more important to enjoy each other and to recall our memorable time at Harbord."

"Our speakers at the brunch will be leading us down Harbord's memory lane," she adds.

Graduate Howard Warner, a chartered accountant, will give the welcoming speech. The MC for the evening will be Lawrence Naiman, a retired pediatric hematologist from California who also graduated from Harbord.

Many graduates of the class of 1950 are prominent names in medicine, law, business, science, architecture and other disciplines.

Among the speakers at the reunion will be dentist Josh Fedder; Bernard Langer, professor emeritus of surgery at University of Toronto; retired pharmacist Murray Rubin; and Mildred (Tameanko) Steinberg, head of the Jewish Book Fair.

Speaking of their years at Harbord, Klingman says, "The five years we were at Harbord were very meaningful and memorable. Israel was declared a state and many families had to deal with the immediate aftermath of the Holocaust, with some survivors attending Harbord."

She adds that although it was an intense historical period, "we had an opportunity to learn, to laugh, to enjoy a unique camaraderie and to make lifelong friends."

For more information on the reunion, call Howard Warner at 416-649-7728.

Shopping for souvenirs for the Harbord Collegiate's 60th reunion are, from left, Murray Lazer, Helen Klingman, Howard Warner and Deanie (Hoffman) Rumack.

RESPITE CARE
ASSISTED LIVING
PALLIATIVE CARE

L'CHAIM GROUP HOME FOR SENIORS

A dignified middle ground between the independence of a retirement home & the dependence of a nursing home

"The programs at L'chaim keep my mind sharp. The days are enjoyable. I have made many new friends."
Mrs. Adela Koch

Retirement homes aren't for everyone. Neither are nursing homes. L'chaim occupies a unique middle ground — a perfect fit for seniors who require special attention for physical and cognitive impairments BUT who also want to retain their sense of independence and dignity. Our assisted living programs and caring staff allow them to do just that. We invite you to discover all L'chaim has to offer.
Judy Cohen, Founder

416.398.7898 L'chaim 718 Sheppard W.
www.lchaimretirement.ca Open house every Thurs. 10-4
Full-time residence • Respite Care • Assisted Living • Palliative care

PRIPSTEIN'S CAMP
all your favourite landsport, waterfront, and creative activities
. . . skate into summer at our amazing Ice Palace!

Just 25 hours from downtown Toronto!

PARENTS: upset about the new HST? Check out our special promotion (campers in grades 1-5), with savings of over $500!

www.mishmar.com 1-866-481-1875

SF Partnership, LLP
Chartered Accountants

Annual Golf Tournament

In support of the Canadian Centre for Diversity
"Discover Diversity Program"

HOLD THAT DATE!

Register Now for a Great Day of Golf and Entertainment

Nobleton Lakes Golf Club
June 21, 2011

For sponsorship and registration, please call
Rita Erkan, Event Coordinator 416.646.8061

The Presenting Sponsor
Scotiabank Group

Panel offers blunt assessment of drug use

By RON CSILLAG
Special to The CJN

The program lived up to its billing: "Let's Be Blunt."

Speakers and panelists at a Sept. 28 community forum on teenage drug use were refreshingly candid, offering glimpses into loved ones' or their own horrific experiences with illicit drugs, their return from the brink, and the many tools available to addicts and parents.

And though no one was blunt about this, the implication was clear: Jewish teens are not immune from drug abuse.

Presented by Jewish Family & Child (JF&CS) and Jewish Immigrant Aid Services of Toronto (JIAS) at the Vaughan City Playhouse, the event, a year in the planning, drew more than 200 interested parties to hear, among other things, first-hand accounts of drug use and its impact on families.

Moderator Joe Rich, a social worker, noted that a generation ago, some drugs were seen as part of hippie culture. Today, he said, they are rightly associated with gangs and violence.

Ryan, an earnest 20-something former teen drug user, said he was bullied and beaten in high school as a visible minority. With few friends and a learning disability, "I wished I was different. I was a hateful and angry kid."

He found solace in hashish and marijuana that he grew in his own room at age 14.

His world came crashing down when his mother was killed in a car accident. Though a tragic event, "it changed my life. I got that smack in the face and it certainly woke me up," and forced him to rethink his drug use.

Today, Ryan studies sociology at university and talks to kids through Youth Speak, which provides young speakers to address youth about drugs, alcohol, bullying, body image, crime and violence.

He advised parents not to delay getting treatment for their children. "The tipping point is right when [drug use] starts."

A harrowing story came from Michael, a kippah-wearing parent whose teenage daughter battled and recovered from alcohol and drug addiction.

He tallied the warning signs his daughter displayed: temper tantrums, decline in academic performance, sleep disorders, stealing and disappearances.

Panelists agreed these are common signs of drug abuse, and that parents must keep a vigilant watch for them.

"Addiction is not just a disease of the addict, but of whole families," Michael said, adding that many families "are in denial."

"You have to take the necessary steps or your child will die. You have to recognize that you didn't cause it. You also can't cure it."

Feeling shame is natural, he added.

The situation came to a head after a verbal brawl when his daughter announced she was leaving home. But when she wanted to return, the family refused until she sought help.

Michael's daughter has been in recovery for 22 months, is working and in school. "So there is hope."

Jay Pasternack, an addictions counsellor for JACS Toronto, a support group for Jewish addicts, said he is seeing many more episodes of drug-induced psychosis than he once did. "It's at least once a month," he said.

Sol Birenbaum, director of Camp Walden, spoke of peer pressure and how it steers many kids to drug use. He stressed "the value of trusting your instincts," even if that means losing friends.

Shivani Gupta of Addiction Services for York Region took the audience through the many phases of addiction, education and recovery. She noted that even high-performing teens from good homes use drugs just to fit in.

Michael Waxman, a school social worker at JF&CS, agreed parents must be assertive. While some might feel that it's all right for their children to smoke pot at home, where they can be watched, "if they're not comfortable with that, parents must say so. The best thing is open communications."

The forum also heard that:

- 23 per cent of Ontario students report they were offered, sold, or given a drug at school in the last year. That's about 219,000 students.
- 42 per cent of Ontario students surveyed have used an illicit substance in the last year.
- 83 per cent of Ontario students in Grade 12 drink alcohol. Nearly half of those admit to binge drinking.
- 60 per cent of illicit drug users in Canada are between the ages of 15 and 24.
- The top four substances used by Ontario students are alcohol (58 per cent); marijuana (25 per cent); prescription pain relievers, such as codeine, Percocet, or Demerol (17 per cent); and tobacco (11 per cent).

Advertising Feature

"GTA Investor Frustrated and Disgusted with 2% GIC's. Says She is a Victim Of Bank's Greed ... Free Report Reveals What TO Do!"

Toronto, ON - She was simply stunned to hear what her banker told her. "I'm really sorry Elizabeth, but I can't do any better than 3.25% on that GIC. If you want to tie it up for 11 years, I can get you a little over 4%, but that's it."

Lousy3% On GIC's! What's She Going To Do?

Elizabeth felt betrayed. After all, she had been putting her savings in this bank for 30 years. And now that Frank was no longer here, she had to take care of everything herself.

It frightened her to have to deal with taxes, and paying bills, and trying to figure out things like refinancing her house. All that was tough enough, but then watching her monthly income sink like a brick in the water, was the last straw.

"He didn't even care that we had been such loyal customers for 30 years.", thought Elizabeth.

There Is Nothing The Banker Can Do.

"I asked him why I was still paying 19% on my credit card balances, when he was only willing to pay me a little better than 3% on my savings. It made me real sad to hear him say that there was nothing he could do."

As she stepped into her home, she was reminded of Frank everywhere she looked. "What would he do?" she said to no one in particular.

She knows that her deposits are insured by CDIC, a Crown Corporation. She reads the paper and knows that Canadian Banks are some of the safest in the world.

Elizabeth then opened the mail, and saw the statement from her bank RSP. She was afraid to open it, because the market had been on such a roller coaster ride that she knew her accounts were likely to be down. Again.

Her RSP Accounts Went Down... Again!

Sure enough, when she saw the balance of her RSP and mutual fund accounts, she got a sick feeling in the pit of her stomach. Elizabeth had to sit down and gather herself, staring at the unbelievable amount of money her accounts had lost, even worse then before!

She started to cry. She said out loud to no one in particular, "I've lost over 30% of my retirement money, and I'm too old to make it up. Why did I put money in this ridiculously risky market? I should have known better." Then Elizabeth felt a chill go through her as if she had been pierced with an ice pick in her soul. "Oh my God. What would Frank have said if he knew I had put so much cash, the money he had worked so hard for... into a casino like the stock market? He would be so mad...." Elizabeth's mind trailed off, as she cried some more. How badly she felt for herself, and for Frank.

The Answer Revealed Itself To Her!

When Elizabeth sat down to read the paper, she saw an article that got her curious, and she sent for a report that was commented on in the article.

The article said there are alternatives to GIC's and mutual funds that most people didn't know about. Alternatives that were low risk, but had the benefit of a potential higher return,and tax benefits!

Elizabeth called the toll-free, recorded message and requested her copy of this free report. She was hoping this was the answer she had been seeking.

A couple of days later, when she opened the mail, she was excited to see the free report had arrived. Elizabeth made herself a cup of tea, and sat down at their kitchen table to take in all the information in the report.

When she finished reading, she felt comfortable for the first time since Frank passed away. She had finally learned the little known alternative to GIC's her banker and broker had never told her.

FREE Report Reveals Little Known Alternative!

A copy of the FREE REPORT is available by calling 1-800-583-2319, 24 hours, for a FREE RECORDED MESSAGE! Why not call NOW and get your free copy of this shocking, eye opening report? If you are sick of your 2-3% GIC's earning such paltry interest, and are rightfully scared of the crazy and risky stock market, the answer to your frustrations is contained in this free report. Call NOW, before things get worse, and while this is fresh on your mind! What have you got to lose? The call, recorded message and report are free! Waiting won't help you, so pick up the phone NOW!

U of T

TRAIN YOUR BRAIN!!!

The Research Division at Baycrest is looking for healthy volunteers aged 65-90 for a memory training study. The study includes an assessment of your thinking abilities with feedback about how they compare to what is expected for your age and state-of-the-art brain imaging.

Participants will be paid for their time and parking is provided.

For more information, Please call (416) 785-2500 x2080

Baycrest

Enriching Care
Enhancing Knowledge
Enlightening Minds

Health & Lifestyles

Take the time to smell the roses

By FRANCES GOODMAN PELLATT
Special to The CJN

MONTREAL — There is good stress – such as the excitement of planning your wedding – and bad stress – losing your job, illness, dealing with aging parents. Either way, we all respond differently. Some people handle stress by becoming anxious, getting angry or experiencing sleep deprivation; others thrive on it and complete their tasks more easily.

According to the literature, there are three levels of stress: immediate – resulting in the body reacting with increased heart rate and breathing and a nervous stomach; continued – experiencing fatigue, anxiety; and ongoing – causing insomnia and personality changes. Stress is an automatic reaction to the body's inability to produce the energy it needs to function properly. The ongoing strain can cause dysfunction and breakdown and the ability to deal with everyday events.

There are many ways to help reduce stress. At work, setting priorities can alleviate the anxiety of meeting deadlines. Exercise, eating well, getting enough sleep or seeking professional help are other ways of dealing with tension and pressures in our lives, whether positive or negative. Everyone needs some way of de-stressing, of calming down in order to cope with what's happening in their lives. Smokers may light a cigarette to give themselves the time to relax before responding or taking action. Some individuals may turn to drugs, while others may find yoga and meditation helpful. Many people believe in the calming effects of rubbing a lucky charm or an amulet, such as crystals or sea-hearts (large pod-like seeds found on the beaches of Jamaica).

One method often overlooked is to turn to nature – seeking energy and strength from flora and fauna.

Robert Internoscia, author of À chacun son arbre, a wilderness survival guide for the soul and the heart, talks about our chakras: "energy centres along the spine, beginning at the base of the spinal column and moving upward to the top of the skull."

The literature explains that the word "chakra" comes from the Sanskrit word meaning "wheel" – and that this wheel of energy is continuously revolving and rotating. There are seven chakras: the root chakra (tailbone/pubic area); the sacral chakra (the belly), the solar plexus chakra (the navel area), the heart chakra, the throat chakra, the third-eye chakra (pineal gland, located in the forehead that secretes melatonin), and the crown chakra (the head/the centre of spirituality).

Internoscia, like many spiritualists and clairvoyants, believes that if the chakras are not aligned (balanced), then our basic life force will be slowed down. We will feel listless, tired, depressed, and we may even be affected physically and become ill. His book talks about "the energy that emerges from trees, the messages they transmit to us and the daily support they offer." He expands on the notion that the energy that comes from certain trees can affect the different chakras. He further explains that each of these centres (chakras) can be energized by specific trees.

The late Edgar Cayce, father of the modern holistic health movement believed "all healing comes from within. Our bodies have the inherent ability and inclination to be healthy. Therapeutic interventions work best by assisting the processes of innate healing."

According to Cayce, certain trees had healing powers for the human body. For example, touching or hugging a maple tree can help relieve the pain of arthritis; the poplar tree will help you let go of problems and situations; the spruce tree can help relieve smokers' sore throats; while the pine tree – the most powerful in our northern forests, Cayce says – is a perfect choice to help develop self confidence and make long-range plans.

George Washington Carver, who devoted his life to understanding nature and the many uses for the simplest of plants, said, "I love to think of nature as an unlimited broadcasting station through which God speaks to us every hour, if we will only tune in."

Osho, a religious guru, urges us to "Look at the trees, at the birds, at the clouds, at the stars… and if you have eyes you will be able to see that the whole existence is joyful. Everything is simply happy. Trees are happy, for no reason; they are not going to become prime minister or president. They are not going to become rich and never will have any bank balance. Look at the flowers – for no reason. It is simply unbelievable how happy flowers are."

Even if you do not believe in any of the above, next time you are in the Laurentians or in one of the beautiful natural parks in and around the city, take the time "to smell the roses." Take a moment to appreciate nature, the wonderment of growth and rebirth of the flowers and trees.

On cjnews.com

The complexities of life and people can be staggering. However, there are symbols of hope all around us.

Please go to cjnews.com to read feature by Masada Siegel.

State of Israel Bonds Canada
Buy. Build. Believe.
Sunday hours
Sundays: October 17, 24, 31
November 4
Time: 10:00am until 3:00pm
STATE OF ISRAEL BONDS /CANADA-ISRAEL SECURITIES, LIMITED
970 Lawrence Avenue West, Suite 502, Toronto, ON M6A 3B6
T: 416.789.3351 Toll Free 1.800.771.9301
F: 416.789.9436 E: toronto@israelbonds.ca
BuyBuildBelieve.ca

ONE GREAT TEAM. TWO AMAZING RACES.
ROCK 'N ROLL LAS VEGAS MARATHON & HALF MARATHON
SUNDAY, DECEMBER 5, 2010
CHOOSE YOUR DESTINATION
ING MIAMI MARATHON & HALF MARATHON
SUNDAY, JANUARY 30, 2011
TEAM LIFELINE
Chai Lifeline
TEAM LIFELINE
GO THE DISTANCE FOR CHAI LIFELINE'S KIDS!
Whether you're a veteran racer or you've never run (or walked) a race in your life, Team Lifeline will get you across the finish line.
MAKE EVERY STEP COUNT!
· Get fit with proven training techniques.
· Challenge yourself: run or walk a half or full marathon.
· Raise funds for Chai Lifeline and bring joy, friendship, and hope to Canada's seriously ill children SPEND A WEEKEND IN THE SUN!
Team Lifeline members receive airfare to the destination city and three nights in the Team Lifeline hotel.
(888) 4-TEAM-LIFELINE
WWW.TEAMLIFELINE.ORG
Through two dozen programs and services, including tutoring, Big Brothers and Sisters, counseling, family retreats, trips and great summer vacations at Camp Simcha or Camp Simcha Special, Chai Lifeline Canada eases the burden of pediatric illness on families throughout the country.
For information about Chai Lifeline Canada and its programs, contact us at 258 Wilson Avenue, Toronto, Ontario M3H 1S6 • (647)430-5933 • www.chailifelinecanada.org

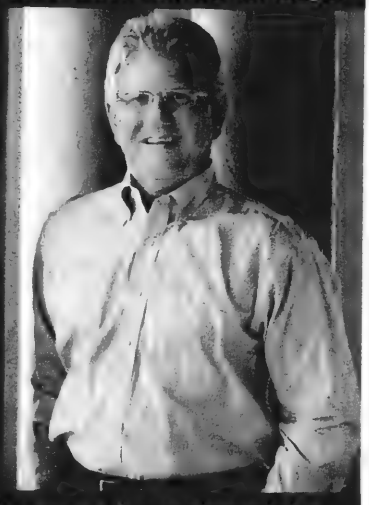
ELECT Shelley Laskin
www.shelleylaskin.ca ST. PAUL'S
• Experienced Trustee
• Involved Parent
• Community Volunteer
• Consensus Builder
• Innovative Thinker
• Problem Solver
Join me in strengthening our schools and communities. Contact me at 416-606-1734, e-mail shelley@shelleylaskin.ca, or follow me on twitter.

If you care about Israel
don't just wring your hands,
put them to civilian work for
2 or 3 weeks on an Israeli supply base

Free: army accommodations, kosher meals, trips and events.
Cost: air fare, $100 registration fee weekend expenses.
SAR-EL CANADA
416-781-6089 toronto@sarelcanada.org
514-735-0272 montreal@sarelcanada.org
www.sarelcanada.org
Groups start approximately every 3 weeks

Re-Elect Dave Barrow for Mayor


Proven Leadership.
www.davebarrowformayor.ca
Please vote on October 25th, 2010
Richmond Hill, Ontario

On Campus

Students get insight into Mideast news coverage

By MICHELLE BITRAN
Special to The CJN

Speed trumps accuracy when it comes to reporting on the Middle East, said Jerusalem Post military correspondent and defence analyst Yaakov Katz at Ryerson University last week.

Katz's talk, titled "From the Frontlines: Covering the Arab-Israeli Conflict," was presented by Hillel and the Canadian Council for Israel and Jewish Advocacy.

"Media works under a tremendous handicap. That handicap is of time and space," Katz said, adding that with the Internet as the primary news source, reporting quickly is key. But it is not without its problems.

"Every [news organization] is trying to beat the other, and that comes at the expense of the content," he said.

Katz, 31, has worked at the Jerusalem Post, Israel's leading English-language daily newspaper, for about 10 years. He was the chief correspondent during the Gaza Strip disengagement in 2005, the Second Lebanon War in 2006 and Operation Cast Lead in 2009. Katz, who was born in Chicago and moved to Israel at 14, also worked as the Israel correspondent for USA Today.

Yaakov Katz

"When it comes to Israel, we have to remember that the news moves at an unprecedented pace," he said. "What happened half an hour ago is already old news."

Katz explained that with the pressure on foreign journalists to produce stories almost immediately upon arrival in Israel, they often report what may be a distorted first impression.

During his speech, the reporter brought forward the example of the Associated Press photo of a brutally beaten American Jew, Tuvia Grossman, pictured on the ground in front of an Israeli police officer wielding a club. The caption under the photo in the New York Times mistakenly identified Grossman as a Palestinian, depicting the policeman as his aggressor.

In fact, Grossman had been attacked by a mob of Palestinians and the police officer in the photo was trying to protect him. However, this correction only appeared in the paper days later, by which time Palestinian propagandists had already used the image of Grossman in order to showcase Israel's supposed cruelty toward the Palestinians.

Unfortunately, said Katz, once this damage is done, it's very difficult to undo. "Ten hours later, can you really change the story? The answer is no."

A similar issue emerged this past spring with the Gaza flotilla incident, said Katz. While major media outlets were reporting that the Israeli Defence Forces was attacking unarmed activists, the IDF took 5.5 hours to respond with footage proving their soldiers were acting in self-defence. By this time, it was too late to change public opinion, Katz explained.

He added that if Israel rushes to defend itself faster, and is then caught in a mistake, its credibility is destroyed. There is, however, a double standard, he said.

"Hamas can lie today, and we'll still report what they say tomorrow."

"In this theatre of operations," said Katz, referring to Hamas' military tactics of using civilian shields, thereby prompting sympathetic media coverage when the IDF fires back, "Israel actually has the underhand, not the upper hand."

When it comes to combating the issue of the international media and public perception, Katz has suggestions, but admits that there is "no clear solution."

He believes that Israel should be more open with the media, showing them ahead of time the difficult situations that their enemies create for them. Also, he added, it is the journalist's duty to thoroughly research the complexities of the Arab-Israeli conflict before reporting.

Putting effort into learning about the conflict separates good journalism from haphazard news reporting, he said.

"You have to sometimes take the extra step, the extra mile."

Please join us for two intriguing programs: Admission is FREE

Highlights of the Cecil Roth Judaica collection
Wednesday, October 20 | 8PM
Curator Dorion Liebgott offers a fascinating virtual tour into the vaults of one of the largest Judaica museums in North America, housing the vast collection of renowned Jewish historian Dr. Cecil Roth. This rare treasure trove of ceremonial objects and Jewish life cycle artifacts is not to be missed.

A Jewish Village in India
Sunday, October 24 | 7:30PM
Rabbi Bonita Nathan Sussman and Rabbi Gerald Sussman use video and slides to share the experience of their months as Kulanu volunteers with the Bene Ephraim, south-eastern India's emerging Jewish kehila.

Darchei Noam
Toronto's Reconstructionist Synagogue
864 Sheppard Avenue West
darcheinoam.on.ca 416.638.4783

Have you seen it lately?
www.cjnews.com
• Columnists • eCJN
• Features • Heebonics
• Breaking News • Contests
• Past Issues and much more!

International

Israel & the Jewish World

Have you seen it lately?
www.cjnews.com
• Columnists • eCJN
• Features • Heebonics
• Breaking News • Contests
• Past Issues and much more!

Changes proposed for Western Wall plaza

JTA

JERUSALEM — A Jerusalem municipal planning committee has approved a plan to make sweeping changes to the Western Wall plaza.

The plan approved last week by the Jerusalem Planning and Building Committee would completely change the layout of the plaza, which was established in 1967. It was the first step in a long approvals process.

Under the plan, an underground plaza and tunnel would replace the main entrance at the Dung Gate. The plan also includes a visitors' centre and extra bathrooms, classrooms and an auditorium, as well as exhibition space for archeological artifacts found in the area.

Despite a plan for a movable mechitzah between the men's and women's sections, which would allow for the enlargement of the women's section as needed, women's groups have expressed concerns about the new configuration, believing they're being squeezed out.

The plan also is expected to anger the Muslim community, which has protested previous work on the plaza, such as the construction of a temporary bridge to the Mugrabi Gate entrance of the Temple Mount in 2007.

Eight million people visit the Western Wall each year, according to the municipality of Jerusalem, which expects the figure to double in the next 10 years. The Western Wall Heritage Foundation puts the number of annual visitors at 15 million, the Jerusalem Post reported.

A view of the Western Wall plaza, which is slated to be altered to accommodate more visitors. [Israel Sun photo]

Hamas says IDF attempt to locate Schalit thwarted

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

JERUSALEM — Hamas thwarted an Israeli attempt to locate abducted Israel Defence Forces soldier Gilad Schalit in the Gaza Strip, Channel 2 quoted Hamas officials as saying last week.

The Channel 2 report quoted Hamas officials as claiming they had uncovered an Israeli scheme to monitor calls of senior Hamas officials, hoping to place Schalit's location through bugged mobile phones provided by an Israeli agent three years ago.

A file photo of Gilad Schalit

According to the report, first published in the Egyptian newspaper Al Ahram, Hamas officials got rid of the wired phones as soon as they uncovered the scheme, but they were unable to arrest the agent involved, claiming he escaped across the border into Israel with assistance from Israeli forces.

Schalit was kidnapped by Palestinian militants during a cross-border raid on his army post near the Hamas-ruled Gaza Strip in June 2006.

On Sunday, a senior Hamas official in the Gaza Strip denied that it had resumed prisoner swap negotiations with Israel for Schalit' release.

Egyptian sources told Ha'aretz last week that the talks, conducted by a new German mediator, are being held with Egyptian intelligence officers. No breakthrough was reported, but the efforts are ongoing, he said.

The Gaza-based Palestinian website Quds.net has reported significant progress in the talks, especially regarding the Palestinian prisoners whose release Hamas is demanding. According to the website, the talks have been undertaken in secret, under Egypt's aegis.

Israel is displaying more flexibility regarding the prisoners it's willing to release, Quds.net said. In the past, talks broke down over specific prisoners whom Israel was unwilling to free.

CANADIAN TECHNION SOCIETY

Notice is hereby given to the members

ANNUAL GENERAL MEETING

to be held

Sunday, October 31, 2010

11:00 a.m.

Lipa Green Building Sherman Campus

4600 Bathurst Street Toronto

NORTH CAMPUS:
36 Atkinson Ave, Thorhnill
(905) 709-3636

SOUTH CAMPUS:
1950 Bathurst St, Toronto
(416) 787-9899

www.leobaeck.ca

A Reform Jewish Day School

Leo Baeck

Senior Administrative Opportunities in Special Education

The Leo Baeck Day School is continuing its quest to be a leader in differentiated education, and is looking to bring on board experienced experts in the field for senior positions of responsibility. As such, we are seeking Senior Administrators with demonstrated leadership in the field of Special Education.

As part of a dynamic team of educators, you will be a key resource to our community - students, teachers, parents and administrators - in supporting the individual learning requirements of all students at Leo Baeck. Your mandate will include identifying, preparing and implementing services and alternative curricular resources for students whose learning needs are exceptional, as well as promoting best practices in the classroom for teachers of students with varied learning styles. You will also provide professional development and support in these areas to the teaching staff of Leo Baeck.

You are a skilled and experienced teacher and leader with at least 5 years of experience in primary and middle years education, with a focus on meeting the needs of students with learning exceptionalities. Ideally you will have worked with a varied population of students, including those who require gifted resources as well as those with various learning difficulties. You take a collaborative approach to teaching and communicate well with students, parents and colleagues. A Master's in Education with a focus in Special Education is a strong asset, as is experience working in an International Baccalaureate environment.

Qualified applicants should send their resumes to Eric Petersiel, Head of School, at epetersiel@leobaeck.ca.

THE CJN PARTY PLANNER DIRECTORY

CATERERS
Caterers Inn
Chesalmar Catering
Fine Food
Lakeside Catering
Lavish Party Atmosphere & Catering
PR Creative Catering
Shagrir

CONSULTANTS
Hello Showbiz
Mindplay Entertainment
Special Events Party Consultants
Up & Coming Events

DECOR
Dovid's Fine Linens

INVITATIONS
Invitation House
Partytime Invitations

KETUBOT
Ketubot Ketubot

MUSIC
Ascension Groove
Best Mitzvah Music For Every Occasion
Fernwood Music Entertainment
HaTikvah
Joe Star Band
Kenny Simon Bluegrass Band, The
OneMoreTime

ONE STOP PARTY SHOP

VIDEOS
D.M.S. Video Productions
Jag Productions
Rafael Studios
Redstone Pictures
Twins Photo & Video
Video Productions By Josh

WEBSITES
www.TorontoPartyGuide.com

WHERE TO PARTY
Beth Israel Synagogue
Asian Legend
Atlantis Pavilion
...ity Services
...e Venue, The
...k and Seafood
...o Bar
...olf Club
...cuisine
...ine
...The
...otary
...s & Lounge
...ce
...quet Halls
Playtime Bowl
Rain Spa & Salon
Ria
Toronto Marriott Bloor-Yorkville Hotel
La Vecchia
Warehouse Event Venue, The

GIFTS
Gold Step Jewellers
Israel Source

HENNA
Little Miss Henna

SPECIALTY FOODS
Chocolate Charm
Mancinelli.ca
Nutcracker Sweet
Summer Fresh Salads Inc

Copy Kis Printing

PLANNING A PARTY?
Want A Little Help?
The CJN Party Planner Online Directory will give you easy access to all our Party Advertisers' websites.
Go to WWW.CJNEWS.COM.
Click on the PARTY PLANNER DIRECTORY
where you will find Live Links to Everything you Need to Make Your Party a Sensation!
For more information on the next CJN Party Planner call [illegible]

Israel & the Jewish World

Holocaust museum juxtaposed with Rwandan genocide

By MOIRA SCHNEIDER
JTA

CAPE TOWN, South Africa – At a South African Holocaust museum that plans to open late next year in Johannesburg, the Holocaust will be featured beside a more local genocide: the Rwandan violence of 1994.

The inclusion of the African mass murder is not a mere gesture toward political correctness in what will be the third Holocaust museum in Africa. Rather, it will be an integral part of the planned Johannesburg Holocaust and Genocide Centre.

"The Rwandan section is a prominent part of the permanent exhibition, not an afterthought," said centre director Tali Nates. "It will be a shared museum."

The message the juxtaposition sends is stark: that the Holocaust, and remembrance of it, did not prevent another genocide from occurring. Even in Africa, it's not a message that naturally occurs to the Jews here, Nates said.

"I don't think that as South Africans and as Jewish South Africans we actually made the connection," Nates said. "You cannot look at the story without remembering that as a South African, you need to make the connection to Rwanda, to the continent of Africa and to the fact that genocide, sadly, did not stop after the Holocaust.

"So I could not, in 2010-11, establish a Holocaust exhibition within South Africa without looking at Africa," she said.

The museum will combine survivors' testimonies with documents, photographs, film, interactive exhibits, text and artifacts. The exhibition space will take visitors on a route starting with exhibits on racism in general to the South African experience during apartheid to survivor accounts. There will be a memorial courtyard, an exhibition on the Rwandan genocide and an area dedicated to issues facing South Africans today, such as xenophobia.

To include South African voices in the exhibition on the Holocaust, seven local Holocaust survivors and Pretoria resident Jaap van Proosdij, who saved dozens of Jews, have been interviewed.

For the Rwanda section, the centre is collaborating with museums and non-governmental organizations in Rwanda, Britain and the United States. The exhibit will tell the story not only of the killings, which took the lives of some 800,000 people, but little-known stories of those who rescued Tutsis from the violence.

The museum is receiving significant help from Proof, a U.S.-based organization that interviews rescuers in former hot spots such as Rwanda, Bosnia and Cambodia.

The Rwandan exhibit "will be a sizable exhibit with moving images, with colour, and we will use a lot of the voices of the victims, perpetrators, bystanders and rescuers," Nates said.

As the Holocaust exhibit covers the 12-year period from 1933 to 1945, compared to the less detailed 100 days of the Rwandan genocide, the Nazi exhibit will be larger.

"It's not a competition in size of story, it's not a competition in suffering," Nates said. "It is about the human connection between the 'Never again' that we said after the Holocaust and the 'Again and again' that sadly we experienced in the 20th century."

The Rwandan story resonates particularly in South Africa, which emerged from decades of apartheid just as the Rwandan genocide took place. Indeed, South Africa's experience with apartheid will form a substantial part of the introduction to the Rwandan exhibition.

South Africa is the only country in Africa where the teaching of the Holocaust and the Rwandan genocide are part of the national curriculum. The centre is committed to assisting this education and has been doing so since its establishment in temporary premises in 2008.

Like the country's two other Holocaust centres, in Cape Town and Durban, the Johannesburg Holocaust and Genocide Centre plans to bring in scholars and train educators.

"Our hope is that our education efforts will lead to growing awareness, intervention and prevention" of xenophobia within South Africa, Nates said.

Architect Lewis Levin is designing the museum. African stone, readily available in the Gauteng province, in which the museum will be located, will be incorporated with concrete and steel.

The visual effect will evoke not only wreckage and destruction but also trees in a forest. Levin says the imagery is deliberate.

"If you visit the death camps, the fragments of mangled steel that have remained and of forests surrounding the precincts are strong visual associations," he said.

The split-level, 9,000-square-foot centre will be made up of two buildings connected by a bridging structure and public areas. The first floor will house the permanent exhibition, while the second floor will include administration offices, a temporary exhibition space, a lecture hall and a resource centre.

At street level, the double-volume foyer will be dominated by a wall of clear glazing interspersed with illustrations drawn by children in the Theresienstadt ghetto during the Holocaust. There will be an area for reflection inside and outside in the form of the memorial garden to victims of the Holocaust and the Rwandan genocide.

In the displays, the museum will include explanations in South Africa's indigenous languages, such as Zulu and Xhosa, in addition to Hebrew and English. At the entrance will be a memorial light with "Z'chor," the Hebrew word for "remember," alongside words for remembrance in other African languages, including Kinyarwanda, the language spoken in Rwanda.

Hezbollah militants training in Syria

By AVI SCHARF
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

JERUSALEM — The Syrian army has a Scud missile base near Damascus, according to recent satellite photos. The photos also suggest that Hezbollah activists are being trained in the Scuds' use at the base.

Reports that Syria may have given Hezbollah Scuds ratcheted up tensions between Jerusalem and Damascus about six months ago, according to foreign media.

The photos, taken on March 22, can be seen by any web surfer on Google Earth. They show extensive construction at several military bases throughout Syria, including at one of the country's three largest missile bases, located 25 kilometres northeast of Damascus, near the city of Adra.

The base is in a deep valley surrounded by 400-metre-high mountains. Concrete tunnels lead from the base into the mountains, where the Scuds are apparently stored.

The photos show five missiles at the Adra base. Three are on trucks in a parking lot. Two others are in a training area where 20 to 25 people can be made out along with about 20 vehicles. One of the two missiles appears to be mounted on a mobile launcher, and another is on the ground.

In April, the Kuwaiti newspaper Al Rai reported that Syrian President Bashar Assad was arming Hezbollah with Scuds. The paper did not mention the type of Scud, but the Scud C has a range of approximately 600 kilometres.

About a month later, Amos Harel reported in Ha'aretz that Damascus had given Hezbollah highly accurate and lethal M-600 rockets with a range of 300 kilometres.

In late May, the Sunday Times of London reported that shipments of weapons from the Adra base were going to Hezbollah, and that according to anonymous security sources, Iran was sending missiles and other weapons to that base via the nearby Damascus airport. It also said Hezbollah had been given a section of the base for barracks, warehouses and a fleet of trucks to transport weapons to the Lebanese border, 40 kilometres away.

Earlier that month, Brig.-Gen. Yossi Baidatz, the head of research for Military Intelligence, told the Knesset foreign affairs and defence committee, "The long-range missiles Syria recently gave to Hezbollah are just the tip of the iceberg. Hezbollah already has thousands of rockets of all kinds and all ranges."

Due to the rising tensions at the time, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and Saudi King Abdullah invited Assad to an urgent summit at Sharm al-Sheikh. Assad, however, cancelled at the last minute. A senior analyst told Ha'aretz at the time that while Assad was presenting himself to Europe as a peace-seeker, he continued to maintain his strategic alliance with Iran and Hezbollah.

Israel Briefs

Israel to buy stealth airplanes

Israel signed an agreement to buy 20 F-35 stealth fighter jets from the United States. The contract, valued at about $2.75 billion, was signed at a ceremony in New York. "The signing of this defence contract is an event of great strategic and historic significance," Michael Oren, Israel's ambassador to the United States, said in a statement after the signing. "The most advanced fighter jet in the world today, the F-35 will enhance Israel's ability to defend itself, by itself, against any threat or combination of threats, from anywhere within the Middle East."

Cabinet to vote on loyalty oath

The cabinet will take up a loyalty oath requiring new citizens to swear allegiance to "the State of Israel – a Jewish and democratic state." Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu agreed to attach a statement of allegiance to Israel's Citizenship Law that would require the pledge. "Israel is the national state of the Jewish people," Netanyahu said in a statement. "This is a basic principle that guides the government in its policies, foreign and domestic. It is a cornerstone of Israeli legislation and is the expressed terminology of the Jewish, democratic state. This principle will appear in the declaration of loyalty for anyone who requests to become a citizen." If the pledge passes cabinet, as expected, it will advance to the Knesset's legislative committee and finally to the full Knesset.

Rocket fire and IAF retaliation

Israel's air force struck two Gaza targets in response to rocket fire on Israel, the Israeli army said. The overnight attack on Oct. 7 was in response to two rockets fired on southern Israel the previous day. No one was injured by the rocket fire. One of the targets hit by the air force was a Hamas terror training camp, according to reports citing Israeli and Hamas sources. Four Palestinians were injured, according to Hamas sources. More than 160 rockets and mortars have been fired at Israel from Gaza since the beginning of 2010, according to a statement the Israel Defence Forces.

With files from JTA

Elect James Pasternak,
for City Council, Ward 10.
A proven voice for the community.

Worked with colleagues and senior staff to shut down High School Students Against Israeli Apartheid.

Worked to remove the anti-Israel book, The Shepherd's Granddaughter from TDSB schools.

Drafted a motion that resulted in Canada's largest school board condemning Israeli Apartheid Week and banning it from its property.

Helped structure a complex and cost effective lease so the BJCC's Centre Camp with 1,000 kids could operate out of two TDSB schools for multiple summers.

Represents a strong voice to protect our local neighbourhoods such as Bathurst Manor, Balmoral, Hidden Trail, Antibes Drive and Armour Heights.

On Monday October 25, 2010,
Select a Proven Representative for the Community.
www.jamespasternak.com

HAZELTON PLACE
RETIREMENT RESIDENCE

Come & Join our Halloween Party!
"Dress Up" or Be A "Judge"
FRIDAY OCTOBER 29TH 3:30PM – 5:00PM
Many Prizes Best Costume or Best Pumpkin
Live Entertainment & Refreshments. Please RSVP

ENTERTAINER:
Jordan Klapman

Monthly rates starting at only $4195 including 3 meals a day, recreational programs, housekeeping and 24 hour emergency nursing response

111 Avenue Road, Toronto (416) 928-0111

Anti-Jewish measure changing views of Vichy head

By DEVORAH LAUTER
JTA

PARIS — Nearly 70 years to the day since the passage of a pivotal anti-Semitic law in Vichy-occupied France, new evidence about who drafted the law is transforming some historians' views of France's wartime head of state, Philippe Petain.

Until now the Oct. 3, 1940 law – dubbed the Statute of Jews and legislating anti-Jewish discrimination that went above and beyond the demands of France's Nazi occupiers – was believed widely to have been the brainchild of at least two French ministers and their collaborators.

But the discovery of an early draft of the law, donated anonymously to the Paris Holocaust Memorial, has shed some new light on the matter. The draft is a marked-up, undated five-page document with modifications to the law scribbled in red and black ink that call for more stringent measures against Jews than contained in the original, typed draft.

Historians do not contest the authenticity of the document, but experts disagree on who authored the edits.

Did Petain himself handwrite the corrections, providing unprecedented confirmation and new clues about the Vichy leader's personal anti-Semitic zeal? Or did technocrats simply jot down demands from one or several other leaders bent on toughening the text during a cabinet meeting devoted to the law two days before its enactment?

Serge Klarsfeld, a lawyer who brought former Nazis and collaborators to trial, as well as the president of an association for children of deported French Jews, maintains that the edits are in the hand of Petain.

Klarsfeld calls the finding a "historic" confirmation that Petain, then 84, was not a senile puppet of Nazi Germany, as some have argued, but an active promoter of Nazi ideology and anti-Semitism.

"The general defence of Petain makes him out as an aging man, dominated by his entourage, without possessing all his mental capacity," Klarsfeld told JTA. "Now we see very well that it was his desire to make these remarks."

Petain "aligns himself with Nazi, racial ideology because he esteems it's in the interest of France," Klarsfeld said. "And he himself is ultimately anti-Semitic."

Klarsfeld was charged with determining the authenticity of the document for the Paris Holocaust Memorial after its anonymous donation. He said each of the handwritten letters on the document were compared to other writings by Petain, and that handwriting experts would continue to examine the document.

Yet days after the announced discovery, other historians in France remain divided over the document's origins and significance.

"Even if it was the hand of Petain, we don't have information on the conditions in which he made these corrections to the statute," said Annette Wieviorka, a leading French historian on the era. "We don't know if he was alone, or if it's his own work."

Wieviorka said younger historians debating "the degree of the German influence on this statute" question whether Nazis pressured French leaders during the creation of the law, contradicting established views that Vichy leaders acted alone in formulating the anti-Jewish measure.

The handwritten edits on the newly discovered document expanded the category of jobs forbidden to Jews, ensuring that Jews no longer could be elected to public office or work in public education. The original draft only barred them from certain top level administrative and educational posts.

The changes also cross out with a series of quick strokes a loophole that would have exempted from the law "descendants of Jews born French or naturalized before 1860."

In the past, some have argued that Petain occasionally and passively tried to protect native-born French Jews. Mounting evidence, however, has changed the historical view of Petain.

Testimony from a cabinet minister from the period suggested that Petain played a particularly severe role in the making of the Statute of Jews, pushing in particular for Jews to be prevented from teaching in public schools.

He believed in "a traditional form of anti-Semitism in the sense that for him, the Jews are not really French," said Laurent Joly, associated with France's National Scientific Research Center and a French historian on the Vichy era.

Joly said it's not clear to him whether the edits on the document actually are in Petain's hand. The detailed corrections seem too focused on minutiae to have come from the nation's leader, Joly said, asserting that Petain likely would only have given "general directions."

Yet Joly said he believes that Petain helped make the law more anti-Jewish.

"The reality here seems to me that instructions by Petain were given and were written by a technocrat," he said, adding that "It doesn't matter whether it is his handwriting or not, we can see his state of mind."

In any case, Joly said, few French today defend Petain.

"The thesis of Petain as a scapegoat is out of style," he said. "Today the French feel that Petain was an evil for France."

GRAND OPENING

6 FREE BAGELS to all on October 19, 2010
No purchase nesessary

9330 Bathurst St. (at Rutherford) Longo's Plaza
905-417-5600

Canadian Friends of
Herzog Hospital-Ezrath Nashim

Cordially invite you to pay tribute to

DR. PAUL GARFINKEL, OC,

Former President and CEO of CAMH

and to establish

The Dr. Paul Garfinkel Mental Health Program for Israel's Immigrants at Sarah Herzog Hospital in Jerusalem

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 2nd, 2010 at 8:00pm

at a concert featuring

DAN HILL
also the
FRONTIER BRASS ENSEMBLE

Toronto Centre for the Performing Arts
5040 Yonge Street Toronto, Ontario

Refreshments ▼ Kashruth Observed

(416) 256-4222 herzoghosp@rogers.com

SF Partnership, LLP
Chartered Accountants

We are pleased to announce the appointment of

Marnie Silver, MBA, CA•CBV

as Principal of

SF Valuations Inc.

Marnie has considerable experience in the areas of business valuation, economic damage quantification, family law, sharholder disputes and other litigation support matters

A member of KS International

Madison Centre - 4950 Yonge Street, 4th Floor
Toronto, ON M2N 6K1
T: 416.250.1212 - F: 416.250.1225
www.sfgroup.ca

Economist finds silver lining in tough times

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

It's hard to find a silver lining in a situation as grim as the current lackluster recovery, but economist Benjamin Tal may have found one for both the United States and Israel.

Unlike previous economic recoveries, which were fuelled largely by consumer spending, the current modest uptick in the United States is being led by exports and the manufacturing sector, which is booming.

That's good news for manufacturers, who are in the middle of "something close to a renaissance," said Tal, deputy chief economist at CIBC World Markets. Thanks to capital intensive investments in knowledge-based industries, they are becoming leaner and more able to compete in the world economy.

That's the silver lining. The bad news is that workers who once earned a living making things won't be needed as much in the new, machine-intensive environment. That means Americans can look forward to high unemployment as the new normal in their economic landscape.

In a wide-ranging interview in his downtown Toronto office, Tal noted that Israel is well positioned to take advantage of this emerging economic reality. That's the other silver lining.

"I see growing supply chain opportunities for Israel with U.S. high-tech companies," he said.

Israel, which is already cultivating markets in China and India, would do well to ride the Americans' coattails as it increases its export exposure around the world.

Israel's economy is based to a large extent on high-tech, IT, medical innovation and cutting-edge developments in green technology. Because of of Israel's free trade agreement with the United States, the extensive presence of major U.S. corporations in Israel and its reputation for advanced technology products, "Israel will be a big winner" as the United States' manufacturing sector makes inroads into emerging markets, he said.

Benjamin Tal

Israel's economy has performed relatively well in recent years, handily outstripping North American economies. (The Bank of Israel projects four per cent growth in 2010 and 3.8 per cent in 2011. CIBC predicts Canada's GDP will rise by only three per cent in 2010 and 1.9 per cent in 2011.)

But for every silver lining there seems to be a dark cloud: for Israel, economic growth is largely confined to three or four large cities, with the rest of the country not doing so well. Towns like "Dimona, Yerucham and Sderot are not sharing in that growth," Tal said.

Unlike Canada, Israel can't rely on natural resource extraction to produce wealth and jobs. Outside Israel's main cities, "there is no significant employer," he said.

The United States, meanwhile, has experienced a recovery unlike any other in the past 40 years, Tal continued. Coming out of a recession, rapid growth is generally followed by a levelling off, but there's been little growth in the current recovery, which has depended on low interest rates and unprecedented levels of government stimulus.

"The private sector is not spending." Banks are not lending, and consumers, whose buying accounts for 70 per cent of GDP, are not spending, he noted.

On the contrary, U.S. consumers are hunkering down and "deleveraging" – reducing the amount of debt they are carrying. The current savings rate stands at six per cent, one per cent higher than the long-term average. People are worried about their jobs and whether they can afford to borrow, Tal said.

Avery Shenfeld, chief economist at CIBC World Markets, said that "it's a recovery, but one that may be disappointing for the next year and a half."

Housing starts in the United States have paused and prices are cooling.

The U.S. recovery has seen government employment and infrastructure construction lead the way, but unemployment is high and people are unwilling to take on too much debt, even though interest rates are low. Governments, he said, "need to get deficits under control, but not so abruptly as to slow the recovery. We need a pause in interest rate hikes for a while."

Both Shenfeld and Tal forecast that the United States will retain at least some of the income, dividend and capital gain tax cuts implemented under President George Bush that are set to expire in January.

Assuming the Republicans take control of the Congress in the upcoming mid-term elections, Shenfeld expects "wheeling and dealing" on tax policy.

"We don't believe American legislators will pursue a suicidal policy by letting all taxes go up," he said.

Turning to Canada, Tal said we have weathered the downturn better than the United States, with consumer confidence north of the border stronger than in the south. As a result, Canadians are more likely to borrow at current low rates and that kind of spending adds to economic growth.

Nevertheless, Tal entered another note of caution: "The housing market has been overshooting," with prices above their fair market value (based on comparable rents, incomes and demographic considerations).

"The question is whether that leads to a crash."

Tal answered his own question by suggestion few mortgage loans in Canada were of the sub-prime variety that led to the collapse of the U.S. housing market. (He predicted prices there will continue to fall.)

With only 4.7 per cent of Canadian mortgages considered sub-prime compared to 33 per cent in the United States, and with interest rates likely remaining low for a year or two, he saw no danger of a housing collapse.

Still, he forecast a historically "slow" housing market with prices falling, "reflecting the fact the economy is slowing" and because many potential buyers leapt into the market earlier than they might have to avoid the HST.

The Bank of Canada will have to be cautious when hiking rates, he warned. The debt-to-income ratio has been rising for the last eight years and stands at 146 per cent.

"That means when interest rates go up, the surprise will be how little it will take to slow down the consumer. The Bank of Canada has to be careful not to raise rates now, and be careful in the future."

Minrav real estate looking to bring Wal-Mart to Israel

By RAZ SMOLSKY
& ADI DOVRAT-MESERITZ
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

JERUSALEM — Real estate company Minrav Holdings is conducting initial talks with Wal-Mart as part of an effort to bring the American retail giant to Israel.

Minrav plans to build stores that would meet Wal-Mart's needs and then lease or sell them outright to the company. It's not seeking a franchise.

Minrav, which is controlled by Abraham Kuznitsky, approached Wal-Mart several months ago about entering the Israeli market. The Israeli firm has been seeking out appropriate sites to build a branch of the discount department store and is considering both land it already owns and land owned by other parties.

Wal-Mart representatives have not yet visited Israel to evaluate the offer.

Branches of the American retail chain can reach as large as 20,000 square metres in size.

Minrav declined to comment, while Wal-Mart stated, "We haven't published any announcements, and we don't respond to rumours."

In 2010, Forbes Global 2000, which ranks the world's 2,000 largest companies, named Wal-Mart the world's biggest public corporation by revenue. Founded by Sam Walton in 1962, Wal-Mart is the largest private employer in the United States. It also operates in Mexico, the United Kingdom, Argentina, Brazil and Canada. Wal-Mart pulled out of Germany and South Korea when ventures there were unsuccessful.

Minrav Holdings is involved in initiating, engineering and building real estate, infrastructure and industrial projects both in Israel and abroad. In recent years, the Minrav Group has been responsible for some of Israel's largest projects, including the new terminal at Ben-Gurion International Airport, the Yad Vashem Holocaust Museum, student dormitories at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem and the cultural hall in Rishon Lezion.

450 Tel

Daylight savings? Try all-day savings!

JUST DIAL 10•18•450

Canada, USA & Israel

20 min. for 50¢ per call

Start using 450Tel today. Dial 10•18•450 before your long distance call.

North America:
Dial 10•18•450 + 1 + area code + number
International:
Dial 10•18•450 + 011 + country code + number

Calls to cellular phones in some international destinations or special country code terminations are billed at a higher rate. Rates effective January 1/09 and subject to change without notice. 450Tel™ rates are the same, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. All calls under the 20 minute program will be billed at 50c. Thereafter, all calls are billed in one minute increments; rates vary by country. Please dial toll-free 10-18-450-0 or 647-435-2477 to confirm that 450Tel™ long distance is available from your area

Actress hooked on theatre and clowning

By RITA POLIAKOV
Staff Reporter

Amy Lee still remembers the first words she ever said on stage.

"I was seven for my first play and that was Are You My Mother. I played the cat, and I only had one line, which was 'meow.'"

But that's all it took.

Lee, who will be starring in the Lorraine Kimsa Theatre for Young People's production of The Invisible Girl, has been hooked on theatre since she was around four years old.

"My brother was in acting… his class performed, I think it was something from Charlie Brown, and I decided that's what I wanted to do," she said.

Since her first performance, Lee, who is turning 27, has been in at least one play a year, every year. As a child, she never quite understood why she loved to be on stage.

"It was more of an instinctual thing. I don't know that I knew what it was I loved about it, but I knew I loved it," she said. "As I got older and went to theatre school, I analyzed more why I liked to do it with my adult brain. I love to tell stories, and I love for people to come to the theatre and laugh or cry or think in a way they've never thought before."

In Lee's Manitoba high school, it wasn't common for students to go into the arts.

"Not a lot of people, in my grade, at least, went into the arts. I took my sciences up until Grade 12 to keep my options open in case I decided I wanted to go to med school," Lee said.

But theatre eventually won out.

"I knew that theatre was what I loved to do and that I'd done it forever, but I thought, 'Can I really do this? Can I really make this my living? It's always been my passion, but can it be my job as well?'" she said.

"And then I decided that's what I wanted to do, that I wanted to make that happen."

This is what brought Lee to York University, where she pursued a bachelor's degree in theatre and psychology.

While in school, Lee and her friend Heather Marie Annis were approached by Byron Laviolette, a fellow student, to perform in a short skit about clowns in Playground, the university's student-run fringe festival. The play, a 10-minute sketch called Reflections about Morro and Jasp, two clowns, eventually turned into the creation of Up Your Nose And In Your Toes Productions in 2005, which produces various Morro and Jasp plays.

Amy Lee has the lead role in The Invisible Girl, at the Lorraine Kimsa Theatre for Young People from Oct. 17 to 23.

"We hired a man named Pete Jarvis to do workshops with us in the style of Pachinko clown, so we did that for Reflections. Then we just continued to study with Pete and continued to create shows."

The production company's shows have been featured in the Toronto Fringe Festival, including Morro and Jasp do puberty and Morro and Jasp go GREEN, which follow the adventures of two sister clowns played by Annis (Morro) and Lee, who plays Jasp.

"I was excited to try something new," Lee said about clowning. "I find my clown work really influences everything else I do now… a lot of [clowning] is being really present, really truthful and just acknowledging what's happening in the moment with the audience."

Apart from her clowning, Lee also continues to perform in plays like the Invisible Girl, which opens on Oct. 17.

The play follows 10-year-old Ali, played by Lee, who used to be part of a popular clique in her Grade 5 class. When she makes a social mistake, her friends start to ignore her, which forces the character to learn the importance of real friendship.

For Lee, who prepared for the role by reading teen magazines and listening to Justin Bieber music, it wasn't hard to connect to her character.

"The character I play, Ali, she's on a journey. It takes her the whole play to figure out what true friendship is and what respect is. She makes mistakes and she learns from those mistakes, so it's her story that she's sharing. It's really on a kid's level, but it's also on a human level," Lee said.

Invisible Girl will be running from Oct. 17 to 23. Tickets are $10 to $20. Call 416-862-2222 or visit lktyp.ca

SUBSCRIBE TO
The Canadian Jewish news

FLORIDA, ARIZONA, CALIFORNIA, CANADA
WE SEND YOUR CAR & CONTENTS (and return)
CALL 416-225-7754
www.torontodriveaway.com
TORONTO DRIVEAWAY AND TRUCK SERVICE
5803 Yonge St., #101
North York M2M 3V5
Since 1959

encore entertainment presents
TONY AWARD WINNER
SPELLING BEE
"Riotously funny and remarkably ingenious" -The New York Times
October 28- November 7, 2010
Toronto Centre for the Arts
5040 Yonge Street, Toronto
Adults: $32.50 evenings $30.00 matinees
Students/Seniors: $30.00 evenings $28.00matinees
GROUP DISCOUNTS FOR GROUPS OF 10+
Tickets: 416- 872-1111
Or in person at the Toronto Centre Box Office
Or online: www.encoreshows.com

CJN Snowbirds

1) Arrange for Canada Post to forward The CJN to your winter address with the rest of your regular mail.

2) Advise our Circulation Department to suspend delivery until you return to Canada with your expiry automatically extended. You can still access the eCJN while away.

3) Arrange for our Circulation Department to redirect The CJN to your winter address at a cost of $10.00 per month for U.S. and foreign addresses.

This charge – payable by cheque, Visa, Mastercard or American Express before departure covers the cost of additional postage incurred for out of country mailings.

Fax changes in your delivery to 905-946-1679 or call the Circulation Department at 1-866-849-0864 allowing two weeks notice.

TEATRON Toronto Jewish Theatre
Proudly premiere our 5th season of Jewish-themed plays
KOSHER LUTHERANS comedy by William Missouri Downs
November 10 - 21, 2010
HARD LOVE romantic drama by Mort Levine
January 5 - 16, 2011
A HAMBURGER IN A PITA comedy by Nina Shenker
March 2 - 13, 2011
FOR TICKETS AND INFORMATION
The Lorraine Kimsa Theatre for the Arts (formerly The Ford Centre)
5040 Yonge St. box office 11am—6 pm. phone 416-733-0545
or online www.teatrontheatre.com

EYE ON ARTS

By BILL GLADSTONE

GUERNICA LAUNCH INCLUDES WORKS BY POETS KAREN SHENFELD AND BAILA ELLENBOGEN

Guernica Editions is hosting an afternoon of readings, live music and mingling as the publisher launches six new books of poetry and literary essays. They include Footsteps on the Ceiling, by poet Baila Ellenbogen, and My Father's Hands Spoke in Yiddish, by poet Karen Shenfeld, who "flies home from far-flung lands to explore the re-imagined terrain of Bathurst Manor, the Toronto suburb in which she was raised." Other authors are Annika Hannan, M. Travis Lane, Robert G. May and Cristina Perissinotto. Bar Italia, 582 College St. Sunday, Oct. 17, 2 to 4 p.m.

* * *

Chai Tea & A Movie: Avi Nesher's popular film The Matchmaker focuses on a teenage boy's navigation of love and sexuality during a time of profound cultural change in Israel in the summer of 1968. The Toronto Jewish Film Festival is screening the subtitled Hebrew film as its first Chai Tea & A Movie feature of the season. $15. Cineplex Odeon Sheppard Centre Cinemas, Sunday, Oct. 17, tea 4 p.m., film 5 p.m. TJFF is also screening the Slovakian film Broken Promise at SilverCity Richmond Hill on Nov. 21. www.tjff.com

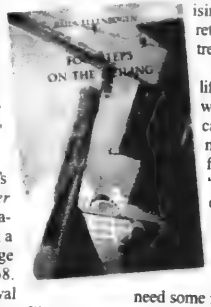
* * *

Internet Fiction Site: Jewishfiction.net launched its first issue of fictional delights on Sept. 29, with works by major Jewish writers opening on a page beside their various photographs. Contributors include Elie Wiesel, Chava Rosenfarb, Nava Semel, Steve Stern, Thane Rosenbaum and Nora Gold, the Toronto-based fiction writer and former professor who is editor of the web-based portal. The initiative, Gold writes, was "born of love for Jewish literature and a desire to bring readers and writers of Jewish fiction closer together." www.jewishfiction.net

* * *

Nikki Yanofsky

I Move Forward: Numerous Toronto dancers, choreographers, musicians and singers perform in I Move Forward, an evening inspired by Marc Kemelman, a Toronto-born dancer and choreographer forced to set aside a promising career in New York to return to Toronto for cancer treatment.



"Dance has always been a life source for me. Even now when I can't dance physically, I'm still creating in my head, and it makes me feel alive," Kimelman said. "I've learned through this experience that nobody is immune to life, so I brought my community together to support other artists, like me, who may need some inspiration, hope or help to move forward."

All proceeds from ticket sales, donations and sponsorship go to The Actors' Fund of Canada to benefit artists struggling with cancer. $70, $50, $25. St. Lawrence Centre, Jane Mallett Stage. Oct. 25, 8 p.m. 416-366-7723, www.imoveforward.ca

* * *

Names in the News: Acclaimed 16-year-old jazz singer Nikki Yanofsky of Montreal is the inaugural recipient of the Allan Slaight Award, a new $10,000 annual prize celebrating promising young Canadians. Yanofsky debuted at jazz festivals as a "preteen prodigy" and has been described as "a pint-sized incarnation of Ella Fitzgerald." She has since performed at major venues and jazz festivals in Toronto, New York and many other cities.

* * *

Arts in Brief

• Planet Music – World Music for the Armchair Traveller is a series of six lectures presented by Barry Livingston. Musicians and non-musicians welcome. Miles Nadal Jewish Community Centre, six Thursdays starting Oct. 14. 416-924-6211, ext. 0.

• Film critic Shlomo Schwartzberg discusses the cinema of Israel and shows film clips in a series of "Media Mondays," beginning with the lecture "Social Portraits of Israeli Society," Oct. 18, 7 to 9 p.m. Films discussed at this lecture include Sallah, Broken Wings and James' Journey to Jerusalem. $12. 416-924-6211, ext. 606.

• Volume II of Living Legacies: A Collection of Writing by Contemporary Canadian Jewish Women features pieces by Laya Crust, Ellen S. Jaffe, Carol Katz, Judy Librach, Anne Mandlsohn, Honey Novick, Lindi Rivers and many others. The book is being launched at Israel's Judaica, 870 Eglinton Ave. W. with editor Liz Pearl, and the authors will attend. Thursday, Oct. 21, 7 p.m. Kosher refreshments, free admission. 416-256-1010.

* * *

At the Galleries

• Photographer Neil Dankoff's majestic panoramic photographs of Jerusalem capture the viewer's sense of awe inspired by the landscape. Shel Zahav, an exhibition of Dankoff's work, is on view at Lonsdale Gallery, 410 Spadina Rd. until Nov. 7.

• An exhibition heralded by the Guardian as "the most important exhibition of [Henry] Moore's work for a generation" is coming to the Art Gallery of Ontario. The Shape of Anxiety: Henry Moore in the 1930s reveals the darker side to Moore's work and is a dramatic reconsideration of the revered artist. On view from Oct. 23 to Feb. 6, 2011 in the AGO's Henry Moore Sculpture Centre.

BRAND NEW!
Shalom Sesame returns with two all new releases
Welcome to Israel and Chanukah: The Missing Menorah are an educational and entertaining way to teach children about Israel and the story of Chanukah. From the creators of Sesame Street, the programs feature everyone's furry friend Grover and appearances from some special guests!
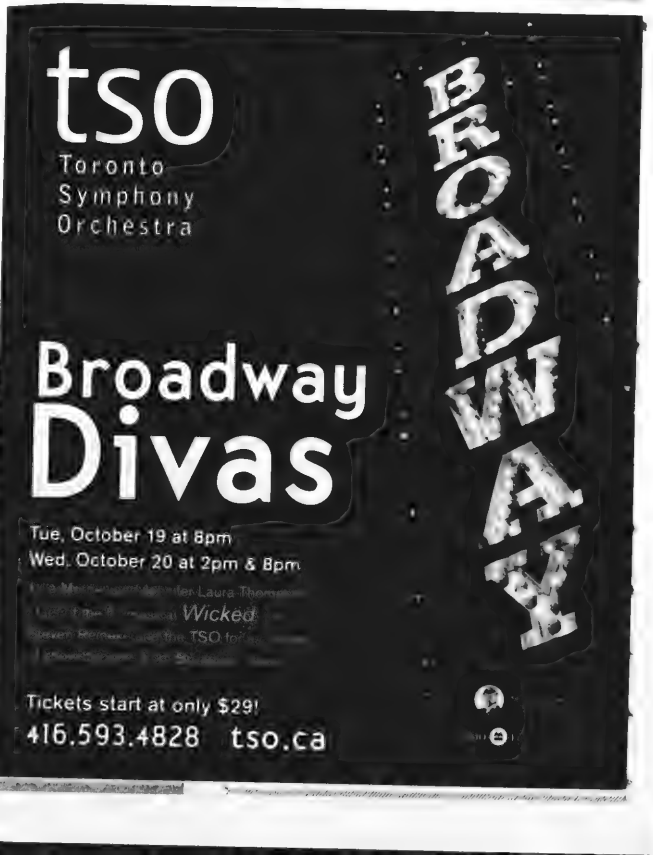
ISRAEL'S



Israeli bassist's album a blend of several styles

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Seasoned Israeli jazz bassist Avishai Cohen is coming to Toronto to promote his latest album, Aurora (2010 EMI/Blue Note).

A veteran of the New York jazz scene, where he lived for many years, Cohen's talent caught the eye and ear of legendary jazz pianist Chick Corea, who recruited the bassist in 1996 to be part of his sextet, Origin.

Aurora is Cohen's 11th solo album, and it's infused with a brilliant combination of Middle Eastern, jazz and classical musical styles.

According to his website, this CD, recorded in Tel Aviv, "draws its source in the earth of [Cohen's] home country, at the crossroads of many cultures. Arab-Andalusian and Hebraic, it tells the story of Bedouins of the desert and speaks of life, love, youth and freedom."

Cohen, 40, grew up with musical parents. His mother would sing Ladino songs as she worked, while his father and grandfather would chant prayers and songs on Shabbat and holidays.

The new album, released in April, showcases Cohen's singing voice for the first time. He said he decided to sing on this album to experiment.

"It's very good practice for any [instrumentalist] to learn to sing. It's a beautiful practice in humility, an ongoing craft," Cohen told the All About Jazz website in a recent article.

One of the more stirring songs on the album is Cohen's re-imagining of Chaim Nachman Bialik's popular poem and folk-song El Hatzipor.

Cohen makes the poem his own by giving it a plaintive jazz arrangement on the piano and singing it with feeling.

His treatment of the traditional Ladino folk song Morenika, the album's opening number, is also a treat.

After an extended instrumental introduction, Cohen launches headlong into song, showcasing his Ladino musical influences and giving new expression to the song.

Other notable tracks on the album include Leolam, a jaunty piece featuring terrific oud-playing by Cohen's bandmate, Amos Hoffman; Still, a haunting piece with Cohen singing in niggun-like fashion and playing bow on his double-bass; and Noches Noches/La Luz, the album's final, entrancing track.

Cohen is scheduled to perform at the Koffler Centre of the Arts' Isabel Bader Theatre, 93 Charles St. W, on Oct. 19.

For ticket information, call 1-888-222-6608.

Avishai Cohen

POWER SAVINGS EVENT
Save money. Save energy.
at the fall
POWER SAVINGS EVENT
Until October 31st
Hurry in to participating retailers today to get your coupons.
Look for energy-saving products like power bars, programmable thermostats and weatherstripping. For participating retailers visit everykilowattcounts.ca
ONTARIO POWER AUTHORITY

Vaughan Mayoralty
All Candidates Debate

Monday Oct. 18, 7:30 pm
Beth Avraham Yoseph Synagogue
613 Clark Avenue West
905-886-3810
(south side, one block East of Bathurst)

- Maurizio Bevilacqua
- Paul Donofrio
- Linda Jackson
- Tony Lombardi
- Tony Lorini
- David Natale
- Savino Quatela
- Mario G. Racco

Moderator: John Syrtash
B.A. (Hon.), LL.B.
Counsel, Garfin Zeidenberg LLP

Sponsored by Beth Avraham Yoseph of Toronto Congregation (Synagogue), CJPAC-Canadian Jewish Political Affairs Committee, and the League for Human Rights of B'Nai Brith Canada

Author's stories blend Jewish history and fiction

By RITA POLIAKOV
Staff Reporter

Miriam Walfish has learned to see the world through a child's eyes.

But after working as a school librarian and writing 10 children's books, seven of which have been published, it's kind of hard not to.

Walfish's stories, which are aimed for children and young adults, blend Jewish history and fiction into a blur of fiery battles, lost orphans, starlit journeys and steam-powered ships.

"I have an academic background," said Walfish, who has a MA in Jewish history from McGill University and a master's of library science from the University of Toronto .

"I felt I was responding to a need. There's not a lot out there for historical fiction that deals with Jewish history for kids."

Walfish first started writing while working as a school librarian.

"Kids really didn't seem to know much about Jewish history," she said.

So she decided to change that. And she started in Victorian England.

The first book she wrote, which wasn't the first that was published, followed Penina, a privileged Sephardi Jew living in England in 1842. In the book, called Penina's Plan, which is aimed at kids aged seven to 11, Penina runs into eastern European immigrants living very different lives than her.

"I wanted to give readers a sense of what Jewish life was like in London. I wanted them to see the flip side of [Penina's lifestyle]," said Walfish. "Penina meets this young eastern European immigrant and is completely shocked. She meets this kid who only speaks Yiddish."

Miriam Walfish

After writing her first book, Walfish decided to create a series, called Jewish Girls Around the World, which follows the adventures of Jewish girls in different time periods.

Tova Bloom Solves the Riddle, the fourth book in the series, is set during the American Revolution, a time period that has always interested Walfish.

"I really wanted to do the American Revolution. I never learned about it in school," she said.

But the author didn't think she would be writing about the Holocaust. Until one of her kids asked her about stars.

"I didn't intend to write a Holocaust book. That's one area that has been explored a lot, but it sort of evolved," she said.

"One of my kids came home from school and asked me if stars died."

Walfish asked around and found out that, while they did die, their image remained in the sky for thousands of years.

"It reminded me of what happened when a parent died, the images of the parent remains with the kid," she said.

"I started to think about the imagery of stars in Jewish history. I was thinking about how to write a book and get that message to kids. The historical thing that came to mind was the Holocaust."

The result of this was The Stars Will Guide You, a book set in Rome during World War II. The novel, which is aimed at young adults, follows Rica and Lelio Levi on their quest to find their parents in war-torn Italy and Germany.

Walfish, whose books were published by Judaica Press, puts a lot of effort into shaping her characters.

"A lot of it is taken from things I know, things from my own kids," she said of her four children, aged 10 to 20. "It's just imagination and remembering to look at the world as a kid."

Walfish is currently working on a third girl in her Jewish Girls series, and may get started on a series for boys.

"I think people in the business, they understand that there's a need here," she said.

"I always say the best feedback is when a parent says, 'My kid hates to read but [he or she] read one of your books and loved it.' That's really gratifying."

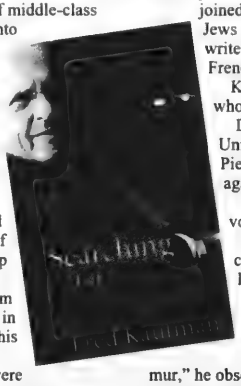
A life that's rich in achievement

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Fred Kaufman, a refugee from Nazi-occupied Austria, has had a distinguished career as a newspaper reporter, lawyer and judge.

Now, in his engaging memoirs, Searching for Justice (Key Porter), he recounts a life rigorous in purpose and rich in achievement.

Born in Vienna in 1924, he was the son of middle-class Jews whose very existence was called into question by Germany's annexation of Austria in 1938.



Sensing that things would never be the same again, they placed him in the Kindertransport program, which spirited away Jewish children from greater Germany.

Six weeks before the outbreak of World War II, Kaufman left Vienna, bound for a farm in Britain.

"I learned to milk cows, both with and without machines, and how to take care of cattle," he writes. "I even learned how to help a cow deliver a calf."

The Fells, his foster parents, treated him kindly. But Kaufman soon found himself in Sherbrooke, Que., the ward of a rabbi and his wife.

To Kaufman's jubilation, his parents were able to leave Austria via France, Spain and Portugal.

In 1946, he graduated from Bishop's University, majoring in math and physics. Having co-founded and edited the campus newspaper, he landed a job on the Sherbrooke Daily Record, where he had worked the previous summer.

After three months, the Montreal Star came calling, having been impressed by a freelance article Kaufman had submitted.

As a cub reporter, he had to deal with four daily deadlines. In his eight years on staff, he covered a British royal visit, annual meetings, funerals, a dog and horse show, protest rallies and, occasionally, the legal beat.

"I loved being a reporter," he recalls. "It was wonderful training for my later careers."

While studying law, Kaufman worked summers and weekends on the Montreal Star and as a stringer for Time and Life magazines.

Finishing the bar admission exam in 1955, Kaufman joined a Jewish law firm. "The truth was that Jews were not wanted by the big firms," he writes in a reference to snotty English and French law offices.

Kaufman, in his first trial, defended a man who had been accused of dangerous driving.

During his early years as a lawyer, he met a Université de Montréal law professor named Pierre Elliott Trudeau whom he would meet again under very different circumstances.

In 18 years of practice, Kaufman was involved in 49 homicide cases.

Donna, his wife, as well as their two children, Leslie and David, also became lawyers.

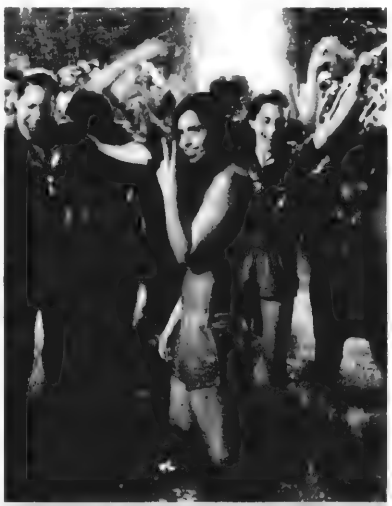
Trudeau, as Canada's prime minister, appointed Kaufman to the Court of Appeal. "I replaced a French-Canadian judge, and there was no discernible murmur," he observes.

Kaufman held the position for 18 years, hearing close to 3,000 appeals and 5,000 motions and writing more than 1,000 judgments.

Upon the invitation of a former law partner, he returned to private practice.

He ends Searching for Justice on a high note, saying he has been blessed by a "wonderful" family.

Kaufman, who easily could have been a victim of the Holocaust, has indeed come a long way.



TORONTO JEWISH FILM FESTIVAL PRESENTS

THE MATCHMAKER

Direct from The Toronto International Film Festival comes celebrated Israeli filmmaker Avi Nesher's crowd-pleasing hit, The Matchmaker. Set in Israel during the summer of 1968, the film chronicles a teenaged boy's navigation of love and sexuality during a time of profound cultural change. Young Arik, a lover of detective novels, takes a job working for Yankele Bride, a mysterious Holocaust survivor and matchmaker. Under the guidance of his employer, Arik eventually gets to play the role of detective himself in this coming-of-age tale filled with unforgettable characters.

Sunday, October 17
4:00 pm – Chai Tea
5:00 pm – Film

Cineplex Odeon
Sheppard Centre Cinemas
Yonge and Sheppard

$15 door or advance
Subject to availability

Tickets & Information
416 599 8433
tjff.com

CINEPLEX
TORONTO ARTS COUNCIL
Arts. Culture. Heritage.
UJA FEDERATION
ONTARIO ARTS COUNCIL
CONSEIL DES ARTS DE L'ONTARIO

TJFF.COM

Author explores the cougar lifestyle in new book

By RITA POLIAKOV
Staff Reporter

Myna Wallin isn't who I thought she would be.

After reading her new novel, Confessions of a Reluctant Cougar, I expected to meet the woman staring at me from the back cover. The one in a low-cut shirt, exaggerated make-up, a tight leopard print skirt and, to complete the look, cleavage. Lots of cleavage.

But that's not really who she is.

Wallin, an editor and poet, is the author of a book that covers everything from threesomes and orgasms to fetishes and sex toys. But more importantly, it's a story of a Jewish cougar – a woman who dates younger men.

So when I was asked to interview her, I expected the main character, Olivia, to be based, at least loosely, on the author. And she sort of is.

"I'm a cougar, as I say in my bio," says Wallin, who sipped her coffee in regular clothing. No cleavage. No leopard prints.

"I have dated many younger men in my life. [The book] is a composition of men I'd known. I took the neurosis of one guy and another guy and made it into the most neurotic [characters]."

This is how she created her main male character, William, a hypochondriac who refuses to have sex more than a few times a week.

The book, it seems, isn't quite autobiographical. But it isn't completely fictional, either.

If anything, Olivia is Wallin's alter ego, an extreme version of who she is.

Myna Wallin is the author of Confessions of a Reluctant Cougar.

"When I'm reading from this book, I put on my Olivia face. It's kind of like acting. This particular character is a persona I wear for this book," she said. "When I read from it, I dress up like her. There's this sort of outgoing and provocative nature I take on. But as my best friend says, you're not that person."

The only thing that really reminds me of Olivia is Wallin's refusal to reveal her age.

"I'm over 45," she said reluctantly. In the book, Olivia would never give away her age.

"She doesn't want to grow up," Wallin said.

Like her character, Wallin started off as an actor, performing in local plays and improv shows. Eventually, she ended up writing a play of her own, which ran in Toronto's Fringe Festival in the 1990s. She also enrolled in the University of Toronto's master's of English program. She got her first book, a collection of poetry called A Thousand Profane Pieces, published by Tightrope Books in 2006.

Apart from poetry, Wallin started writing short stories, which eventually turned into Confessions of a Reluctant Cougar.

"There are writers who do it all. I know a lot of writers who are just writing poetry. There is a bit of a divide," said Wallin about her switch to prose. "I guess I wanted to give myself a challenge."

And Confessions of a Reluctant Cougar, which was published by Tightrope Books this summer, was certainly a challenge, especially when deciding where to draw the line between sexy and raunchy.

"If there's too much sex, it goes over the line to pornographic. It's just something you sense. You don't want to be too coy, especially, with a book like this," she said.

And she isn't. In the book Olivia has her fair share of crazy nights, which include a three-way in a back alley during an arts show and sex with a foot fetishist.

But the book is more than just a sexual timeline. It's also got a touch of feminism to it.

"It's not a common thing to have a character over 50 who's single," she said.

"Olivia is just free. She's proud of her sexuality. Sometimes I'm a bit graphic, but sometimes I have to go there."

Wallin's book also explores the role of religion in dating. Olivia, who's Jewish, has a history of dating Christian boys, something Wallin equates to a Jew eating bacon. If you're told you can't have something, you want it more.

"[Olivia] defines herself by what she isn't. She knows she's not Christian, and yet she tries to be liberal-minded. I think she's secular. It's very much like me," Wallin said.

"I identify as a Jew. It's my upbringing, my culture. It's in every fibre of my genes, and yet it's not religious. It's not observant."

For Wallin, the book's title has significance. Olivia, it seems, isn't just a cougar, she's a reluctant one.

"For me, the reluctance is in the tension between what she acts out and what she thinks she might want," Wallin said.

"In these serial cougar relationships, there's a high probability it's not going to work out. She wants to have fun, to feel young, to feel free and to do what men do."

But there's a flip side to the character.

"In the back of her mind, she knows she wants to settle down."

For more information, visit www.mynawallin.com.

On the Park
Events & Conference Centre
♦ Weddings
♦ Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
♦ Corporate Meetings & Socials
♦ Brunches
♦ 30,000 Square Feet of Versatile Event Space
♦ Six Beautifully Themed Rooms
♦ Kosher Catering Available
416-510-2002
www.eventsonthepark.ca
Toll Free 1-877-727-9723
1095 Leslie Street (at Eglinton), Toronto

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

Forest Hill

REAL ESTATE INC. - BROKERAGE

416-488-2875 Forest Hill Village | 416-785-1500 Central | 416-226-1987 Bayview

CENTRAL PROPERTIES

SOUGHT AFTER BRIDLE PATH AREA! 8+1BR 5BTH HOME!
Fab I/G Pool W/Lavish Landsc[SOLD]m rm w/Stone Wall & Gas FP, w/o to Pool, Brkfst Area w/ w/o to deck. Renee Seligman* 416-226-1987

PRIME AVENUE & LAWRENCE – 531 BEDFORD PARK AVE
Exquisite Custom Built Home – Done to Perfection. South Facing. Beautiful Landscaped Garden Oasis. J. Yaffe* 416-488-2875

EXQUISITE THROUGH-OUT! BATHURST + FAIRLAWN
$1,448,000 Approx 6 ½ yrs old. This Fabulous 4+1 Bdrm House is really exceptional. Dble Grge. Caroline Bokar 416-785-1500

BREATHTAKING 10 ROOM BUNG ON CARMICHAEL AVE!
Brand New Fam Size Kit with Granite. New Floors. Passover Kit. 3 Baths. Complete Sep Ent to Basement. Rose Simon* 416-226-1987

18 SUNBEAM AVENUE! BATHURST N/WILSON!
1st Ad! Incredible Opport[SOLD]65x170' Lot W/Much New Dev't In Area! This Won't Last! $55[SOLD]000! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

BAYVIEW PROPERTIES

201 WILLOWDALE AVENUE! JUST N/SHEPPARD!
$699,000! Impeccable 1.5St 3+1Br 3Bth W/Legal Nanny Ste! Fab 44x90.49' W/Much New Dev't In Area! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

NORTH PROPERTIES

NEW LISTING! RIDGEGATE DEVELOPMENT! WOW!
Beautful reno + upgraded 2 storey, 4 bd, 4 bth, 2010 kit w/granite cntrs, fin bsmt, dble grge, 52 x 115 ft lot. O. Levy* & C. Sniderman* 416-488-2875

EAST PROPERTIES

258 WESTVIEW BLVD! NOW $635,000!
St Clair/O'Connor! Topham Park Area! Gorg'us 4+1Br 4Bth W/Nanny Ste! Fab 35x120'! Move Right In! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

CONDOMINIUM PROPERTIES

1ST AD! 23 REAN DRIVE! BAYVIEW/SHEPPARD!
$585,000! Just Completed By Daniels! Spectacular 2Br 2Bth! Huge Balcony+Parking+Locker! Fab Complex! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

330 DAVENPORT ROAD! JUST WEST OF AVENUE ROAD!
$479,900! Designers Walk[SOLD]Style 2Br 2Bth W/Priv Elevator Access! 2Balconies+Parking+Locker! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

RENTAL PROPERTIES

BATHURST/LAWRENCE! 3+1BR 1BTH RENTAL!
$1,800/Month! Great Location-Good Rental. Appliances Included. Easy to Show. Possible 2 Year Lease. Brenda Westbrook* 416-226-1987

LEGAL OFFICE WANTS TO SUB-LET ONE OFFICE
Including Phones, Reception, Board Room & Equipment. Modern Bldg in Forest Hill Village K. Silverberg* 416-488-2875

COMMERCIAL PROPERTIES

TWO STOREY BLDG AT 1008 EGLINTON AVE
Main Flr Leased to 'Subway' at $36,000 PA Plus TMI, 2nd Flr has 2x2 Bdrm Apt – Vacant. Can be Office. K. Silverberg* 416-488-2875

1182 CASTLEFIELD AVENUE! JUST W/DUFFERIN!
$489,000! Rare Find! Designer District! Det Bldg On 35x110' W/Fab Exposure+Access! Fully Leased! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

Broker * Sales Representative
www.foresthill.com

Stunning Home on 66' of Premier Barrie Waterfront!

Location, Location, Location! Gorgeous 4 + 1 bedroom, 3 full bathroom Cape Cod charmer w/over 5,300 finished sq ft AND 66' of Shoreline Ownership including a dry boathouse w/sleeping loft! Too many extras to mention including a luxurious Master Ensuite, skylight windows, cathedral ceiling in the Great Room & STUNNING MILLION DOLLAR VIEWS of KEMPENFELT BAY! This home MUST BE SEEN to truly be appreciated! For more information & pictures please visit www.jamiedann.com Offered at $999,900.

The Jamie Dann Team
Century 21, B.J. Roth Realty Ltd., Brokerage
1-877-252-5242 dir / 705-721-9111 off

REAL ESTATE Section

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

"WE OPEN DOORS FOR YOU"

DAVID EICHORN

REALTY LIMITED BROKERAGE

416-787-1712

www.eichornrealty.com • david@eichornrealty.com

GREAT TIME TO LIST!

Call today for a free evaluation of your property.

FEATURE HOME OF THE WEEK

BATHURST / SHELBORNE
Exquisite brand new custom home, 3600+ sq ft. Attention to detail thruout. 5+1 bdrms, 6 baths, hrdwd flrs on 2 levels, sep entry to in-law suite. Fab design, ideal for entertaining & family use. A bright, spacious gem priced to sell at $1,399,000! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

STRATHALLAN WOOD — NEW LISTING
Spacious custom built 4+1 bdrm family home in prestigious Lytton Park enclave. 4 baths, hrdwd flrs, combined lr/dr, gourmet kitchen with w/o to deck. Superior quality finishes thruout, ideal for entertaining! $1,149,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

* * *

BATHURST / LAWRENCE
3 + 1 bdrm bungalow on generous 47 x 120 ft lot in desirable location surrounded by million $ homes. Live in now, build later — an ideal spot for your dream home. PRICED FOR IMMEDIATE SALE AT $549,000 — ACT NOW! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

SOLD IN ONE WEEK

BATHURST MANOR
Spacious side-split in desirable location. Cathedral ceilings at entry, combined lr & dr, ideal for entertaining. Family size eat-in kit, generous fam rm w/ w/o to patio, huge bsmt rec rm with wet bar. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

2 COVINGTON CONDO
Highly sought after corner unit! Bright & spacious 2 bdrm, 2 baths, approx. 1150 sf, se exposure, upgraded finishes throughout. 2 parking spots, luxurious lobby, fantastic amenities. Close to Lawrence Plaza, TTC. $399,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

2 NEPTUNE CONDO — THE IDEAL HOME FOR SENIORS!
Eligible buyer must be 65+. Rare, bright & spacious 2 bdrm + den, 2 full baths, large lr/dr combo. Mint corner unit w/ sw exposure. 24-hr security, amenities incl rooftop garden, library, exercise room, party room. $339,000. Call Richard Cash, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

*BROKER OF RECORD

ESSIE SHER

Bathurst/Centre $1,539,000
Stunning home on desirable street, custom stucco & stone façade, approx 4500 sq.ft. All the Bells & Whistles! Serene back yard, combo living/dining rm, 5 bdrms w/4 baths. Luxury at its best. A home to be proud of!

Thornhill Woods $759,000
Newer home on a quiet court, over 3000 sq ft, tastefully finished, 4 bdrms. Value & shows well.

Bathurst /Lawrence $679,000
3 bdrm raised bung. on a lrge treed lot. Live in now w/potential to build later. Perfect opportunity!!

Call Essie 416-464-5261
Re/Max Realtron Rity. Inc.
416-782-8882

EXCEPTIONAL ALEXANDRA WOOD HOME
4 bedrooms, 4 baths. Executive home on a beautifully landscaped 55' X 134' lot with inground pool in prime Alexandra wood area. Offered at $2,095.00.

Contact Wilf Mandel, Sales Rep.,
416.494.5955 Cell: 416.846.3037
Century 21 Leading Edge Realty Inc., brokerage

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

SANTEL REALTY INC. (BROKERAGE) 416-441-2003

SKYMARK DON MILLS & FINCH
*Skymark 55 – Zenith pent. - approx. 1400 sq. ft. 2 bdrm. + sol, 2 baths., skylight, enclosed bsmt. locker, 2 pkg. + extras. $349,000.
SANTEL LEUNG, E.R.I., BROKER OF RECORD

15 HOUSES FOR RENT

Wilson/Bathurst, 2/3 bdrm., newly reno'd., hi effic. gas furnace, brand new appliances, laundry, lrg. property. Avail immediately. $1800 + utils/mo. 647-280-1475.

Governor's Hill
2250sq ft + Terraces, west facing. Rare oppor. to buy in this sought after bldg. Carefree living w/all amenities & walk to subway. 2 bdr 3 bths, den; asking $1.25M
Contact A.Caplan or S.Bianco
Harvey Kalles R/E Ltd 416-441-2888

BATHURST/WILSON
$219,900
Huge 3 Bdrm, 2 bath Condo, 2 Balc, E/I Kit, Upg Laminate Floor, Lots of Storage, Pkg+ Locker. Priced to Sell.
Call: Jason Walker
Royal LePage Signature Realty
416-443-0300

35 CONDOMINIUMS FOR RENT

Bathurst/Lawrence. 2 bed., 2 bth., 10th flr. apt. in beaut. bldg. Avail. Nov. 1st. Contact: 416-451-4124.

60 SHARED ACCOM. AVAILABLE

Sheppard/Leslie. Lrg., well furn'd. TH to share, close to subway, cable, prkng. Avail. immed. 416-756-9965 after 7:00 pm.

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

BATHURST-SHEPPARD
ELEGANT TWIN BLDS.
Very lrg. 1, 2, 3 Bedrooms, 2 & 3 Bdrms. w/2 balconies and 2 baths.
Ample closets plus cedar.
Roof laundry, pool, ravine setting,
5 Apts. per flr.
canyon@greenwinpm.com
416-631-8377 / 416-631-0388

Bath./Egl., 4 bdr., 3 bths., totally renov., huge balc., spec. view, pkg., avail. now. Call 416-721-3599.

123 TIME SHARE FOR RENT

Cabo at New Years. Dec 27 - Jan 3. 5 Star Timeshare. Pueblo Bonito Sunset Beach. Sleeps 8 - 2 Br/2 Ba. $2,500.00 US. 248-788-5373.

To place a classified ad please call 416-391-1836

SUBSCRIBE TO THE CANADIAN JEWISH NEWS

124 ARIZONA PROPERTIES

SCOTTSDALE
2 bedroom 2 bath condominium in gated prestigious community Picture Perfect! $249,900.
Neil Schneider
Prudential Arizona Properties
602-571-4586, NeilAZ@cox.net
www.OpeningAZDoors.com

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

NOW IS THE BEST TIME TO BUY IN FLORIDA IN OVER 10 YEARS

- Home Prices are at 1999 levels. Our properties start at $26,000.
- FORECLOSURES: We have one of the largest inventories of foreclosures in South Florida. Bank Owned Properties are some of the best deals around.
- SHORT SALES are even better. (Ask us why and how to proceed??)
- Seasonal Rentals for either 2, 3, 4 or 5 months.
- We make Buying or Renting EASY.
- Palm Beach and Broward Counties.

PRG PREMIER RESIDENTIAL GROUP LLC
A Real Estate Brokerage Company

Larry Berger
954-567-8910
larrysellsflorida@gmail.com
www.premierrg.net

SO. FLORIDA CONDOS – PRICES REDUCED 30-50%

Aqualina-Beach Club-Coronado-Hamptons-Hemispheres- Hidden Bay-Jade-LaMer LaPerla-Mystic Pt-Oceana-Ocean-Oceanview-Ocean Palms-Olympus-Parker-Pinnacle Quadomain-Renaisannce-Residences-Turnberry-Summit-Trump-Wave…and others.

Personalized service. Canadian references provided.
Jerry Savlov, Licensed Realtor Optimar Int'l Realty (Sunny Isles, FL)
Direct (954)540-5232
e-mail: jas2468@gmail.com www.jerrysavlov.com

DELRAY/BOCA Addison Reserve
Live in the Perfect Climate..
In an Award Winning Country Club w/ Magnificent Homes from $400's to $4 mil.
CALL: Prudential Florida's On-Site Realtors Cherie & Larry Gross 561-702-7828 Or Visit Us @ HomesBuytheGross.com

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Longboat Key, West Coast Fla. Veranda Bch. Club, beautiful 2 bed., 2 bth. condo on bch. from Dec. 4 - Dec. 18 (1 or 2 weeks). Call 905-731-0880.

Lakeworth/Covered Bridge. 55+, nicely furn'd., 2 bed., 2 bth., garden apt. condo enclosed screened porch facing lake, all ammens. incl. Clubhouse, pool, tennis, close to shopping, restaurants & movies. Avail. annual or seasonal. 905-597-9449, 352-861-4833.

Cntry. Vig. Boca Raton. Lge. 1 br. Kosher kit. Lakeview, short walk to shul. Winter season or longer e-mail: princejama@yahoo.com

Hollywood, totally renov & newly furn., 2 br., 2 bth., directly across from bch., nr. golf & casinos, lux. bldg., valet, secur., indr. pkg., outdoor pool, gym. $2,750 US/mo.++ 905-731-0609, email: dhcooper@yahoo.com

Sunny Isles Beach - Sants Pointe condo. 2 br. 2 bth., from Jan. 6. Alex 847-833-8614.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

N. Miami Beach, 1 bed., 1.5 bth., parking, overlooking ocean, CLEAN. 905-886-0347 Lv. msg.

Century Vill., Deerfield Bch. condo, 1/1.5, nr. clubhouse. 954-429-8390 or email: dak7752@hotmail.com

Wynmoor, Coconut Crk. 2 bd./2 ba., parq. flr., encl. patio, sunset water vw., Golf, tennis, pools, fitness club. US $1,800/mo., min. 3 mo. 617-959-4600 or sswartz@aol.com

Canadian Snowbirds - Scottsdale. Location! Location! Beautifully renovated 2 bedroom, 2 baths. condo in gated complex. 5 pools, 4 hot tubs and fully equipped clubhouse. Walk to golf and the mall: Macy's, Chompy's etc. Call Michael 204-771-9376.

Pembroke Pines, Hollybrook - 2 br. 2 bth., ground flr. beautiful fully renowned, furn. across from pool, golf & waterview, free golf. Jan. - April Helen 905-731-8816.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Hallandale, Three Island, renov., lovely furnishings, 1 bdr. w/ sunroom, deck o/looks canal, tennis, pool, close to beach, 3 mo. min. Call 416-630-2177 www.hallandale.webs.com

The Fountains of Lk. Worth, 2 bdr. twnhouse in gated country club commun., liv. rm./din. rm., lrge. scrnd. prch., nicely furn., golf, fitness ctr. Tennis avail. 3 mo. min. $1800. Call Jacqui, 201-436-6161.

Golf Course view, The Fountains, Lk. Worth, 3 bdr., 2.5 bth. villa in gated country club commun., entr. hall, lrge. liv. rm./din. rm., kit., jacuzzi, scrnd. porch, grand piano, cvac., golf, fitness, tennis avail. 3 mo. min. $2200/mo. Julie, 508-655-5056.

Hallandale Beach, Hemispheres, desireable Ocean South Twr., 3 bdr., 2 1/2 bth., appr. 1900 sq.ft, just gutted & beautifully renov. & furn., priv. 3rd bdr. converts to den & combines with liv./din. rm. prov. huge entertainment area. Incl. stone flrs. thruout, granite countertops in kit. & bths., pot lights, flat screen TV's, stainless steel upgraded appls., fully equip. kit., linens, etc., loc. on the Ocean, huge pool deck has direct w/o to bch., kiddie pool, poolside restaurant, & direct entry to fully equip. health club, shuffle board, beauty salon, conv. store, marina, tennis courts, Wi-fi, & much more. Avail. mid-Jan. to mid-April, seas rental. Contact: 905-881-5525 or sberaznik@rogers.com

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Sunny W. Palm Beach - Beautiful 2 br. convertible 2 full bths. New Kit. New furnishings. Views. Balc. Prkg., pool. No shabbos elevator. 3 mos. min. Call 301-907-0842.

COUNTRYSIDE GOLF & COUNTRY CLUB, beautiful 2 bdr., 2 bth., fully equip. kit., lndry., 3 TV's, grnd. flr., lanai overlooking lake, pool & tennis crts., gated golf community & club house with fully equip. workout rm., lrge. pool & tennis crts. & restaurant. Walking to Publix Mall. $2500/US, one mo. min. Avail Jan. 15 (negot.) to end of March. Andrea, 905-528-0874 or: astringer@cogeco.ca

Longboat Key, Beaut., 2 bed., 2 bth., Beach Place. Newly, fully reno'd. & furn'd., sunset views, covered prkng., avail. January & April 2011. email: efeis@aol.com or call Elliott at 416-745-2711.

Delray - KP, 2/2, 55+, bright, golf view, breezy, all new, 3 mo. min., $1590/mo. 561-272-1859.

Sunny Isles, Arlen House East. One bedroom, 1 1/2 bathrooms. Furnished. Facing ocean. Immediate. Minimum 3 months. 514-747-9022; 514-994-9022.

Cent. Village, Deerfield, 2 bdr., 2 bth., 2nd flr., $1500/mo. US, min. 3 mos. Avail. immed. 416-346-5445.

Lauderhill. Lux. condo fully equipped 2 bed., 2 bth. on golf-course. $2200 USD/mo. 3 mos. min. Must be 55+. Emile Malka 450-689-7391, 450-680-1275.

North Miami, Golden Strand Resort (bet. Trump Tower & Acqualina), on beach, 1 bed. suite. Two weeks from January 1 - 15. $1800 CAD. Call 905-889-5111.

Sunrise Lakes #3. 2 bed., 2 bth., reno'd. condo on golf course. Min. 2 mos. 647-267-3294.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Deerfield Bch., Cent. Vill. 4 winter month, garden apt. 2 br. 1.5 bth. 718-614-4492/315-370-8739.

Hollybrook, 2 bdr., 1.5 bth., sleeps 4, lake view, FREE golf, 3 mo. min. Call Leo, 416-399-5365.

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

Delray Beach, Gleneagles CC, 2 br., 2 bath. condos start at $94,000 with or without golf/tennis member. Season rentals start at $3,200. CC lifestyle; golf, social, tennis & more.
Call Doody Caplan at 561-702-3744
Realty Associates Luxury Partners

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

THIS IS A GREAT TIME TO BUY IN FLORIDA!
Make your dreams come true and take advantage of Bank Foreclosure Condos and Houses at 50-75% below market value!
We specialize in Miami, Miami Beach, Hollywood, Hallandale, Aventura, Ft. Lauderdale, Boca Raton and Delray.

180 OUT-OF-TOWN PROPERTIES

"WATERFRONT Paradise" one hour from Toronto, located in Innisfil on Lake Simcoe. Fabulous sandy beach with a modern 4,400 s.f. open plan bungalow that offers a multitude of walkouts to expansive decking, five bedrooms, four baths, three fireplaces, underground parking. Price $1,799,000.
Virtual tour online, visit: www.simcoewaterfronthomes.com
OR Contact Warren Landry, Broker, Sutton Group Incentive Realty Inc., Brokerage Toll Free: 1-866-871-1151 • Cell: 705- 730-8971
241 Minet's Point Road, Barrie
Email: warren@simcoewaterfronthomes.com

240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

CAMP ARROWHEAD est. 1936 - Lake Simcoe

Camp Director – Full Time Position

Camp Arrowhead is an 8-week summer program for children ages 3-14. Located on Lake Simcoe in Belle Ewart, we are a Jewish community based day camp. Our goal is to provide exciting camp activities and a waterfront program in a day camp setting.

Applicant must have previous camp experience as a Unit head or Director and should have a background in the field of education.

Please forward your resume and a cover letter to: camp_arrowhead@hotmail.com

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR FOR CALGARY JCC

Seeking visionary and organized professional with strong management skills. Must exhibit strong commitment to Jewish continuity and extensive experience in non-profit admin., fundraising, and community leadership. Excellent skills in personal relationships and communications.

Send cover letter, résumé and salary requirements to:
execapp@jcca.org by OCTOBER 31st, 2010.

143 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE

Lady seeks another lady to share my condo in C.V., Deerfield Bch.- Dec 9- Mar. 20. 416-636-0781.

240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

Two positions avail. in the Jewish community. 1) expert caterer, and 2) expert party sandwich preparer. Please send resume to: joshsnir@hotmail.com

245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED

Accountant/Bookkeeper seeks P/T position. Experienced. Computer literate. Call Gerry at 416-733-8013.

Hardworking strong male teen avail. to do odd jobs & construction clean up. Please call 416-385-2266.

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Nanny, Housekeeper, elderly care, NO fee to employer. Filipino from Israel, Singapore & Hong Kong & from the islands. Live in/out, screening guar. Call 416-733-3915.

Caregivers/Nannies/Housekeepers Filipino, Local & Europe. Live in/ live out. 416-932-3042.

Del's Cleaning Service, we can clean houses, renovation clean up, and after hours cleaning. Call 416-743-4174/416-710-0408.

DAUGHTER-ON-THE-GO! GOT ERRANDS, NEED HELP? CALL KIM @ 416-781-1736.

Reliable w/refs. cleaning lady. 5 yrs. experience. For apts., homes, offices 647-567-0591.

Male support care worker, live-in or live/out, exper., refs. available. 416-887-5872, 647-340-6112.

Exper. caregiver w/refs., avail. to care for elderly Mon. to Fri. 17 yrs. exper. 905-789-9723.

257 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE

Exper HCA/sitter seeks job, exp. in Jewish community. Refs avail. Call Fareeda at 416-356-1350.

275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED

New Year, new beginnings. I am 60 years old, just retired, tall, attractive, full of life, looking for that someone special between 60-65 who has a zest for life, likes to travel, laugh and doesn't take life too seriously. Reply to CJN Box # 5304.

Good natured gentleman, slim, in good health & fin. secure, looking to meet a warm, caring woman in her 70's. CJN Box # 5305.

305 ARTICLES WANTED

Seeking Holocaust/Shoah, Founding of Israel, Ghetto, Camp, Pogrom documents, letters & papers for historical preservation. Ben. Discretion assured. 416-890-9644.

Ben Buys Book Collections, manuscripts, diaries, letters, documents & militaria. 416-890-9644.

Replying to an ad with a CJN Box Number?

Address your mail to:

The Canadian Jewish News
1500 Don Mills Rd.
Suite 205
North York, Ont.
M3B 3K4

Don't forget to put the Box Number on your envelope.

CJN Box #'s are valid for 30 days.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

to place an ad call
Monday to Thursday
(CLASSIFIED DEPT. CLOSED FRIDAYS)
416-391-1836 (ask for classified advertising)

Classified Deadlines:

Wednesday at 4:00 p.m.
8 days prior to issue date.*

*PLEASE NOTE: On a week before a statutory or Jewish holiday, the deadline will be earlier. Please call for exact times.

All Classified ads require prepayment before deadline.
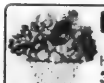
The CJN accepts Visa, Mastercard, American Express, Cheque or Cash.

The CJN cannot be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Please bring any problems to the attention of your sales representative before your ad is repeated.

SERVICE DIRECTORY Section

370 CATERING



Dairy Treats Restaurant & Catering
Brit Milah • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
Home or Office • Shiva Meals • Corporate Accounts
3522 Bathurst St. (S. of Wilson) 416-787-0309
www.dairytreats.com

REGINA'S CATERING & FINE FOODS
A Family Tradition for 48 Years
• BRIT MILAH & NAMINGS
• SIMCHAS
• SHIVA MEALS
• SHABBOS DINNERS
844 Sheppard Ave. W.
(at Wilmington)
www.reginasfinefoods.com
416-636-1044

385 COMPUTERS

Need help with your computer? Or Web Design? We will fix any problems & make it like new! Reas. rates. Leo 416-837-2793.

395 ELECTRICAL

All kinds of electrical jobs. For great service call Serge, 416-834-4312. Licensed.

400 ENTERTAINMENT

Steel Drum Music for simchas. 1 man steel drum band. Call 647- 330-1514, www.panpassion.com.

405 FURNITURE

Carrocel Renovations Est. 1951
CUSTOM MADE FURNITURE
Specializing in Dining Tables
FULL REFINISHING & RE-UPHOLSTERY SERVICES
416-999-2525
www.carrocel.com

405 FURNITURE

Marcantonio Furniture Repair Specializing in touchups. Restoration & general repairs done on premises. 416-654-0518.

Earl Bales Sr. Woodworkers. Caning, chair repairs, regluing, custom, reas. 416-630-6487.

412 HEATING AND AIR CONDITIONING

Cooling, Heating Service, Repair. Fully licensed. FREE estimate. Res/Com. 647-299-7060.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENT

Hardwood Floor sanding, staining, refinishing, new floors, installation & repairs. Jules - 416-726-5338.

General Contractors for all your renovations. Very experienced. Great service. Reasonable rates. SB Construction. 416-834-4312.

HANDYMENCH. SHOWER REPAIRS. Bath. & Kit. renov., cabinet reface, paint/tile. water damage. Call 416-826-0574.

A-1 Handyman. Expert kitchen repairs and refacing. New kitchens and countertops, plumbing and electrical. For free estimate call 647-887-5075.

Best Prices!!! Best Quality!!! Best Service!!! Home Improvements & painting. Licensed & Bonded Call Shlomo 416-804-1706.

Odd jobs, small repairs, painting, etc. Please call Fred at 416-420-8731.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS

HANDYMAN
Plumbing/electrical/carpentry, locks. Ephram. 416-630-3047.

433 LESSONS

BE "COOL," BE A COMPUTER WIZ Learn to use the computer for beginners. All skills made easy CAll JANICE 416-806-0278.

445 MOVING

GEMINI MOVERS & STORAGE LTD.
Since 1972
• Homes • Apartments • Offices
• Professional Piano Movers
Tel: 416-782-8736
Call until 11 p.m.
Fax: 416-240-9133
Top quality service is mandatory!

Before signing any contract, make sure your contractor is appropriately licensed with the Metropolitan Licensing Commission 416-392-3000

445 MOVING

G&M Moving and Storage. Apts., homes, offices. Short notice. Large or small. We carry supplies. 905-738-4030.

srmmovers2009@hotmail.com A-1 Short Notice. Insured. Home, apt, office, bus. 416-747-7082.

450 PAINTING/ WALLPAPER

Prof. painting/paper-hanging 416-667-9869 or 905-762-1657 Jacob. No Shabbos calls.

Painting, res., commercial, interior/exterior. Ceramic Tile & Drywall. Reasonable. FREE ESTIMATES. PAINT HOUSE ENT. 416-459-1383.

455 PHOTOGRAPHY /VIDEO

Our "UNIQUE" 3 Foot Photo Puzzle of your Child... your "alternative" to the Candlelighting Ceremony. Your "Precious Memories" deserve the best. We'll transfer your Movies, Slides and Videos to DVD. Fred: 416-229-6000; Toll-free 1-877-847-1263; email: frednelson@madisonvideo.tv

485 SNOW REMOVAL

Mackin Landscaping & Snow Removal offers quality commercial & residential snow plowing & fall leaf clean-ups 416-816-2672.

500 TUTORING

THE TUTORSHIP ADVANTAGE Math, Chemistry, Physics, Biology, English, French, Essay Writing. 416-386-1585 www.tutorship.ca

510 UPHOLSTERY

All fabrics half price when you upholster with us. NO HST. 416-931-2660.

520 WINDOW SERVICES

PROF. WINDOWS & EVES CLEANING Lowest price, highest quality. Contact 416-265-6263.

CLASSIFIED DIRECTORY

5 HOUSES FOR SALE
10 HOUSES FOR SALE PRIVATE
15 HOUSES FOR RENT
20 HOUSES FOR SALE/RENT
24 HOUSES WANTED TO BUY
25 HOUSES WANTED TO RENT
30 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE
35 CONDOMINIUM FOR RENT
40 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE/RENT
45 CONDOMINIUM WANTED
50 ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
55 ACCOMMODATION WANTED
60 SHARED ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
62 SHARED ACCOMMODATION WANTED
65 ACCOMMODATION/SWAP/EXCHANGE
67 HOUSE SITTERS
70 UNIVERSITY ACCOMMODATION
75 APARTMENT FOR RENT
78 SHORT TERM RENTAL AVAILABLE
80 SHORT TERM RENTAL WANTED
81 APARTMENT TO SUBLET
82 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT
84 ROOM WANTED FOR RENT
85 APARTMENT WANTED
87 PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
105 COTTAGE FOR SALE
110 COTTAGE FOR RENT
115 COTTAGE FOR RENT/SALE
120 COTTAGE WANTED
122 TIME SHARE FOR SALE
123 TIME SHARE FOR RENT
124 ARIZONA PROPERTIES
125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE
130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT
135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
140 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION WANTED
143 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM AVAIL
145 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM WANTED
147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION
150 FLORIDA TRANSPORTATION
155 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE
160 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR RENT
165 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
170 ISRAEL PROPERTIES WANTED
175 ISRAEL ACCOMMODATION WANTED
178 ISRAEL TRANSPORTATION
180 OUT-OF-TOWN PROPERTIES
185 OUT-OF-COUNTRY PROPERTIES
190 VACATION PROPERTY AVAILABLE
195 VACATION PROPERTIES WANTED
198 VACATION PROPERTIES-EXCH /SHARE
198 SPACE FOR LEASE
199 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY AVAILABLE
200 OFFICE SPACE AVAILABLE
201 OFFICE SPACE WANTED
202 STORAGE SPACE WANTED
203 STORAGE SPACE AVAILABLE
205 LAND/LOTS FOR SALE
210 LAND/LOTS FOR LEASE
220 INVESTMENT PROPERTIES
225 INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES
230 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES
232 BUSINESS FOR SALE
235 BUSINESS WANTED
237 CAREERS/RECRUITMENT
240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES
245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED
246 VOLUNTEERS
247 DAY CARE AVAILABLE
248 DAY CARE WANTED
250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE
255 DOMESTIC HELP WANTED
257 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE
258 HEALTHCARE WANTED
259 SENIORS
260 BUSINESS PERSONALS
265 PEOPLE SEARCH
270 PERSONALS
273 INTRODUCTION SERVICES
275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED
279 PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY
280 ANNOUNCEMENTS
290 LOST & FOUND
295 PETS
300 ARTICLES FOR SALE
305 ARTICLES WANTED
313 BOATS
315 CARS
320 CONTENTS SALE
325 GARAGE SALE

SERVICE DIRECTORY
345 ACCOUNTING
350 APPLIANCES
355 AUDIO-VISUAL SALES/REPAIRS
357 AUTOMOTIVE
358 BRIDAL
365 CARPENTRY
368 CARPETS
370 CATERING
372 CHUPPAHS
375 CLEANING/CLEANING SUPPLIES
379 CLOCKS/WATCHES
380 CLOTHING
382 COUNSELLING
385 COMPUTER
386 DANCING
387 DECORATING
390 DRIVING
392 DRY CLEANING/LAUNDRY
394 EDUCATION
395 ELECTRICAL
396 ELECTRONICS
400 ENTERTAINMENT
402 FINANCIAL
404 FITNESS & WEIGHT LOSS
405 FURNITURE
406 GARAGE DOORS
407 GIFTS
410 HEALTH & BEAUTY
412 HEATING/AIR CONDITIONING
415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS
416 HOME INSPECTION
419 INTERNET SERVICE
420 INVITATIONS/PRINTING/CALLIG.
425 JEWELLERY
427 JUDAICA
430 LEASING
431 LANDSCAPING/LAWNCARE
432 LAWYERS
433 LESSONS
434 LIMOUSINE/TAXI
435 LIQUIDATION
438 LOCKSMITH
439 MAKE-UP
440 MISCELLANEOUS
442 MUSICAL SERVICES
443 MORTGAGES
445 MOVING
447 PEST CONTROL
450 PAINTING/WALLPAPERING
452 PARTY SERVICES
455 PHOTOGRAPHY/VIDEO
460 PLUMBING
465 PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
470 RENOVATIONS
472 RETIREMENT HOMES
475 ROOFING
476 SATELITE & EQUIPMENT
480 SECURITY SYSTEMS
481 SEWING
485 SNOW REMOVAL
490 TABLE COVERING
493 TAILORING/ALTERATIONS
495 TILING
496 TRAINING
498 TRAVEL & TOURISM
500 TUTORING
510 UPHOLSTERY
512 WAITERING SERVICES
515 WATERPROOFING
520 WINDOW SERVICES
550 WORKSHOPS

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES 905-886-5610 Call ext. 369
ISRAEL FALL/WINTER
FROM $726* +tax
*Specific dates apply

Sports & Leisure

Social Networking @ The Canadian Jewish News
for the :-) generation
YT

Maccabi Toronto ends opening season with 'Soccerbration'

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

Maccabi Toronto is celebrating its first season of developmental soccer programs for youngsters with a "Soccerbration" from 11:00 a.m.-2:00 p.m. on Sunday, Oct. 24, at the Toronto Heschel School.

The event will include a mini-tournament with prizes, the awarding of trophies and other fun soccer activities, said Maccabi Toronto spokesperson Martin Scott.

Since its kick-off in April, about 144 kids aged five to 12 have gone through the program, which focuses on skill development, conditioning, discipline and game action, he said.

A fun league that offers a Jewish environment for kids – they play at Heschel's field and are trained by members of the Toronto Maccabi soccer club – the "Academy" will also groom players for the JCC Maccabi Games and ultimately for the Maccabiah Games, held every four years in Israel, Scott said.

Although the relationship with the other Maccabi organizations has not yet been formalized, "I've sent more players to Israel since 1980 than any other system," Scott said.

Maccabi Toronto's senior club plays as the Hearts Azzuri in the premier division of the Ontario Soccer League (OSL), one of the best amateur soccer circuits in the province. "We coached it, managed it and populated it with our players," 70 per cent of whom are Jewish, Scott said.

Azzuri recently advanced to the finals of the Alf Beese Cup, losing 3-1 to GS United in the championship game.

After falling behind 2-0 to the favourites, Maccabi's David Guzman, a former Canadian national player, narrowed the margin to 2-1. United scored late to seal the deal.

"We had chances in the first 15 minutes, but we missed," Scott said.

Nevertheless, he rates the season a success. "We were the only team to beat the top two teams in the league," including a 2-1 playoff win over the Ulster Thistles, he said.

"We play a tenacious defense, we're opportunistic on the counter-attack and we use simple [short] passes. We play smart, like Spain. We keep the ball on the ground with a lot of quick passes," he added.

With the outdoor soccer season at an end, Maccabi Toronto will switch to the indoor game in November and offer lessons at North York and Thornhill schools until April, when the outdoor season resumes.

For more information, visit www.maccabitoronto.com, or e-mail Scott at martinemilscott@hotmail.com.

Boys and girls were schooled in soccer skills in Maccabi Toronto's developmental program.

The Canadian Jewish news
CONGRATULATIONS
In honour of your marriage, The Canadian Jewish News is pleased to present you with a 6 month subscription.
Please fill in the requested information and fax to (905) 946-1679 or mail to P.O. Box 819 STN Main, Markham, Ontario, L3P 8A2
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Province _____ Postal Code _____
Phone number _____
Email _____
Date of wedding _____
Location of wedding _____
CANADIAN DELIVERY ONLY
Subscription will begin two weeks after receipt of information.
If you wish, please enclose a photo - we'd be honoured to publish it in an upcoming issue.

Film producer makes Jews and Baseball

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

"I was inspired from start to finish, and every day was like being at the seventh game of the World Series."

William Hechter was talking about his latest documentary, Jews and Baseball: An American Love Story, which started its run in Toronto and Montreal last week.

Hechter made the movie, directed by Peter Miller and narrated by Dustin Hoffman, for two compelling reasons.

"I love documentary films, and the potential to tell a story that can be seen around the world," explained the Winnipeg-born former lawyer who now manages an investment company in Toronto.

Jews and Baseball, purportedly the first major documentary to focus on Jewish players from the 19th century to the present, focuses on such stellar figures as Hank Greenberg, Al Rosen, Sandy Koufax and Shawn Green through the prism of immigration, assimilation and bigotry.

Hechter's role was to put together the film from start to finish, while working collaboratively with Miller and his team.

Asked how he persuaded Hoffman to come aboard, he replied, "I asked, and he said yes."

A graduate of Harvard University who practised criminal law until 1997, both as a prosecutor and defence counsel, Hechter has been a baseball fan since boyhood in Winnipeg.

"I always enjoyed playing baseball," he said in an interview. "My interest in the game started with playing baseball."

William Hechter

Hechter's favourite Jewish player was Al Rosen, the Hebrew Hammer who played with the Cleveland Indians during his 10-year career in the 1940s and 1950s.

"He was such a great player, and so proud of his heritage," said Hechter, whose favourite team was the Brooklyn Dodgers. "He is also one of the kindest and most intelligent persons one could meet."

Hechter founded and published the magazine, Canadian Lawyer, in 1977, and sold it some years later.

Jews and Baseball was made by Clear Lake Historical Productions, which Hechter, a film aficionado for many years, founded.

As a student, he ran an art house theatre in Winnipeg, Cinema 3.

He has also been a concert producer, having worked with performers like Paul Simon, Art Garfunkel and Neil Diamond.

Last rites and rituals

By MICHAEL GORDON

It was 1968 and I was a medical resident at the Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal. The head nurse called me because one family was about to light a candle in their mother's room.

The nurse said: "He says it's part of the ritual of waiting for her to die, and the family is prepared to gather, to say prayers, sit a vigil and light a candle. I explained that he can't but he says, I cannot stop him. I am afraid of a violent outburst."

The Senior Side of Life

I responded to the call. I sat with the eldest son and his siblings and explained that if a candle were lit, the fire department would be called and they would come and extinguish and disrupt the important part of the dying process – the vigil. We together agreed to use an electric Jewish Sabbath candle as a symbolic replacement for the real candle. The woman died peacefully and the family could carry out their ritual.

An article in the Feb. 11 issue of the New England Journal of Medicine questioned whether it might be ethically acceptable to perform "futile" CPR on a child as a way to dealing with the parents' need to be certain "everything possible was done" and to help them deal with of their loss. The article ends with the following, "In a small number of cases, providing non-beneficial CPR can be an act of sincere caring and compassion. Futile CPR has a limited but legitimate place in the practice of medicine."

Many clinicians and ethicists might find such a suggestion anathema to ethical decision-making, as one might ask, "Why stop at CPR? What if the family wants other non-beneficial procedures undertaken and why stop at children – why not adults and elders?"

The core question seems to be: why is there a need to use modern medical technology as a means of satisfying the emotional needs of parents, siblings or children facing the imminent death of a loved one?

In the field of aging, it is increasingly common for elders to die in hospital settings connected to electronic monitoring devices and to receive interventions such as intravenous or subcutaneous fluids or antibiotics, or receive CPR, even when it's abundantly clear the benefit from the interventions will not change the comfort level or prognosis in a substantial way.

As a clinician-ethicist, I am often asked to discuss the reasons to forgo end-of-life CPR when a family member cries out to staff members, "I can't just let my mother die without doing everything possible to save her or bring her back to life." I have heard similar comments when artificial nutrition and hydration is explained. "I can't let my father starve to death," a family member may say. This is even when it's clear that the underlying illness isn't going to change its course by the provision of tube feeding.

I get a strong sense that the reason these interventions are asked for is that they are the modern substitute for the traditional rites and rituals that previously surrounded the dying process. Death rarely occurs at home, and the modern institutional setting is replete with technologies that appear to have no limits of perceived benefit – even when, in fact, they do not.

Prayers, chants, incense, candles and vigils have unfortunately been replaced by non-beneficial CPR, tube feeding, intravenous fluids and end-of-life antibiotics as the means we use to demonstrate our devotion to those we love who are leaving us forever.

Dr. Michael Gordon is medical program director of palliative care at Baycrest and co-author with Bart Mindszenthy of Parenting Your Parents (Dundurn Press). His latest book, Moments that Matter: Cases in Ethical Eldercare, follows his previous book, Brooklyn Beginnings: A Geriatrician's Odyssey. All can be researched at his website: http://www.drmichaelgordon.com.

SWEET POTATOS W MAPLE SYRUP, WALNUTS, BRANDIED RAISINS

1/2 c brown raisins
1/2 c golden raisins
1/4 c brandy
5 lb. sweet potatoes, peeled, cut into 3/4" cubes
3/4 c pure maple syrup
1/2 c brown sugar
1/2 stick unsalted butter
1 1/2 c walnut pieces, toasted

Preheat oven to 350°F. Combine raisins and brandy in small bowl; toss to blend. Soak 30 min-to 1 hr. Cook sweet potatoes in large pot of boiling salted water until just barely tender, about 8 min. Transfer to baking sheet to cool. Bring maple syrup, brown sugar, butter to boil in heavy saucepan over medium heat, stirring until brown sugar dissolves. Boil 2 mins. Grease baking dish . Drain raisins and place in large bowl. Add cooked sweet potatoes, maple syrup mixture, toasted walnut pieces. Toss gently to coat. Transfer to baking dish uncovered until syrup is thick and bubbling, basting occasionally, about 55 min. Let stand 10 min and serve.

CAPLAN'S

experience
the Caplan's difference

1111 Weston Road (just south of Eglinton)
416-767-1655 • caplans.ca
Caplan's parking lot directly across from the store

A Family Business for over 80 Years

Healthier baked goods

I have often said that I cook because I have to, but I bake because I love to! This is true. I have also said that my dream would be to wake up every morning and bake something delicious and fresh, a coffee cake, biscotti, muffins or cookies, and eat that for breakfast.

About Nutrition
By LISA WEINBERG

I bet many of you are liking the sound of that and thinking that's a strange dream for a dietitian. But fresh, homemade baked goods are delicious and many avoid them because of the fat and calories they contain. Hence, most mornings my breakfast is high-fibre cereal, egg whites, yogurt or whole grain toast and nut butter. But back to my dream, there are ways to bake your favourite baked goods and make them healthier.

One of the problems with baked goods is the amount of fat – butter, oil, margarine or shortening – they contain. The good news is that fat can be substituted with a low-fat option in "soft" baked goods such as muffins, cakes and banana breads. You can replace all or some of the fat with yogurt, fat-free sour cream, buttermilk or applesauce. You would use an equal portion, so, for example, if your recipe calls for one cup of oil, you can use a cup of yogurt instead. Or you can use half the fat and half yogurt. Soft baked goods can also be made with less sugar or with artificial sweetener meant for baking.

Another way to make baked goods healthier is to add fibre, which also makes them more filling. For example, bake with whole wheat flour – use it in equal parts – or add ground flaxseed to recipes.

Use recipes that are "light," such as fat-free angel-food cake, high-fibre bran muffins, whole wheat banana bread or biscotti or mandelbroit. There are even some healthy, and trans fat free, baking mixes available now. Mixes can help you bake in a pinch or are great for little bakers who are learning to cook.

Lisa Weinberg is a registered dietitian/nutritionist in Toronto, in private practice and at the Genesis Professional Group. You can also follow Weinberg at http://www.lisaweiberg.ca. If you have any nutrition questions, please send them to The CJN.

School sucked. Does it still?

By AVRUM ROSENSWEIG

My little boy is growing up. He started junior kindergarten a few weeks ago, came home one day and said to his mom, "Bon appétit, now we can eat." So far, so good, right?

URBAN WRITER

A friend once told me parents believe their kids are brilliant, that is until they start school. I believe he meant we are enamoured by the treasures that pour out of our toddlers' mouths when they're educated by informal play time, but that changes when they begin formal education and their intellect is challenged by teachers and a structured curriculum. My thoughts, however, about my son in school are different. I do not expect great things from my son's school or most of his teachers. I think he will achieve something special despite the education system.

I was a very average student and ultimately became very disappointed in the education system and its professionals. I attended yeshiva in Toronto, where secular studies were not that important, for my high school years. Of course, this contributed to my disappointment, as well as the fact my rabbis were not trained to teach. You can imagine what that environment must have been like for a kid with some learning challenges, me, studying about an ox that gores one's neighbour, at nine in the morning.

Later I went to the University of Toronto, York University and Ryerson University, for journalism. I was so hoping I would be surrounded by passionate scholars and that typewriters would be flying through the air, clocking whomever with inspiring ideas and encouraging debate.

My very first class at university was taught by an erudite and colourful intellectual who brought life to the subject matter – "the oppressed in the Americas." I figured then and there my next few years would be a time of rocking academia like never before. That, however, was not the case.

I found instead that university stifled my curiosity and like yeshiva, taught one way of thinking, offering little room for challenging mainstream notions.

Since those days I have asked hundreds of people how many teachers influenced them in a significant way to ask questions, wonder about life and dive into ideas and thoughts. The number is anywhere from zero to three and usually closer to zero. While I appreciate there are students who love(d) school and their teachers, to me they are anomalies.

Curiously, I've asked dozens of teachers how their career was/is, and generally they respond in a positive way. I don't get it. Teachers seem to be enjoying the students, but not the other way around.

I've asked parents what I can expect from the school system, and once again, most of them tell me to anticipate a difficult ride with many pitfalls and disillusionment. More often than not I hear, "Your son will be lucky if he gets a good teacher, but don't expect it."

I dream about Noah becoming a critical thinker, with a thirst to know and understand our existence. I am hoping he will love Torah and secular ideas, and will be encouraged to ask questions and grow feverishly. But putting all of this together, I feel that it is almost entirely up to my boy's mom and me to help him discover and uncover his passion for Chumash, reading, writing, poetry, mathematics, sciences and studying in general.

A few weeks ago, my son started junior kindergarten, and while it is early on, I do not expect he will develop a fervent unbridled love of knowledge in school. I think that's up to us. Something is wrong with this picture.

School sucked then. Does it still now?

To comment go to http://avrum.net.

Priceless just got a price.

Whether you want sporty or sport-utility, the C-Class and GLK-Class both feature the 4MATIC™ permanent all-wheel-drive system, plus the unmistakable AMG styling package[1]. And the standard 20" twin-5-spoke alloy wheels on the GLK give this SUV a striking accent. Visit your local Mercedes-Benz Toronto Area retailer or mbtoronto.ca

Test drive the 2011 C-Class or 2011 GLK-Class today.

Mercedes-Benz

MBTORONTO.CA

Toronto Area Retail Group
Maple 9300 Jane St (905) 585-9300
Mississauga 6120 Mavis Rd (905) 363-3322

Sales Inquiries (877) 366-8888
Markham 8350 Kennedy Rd (905) 305-1088
Newmarket 230 Mulock Dr (905) 853-6868

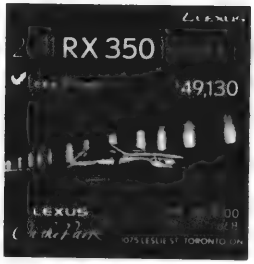
Downtown 761 Dundas St E (416) 947-9000
Midtown 849 Eglinton Ave E (416) 847-7400
Thornhill 228 Steeles Ave W (905) 886-6881

© 2010 Mercedes-Benz Canada Inc. *Lease and finance offers based on a new 2010 C 250 / GLK 350 available only through Mercedes-Benz Financial on approved credit for a limited time. Lease example based on $358/$458 (excluding taxes) per month for 48/48 months. Down payment or equivalent trade of $4,700/$7,300 plus first monthly payment and security deposit of $400/$500 and applicable taxes due at lease inception. MSRP starting at $35,900/$43,500. A.P.R. of 1.9%/4.9% applies. Total obligation is $24,284/$29,784. Finance example based on 60 month term at an A.P.R. of 1.9%/2.9% and an MSRP of $35,900/$43,500. Monthly Payment is $565/$703 (excluding taxes) with down payment of $4,015/$4,715. Cost of borrowing is $1,585/$2,959 for a total obligation of $39,910/$48,884. 18,000 km/ year allowance ($0.20/km for excess kilometres applies). Freight/PDI of $1,995. Dealer Admin fee of $295, air conditioning levy of $100, EHF tires, filters, and batteries, stewardship fee of $29.70 and provincial fee of $5 are now included in the final purchase price. License, insurance, registration, taxes, and PPSA are extra. Offer may change without notice and cannot be combined with any other offers. See your local Mercedes Benz Toronto Area retailer for details. [1] Standard on the C 300 models, C 350 models and C 63 AMG. Only available as part of an option package on the C 250 models. Only available as part of an option package. C 350 4MATIC™ shown with optional sport package. GLK 350 4MATIC™ shown with optional AMG Sport Package. Offers end October 31st, 2010.

Downtown Toronto's Finest Boutique Hotel
The GRAND HOTEL TORONTO
Reservations 1-877-32-GRAND
www.grandhoteltoronto.com
aeroplan Earn 500 Aeroplan Miles per night and up to 15,000 Aeroplan Miles for Extended Stays

The Canadian Jewish news

64 Pages | Thursday, October 21, 2010 | 13 Cheshvan, 5771 | $1.25



This Week

National

Mideast dispute can be settled diplomatically, Bob Rae says. Page 3

Anti-Israel sentiment to blame for Canada losing UN seat bid, groups claim. Page 6

Stir Crazy

Special food section. Page 44

Heebonics

Degrassi actress makes her theatrical debut. Page 52

Index

National 3
Editorials & Letters 8
Perspectives 9
Opinions 10
The Kirshner File 11
Jewish Life 20
Family Moments 27
What's New 28
On Campus 36
Just Between Us 38
Stir Crazy 44
Israel & the Jewish World 49
Heebonics 52
Business 53
Health & Lifestyles 54
Arts & Travel 55
Sports & Leisure 62

www.cjnews.com

Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

Canada, Israel look to strengthen trade deal

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Canadian Minister of International Trade Peter Van Loan met with Israeli Minister of Industry, Trade and Labour Benjamin Ben-Eliezer during a two-day working visit to Israel last week.

The trip aimed to promote Canada-Israel trade relations, and an agreement was reached to conduct "exploratory talks" to amend and strengthen the Canada-Israel Free Trade Agreement (CIFTA).

Since CIFTA came into force in 1997, two-way merchandise trade between the countries has more than doubled, reaching $1.3 billion last year, making Israel Canada's sixth-largest merchandise export market in the Middle East.

"Canada's ties to Israel are very deep, and our friendship is important. Our government is building on these ties and looking at opportunities to expand our trade relationship. We are committed to creating new sources of jobs, growth and prosperity for both of our countries in the years ahead," Van Loan said in a statement from Israel.

Van Loan also met with representatives of Israel's pharmaceutical and science and technology sectors and laid a wreath at Yad Vashem's Hall of Remembrance.

Van Loan's office said the ministers also discussed a possible joint "innovations event" to be held in Canada later this year.

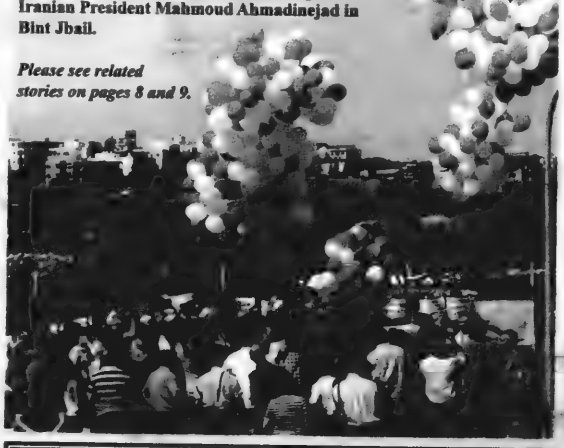
The CJN will publish an in-depth interview with Van Loan in a future issue.

Canadian Minister of International Trade Peter Van Loan lays a wreath at Yad Vashem last week. Newly appointed Canadian ambassador to Israel, Paul Hunt, centre, watches. [Canadian government photo]

Where hot air met hot air

Israelis launched blue-and-white balloons at the border with Lebanon last week to greet Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad in Bint Jbail.

Please see related stories on pages 8 and 9.



Philanthropist helps miners

JTA

LA COPIAPA, Chile — A Jewish Chilean mining executive has written cheques worth $10,000 (US) to each of the 33 miners who were rescued from a collapsed mine in Chile after being trapped for more than two months.

Leonardo Farkas reportedly gave the cheques in the miners' names to each of the families and set up a separate fund to collect donations, the Associated Press reported. The money is more than some of the miners earn in a year.

The miners were pulled from the San José gold and copper mine last week, where they had been trapped since its collapse on Aug. 5.

The Chilean miners reportedly have survived the longest of anyone buried underground.

Farkas is a well-known philanthropist in Chile who appears annually on a telethon run by the country's major television networks to raise funds to help children with developmental disabilities. In 2008, he donated about $1.5 million to the cause.

Farkas owns businesses in several industries, with mining comprising the most important of his holdings.

Vayera
Candlelighting: 6:05
Havdalah: 7:11
Greater Toronto Area

Don't miss an issue. Call 1-866-949-0864 today to have* The Canadian Jewish News *delivered to your door every week.
Access the eCJN archive at www.cjnews.com

Manitoba premier impressed by Israel – please see page 50

The News in Brief

Canada

Breast Cancer Gift

VANCOUVER — A $3-million gift from Gordon and Leslie Diamond to the Canadian Breast Cancer Foundation and the B.C. Women's Hospital last week will fund the purchase of two digital mammography machines to improve detection of the disease in British Columbia. The machines allow three-dimensional, see-through imaging of breast tissue and will reduce false-positive results. The gift, the largest ever for both the foundation and the hospital, came in honour of Gordon's mother, Sadie, who died of breast cancer. Leslie Diamond also survived the illness.

World

Dylan Shul For Sale

MINNEAPOLIS — The shul where Bob Dylan marked his bar mitzvah is for sale. The former home of Agudath Achim Synagogue in Hibbing, Minn., where the former Bobby Zimmerman became a man in 1954, has belonged to Eric and Brenda Shafer-Pellinen since 2001. Their plan to make it a bed and breakfast failed, and it's listed for $119,000. Stop No. 8 on Hibbing's official Bob Dylan Walk still has its original stained-glass windows.

Jewish Support Drops

NEW YORK — Jewish approval of U.S. President Barack Obama has dropped, a new poll says. Some 49 per cent of U.S. Jews approve his handling of U.S.-Israel relations, a new American Jewish Committee survey found, and 45 per cent disapprove. An AJC poll last March gave Obama a 55 per cent approval rating to 37 per cent disapproval. Overall Jewish approval of him as president dropped to 51 per cent, from 57 per cent in March. He won 78 per cent of the Jewish vote in the 2008 election.

School Gets $15M

NEW YORK — A Solomon Schechter Conservative Jewish high school in New Jersey received a $15-million gift and will be renamed for one of its co-founders. Daniel Och, chair of the Birthright Israel Foundation, and his wife, Jane, gave the gift to the Solomon Schechter Day School of Essex and Union in West Orange to give tuition relief to middle-class families and for capital improvements. In honour of Daniel Och's mother, a co-founder of the school with her husband, Michael, and other families in 1965, it will be renamed the Golda Och Academy. Golda Och died in January.

Zuroff Tried For Libel

BUDAPEST — Nazi hunter Efraim Zuroff is fighting libel charges by an alleged war criminal in Hungary. The case, being heard in Budapest, began Oct. 8 and is slated to end Dec. 16. It's likely the first time a man accused of mass murder has sued his accusers, Zuroff said. Zuroff, who works for the Simon Wiesenthal Center, gave evidence to Hungarian authorities in 2006 that Sandor Kepiro, now 97, while serving in Hungary's gendarmerie, organized a massacre of 1,246 Jews, Serbs and Roma in Novi Sad in 1943. Kepiro, who was convicted of lesser charges in 1944 and escaped after a 1946 conviction, sued Zuroff in 2007, saying he made statements about the case as fact rather than opinion.

Rocker Changes Imagery After Outcry

NEW YORK — Pink Floyd bassist Roger Waters reportedly changed one of the videos he uses in his new "The Wall" tour after claims that it was anti-Semitic.

The ADL criticized him for using what it called anti-Semitic imagery in performances of Goodbye Blue Sky, which targets Israel's security fence. An animated scene showed planes dropping bombs shaped like Stars of David, dollar signs, crucifixes, hammers and sickles, crescents and stars, Mercedes logos and Shell Oil logos.

The ADL said that the juxtaposition of the Star of David and the dollar sign "could easily be misunderstood as a comment about Jews and money." But in an Oct. 6 show in New York, a Mercedes symbol followed the Jewish stars instead of dollar signs.

In an earlier letter to the Independent in Britain, Waters said that "there are no hidden meanings in the order or juxtaposition of these symbols. The point I am trying to make in the song is that the bombardment we are all subject to by conflicting religious, political and economic ideologies only encourages us to turn against one another, and I mourn the concomitant loss of life."

In response, ADL national director Abraham Foxman said that changing the order so that the dollar signs "appear elsewhere… would put this matter entirely to rest."

Stone Craft MONUMENT FACTORY

Large inventory of top quality

Granite Monuments

in our own North York factory

Single Stones from $750.

121 BRISBANE RD., #1 DOWNSVIEW

416-667-1474

WWW.STONECRAFTMONUMENTS.COM

Steeles Memorial Chapel

www.steelesmemorial.com

- Current Listing of Funerals
- Listing of Cemeteries and Maps of Sections
- Yahrzeit Calculator for Civil & Hebrew dates
- Kaddish Texts
- Educational Information about Shiva - Unveiling - After-Care - Prayers - Jewish Burial Rites
- Jewish Holiday Dates

905-881-6003

Serving the Jewish Community since 1927.

LIPTON

Chartered Accountants

Lipton LLP
245 Fairview Mall Drive
Suite 600
Toronto, Ontario
M2J 4T1

Tel: 416.496.2900
Fax: 416.496.0559
www.liptonllp.com
Member of JHI worldwide

Change of Name Announcement

Effective November 1, 2010, Lipton Wiseman Altbaum & Partners LLP will become Lipton LLP. After 34 years under its original name, the new partnership identity honours our founding partner Harold Lipton's ongoing commitment of service excellence to both our clients and the community at large.

The Canadian Jewish News

How To Reach Us

Head Office: 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4 Tel: 416-391-1836
Advertising Fax: 416-391-0949 Editorial Fax: 416-391-0829
Advertising E-mail: adscjn@gmail.com Editorial E-mail: cjninfo@gmail.com
Website: www.cjnews.com
Subscription Inquiries: Toll Free: 1-866-849-0864 Fax: 905-946-1679
E-mail: cjnews@indas.on.ca

IMP - Israel Advertising Representatives
POB 7195, Jerusalem, Israel Tel: 02-625-2933 Fax: 02-624-9240 E-mail:info@impmedia.co.il

The Canadian Jewish news

Vol. XL, No. 41 (1,970)*

Gary Laforet
General Manager

Mordechai Ben-Dat
Editor

Vera Gillman
Advertising & Assistant General Manager

Carol Jamieson, Controller

Jeff Rosen, News & Internet Editor

Joseph Serge
Arts, Travel and Supplements Editor

Janice Arnold, Carolyn Blackman
Sheldon Kirshner, Frances Kraft
David Lazarus, Elias Levy
Andy Levy-Ajzenkopf, Paul Lungen,
Sheri Shefa, Laura Stricker
Staff Reporters

J. Dahan, S. Epstein,
B. Gladstone, N. Gilletz, D. Held,
S. Horowitz, G. Koren,
Rabbi D. Marmur, M. Mietkiewicz,
P. Michaels, A. Rosenweig
Columnists

Cynthia Gasner, Joel Jacobson,
Diane Koven, Lauren Kramer,
Myron Love, Rhonda Spivak
Canadian Correspondents

Jenny Hazan, Israel Bureau

Carolan Halpern, Ruth Schweitzer
Daniel Wolgelerenter
Copy Editors

Ella Burakowski
Assistant Advertising Manager

Bev Bergman, Gloria Clamen,
Lisa Freid, Sarah Laiken,
Honey Mahl, Elie Malka,
Sholom Wargon, Grace Zweig
Sales Representatives, Toronto

Doris Perez
Office Manager

Alma Delory, Lucy Semtchenko
Karen Syptak
Office Staff, Toronto

David Collin
Promotions Manager, Circulation

Brian Stoneman
Composing Room Manager

Leo Berlin, José De Freitas,
Trevor Miller, Anahit Nahapetyan,
Nick Radelja, Lila Sarick,
Michael Stavsky
Production Staff

Donald Carr
George A. Cohon,
Steven Cummings, Betty Elkaim,
Julia Koschitzky, Albert J. Latner,
Lionel H. Schipper, Shoel Silver,
Robert Vineberg, Elizabeth Wolfe,
Rose Wolfe, Rubin Zimmerman
Directors

Ray D. Wolfe
Founding President (1971-1990)

CIRCULATION
Total circulation: 35,160 copies.
Total paid circulation: 34,313 copies.
CCNA verified circulation
July 28, 2010

SUBSCRIPTIONS
Canada: $37.80, 1 yr. incl. taxes
$68.00, 2 yr. incl. taxes
Online edition:
$20.95 1 yr. incl. taxes
U.S.A. / Foreign:
$135 Cdn. funds, 1 yr.

Postmaster: Please return 29Bs and changes of address to CJN, 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4.

Postage Paid at Toronto
Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

*Under current ownership

We acknowledge the financial support of the Government of Canada, through the Publications Assistance Program, towards our mailing costs.

Canada

If you're reading this
ADVERTISING WORKS!
To book your ad in this spot call
416-391-1836

National

Greater Toronto Area

Sonny Goldstein, CFP
President
Planning For Retirement?
Confused about your financial future?
Let us help you understand how to reach your financial goals
Call Sonny Goldstein
Chartered Life Underwriter
Chartered Financial Consultant
416-221-0060
HIGHEST QUOTES ON RRIF's, ANNUITIES, etc.
Creative Ideas in Financial Planning

Liberals would work harder for peace, Rae says

Bob Rae

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

A new Canadian government under Liberal party rule would work harder than the current Conservative administration to bring peace to the Middle East, Bob Rae, the party's foreign affairs critic, said last week.

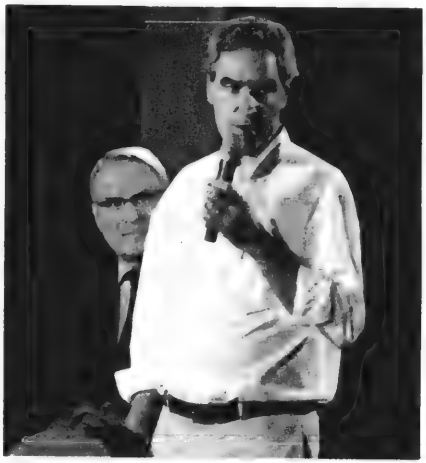
"We would be more active in working with all the nations of the Middle East to create the conditions for a peaceful resolution of the Arab-Israeli conflict," he pledged in an interview. "Supporting Israel doesn't mean you become indifferent to trying to find a way to peace."

Sounding an upbeat note, Rae – the MP for the ethnically diverse riding of Toronto Centre – said Israel's long-running dispute with the Palestinians can and should be settled by diplomatic means.

"It's a difficult conflict, but it's important to resolve it," said Rae, who is due to receive an honorary doctor of philosophy degree from the University of Haifa at a dinner in Toronto on Nov. 7 sponsored by Canadian Friends of Haifa University.

He added, "Many long-standing disputes have been resolved. While it may seem unattainable at times, history shows us that breakthroughs can happen."

Continued on page 25



"OPEN MIKE" NIGHT: Liberal Party leader Michael Ignatieff spoke at the Beth Emeth Synagogue last week as part of his "Open Mike" program. In the background is riding MP Ken Dryden. See page 26 for story. [Cory Pike photo]

It's Back! The BIGGEST event of the year:

1/2 PRICE SALE*

DECORIUM

Just what you're looking for in a furniture store.®

416 736 6120 • 1 800 232 2267
363 Supertest Rd. Toronto, ON M3J 2M4
www.decorium.com

Join us on: facebook www.facebook.com/decorium

*Buy 1 item get the 2nd item at half price. Second item must be of equal value or less. Advertised items not included. On regular price items only. Not valid with any other offer, not subject to prior sales. All sales final. Event ends Oct 31, 2010

REDUCE RISK?
ENHANCE RETURNS?
ACHIEVE THE GOALS MOST IMPORTANT TO YOU.

Irwin Igra, Investment Advisor
Tel: (416) 646-6926
Wellington West Capital Inc.
Suite 501, 4100 Yonge Street
Toronto, Ontario M2P 2B5

WELLINGTON WEST
Capital Inc.
Wellington West Capital Inc. Member CIPF

Benjamin Group
Through the generations
...a sacred trust

Proud Supporter

MUSICA BETH TIKVAH
PRESENTS its annual fundraiser

Safam IN CONCERT

Come & witness the inspirational & entertaining music of this unique Jewish, Boston-based 6-man band. SAFAM has dominated the Jewish music scene in North America since 1974. The originality of their music & lyrics have influenced generations - songs like 'LEAVING MOTHER RUSSIA' 'AMNESTY' 'JUST ANOTHER FOREIGNER' 'NACHAMU AMI'.

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 31, 2010 at 7:30PM
BETH TIKVAH SYNAGOGUE
3080 Bayview Avenue, Toronto

General Admission $36 ($40 at the door)
TICKETS – call 416-221-3433
Or at Aleph Bet, Israel's, Matana, Negev bookstores
Proceeds to fund CHOIR and Shul music programming.

Event sponsored by the Benjamin Group.

Poland's plea to Jews

From the editor's desk...

"We want the Jews of the world to see that Poland is more than a vast graveyard for their people."

That plea and countless variations of it were ceaselessly voiced by Polish officials as well as by Jews of Poland themselves last week, at a two-day conference in Warsaw.

Sponsored by the Polish government, the conference, titled "Public Diplomacy and Polish-Jewish Relations," was dedicated to the theme of what can be done to enable the Jews of the world to see Poland in a better, more modern, updated light.

The conference was closed to the general public. Attendance was by invitation of the Polish Ministry of Foreign Affairs. Over the course of the two days, four different panels canvassed a variety of aspects of the topic.

The CJN was invited to participate in the panel that dealt ostensibly with the differences and similarities in attitudes (toward Poland) between the Jews of Israel and the Jews of the Diaspora.

"Judaism is a faith that canonizes, ritualizes and sanctifies memory," The CJN pointed out. "Thus, to the extent the Polish government does not hide or bury memory, it will be laying a foundation for mutually respectful and rewarding relations between this and subsequent generations of Jews and Poles.

"Deeds, not intentions or hopes, will determine the nature of subsequent relations between Poles and Jews. And that relationship will be measured over long interstices of time."

During the panel on present-day relations between Israel and Poland, Israel's ambassador to Poland, Zvi Rav-Ner, told the audience that Israel considers Poland to be one of its closest allies in the European Union.

Israeli Foreign Ministry spokesperson Yossi Levy suggested that the two countries "must do everything possible to change the stereotypes of the relationship between Jews and Poles [as being dominated by anti-Semitism].

"Whenever there is a problem with Europe, the Israeli Foreign Ministry phones the Polish government to intervene," Levy said.

But he also said there is an "obligation for both sides to speak the truth, and the Polish side should speak in Polish to the Polish public about the terrible past."

Speaking on the panel regarding Jewish Diaspora ties to Poland, renowned Israeli historian Shlomo Avineri placed the very holding of the conference itself into an historic framework. "Today is part of a process of trying to overcome a period of some 50 years of the absence of memory."

Avineri was referring to the near half-century rule of Poland after World War II by the Soviet Union. Soviet masters had no interest whatsoever in telling the entire 1,000-year tale of Polish-Jewish relations, let alone in trying to bring some understanding, if not quite reconciliation, between Poles and Jews.

The difficulty today in bringing about any form of reconciliation, Avineri said, is "ignorance on all possible levels between both sides.

"Neither Israeli Jews nor Diaspora Jews," Avineri pointed out, "know that Jews lived in Poland in a complex, changing reality for many many years."

Similarly, he suggested, Poles, too, must cast their own ignorance aside.

"There seems to be a nostalgia in Poland today for their 'exotic Jews,' the Jews of the shtetl captured on camera by Roman Vishniac, whom they recall and depict in a positive, photogenic way.

"But they must also be taught that Jews once comprised 10 per cent of the population, that they lived normal lives here. Of course, one must also teach the nasty aspects of the relationship too.

"It is not an easy task, for it requires a great deal of education."

Serge Cwajgenbaum, the secretary general of the European Jewish Congress, based in Paris, confirmed that the change in Polish-Jewish relations really began after the fall of the Iron Curtain. Pope John Paul II, he suggested, was the catalyst. The pope urged his fellow countrymen and his coreligionists "not to consider the Jews as a pariah people."

A number of speakers talked about the burgeoning revival of Jewish life in Poland. Shana Penn, executive director of the Taube Foundation for Jewish Life and Culture, told the conference of the many educational and cultural programs throughout the country underwritten by the foundation.

Most experts suggest that approximately 25,000 Jews live in Poland today. With the help of outside philanthropic organizations such as the Taube Foundation, they are indeed slowly planting seeds for new Jewish life in Poland.

My colleague Sheldon Kirshner wrote about the many sites and proofs of the evidence of the planting of those seeds in a marvellous multi-part series of articles in The CJN in the summer of 2009. Rabbi Dow Marmur, too, has recently written about "Poland's Jewish revival" in the general media. Notwithstanding that revival, notwithstanding this generation of Poles' sincere desire to heal the wounds between the two peoples, the memory of history cannot so quickly be set aside.

For an individual, 65 years is nearly a lifetime. For a people, however, especially the Jewish people, it is merely the blinking of an eye. In this case, a very tearful eye. Time will write this history. –MBD

BNOT MITZVAH

Shauna Pekar and her grandmother, Esther Kurtzman, become bnot mitzvah together Oct. 9 at Congregation Darchei Noam. The ceremony was the fulfillment of a lifelong dream for Kurtzman, who was not able to have a bat mitzvah ceremony as a young woman. It was Shauna's idea to share her bat mitzvah with her Bubbie.

[Jack Beker Photography photo]

act now

RICHMOND HILL

Preview Opening

Smart

SINGLES & SEMIS*

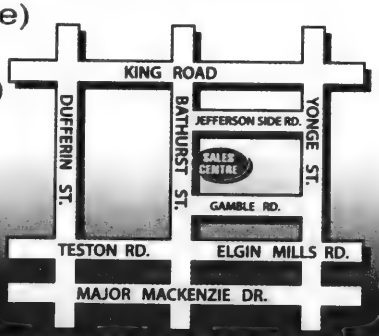
FROM THE $300's

This new dream home destination Opportunity will only come around once in a lifetime – so ACT NOW!

- Walking Paths • Ponds • School
- Established Community • Shopping Nearby • William Neal Park

✓ Only a Limited Release- (Then they'll all be gone)
✓ Touchsational Pricing - (Unbeatable)
✓ Outstanding location - (Richmond Hill's Best)
✓ Exceptional Designs - (Stone & Brick)

Models up to 2638 sq.ft.



Sat. & Sun. 12pm-6pm
Mon. to Thurs. 12pm-8pm
Fri. Closed

905 737-5300

touchstone HOMES

A Visible Difference.

RICHMOND HILL

mytouchstonehome.com

Prices & Specifications are Subject to Change with... E.&O.E.

RENTAL RETIREMENT LIVING AT YONGE & EGLINTON

You make me feel So Young!

- Independent and Personalized Lifestyle Packages
- 1 & 2 Bdrm suites with full kitchens
- Licensed Fine Dining
- Fitness Centre with Pools
- 24-hour Professional Staff
- Social & Recreational Programs
- Full Service Spa & Hair Salon
- Flexible Short Term, Respite and Trial Stays

ALL INCLUSIVE FROM $3,500/MTH

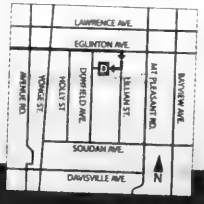
The Dunfield RETIREMENT RESIDENCE

Limited SNOWBIRD SUITES Now Available

BOOK NOW AND SAVE THOUSANDS!*

Model Suite Now Open!
77 Dunfield Ave., Toronto
Call today for more information or personal tour.
416-481-8524

*See sales representatives for details.
Prices and specifications subject to change without notice. E. & O. E. 2010.



WWW.THEDUNFIELD.COM

Greater Toronto Area

Jewish groups examine Security Council snub

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Canada was unable to win a seat on the United Nations' powerful Security Council last week, and many Jewish groups blamed the defeat on member countries who don't share Prime Minister Stephen Harper's pro-Israel policies.

Canada decided to pull out of the race last Tuesday when officials determined they wouldn't be able to win enough votes from the UN's 192 member countries to beat either Germany or Portugal, its rivals for two soon-to-be vacant rotating seats on the council.

Until now, Canada had managed to obtain a seat on the Security Council in every decade since it first secured one in 1948, two years after the council's creation. It last held a seat on the Security Council from 1999 to 2000.

In statements last week, the Canada-Israel Committee (CIC), Friends of Simon Wiesenthal Center (FSWC) and B'nai Brith Canada said anti-Israel agitation by certain groups in Canada and anti-Israel sentiment at the UN may have foiled Canada's attempt to win a seat.

"Although some have suggested that Canada's support for Israel is one of the reasons it was unsuccessful in its bid for a seat on the Security Council, Canadians should be proud of our principled support for Israel at the UN," the CIC said.

Avi Benlolo, president and CEO of FSWC, said it was "no secret" that at least one bloc of countries at the UN – the 57 nations comprising the Organization of the Islamic Conference – voted against Canada and "likely lobbied heavily" for other nations to join them.

B'nai Brith singled out the Canadian Arab Federation (CAF) for circulating a Sept. 24 petition called "Don't Give Canada a Security Council Seat."

"It is utterly disappointing to know that an organization containing within its name 'Canada' campaigned to undermine Canadian efforts to obtain a seat on the council," said Frank Dimant, B'nai Brith's executive vice-president.

The CIC also criticized the CAF for its "shameful" behaviour.

The CAF petition called on "all Arab and Muslim missions to the UN" to deny Canada the seat, listing 15 reasons to do so, 10 of which involved Israel.

"Granting Canada a seat on the UN Security Council would be tantamount to rewarding Canada for discriminating against Arab and Muslim Canadians, and for its unconditional and blatant support for Israel's war crimes and violations of international law," CAF president Khaled Mouammar wrote.

The UN Security Council has five permanent members – China, France, Russia, the United Kingdom and the United States – and 10 non-permanent members, each serving two-year terms.

The five new non-permanent council members – South Africa, India, Colombia, Germany and Portugal – will replace Austria, Japan, Mexico, Turkey and Uganda, whose terms expire Dec. 31.

The other five members – Bosnia, Brazil, Gabon, Lebanon and Nigeria – will remain on the council until the end of 2011.

In his Sept. 23 speech to the UN General Assembly, Harper lobbied hard for Canada's inclusion on the council.

"If we are elected, we will be ready to serve. And, if called upon to serve on the Security Council, Canada will be informed by… [the UN's] foundational beliefs in the sovereign equality of countries… of the obligation to settle disputes peacefully… and [upholding] the human rights of all people."

He added that, if elected, Canada would "strive to further" those ideals "just as we have striven to implement Security Council resolutions."

Most recently, the council passed sanctions against Iran to try to limit its efforts to acquire nuclear weapons.

Moshe Ronen, national chair of the CIC, praised Harper for his stance at the UN, irrespective of the government's inability to win a seat on the Security Council.

"It would have been easy for Prime Minister Harper to have adopted the politically expedient but regrettably popular behaviour at the UN of scapegoating and marginalizing Israel. Instead, the Conservative government stood by Israel when it was singled out for unfair treatment. Canada's actions in support of Israel at the UN were always based on what was the right thing to do, not what was politically fashionable, and for this, the government deserves the deepest praise," he said.

COOKOOS

"THE GTA'S BEST ROTISSERIE CHICKEN" Toronto Star

COR Glatt Kosher Woodburning Rotisserie & Grill
Take-Out + Dine In

NEW! QUARTER CHICKEN DARK
3 FLAVOURS: Southern Fried, BBQ, Teriyaki

Chabad Gate Plaza, 7241 Bathurst • 905-886-8686 • www.cookoos.ca

Presented by
Sarah and Chaim Neuberger Holocaust Education Centre
UJA Federation of Greater Toronto

30th Annual Holocaust Education Week

November 1-9, 2010
holocausteducationweek.com | 416.631.5689

In honour of the 30th anniversary of Holocaust Education Week, this year's program, "We Who Survived..." is dedicated to Holocaust survivors and the importance of Shoah testimony.
Join us in thinking, talking and learning about the legacies of Holocaust survivors.

Opening Night

Monday, November 1 | 7:30 PM

Adath Israel Congregation | 37 Southbourne Avenue | 416.635.5340 x 308

THE VOID: IN SEARCH OF MEMORY LOST

With Stephen D. Smith, USC Shoah Foundation Institute, and Pinchas Gutter, Holocaust survivor
Special Guest: CTV's Dana Levenson

Closing Program & Kristallnacht Commemoration

Tuesday, November 9 | 8:00 PM

Shaarei Shomayim Congregation | 470 Glencairn Avenue | 416.789.3213 x 209

MAY YOUR MEMORY BE LOVE

Ephraim Kaye, Yad Vashem
Co-sponsored by Yad Vashem The Holocaust Martyrs' and Heroes' Remembrance Authority

We gratefully acknowledge generous contributions from The Joseph Gottdenker Family Foundation, in memory of the members of the Gottdenker and Zuckerbrot families who perished during the Holocaust and those who miraculously survived but have since passed away; from Steve & Liddy Gottesman and family and Moishe & Jodi Gottesman and family in memory of Carol & Herman Gottesman; through the Jewish Foundation of Greater Toronto in memory of Irving and Bella Naiberg; and from the Canadian Society for Yad Vashem.

CTV

Arts. Culture. Heritage.
Powered by UJA FEDERATION

For a complete and up-to-date program schedule, please visit holocausteducationweek.com.

The Canadian Jewish news

An independent community newspaper serving as a forum for diverse viewpoints
Publisher and Proprietor
The Canadian Jewish News, a corporation without share capital
Head Office
1500 Don Mills Rd., Suite 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4

Portraits side by side of darkness and light

Last week in the town of Bint Jbail, in the grassy, rock-strewn undulations of the hills of south Lebanon, a handful of kilometres from the border with Israel, Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, the president of Iran, spoke to an enraptured crowd of thousands of Hezbollah supporters.

"The entire world should know that the Zionists are destined to disappear from the world, while Bint Jbail will remain alive. And the sons of Bint Jbail will know how to defeat the Zionist enemy," Ahmadinejad said.

"You proved that your resistance is stronger than all dark swords in the hands of the Israeli enemy," he continued. "They have no way but surrender to the nations and go back to their first homes. Be sure that Palestine will be liberated" (our emphasis).

The man from Tehran was not subtle.

Once again, on message, an exemplar of the human conscience that coexists untroubled alongside the pursuit of politicide, genocide and the persecution and torture of his own people, Ahmadinejad preached his bilious hatred toward the Jewish state.

Mark Regev, spokesperson for Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, aptly noted that "Iran has turned Lebanon into an Iranian satellite and a hub of regional terror and instability." The majority of Lebanese must surely know this to be true and must hang their heads in sorrow and regret for the country they have lost.

On that same day, several thousand kilometres away, in the far reaches of Chile, 33 miners were rescued from the San Jose mine in Copiapó. From all corners of the globe, people watched or listened to the painstakingly delicate rescue of the plucky, courageous miners.

They had been trapped in the mine for more than two months. It was only by dint of their courage, endurance and unflagging hopefulness that they remained alive long enough for their rescuers to reach safely and securely deep into the earth to bring them back to their loved ones on the surface. The rescue was a result of the mobilization of men and women in pursuit of the highest human value, namely, the saving of life. Companies and individuals from around the world, including Canadians, helped with the rescue by providing the broad range of equipment and expertise necessary to bring the miners back alive.

Though separated by an ocean and a continent, the two episodes happened side by side, as it were, on the same day. They offer poignant, contrasting portraits. Ahmadinejad assembled his audience to hear a message of murder. Chilean President Sebastian Pinera assembled his audience to hear and make resonant the message of life.

It is the miners now who bask in the open, in the glow of full sunlight and freedom. And it is Ahmadinejad, ironically, who dwells, perhaps forever, in a mine far below decency and civility, in the dark corners of his twisted heart where hatred reigns.

25 years ago in The CJN

Israeli prime minister Shimon Peres ended two days of talks with Reagan administration officials and reiterated Israel's opposition to an international peace conference, as Jordan's King Hussein wanted. Instead, Peres urged the king to start direct talks with Israel, saying Israel opposed the Soviet Union's participation in the process because it lacked diplomatic relations with Israel.

Dry Bones
STEPHEN HAWKING SAYS THAT IF HUMANS
DON'T COLONIZE SPACE WITHIN 200 YEARS, MANKIND WILL BECOME EXTINCT!!!
THIS IS REALLY DEPRESSING.
"DEPRESSING"?! IT'S TOTALLY HORRIFYING!
WHO WILL OPEN THE DOG FOOD CANS?!

DryBonesBlog.com

Editorial Advisory Board: Guy Aboodi, Maurice Benzacar, Michael Brown, Donald Carr, Rabbi Michael Dolgin, Daniel Ferman, Igor Korenzvit, Keith Landy, Hindy Najman, Lou Rosson, Alan Sandler, Rabbi Philip Scheim, Mike Shriqui, Pamela Medjuck Stein, Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, Ehud Telem, Nelson Wiseman.

Acceptance of Israel as a Jewish state

Yair Lootsteen, in his column "Israel's Jewish character is indelible" (Oct. 7), states that Palestinian recognition of Israel as a Jewish state is "unnecessary and imprudent" and "induces uncertainty about it." Unfortunately, he misses the entire point. The reason that there is no peace today is that the Arab states accept two important Muslim beliefs – that a land that was once under Muslim domination must revert to that state, and that Jews are inherently inferior to Muslims and must not have control over any Muslims. Peace will only come once the Arabs reinterpret these beliefs. Acceptance of Israel as a Jewish state would signify that the Arabs have, in fact, taken this step, and then, and only then, will there be a possibility for peace. Until the Arabs recognize that Israel is the national homeland of the Jewish people, signing any "peace" agreement would, especially if it entailed concessions on the part of Israel, signal Israel's weakness, put Israel at risk, and increase the possibility of war.

Yehudit Shier Weisberg
Toronto

* * *

Drawing of Peace Tower clock (1)

I wonder if anyone from B'nai Brith Canada bothered to look at a picture of the Peace Tower clock before issuing their unfounded accusation of anti-Semitism ("CJC comes to defence of Le Droit cartoonist," Sept. 29). The Bado cartoon is a reasonably accurate drawing of the clock face, which does contain a symbol very similar to the Magen David. Perhaps B'nai Brith leaders will lobby Parliament to have the clock dismantled in order to avoid such incidents in the future. They might even insist that the Parliament Buildings be reconstructed to their specifications. I believe that B'nai Brith owes a profound apology to the cartoonist.

Edward Katz
Cote St-Luc, Que.

* * *

Drawing of Peace Tower clock (2)

I appreciate the work of the B'nai Brith Canada and think it offers a valuable service to the community. However, in the instance of the Bado cartoon with the "Star of David" in the middle of the clock, I would like to see its leaders admit that perhaps they reacted a little too quickly, did not research the matter as they should have and are, with good reason, a little thin-skinned ("CJC comes to defence of Le Droit cartoonist," Sept. 29). An apology for a mistake would not shame them and should not embarrass them. Man-up and say you're sorry and take a little more care next time.

Sheila Mediena
Montreal

* * *

Problematic headline

I was very surprised to see your Oct. 7 front-page headline, "Israel extends construction freeze," and the accompanying headline (on Page 40), "Israel extends construction freeze for 60 days." As you know, nothing has been settled as to the extension of the freeze, and it is so unlike your paper to print a story of this magnitude without confirmation.

Ian Franklin
Toronto

Editor's note: The reader is correct. The headline was insufficient. It should have included a reference to the report that attributed the statement.

* * *

Gives U.S. credit for being Israel's friend

Critics of Israel have always exaggerated the influence of the Israeli lobby in Washington. Conspiracy theories have suggested that Jews control everything from the media and the U.S. Congress to the global financial system. The reality is that most Americans identify with Israeli values and thus support American policies toward Israel.

Although not as visible as the Israeli lobby, there is considerable clout by the Arab lobby when one considers that its makeup goes well beyond a group of paid professional lobbyists. Influence on the Arab side now comes from defence contractors, former government officials employed by Arab states, corporations with business interests in the Middle East, NGOs, the United Nations, academics, Israel haters, a significant percentage of the media and cultural elite, non-evangelical Christian groups, European elites, hired guns, American Arabs and Muslims, and the leaders and diplomats from no fewer than 21 Arab governments.

In view of this remarkable numerical imbalance of influences, it is to the credit of the American government that it remains such a good friend of Israel.

Bert Raphael
Thornhill, Ont.

LET THEM GO...

Ron Arad, Zachary Baumel, Zvi Feldman, Guy Hever, Yehuda Katz

1580

The number of days Hamas has held Gilad Schalit captive

The Canadian Jewish News reserves the right to refuse advertising that in its opinion is misleading, in poor taste or incompatible with the advertising policies of the newspaper. Acceptance of advertising does not imply endorsement by The Canadian Jewish News. The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Letters are welcome if they are brief, in English or French, typewritten with lines double spaced, and of interest to our reading public. Readers are cautioned not to make sweeping claims against persons or institutions which they cannot verify, as libel laws are very stringent. We reserve the right to edit and condense letters, which must bear the sender's address, phone number and both handwritten and typed signatures. Letters sent by e-mail must also include the sender's municipal address. cjninfo@gmail.com

Perspectives

Did Ahmadinejad's visit help or hurt Hezbollah?

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

By AVI ISSACHAROFF and AMOS HAREL

Despite the celebrations, the emotional speeches and the tens of thousands of people who came to see Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad in the southern Lebanon town of Bint Jbail last Wednesday, it is far from clear whether his visit helped or hurt his Hezbollah proxy.

On the second day of his visit to Lebanon, Ahmadinejad came to within several kilometres of the Israeli border and once again called for the destruction of the "Zionist entity." But to some extent, he thereby violated the Lebanese status quo.

Everyone in the country knows that Hezbollah operates under Tehran's auspices and serves as the long arm of Iran against Israel, but the group had tried to hide this as much as possible and present itself as a patriotic Lebanese organization. Now, there is nothing left to hide: the Iranian president behaved as if he owned southern Lebanon, as well as Dahiya, a Hezbollah-dominated district of Beirut. And this caused all the Lebanese factions, Shiite and non-Shiite alike, considerable embarrassment.

In other words, the Iranian leader's crude statements may boomerang and undermine Hezbollah's standing among the Lebanese public. Ahmad Fatfat, a Lebanese member of parliament who belongs to the March 14 group, which opposes Syria and Hezbollah, said in an interview with the Lebanese media that Ahmadinejad's speech in Dahiya, where he applauded Hezbollah's opposition to Israel, reflects the depth of the Iranian presence in Lebanon.

It may be that at this stage, Hezbollah is no longer particularly concerned about its standing among Lebanon's other communities. But for years, the group has tried to win the trust of non-Shiite Lebanese. This visit will make it more difficult to achieve this goal.

In his speech yesterday at Bint Jbail, which became one of the symbols of the Second Lebanon War of 2006, Ahmadinejad repeated the same cliches he used in his Dahiya speech. "You are Lebanon's first line of defence, you are heroes, you are those who protect Lebanon's independence," he told the tens of thousands of Shiites who gathered at the same soccer stadium where Hezbollah secretary general Hassan Nasrallah made his famous "spider web" speech two days after the Israel Defence Forces withdrew from southern Lebanon in May 2000. (In that speech Nasrallah said that Israel is "weaker than a spider's web" and stressed that his supporters do not fear it.)

Hezbollah secretary general Hassan Nasrallah, left, Syrian President Bashar al-Assad and Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad

Ahmadinejad promised that Iran will continue supporting the Lebanese people and its "resistance" against Israel. But he was careful to avoid expressions that could give the impression that Iran or Hezbollah would use Lebanese soil to attack Israel.

"The Zionists planned to destroy this community [Bint Jbail], but it stood strong against the occupiers," he declaimed. "The entire world should know that the Zionists are destined to disappear from the world, while Bint Jbail will remain alive. And the sons of Bint Jbail will know how to defeat the Zionist enemy."

But this display of force was undercut by the fact that Nasrallah was missing. Not only was he absent at Bint Jbail, but throughout the two-day visit, the Hezbollah leader was never seen in public with the Iranian guest. He made do with a speech broadcast from a bunker – where he is hiding from an Israeli strike. Ahmadinejad's vitriol of victory was dulled somewhat by Nasrallah's absence.

Many analysts argued that the presence of tens of thousands of people at the rally was the result of Hezbollah pressure on the people. But this is inaccurate.

Many residents of southern Lebanon received aid from Iran after the Second Lebanon War to repair damaged houses or build new ones. Tehran is behind the reconstruction of southern Lebanon: homes, schools, hospitals, utilities, infrastructure. The population owes a lot more to Ahmadinejad than it does to Lebanese Prime Minister Saad Hariri. To them, the Iranian president is the real star.

Meanwhile, on the Israeli side of the fence, the visit passed relatively calmly. Recently, it was reported that Ahmadinejad was considering coming all the way to the border. But the Iranians apparently reconsidered and decided it would be too risky. They made do with the visit to Bint Jbail.

The IDF followed developments closely, but did not concentrate any forces in anticipation of an incident. Nor did the media cameras on the Israeli side of the border manage to catch a glimpse of the Iranian president.

But the real question is whether the Iranian leader's visit will have any impact on the most fraught issue in Lebanon: the investigation into the assassination of former Lebanese prime minister Rafik Hariri. Though the power struggle over this issue continues, most analysts concur that Hezbollah and its supporters currently have the upper hand.

The international tribunal is expected to announce the indictment of senior Hezbollah figures in December. But following years of delays, it would also not be surprising if another delay occurs. The international community's supreme interest is to preserve Lebanon's stability and avoid a civil war. Faced with tremendous pressure from Syria and Hezbollah, the other foreign powers involved in Lebanon – mainly the Americans, the French and the Saudis – may well capitulate on this issue.

During a meeting with Saad Hariri, Ahmadinejad claimed that he has a plan to resolve the issue of the investigation without a crisis. Part of his plan involves holding a summit for the leaders of Syria, Turkey, Lebanon and Iran.

But it is doubtful whether this proposal will ever bear fruit. Precisely because of Ahmadinejad's aggressive intervention in Lebanon last week, Hariri will now find it more difficult to relinquish his father's legacy and succumb to Iran's dictates.

Israel will 'soon go to hell'

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

JERUSALEM—Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad on Sunday said that Israel would "soon go to hell" and called on the West to drop support for the Jewish state.

"Grounds are being prepared for the Zionist regime [Israel] to go to hell soon, and any country supporting this regime will join it on its trip to hell as well," Ahmadinejad said in a speech in Ardebil in northwestern Iran, carried live by the news network Khabar.

The comments Sunday fall in line with a series of provocative statements by the Iranian leader about Israel several times in recent years, sparking international anger.

Among others, he advocated relocating Israel to Europe or North America, and questioned the dimensions of the Holocaust during World War II.

The remarks by the Iranian president came in the wake of his controversial visit last week to Lebanon, in which Ahmadinejad voiced his support of what he called Lebanon's resistance of Israeli aggression.

Speaking last week in the South Lebanon town of Bint Jbail, which became one of the symbols of the Second Lebanon War of 2006, Ahmadinejad called local residents "Lebanon's first line of defence"

"You are heroes, you are those who protect Lebanon's independence," he told the tens of thousands of Shiites who gathered at the stadium.

Ahmadinejad promised that Iran would continue supporting the Lebanese people and its "resistance" against Israel.

Ahmadinejad's government is the principal backer of Lebanon's Hezbollah terrorist group. He has repeatedly expressed his desire to see Israel disappear.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu chose to respond in the residence of the first mayor of Tel Aviv where David Ben-Gurion, Israel's first prime minister, declared independence in 1948.

"We heard… the cursing and the language of contempt from the Lebanon border," Netanyahu said, Ha'aretz reported."We will continue to build our country, and we will know very well how to defend it."

With files from JTA

Opinions

Whose Promised Land?

Jews may regard Israel as the Promised Land, but most still choose to live elsewhere. Though Africans normally don't describe the country in this way, many would like to move there. That's why a growing number of Sudanese, Eritreans and others continue to risk their lives to seek asylum in the Jewish state.

Rabbi Dow Marmur in Toronto

They suffer unspeakable hardships on the way. To reach Israel, they have to walk through Egypt, where they're never welcome, always persecuted and occasionally killed. Bedouins smuggle them across the border and dump them on Israeli soil.

Israel, being a signatory to international conventions on behalf of refugees, is bound to receive them. To send them back would endanger their lives, and Jews know what that means better than most.

The monument designed by Daniel Liebeskind to be erected in Halifax Harbour tells it all. It will commemorate the tragic fate of the St. Louis, the ship with Jews fleeing Nazi-infested Europe that Canada sent back in 1939. Two hundred of its 900 passengers were later murdered. It has become a universal symbol of every refugee's tragic vulnerability.

Rachel Iscove-Peled was born in Toronto and qualified as a lawyer in Canada. Some four years ago, she made aliyah, was called to the Israeli bar and now works in the Tel Aviv office of the United Nations High Commission for Refugees. Her recent talk at Holy Blossom Temple, the congregation where she grew up, dramatically illustrated the hardships of many asylum-seekers in Israel.

They pose a difficult challenge. As a Jewish state committed to humanitarian values, Israel cannot turn them away. But if it indiscriminately opens its gates, the Jewishness of Israel may be compromised. So it grants them asylum, but no other rights, in the hope that things will soon improve enough in their own countries to allow for their repatriation.

Once in Israel, the refugees usually work illegally, have no insurance, live in squalid conditions and send home as much money as they can. They nevertheless insist that they'd rather be there than anywhere else in the region.

Understandably, the situation worries Israeli policymakers. The minister of justice declared recently that "Israel is facing an existential threat in the light of the waves of infiltrators coming through our border with Egypt."

The country finds itself in a painful dilemma: should it continue to receive them or turn them away? In either case, whether on grounds of demography or morality, the Jewishness of Israel may be severely challenged. The Promised Land comes with a heavy price and grave responsibilities.

Is militant campus advocacy the solution?

It's the conventional wisdom these days that young Jews don't know enough about Israel to defend us against anti-Zionists. However, there have never been so many different kinds of Jewish education: schools, yeshivot, women's study centres, Jewish studies programs on campus, summer camps, Birthright, Masa and adult study groups, not to mention the influence of the State of Israel, with its culture of Hebrew language in both religious and secular settings.

Seymour Epstein in Toronto

And yet there's still vast ignorance and rampant Jewish illiteracy, which is especially disappointing given the high levels of general education among most Jews. But is the solution to cram Zionist data into the minds of young Jews so that they can fight back with knowledge-strength? These are the terms being used for campus advocacy, and I think they're problematic from the perspective of an educator.

My purpose is not to convince the community to drop campus advocacy as an issue. I do, however, wish to point out the limitations of such activity. I've been influenced by a satirical article published in the 1990s called "How to Fight Anti-Semitism." It was written by a Columbia University campus activist as a reaction to a protest demonstration against an anti-Semitic speaker who was invited to lecture at Columbia.

Very quickly, the reader finds the author arguing that protesting this kind of anti-Semitism can be demeaning and counter-productive. It will do nothing to convince an anti-Semite to alter his or her views, and instead of making Jews "feel better," it relegates us to defending ourselves in silly ways. We don't poison wells. We don't use Christian blood to make matzot. We did not plan 9/11.

The solution offered in the article appeals to me because it's all about Jewish education. Most protesters against anti-Semitism know so little about their own "Semitism" that the real solution is deep Jewish learning to produce proud and courageous Jews, with pride in their past and courage to create new Jewish life in the future.

But what does this have to do with campus advocacy? The idea that we can create student activists to counter two major forces of anti-Zionist and anti-Semitic activity on campus is a non-starter. Those two forces are paid agitators who are on campus for one purpose only, and radical professors who abuse their academic podium with propaganda. They generally don't respect civil discourse and deliberately abuse the academic setting for their own perverse ends.

In any campus protest, these enemy forces make every effort to confuse the public by mixing messages and inviting conflict. Putting our students into that arena is inviting disaster. Does anyone think that knowing about Israel's positive accomplishments in science and culture is going to matter to paid mercenaries? How are our rational arguments going to sway the passion of "freedom fighters" who have relatives in Israeli jails or who aren't content with Gaza and Jenin, but really aspire to Haifa and Tel Aviv?

The university campus is meant to be a place of critical discourse. If it's truly a place where students develop the skills of critical thinking, there must be a place for those who differ from the norm, for those who both love Israel and maintain the right to criticize when appropriate. The university is where you should learn to be critical and responsible at the same time. Indoctrinating our young students with ammunition to fight anti-Zionist agitators and anti-Semitic professors is not in the spirit of autonomous critical thinking, and it puts us very much in the camp of the enemy.

There's every reason to enhance and expand campus services for Jewish students. There's every reason to develop academic programs in Israel studies and in related Jewish studies. But there's no reason to teach militant advocacy. The idea is a non-starter, both in terms of tactics and strategic objectives.

Giving thanks for the mosaic

Chatting with a few York University students about Thanksgiving confirmed my impression that this is an underrated holiday. None of the students had a tradition of celebrating the October festival with family and friends. One of them – whose mother is from the United States – celebrates "American Thanksgiving," traveling to family south of the border each year in November for turkey and trimmings. But the Canadian correlative is sorely neglected.

Sara R. Horowitz in Toronto

One of the students reported that someone had told her that Thanksgiving is a Christian holiday, and she asked me whether this was so. I responded that it was not, that Thanksgiving is a secular holiday whose sentiments can be made consonant with anybody's idea of God, or even without reference to a deity. Because the student is Jewish, I made some assumptions about the source of her information about the religious origins of the fest. I added that while the American Jewish community regards Thanksgiving as a civic holiday – essentially pareve rather than denominational – the Canadian Jewish community, by and large, regards the autumn festival as Christian, and so off-limits.

What the student said next caught me by surprise: "Oh, no, I didn't hear it from anyone Jewish. A Muslim in one of my classes said that because Thanksgiving is a Christian holiday, people in the Muslim community don't celebrate it."

This unanticipated shared opinion linking the two Canadian communities, Jewish and Muslim, got me to thinking about Thanksgiving in this country, and the nature of Canadian multiculturalism. That Americans almost to a person embrace Thanksgiving, regardless of ethnic and religious origin, and that Canadians view it from the vantage point of their particular backgrounds, seems of a piece with the way we think about integration and acculturation in the two cultures.

The metaphor of the melting pot, for years the American ideal, envisions individuals from diverse backgrounds merging into a universal, shared culture – becoming "American," and, to a certain extend, "un-becoming" whatever they once were. The metaphor of the mosaic, the Canadian ideal, envisions a society composed of disparate pieces which, retaining their colouration and configuration, nonetheless constitute a harmonious whole.

Both models imply a shared civic culture, but the American metaphor suggests that one must give up aspects of one's particular identity in order to gain membership, while the Canadian metaphor allows for a complexity of identity and for the endurance of communities of origin.

And yet, at least as regards this civic fall holiday, American ethnic and religious communities have managed the feat of investing in a national sentiment without giving up who they are. As anyone who has celebrated Thanksgiving in the United States can attest, the traditional celebration is malleable and bears the imprint of its celebrants.

Come late November, families gather around tables graced with kosher turkeys, halal turkeys, even faux-turkeys. Our family traditionally serves the big bird with kasha stuffing, our Ashkenazi heritage sharing the plate with the memory of pilgrims on Plymouth Rock. Sounds pretty mosaic, when you think about it.

Perhaps the Jewish community refrains from celebrating Thanksgiving in Canada because it comes so close to our own spate of autumn holidays. We simply can't think of another big meal or another family get-together. Perhaps we've already given our harvest thanks Judaically and, therefore, feel no pull to do so in a secular venue. Perhaps the Muslim community can't commit to celebrating a holiday that will surely fall, at least every decade, during the fast of Ramadan. Perhaps.

But the net result is that rather than composing a harmonious mosaic composition, the desecularization of Thanksgiving leaves the individual mosaic pieces outside the civic whole, gathered in separate piles of like-coloured shards.

There is much for which to be thankful: the bounty that is Canada, its freedoms and opportunities, along with the blessings we acknowledge in our own lives. As in any country, there are contentious issues that divide Canadians – along political, ideological, economic, geographic and other lines. The secular, civic autumnal holiday points to what unites us. Embrace it, and fill the mosaic.

The Kirshner File

White House Diary is combative and revealing

Jimmy Carter, the 39th president of the United States, was a peacemaker. Without his persistent and intrusive intervention, Israel and Egypt would not have signed the Camp David Accords, which culminated with their historic peace treaty in 1979.

Sheldon Kirshner in Toronto

Carter, who took a great deal of interest in the Middle East while in office from 1977 to 1981, pushed and prodded the Israeli and Egyptian leaders, Menachem Begin and Anwar Sadat, when obstacles and misunderstandings threatened to scuttle the prospect of peace.

More than 30 years on, Carter's indispensable role seems to have been forgotten or is downplayed. The reason is clear. Carter angered or alienated Jews who resented his pressure on Israel to withdraw from the territories and who took umbrage over his reckless and inaccurate comments suggesting that Israeli policy in the West Bank is akin to apartheid in the old South Africa.

Outraged by his views, some of which were stated in moralistic tone, they denigrated Carter, myopically ignoring his greatest achievement, the advent of peace between Israel and Egypt. The peace treaty, though unfortunately cold, still stands as a landmark in the annals of the Middle East. Thanks to it, Israel's strategic position in the region improved remarkably, helping to pave the way for Jordan's treaty with Israel in 1994.

During his presidency, Carter kept a private diary, recording his unvarnished observations of events and personalities. These entries, forming the backbone of White House Diary (Farrar, Straus and Giroux), are supplemented by italicized notes in which Carter reflects on the past. Carter's prose style is simple and unadorned, bereft of flowery and convoluted language, and thus this book is eminently accessible.

To no one's surprise, a hefty chunk turns on the Middle East, particularly Carter's relentless attempt to forge peace. His efforts were recognized in 2002 when he won the Nobel Prize for peace.

White House Diary, which runs to 570 pages, unfolds in chronological order.

One of his first entries concerns Yitzhak Rabin, Israel's prime minister, whom Carter describes as "very timid, stubborn, and also somewhat ill at ease." When they met, Carter, much to Rabin's displeasure, had already enlisted the Soviet Union – Israel's Cold War nemesis – in efforts to convene a Mideast peace conference. Carter would modify his appraisal of Rabin. As he puts it, "In his second term, in the 1990s, Rabin proved to be a strong and courageous prime minister."

Sadat impressed Carter. He calls him "charming, frank and also very strong." King Hussein of Jordan, he notes, burst into tears as he spoke about the recent death of his first wife. Carter found Syria's president, Hafez al Assad, "constructive toward the need for a Middle Eastern settlement and somewhat flexible in dealing with the more crucial items involving peace."

After his secretary of state, Cyrus Vance, returns from a trip to the Mideast, Carter says, "It's becoming more and more obvious that the Arab leaders want a settlement, want peace – and that the Israelis don't want a settlement." Carter confers with U.S. Jewish leaders and assures them of his "basic commitment" to Israel's security and sovereignty. His first meeting with Begin goes well. Carter thinks he is dedicated, sincere and strong.

Carter hails Sadat's speech to the Knesset, but is disappointed by Begin's response, describing it as "a rehash." Prior to the 1978 Camp David summit, Carter summarizes Begin's proposal on the future of the West Bank as unacceptable, but "a step in the right direction." All in all, he adds, Begin is "much more flexible than we had feared."

He and Sadat agree that Israel ought "to withdraw completely from the occupied territories with minor adjustments." Carter is upset to learn that, in Begin's interpretation, United Nations Resolution 242 does not apply to the West Bank. "This is going to be a source of real confrontation," he observes.

Carter concludes that Begin is unwilling to withdraw from the West Bank or stop construction of new settlements there. After meeting Begin yet again, Carter writes, "He's a small man with limited vision, and my guess is he will not take the necessary steps to bring peace to Israel… I'm determined to put maximum pressure on him."

With the Camp David summit having begun, Carter learns from Sadat that Begin is "difficult to approach," "bitter" and "inclined to look back on ancient history rather than deal with the present and the future." Carter points out that Begin is "a man of integrity and honour, with deep and long-standing opinions that were difficult for him to change."

Sadat, "a spokesman for all Arabs," says he cannot accept a separate agreement with Israel. But that is what Egypt's peace treaty with Israel turned out to be.

Much later in White House Diary, Carter observes, "It's obvious the Israelis want a separate treaty with Egypt, to keep the West Bank and Gaza."

In direct talks, Begin says he cannot dismantle Israeli settlements in the Sinai, prompting Sadat to pound the table and say that "the land was not negotiable," either in Sinai or the Golan Heights. "Security, yes, land, no," Sadat declares.

"The discussions were very, very bitter – open and unrestrained," Carter says.

Later, Begin protests he cannot "sell" the dismantlement of the Sinai settlements to the Israeli people and claims it would cause the downfall of his government.

Menachem Begin and Jimmy Carter at the 1978 Camp David summit.

Sadat, exasperated, says, "I cannot compromise on land and sovereignty." In a reference to Begin, Sadat says, "The man is obsessed, a hopeless case."

After meeting Israel's foreign minister, Moshe Dayan, Carter writes, "I found Dayan… willing to accept failure rather than yield completely on the Sinai settlements."

Carter, in short, has mixed feelings about Begin, calling him "a strong and courageous leader" and "the obstacle to progress." He believes that the defence minister, Ezer Weizman, is "the most level-headed and able Israeli official I've met."

Sadat, convinced that the Camp David talks are going nowhere, demands a helicopter to take him back to the airport. "This was one of the worst moments of my life," Carter admits in a gloomy aside.

Two months later, the White House shifts into crisis mode after Sadat sends word that he will not sign a peace treaty unless there is a linkage between Sinai, the West Bank and the Gaza Strip.

As the talks intensify, Carter discovers that the Israeli delegation is split on the settlements: "Begin wants no withdrawal; Dayan is willing to withdraw after an extended period; and Weizman… [agrees] that the settlers should be withdrawn."

In the final analysis, Carter has what appears to be a schizophrenic opinion of Begin: "Begin had his strong points, too: intense feelings, courage, sure knowledge of history, a clear concept of what he wanted, and in the end a surprising flexibility that made it possible for us to achieve success." But several pages on, Carter, reflecting on the joint winners of the Nobel Peace Prize, writes, "Sadat deserved it; Begin did not."

Carter, in passing, also mentions ex-Israeli prime minister Golda Meir ("she doesn't think there is any Palestinian question") and Soviet foreign minister, Andrei Gromyko (who curtly dismisses the Jewish dissident Natan Sharansky as "a microscopic dot… of no consequence to anyone"). As well, he touches on the Holocaust, agreeing that the United States was all too often silent during this period, and commends Nazi hunter Simon Wiesenthal for having done "an outstanding job."

In short, White House Diary is intriguing, combative and revealing.

If you are looking for a home run, forget Romspen

Since we became clients of Romspen almost 20 years ago we have become very conservative investors. We no longer look for investments that give us a home run. The consistent annual income of 8.4-10.5% from Romspen with interest deposited monthly in our bank account suits us just fine.

The accessibility of the Romspen partners and their personal service is very much appreciated by us. So much so that we have always felt comfortable in encouraging our family and friends to become investors as well.

Marvin & Leslie Kirsh

Introductory Seminar [illegible]

ROMSPEN
mortgage investment fund

162 Cumberland Street, Suite 300
Toronto, Ontario M5R 3N5

416.966.1100
1.800.494.0389

www.romspen.com

Toronto voters prepare to choose new mayor

Rocco Rossi bows out leaving Ford, Pantalone and Smitherman in the race

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

The CJN's coverage of this year's municipal election focused on the wards with the greatest concentration of Jewish households both north and south of Steeles Avenue, namely Toronto wards 10, 16 and 21, and Vaughan Ward 5.

This week, we conclude our coverage leading up to the Oct. 25 vote with a round-up of recent events in the campaigns.

* * *

And then there were three...

Last week, Toronto mayoral candidate Rocco Rossi bowed out, leaving only councillors Rob Ford and Joe Pantalone and former provincial health minister George Smitherman in the race for mayor of Canada's largest city.

At The CJN's deadline, all three were still in the running, with an Oct. 13 Ipsos-Reid poll of 400 people showing that 31 per cent would vote for Smitherman, 30 per cent would support Ford, and 11 per cent would back Pantalone.

All three candidates have told The CJN that if they were elected mayor, they would take Jewish community concerns seriously, particularly the issue of the Pride Parade and the controversial decision by its organizers to allow the group Queers Against Israeli Apartheid (QuAIA) to participate.

Ford has said he will take a "zero tolerance" approach to the issue and simply cease funding the parade if organizers allows the group to participate again next summer, while both Pantalone and Smitherman said they want to sit down with Pride Toronto and discuss the issue at length.

Smitherman has said the city may not have any recourse through its own non-discrimination policies to stop QuAIA from taking part in the parade, and that the Jewish community may need to take the issue to court for a resolution to the issue.

All the candidates have unequivocally said they support Israel's right to exist.

* * *

In the council races...

From left, Rob Ford, Joe Pantalone and George Smitherman

On Oct. 8, lawyer, filmmaker and gay Jewish community advocate Martin Gladstone withdrew his candidacy in Ward 32 Beaches-East York.

Gladstone spearheaded advocacy efforts last summer to stop QuAIA's anti-Israel messaging at the 2010 Pride Parade.

And in Ward 10 York Centre, two more hopefuls declared their candidacies for council since The CJN's initial coverage of the ward on Sept. 8.

Drago Banovic and Robert Freedland joined Joseph Cohen, Jarred Friedman, Magda Gondor-Berkovits, Nancy Oomen, James Pasternak, Eric Plant, Brian Shifman, Konstantin Toubis, Igor Toutchinski and Edward Zaretsky in that race.

The candidate lists in Toronto wards 16 (Eglinton-Lawrence) and 21 (St. Paul's) and Vaughan Ward 5 were unchanged as of last week.

Attention Accredited & Other Qualified Investors.

Over the last 16 quarters the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange (TASE) has significantly outperformed the Toronto Stock Exchange (TSX). 30% better.

TEL AVIV: +27% VS TORONTO: -3%

Doesn't it make sense to invest at least 10% of your portfolio in Israel?

BOND STREET PROUDLY INTRODUCES THE

Holy Land Investment Fund

... a uniquely Canadian opportunity to invest in the world's most dynamic economy.

Here's why you should consider the Holy Land Investment Fund (HLIF):

- The HLIF is a conservatively weighted, balanced fund of Israeli equities, bond and fixed income funds, which provides a lower risk way to invest in Israel.
- The HLIF includes the HA Opportunities Fund, the #1 performing fund in Israel in 2009 (244% return), higher than any fund in Canada.[1]
- RRSP and RRIF eligible.
- Low minimum investment.
- Consider investing 10% of your investment funds in Israel.

At last... the chance to put your money where your heart is.

[1]As of August 31, 2010 [2]Past results do not guarantee future performance. Results will vary depending on many factors including market conditions and available opportunities.

EXCLUSIVE WEEKLY INVESTMENT SEMINARS

Call 416-783-0505 to book your seat at our for accredited-investors-only presentations. Learn how you can participate in HLIF's excellent investment opportunity. Register Now. Don't Be Disappointed.

Zale Newman, President
zale@bondstreetmercantile.com

BOND STREET MERCANTILE

801 Eglinton Ave. W., Suite 112 tel 416.783.0505
Toronto, ON, Canada M5N 1E3 fax 416.783.1111

www.BondStreetMercantile.com

Israeli nanotech experts exploring Cdn. collaborations

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Three Israeli nanotechnology experts recently made visits to Ottawa and Toronto on a mission to make contact with Canadian counterparts and lay the groundwork for possible future collaborations between both countries.

Scientists Baruch Fischer, and Dov Sherman – a professor and associate professor respectively at the Israel Institute of Technology (Technion) – and Eylon Yavin, a researcher with the Hebrew University of Jerusalem's faculty of medicine, met with peers at a two-day Carleton University nanotechnology workshop on Oct. 4 and 5.

They then made their way to Toronto to make the acquaintance of other researchers at the Ontario Centre of Excellence before heading back to Israel.

Israeli ambassador to Canada, Miriam Ziv, lauded the meetings.

"Israeli research and innovation is world renowned, and the potential benefits of an exchange of knowledge between Canada and Israel will be extremely valuable," she said in a statement prior to the workshop.

Carleton University vice-president Kim Matheson said her researchers looked forward to "sharing our work with top scientists from Israel and [to] co-operative ventures and initiatives that could result from these discussions."

Though no official agreements or projects resulted from the meetings, the Israeli researchers said they were excited at the opportunity to meet new colleagues and work with Canadians in the future and hoped both countries would find ways to free up grant money for collaborations in the future.

"It's difficult for us [to secure financing]. We need the help of industry to do this," Fischer said. "Universities in Canada are problem-solvers, and we want to collaborate on basic science and research. We are here to open windows and do more collaborating" with Canada.

Sherman expressed enthusiasm for his field and said that nanotechnology, while impressive for the layman, is still only in its infancy.

"This is an enthusiastic field. Things you could only imagine [before] are now possible," he said. But he cautioned that nanotechnology also has its limits in terms of applications in semiconductor technology.

"We can only shrink so much. We're getting to the limits of the semi-conductor," he said, adding that in his opinion, in about 15 or 20 years scientists will have to "find other ways" to go smaller in scale.

For his part, Yavin, the lone nanobiologist of the three, said his research is currently focusing on improving ways of drug delivery in the body as well as "finding ways to get molecules to where you want them in the body."

All three experts expressed their eagerness to reciprocate Israeli hospitality to sector representatives at the NanoIsrael 2010 Conference in Tel Aviv on Nov. 8 and 9.

From left, Prof. Baruch Fischer, Simone Moscovitz, director of public affairs with the Israeli embassy in Ottawa, Dr. Dov Sherman and Dr. Eylon Yavin. [Andy Levy-Ajzenkopf photo]

HARDWOOD, CARPET & LAMINATE SALE
RIVIERA FLOORING
25 yrs exp.
Warehouse & Showroom
at
8111 JANE STREET, UNIT #6
CONCORD, ONTARIO
L4K 4L7
"NEW FLOORING WILL BE NO PROBLEM"

JOE RIVIETZ
'The Flooring Broker'
WOOL SPECIALS
Wool Blend $3.99 installed
Hardwood from $3.99 sq. ft.
Engineered wood from $3.49
Laminate from $1.29
We lift and dispose of old carpets, furniture is moved and replaced, new flooring is professionally installed.
Monday - Saturday 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.
• Weekends by appointment
Call Joe Rivietz
By appointment only,
905-738-4588
STAINMASTER®
www.rivieraflooring.com

Taste The Good Life
If you're too busy to act retired take a bite out of life at a Tridel inspired retirement rental residence in your neighborhood. Enjoy hotel style service from a staff that knows you don't live in their building, they work in your home:
• 1 and 2 bedroom rental suites
• 24 hour concierge
• Healthcare professionals on staff
• Hotel-style services
• Dining room with table service
• Piano, pub and fireplace lounges
• Patio café
• Serenity Spa and massage
• Personal LivingWell coaching
• Hair salon and esthetician
• Housekeeping and laundry services
• Transportation for scheduled events
• Building wide emergency response system
• Cable and telephone included
Act now for move-in and rental bonuses
DELMANOR
Northtown
(416) 225-9146
5351 Yonge Street,
south of Finch
TRIDEL

Visit www.delmanor.com for all our GTA locations.

Christian Friends group voices support for Israel

By RON CSILLAG
Special to The CJN

Christians owe a special duty to study the Holocaust.

After all, acknowledges Susanna Kokkonen, centuries of Christian anti-Semitism lay the groundwork for the Holocaust, and Christian values – not to mention churches themselves – mostly failed to prevent the murder of Europe's Jews even as it happened.

Christians honour the Holocaust by studying it, says Kokkonen, and in so doing, wrestle with its many implications for their faith.

As director of Christian Friends of Yad Vashem, the soft-spoken Kokkonen oversees hundreds of Christian scholars and schoolteachers who come to the world-renowned museum and memorial in Jerusalem to learn how to teach history's greatest act of mass murder.

Susanna Kokkonen

It's also her role to reach out to churches and Christians around the world, not only to glean universal lessons of the Holocaust and showcase so-called Righteous Gentiles who saved Jews, but to voice support for Israel.

Christian Friends of Yad Vashem was established in 2006, and Kokkonen was appointed its director two years after that. A native of Finland who served as cultural attaché at the Finnish Embassy in Tel Aviv, for five years, she went on to earn a doctorate in Holocaust studies from Hebrew University of Jerusalem.

A believing Christian raised in a Pentecostal home, she does not support Israel in order to hasten the Christian apocalypse and the subsequent conversion of Jews. She does so because, as a strong Zionist, she believes Jews have a right to a homeland.

"Since I was a tiny girl, I knew the Bible spoke about the Jews' return to Zion. From then on, I knew my future would be connected to the Jewish people," Kokkonen told The CJN prior to addressing an audience last week at the Sarah & Chaim Neuberger Holocaust Education Centre.

Her appearance was also sponsored by the Canadian arm of International Christian Embassy Jerusalem and the Canadian Society for Yad Vashem.

Kokkonen supports Israel for other reasons: "It's a country that is trying to defend itself, surrounded by mostly hostile states. And we need Christians to wake up and to see that this is our responsibility now. We need to stand with Israel today."

Her views were also shaped by her youthful surroundings. Finland, she said, has been staunchly pro-Israel for years. And the top two countries to send teachers and researchers to Yad Vashem are Finland and Norway, she added.

The 30-something Kokkonen was in Toronto as part of a Canadian tour that took her to Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver to speak at churches and Bible colleges.

Kokkonen sighs softly when it's pointed out that the Holocaust was carried out in Christian countries. In some places, churches and clergy spoke out, while in others, they remained mostly silent.

"It's not fully understood, the Holocaust and its implications to us as Christians," she conceded. "That's why we have a special responsibility, not only to commemorate the Holocaust but to understand why Christian values did not work. The lessons speak to Christian failures."

An added dimension to the Holocaust's relevance, she noted, is its use to study other 20th-century genocides.

"Even if the Holocaust was unique to the Jewish people and it's the largest genocide the world has ever known, these lessons we learned from it are in fact valid to many other situations in our societies.

"The lessons are universal, and we can transfer those to other genocides to understand them better."

Kokkonen is dismayed that so many churches and Christian organizations in the West have led boycott, divestment and sanctions campaigns against Israel. Comparing the Holocaust with Israel's treatment of Palestinians is "obviously a lie."

"They cannot be compared in any way. Equating these hinders the peace process and obscures the facts. We know [the Holocaust] was mass murder. The conflict in the Middle East is over land."

She also understands the reluctance of some Holocaust survivors to open up to Christians.

"I understand their suspicion. It's completely justified. But it's misguided. It would be extremely short-sighted if this remained just a Jewish issue. It is an issue for the world."

As she sees it, "God requires from each of us to act. The worst thing that can happen is if people stopped acting."

Vacations Made You Feel Guilty About Leaving Mom Alone.
This year you left, but she's not alone
Mom looks forward to your daily conversations and feels more secure knowing that you're just a phone call away. So, when you're on vacation, she feels uneasy and so do you.
Chartwell welcomes long and short term stays for a variety of reasons. Our residents and staff look forward to meeting new people and make them feel right at home.
Short Stays starting at $89 per day.
Chartwell
CLASSIC
CONSTANTIA
RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
784 Centre Street, Thornhill, ON 905-771-1013
CHARTWELL

Number Five in a Series Holocaust Education Week

LET'S MAKE SURE OUR CHILDREN NEVER ASK 'WHO IS THAT?'

Through hundreds of centuries, the Jewish People have endured unimaginable tragedies that threatened Jewish existence itself. We have survived them all, while, at the same time, cherishing our Jewish values, contributing to the world's well-being and standing strongly against new threats.

A global movement is denying Jewish Peoplehood, questioning Israel's right to exist and uprooting Jewish history.

Your support will allow UJA Federation to fund bold programs that strengthen Jewish identity among our young, familiarize them with our heroes of history like Anne Frank and inspire a renewed spirit of Jewish activism.

As we approach Holocaust Education Week, Nov. 1-9, let's work together to keep our youth proud and strong.

NEW CHALLENGES. ETERNAL STRENGTH. OneUJA.ca

Righteous Gentiles honoured at 'True Heroes' gala

By STEPHEN SWEET
Special to The CJN

Hero is a word too often thrown around lightly.

But in the case of Marie-Francoise Borel, Cornelis and Heintje Roggeveen and Klaas and Boukje Feringa, it's an appropriate choice of word to describe each of them.

They risked their lives to save Jews during the Holocaust, and recently they were honoured as Righteous Among the Nations at the True Heroes Tribute Gala.

The gala, organized by the Canadian Society for Yad Vashem, was attended by about 1,000 people, including a number of Holocaust survivors.

I can't think of anything that's much more important than the act of Holocaust education and commemoration," said Minister of Citizenship, Immigration and Multiculturalism Jason Kenney at the event in downtown Toronto.

"This is really Canada's opportunity to participate in some of the most important educational work done in the world.

"You feel like you're in touch with living history. You watch Holocaust movies and read books, but it's never the same as to actually touch someone who's lived through this experience," Kenney added.

As none of the honorees are still alive, they were represented by family members who live in Canada and in the United States. Each family member was given a standing ovation.

"I've spoken to some of the survivors here, and my conversations with them are more my absolute astonishment at their bravery," said John Tory, who co-hosted the event with Ed Sonshine. Tory, the former leader of the Progressive Conservative Party of Ontario, hosts a phone-in show on the radio station CFRB.

"I've just been in awe of these people and their relatives who did great things that we honoured here tonight," Tory said.

Canadian Society for Yad Vashem True Heroes Tribute Gala MCs and dinner co-chairs John Tory, left, and Ed Sonshine.

Borel saved Eugene and Esther Kaufman, as well as their daughter, by housing them in her small home outside of Paris.

She also took care of Faiga Kwiatek and her two daughters, Paulette and Therese, raising them as though they were her grandchildren.

Borel's grandson, Philippe, described his grandmother's thought process.

"There's a knock on your door," said Philippe. "It's your neighbour, and he fears for his and his family's life.

"Do you turn him away, or at your life's peril, do you welcome him into your home? You have come to a defining moment in your life.

"You will take them in, and know you did the right thing."

The Roggeveen and Feringa families took care of Max Noach during the Shoah.

Noach was supposed to do some land surveying work under the supervision of Cornelis Roggeveen. However, shortly after Noach started the work, all Jewish government employees in Holland were dismissed.

Roggeveen sent Noach a letter offering his help in hiding the Jewish young man in case things got any worse, knowing full well that the penalty for hiding a Jew in Holland was death for him and his entire family.

After a couple of years hiding at Roggeveen's house, Noach's living in the house became difficult. Roggeveen engineered a plan to take Noach as a "prisoner" by train to a houseboat, and when that became unsafe, he was hidden by the Feringas until the war's end.

"These people have done something so extraordinary in saving people that you almost can't believe that it happened," Tory said.

"But that's why these stories need to be told, and these people need to be recognized."

And while the content of the evening was quite serious, there was very much an upbeat feeling to the night.

"While we need to be serious about never forgetting and about those who put others ahead of themselves, it's also important that we celebrate the fact that we live in a country that protects people's rights, no matter the religion or minority," Tory said.

"There's an air of celebration to these events, to celebrate what we have and how far we've come.

"We haven't rid the world of genocide or crimes against humanity, but we've come a long way."

Rabbi Riskin makes case for keeping kids Jewish

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Much as Rabbi Shlomo Riskin is a proponent of Jewish day school education, he says it's not the answer to keeping future generations Jewish.

Nor is the memory of the Holocaust the key to Jewish survival, although it's something the Jewish community "dare not forget," he told a capacity crowd at Holy Blossom Temple last week.

He also noted that, even in Israel, there can be "total secularism."

The founder and chief rabbi of Efrat, speaking as part of the temple's Gerald Schwartz/Heather Reisman Centre for Jewish Learning series, spent more than an hour addressing the question, "Will our children and grandchildren be Jewish?"

"Why would they be Jewish?" he asked. "That is the most relevant question. It's the question of the so-called wicked child [in the Passover Haggadah], but it's the best question of all: 'What does this service mean to you? Explain it to me so maybe I can find meaning in it as well.'"

Rabbi Shlomo Riskin

Whether future generations will be Jewish is "a foregone conclusion," he said, citing high intermarriage rates and even higher rates of children of intermarried couples not identifying as Jews.

"I certainly think we dare not give up on [intermarried couples]," the rabbi said. "I think we need to try very hard to explain Judaism to them."

Intermarriage, he believes, generally occurs not between a Jew and a Christian, but rather between "a secular American of Jewish background and a secular American of Christian background."

Alluding to the influence of grandparents, he noted that his own parents weren't observant Jews – his paternal grandfather was a Communist and his father never had a bar mitzvah – but his maternal grandmother was deeply religious, and her large extended family would gather at her house for an annual Passover seder.

Rabbi Riskin described Judaism as "a civilization with a language and a culture and a philosophy and a lifestyle and a calendar all of its own.

"We must understand that conveying Judaism is a very delicate and very difficult task, especially in the Diaspora," he said, citing the challenges of learning Hebrew and adjusting to a different calendar.

"And I'm not talking about Orthodox Judaism," added the rabbi, who is Orthodox. "I'm speaking of serious Judaism. There are 'Orthoprax Jews' who are not really serious – what they do, they do by rote. And there are non-Orthodox Jews – who identify sometimes even as humanist – who are very serious about the lifestyle and the civilization."

Being a serious Jew involves a time commitment, a learning commitment and an action commitment, he said.

Historically, there has always been assimilation, the rabbi said. "Those Jews who survived sometimes came from [outside the Jewish community], probably through conversion. Those Jews who survived… were the Jews who bought into the Jewish civilization, who studied Hebrew, who lived the Jewish lifestyle, who identified and informed themselves on Jewish history."

Addressing his own rhetorical question of why we don't "put Judaism to rest" if it's so difficult, Rabbi Riskin said he believes with every fibre of his being that Judaism must continue, because "the entire world depends" on the continuation of the teachings of Jewish civilization.

"No other civilization has come up with a moral code that is as accepted universally as the Ten Commandments," he said. "We gave the world the notion of peace as a core ideal."

As well, he cited optimism and the notion of "perfectibility of human nature" as gifts that Judaism brings to the world.

"It's an unfinished symphony in which one generation hands over the baton to the next until we finally succeed.

"The most important thing I can do is give [my grandchild] the baton… We're living in a global world in which we're all interdependent."

Maximizing income during a low interest rate environment

MACQUARIE

Contact The Litman Financial Group for income-generating ideas that will maximize your after-tax income.

We can offer a 9% tax-efficient return.

Paul Litman, MBA, CFP, Investment Advisor
T 905 968 1910 E pau[illegible]
W www.[illegible]

The Litman Financial Group*
Macquarie Private Wealth Inc. 675 Cochrane Dr[illegible]
[illegible] Markham, ON L3R 0B8

The comments contained herein are not intended to be, nor should be construed to be, legal or tax advice to any particular individual. Accordingly, individuals should consult their own tax advisors for advice with respect to the tax consequences to them, having regard to their own particular circumstances. No entity within the Macquarie Group of Companies is registered as a bank or an authorized foreign bank in Canada under the Bank Act, S.C. 1991, c. 46 and no entity within the Macquarie Group of Companies is regulated in Canada as a financial institution, bank holding company or an insurance holding company. Macquarie Bank Limited ABN 46 008 583 542 (MBL) is a company incorporated in Australia and authorized under the Banking Act 1959 (Australia) to conduct banking business in Australia. MBL is not authorized to conduct business in Canada. No entity within the Macquarie Group of Companies other than MBL is an authorized deposit-taking institution for the purposes of the Banking Act 1959 (Australia), and their obligations do not represent deposits or other liabilities of MBL. MBL does not guarantee or otherwise provide assurance in respect of the obligations of any other Macquarie Group company. *The Litman Financial Group is part of Macquarie Private Wealth Inc., a member of Canadian Investor Protection Fund and IIROC.

Sharing the Holocaust — 140 characters at a time

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

A Canadian philanthropic organization has taken to the Internet to share Holocaust survivor memoirs, 140 characters at a time.

The Azrieli Foundation, which, among other programs, promotes access to Holocaust education and aims to expand Holocaust commemoration, is using Twitter to tell Anka Voticky's story.

Voticky, a 97-year-old survivor, left Prague in 1940 and went to Shanghai with her husband, Arnold, and eight others. In 1943, they and every other Jew who had come to Shanghai after 1937 were forced to move into a ghetto in the poorest area of the city.

The Twitter project is leading up to the Toronto launch of Series 3 of the Azrieli Series of Holocaust Survivor Memoirs, taking place on Oct. 26.

Naomi Azrieli, chair and executive director of the Azrieli Foundation, said using Twitter to share these stories is a great way to reach people who would not know about the memoirs otherwise.

"We were looking for something unique and compelling to bring the past into the present and reach out to a completely different audience," she said.

"By using 140 characters at a time, the story can be told in an unique way. [There is] even more impact getting it in short snippets."

The idea to collect and publish Holocaust memoirs came from her father, David, who is a survivor. He spent 10 years writing his memoirs and was able to find a publisher right away. Realizing that most survivors don't get their memoirs published, he knew it wasn't something that could be done for profit.

Once the call for submissions was put out in 2005, the Azrieli Foundation received 50 manuscripts in two months. Today, it has 170 memoirs from across Canada. Once Series 3 is released, 22 books will have been published, some in English, others in French. They are distributed free to libraries and schools.

"The stories were there, we had confirmation that they were," Naomi Azrieli said. "The program really grew when we realized there was a bigger mission here – [to] promote education about the Holocaust and tolerance in communities across the country."

Voticky's story, which has been tweeted since August of this year, marks the first time the Azrieli Foundation has used Twitter to share survivor stories. With almost 400 followers, Azrieli says the response to the campaign has been "wonderful."

Due to the positive response to Voticky's story, the foundation plans to continue using Twitter to share more of the survivor memoirs. The memoirs in Series 1 and 2 are currently available for download at www.azrielifoundation.org and will soon be available for e-readers and the iPad.

Although Azrieli is a big believer in and user of social media, there is no experience comparable to that of sitting down and reading a book, she says.

"I think that it's [social media] the best possible way to reach out now. At the same time, I truly believe in the book. I think that there's something about the experience of sitting down and reading a book that will never go away… It's very important to use social media, but at the same time it's also a means to an end to get you to read the books."

With Series 4 already in the works and planned to come out in 2011, Azrieli says the Azrieli Foundation is always on the lookout for more manuscripts.

The launch of Series 3 is being held at the Toronto Centre for the Arts, with excerpts from the new memoirs being read by the authors or their families. Linda Hooper, who, as principal of Whitwell Middle School in Tennessee started a Holocaust education program at the school in 1998, is the keynote speaker. The school is also home to the Paper Clip Project and a children's Holocaust museum, established by Hooper.

Admission to the launch is free, and all guests will receive a set of the Series 3 memoirs. To reserve a spot at the launch, visit www.azrielifoundation.org or call 416-410-5875.

Come discover:

- An uncompromising commitment to educational excellence
- A vibrant link to our tradition, heritage and today's Jewish world
- A community that is home to families from all backgrounds
- Innovative approaches to individualization, literacy, the environment and the arts

Join us for an Open House

Posluns Education Centre
18 Neptune Drive
(Bathurst and Wilson)
Sunday, October 31st
10:00 am

Kamin Education Centre
300 Atkinson Avenue
(Bathurst and Centre, Thornhill)
Sunday, November 7th
10:00 am

Babysitting available onsite

For further information, please contact
Pearl Greenspan at 905-889-3998 ext. 337
or visit www.agreatschool.com

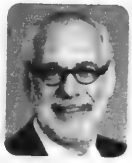
Associated Hebrew Schools of Toronto
A Great School

Canadian Friends of Herzog Hospital-Ezrath Nashim

Cordially invite you to pay tribute to



DR. PAUL GARFINKEL, OC,
Former President and CEO of CAMH
and to establish

The Dr. Paul Garfinkel Mental Health Program for Israel's Immigrants at Sarah Herzog Hospital in Jerusalem

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 2nd, 2010 at 8:00pm

at a concert featuring

DAN HILL
also the
FRONTIER BRASS ENSEMBLE

Toronto Centre for the Performing Arts
5040 Yonge Street Toronto, Ontario
Refreshments ▼ Kashruth Observed
(416) 256-4222 herzoghosp@rogers.com

Greater Toronto Area

Singer's dream to come true at Massey Hall

BY VICKY TOBIANAH
Special to The CJN

After three decades of putting her talent aside to raise a family, Andrea Iscoe will fulfil her dream of performing on stage at Massey Hall.

She has booked the venue, and along with a slew of undiscovered Canadian entertainers, including Sarah Dylan and Jessica Saithe, will perform there for one night next month. The money raised from the concert will go to support the SOS Children's Villages.

Iscoe grew up in Toronto's Forest Hill neighbourhood and was always interested in the arts, and less so in school. She studied radio and television at Seneca College and later pursued a film degree at York University.

She always loved singing and met her husband at a bar where she was performing. After travelling in Europe and singing in bars there, Iscoe realized that being a singer was a lonely existence, especially without a band, and returned to Toronto, where she focused on raising a family. Thirty years later, she will return to the stage.

"I never had room for a musical career, although music continued to be important in my life," Iscoe says. "I used my music to help plan events and charities throughout my life, but I never really had time to sing. Suddenly, my kids were grown up and I thought, 'Wouldn't it be amazing if I could sing at Massey Hall?'"

Although friends and family didn't take her seriously, she was not deterred. Two years and many phone calls, e-mails and meetings later, her dream is about to become a reality. "So many things kept happening to me that led me to Massey Hall. My friend Judy Wingold Rosenberg came back into my life, and she was involved with a charity called SOS Children's Villages. She inspired me to fulfil my dream," says Iscoe.

Andrea Iscoe with Canadian Music Hall of Famer Duff Roman, who will MC the Nov. 17 event .

"I realized that if I wanted to sing at Massey Hall, there must be others like me in Canada. So my friend taught me how to put an ad on craigslist, and suddenly I was receiving audition tapes. I've been a musician long enough to know you can make anything sound good in a studio, so I needed to hear them live. And that's why I had to start clubbing."

Iscoe wanted a chance to fulfil her dream and to give others the chance to fulfil theirs as well. "I didn't want to look back later on and realize I never pursued what I wanted to do. I believe if you have a dream, you should stick to it."

The road to her dream was not easy. When Iscoe called Massey Hall and asked about renting the venue for a charity concert, people there thought she was crazy. "I had one person scream at me through the phone saying, 'You can't do this!' I thought to myself – no, you can't, but I can," Iscoe says.

While planning this event, her friend Wingold Rosenberg passed away. "When Judy passed away, it was so difficult," Iscoe says. "She was the impetus behind me."

The concert is dedicated to Wingold Rosenberg, who died of breast cancer last year, and to a family friend who died on the same date as the concert, Nov. 17.

"I don't regret putting my career aside while my kids were growing up. I want to show them that young dreams don't die just because you get old," Iscoe says. "If anything, they only become stronger. I didn't do this to get a career in music – I know I'm not going to be a rock star."

Iscoe's team is now made up of 75 people and includes Canadian Music Hall of Famer Duff Roman, a former CHUM-AM deejay, who will MC the retro-themed event at the hall called A Night at Massey Hall: Rockin' Out The Oldies.

"If this had been my kids' dream, I would've done anything to make it possible," Iscoe says. "So I thought why not fulfil my own dream as well, while also giving back to my community."

For tickets, visit www.masseyhall.com. E-mail anightatmasseyhall@gmail.com for more information.

SWISS ASSET PROTECTION
For Secure Banking and Investment
www.ashstreetmanagement.com
Ken H. Finkelstein, Attorney
250-507-6175

ROLEX • PATEK • CARTIER
DIAMONDS
BUY • SELL • TRADE
VAN RIJK • INSTANT CASH
440-1233 vanrijk.com

NER ISRAEL YESHIVA
250 Bathurst Glen Drive, Thornhill, Ont. L4J 8A7
Celebrating 50 Years of Torah Continuity
Provides for KADDISH SERVICES, OBSERVING YAHRZEIT and MEMORIAL PLAQUES
Please invest in the future. Remember Ner Israel in your will.
CALL 905-731-1224

CLASSIC CREATIONS
CELEBRATES THE ART OF FINE TIMEPIECES
Newtonbrook Plaza 5799 Yonge St. at Cummer Ave., Toronto, ON

THE CLASSIC CREATIONS WATCH CELEBRATION
You are invited to attend an exclusive event to view an outstanding collection of unique and rare watches, brought to you by world renowned watch manufacturers. Brand representatives will be on hand to provide valuable information and to answer all of your questions.
Join us and share your unabashed love of fine timepieces.
1 Day Only
THURSDAY, OCTOBER 21
10:00 AM – 8:00 PM
For more information contact
info@classiccreations.com or call 416.222.0405
www.classiccreations.com
BAUME & MERCIER GENEVE 1830 · BEDAT & Cº GENEVE · CONCORD
CORUM · EBEL · FRANC VILA · FREDERIQUE CONSTANT GENEVE
GUCCI · MONT BLANC · PERRELET · TechnoMarine GENEVE

ROBBINS HEBREW ACADEMY

Join us for our
OPEN HOUSE
to experience the special things that are happening at our school:

Bayview Campus
Tuesday, November 2
9:00 - 11:30am & 7:00pm
3080 Bayview Avenue

Bathurst Campus
Wednesday, Nov[illegible]
9:00 - 11:30am & 7:00pm
1700 Ba[illegible]

RSVP to [illegible]
mvinore[illegible]
416.224.[illegible]

Our Graduates have 21st Century Learning Power

www.rhacademy.ca

Humanitarian Aid Worker
Mary, SHA Kindergarten Student

'KOSHER' LABEL IN ADVERTISING

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency Guide to Food Labelling and Advertising reads as follows:

"In the labelling, packaging and advertising of a food, the Food and Drug Regulations prohibits the use of the word kosher or any letter of the Hebrew alphabet, or any other word, expression, depiction, sign, symbol, mark, device or other representation that indicates or that is likely to create an impression that the food is kosher, if the food does not meet the requirements of the Kashruth applicable to it.

The terms "kosher style" and "kind of kosher" are not allowed, unless they meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish-style food" or "Jewish cuisine" are not objected to, although the foods may not necessarily meet the requirements of the Kashruth.

Rationale: "Kosher style" is considered to create the impression that the food is kosher, and therefore the food must meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish style" food may not necessarily create this impression."

The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Jewish Life

Is the Internet Jewish?

Jewish & Digital
By Mark Mietkiewicz

When Rick Sanchez was recently fired from CNN for calling Jon Stewart a "bigot" and questioning whether Jews really were discriminated against since they controlled the media, there were predictable responses looking at how much power Jews do have in publishing, broadcasting and Hollywood. (According to Slate's reckoning, "Maybe the movies, but not the news." [http://bit.ly/jewishweb1])

But I was far more taken by a thoughtful piece by Liel Leibovitz in the online magazine Tablet. Reacting to similar claims that many Internet giants are Jewish, Leibovitz responds with a somewhat surprising, "They're not wrong." But he explains that "there is, of course, no Jewish cabal scheming behind the scenes to entice Muslims and others to join Facebook, use Google or consult Wikipedia. But a case could be made that the Internet, in its current iteration, commonly referred to as Web 2.0 – focused on applications that facilitate user interaction and collaboration – is governed by a logic that is inherently Jewish, a logic that has sustained the Jews as a community for millennia and that propelled a disproportionate number of them – Sergey Brin, Larry Ellison, Jimmy Wales, Mark Zuckerberg – to the helm of Web 2.0's most important companies." [http://bit.ly/jewishweb2]

In the book The Talmud and the Internet: A Journey Between Worlds, Jonathan Rosen writes, "I have often thought, contemplating a page of Talmud, that it bears a certain uncanny resemblance to a home page on the Internet, where nothing is whole in itself but where icons and text boxes are doorways through which visitors pass into an infinity of cross-referenced texts and conversations." [http://bit.ly/jewishweb3] (A couple of chapters of Rosen's book can be read online.)

People of the Book, People of the Link, is presented by Estee Solomon Gray at San Francisco's Contemporary Jewish Museum. The images are striking, often juxtaposing ancient and modern. [http://bit.ly/jewishweb5] I like how (on page 54 of this pdf) Gray lays out an article titled Two Jews, Three Blogs, in the form of a page of Talmud with the contents in the centre and annotation around the edges.

You can read a more legible version of that article by early blogger Esther Kustanowitz, who writes that "if the Talmud were being compiled today, instead of separate Babylonian and Jerusalem versions, we would likely have one big blog edition – a living document, constantly evolving through international, interdenominational discussion. No longer the private domain of rabbis and sages, this contemporary Talmud would be accessible to everyone." [http://bit.ly/jewishweb6]

Harvey Blume isn't convinced. Writing in the TheAtlantic.com, he suggests that "the seductive esthetic of Talmudic form should not obscure its point. The Talmud was no text-based interactive game, no recipe for an open-source religion. Its function was to regulate Judaism in the Diaspora, when it was no longer possible for Jews to discharge their religious obligations in a cult centred on a temple in Jerusalem. However labyrinthine its methods, the Talmud's rulings were binding." [http://bit.ly/jewishweb7]

Leibovitz concludes his article in Tablet by asking whether repressive regimes – or anyone – should fear the web and its Jewish personalities. "They know that the most radical thing about Brin, Zuckerberg, and the technologies they created, is that they encourage constant commentary, ongoing debate, endless involvement. It's a way of thinking that is… bad for oppressive corporations, zealous theocracies and anyone else wishing to exert complete control over information. But it is very good for the Jews."

Mark Mietkiewicz is a Toronto-based website producer who writes, lectures and teaches about the Jewish Internet. He can be contacted at highway@rogers.com.

When it's about more than service

CLASS ACT
By Daniel Held

Jewish service learning has grown by leaps and bounds. While the boom may have been sparked by the ongoing Jewish volunteer response to Hurricane Katrina, today, under the aegis of various Jewish organizations, immersive service programs for teenagers and college students seem endless. During school breaks, students can build a medical clinic in Africa, serve meals in a soup kitchen in Israel or teach in underprivileged schools in rural America.

The programs go beyond one-shot volunteer projects. Ranging from a week to a year, immersive experiences build a sense of community, teach about Jewish values to supplement the experiential learning and instil a sense of communal obligation.

In this column, I recount my own stories leading groups doing disaster relief in New Orleans, working with Ethiopian immigrants in Israel and building homes for the poor in rural Appalachia. As an educator, I believe these to be Jewishly exhilarating, impactful and educative experiences.

We must, however, acknowledge that service learning is not always about service. Last year, I travelled to a Mayan village in rural Mexico with a group of rabbinical students ostensibly to help build a textile workshop. Rabbis should not work in construction. In pursuit of economic development, our money and effort would have been better spent hiring locals to build the workshop.

Still, I offer three rationales for immersive Jewish service learning.

• The Jewish experience

When Hillel sends a group of students to New Orleans to gut homes, a primary goal is to create a uniquely Jewish experience. When a group of Jewish students volunteers together, learns Jewish texts relating to social justice and spends Shabbat together, the experience works its magic. Highlights of the trips I ran volunteering for Habitat for Humanity in West Virginia include kashering a kitchen, praying in the early morning mountain air, and engaging in interreligious dialogue with local church leaders.

• Institution building

Service learning trips are today's UJA Israel missions. Organizers hope to build a group of impassioned supporters who will return home and share their stories. When the rabbinical students returned from Mexico, each was expected to raise money for the sponsoring organization and to speak in synagogue about the trip. The trip is an investment in building a cadre of long-term donors and supporters. Like Birthright, Hillel hopes that taking students on alternative spring breaks is a way to engage them in year-round activities. I struggle with ethical challenges associated with these two goals. Are we strengthening Jewish identity on the back of hungry Africans or building a donor base by using illiterate children? Are we exploiting the needs of others as a means to an unrelated end? These dilemmas are mitigated by the goal of authentic service.

• Authentic service

Authentic service in aid of development must be both an immediate economic calculation and a long-term support-building exercise. After Katrina, labour was in such short supply that McDonalds hired staff for $15 an hour. In New Orleans, volunteers helped those who could not afford the inflated cost of contractors. In Mexico, our "service" often seemed futile. Viewing the exercise not as direct service but as an attempt to build long-term support for international development, we could contextualize why a group of rabbis were mixing cement as skilled and unemployed locals chuckled.

As service learning grows, we must balance these goals. As a Jewish educator, I place value on identity building and organizational development. As a social activist, I'm committed to serving those in need in an authentic and non-paternalistic way. Finding the balance between these goals will ensure that service learning meets both our own needs and those of the communities we seek to serve.

Jewish Life

Yiddish culture celebrated at Ottawa U

Yiddish culture is alive and well at the University of Ottawa.

Prof. Rebecca Margolis, an esteemed Yiddish scholar, is responsible for the Yiddish language, film and culture courses at the University of Ottawa. The courses she teaches are taken by Jewish students who are looking to further understand their roots and non-Jewish students who are interested in learning about various cultures and leaning different languages. Yiddish academia is growing in Ottawa, and it is predominantly due to these courses offered at the University of Ottawa.

On Campus
By Justin Dahan

Toba Cooper, an alumnus of Ottawa U, who partook of Yiddish learning during her school tenure, has created the Ethel Cooper Yiddish Studies Award of Excellence. The award is for a student who has immersed her or himself in the Yiddish language and culture.

Cooper named the award in honour of her mother, Ethel, in celebration of her mother's 60th birthday and to recognize her mother's lifelong commitment to Yiddish.

Ethel Cooper was born to Holocaust survivors in a Yiddish home, where she maintained pride in her culture and began to find ways to pass on the Yiddish culture.

Cooper's Yiddish-language career began with the YIVO Institute for Jewish Research, which is dedicated to the history and culture of Ashkenazi Jewry and its influence on the Americas.

Cooper has a teaching degree, and in the 1990s, she used that degree as a way to spread the Yiddish language. She taught Yiddish at the Bialik Hebrew Day School in Toronto and later at the Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto (now the Anne and Max Tanenbaum Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto). She was able to reach many students, and they acquired a love for the language and culture through poetry, songs and literature.

Cooper is the chairperson of the UJA Federation Committee for Yiddish, through which she has has worked to promote a vision of Yiddish as integral to the Jewish community at large.

The inaugural Ethel Cooper Yiddish Studies award ceremony took place on Oct. 17 at the Soloway Jewish Community Centre. The event began with two Yiddish musical performances: Musical Ebraica, a choir dedicated to performing Jewish music, and Shiru Lach, the Soloway JCC's resident choir. The two performances featured rare Yiddish music and were an exceptional way to kick off a night celebrating Yiddish.

The Ethel Cooper Yiddish Studies Award of Excellence was given to Danielle Lynch, a biomedical-sciences student. "I have enjoyed studying Yiddish so much because it is so inextricably linked to European Jewish history and culture," said Lynch.

Interest in the Yiddish language is growing in Ottawa, and with an award to celebrate the language in the Ottawa region, that interest will only continue to grow. Many Jewish students have a fond appreciation of their culture, and a big part of it is Yiddish culture – films, music and, of course, the spoken word.

People such as Toba Cooper and her mother are helping to promote the continued growth of interest in the Yiddish language, and the award is certainly a good show of support to Margolis, who has worked hard to ensure that the interest continues.

Help from the righteous

One of my most enduring childhood memories is of my grandmother, Rachel Abecassis, the mother of my mother.

My grandmother was truly a holy woman. She had no formal education – she didn't know how to read and spoke only Arabic – but she walked with God.

A vivid image of my grandmother waking up every morning, approaching the mezuzah and praying remains with me to this day. I even remember her words as she conversed with God, her Beloved.

Sephardi Window
By Rabbi Ilan Acoca

Memé prayed for her children and grandchildren – indeed, for her whole family. She prayed for the soldiers protecting Israel. Her prayer was powerful in its simplicity.

My grandmother is a treasure I grew up with and continue to cherish. Her memory continues to inspire me and reinforce my faith, with no room for despair.

I have asked myself time and again what the secret of this simple, heartfelt faith in God is. The only answer I come up with is the upbringing of her generation.

My grandmother's generation grew up with this faith, literally, from birth. It is something palpably innate in them, while I strive to acquire it.

Part of our ancestors' faith was emunat tzaddikim – faith in the righteous and saintly. I would often hear my grandmother pray in the merit of certain tzaddikim. She believed the tzaddikim were so close to God that they could pray on her behalf.

The concept of emunat tzaddikim originates in our Torah. After the Jewish Nation crossed the Red Sea, the Torah proclaims, the Israelites believed in God and His faithful servant, Moses, without reservation.

The Ibn Ezra (1093-1167) explains that, at this point, the Jews saw Moses as the vessel for the voice of God. The spiritual level of His servant was such that, after Moses' sister, the saintly Miriam, was afflicted with leprosy, Moses prayed on her behalf, and she was cured.

A tzaddik has the merit of being so close to God that if he asks for something of God, it's difficult for Him to refuse. We recall what King David wrote in Psalm 145: "He will fulfil the will of those who fear him and hear their cries and save them."

In Sephardi communities, there exists a custom called, in Arabic, zeyara, meaning "visiting." Zeyara is a widely held custom whereby individuals, and even whole communities, visit the gravesites of tzaddikim on the anniversaries of their deaths and beseech God in the merit of these saintly people. This is not a pagan tradition that transforms the tzaddikim into God. Rather, we pray to God in the merit of these tzaddikim.

My mother, born in the city of Mogador in Morocco, tells of witnessing miracles with her own eyes, wonders realized through prayer at the grave and in the merit of the revered Rabbi Chaim Pinto, of blessed memory, who is buried there. These miracles were an accepted fact for my mother and her generation.

I endeavour to uphold this tradition whenever I have the chance to be at the gravesite of a tzaddik or where a tzaddik lives, be he Ashkenazi, chassidic or Sephardi. I inevitably feel so refreshed, so moved, as if my soul becomes further infused with faith and purpose.

Whether at a graveside or in the company of a living tzaddik, or from afar through prayer and mitzvot, all of us can strive in our own lives for the very real help of our tzaddikim.

ECOFLEXTRA - Guaranteed Income for Life

- Guaranteed income for life - no matter how markets perform!
- Lock-in market growth with automatic tri-annual resets
- 5% Annual bonus up to 15 years
- Death Benefit Guarantee
- Tax efficient for non-registered accounts

KenStern
500-1867 Yonge St.
Toronto, ON M4S 1Y5
T: 416-545-5323 | www.kenstern.ca

IA Clarington Investments — IA Industrial Alliance

Provided no withdrawals are made, Industrial Alliance Insurance and Financial Services Inc. is the issuer of the ECOFLEXTRA Individual Variable Annuity Contract. Certain restrictions apply. The IA Clarington Funds and the IA Clarington Target Click Funds are managed by IA Clarington Investments Inc. IA Clarington is a trademark of IA Clarington Investments Inc. and the IA Clarington logo is a trademark of Industrial Alliance Insurance and Financial Services Inc. and are used under license. Sponsored in part by IA Clarington Investments Inc.

The Canadian Jewish Shmooze
Read the CJN's new blog!
http://canadianjewishnews.blogspot.com

ISRAEL 2010-2011

COMPARE APPLES to APPLES
The BEST Family Tours in North America!!!
Call us for Recent References
Bar/Bat Mitzvah Ceremony Included
All-inclusive deluxe hotels
• More days of sightseeing
• More meals
• A true family itinerary
www.israelfamilytours.com
or call Kathy ext. 345

WINTER SPECIAL 2010
BOOK NOW AND SAVE
SPACE VERY LIMITED
Dec. 16 - Dec. 30
Dec. 19 - Jan. 2/11
MARCH BREAK 2011
Mar. 9 - Mar. 20
PASSOVER 2011
April 16 - April 30
SUMMER 2011
Jun. 26 - Jul. 10
Jun. 3 - Jul. 17
Jun. 17 - Jul. 31
Jun. 24 - Aug. 7
Jun. 31 - Aug. 14
Aug. 14 - Aug. 28

FALL/WINTER TO TEL AVIV
FROM $726 +TAX

Community Mission
May 12 - 26 2011
If you've been to Israel before or you're a first timer...
THIS IS THE TOUR FOR YOU!!
Call Kathy ext. 345

PRIVATE CUSTOM TOURS
INNOVATIVE ITINERARIES & GREAT PRICES!
No one is more experienced than we are!
DON'T TRY TO DO IT ON YOUR OWN BOOK WITH US AND SAVE!
Call Ehud Ext. 322

Air Canada online
For more tours & to book visit:
www.peerlesstravel.com

BEST AIRFARE TO ISRAEL
Don't book with anyone else before talking to us first!

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES
YOUR FULL SERVICE TRAVEL AGENCY
905-886-5610
800-294-1663
info@peerlesstravel.com
7112 Bathurst St., Just N. of Steeles, Thornhill, ON L4J 0J6

THE CJN PARTY PLANNER DIRECTORY

CATERERS
Caterers York
Chapman's Catering
Ely's Fine Foods
L'echaim Catering
Lesley's Party Sandwiches & Catering
PR Creative Catering
Shopsy's

CONSULTANTS
Heidi Gruenspan
Mindless Sophistication
Tamara Temes Bragi & Party Consultant
Up & Coming Events

DECOR
David's Fine Linens

ENTERTAINMENT
Magen Boys Entertainment Ltd.
Mangell World
Superfly Entertainment
Swaye Entertainment

EVENT PLANNERS
A Wil
Chee

FAS
Beat
Crow
Legs
St. Ho
Tzatz

FLO
Fran

GIF
Gold
Israel

HEN
Little

INVITATIONS
Invitation House
Partyzazz Invitations

KETUBOT
Ketubah Ketubah

MUSIC
Ascension Groove
Brez Kofman Music For Every Occasion
Fern Lindzon Musical Entertainment
HU-TSA-TSA
Joe Star Band
Kenny Simon Hourglass Band, The
OneMoreTime

ONE STOP PARTY SHOP
Dynamite Parties and Novelties
Incredible Novelties Inc.

PHOTOGRAPHERS
Eric Benchimol Photography
Studio Twenty-Five

VIDEOS
D.M.S. Video Productions
Lisa Productions
Rafael Studios
Redstone Pictures
Twins Photo & Video
Video Productions By Josh

WEBSITES
www.TorontoPartyGuide.com

WHERE TO PARTY
Adath Israel Synagogue
Asian Legend
Atlantis Pavilions
Baycrest Hospitality Services
Bellvue Manor
Berkeley Heritage Venue, The
Bill's Pit North Steak and Seafood
Cantine Bistro and Bar
Copper Creek Golf Club

PLANNING A PAR
Want A Little Help?
WWW.CJNEWS.CO
click on the PARTY PLANNER DIRE Y
where you will find Live Links to Everything you Need to Make Your Party a Su

NIF rep advocates alternative

'Israel right or wrong' not the only choice

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Acknowledging Israel's challenges and flaws shouldn't mean that people are slotted into an "anti-Israel" camp, Rabbi David Rosenn said in Toronto recently.

The New York-based chief operating officer of the New Israel Fund (NIF) – who is was ordained by the Conservative movement's Jewish Theological Seminary and is the founder of AVODAH: The Jewish Service Corps – said that the organized Jewish community is risking "the relationship that people have with Israel, and their ability to have a nuanced relationship with Israel."

Speaking Oct. 6 at the Al Green Theatre in place of the NIF's CEO, Daniel Sokatch, who was unable to get to Toronto because of a medical emergency, Rabbi Rosenn said that some people – especially young people – "want to be supportive of Israel and find there isn't a way between 'Israel right or wrong' and 'Israel always wrong.'"

In the last six decades, Israel has come to play an "incredibly significant" role in the North American Jewish community, Rabbi Rosenn said. Support for Israel has been "strong, and in the centre.

"There's been a diversity of opinions on how to support and love and connect to Israel, but the official voices of the Jewish community have pretty much had a consistent message," he said.

The message, as Rabbi Rosenn conveyed it, is: "We've got to support Israel, right or wrong.'"

However, he pointed out, younger Jews grew up with an image of Israel as a Goliath rather than a David.

"It has been very difficult for people to find a way to ask questions, even if they think not everything Israel does is right," because they'll be labelled as anti-Israel, he said.

Rabbi Rosenn, who began working for the NIF six months ago, said the organization would like to provide an alternative by supporting efforts to work on social issues including poverty and protection of civil rights.

The NIF has partnerships with almost all the major universities in Israel and works with many government ministries, he said.

But, he noted, about 10 months ago, there was a billboard and newspaper ad campaign in Israel accusing the NIF of being anti-Israel. It claimed, he said, that 92 per cent of the material in the United Nations' Goldstone Commission report, which accused Israel of war crimes, was provided by NIF-funded groups. The claim turned out to be "completely false," Rabbi Rosenn said.

Rabbi David Rosenn

"The notion that human rights organizations doing what they should be doing – reporting, not concluding – is somehow a threat to the State of Israel, was really the message behind these ads," he added. "The New Israel Fund is very proud of its support for the human and civil rights sector in Israel."

He also noted that, in the wake of some of the human rights organizations' reports about last year's Gaza operation, the IDF has begun to change some of its policies. "The New Israel Fund sees it as core to the mission of the State of Israel to continue to reassert and re-entrench its commitments to democracy."

Prior to and following Rabbi Rosenn's talk, a protester handed out papers from NGO Monitor, accusing the NIF of claiming to love Israel, but giving millions of dollars to "groups that delegitimize it."

Rabbi Rosenn said both groups want the same thing – "an Israel that is strong and secure" – but that they disagree on how to attain it. He expressed regret that "people in the Jewish community can't do more to come to an understanding that we shouldn't attack the other on issues where we could actually find some common ground."

Rabbi Rosenn stressed that the NIF is "not going to support organizations that isolate and demonize Israel" and encouraged the audience to visit the organization's website and look at its principles.

Curb Your Enthusiasm's Jeff Garlin headlines UJA celebration

Tickets to October 27th event at Royal York Hotel are going fast

Curb Your Enthusiasm's Jeff Garlin

By Daniel Horowitz

"A Frenchman, an Irishman and a Jew are walking through the desert. The Frenchman says 'I'm so tired; I must have a glass of wine.' The Irishman says 'I'm so tired, I'm so thirsty, I must have a glass of beer'. The Jew says, 'I'm so tired, I'm so thirsty, I must have diabetes.'" The above is Jeff Garlin's favourite Jewish joke and just a sample what attendees of a special United Jewish Appeal 2011 Campaign event on Wednesday, October 27th, can expect. That's when, at Toronto's Fairmont Royal York Hotel at 7:30 pm, UJA presents Garlin, the Jewish 48-year-old co-star of HBO's Curb Your Enthusiasm, as the keynote speaker in a celebration of its 2011 Campaign.

UJA Campaign 2011 – chaired by Sherry Firestone and Jeff Rosenthal - has already raised more than $33 million toward its goal of over $66 million in the wake of threats to our children, our grandchildren and our way of life created by the global movement designed to delegitimize Israel as a Jewish state. Campaign 2011 dollars will continue to fund transformative change for Jews in need here in Toronto, in Israel and around the world. At the same time, dollars raised beyond last year's campaign total will support initiatives designed to instill a strong Jewish identity in our young, including a deeper connection to Israel. In the course of doing so, UJA will provide the next generation with the tools they need to successfully answer the challenges posed by those who attack the core of the Jewish people through their efforts against Israel.

In addition to Curb Your Enthusiasm, which launched its eighth season just last week, Garlin is a respected writer, producer, director and stand-up comic. He began his career in stand-up while at the University of Miami, before eventually dropping out, honing his comedic skills on the stage of Second City in Chicago. He was part of the cast of NBC's Mad About You and in the film Daddy Day Care with Eddie Murphy. His other film roles include the voice of The Captain in Disney Pixar's Wall-e, and as Buttercup the Unicorn in Toy Story 3.

"My background is that I always was the class clown," says Garlin, who plays the fictional Larry David's henpecked manager, Jeff Greene – and the perpetually scolded husband of Susie Essman - on the television show. "I went to Hebrew school, had a bar mitzvah, used to go to Temple with all the old Jewish men and then have lox and bagels. I married a Jewish girl; my boys will be bar mitzvahed, and I'm very proud and happy to be Jewish and I think that everything I do is naturally Jewish."

Regarding Curb Your Enthusiasm, and his role on the popular show, Garlin states: "Originally, I approached Larry David with the idea for the show, and my intent was to direct it, and not even be in it," he says. "He's the one that insisted that I play his manager and be an executive producer. It totally has changed my life, and I'm indebted to him forever, and every time I work on that show, not only am I lucky, I laugh my ass off and I have a great time. And it's probably the most fun I'll ever have as an actor, ever."

Garlin is a Chicago native whose father had a plumbing supply business and whose mother was active in community theatre. He also authored his first book this year titled "My Footprint: Carrying the Weight of the World," in which he describes a 10-month period spent testing every pound-shedding strategy imaginable: exercise regimens, 12-step programs, diets, workouts with Richard Simmons, saw him reduce his weight from a high of 320 pounds to 260.

For readers who regard him as a likeable, fun guy, Garlin expects that they will be surprised by the desperate, relentless side of himself presented in his book.

"I've always been the kind of unhappy person who didn't bring others down with him," he told The New York Times in an interview. "Even if you worked with me and spent time with me, you'd never know. I was the jolly fat man."

Even today, Garlin, who counts Richard Pryor as his all-time favourite comedian, and lists Jack Benny, Shelley Berman (who plays Larry David's dad on the HBO show), Woody Allen, Albert Brooks and George Carlin as other favourite comedic influences, still enjoys the company of "old Jews."

"Both my children went to Jewish nursery school, so I was at the Temple almost every day picking them up and dropping them off," he says. "Here's the thing – my Temple doesn't have this, but I would love to go to one where they have a big lox platter after the service on a Saturday morning. And I love being around old Jews. My great-grandparents lived in London and I went and saw where they lived and went and saw the oldest synagogue in London."

This event, chaired by Joel Feldberg and Leslie Salmons, is open to all community members who commit to making a gift to the current UJA Campaign 2011. Tickets are $30 and include a dessert reception.

To register, please call Michelle at 416.631.5685 or visit ujaevents.com/registration/JeffGarlin.

To make your Campaign gift, call 416.631.5700 or visit ujadonations.com

Garlin, with Curb's Larry David.

TBF

34th Annual
Toronto Jewish Book Fair
October 23 – 31, 2010
Beth David B'nai Israel Beth Am Synagogue
55 Yeomans Road

TORONTO JEWISH BOOK FAIR HIGHLIGHTS

BOOK FAIR OPENING NIGHT

Saturday, October 23

8 PM | $25
David Grossman

To the End of the Land is a major, internationally-bestselling novel of extraordinary power about the costs of war from one of Israel's greatest writers. Interviewed by author and journalist Noah Richler.

Sponsored by the SheFire Foundation and Hashkafah

Sunday, October 24

4 PM | $10
Martin Fletcher

NBC News Bureau Chief in Tel Aviv on Walking Israel – A Personal Search for the Soul of a Nation.

Sponsored by Canada-Israel Committee

Wednesday, October 27

8 PM | $10
Anna Porter

Anna Porter, one of Canada's most distinguished writers, returns to her European roots with The Ghosts of Europe – Journeys Through Central Europe's Troubled Past and Uncertain Future.

Sponsored by Canadian Jewish Congress

Thursday, October 28

1:30 PM | $5
Judie Oron

Judie Oron's new book, Cry of the Giraffe is based on the true story of Wudifu, her adopted daughter.

Sponsored by National Council of Jewish Women, Toronto Section

Saturday, October 30

8 PM | $10
Marek Halter

Marek Halter speaks on his new epic The Jewish Odyssey, the far-reaching story of a people who, despite facing perpetual struggle, have shaped modern civilization.

Sponsored by Na'amat Canada

Sunday, October 31

8 PM | $10
Tarek Fatah

Journalist, political advocate, and the founder of the liberal Muslim organization Muslim Canadian Congress, Tarek Fatah speaks on his new book, The Jew is Not My Enemy: Unveiling the Myths that Fuel Muslim Anti-Semitism.

Sponsored by Or Shalom Congregation for Humanistic Judaism

PLUS:
K. David Brody | Simcha Simchovitch | Judith Finer Freedman | Aubrey Davis | Gabrielle Israelievitch Parchment | David Weiss | George Gilder | Merle Nudelman | Walter Pitman | Harold Troper Lynda Fishman | Bill Gladstone | Gregory Levey | Gerald Ziedenberg | Kate Taylor Frieda Johles Forman | Sarah Taieb-Carlen | Kitty Wintrob | Elan Divon | Larry Rodness Savyon Liebrecht | Joseph Kertes | Michael Posner | Jewish Fiction.net | Kathy Kacer | Anne Dublin

Full event details and Book Fair schedule: www.kofflerarts.org

TICKETS
- On sale Monday – Thursday: 10 AM – 4 PM | 416.638.1881 x4281 or hredner@kofflerarts.org

Tickets at $10 and $25 can be ordered by phone or e-mail and will be held at Beth David Synagogue. Tickets at $5 can only be purchased at Beth David Synagogue one hour before the programs.

HOURS
Saturdays, October 23 and 30: 7 – 10 PM | Sundays, October 24 and 31: 10 AM – 10 PM
Monday – Thursday, October 25 – 28: 10 AM – 4 PM & 6:30 – 10 PM | Friday, October 29: 10 AM – 1 PM

Programs are subject to change. No refunds on tickets or books.
Entrance to the Toronto Jewish Book Fair is FREE.

BE A FRIEND – MAKE A CONTRIBUTION!
Helen Redner, Director, Toronto Jewish Book Fair | 416.638.1881 x4281 | hredner@kofflerarts.org

koffler centre of the arts

CULTURAL SEASON SPONSOR: CBC Wood Gundy
PRINT MEDIA PARTNER: National Post
Arts. Culture. Heritage.
POWERED BY: UJA Federation

4588 Bathurst Street | 416.638.1881 | info@kofflerarts.org | www.kofflerarts.org

Greater Toronto Area

APPLE CRUMBLE SALE: Max Collie, left, Josh Hendel, centre and Jonny Micay were among middle school students at Leo Baeck Day School's south campus (in Holy Blossom Temple) who opened their ovens recently for the much-anticipated Annual Apple Crumble Event. With the help of more than 200 capable hands – washing, peeling, stuffing and wrapping – students raised more than $1,000 for Mazon Canada.

HOW SWEET IT IS: At right, senior kindergarten student Shayna and her mother, Yael Katzman, enjoy the fruits of their labour while picking apples during Netivot HaTorah Day School's annual preschool apple picking trip.

[Rebecca Ansel photo]

GIMME SHELTER: Below, grade 6 students at Bialik Hebrew Day School collaborated to build a shelter as part of a range of team-building activities and survival skills they learned at a recent retreat at Camp George. Pictured, from left, are Anna Nabutovksy, Jacob Tobin, Naama Nefech-Mozes, Sarah Eisen, Dylan Wagman, and Danielle Clasky.

Rae plans to visit Mideast later this month

Continued from page 3

The former NDP premier of Ontario, Rae plans to visit the Mideast later this month, stopping in Israel, the Palestinian areas in the West Bank, Jordan and Egypt. By his count, it will be his 10th visit to Israel since the early 1990s.

Speaking in his constituency office in Cabbagetown, Rae, an advocate of a two-state solution, took questions on a wide variety of Middle Eastern problems.

Taking issue with the perception that Prime Minister Stephen Harper's government has been more pro-Israel than previous Canadian governments, he said, "I don't think that's true. No party has a monopoly on its commitment to Israel's security within recognized international borders."

Rae, claiming that Harper's foreign policy is based too much on "partisan advantage," said he has failed to recognize that Canada has a national interest in defusing the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Professing to be unconcerned about the perception that Jews in Canada have begun to rethink their traditional support of the Liberal party, Rae suggested that Canada's relationship with Israel is not the only issue on their agenda.

"All voters, regardless of background, will vote on the basis of various issues. It's an oversimplification that there is only one issue."

"We, as a national party, have to appeal to the whole electorate," he noted.

The Liberal party, Rae went on to say, has "a long-standing connection" with the Jewish community and hews to a "principled" position that takes Israel's security needs into account.

He downplayed media speculation that Canada's failure to win a non-permanent seat on the United Nation's Security Council last week was partially a function of its increasingly unflinching pro-Israel stance.

"Not really," he said. "Canada has always consistently supported Israel."

His own personal support for Israel, he observed, hinges on his understanding of its need for peace and security.

Asked whether he has policy differences with Israel's current right-of-centre government, Rae replied, "It's not a personal issue. Canada has taken a consistent position since 1967. We don't regard settlement activity [in the territories] as conducive to peace. Nor does it advance the cause of Israel's security."

Advocates two-state solution

A peace agreement between Israel and the Palestinians should include two major provisions – mutually recognized borders and self-determination for the Palestinians.

As he put it, "There has to be a recognition of borders and boundaries and of the legitimate aspirations of the Palestinian people to have a country of their own."

Coming out in favour of an extension of Israel's partial moratorium on construction in the West Bank, Rae said, "It was a statesman-like gesture, and something like it again would be helpful to get the parties back to the negotiating table. Getting back to the table is important."

Sizing up Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's commitment to peace, Rae said, "He is sincere about wanting peace. He has a keen sense of Israel's long-term security interests."

Rae said he hopes to meet Netanyahu when he travels to Israel at the end of this month.

Asked for his appraisal of Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas, whom he has met, he said, "He's committed to mutual recognition, a two-state solution and negotiations. He's a man who has to be talked to."

When he was asked whether Israel should withdraw to the pre-1967 lines to achieve peace with the Palestinians, Rae said this pivotal issue should be settled in bilateral talks, adding that border adjustments should be the outcome of mutual agreement.

Likewise, he said, Israel's demand for Palestinian recognition of its status as a Jewish state should be hammered out in talks.

Rae would not be drawn into a discussion on whether Israel, as claimed by the United Nations' Goldstone commission, committed war crimes during its invasion of the Gaza Strip last year. "Goldstone's report is not determinative of that issue, and I'll leave it at that."

He was also careful in answering a question about allegations that Israel used disproportionate force in the Gaza war.

"Israel's motivations in entering Gaza were based on a profound sense that attacks from bases in Gaza were continuing," he said in a reference to Palestinian rocket barrages. "Those motivations are completely understandable."

What has to be assessed, he said, is what impact Israel's military response had on Gaza's civilian population.

As for Israel's siege of Gaza, Rae offered a two-pronged answer. "The human needs of Gaza have to be recognized and conditions in Gaza have to be improved, as they have been. But it's entirely legitimate that Israel is concerned about its security."

Rae suggested that Hamas – which has been in control of Gaza since June 2007 – cannot be part of any peace process unless it recognizes Israel's existence and disavows violence.

MaRS Innovation
SUMMIT 2010
OCTOBER 28, 2010 | MaRS Discovery District, Toronto, Canada

Organized by
MaRS Innovation
The Toronto Institute of Public Policy (TTIPP)
MaRS Discovery District
Yissum – Technology Transfer Office,
Hebrew University, Jerusalem

CREATING JOBS IN THE KNOWLEDGE ECONOMY

For our inaugural MaRS Innovation Summit, we'll examine successful start-ups and the support needed--financial and otherwise--for such enterprises to take flight. Network with industry innovators, dynamic entrepreneurs and thought leaders from Canada, Israel and the United States. We will examine aspects of economic growth in tangible terms from many perspectives so that we can share and advance our collective objectives.

Who should attend? Those interested in growing the knowledge economy in our region. Our audience will include leaders and entrepreneurs on the front-lines and those behind the scenes as investors, innovators, deal-makers, deal-brokers and agents of change.

Program:
MaRS Innovation Summit 2010 - 8:30 AM - 5:00 PM
Networking Reception - 5:00 PM - 6:30 PM
MaRS Summit Dinner - 6:30 PM – 10:00 PM

Location: MaRS Discovery District, 101 College Street, Toronto, Canada

Ticket Prices: $299 + HST (Full Program including Breakfast Reception, Lunch & Dinner)
Tickets for the Day Program and Evening Program can be purchased separately.*

conference hosts:
Dr. Raphael Hofstein, PhD, MaRS Innovation
Senator Jerry Grafstein, QC, The Toronto Institute of Public Policy with special presentations by
Gordon Nixon, Royal Bank of Canada
John Kunschner, Landmark Ventures
Dr. Michael S. Perry
Bay City Capital; Poniard Pharmaceuticals
The Hon. Glenn Murray,
Ministry of Research and Innovation, Province of Ontario panel discussions with
Loudon Owen, McLean Watson Capital
Jane Harvey, Jane Harvey Lawyers
Don Green, Roots
Peter van der Grintan, dbMotion
Ram Liebenthal, Early Sense: Innovation Patient Technology
Paul Chipperton, Profound Medical Inc
Yigal Erlich, Yozma Ventures
Nissim Darvish, Orbimed (Israel)
Yaakov Michlin, Yissum, Hebrew University
Jonathan Levy, Government of Israel, Economic Mission to Canada
Dr. Ted Sargent, Xagenic
Michael Kraft, Lingo Media
Amar Varma, Xtreme Labs, Xtreme Venture Partners
S. Morry Blumenfeld, MediTechPartners (Israel/US)
John Varghese, VentureLink Group of Funds (Toronto)
Mark Usher, Partner, Wellington Financial LP (Toronto)

www.marsinnovationsummit.com

The security of a GIC.
A 7.25%* rate of return.

Yes, really.

Suitable for ages 60-80
Minimum investment $50,000.
Certain conditions apply.

*Rate based on a 70 year old male

GIC Call for details. 416.787.1366

THE TORONTO PARTNERSHIP MINYAN

Join us for
Scholar-in-Residence
Judy Klitsner
Senior Faculty Member of Pardes Institute
Founding Member of Shira Hadasha

She will present two programs on her recently published book:
Subversive Sequels in the Bible,
How Biblical Stories Mine and Undermine Each Other

October 28 - 8:00 PM Baycrest Terrace, 55 Ameer Avenue
Suggested donation: $18.00 - or - $45.00 to include signed copy of book

October 30 - 9:00 AM TPM South Shabbat Morning Minyan
Beit Habonim - 5 Glen Park Avenue (near Bathurst)
Judy Klitsner will give the shiur at 9:00, followed by davening at 9:30.

www.TorontoPartnershipMinyan.com

PRIPSTEIN'S CAMP
all your favourite landsport, waterfront, and creative activities
skate into summer at our amazing Ice Palace!
Just 25 hours from downtown Toronto!

PARENTS: upset about the new HST? Check out our special promotion (campers in grades 1-5), with savings of over $500! OCA
www.mishmar.com 1-866-481-1875

Greater Toronto Area

Ignatieff clarifies Liberal stand on Israel

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

The Liberal Party "stands shoulder-to-shoulder with the democratic state of Israel. End of story."

That was the first message Liberal party leader Michael Ignatieff told an audience at Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue in Toronto last week.

As part of his ongoing "Open Mike" town hall discussions, Ignatieff also responded to a question about an Oct. 7 blog post made by a Liberal candidate in the riding of Toronto-Danforth, Andrew Lang, that criticized Canada's current policies on Israel, saying they're too "sycophantic" and that the country should stop "placating" Israel.

Ignatieff said Lang's comments don't reflect his party's position on Israel and that he was "caught by surprise" by them. "We've told [Lang] you're not speaking for the Liberal party and what we think about the necessity for our party to stand by Israel."

Ignatieff also said Canada's failure last week to attain a seat on the UN Security Council was "a sad day for Canada." He noted that while he doesn't believe the UN "is perfect," the country has lost a chance to get involved to make it a better institution.

Additionally, he said he realizes that Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad is the current "incarnation of Holocaust denial. I can't be in the room when that man's talking. Is that clear? Nor, were I... your prime minister, would I authorize any [government official] to be in the room."

Ignatieff said the Jewish community should have no doubt that a Liberal government he led would continue to "stand against a regime that stands against everything that right-thinking Canadians represent."

The Liberal leader also took questions on fighting AIDS in Africa, making post-secondary education more affordable, strengthening First Nations communities, and fiscal responsibility to preserve social programming such as welfare and pensions, among others.

Ignatieff was joined at the event by other high-profile Liberals, including MPs Joe Volpe, Judy Sgro, Ken Dryden, Rob Oliphant and former justice minister and renowned human rights advocate Irwin Cotler, who flew in from Montreal to attend.

State of Israel Bonds Canada
Buy. Build. Believe.

Sunday hours
Sundays: October 17, 24, 31
November 7, 2010
Time: 10:00am until 3:00pm

STATE OF ISRAEL BONDS /CANADA-ISRAEL SECURITIES, LIMITED
970 Lawrence Avenue West, Suite 502, Toronto, ON M6A 3B6
T: 416.789.3351 Toll Free 1.800.771.9301
F: 416.789.9436 E: toronto@israelbonds.ca
BuyBuildBelieve.ca

Have you seen it yet?
www.cjnews.com

FAMILY MOMENTS

Mazel Tov

The Canadian Jewish news

Only paid Family Moments announcements can be guaranteed to appear in a specific issue, when received by deadline, 10 days prior to publication date. All other items will appear on a first-come, first-served basis, as space allows.

Mazel tov announcements featured on onlysimchas.com will appear as space permits.

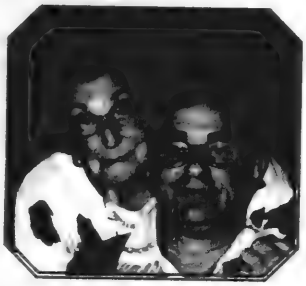
SEND US YOUR PHOTOS!!

Label the back of all photos and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for return. Please keep all announcements to 25 words, maximum.

To send in digital photos, please visit

www.cjnews.com

and click the Family Moments banner at the top.



Happy 60th anniversary to Faina & Max Sitzer from your children, grandchildren, family and friends. Mazel tov on this tremendous milestone in your lives.

Mazel tov Marisa Perfetti & Jeffrey Baum on their engagement. Parents, Shirley & Louis Baum, Gabriele & Rita Perfetti. Brothers, Dave and Brian Baum. Zaidie, Kalman Baum.

David, Ayala, Sammy & Ellie Socol announce the birth of Naya & Ezra in California. Grandparents, Verna Erez, Elaine & Harvey Socol. Great-grandfather Albert Socol.

Boris, Lori and big brother Gabriel are thrilled to announce the arrival of Jayme Mikayla. Excited grandparents, Jack Donsky, Marla Hebscher and Alex & Lily Rabinovitch.

Happy first birthday Sophie! Love, Mommy, Daddy, Bubbie Alydia, Bubbie Janet, Zaide Irwin and Zaide Raphael. We love you so much.

Debbie & Frank Myers and Janet & Tony Mills are thrilled to announce the engagement of Andrew & Danielle.

REGENCY INTERIORS 2000 INC.

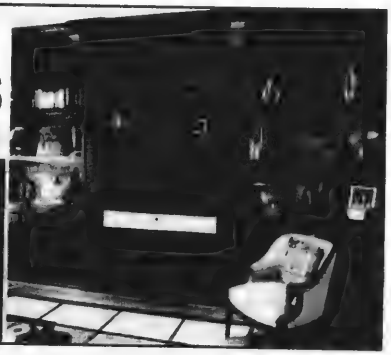
MANUFACTURERS OF CUSTOM FINE FURNITURE

T: (416) 661-9100

sal@regencyinteriors.info

kitchens bedrooms bathrooms living rooms dining rooms

www.regencyinteriors.info



JNF
Say it with Trees
"In Loving Memory"
JEWISH NATIONAL FUND
416-638-7200

What's New

By LAURA STRICKER

Weather: Ft. Lauderdale, Florida
TRAVEL INSURANCE
• Snowbirds
• Visitors to Canada
• Trip Cancellation
25% OFF LIMO VOUCHER TO TORONTO PEARSON AIRPORT WITH PURCHASE
416-636-3575
or email alana@travel-secure.com
Travel Secure

Deadline for Nov. 4 is Oct. 25. Deadline for Nov. 11 is Nov. 1. Phone 416-391-1836. Fax 416-391-0829. E-mail cjnwhatsnew@gmail.com.

Thursday, Oct. 21

CONVERSION BILL

The conversion bill being debated in Israel will be discussed by Howard English at an Association of Jewish Seniors-sponsored meeting. 10 a.m. Shaarei Shomayim. Members free, guests $2. Tammy, 416-635-2860.

FOOL FESTIVAL

Festival of Oral Literatures (FOOL) includes Hilary Peach, Laura Simms, Alan Shain, Éric Gauthier, Regina Machado and many more storytellers, poets and theatre artists. www.foolfestival.ca, to Oct. 24.

Friday, Oct. 22

SHABBAT SERVICE

Join Beth Emeth for Shabbat services every other Friday with Rabbi Leslie Lipson. 6:15 p.m. at Garnet Williams Community Centre. www.bebv.org for service times.

Saturday, Oct. 23

TORAH STUDY

Beth Tikvah Torah class. Saturdays to December. This week, Abe Birenbaum does parshah Vayera. 9:45-10:45 a.m.

YES I CAN ALUMNI

Current and past attendees of Yes I Can nursery school are invited to a special reunion. 12-3 p.m. 100 Ranleigh Ave. RSVP reunion@yesicannurseryschool.com

SHABBAT LECTURE

"Young Jews, Zionism and the 'Failure' of the Jewish Establishment." Insights and opinions on the future of the Diaspora Jewish community and its relationship with Israel. Includes a discussion of writer Peter Beinart's challenges to the American Jewish establishment with Stephen McDonald, Rabbi Jared Grover and Adam Eilath. At Beth Tikvah after kiddush.

YIDDISH FILM NIGHT

Unzere Kinder (Our Children) screening. $5 suggested. 7:45 p.m. Kehillat Shaarei Torah.

Sunday, Oct. 24

GLOBAL JEWISH VILLAGE

Rabbi Bonita Sussman and Rabbi Gerald Sussman discuss their visit to the Bene Ephraim community of Kotha Reddy Palem, India, in 2007. Darchei Noam. 7 p.m.

HEALTH AND WELLNESS

Beth Emeth presents Breakfast and Briyut. 9:30 a.m. With Stephanie Bergman, audiologist, on "It's Never Too Early to Check Our Hearing." $12. 416-633-3838.

RCMP EXPERIENCE

Shaar Shalom Singles presents Fran Salzman, the first Jewish female RCMP officer: "One Woman's Experience in the RCMP." 7:30 p.m. Shaar Shalom Synagogue. $6, includes coffee and cake.

Monday, Oct. 25

CONJOINED TWINS

Temple Emanu-El's lecture series continues. "Conjoined (Siamese) Twins and the Challenges That They Present," with Robert Filler, former surgeon-in-chief at the Hospital for Sick Children. 2-4 p.m. $10. 416-449-3880.

Tuesday, Oct. 26

LUNCH & LEARN

"The Mid-Term U.S. Elections, The Blue/Red Divide." With Ronald Prussen, history professor at U of T. With Obama's falling approval ratings and the stagnation of the economy, what does the future hold? By reservation only. Beth Tikvah at 12:15 p.m. helen@bethtikvah.on.ca or 416-221-3433, ext. 352.

Continued on page 29

Reena FOUNDATION
WOMEN OF Strength SPEAKER'S SERIES

Please join us to hear Emmy® award-winning talk show host of "The View" comedienne and actress

Sherri Shepherd

Committee

Danielle Goose, Co-Chair
Heather Goose, Co-Chair
Mary Bien
Melissa Bien
Jasmine Eliav
Vera Eliav
Marsha Fenwick
Rachel Greenspoon
Barbara Henechowicz
Susan Klein
Malka Rosenbaum
Shelley Rabie
Kathy Samuel
Sheri Schwartzberg
Julie Steiner
Brenda Weshler

Friday November 12, 2010
Spirale Banquet Hall,
888 Don Mills Road, Toronto
Breakfast 9:15 am, Speaker 10:30 am SHARP

Tickets $75 per person. To order contact Jessica Kassabian 905-764-1081 x 34

I AM 85 AND FEEL MORE IN CONTROL THAN EVER.

Deciding where you live next—and when to move—should be your choice. So maybe now's the best time to choose a community that has all you need for tomorrow. Like your own beautiful apartment in a cheerful and warm environment. Where you can spend your time at wonderful activities instead of maintaining your home. And where a range of quality, professional care is available, should you ever need it. Come see for yourself.

We are filling fast. Hurry in for your personal tour. Call Marsha, Ann Marie or Rhona today at 905-731-4300.

THORNE MILL ON STEELES
A SUNRISE SENIOR LIVING COMMUNITY

484 Steeles Ave. W
(between Yonge and Bathurst)
Thornhill, ON L4J 0C7
905-731-4300
www.thornemillonsteeles.ca

INDEPENDENT LIVING
Assisted Living • Memory Care

What's New

Continued from page 28

WINTER BLUES

Beat the winter blues by learning to recognize symptoms of seasonal affective disorder, dysthymia and depression. 1:30 p.m. Beth Tzedec. Free, registration required. 416-781-3514 ext. 225.

Wednesday, Oct. 27

INTER-GENERATIONAL JAZZ

Jazz for Juniors and Spirited Seniors, at Baycrest, Winter Garden Court. 7-8 p.m. Meet your neighbours by enjoying jazz together.

FACING LOSS

Jewish Family & Child's Bereaved Jewish Families of Ontario invites the public to "Encountering Loss and Healing in Jewish literature." With Rabbi Tina Grimberg. Congregation Darchei Noam. 7:30 p.m. 416-638-7800 ext. 6202.

Other News

TAREK FATAH SPEAKS

Oryanu Congregation for Humanistic Judaism presents Tarek Fatah at the Jewish Book Fair, on his book The Jew Is Not My Enemy: Unveiling Myths That Fuel Muslim Anti-Semitism. Beth David. Oct. 31, 8 p.m. $10. 416-638-1881 ext. 4281.

BEETHOVEN PROGRAM

Performance of an all-Beethoven program by concert pianist Stewart Goodyear. Nov. 28, 3 p.m. Royal Conservatory of Music, Koerner Hall. $40, includes transportation from Temple Sinai. Book early at 416-487-3281.

REFUSENIK

Screening of Refusenik, which chronicles the three-decade-long movement to free Soviet Jewry. Introduced via video by Natan Sharansky. Oct. 28, 8 p.m. $5 at the door. Beth Tikvah.

'FABULOUS FABERGÉ EGGS'

Shalom Branch of National Council of Jewish Women of Canada presents Corey Keeble, curator of decorative arts at the ROM: "Fabulous Fabergé Eggs and Greatest Goldsmiths in the World." Oct. 28, 7:30 p.m. Council House, 4700 Bathurst St. Members free, guests $5. Register: 416-633-5100.

MELTON MINI SCHOOL

Still space left in Melton Adult Mini School's Rhythms of Jewish Living and Purposes of Jewish Living. 416-789-7400.

MOSHE RONEN SPEAKS

Shabbat service with address by Moshe Ronen, national chair of the Canada-Israel Committee. Panel discussion with Soviet Jewry activists after kiddush. Beth Tikvah. Oct. 30.

FRANK BIALYSTOK SPEAKS

Join Solel Congregation of Mississauga for Shabbat services on Oct. 29, 8 p.m. to observe Kristallnacht with Holocaust education speaker Frank Bialystok, chair, Ontario region, CJC. RSVP: 905-820-5915.

'ZION: HOME OR HARM'

"Zion: Home or Harm to the Jews?" with Rabbi Daniel Gordis and writer Peter Beinart. Oct. 28, 8 p.m. Holy Blossom Temple.

BOWLERS WELCOME

Friendly, non-competitive 10-pin bowling (two games) for adults 60+ each Tuesday. Starts 1 p.m. Playtime Bowl, 33 Samor Rd., North York. Gerry: 416-633-7594.

STAINED GLASS VOLUNTEER

Are you interested in teaching seniors the art of stained glass? Baycrest's volunteer services department is looking for a stained glass instructor interested in working with beginner clients. If you are available weekdays, contact 416-785-2500, ext. 2572.

PAUL PENNA OPEN HOUSE

Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School is holding an open house for senior kindergarten to grade 6. Oct. 27, 7:30 p.m. 750 Spadina Ave. RSVP: Judy, 416-928-3537 ext. 135.

EINSTEIN'S GIFT

Medina Theatre Ensemble presents as a Holocaust remembrance a staged reading of Einstein's Gift. Nov. 2, 7:30 p.m. Temple Sinai. Free. Lois, 416-781-8076 or Morris, 416-785-0344.

READ HEBREW

Beth Emeth's crash course in reading Hebrew. For those with no knowledge of Hebrew. All welcome. Free. Register at 416-633-3838.

JF&CS GROUPS

Call Shawna Sidney, 416-638-7800, ext. 6215, or visit jfandcs.com. Registration required.

Adult Children Losing a Parent: 6-session group for adult children who have recently lost a parent. Oct. 26, 7:30-9 p.m. Lipa Green Building.

For Men After Divorce: 6-week group for men experiencing separation or divorce. Oct. 27, 7:30-9 p.m. Lipa Green.

Moods, Moods, Moods – The Link Between Anxiety, Depression and Learning Disabilities in Children: Workshop with Annabelle Fell, for parents and professionals. Oct. 27, 7-9 p.m. Lipa Green.

My Nest Is Empty! Now What?: New workshop for parents whose children have recently gone off to college or university. Oct. 28, 7-9 p.m. Lipa Green, LL #9.

FOR SENIORS

Adath Israel Congregation. Wednesday social afternoons. Bridge, mah-jong, Rummikub, refreshments. $2. Everyone welcome. Pearl, 416-635-6317, or Marcia, 416-932-1229.

Active Seniors Miles Nadal JCC. Harold Troper presents illustrated talk, "Jewish Toronto: Portrait of a Jewish Past." Oct. 28, 1:30 p.m.

Connecting the generations brings together students and seniors. Kosher lunches, guided visit to Royal Ontario Museum and more.

Earl Bales Seniors Club in the Park, 416-395-7881. Casino Rama Nov. 17, departs 10 a.m. $5 per person, $15 cash back. Sunday dance Oct. 24, 7-9 p.m. Line dancing Thursdays, 10-11:30 a.m. $35 for 10 weeks. Social bridge Thursdays, 12:30-3 p.m. Canasta Tuesdays and Thursdays, 12-3 p.m. Seniors woodworking, 416-630-6487.

Bernard Betel Centre, 1003 Steeles Ave. W., 416-225-2112.

Holocaust Education Week program: "Holocaust by Bullets – My Personal Testimony," with Alex Levin. Nov. 3, 1-3 p.m.

Lecture: "An Introduction to Yiddish Theatre Before 1880: Part 2," with Prof. Myra Fooden. Oct. 26, 10-11:30 a.m. $3 members, $6 guests.

Arthritis Self-Management Program: Play a more active role in reducing the impact of arthritis on your life. Oct. 26-Nov. 30, 1-3 p.m. $20 members, $35 guests. Register with Mary, 416-979-7228 ext. 657.

PROSSERMAN JCC

Sherman Campus, 4588 Bathurst St. 416-638-1881, www.prossermanjcc.com.

Chef Margie Arosh shares her favourite Spanish Moroccan dishes. Oct. 21. $50 members, $70 guests. Ext. 4325 to register.

Daycare and preschool open house. Oct. 27 and 29, 9:30-11:30. Ext. 4351.

Professional Retirees Organization with Ben Schlesinger, discussing the "Modern (Jewish) Family." Oct. 27, 12-1 p.m. Round table meeting, 1-2 p.m. New participants welcome. Janet, ext. 4259.

Register for beginner bridge classes, Nov. 3-Dec. 22. 10 a.m.-12 p.m. $45 members, $60 guests.

"Kabbalah: An Introductory Course," with Rabbi Mordechai Torczyner. Call for information.

Nov. 21, 2-4:30. Official launch of Mind, Body and Soul seminar series. "Raising and Sustaining Healthy Families," with Joe Rich, Rabbi Elyse Goldstein and Dr. Ariel Dalfen. Lipa Green Building. Natalie, ext. 4036.

Celebrate Shabbat with Prosserman. Free drop-in program of Shabbat songs, stories and activities. Nov. 6, 1-5 p.m.

Half the Kingdom: The Next Generation: It has been 20 years since "Half the Kingdom" came out. It had the first footage of Women of the Wall and introduced the normalcy of baby namings. 20 years later, we ask, what's next? $36, seniors and students $20. Nov. 30.

MILES NADAL JCC

750 Spadina Ave., 416-924-6211, www.mnjcc.org.

Michael Bernstein Chapel services Sundays 8 a.m. and Thursdays 7:15 a.m. Kosher breakfast follows. Coleman Bernstein, 416-968-0200.

Between Stages Play Reading. Oct. 24, 2 p.m. 2009 Canadian Jewish Playwriting Competition winner: Martyrs Street by Misha Shulman, directed by Chris Abraham. $9 at door. esthera@mnjcc.org, ext. 606.

Renee Barda: Life Begins Again! With Dorothy Krizmanic, Gideon Wilk and John Lettieri. Barda performs Gershwin, Cole Porter and more. Dec. 11, 7:30 p.m. Al Green Theatre. $22, $18 group (10 or more). Ext. 0.

Media Monday (Oct. 25, Nov. 1, Nov. 8). "The Cinema of Israel" with film critic Shlomo Schwartzberg. Oct. 25: "Social Portraits of Israeli Society," 7-9 p.m. $12. Ext. 606.

Jacobs Lounge Visual Arts Space. Dogs, paintings by Julie Glick. To Nov. 21.

imagineNATIVE Film + Media Arts Festival. Celebration of indigenous-made works on the forefront of innovation in film, video, radio and new media. Oct. 21-24. At Al Green Theatre, Miles Nadal JCC, Bloor Cinema and Lee's Palace. www.imagenative.org.

Small Group Training: Small group training includes kettlebells, specific strength training for women, equalizer strength training and bootcamp. Team work, challenge, individual attention. $120 members or $180 non-members for 4 sessions. mnjcc.org for start dates and times.

What's New is now online, for subscribers only. You can find it at cjnews.com

SINGLES EVENTS CAN BE FOUND ON PAGE 34

Hamilton Beach
850 Watt Wide Mouth
Family Size Juice Extractor
Enjoy The Flavour and Nutrients of a Wide Variety of Fresh Produce. Fits Whole Foods for Fast, Easy Juicing. Dishwasher Safe Parts.
Lowest Price In Ontario
69.99
Compare at 129.99
Full Money-Back Refund Policy!
Always 1st Quality!
Pay Cash 2% OFF Your Total Purchase
Cayne's
The SUPER HOUSEWARE Store
112 DONCASTER, Thornhill, Ont.
One Traffic Light North of Steeles Ave. East of Yonge St.
905-764-1188
Mon-Fri 9-9
Sat+Sun 10-6
Shop Online at www.cayneshousewares.com

OBITUARIES
and Related Notices

BENJAMIN'S PARK MEMORIAL CHAPEL

Lily Finkelstein	Sep 27/10	9800 Yonge St
Ida Weisfeld	Sep 27/10	541 Finch Ave W
Stuart Dean	Sep 26/10	34 Hillholm Blvd
Frank Frankfurter	Sep 27/10	115 Antibes Dr
Milton Johnson	Sep 27/10	2 Sunrise St
Shirley Vernon	Sep 27/10	55 Ameer Ave
Harold Brown	Sep 27/10	8 Sheila Cr
Robert Cook	Oct 2/10	350 Lonsdale Rd
Toby Steinberg	Sep 30/10	277 Brighton Ave
Sharon Haas	Sep 30/10	10 Wellesbourne Cr
Maurice Kerbel	Oct 2/10	2 Buchan Crt
Eleanor Appleby	Sep 30/10	4005 Bayview Ave
Benjamin Marks	Sep 30/10	650 Briar Hill Ave
Albert (Bert) Abugov	Oct 2/10	305 Richview Ave
Jill Gluckman	Oct 3/10	268 Ridley Blvd
Sylvia Vinegar	Oct 2/10	6 Dixon Court
Rose Fogle	Oct 2/10	13 Torresdale Ave

A NON-PROFIT ORGANIZATION
HEBREW BASIC BURIAL

Anne Kirshenbaum	Oct 6/10	1035 Eglinton Ave W
Rose Smith	Oct 7/10	645 Castlefield Ave

The unveiling of a monument to the memory of the late
HELEN SUGAR
will take place
Sunday, October 24th at 11:30 a.m.
Bathurst Lawn Memorial Park
Chevra Shas Section
Relatives and friends are invited to attend

Benjamin's
Landmark Monuments
Through the generations
...a sacred trust

UNVEIL THE PERFECT MEMORIAL!

- Granite monuments and markers
- On-site cemetery lettering

Let our monument counsellors help you find the perfect words and design to create an enduring tribute.

416-780-0635

www.jewishmonuments.ca

IZENBERG GOLDBERG Monuments
SAVINGS OF
$150 SINGLE $300 DOUBLE
Be an educated consumer, compare quality and price.
We do not pay any funeral home commissions for their recommendations.
Our prices are therefore lower.
We will not be undersold!
Serving generations of families in Toronto's Jewish community for over 90 years
We are a family owned and operated with informed, impartial Monument specialists in a no-pressure, non-commissioned sales environment
3173 BATHURST ST.
(4 blocks north of Lawrence)
416-787-0319
www.izenberggoldberg.com

REGINA'S CATERING & FINE FOODS
A Family Tradition for 48 Years
SHIVA MEALS
SEUDAT HAVRA'AH
(Traditional Meal After Funeral)
844 Sheppard Ave. W.
(at Wilmington)
www.reginasfinefoods.com
416-636-1044

To place an unveiling notice, please call at least 15 DAYS prior to the date of the unveiling.

We would like to express our gratitude and appreciation to all our friends, family and members of the community who have been so supportive during this difficult time. Our grief with the passing of

GABRIEL ZIMMERMAN ז"ל

has been immeasurable but the legacy he left behind will be in our hearts forever.

The Zimmerman & The Spiro Families

Obituary

Larry Hurtig aided Jewish Argentines

By MYRON LOVE
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — Larry Hurtig played a key role 15 years ago in encouraging several hundred Jewish Argentines to make Winnipeg their new home.

He was also a central figure in establishing Jewish group homes for developmentally challenged adults in the community here, and he is being remembered as a man who accomplished great things without fanfare and despite a lifetime of physical challenges.

Larry Hurtig

Hurtig died Oct. 6, as a result of a heart attack. He was 73.

The son of Bert and Rae Hurtig of Thunder Bay, Ont., Larry Hurtig was stricken by polio at the age of 15. He overcame the illness and went on to university in Winnipeg.

A chartered accountant by training, he was in public practice for 20 years. In 1981, he was invited by one of his clients, a property management company, to join the firm as vice-president. When that company went into receivership, he and an associate opened their own company – ASH Property Management and Chartered Financial Services.

Hurtig's community work began through the Talmud Torah where his children were attending school, when he organized lottery campaigns.

He began volunteering with the Jewish Federation of Winnipeg about 25 years ago and served as president from 1996-99. The highlight of his term in office was the inauguration of the Argentine immigration to Winnipeg. He and his son Jack made their first trip to Buenos Aires following up on contacts made by then-premier Gary Filmon with a member of the Argentine Jewish community. That first trip opened the doors to more than 100 Argentine Jewish families who came here.

At first, Hurtig and his wife, Roberta, would meet and greet all the newcomers at the airport – until the numbers were too high. The community as a whole then opened their homes and hearts to the immigrants.

Larry and Roberta were also among the major forces behind the success of the Shalom Residences, where their son Bradley is a resident. Larry was MC for Shalom's annual lottery and served as its chief financial officer for many years.

Hurtig was also one of the founders of Versatech Industries – a sheltered workshop for people with developmental and physical challenges.

Although he completely recovered from his first bout with polio, he began to experience the symptoms of post-polio syndrome in the early 1990s, and eventually lost the ability to walk. He also overcame a bout with cancer.

His illnesses never prevented him from getting on with his life in business and in community work. In recent years, he used a scooter. And he bore his afflictions with an even disposition and a positive outlook.

At his funeral, his children Jack and Renee remembered him as a warm and loving father who always had time for them and Bradley.

Holocaust Education Week

Focus on survivors' testimony

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

To mark the 30th anniversary of Holocaust Education Week, being held Nov. 1 to 9, all programs will highlight the importance of survivors' testimony.

Mira Goldfarb, executive director of the Sarah and Chaim Neuberger Holocaust Education Centre, part of UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, said that this is the first time HEW has revolved around a single theme.

The opening program, Nov. 1, 7:30 p.m. at Adath Israel Congregation, features Stephen Smith, executive director of the University of Southern California Shoah Foundation Institute and one of the world's leading advocates of Holocaust education and genocide prevention, and Toronto Holocaust survivor Pinchas Gutter.

For several years, Smith and Gutter "have explored the life that resides in Pinchas' memory," and during the program, sponsored by the Joseph Gottdenker Family Foundation, they will talk about how both beautiful and terrifying memory can be.

The closing program and Kristallnacht commemoration, 8 p.m. at Shaarei Shomayim Congregation, is titled "May your Memory be Love," and features Ephraim Kaye, director of international seminars at the International School For Holocaust Studies at Yad Vashem in Jerusalem.

He will present a project developed with Hebrew University and Yad Vashem that preserves the legacies of Holocaust survivors by producing eight films that follow eight survivors as they journey back to their birthplaces.

The evening, sponsored by Yad Vashem – the Holocaust Martyrs' and Heroes' Remembrance Authority and the Canadian Society for Yad Vashem, will also commemorate the 72nd anniversary of Kristallnacht, and honour Jewish war veterans.

Goldfarb said that in an effort to target every community and every age group, there are programs offered in Hebrew, Russian and French.

A program at Aurora High School on Nov. 4 at 7 p.m., recommended for students over 13 and their parents and grandparents, will feature the testimony of George Berman, who was born in Poland in 1923 and lived in the Lodz Ghetto between 1940 and 1944 before being deported to Auschwitz-Birkenau, where he lost his parents.

Also on Nov. 4, Robert Adam, the grandson of four Hungarian survivors, will be featured at a church-sponsored program at St. James Cathedral, 7 p.m. While in medical school, Adam wrote a musical inspired by the life of his grandmother, Lily Lerner, who was a strong advocate for Holocaust education. He combined her testimony with specific musical numbers.

The program features the vocal performance of Renee Barda, accompanied by Dorothy Krizmanic, an organist and chamber musician, and Gideon Wilk, a clarinetist and pianist.

A half-day symposium for people in their 20s and 30s will be held at the Wolfond Centre for Jewish Campus Life on Nov. 7. "Legacy: A Symposium Exploring the Future of Holocaust Remembrance" will consist of discussions and presentations on such topics as the Holocaust in Pop Culture, Would You Buy a BMW?, and Teaching the Holocaust. It will conclude with "Holocaust Remembrance in the year 2050" facilitated by Shelley Hornstein, a York University professor of architectural history and visual culture.

The program is a partnership with Hillel of Toronto and March of the Living Toronto, as well as the Annex Shul, Beth Tzedec young professionals, Birthright Alumni Community, The House, Jewski, Impact Toronto, JUMP and Shaarei Shomayim young professionals.

On Nov. 7, 7:30 p.m. at Beth Torah Congregation, Constanze Beckman will give a piano recital featuring pieces of composers who suffered during the Holocaust.

For information on all programs, visit www.holocausteducationweek.com.

VETERAN VISITS: Robbins Hebrew Academy Grade 8 students were privileged to spend time with George Macdonell, who served as a sergeant in the Canadian army in the Hong Kong campaign during World War II. Pictured with Macdonell at the Beth Tzedec campus are Maxwell Charlat and Brooke Lindzon.

The Gerald Schwartz Heather Reisman Centre for Jewish Learning at Holy Blossom Temple

RADICAL JUDAISM AND THE WAYS OF CHASSIDIM

Rabbi Arthur Green, Founder, Chavurah Movement, and President, Boston Hebrew College

Fri. Nov. 12, 2010, at 6 p.m. | Kabbalat Shabbat Service, Dinner and First Session: "Recovering the Mystical Traditional — a Kabbalah for Tomorrow"
For dinner reservations, please call Elana Fehler, at (416) 789-3291, ext. 532.

Sat. Nov. 13, 2010, at 9 a.m. | Torah Study, "Rediscovering the Chassidic Masters" — a Reading of Today's Parashah
10.30 a.m. | Shabbat Service and Sermon
After Kiddush Lunch | Final Session: "Radical Judaism — a Theology of Creation for the Post-Darwinian Era"

For more details on these events and other programming, please visit our website at www.holyblossom.org and download our Gerald Schwartz/Heather Reisman Centre for Jewish Learning at Holy Blossom Temple Fall 2010 Calendar of Events.

HOLY BLOSSOM TEMPLE קק פרחי קדש

1950 Bathurst St., Toronto
tel: (416) 789-3291 | fax (416) 789-9697
www.holyblossom.org
email templemail@holyblossom.org

The Canadian Society for Yad Vashem

TRUE HERO

Thank You to our over 100

integral to the outstanding success of this

FIVE RIGHTEOUS AMONG THE NATIONS

MARIE FRANCOISE BOREL, CORNELIS AND

Accepting the award on the honourees' behalf were their decedents

The Righteous Among the Nations title is one that has been enshrined in Israeli law to be granted solely by

National Chair
Fran Sonshine

Event Co-Chairs
Ed Sonshine
John Tory

Dinner Chair
Fred Waks

Steering Committee
Felicia Posluns
Jeff Ross
Irit Shay
Beth Singer
Liora Yakubowicz
Nelly Zagdanski
Sara Zagdanski

Executive Director
Yaron Ashkenazi

The Canadian Society
for Yad Vashem
970 Lawrence Ave. W., #211
Toronto, ON M6A 3B6
Tel. 416.785.1333
Fax 416.785.4536
trueheroes@yadvashem.ca

For more information visit www.yadvashem.ca

EVENT SPONSOR

RIOCAN

SPIRIT OF HEROISM SPONSOR

Joseph Gottdenker Family Foundation

HOPE SPONSORS

ROLEX BOUTIQUE AU ROYAL DE VERSAILLES
CIBC
Israel Koschitzky Family Charitable Foundation
RBC Capital Markets
TD Securities

BRAVERY SPONSORS

BMO Capital Markets
David and Stacey Cynamon Family Foundation
Ernst & Young
Export Packers Company Limited
Goodmans
Hilton Suites Toronto/Markham Conference Centre & Spa minto
Scotia Capital
Simona and Alex Shnaider
Sonshine Family Foundation
Azrieli Foundation
The Dan Family Foundation
The Kimel Family
STATE
MADISON HOMES
WeirFoulds LLP

COURAGE SPONSORS

Adams and Wake Construction
CINEPLEX
DAVIES
Deloitte.
EFFORT TRUST
Henry and Barbara Bank & Family
Hinda & Allen Silber and Family
Sarah and Morris Perlis and Family
Sheldon Silverberg & Family and Barry Appleby & Family Foundation
Robert & Sheila Masters Charitable Foundation

Remembering the past, Shaping the future

ES Tribute Gala

generous sponsors and supporters who were memorable evening which posthumously honoured:

Heintje Roggeveen & Klaas and Boukje Feringa residing in Ontario, PEI, and Quebec

Yad Vashem, on behalf of the State of Israel

Heroism Sponsors

APOTEX ADVANCING GENERICS

METROPIA URBAN LANDSCAPES

TRINITY

Hope & Educator Sponsor

The Catalyst Capital Group Inc.

Valour Sponsors

BHI

Atlantic

DECORIUM

gowlings

Joel and Jill Reisman

PeerTree

Sydney & Florence Cooper Foundation

The Ira Gluskin and Nadine Granovsky Gluskin Charitable Foundation

Fasken Martineau

Farband of Lithuanian Jews in Toronto

Harold Spring

Rochelle Reichert and Henry Wolfond

The Cooper Family Foundation

VOGUE

pwc

Brookfield Financial

Faye Minuk

Imperial

Minden Gross

Robins Appleby & Taub

Turner Fleischer

Israel Bonds Canada

CANACCORD Genuity

fieldgate

Nissen and Gladys Stern Family Foundation

RSM Richter

William and Linda Hechter

Weston premium woods and the Gluskin Family

ICEJ

Jack and Doris Bildiricer Charitable Foundation

Northwest Atlantic

Sam and Gitta Ganz Family Foundation

The Eddie and Marilyn Waisz Family Foundation

Willie & Rochelle Moll and Family

Andrea & Malcolm Marcus

CBRE CB RICHARD ELLIS

Jerry & Hilda Cohen and David & Bernice Waterstein

Smuschkowitz & Kichler Families

Joe and Gail Forberg Bill Forberg Sylvia and David Forberg Harvey and Larry Silverberg

De Grandpré Chait

Arrow

Joseph and Gena Tenenbaum and Family

Paracom

Steven and Christine Tile

The Honourable Jerry Grafstein, Carole Grafstein & Family

Supporters

John Tory

CanRad

Norman and Ellen Goldstein

Johnson-Rose Inc.

David and Barbara Peltz

Sharon and Norman Gottlieb

Liora and Simon Yakubowicz and Family

VS LLP

George Grossman

MT

Milli

Morley Brown and Nathan and Glennie Lindenberg

Gerald Schwartz Heather Reisman

Shimmerman Penn

Irit Shay

The Silver Family

Harvey Frisch

Ron and Hedy Frisch

David and Bonnie Goldstein

Victims of Nazis' killing fields must never be forgotten

By OLEKSANDR FELDMAN
Special to The CJN

If you make your way beyond the outskirts of Kiev and continue deep into the forests of the neighbouring village of Radomyshl, you soon enter an unmarked clearing. To the untrained eye, the gap in the trees would appear random, and most passersby would likely admire the lush vegetation enveloping the spot before continuing along the way.

The horrific reality rooted here, as in hundreds of other sites around the Ukrainian landscape, is of a tragic, often ignored chapter in the incomprehensible history of the Holocaust.

Beneath those grasses and lilies that now sprout unchecked lie the bodies of hundreds if not thousands of Jewish victims, summarily murdered during a brief span of days in early 1942. The massacre was carried out by Nazi killing squads acting alongside their local paramilitary collaborators. All too often, nearby villagers joined in, welcoming the chance to translate age-old hatred of the Jews into cold-blooded murder.

Beneath these grounds are the stories of remarkable families, families who exemplified centuries of Jewish traditions that personified the rich cultures of eastern European Jewry.

With the crack of each killer's bullet, lives were terminated without any chance to say goodbye.

The Nazis diabolically assumed that their Jewish victims would be quickly forgotten and recognized that unmarked killing fields would quickly fade into the lush surrounding landscape.

Incredibly, they were right, multiplying the crime, not just making it the murder of innocents, but also erasing the crime and the memories of the victims.

Decades later, there is a growing fear that in this regard, the Nazis may have succeeded. For even while historians desperately try to document how many souls were lost to the Final Solution, if these clearings in the forest go forever unnoticed, the reality is that the sacred lives lost in each spot will also vanish.

There is no disputing that a life lost in the backwoods of Ukraine or Belarus is no less valuable than that extinguished in the gas chambers of Auschwitz. Every one of the six million Jews murdered by the Nazis deserves to be remembered and all of their lives memorialized. There are many reasons why this effort is critical for humanity. But undeniably, our most important motivation in accurately preserving the memories of the victims of Nazism is to ensure that humanity never ignores, forgets or diminishes the fact that these horrors occurred.

As absurd as it might seem that people could ever deny the systematic annihilation of millions of innocents, current events prove that evil-intentioned people are intent on doing just that. It is therefore incumbent upon us in the Jewish community, and indeed upon all humanity who understand the true dangers represented by hate-filled and genocidal regimes, to do everything in our power to make sure that every victim of the Holocaust is properly remembered.

It is this commitment that drives our current initiative to create a Ukrainian Jewish museum. This project will provide a physical facility where guests can come, visit and learn about the remarkable, centuries-old history of one of the Jewish world's proudest communities. Equally as important, the museum will embrace a monumental commitment and infrastructure to identify these anonymous killing fields in the woods that would otherwise continue to be ignored.

Clearly, the clock is working against us. This effort should have been launched two or three decades ago. Regrettably, the political environment and other factors then prohibited us from pursuing this approach at that time.

It is all the more critical today for us to move as quickly as possible while the greatest resource available for understanding the Holocaust – the survivor community – remains alive. In our limited capacity to work to identify mass graves to date, survivors have been absolutely instrumental in the process.

Some of these survivors were able to remain alive as small children, fleeing into the forests and literally hiding behind trees as they witnessed their family members being slaughtered and thrown into the pits. While the Nazis would force Jewish labourers – kept alive for that purpose – to cover over the bodies and disguise the unthinkable crimes taking place, those who were able to survive would eventually find their way back and reveal the truth.

Join with us as we commit ourselves to one crucial, if limited, campaign: we will, God willing, identify every possible mass grave of Jewish Holocaust victims in Ukraine, and ultimately everywhere in Europe, that is today unmarked and dishonoured. And we will do this to commemorate the 70th anniversary of the Babi Yar massacres outside of Kiev, to take place in September 2011.

This effort demands the full support of the global Jewish community. If we are to truly understand the breadth of the Holocaust and the massive toll it represented for humanity, we know that all affected communities deserve to be remembered in a way that respects those who were lost, but most of all, ensures that their deaths – and their lives – will never be forgotten.

Oleksandr Feldman is a member of the Ukraine Parliament and chair of the Ukrainian Jewish Committee. He was recently appointed to head his parliament's committee on commemorating the 70th anniversary of the Babi Yar massacre.

Guest Voice

Oleksandr Feldman

Singles Events

is an advertising feature of The Canadian Jewish News

Deadline:
Wednesdays, 4 p.m.,
6 days preceding issue date

For rates or to place an ad, please call 416-391-1636

Games Jewish Singles Play! Ages 21-39; 40-69. Sun., Oct. 24, 7:30 pm. Beth Torah, 47 Glenbrook. Millionaire, Scrabble, etc. Bingo, 7:30-8. Prizes, refresh. $8. 163 couples have met! For info, Mollie 416-733-3634 or mollie_rothman@yahoo.ca

Jewish Connections Inc.

Hey Guys . . . Are you looking for :

Stunning blonde beauty, 32, 5' 7", slim, never married, fun, energetic and professional

♥ ♥ ♥

Very attractive brunette, 34, 5' 4", athletic, slim, never married, Medical Specialist

. . . Are you the one . . .

For a complimentary consultation call Carole: 905-889-3900
carole@jewishconnectionsinc.com
www.jewishconnectionsinc.com

Join in the Conversation

You are invited to participate in one of two focus groups about adults, between the ages of 55 and 70, in our community.

Each group will run for two hours over lunch or dinner. All participants will receive a $50 gift certificate towards programs and activities at the Prosserman JCC as well as a $50 gift certificate towards programs and activities at the Koffler Centre of the Arts.

Thursday, October 28 • 12 pm
Tuesday, November 9 • 7 pm

POWERED BY UJA FEDERATION

Sherman Campus / Prosserman JCC 4588 Bathurst Street www.prosserman.jcc.com

PRE-REGISTRATION IS REQUIRED. CALL 416-631-5717 BY MONDAY OCTOBER 25.

Concert to honour survivors with uplifting music

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Cantor Benjamin Maissner didn't get it at first when he was asked to do a concert with the Lachan Jewish Chamber Choir, of which he is musical director, as part of Holocaust Education Week (HEW).

At first Maissner, cantor of Holy Blossom Temple, thought that Mira Goldfarb – executive director of UJA Federation of Greater Toronto's Sarah and Chaim Neuberger Holocaust Education Centre – had in mind a "Holocaust memorial kind of concert" when she told him that HEW organizers wanted the event to honour survivors from different countries, 10 of whom will be speaking briefly as part of the program.

Instead, the concert – titled "Keeping the Music Alive: A Choral Tribute" – is a celebration of music originating from Jewish communities in countries that were occupied by the Nazis. It will take place at Grace Church on the Hill, 300 Lonsdale Road, at 8 p.m. on Nov. 3.

"The music that we're doing is showing that there was Jewish life in those places, and it thrived to great heights," Maissner said. "The music is not morbid at all. It's uplifting, it's bright, and some of it is subdued and reflective."

One segment – unusual for a Holocaust-related event – will feature music from the 18th-century inauguration of the synagogue in Siena, Italy, "to show there was Jewish culture in those countries for centuries before the Nazi occupation," Maissner told The CJN.

Probably the oldest piece is a selection from Italy by Jewish Renaissance composer Salamone Rossi, who lived in the late 16th and early 17th centuries.

As well, there will be music from Hungary, Holland, France (an 18th-century circumcision cantata written in Provence) Germany – "very much Mendelsohnian and 19th-century Romantic" – a piece from Austria by Franz Schubert, and even music from Yugoslavia, Maissner said.

The end of the concert will feature a memorial section that will include two Partisan songs and "a very modern Kaddish."

As well, there will be music composed in Terezin, a propaganda camp to show that inmates, who performed there in orchestras and theatre groups, were being treated well. A segment from Brundibar, the children's opera performed there, will be included.

Lachan, which Maissner created in 1993, performed in Nuremburg, Germany, 10 years ago in concerts aimed at fostering reconciliation between Jews and Germans. "It's a very unique chamber group," he said. "We've travelled the world over."

Cantor Benjamin Maissner

Torah in Motion Fall 2010
Program Highlights

TORAH in MOTION
Stimulating Torah Virtually Everywhere

Medieval Jewish Thinkers series
Professor Daniel Lasker
Thursday November 11, 8:00 pm
Ibn Ezra with
Rabbi Nati Helfgot
Yeshivat Or Chaim
159 Almore Avenue

Through text, art, drama, and music, Bat Mitzvah girls and their mothers encounter many "ideal" Jewish women in this 10-week program.
Begins Wednesday, October 27,
7:00-9:00 pm
Or Chaim Yeshiva
159 Almore Avenue

An Italian Renaissance: Choosing Life in Canada
Eli Rubinstein discusses his fascinating and deeply moving account of how his Holocaust survivor parents succeeded in reconstructing their shattered lives in Toronto.
Sunday, November 7, 8:00 pm
Shaarei Shomayim Congregation
470 Glencairn Avenue
Co-sponsored by Beit Midrash Zichron Dov

The World Turned Upside Down:
Islamism, Anti-Zionism and The Betrayal of Reason
Melanie Phillips, British journalist
Wednesday, November 10
8:00pm
The Village Shul
1072 Eglinton Avenue West
Sponsored by the Malamet family in memory of Colin Malamet z"l

Renewing Our Spirit

The Changing Role of Women and Ritual

Women's Beit Midrash
Monthly series begins
Sunday November 21
9:30-11:30 am
Ulpanat Orot
45 Canyon Ave.

e-TiM Join one of our six live online interactive classes and EXPERIENCE TORAH LIKE NEVER BEFORE!!

Further information, registration, MP3s, divrei Torah and more: www.torahinmotion.org | 416.633.5770

On Campus

Israel's enemies hijacking its brand: professor

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

Richard Cravatts is an expert in marketing and advertising and so, when he saw the way Israel's opponents were labelling the Jewish state with all manner of negative stereotypes, he immediately recognized it as a form of "brand hijacking."

Brand hijacking can be positive when consumers tout a product they love, but in the case of Israel's enemies, it is being used to attack it morally, intellectually and physically, all with the intention of eliminating it entirely, Cravatts stated.

The impact can readily be seen in polling data from Europe that shows Israel at the very bottom of the public's perception when it comes to "place branding," he said. "The perception of Israel in the world is largely formed by enemies of Israel. Those enemies have come to campus and... they are effective."

Cravatts, director of Boston University's Program in Publishing, delivered his rather bleak appraisal of "the campus war against Israel" at a lunchtime lecture sponsored by the Speakers Action Group and the Canadian Jewish Civil Rights Association at the downtown Toronto offices of law firm Cassels Brock & Blackwell.

Richard Cravatts

The intellectual assault on Israel has resulted in public perception of Israel as being a militaristic society populated by Orthodox Jews. Europeans have told pollsters they see Israel as the prime obstacle to world peace, a ridiculous conclusion said Cravatts, who pointed out that of all international conflicts since 1948, all the Arab-Israeli wars rank 49th in terms of casualties.

The negative branding on campuses in North America has been facilitated by several factors, among them the prevalence of liberal-leaning professors in history and anthropology departments who are hostile to capitalism, colonialism, imperialism and who see the Palestinians as "the new favourite victim."

Quoting conservative writer David Horowitz, Cravatts said that has created "an unholy alliance" of the left and Muslim student groups.

University administrations, he continued, "have been incredibly craven and lax to the anti-Israelism and the anti-Semitism on campus, which are growing unchecked."

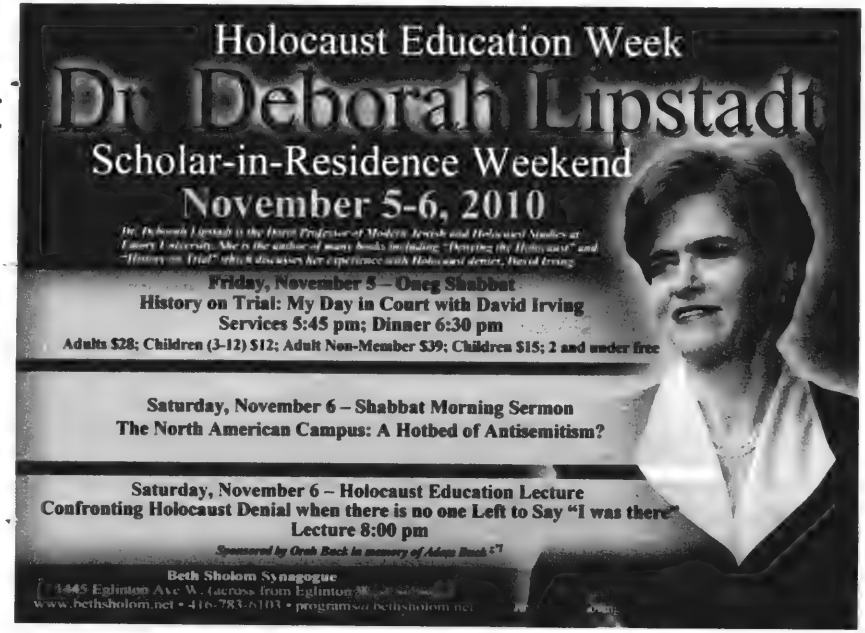
The principle of multiculturalism has prompted campus administrations to overlook the kind of extreme speech and hate by minorities that would not be tolerated in whites if directed against blacks, said Cravatts, who recently authored a book, Genocidal Liberalism: The University's Jihad Against Israel.

Administrations also do not see Jews as a weak minority in need of protection, though "Jewish students feel intimidated. They do not want to wear their yarmulkes, mezuzot and stand up for Israel. They're afraid."

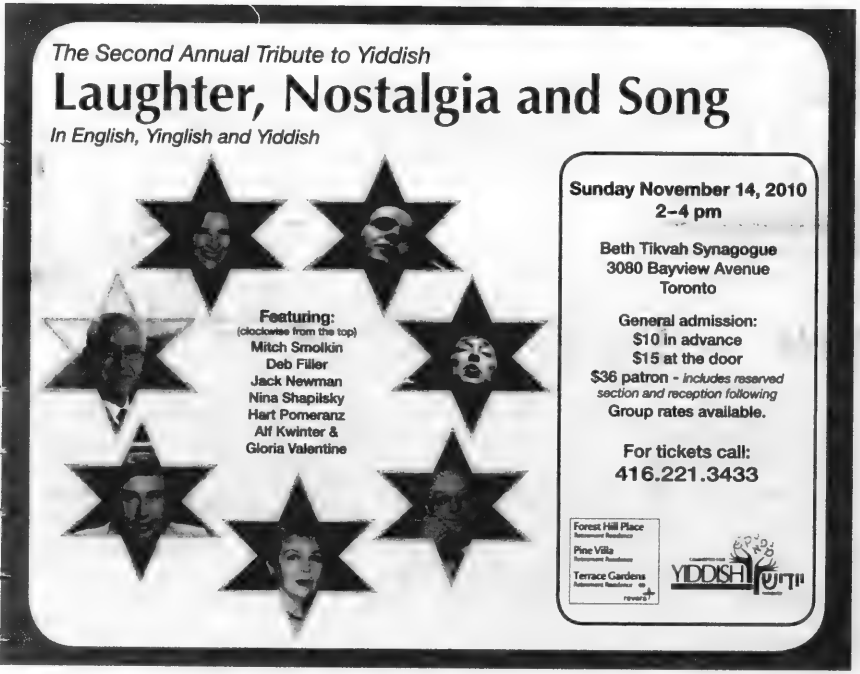
That assessment was backed up in a question and answer period by Adir Dishy, president of Hasbara@York, a grassroots educational group. In an interview, he called on mainstream Jewish organizations including Canadian Jewish Congress and the United Jewish Appeal Federation of Greater Toronto to try to prevent hate speeches on campus, particularly those associated with Israeli Apartheid Week

"A lot of time their message is just cloaked anti-Semitism," he said.

"Jews are definitely intimidated" on campus, said Dishy, who wears a knitted kippah. "Friends wear hats, normally they'd wear kippot. Calling yourself a Zionist on campus is scary. They shy away from it."



Holocaust Education Week
Dr. Deborah Lipstadt
Scholar-in-Residence Weekend
November 5-6, 2010
Dr. Deborah Lipstadt is the Dorot Professor of Modern Jewish and Holocaust Studies at Emory University. She is the author of many books including "Denying the Holocaust" and "History on Trial" which discusses her experience with Holocaust denier, David Irving.
Friday, November 5 – Oneg Shabbat
History on Trial: My Day in Court with David Irving
Services 5:45 pm; Dinner 6:30 pm
Adults $28; Children (3-12) $12; Adult Non-Member $39; Children $15; 2 and under free
Saturday, November 6 – Shabbat Morning Sermon
The North American Campus: A Hotbed of Antisemitism?
Saturday, November 6 – Holocaust Education Lecture
Confronting Holocaust Denial when there is no one Left to Say "I was there"
Lecture 8:00 pm
Sponsored by Orah Beck in memory of Adam Beck z"l
Beth Sholom Synagogue
www.bethsholom.net • 416-783-6103 • program@bethsholom.net

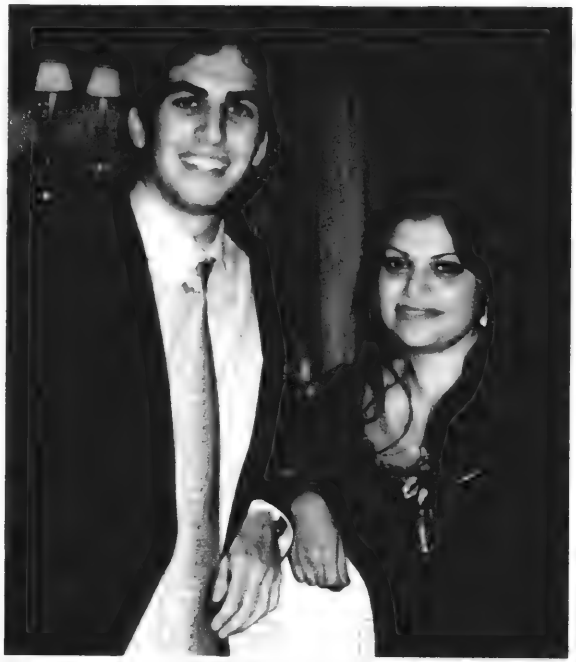


Civility on campus urged

A new lawyers group called Advocates for Civil Liberties has written to presidents of three Toronto universities calling on them to push for more "civil dialogue" on campus.

Lorne Saltman, a lawyer at Cassels Brock & Blackwell, said the group hopes to meet the presidents to propose measures that could tone down the rhetoric on campus. One of the group's proposals would be to videotape public demonstrations and debates. "We think that would have a salutary and civilizing effect," he said.

The group is also planning a conference on Feb. 16, 2011, at the Toronto Reference Library with the theme, "setting the record straight on the Middle East." It will feature speakers who will "counter the enemies of Israel and take back the narrative," he said. — P.L.



Daniel Pincus (left) and Rana Halloumee were the first two medical students to participate in a research exchange between University of Toronto and Technion – Israel Institute of Technology.

Medical students take part in exchange program

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

The first two medical students to participate in an exchange between University of Toronto and the Technion – Israel Institute of Technology recently shared their experiences at a dinner celebrating the inauguration of the program.

Rana Halloumee of Israel and Daniel Pincus, a Toronto student, were the first participants in the CREMS (Comprehensive Research Experience for Medical Students) Program between Toronto and Israel. Halloumee spent her two months on exchange researching heart rate-dependent electrical remodelling. This was her first time in North America, and one of the first things she noticed about Toronto was its multiculturalism.

"I was very impressed to see how people [in Toronto] respect each other and treat each other well no matter what their nationality or homeland is," the third-year medical student (equivalent to first year in Canada) said.

Pincus spent his three months in Israel researching hip fractures and bone imaging at Carmel Medical Center in Haifa. When asked about his experience on exchange, he said he would definitely recommend that others should participate.

"It's good to get some really productive research done, and on the other hand, have an experience that is usually not offered to medical students in first and second year.

"I am humbled and privileged that I was able to participate," he added.

The CREMS Program, established in 2005, allows first- and second-year medical students from the University of Toronto to participate in research-based exchanges at medical schools all over the world.

The idea to start a Toronto-Israel exchange came from Dr. George Fantus, associate dean of research in the faculty of medicine at U of T. He was familiar with schools in Israel – his daughter went to medical school there, a nephew attended the Technion and his son spent some time at the Weizmann Institute of Science.

One of the largest hurdles, Fantus said, was getting money to fund the students. After approximately a year of negotiating, the Canadian Technion Society approached with a proposal to support the exchange program. Gary Goldberg, national president of the society, has been very supportive, he said. In all, it took about 2-1/2 years to get this exchange off the ground.

At the dinner, Judith Wolfson, vice-president of university relations, discussed the importance of students appreciating and being aware of the world beyond where they live.

Continued on page 38

YOU'RE INVITED TO OUR
OPEN HOUSE
RESERVE YOUR SUITE
ON OCTOBER 23RD & RECEIVE A FREE MONTH'S RENT
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 23RD
FROM 11:00 AM - 3:00 PM
Join us as we reveal a sneak peek of our NEW Retirement Residence and enjoy entertainment, refreshments, prizes and everyone gets a free gift!
FOUR ELMS
RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
1500 Steeles Ave. West, Thornhill, ON L4J 4H6
905-738-0905
Visit our website to learn more - www.fourelms.ca
Diversicare
www.diversicare.ca

On Campus

Technion, U of T team up

Continued from page 37

"[There is a] huge interest in all students at all levels to 'internationalize' their experience and ensure a broader understanding of their field in the world," Wolfson said.

Catharine Whiteside, dean of the U of T faculty of medicine, was excited by both the potential of the Israel branch of CREMS and that of the program in general.

"We're very keen to partner with the best in the world, and this opportunity with Technion exemplifies that for us," she said.

"It's a great opportunity for our students to experience another institution in another country and learn about health and about medical sciences from a different perspective, but still have an experience that's beyond just learning about science.

"These types of experiences have a lifetime impact on the students. I think we'll probably see this program grow."

For Fantus, the importance of the exchange program is threefold: it furthers medical research, creates global citizens and promotes peace in the world.

"It's important for people everywhere to have different experiences and be exposed to different cultures," he said.

"Only with common goals and understanding can we create a better life for everybody."

ATTENTION SNOWBIRDS

Cardiologist

Ronald M. Gabor, MD, FACC

Board Certified

Education: Albert Einstein College of Medicine
Univ. of Miami-Jackson Memorial Hospital
McGill University

READY & ABLE TO CARE FOR ALL YOUR CARDIO-VASCULAR NEEDS WHILE IN FLORIDA

CARDIOLOGY ASSOCIATES OF BOCA RATON
9980 Central Park Blvd. N. #304
Boca Raton, FL. 33428
10151 Enterprise Center Blvd. #203
Boynton Beach, FL. 33437

TRAVEL INSURANCE ACCEPTED
561-483-8335
www.cabr1.com

CENTRE Honda
Web Site: www.centrehonda.com • E-Mail: sales@centrehonda.com
HONDA

THE SMARTER WAY TO BUY!

SERVING DOWNTOWN FOR OVER 35 YEARS
354 RICHMOND ST. (East of Sherbourne)
416-364-1116
• SALES • LEASING • SERVICE • PARTS • BODYSHOP

Correction

In the picture "Terry Fox Run," Oct. 14, page 36, one of the Robbins Hebrew Academy students preparing banners for the run was incorrectly named. The student on the right is Lindsay Parkes. We apologize for the error.

Reserve Now!
SHOMRAI SHABBOS CHEVRAH MISHNAYOS
120th Anniversary Dinner
honouring
RABBI & REBBETZIN YACOV FELDER שליט"א
MR. & MRS. BENTZION HEITNER
MR. & MRS. HARRY MARDER
MR. & MRS. MOSHE REICHMANN
MRS. ROCHELLE REITER
MRS. BONNY SILVER
MR. & MRS. JACK WEINBAUM
guest speaker
RABBI DR. AVRAHAM TWERSKI
Wednesday November 17, 2010
FOR MORE INFORMATION:
email shaindy@rogers.com or call 416.879.2065
Building the Toronto Jewish Community Week by Week

שישאר ג'ינס

גידי קורן וחברים

על בריחת המוחות מישראל

לאחרונה התפרסמה עבודת מחקר מאלפת שהשוותה ארצות שונות על פי שיעור בריחת המוחות של מדעניה מתוך מספרם הכללי. לדוגמה: 2% ממדעני אוסטרליה נודדים ומשתקעים בארצות אחרות, 4% בהולנד, 12% בקנדה, כשבשיא העולמי מחזיקה ישראל עם 25%! כלומר: כרבע ממדעני ישראל נודדים למקומות אחרים!! 85% ממדעני ישראל בניכר דווחו שהם מעוניינים לשוב ארצה, 55% דווחו ששקלו ברצינות שיבה ארצה, 50% מהם אמרו שאין הם תורנים בשל היעדר מישרה מתאימה בלכלית או מאתגרת, ורק 2% מסרו שמצאו בארץ משרה שאיננה דורשת ירידה מאסיבית ברמה הכלכלית והמדעית שיש להם בארה"ב או בקנדה.

כצפוי, רוב המוחות הישראלים הבורחים נמצאים בארה"ב (80%), כ 10% בקנדה ו 8% באנגליה.

התגובה לנתונים אלה בארץ היתה צפויה ידי סטראוטיפית: ישראל איננה מעריכה את המשאב החשוב ביותר שלה- מוח מדעניה ויוזמיה.

לדעתי הבעייה הרבה יותר מורכבת: ישראל יוצרת מדעני- על במספרים שאינם פרופורציונים לגודלה ולצרכיה, ועל כן אין לצפות ממנה שתוכל לקלוט את כולם. יתירה מזאת- כמדינת עלייה, ישראל קולטת אלפי מדענים שלמדו על חשבון מדינות מוצאם, ורבים מהם נקלטים בארץ. צריך להשלים עם כך שהעולם של 2010 הוא כפר בינלאומי, ונתונים כאלה משקפים מציאות עולמית חדשה.

מדען שעוזב את ישראל איננו בהכרח הפסד טוטאלי למדינה. כמי שהכשיר במעבדה שלו מעבר לעשרים מדענים ישראלים שחזרו ארצה, אני חייב לומר שדווקא בימים קשים אלה, של עוינות וחרם נגד הקהילה המדעית של ישראל- הקהילה המדעית הישראלית מחץ לגבולות הארץ מהווה איזון רציני לעול הזה.

אבל שישאר בינינו.

מה רוצים מליברמן

מדינת ישראל בסערה גדולה: שר החוץ ליברמן העז לעמוד באו"ם ולומר להם: תשכחו מזה! אנחנו לא ניתן לפלשתינאים כלום! ועוד מתאושש בארץ מחצפתו- הוא אירח את שרי החוץ של ספרד ונרטת ואמר להם: תפסיקו לתת לנו עצות! אתם, עם החוקים נגד המוסלמים- הרבה יותר גרועים מאיתנו. השרים האירופאים לא נשארו חייבים ואמרו לאבינדור את מה שהם חושבים עליו ועל מדינה שמאפשרת לו להיות שר החוץ שלה.

אז הינה דעתי: ליברמן הוא הפוליטיקאי הכי הגון בישראל! הוא היחיד שעושה בדיוק את מה שהצהיר שיעשה בבחירות. זה שהוא מאשיסס, שמציע טראנספר של ערבים- כל זה היה ידוע! ולמרות זאת מינה אותו נתניהו לשר חוץ במהלך חמור למחות כמו זה של אולמרט שמינה את אמיר פרץ לשר בטחון למני מלחמת לבנון השניה.

רק מה- בתרבות השלטון הישראלית אומרים נתניהו, ברק וישי דברים "באילו", שלא הם ולא איש משומעיהם מאמין להם. נתניהו למשל הצהיר שאפשר לחשיג שלום עם הפלשתינאים "תוך שנה"- תוך שהוא וכל שומעיו יודעים שתוך שנה לא ישבו אפילו לשולחן הדיונים! לו רצה נתניהו שלום תוך שנה- הוא היה יוצר קואליציה עם ציפי לבני, שלמפלגתה יש יותר מנדטים מאשר לליכוד ולבטח יותר מאשר לליברמן. אבל נתניהו איננו מעוניין בשלום. הוא מאמין שישראל תהיה חזקה גם בלי שלום. מאחר והוא נבחר באופן דמוקראטי- זכותו לומר ולעשות מה שהוא רוצה, אבל אל לו ולחבר מריעיו להלין על ליברמן. הוא לפחות פוליטיקאי שאומר את מה שהוא חושב.

ואיך הם נראים כולם ביחד! כדברי ג'ורג' וושינגטון: לכל מדינה יש את הממשלה שהיא ראויה לה.

Wall Street 2

די היססתי אם ללכת לסרטו החדש של מייקל דוגלס שמוקדש למציאות המושחתת של וול סטריט בזמן הקריסה הכלכלית האחרונה. יד על הלב- אני באופן אישי מקבל תאוצה מהנושא הזה ומאנשים שמקדישים לכסף את כל חייהם. מה לאמר- כדברי הסתגם הישראלי- "התאכזבתי לטובה". שרט מצויין, שמספר סיפור אישי מרתק על איש בורסה מושחת, ובתו שמנוגדת לו מרחק שנות אור, ודרכם מביא את חדילמה של העולם הקאפיטאליסטי.

שמונה בסולם קורן.

On Campus

Noble drops law suit

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

York University professor David Noble has agreed to drop a defamation suit against Canadian Jewish Congress that arose out of a news release in which the advocacy organization suggested Noble published an anti-Semitic flyer.

Noble consented to a court order after Congress asked that the defamation action be dismissed against Congress' Ontario region and its chair at the time, Joel Richler.

"The bottom line for us is that we admitted no liability," said Congress CEO Bernie Farber. "He abandoned the case and we hold by our original position. The fact he abandoned it speaks for itself."

The genesis of the case can be traced back to November 2004, when Noble published a flyer titled, "The York University Foundation: The tail that wags the dog."

The document suggested the university was influenced when disciplining pro-Palestinian activists by the board of its fundraising foundation. Noble set out an incomplete list of board members and officers, noting their connection to Jewish organizations such as the UJA Federation of Greater Toronto.

"The York University Foundation is biased by the presence and influence of staunch pro-Israel lobbyists, activists and fundraising agencies," the flyer stated.

Congress responded with comments to the media and a news release that suggested it was anti-Semitic to point out these connections and to imply that the board controlled the university's decision-making in a way that promoted a pro-Israel position.

In addition to Congress and Richler, others sued by Noble included the board of directors of the York University Foundation, the foundation itself, senior York officer Paul Marcus and former York president Lorna Marsden, Hillel of Greater Toronto, Hillel at York University and several of its staff, as well as UJA Federation.

Federation spokesperson Howard English confirmed last week that the case against his organization is ongoing, while Farber said there was no indication the case against the others has been dropped.

In its statement of defence, Congress asserted that Noble's flyer singled out foundation board members who were Jewish (with one exception); stressed their involvement in Jewish community work; alleged they controlled the entire board and, therefore, the foundation, and said that the foundation directed the affairs of the university to achieve the personal objectives of the Jewish board members.

"No support for these claims or suggestions, other than the presence of Jews involved with Jewish organizations as members of the foundation board, was offered in the flyer," defence documents stated.

The defence also contended that the Congress news release was factually correct and expressed fair comment made in good faith on a public issue, which protected CJC from a defamation suit.

Calls to Noble for comment were not returned last week, but at the time of the incident in 2004, he was widely quoted as saying that as a Jew himself, Congress' statement that his flyer was anti-Semitic was "deeply offensive to me, because my own family has suffered from anti-Semitism."

He denied the flyer singled out anyone on the basis of ethnicity or religion, and he asserted that the foundation is "de facto running York. They clamp down on any criticism of Israel."

A Nighttime Escape for Book Lovers

Beth Tzedec Max & Beatrice Wolfe Library presents two evenings discussing outstanding contemporary fiction.

Come and hear author Nancy-Gay Rotstein discuss her novel Shattering Glass on Wednesday, November 3 at 7:30PM
Shattering Glass is a compelling tale of three successful women caught between career and family and the challenges they face.

Dr. Harriet Morris reviews Blooms of Darkness by Aharon Appelfeld on Wednesday, December 9 at 7:30PM
Blooms of Darkness is a lyrically written story of adolescent sexual awakening, confusion, love and loss set against the backdrop of an unnamed Ukranian city during World War II, by this Israeli writer.

Dessert reception following each presentation.
Cost: $10. For more information or to register, call 416-781-3514 ext. 225.

1700 Bathurst Street, Toronto, Ontario M5P 3K3
Tel: 416.781.3511 Fax: 416.781.0150
email: info@beth-tzedec.org web: www.beth-tzedec.org

בית צדק
Beth Tzedec Congregation

UJA Federation announces nominees

Toronto – David Koschitzky, Nominating Committee Chair for UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, has announced the nominees for the Board of Directors and Individual Representatives Council Members.

Elections will be held during UJA Federation's annual meeting on Tuesday November 30, 2010 at 7:00 p.m, at Holy Blossom Temple (1950 Bathurst Street, Toronto).

In accordance with the by-laws, the governance consists of a Council, a Board of Directors and an Executive Committee. The Board of Directors, the Chair and the Senior Vice-Chair will be elected by the Council Members; The Executive Committee will be ratified by the Board of Directors from among the Directors. No nominations can be made from the floor during the annual meeting. However, any member of the Jewish community may be placed in nomination by complying with the following by-laws:

"In order to be elected or appointed and to continue as a Council Member, each individual must (a) be an Individual General Member; (b) have made a financial commitment to the United Jewish Appeal of Greater Toronto in respect of the most recent annual campaign and be in good standing with the United Jewish Appeal in respect of such commitment; and (c) shall not have refused to remove any barrier that is within his or her control that would prevent his or her spouse's religious re-marriage."

"Each Individual Representative Council Member shall be elected at an Annual General Meeting by the Individual General Members from among the qualified candidates duly nominated therefore by the Nominating Committee or nominated by any seven Individual General Members; provided that in respect of nominations made by Individual General Members: (a) No Individual General Members may nominate more than three nominees for election as Individual Representative Council Member at any Annual General Meeting; (b) such nominations shall be in writing and accompanied by the written consent of the nominee; and (c) such nominations shall be delivered to the Secretary at least 21 days before the Annual General Meeting at which the election is to occur."

Nominated for Chair of the Board is Elizabeth Wolfe and Senior Vice-Chair of the Board is Richard Venn. Nominees for the Board of Directors include:

For a two year term:
Jeffrey Cohen, Michael Diamond, David Dulberg, Sara Gottlieb, Sarena Koschitzky, Glennie Lindenberg, Beverly Lyons, Steve Mayer, Ran Mesterman, Elan Pratzer, Brian Schachter, Sara Schur, and Randy Shiff

For a one year term:
Sheldon Goodman

Continuing their two year term:
Elena Aleinikov, Michael Davis, Richard Diamond, Sheldon Disenhouse, Steven Farber, Jill Goldberg-Reitman, Louis Greenbaum, Warren Kimel, Elyse Lackie, Bruce Leboff, David Mansell, Robert Palter, David Peltz, Craig Rimer, Ralph Shedletsky, Honey Sherman, Eileen Silver, David Spiro, Arthur Stern, and Sara Zagdanski

The following are to be elected for a two-year term 2010-2012 as Individual Representative Council Members:

Cheryl Appleby Jackson, Sandra Atlin, Arna Banack, Tobie Bekhor, Marc Benjamin, Donald Bennet, David Wm. Brown, Sandra Brown, Vicki Campbell, Robert Cherniak, Jack Chisvin, Karen Chisvin, Jeffrey Cohen, Roz Davidson, Michael Diamond, Yale Drazin, David Dulberg, Anita Ekstein, Susan Fenwick, Bernard Fishbein, Abe Glowinsky, Jill Goldberg-Reitman, Jeffrey Goldfarb, Harry Gorman, Sara Gottlieb, Abraham Green, Louis Greenbaum, Michael Halbert, Susan Harris, Debbie Kimel, Lynn Kirshin, Henry Koschitzky, Stanley Kugelmass, Ruth Ladovsky, Judy Libman, Howard Lichtman, Glennie Lindenberg, Beverly Lyons, Agi Mandel, Ran Mesterman, Pamela Medjuck, Howard Meyer, Paul Morton, Gilbert Palter, Elliot Peranson, Morris Perlis, Gerald Richler, Rammy Rochman, Gerald Ross, Sheila Rother, Alan Sandler, Brian Schachter, Sara Schur, Laurie Sheff, Marlene Sklar, Arthur Stern, Raymond Stone, Kenneth Tanenbaum, Cyrel Troster

In addition to the Individual Representatives listed, each Group General Member of the Federation shall be entitled to two representatives on the Council (Group Representative Council Members). Any Group General Member which has membership in good standing in excess of 100 persons residing in the Greater Toronto Area shall be entitled to one additional Group Representative on the Council. According to the by-laws of UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, organizations and associations may apply to become Group General Members by submitting an application that confirms that it subscribes to the objects of the UJA Federation, and promotes the United Jewish Appeal annual campaign. Applications for Group General Membership were solicited via mail in September 2010. All Group General Members must be registered with UJA Federation by October 15, 2010.

Media bias workshop aims to expose 'big lie'

By LAUREN KRAMER
Pacific Correspondent

VANCOUVER — It's not often that the words of Adolf Hitler make an appropriate quote, but they drove home an important point Oct. 3 when Mike Fegelman, executive director of HonestReporting Canada, delivered a talk to members of the Richmond, B.C. Jewish community.

Fegelman was in town to present a workshop about identifying and countering unfair media coverage of Israel.

"Hitler once said, 'Make the lie big, make it simple, keep telling it and eventually everyone will believe it,'" Fegelman said. "It worked for the Nazi propaganda machine, and now it's being used by the Arab world and by Palestinians to ensure that a particular message is being broadcast to the media."

Fegelman spoke at Beth Tikvah Synagogue in Richmond, describing to a rapt audience of 50 how news stories can be manufactured and how false, malicious and egregious accusations are quoted on the record to this day.

"This is why HonestReporting was created 10 years ago," he said. "We were fed up with the coverage of Israel and needed a response committee to deal with it, so that we can engage with the media and be advocates and ambassadors for Israel."

HonestReporting is dedicated to ensuring fair and accurate media coverage of Israel and the Middle East. The mission of HonestReporting Canada, which has 25,000 members, is to mobilize thousands of Canadians to directly target anti-Israel bias in the Canadian media.

To illustrate his point, Fegelman showed examples of doctored photographs that were published out of context, but when the context is made evident, they suggest a very different reality. One cropped image depicted a Palestinian throwing what appears to be a stone. The unedited image shows him surrounded by eight photographers who are sufficiently close to him to suggest that there is no immediate danger and that this was a manufactured situation.

In another image, a Palestinian woman holds a photograph of her destroyed home while standing strategically before a section of the West Bank security barrier that was spray-painted with the English words: "stop kill [sic] the Palestinians." The unadulterated photograph shows the woman surrounded by photographers.

"How did they know to be there?" Fegelman wonders. "Who takes a leisurely stroll to the security barrier with a picture of their house? This is a very cleverly designed photograph that tells us that there's a process involved here."

Fegelman said that Canadians are lucky, because our news media outlets tend to be professional and responsible.

"I don't believe the Canadian media has any desire to malign the State of Israel or that they're anti-Semitic," he said. "But there are some very serious impediments to doing good media coverage of the Middle East, because the news process, not the news makers, is biased against Israel."

Part of that process, he explained, is the question of what's newsworthy. The media maxim is "If it bleeds, it leads," which is why subjects such as Israel's technological and medical prowess and its many Nobel laureates seldom make it into newspapers.

"When I ask editors why they aren't publishing stories about a rocket landing next to a kindergarten in Sderot, for example, they'll say it doesn't have news currency," Fegelman said. "That's not true. It's the responsibility of the media to tell this story."

"We need to remember how much power the media has," he continued. "What is reported in the news pages oftentimes becomes foreign policy tomorrow. The media educates the masses and teaches us what's going on in the world."

And their lessons can be incredibly inaccurate at times, he said, citing a story in the Al-Ameen Post, a Canadian Islamic newspaper, alleging that Israel was trying to harvest the organs of 25,000 Ukrainian children.

"B'nai Brith Canada found the story, complained, and within a couple of days, the paper apologized," he said.

Last month, Time magazine published a cover story under the title "Why Israel Doesn't Care about Peace," in which Israelis were depicted as decadent, affluent people who aren't interested in peace and don't believe in the peace process.

"HonestReporting believes that continued media bias against Israel will only lead to the rise of anti-Israel sentiment," Fegelman said. He cited as evidence the attempt by activists to boycott Mountain Equipment Co-op for sourcing products from Israel and the rise of anti-Israel sentiment on Canadian campuses.

He encouraged the Jewish community to create a dialogue with the news media through letters and phone calls in response to stories about Israel that they find disturbing or inaccurate. "Be informed about what's going on and teach your kids to be media literate," he urged. "Watch as much news as you can, and be an ambassador for Israel wherever you are."

The Community is Invited to

A SCHOLAR-IN-RESIDENCE WEEKEND
Friday, October 22 - Sunday, October 24

GERALD GALL, OC
University of Alberta Law School Professor,
Human Rights Activist and CJN Columnist

The Challenge to Modern Canadian Jewry: Social, Legal and Institutional Dynamics

Friday lecture — after Shabbat service 8 pm
Contemporary Anti-Semitism

Saturday lecture — after Havdallah 8 pm
The Jewish Community as an Ethno-cultural Minority in Canada

Sunday lecture — 10 am
Jewish Responsibility to the Broader Canadian Community

RSVP:
Temple Emanu-El 120 Old Colony Rd. 416-449-3880

MAGDA
GONDOR BERKOVITS
CANDIDATE FOR COUNCILLOR
WARD 10, YORK CENTRE
Campaign Office
816 Sheppard Ave. West

416-633-3980
www.votemagda.ca

SHAAR SHALOM SYNAGOGUE
A Proud Participant in Holocaust Education Week

Presents

KEEPING THE MESSAGE ALIVE
WHEN THERE ARE NO MORE EYEWITNESSES

Elly Gotz, concentration camp survivor
Professor Sara Horowitz, York University
Professor Robert Jan Van Pelt, University of Waterloo
Moderated by Dr. Howard Adelman

Wednesday, November 3 ~ 8 pm

Shaar Shalom Synagogue
2 Simonston Blvd, Thornhill
905-889-4975

Generously sponsored by Julie Silver and Arthur Helman and Shaar Shalom Brotherhood

Temple Sinai Nursery School

210 Wilson Avenue, Toronto M5M 3B1
T. 416.487.3281 • F. 416.487.5499 • E. school@templesinai.net

Temple Sinai Nursery School where fun, warmth, caring, security, exploring, learning, and discovery lives! Activities include music and drumming specialists, Mad Science program, Judaic curriculum and celebrations, gym, library, cooking, arts & crafts, and outside theatre and playground.

2011/2012 Registration

Twinkle Tots: 12 to 24 months by start date
Kiddie Ko-Op: 2 years* *by December 31, 2011
Nursery: 3 years*
Junior Kindergarten: 4 years*
Senior Kindergarten: 5 years*

Temple Members: October 18, 2010
Alumni: October 28, 2010
Current Families: October 25, 2010
Community: November 1, 2010

TEMPLE SINAI
CONGREGATION OF TORONTO
www.templesinai.net

The newest addition to the CJN...

The Canadian Jewish Shmooze

Read the CJN's new blog!
http://canadianjewishnews.blogspot.com

Coast to Coast

Montreal Y polls members on Saturday hours policy

By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — One year after its controversial decision to open its main Snowdon branch on Saturday for limited operation, the YM-YWHA is polling its members on whether that should change.

Between Oct. 20 and 26, adult members can cast a secret ballot on whether they think the Y should be closed on Shabbat, as it was before Oct. 31, 2009, or operate on Saturday virtually like any other day of the week.

No formal consultation of the membership was conducted prior to the decision last year.

Executive director Michael Crelinsten said the number of people using the Y on Saturdays is averaging a disappointing 250, compared to the "thousands" that pass through the building on Sunday.

One of the most popular facilities, a room with an array of electrically powered cardiovascular-training equipment, is not open Saturdays, nor are there any group fitness classes.

Keeping the cardio room closed was part of a compromise the Y reached with a group of congregational rabbis out of respect for Jewish law's proscription against initiating an electrical current on Shabbat.

"Frankly, the current situation is not pleasing anybody," Crelinsten said, neither those who want the full use of the facilities seven days a week nor those who are observant or believe that the Y, as a major Jewish institution, should maintain community tradition.

Opting for virtually full operation on Saturday would mean that the only part of the Y that would be closed are the front desk and the restaurant, he said, to avoid the exchange of money, which is also forbidden by Jewish law.

This is not a referendum, since the poll will not be binding. Crelinsten said the Y's boards of directors and trustees will take the results "under advisement" and make a decision shortly afterward. The results will, however, be made public.

Voting is taking place in the atrium, as well as through the Y's website. The polling station will be closed on Shabbat from 2 p.m. Friday, Oct. 22, until 8 a.m. Sunday, Oct. 24.

Voters must be 18 years or older and a member of the Y as of July 31, 2010.

The Y has 6,500 members, of whom 3,500 pay full fees, Crelinsten said.

If membership opinion favours full operation, Crelinsten acknowledged that the Y leaders will be faced with breaking their agreement with the rabbis.

"But the Y is membership-driven, and the feedback we have had from [Federation CJA] and, to some extent, the rabbis, is that, at least, if we open on Shabbat, the decision should be broader based," he said.

One of rabbis involved in negotiations with the Y, Reuben Poupko, said it's possible the Y realizes opening on Saturday was not a good idea and is looking for a face-saving way of returning to its former schedule.

Winnipeg's Gray was a philanthropist

By MYRON LOVE
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG —Gerald Gray is being remembered as an unassuming man who gave millions to charity yet shunned the spotlight.

"His death is a devastating loss," said Penny Kalef, who with her husband, Gerry, were longtime friends of the former bottling company magnate. "He was extremely caring and generous."

Obituary

Longtime community leader Marjorie Blankstein recalls first meeting Gray in the early 1990s when community leaders were trying to raise funds to build what is now the Asper Jewish Community Campus. The facility's Gray Academy of Jewish Education was named in his honour, reflecting the generosity of his contribution to the campus project.

"He was a pleasure to deal with," Blankstein said. "He was very supportive. He was a really nice guy and a caring human being."

Gray, who died suddenly on Oct. 8 at the age of 80, was, along with his family, second only to the Asper family in contributions to the Jewish community and the community at large in Winnipeg.

Gray was born in the old North End. He was a nephew of M.A. Gray, the first Jewish member of the Manitoba Legislature. He dropped out of school at age 16 after his father died.

He went into the bottling industry and eventually became president of Blackwoods Beverages. The company had plants in Winnipeg and Vancouver and bottled and distributed soft drink products such as Pepsi, 7Up, Crush, Schweppes Ginger Ale, Hires Root Beer and Nestea. In the early 1990s, Gray sold the company to Pepsi for several million dollars.

Gray was also a founder of the Jewish Foundation of Manitoba, and in the mid-1990s, he offered to put up $10 million in the unsuccessful community effort to keep the NHL's Winnipeg Jets in Winnipeg.

In addition, he had pledged $1 million to the new Canadian Human Rights Museum being built in Winnipeg. Most recently, he donated $1 million toward the makeover of an inner-city park in an area of downtown that is a central gathering place for new immigrants and low income people.

Gray is survived by two daughters and a son.

Cleaning Protection Restoration
For All Your Stone Surfaces
MARBLE RESCUE
Insured and Bonded
Technicians with over 15 years experience.
We'll beat any written residential quote by 20%
416-782-BUFF(2833)
Don't replace your dull, damaged stone & marble. Turn to us!

JEWISH FAMILY & CHILD
THANK YOU TO THE FOLLOWING SYNAGOGUES WHO WARMLY WELCOMED OUR CLIENTS DURING THE HIGH HOLIDAYS
Adath Israel Synagogue
Beth Avraham - Baycrest Terrace
Beth Avraham Yosef Synagogue of Toronto
Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue
Beth Shalom Synagogue
Beth Torah Congregation
Beth Tzedec Congregation
Chabad @ Flamingo
Chabad of Midtown
Congregation Darchei Noam
Congregation Shir Libeynu
First Narayever Congregation
Habonim - Winchevsky Centre
Holy Blossom Temple
Kiever Congregation
Pride of Israel Synagogue
Shaarei Shomayim Congregation
Shaarei Tefillah Congregation
Temple Kol Ami
Temple Sinai Congregation
The Village Shul
Thornhill Community Shul
Visit JF&CS online: www.jfandcs.com
Find us on Facebook: facebook.com/jfandcs

Your path to Torah, Tefilla and Derech Eretz begins at...
גן נתיבות
Gan Netivot
open house
NORTH CAMPUS
The Jack and Anne Weinbaum Education Centre
SOUTH CAMPUS
Shaarei Shomayim
770 Glencairn Avenue
Toronto, Ontario

Hezbollah mischief could mean chaos in Lebanon

As Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad began his provocative visit to Lebanon last week, analysts were busy assessing its impact both locally and regionally.

"A surging Hezbollah is making increasingly threatening noises against the government of Sa'ad Hariri," wrote the Globe and Mail's Patrick Martin on Oct. 13.

Hezbollah, of course, is Iran's proxy in Lebanon. Ahmadinejad's presence there was not only wildly celebrated by Hezbollah leader Hassan Nasrallah, it added sinister force to its determination to thwart the United Nations' investigation into the 2005 assassination of former Lebanese prime minister Rafik Hariri, Sa'ad's father.

According to Reports

By PAUL MICHAELS

Unofficial reports about the inquiry, the Special Tribunal for Lebanon headed by Canadian Daniel Bellemare, point to possible indictments of Hezbollah officials before the end of the year. Hezbollah is trying to forestall this by, among other things, attempting to cut off funding in the Lebanese parliament for the tribunal.

But Hezbollah's intimidation goes much further. Last week's CJN editorial "Sacrificing Lebanon on Iran's altar?" drew attention to a Hezbollah member of the Lebanese parliament who warned that any Lebanese who might accept a finding of the organization's culpability would be killed as a "collaborator" with Israel and the United States. (Hezbollah recently presented "evidence" showing that Israel was responsible for Hariri's assassination – a claim dismissed by UN investigators.)

Scores of Iranian Revolutionary Guards are in Lebanon training Hezbollah personnel. Hezbollah's heavily armed fighters have been re-deployed in the south, in violation of UN Security Council Resolution 1701 barring their presence. Under the impotent watch of UNIFIL, Hezbollah has all but taken over the country.

While some observers speculate that Hezbollah is preparing a coup d'etat, others caution that it need not go that far, at least not now, given that it's already largely in control thanks to its Iranian sponsor. In the Oct. 13 Jerusalem Post, analyst Jonathan Spyer wrote that "reports of an upcoming coup are probably overblown. But Ahmadinejad's appearance on the scene will exacerbate fears. This is undoubtedly what the Iranian president wants."

Can anything prevent a total takeover?

Martin argued in the Globe that Syrian President Bashar Assad, who has his own designs on the country, might well be the required counter-force by trying to "play Hezbollah off against [Sa'ad] Hariri, then offer Syrian assistance in resolving the political crisis."

If that seems a bit fanciful, it's also accepted as a likely response by veteran Mideast observer Samuel Segev. In the Oct. 13 Winnipeg Free Press, Segev wrote about "behind-the-scene manoeuvering" involving Turkey and Syria. Despite what he calls their "competitive alliance" with Tehran, the two do not want to see Shia Iran taking over Lebanon through its proxy.

"A Syrian military return to Lebanon this time would be explained by the desire to save the Sunnis and the Christians from the hands of Hezbollah and Iran.

In such a dramatic and chaotic situation, one should not rule out an American, European, Turkish, moderate Arab countries and Israeli agreement to have the Syrians return to Beirut."

However, what needs to be explained is how Syria, which has grown increasingly dependent on Iran and which has provided massive military support to Hezbollah, is going to be able to displace Iran without also having to vastly weaken Hezbollah. Moreover, how would this be accomplished without throwing Lebanon back into warfare?

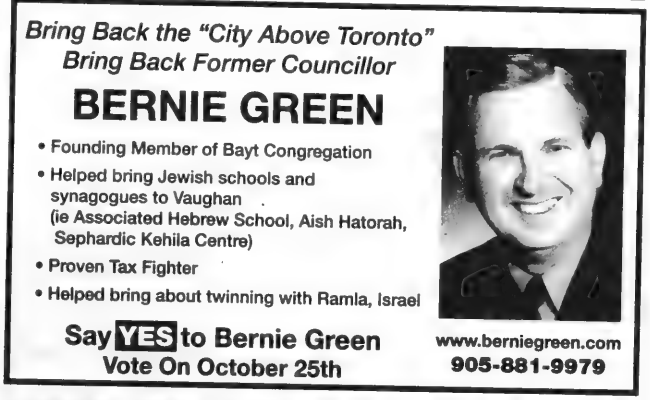
* * *

A great deal has been written recently about the official Palestinian refusal to accept Israel as the state of the Jewish people, in keeping with Israel's acceptance of a future Palestine as the state of the Palestinian people. What has been overlooked in this discussion is that the Palestinians themselves, through the Palestinian National Council – the PLO's parliament-in-exile, which met in Algiers in November 1988 – set a precedent of recognizing Israel as Jewish. They did this when, 41 years after the fact, they finally accepted the 1947 UN partition resolution. In the words of the PNC, the resolution "partitioned Palestine into two states, Arab and Jewish."

It appears that this was the only time the word "Jewish" in connection with statehood has appeared in an official Palestinian document. But just as the PNC went on to argue that the partition resolution "still provides the legal basis for the right of the Palestinian Arab people to national sovereignty and independence," its members cannot, without contradicting themselves, deny the same for the Jewish people.

Paul Michaels is communications director for the Canada-Israel Committee.

VOTE
Election Day is October 25th
Opposes removal of Wilson Heights on/off ramps at Allen Rd
Will push to remove personal vehicle tax ($60/vehicle)
Will fight to include vital retail options at Bathurst Manor Plaza
Is a strong voice for the Jewish community
Brian
Shifman
For Toronto Councillor, Ward 10 York Centre
www.voteshifman.ca · 416-888-1137



Bring Back the "City Above Toronto"
Bring Back Former Councillor
BERNIE GREEN
• Founding Member of Bayt Congregation
• Helped bring Jewish schools and synagogues to Vaughan (ie Associated Hebrew School, Aish Hatorah, Sephardic Kehila Centre)
• Proven Tax Fighter
• Helped bring about twinning with Ramla, Israel
Say YES to Bernie Green
Vote On October 25th
www.berniegreen.com
905-881-9979

Couple produces nostalgic look at old Canadian shuls

By BILL GLADSTONE
Special to The CJN

An Edmonton couple who assembled and distributed three PDF documents over the Internet on old synagogues of Canada say they were amazed at the positive reactions that the electronic publications sparked across the country.

"We were overwhelmed," said Bernie Estrin, who along with his wife, Gail, produced the three pieces, one on Western Canada, the second on Central Canada (Ontario and Quebec), and the third on the Atlantic region.

"We heard from all types of people, and many told us the bulletin reminded them of where they were born – they said it took them back to their youth."

The Estrins sent out the three special editions of their Canada Jewish Pipeline, which is normally a small weekly e-mail bulletin, shortly after Canada Day as a means of celebrating Canada's 143rd birthday.

Each one features historic photographs and capsule histories of various old synagogues in major cities and a few towns.

"Gail did most of the work," Bernie admitted. "Every city has a Jewish historical society, and they're usually happy to share their work with legitimate Jewish organizations. So with their permission, we were able to reprint a lot of Canadian Jewish history."

The Ontario and Quebec edition features articles and old photographs on numerous Montreal congregations including Shearith Israel, the Stanley Street Synagogue, and Shaar Hashomayim.

Also featured are the Toronto congregations Knesseth Israel (the Junction shul), Holy Blossom Temple, Congregation Anshei Minsk, the First Narayever Congregation, the Kiever Shul and the Beach Hebrew Institute. Articles about the Jewish communities in Sherbrooke, Que., Quebec City, Kirkland Lake,Ont., London, Ont., and Ottawa are also included.

The Estrins started their weekly Internet newsletter eight years ago as an e-mailed bulletin for the Jewish community of Edmonton. They later added Calgary and changed the name to the Alberta Jewish Pipeline. When Vancouver and Winnipeg were added, it became the Western Canada Jewish Pipeline.

It's now called the Canada Jewish Pipeline, with editions for Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver, Winnipeg and Ottawa, but it doesn't yet include the major Jewish population centres of Toronto or Montreal.

"Basically it's a very quick take on the upcoming events and the community news – somebody had a baby, somebody's getting married – that sort of thing," Bernie Estrin said.

Former Albertans living in Toronto, among others, may be interested in subscribing to the free weekly bulletin to keep up to date on happenings in their former hometowns, Estrin said.

For a weekly subscription or a copy of one of the Old Synagogues of Canada editions, e-mail the Estrins at info@canadajewishpipeline.ca, or visit their website at www. canadajewishpipeline.ca.

On Monday, October 25, 2010,
please support your community candidates.
MAKE YOUR VOTE COUNT!

For voting information or a ride to your polling station, please call 416-398-8257.

Elect James Pasternak
Councillor, Ward 10
www.jamespasternak.com

On Monday October 25
elect Robin Shugar
School Board TRUSTEE
www.RobinShugar.ca
TDSB, YORK CENTRE

Re-Elect Dave Barrow for Mayor

Proven Leadership.
www.davebarrowformayor.ca
Please vote on October 25th
Richmond Hill, Ontario

Elect Dr. Gila Martow
Candidate Ward 5 Vaughan Council
On Oct 25
vote for change

905-881-9909
www.gilamartow.ca

What people are saying about Gila:

"I believe Gila Martow is the best choice for Ward 5 Councillor because she possesses the qualities that our City of Vaughan needs to move forward in a positive and successful way. Gila is a hard working, community driven individual - she has my vote!"
Susan Kadis – long time Vaughan city councillor and former Member of Parliament for Thornhill

"As the Member of Provincial Parliament for Thornhill, I am pleased to offer my support to Dr. Gila Martow, Candidate for City Council Ward 5 Vaughan. With Gila, I am certain that residents will be well represented and will be able to feel confident that their interests are being kept front and centre at the Council Table."
Peter Shurman – Thornhill Member of Provincial Parliament

"Gila is a good friend and a close supporter for whom I have a great deal of respect. Her utter devotion to her community exemplifies a standard of excellence to which we should all aspire."
Peter Kent – Thornhill Member of Parliament

"Gila is a bright, articulate, natural leader who has the ability to bring together people with different views to find a workable solution. As an integral part of our community, Gila understands it well and has been a caring and dedicated advocate for all segments. I'm convinced Dr. Gila Martow will make an excellent representative for Thornhill and will be a welcome breath of fresh air on Vaughan Council."
Rabbi Yisroel Janowski - Thornhill

Allan Kliger – the king of soup and 'spoonable' foods

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

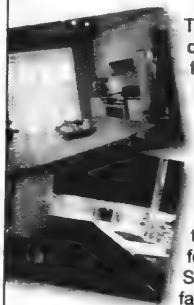
The brass plaque on his cluttered desk says it all: Souper Al.

Allan Kliger, president of Victory's Kitchen, is a major producer of private-label "spoonable" foods ranging from soups, sauces and gravies to dips, pizza sauces and salad dressings.

"We make hundreds of products," says Kliger, a 52-year-old former tax lawyer whose forte is soup.

Kliger's "spoonables" are sold throughout Canada, the United States, Mexico, Japan, South Korea and Hong Kong. In Toronto, supermarket chain stores including Loblaws, Metro, Longo's, Sobeys and Safeway stock them on their shelves.

Renovating your Florida Dream Home?



The thought of coordinating a renovation for your Florida Dream Home when you're in Toronto can be daunting. That's where we can help. Our representatives will meet with you in your Toronto/GTA home and take care of everything for you. Our team in South Florida will facilitate the whole project for you and keep you updated on the progress with photos.

It's the ultimate solution. Avoid living in renovation - just turn the key and enjoy.

NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY!
If you're considering purchasing a Florida home we'll introduce you to helpful, reliable people to help you get the deal of a lifetime.

Also offering:
Property Maintenance Package
For continued peace of mind
Welcome Home Package
Convenient services for your arrival

416-699-0120
delrayinteriors.com
Interior Design & Property Services
delray INTERIORS

Kliger, who has been in the food business for 25 years, works out of a 120,000-square-foot plant in western Toronto that used to be an abattoir before he refurbished it.

Not bad for a guy whose mini-empire was launched in a rented apartment in midtown Toronto when he was jobless.

A graduate of the University of Western Ontario whose parents are Bernard and Ethel Kliger, he might have still been a practising lawyer had an employer not terminated him.

Not long after being hired as an in-house counsel at a local accounting firm, Kliger learned that his services were no longer required. "I was given the boot," he said. "They decided they didn't need me. It was a disillusioning experience."

When he was on the eve of embarking on a trip around the world to nurse his wounds, a friend handed him a copy of Ayn Rand's fourth and last novel, Atlas Shrugged. The book, he recalled, taught him the value of independence and creativity and bolstered his self-confidence.

Shortly after returning to Toronto, Kliger was puttering around in his apartment, ready to make lunch for himself, when he noticed two cans of soup in his kitchen cupboard.

In one of those eureka moments he would savour, he asked himself why consumers could not buy fresh soup and had to be content with the canned or dehydrated variety.

"No one was doing it in Toronto," he said in a reference to what he describes as "fresh, refrigerated, convenient, retail soup."

Armed with a new, yet old, concept, Kliger began experimenting with soup recipes after receiving government research grants.

"I loved the idea of starting something from scratch," said Kliger, who's passionate about food.

Borrowing a Cuisinart from a friend, he developed a line of soups – from minestrone vegetable to chicken noodle – whose flavour and consistency were never less than uniform. Once they had passed his demanding taste test, he hired a caterer to cook them.

He approached Loblaws and a number of specialty food stores and, much to his relief, they recognized the novelty and usefulness of his freshly-made soups.

Sales sputtered, at first. But after convincing Fran's, a Toronto restaurant chain, to try his wares, he never looked back.

"I couldn't accept the idea of failure," he said.

Focusing on restaurant chains, he picked up the Great Canadian Soup Company, as well as Cara, the supplier of Swiss Chalet and Steak & Burger.

Allan Kliger

Allan Kliger at his plant. [Sheldon Kirshner photos]

As volume increased, Kliger rented commercial space, hired his first employee and purchased 40-gallon stainless steel kettles.

At this juncture, Kliger, then single, was still sleeping on a mattress on the floor of his flat.

In 1989, flush with success, he bought a building that sat on 1-1/2 acres, in the packing house district.

Today, Victory's Kitchen – a maze of connecting production rooms brimming with 400- and 600-gallon kettles and Israeli-made packaging machines, freezers and storage areas – employs more than 40 workers, all clad in white gowns, hair nets and latex gloves.

Soups, from wild mushroom and egg drop to roasted red pepper and potato leek, account for 40 per cent of overall production.

New products are always in the pipeline. "We're in a great period of creativity," said Kliger, whose wife, Aviva, works for the Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School, where their children, Jedediah, Eden and Isaiah, are students. "It's buzzing."

Private labels, tailor-made to customer needs, are Kliger's specialty. As always, he continues to cater to grocery and restaurant chains.

Some of his products are kosher, under the supervision of the Kashruth Council of Canada (COR).

He takes pride in the fact that quality controls and sanitation standards at Victory's Kitchen are second to none, and that it is a vertically integrated company.

"We grow our own produce," he said, taking a luscious carrot out of a bag.

Given the scope of his operation, Kliger travels quite frequently to drum up sales and keep customers happy. "I'm the rainmaker," he said, a smile creasing his face.

Catering is our business
so you can take care of yours.

From boardroom to dining room,
we cater gatherings for groups of all sizes.

We deliver to the GTA and surrounding areas.

Delivery charges may vary. Minimum order for delivery $75.

416.493.4333

The PICKLE BARREL

ALWAYS SOMETHING FOR EVERYONE

Stir Crazy

Former Israeli army officer segues into baking

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Nissim Sadiklar was in his element when a visitor arrived at his bakery, Creation Food Services, one recent afternoon.

He was kneading and braiding a challah, one of 40 products he and his staff churn out at a 9,000-square-foot facility in Woodbridge in suburban Toronto.

A former Israeli army officer, Sadiklar makes a dizzying array of Jewish and Middle Eastern-style baked goods, all of which are certifiably kosher, nut-free and sold in bulk in frozen form.

Apart from bourekas, bureks, puff pastries, strudels and croissants, he whips up Danish pastries, cookies, muffins, yogurt cakes, breads, pitas, buns and rolls.

Sadiklar's products are currently sold at Wal-Mart, the T & T chain, What a Bagel and Aroma cafes. They're also served at Jewish summer camps in Ontario.

He also sells to individuals, who can order online or buy from his recently opened factory outlet.

In addition to the Toronto area, Sadiklar's line of goods are sold in Montreal, Buffalo, New York City, Boston and Detroit.

Nissim Sadiklar and his wife, Aviva, at their bakery in Woodbridge.
[Sheldon Kirshner photos]

And if his plans materialize, Creation Food Services will expand further afield in Canada and the United States.

Though his business has grown by leaps and bounds since he started eight years ago, Sadiklar has not advertised until now, depending on word-of-mouth references.

"It's an old-fashioned way of operating, I know," he said.

But his formula has proven to be successful because of the quality and pricing of his pastries and breads.

Many of his private customers are Jewish, but Sadiklar gets a lot of orders from Arabs, Turks and Armenians as well.

Happily describing himself as a workaholic, Sadiklar, 54, immigrated to Canada in the mid-1990s.

A native of Jerusalem whose parents made aliyah from Turkey in 1947, Sadiklar was a distributor of pastries and the owner of a kosher vegetarian and dairy restaurant on the campus of York University before establishing Creation Food Services.

In Israel, he was an officer in the army, charged with maintaining armoured vehicles in the field.

He lived and worked in the Golan Heights, claiming he was the first Israeli to buy an apartment unit in Katzrin, the administrative centre and only town in the Golan.

A veteran of the 1982 war in Lebanon, he spent about a dozen years in the army before deciding to become an independent businessman.

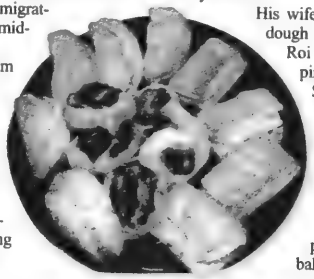
He opened pizza parlours and a cafe in two settlements close to Jerusalem, learning the business from reading books and consulting his mother, Rachel, an accomplished cook.

Sadiklar, who has had kosher certification from the Kashruth Council of Canada since 2005, runs Creation Food Services as a family business.

His wife, Aviva, works on the dough line, while his sons, Roi and Kfir, handle shipping, receiving and sales. Sadiklar's daughter-in-law, Rosita, performs secretarial duties.

He creates new products, bakes and oversees the operation.

Although not a professionally trained baker, Sadiklar knows the business from top to bottom, judging by the success Creation Food Services has enjoyed.



Bourekas, stuffed with fillings such as cheese, potatoes, spinach, olives and mushrooms, are baked and then frozen on site.

100% Handmade
Dim Sum
asian legend
northern chinese cuisine
www.asianlegend.ca
Downtown 418 Dundas St. W. Toronto 416 977 2909
North York 5188 Yonge St. Toronto 416 229 9797
Markham 3636 Steeles Ave. E. Ha. 152-3 905 940 8370
Finch/Leslie 125 Bond Rd. Toronto 416 569 3388
Scarborough 4452 Sheppard Ave. East 416 298 8881
Thornhill 505 Hwy 7 E. unit 77-79 905 763 8271

Bistro on Avenue
Wings and Ribs Simply the best
Bistro on Avenue
1678 Avenue Road,
Toronto
(N. of Lawrence)
416-783-1928
www.thebistros.ca
DINE-IN • TAKE-OUT
Thank your for selecting us
"Best Wings" in Toronto
Catch all your favourite sports at the Bistro-Bar and enjoy our year round heated patio
Tues. Wing Night - $6.75
Weekend Combo - $9.95
Wings, Chicken Breasts, Bistro Poppers,
Fries and Dipping Sauce.
NEW!
Lunch Special
$7.95
Bistro on Avenue
Wings and Ribs Simply the best
Bring in this coupon and get
$4.00 OFF!
INCLUDING TAKE OUT
This coupon may be redeemed for a total of $4.00 when purchasing two entrees valued at $9.95 (or greater) each (or $2.00 off each) . Limit two adult single entrees per coupon. Coupon is not redeemable for cash or with any other coupon or special offer. One coupon per visit. Applicable taxes are extra. Limited time offer.

Stir Crazy

Food is much more than food

By BEVERLY LEVITT
Special to The CJN

And the lord said to Adam, "Of every tree of the garden, thou mayest freely eat… except one." Adam took a bite anyway – and it wasn't because he was hungry. As Adam's appetite invariably led to his ruin, so does it often lead to ours.

So much food, so little time…

In our land of gastronomical plenty, we have long passed the period where we were eating to live – today most of us live to eat. By analyzing why we eat, what we eat, when we eat it, we will try to gain insight into our psyches – especially that uncontrollable feat of the subconscious – devouring a quart of chocolate ice cream in one sitting.

Aside from man's inherent urge to rebel or be naughty, most medical professionals agree that people eat primarily because of how it makes them feel. Especially when they're upset.

"When we feel emotionally deprived, we very often act out with food," says psychologist and screenwriter Michael Berlin. "If I'm feeling deprived in the world, why shouldn't I eat whatever I want? What do I have to lose?"

So we choose extravagant, sugary, fattening treats which are considered taboos – mostly chocolate or creamy desserts. When we're happy, we don't need to compensate with food. In fact, when we're happy we don't eat as much, in general.

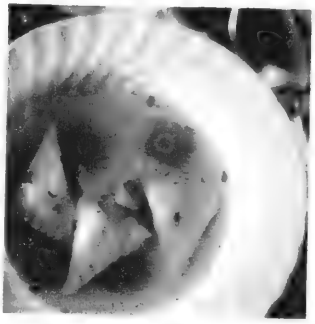
The chocolate industry thrives on people's upset moods. Many people instinctively eat chocolate because it makes them feel better – physiologically! Serotonin is released, which calms the senses and contributes to a sense of well being. "We're not saying there's anything wrong with eating a piece of chocolate. It's when we gorge an entire pound, we have to worry," Berlin emphasizes.

Other people have the opposite reaction. When they're upset, they refuse to feed or nourish themselves. Their stomachs tighten, and the thought of putting anything into their mouths makes them nauseated. They will deliberately let their cupboards get bare so that they can't eat anything. And the idea of going to the market seems as overwhelming as climbing Mount Everest.

A favourite saying of psychiatrist, Dr. William Rader, who ran a chain of eating disorder clinics, is, "Food isn't food. It has a myriad of other connotations. Food is your best friend.It's always there for you. It never judges you. It even comforts you when you're depressed. Your very favourite food can make your troubles disappear. Albeit temporarily! Food can also be your drug. Or your lover. Or the downfall of your life."

According to Rader, "everyone has trigger foods – comfort foods, familiar foods – foods we automatically reach for when we're upset."

These are not necessarily taboo foods, but chances are they were fed to us by our mothers when we were very young. When we were good, we were given sweets. When we were bad, we were sent to bed without supper. When we were upset, mom soothed us by serving up a special dish to make us feel better. Or she served our favourite meal just to show how much she loved us.



"Come on son, have a babkah and we'll talk about what happened. You don't look so good, come, sit, I'll make you a nice bowl of chicken soup. Sorry you didn't get that job, Levi, but I made your favourite stuffed cabbage. Eat, eat, you'll forget all about it."

Or, the proverbial, "Guess what I made for dinner – your favourite brisket!"

When we were children, our mothers gave us ice cream and cake when we had birthdays; chocolate cake, sweet rolls, or chocolate chip cookies when we came home from school; various forms of chicken soup – with matzah balls, noodles or even rice, when we got sick. Some of us remember the BRAT diet (foods prescribed for diarrhea: Bananas, Rice, Apple Sauce and Toast) and they still give us solace.

"We eat these foods not because we're really hungry; we have a different kind of hunger," Rader says. "We're anxious, we're nervous, we're scared. The comfort foods of our childhood calm us down; they embody mom's concern and kind heart."

The simple act of smelling certain foods can have the same effect. "The aromas of our early years will forever haunt us," explains Beverly Hills psychiatrist, Dr. Howard Shapiro. "There are certain buildings I go into that take me right back to my grandma's kitchen, with her chicken soup simmering on the stove. One whiff – I feel her warm, loving presence."

The way we remember family life is often associated with our memories of the dinner table. "In my family, dinner was the most important event of the day," Berlin recalls. "My mother believed that the family should eat together every night, no matter what. Because she nourished my sister and I so well, we always felt loved and well taken care of. We learned early that food not only nourishes the body, it nourishes the soul."

"Who eats first or who is served first invariably denotes social position within families, offers Shapiro. "Usually that honour is given to the father, and often there are severe consequences for breaking it."

Next in line is the oldest son, and many daughters complain that their mothers showed favouritism toward their brothers, painfully remembering the words, 'Look, son, I saved the best part for you.'"

Dr. Irene Goldenberg, family psychologist and professor of psychiatry at UCLA, adds, "In many immigrant families, the mother wasn't expected to eat with the family; she was so busy cooking, serving, and cleaning, she often dined in the kitchen, straight out of the pot. The kids got the message that dad was the breadwinner and therefore deserved to be waited on. Little girls were taught that would be their role when they grew up. Little boys got another message...

"Food isn't as significant as the statement it makes.'We are a family who sits down together.' 'Mother takes care of everyone by waiting on us.' 'We eat in the living room and watch TV'".

The damning testimony that she was hardly ever home for dinner contributed to federal judge on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit Sharon Prost, losing custody of her two sons. Prost was accused by her au pair of "often eating dinner alone, very late at night, sitting on the kitchen floor, surrounded by briefing papers." The fact that she woke up at 6 a.m. to play with her sons and make them breakfast apparently held little sway with the judge.

"The dwindling of the family dinner signifies the breakdown of the family," Goldenberg says. "In days gone by, the traditional, nightly meal was a signpost of stability. Today, mom and dad are often working late, and the kids are told to heat up leftovers or get takeout for dinner. Or mom and the kids sit down to a nice dinner but one chair is empty. No one says anything. No one has to.

"Teenagers, in rebellion, will make excuses to get out of family dinners. Or, worse, they will defiantly refuse to eat what mom has so painstakingly made, claiming they're on a diet, they have suddenly become vegetarians, or they'll drop the bomb, 'I hate your cooking! You're the reason I'm fat!'"

According to Goldenberg, their angry accusations have more to do with family dynamics than food.

But errant eating patterns aren't always harmful. Some people choose healthful foods, in times of stress. One woman can only eat raw fruits and vegetables when she's upset, claiming she just can't get herself to turn on the stove. Another woman will turn on the stove, but only to make oatmeal, served with raisins and bananas, just as her health-conscious mother fed her as a child.

The actual preparation of food can be a positive way out of a depression. Since being depressed is being out of control, being meticulous – cutting things into small, perfect pieces, following a recipe precisely, or just throwing everything into a pot and have it turn out delicious, is not only a creative, satisfying activity, it takes our mind off our problems. When we eat the fruits of our labour, our pride and self-esteem are validated, making us feel better. The preparation of holiday meals – Rosh Hashanah feasts and Yom Kippur break the fasts, Chanukah parties, Passover, Shabbat, or Sunday dinners – can be rewarding, as we assume our mother's role, and provide pleasure and sustenance to our own families. Our culinary labours bring us back to comforting times – perhaps hanging out in the kitchen with mom – and make us feel proud we can pass along this revered family tradition.

Continued on page 48

Come try gluten free stirfry combo at riz restaurant

1677 bayview ave., toronto • 416 487 8388 • rizrestaurantandcatering.com

Memories of childhood meals

Continued from page 47

Food produces still other feelings. "The sensation of being full actually makes us feel secure," notes Shapiro. "Thanksgiving is the most popular American holiday because people associate feeling full with being part of a happy family. It's the one time of year, it's good to stuff yourself," he smiles. At Passover we find ourselves doing the same thing—when we finally get to eat.

In the same vein, some people need a fully stocked larder because having enough food makes them feel secure. This is especially true of our parents who went through the Great Depression. They often buy more food than they need because they remember all too vividly what it feels like to ration it out.

So much food, so little time… Maybe the next time you find yourself taking a bite anyway -- and not because you are hungry, you'll think about your biblical role model, Adam, and dear ol' mom, bustling sweetly about the kitchen. You might even find yourself whispering, "Food is not food. It has a myriad of other connotations."

MATZAH BALL SOUP

Matzah balls
1 tbsp. schmaltz (rendered chicken fat)
1 tbsp. canola oil
2 eggs, beaten slightly
1/2 cup matzah meal
1 tsp. salt
2 tbsp. soup stock or water

Mix together fat, oil and eggs. Add matzah meal and salt. When well blended, add soup stock or water. Place in refrigerator for 30 minutes.

Using a tablespoon, fashion balls out of matzah meal mixture. Set aside. Bring to boil 2 quarts salted water; reduce heat, drop matzah balls into slightly bubbling water. Cover pot and cook 30 minutes. Transfer to soup that is slightly warm and simmer for 5-7 minutes. Makes 8 balls.

Chicken soup
1 - 4 lb. roasting chicken, cut into pieces
4 quarts cold water
1 large onion
6 stalks of celery with tops
4 carrots, sliced thick
1 parsnip
1/2 cup parsley, chopped

Clean and wash chicken thoroughly. Cover with water and bring to brisk boil. Skim until liquid is completely clear. Add onion, celery, carrots and parsnip. Boil gently 3 hours. Remove all vegetables but carrots. Fifteen minutes before serving, add parsley.

TAPIOCA PUDDING

The king of nursery desserts we were all given as babies, this soothing mixture of milk, eggs and sugar gives us just as much comfort today as it did then.

6 cups milk
1/2 cup minute tapioca beads
1 vanilla bean OR
1 tsp. pure vanilla extract
1/2 cup sugar
3 egg yolks

Combine milk, tapioca and vanilla bean in saucepan; bring to boil, stirring constantly with wooden spoon. Cook over low-medium heat 7 minutes. Beat sugar and egg yolks with wire whisk until light and yellow-coloured. Add a little of the hot tapioca mixture. Stirring constantly, return mixture to saucepan. When it begins to boil, continue cooking, stirring constantly, for 1 minute. Remove vanilla bean. Pour pudding into a serving dish or individual dishes and let cool. If desired, top with whip cream and peach or apricot jam. Chill until ready to serve.

AFTER SCHOOL APPLE PIE

Adapted from "Great Desserts from Ceil Dyer" McGraw Hill

1 1/4 cups unsweetened apple juice
1/4 cup apple brandy or applejack
3/4 cup granulated sugar
7 or 8 tart, crisp apples, such as Macintosh or Granny Smith, peeled, cored, and cut into wedges
3 tbsp. cornstarch
1 tbsp. butter
1/2 cup currant jelly
1 tbsp. more brandy or applejack
1 9-in. pie shell, baked and cooled whipped cream, lightly sweetened (optional)

In large saucepan over medium heat, combine apple juice or brandy and sugar. Bring to boil; add chopped apples. Cover and simmer 5 minutes or until apples are tender. With slotted spoon, transfer apples from liquid to colander. Reserve liquid. In small bowl, stir juice or brandy into cornstarch until smooth; add to liquid. Cook, stirring constantly, until thick and bubbly. Remove from heat; stir in butter. Cover and let stand for 30 minutes, or until thickened to a smooth custard.

In small saucepan, melt jelly over low heat. Stir in remaining brandy or applejack. Cool slightly. Brush bottom of baked pie shell with about one-fourth of mixture. Cover with cooled custard. Arrange apple slices in a circle over surface. Brush evenly with remaining jelly mixture. Cover and refrigerate until chilled. If desired, garnish with sweetened whipped cream. Serves 6 to 8.

OLD FASHIONED SPAGHETTI AND MEAT BALLS

Meat Balls
1 lb. lean ground sirloin
1 egg, lightly beaten
1/2 cup bread crumbs
1/2 cup parsley, chopped
1/2 cup raisins
1/2 cup pine nuts
salt and pepper to taste

Spaghetti Sauce
1 onion, chopped
1 green pepper, chopped
3 cloves garlic, chopped
1 tsp. dried basil
1 tsp. dried oregano
pure olive oil for frying
1 large can Italian plum tomatoes
1 small can tomato paste
1 cup hearty red wine
1 tbsp. fresh parsley
1/2 cup fresh mushrooms, halved

For meatballs: mix ingredients together by hand. Shape into balls. Lightly brown in olive oil.

For sauce: brown onion, pepper, garlic and spices in olive oil until golden. Add tomatoes, tomato paste, wine, and 2-3 cups water. Add meatballs. Cook over medium heat until tomatoes have completely dissolved. Add parsley and mushrooms. Lower flame and simmer until sauce becomes rich and thick. Serve over spaghetti or linguine. Serves 6.

ManChef.ca
Peter Graben's Cooking Program for Men
Mature Gentlemen - Caregivers - Baby Boomers - Stags - Bachelors - GenXers - Poker Nights 416-967-1818
peter@manchef.ca - www.manchef.ca

Anthony's Grill
is now at
1090 Don Mills Rd. (at Lawrence)
Shops at Don Mills - main flr. Royal Bank building
416-441-0195
BRUNCH, LUNCH & DINNER SPECIALS
DINNER SPECIALS
Fillet of Salmon, Chicken Asiago, Rack of Lamb, Seafood Linguine, Black Angus Prime Rib (includes Soup or Salad & Dessert) ..... from $12.95
Sunday Brunch $14.95
Breakfast Special - Open daily at 8:30 a.m. $6.99
Present this ad & Receive $10.00 OFF Breakfast, Lunch or Dinner When you spend $60 or more Mon. to Thurs. only. Expires Nov. 30, 2010 Cannot be used in conjunction with any other offer. One coupon per table
Present this ad & Receive $5.00 OFF When you spend $35 or more 7 Days a week. Expires Nov. 30, 2010 Cannot be used in conjunction with any other offer. One coupon per table

GOURMET BITES! SANDWICH BAR
For more information about Bites! Gourmet Sandwich Bar please visit our website:
www.bitesgourmetsandwiches.com
The best sandwich in town!
At Bites! Gourmet Sandwich Bar we serve quality sandwiches using only the finest ingredients.
Bites! restaurants are Kosher establishments.
100% Kosher
We Cater! Call (905) 370-0262
Bites! Rutherford Marketplace
9340 Bathurst Street, Vaughan
TAKEOUT: (905) 417-4937
Bites! & Hartmans Fine Kosher Foods
5988 Bathurst Street, Toronto
TAKEOUT: (416) 663-7779

Social Networking
@ The Canadian Jewish News
for the :-) generation

International

Israel & the Jewish World

Have you seen it lately?
www.cjnews.com
• Columnists • eCJN
• Features • Heebonics
• Breaking News • Contests
• Past Issues and much more!

Israeli cabinet backs loyalty oath

JTA

JERUSALEM — Israel's cabinet approved a loyalty oath requiring non-Jews wishing to become citizens to pledge allegiance to Israel as a "Jewish and democratic state."

The requirement of an oath for new prospective citizens was approved on Oct. 10 by a vote of 22 ministers in favour and eight opposed – five from the Labor Party, including party head Ehud Barak, and three from the Likud Party.

"There is no other democracy in the Middle East," Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said at the beginning of the cabinet meeting before the debate and vote on the amendment. "There is no other Jewish state in the world. The combination of these two lofty values expresses the foundation of our national life, and anyone who would like to join us needs to recognize this.

"To my regret, today there are those who are trying to blur not only the unique connection between the Jewish people and its homeland but also the connection between the Jewish people and its state. Democracy is the soul of Israel, and we cannot do without it. No one can preach democracy or enlightenment to us. Zionism established an exemplary national state, a state that balances between the national needs of our people and the individual rights of every citizen in the country."

During the meeting, Justice Minister Yaakov Neeman proposed that in addition to non-Jews seeking Israeli citizenship, Jews seeking Israeli citizenship under the Law of Return also should be required to swear allegiance to Israel as a Jewish and democratic state.

Defence Minister Ehud Barak said Sunday that he would vote in favour of the amendment only if it included his suggested change, adding the phrase "In the spirit of the Declaration of Independence."

Neither change was adopted.

The amendment advances to the Knesset's legislative committee and then to the full Knesset.

The loyalty oath amendment fulfils part of the government's coalition agreement with Avidgor Lieberman's Yisrael Beiteinu party.

Shimon Fogel, CEO of the Canada-Israel Committee (CIC), said his organization will continue to monitor the progress of the proposed legislation and will engage with Israeli political leaders in discussions to get more information on the legislation.

He said the CIC does not characterize the draft as a loyalty oath.

"A more accurate description would be a citizenship declaration. Just like new Canadians are expected to pledge allegiance to the Queen and all her heirs, new Israelis, according to this proposed legislation, would be required to articulate similar allegiance to the state of Israel," he said, adding that the proposal was "far from a done deal" and could go through many modifications before it's considered by the Knesset.

In related developments, the American Jewish Committee called on Israel to exercise caution in enacting a measure that would require non-Jewish citizens to swear loyalty to Israel's Jewish character.

"AJC wholeheartedly supports the principle that Israel is the nation-state of the Jewish people and is proud of the fact that Israel is a genuine and vibrant democracy, indeed the only democracy in the Middle East," a statement issued last week by the group said.

"However, applying different standards, based on ethnicity, to applicants seeking the country's citizenship may detract from the noble cause that the amendment purports to promote. AJC hopes that the Israeli cabinet will carefully review all the ramifications of this amendment before it advances further."

U.S. Jewish groups generally have been silent on the bill, which has stirred controversy in Israel.

An Anti-Defamation League statement last week did not oppose the measure, but urged that the oath be extended to all new citizens, Jewish and non-Jewish.

With files from Andy Levy-Ajzenkopf

JOIN OUR FAMILY AS BIALIK GROWS NORTH

Bialik is excited to announce the opening of registration for our future northern branch to be located on the Lebovic Campus in September 2013

Applications will be accepted beginning November 1, 2010 for students entering JK – Grade 1 in 2013 and beyond

Join us for an Information Session at
TanenbaumCHAT Kimel Centre
Perlis Boardroom
9600 Bathurst St. Vaughan

Wednesday, November 24 – 7:00 pm

Please RSVP to Danielle Waltman
at 416 783 3346 ext 285
www.bialik.ca

Bialik Hebrew Day School
בית ספר יומי ע"ש ביאליק טאג שול

UJA Federation of Greater Toronto

Manitoba premier wowed by Israeli dynamism

By JENNY HAZAN

TEL AVIV — In order to further deepen ties between Manitoba and Israel in the fields of medical research, commercial business development, agriculture, water technology and ecotourism, Manitoba Premier Greg Selinger went on a mission to Israel last week, along with the provincial ministers of water stewardship, Christine Melnick, and innovation, energy and mines, David Chomiak.

"It's a very dynamic country. No two ways about it," Selinger said on his final day in Israel, where he arrived on Oct. 10. "Any country where Starbucks can't get a foothold and local cafes are bustling and successful, you know is a country that's doing pretty well."

During the seven-day trip, Selinger met with Israeli Deputy Prime Minister Silvan Shalom and Palestinian Authority Prime Minister Salam Fayyad. He oversaw the signing of memos of understanding between the Hebrew University of Jerusalem and the University of Manitoba's Asper School of Business on agricultural and medical research and commercial business development, between the Province of Manitoba and the State of Israel on the development of water technology, and between Manitoba and the Society for the Protection of Nature in Israel (SPNI) on ecotourism.

Under the universities' agreement, the University of Manitoba (U of M) will be working with the Yissum Research Development Company, an arm's-length corporation of Hebrew U, to identify technologies produced by U of M that are suitable for commercialization.

The agreement will enable teams of MBA students from U of M to work with Yissum and the developers of a chosen technology to develop a proposed venture and prepare a business plan to bring this venture to the market.

Selinger also dedicated the Playground for Peace at the Arab-Jewish Community Center in Jaffa and inaugurated a youth leadership program, to which Manitoba committed $40,000 (US). He visited Better Place, an Israeli company that develops networks and services to support electric automobiles, and went to the Augusta Victoria Hospital in east Jerusalem, where the Manitoba government has instituted a busing project to improve health-care accessibility for dialysis and cancer patients in the West Bank. "The mission covered many diverse dimensions," Selinger said. "It has been an intense week, and a very good week. We have learned a ton. The highlight has been the total amount of dynamic activity going on in Israel, the push to make things better."

Selinger was particularly impressed by the collaborative medical research currently taking place between Hebrew U and U of M on HIV/AIDS and Parkinson's disease."We have very smart people collaborating to solve these big problems. It's very exciting stuff. They are doing research that can have major global implications, that has the potential to change people's lives dramatically."

He was also pleased with the agreement signed between his province and the SPNI to co-operate on ecotourism initiatives focused on birding and guiding.

"We [in Manitoba] have many migratory paths and we do a tremendous amount to protect birding. We are very interested in promoting ecotourism, and our agreement to collaborate on conservation techniques is a unique and promising one."

A special feature of the mission to Israel was a performance of the Royal Winnipeg Ballet, which is celebrating its 70th anniversary with a tour of Israel. Selinger, along with Canada's new ambassador to Israel, Paul Hunt, hosted a reception after the ballet's opening night last week at the Tel Aviv Performing Arts Center.

"It was a great evening, and they [the ballet] are great ambassadors both for Manitoba and for Canada," Selinger said.

The trip is one of several Manitoban missions to Israel that have taken place since the beginning of 2010, including two major Manitoba-Israel water symposiums hosted by the Keren Kayemeth LeIsrael – Jewish National Fund, aimed at bringing together Israeli and Manitoban researchers and policy-makers to boost co-operation on mutual water issues.

"The relationship between Manitoba and Israel has been building. There are a lot of good dimensions to it and it is built on a very positive foundation," Selinger said. "The hope is that we will continue to strengthen this relationship, and that it will continue to generate positive outcomes."

With files from Rhonda Spivak.

Manitoba Premier Greg Selinger, centre, David Barnard, president of the University of Manitoba, left, and Menahem Ben-Sasson, president of Hebrew University, sign a memo of understanding.

THE KASHRUTH COUNCIL OF CANADA
COR
Please be advised that
Maplegrove Gluten Free
boxed pasta and cheese products bearing the COR 272 Dairy label may contain white or yellow cheese packets that are not kosher.
Cheese packets that do not have a (K) Dairy symbol on them should be discarded.
Cheese packets that do have the (K) symbol may be consumed.
Corrective measures are being taken.
* * * * *
To receive Kosher Alerts via e-mail, visit our website at www.cor.ca and click on "Kashruth Alerts"

A partnership on environment

By RHONDA SPIVAK
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — The Province of Manitoba and the Society For the Protection of Nature in Israel (SPNI) last week signed a ground-breaking memorandum of understanding relating to ecotourism, birding and the environment.

"This agreement is unique. The SPNI has never signed an agreement with a foreign government," Manitoba Minister of Water Stewardship Christine Melnick, who was at the signing ceremony Oct. 13, said in a statement.

Manitoba Premier Greg Selinger signed the agreement with Avinoam Ben Yitzhak, the director of SPNI in Jerusalem.

This is the first stage in what is ultimately designed to build environmental and ecological co-operation between Canada, Israel, Jordan and the Palestinian Authority.

The agreement calls for SPNI and the director of wildlife and ecosystem protection of Manitoba to co-operate in the areas of birding, advancement of ecological tourism and the environment. It calls for Manitoba and Israel to share knowledge and co-operate on research and educational activities to preserve the environment. Manitoba and SPNI will build teams to work together on mutual concerns of ecotourism, birding, co-ordinating bird ringing, tracking migrating birds, migration and ecological research and preserving bird habitats.

Melnick and Paul Hunt, newly installed Canadian ambassador to Israel, and Imad Atrash, the founder and director of the Palestinian Authority's Palestine Wildlife Society [PWS], were all present for the signing. The PWS was established in 1999 and is headquartered in Beit Sahour, near Bethlehem in the West Bank.

In a telephone interview, Atrash told The CJN that he hopes in the future to work with Israel and Canada in promoting ecotourism and awareness of nature.

"Instead of tourists coming to the area only to see religious sites, we want to involve them with nature. We want to promote regional ecotourism… The Jordan Valley is a bird flight path. Birds coming from Europe go to Jericho, especially the raptor and the white stork," he said.

Atrash said the signing ceremony was his first meeting with the Canadians, but added that plans are in the works to have him and Yossi Leshem, an Israeli bird expert, come to Manitoba next June as part of the growing sharing of knowledge relating to birding, bird habitats and protection of the environment.

"Preserving biodiversity is not a local issue – it's a global issue. Without continental and intercontinental co-operation, degradation of habitats and species that we depend upon cannot be mitigated and halted," said Amir Balaban, director of the Jerusalem Bird Observatory, in a statement.

"Canada is an enormous country… while Israel is a tiny country…lacking in natural resources. Yet each country… can provide inspiration and new ideas to one another in nature conservation – and work to bring people and nature together," Balaban said.

European Jews face more anti-Semitism

JTA

BERLIN — European leaders must intervene to save small Jewish communities from an anti-Semitic onslaught, the head of the European Jewish Congress said.

In a statement issued Oct. 14, Moshe Kantor said European Jewish communities are in "grave danger" from the anti-Semitism, some of it officially sanctioned, as made clear by recent sensational anti-Semitic incidents in Belgium and Sweden.

Kantor, who is hosting a conference in Dubrovnik, Croatia, later this month on best practices for combating racism and xenophobia, said European Union and European leaders should "launch a campaign against intolerance and anti-Semitism to remind European citizens that the new Europe was established after the Second World War on the concept of 'Never Again.'"

Among the recent incidents he cited were a "Palestine Day" at a Catholic school in Antwerp, Belgium, during which children were invited to throw replicas of Jewish and Israeli soldiers into two large tanks. The game was called "Throw the soldiers into the sea."

In another incident, a gang shouting "Heil Hitler" and "Jewish pigs" attacked a Jewish children's event in Malmo, Sweden, earlier this month. Many Jews reportedly have been leaving Malmo this year due to an increase in anti-Semitic incidents.

Kantor also pointed to recent anti-Semitic statements by former German central bank board member Thilo Sarrazin and other public figures.

Citing a feeble official response, Kantor said that "anti-Semitism is at best actively promoted and at worst ignored by some officials in Europe. Due to this intolerable situation, small Jewish communities, like Malmo, are teetering on the brink of extinction," threatened by extremists on the left and right.

"If they can't receive protection or respite from mainstream officials," he said, "then we are entering a very dark period for the Jews in Europe."

Miliband worries U.K. Jews

By WINSTON PICKETT
JTA

LONDON — Less than a month after Ed Miliband was elected leader of Britain's Labour Party, Jewish concerns are growing about how his views will shape the policies toward Israel of the party favoured by most British Jews.

Jewish political observers are talking about a possible new reality in Labour in which Miliband, the first Jewish head of the 110-year-old party, will deviate from the solidly pro-Israel stances of former prime ministers Gordon Brown and Tony Blair, also of Labour.

The concerns were stoked when Miliband, in his keynote address to Labour's annual conference in Manchester earlier this month, told party members that they must "strain every sinew" to end Israel's naval blockade of Gaza. Although he said he "will always defend the right of Israel to exist in peace and security," Miliband also said Israel's "attack on the Gaza flotilla was so wrong."

"It was very disappointing that his conference speech criticized Israel without mentioning Hamas rocket attacks on civilians," Louise Ellman, a Labour MP from Liverpool and chairwoman of the Jewish Labour Movement, told the Jewish Chronicle, the main Jewish newspaper in Britain. "It's important for Ed to show he is evenhanded on the Middle East, and the first things he must do are support the universal jurisdiction legislation, show he is opposed to boycotts and support a negotiated peace agreement."

Ed Miliband

The universal jurisdiction legislation is a proposed law pending before Parliament that would restrict the application in Britain of arrest warrants issued elsewhere on the ground of "universal law" – essentially removing the threat that visiting Israeli leaders would be arrested on war crimes charges.

Miliband, 40, surprised pundits last month by beating his older brother, former foreign secretary David Miliband, 44, in the race for Labour leader. He was the first party leader elected since Brown resigned as prime minister after losing the U.K. election last May.

After Miliband's Manchester speech raised Jewish eyebrows, a spokesperson declined to answer questions that the Jewish Chronicle had for Miliband about Israel, foreign policy or his plans to meet Jewish leaders.

"These are serious issues requiring serious answers," one Labour insider said. "Ed's not about to make up policies on the fly just to answer a reporter's questions. Moreover, there are a significant number of pro-Israel members of his shadow cabinet."

At the "fringe" meetings held at the Labour Party conference, where elected party leaders can speak directly to supporters' concerns, Jews got a mixed message from Miliband.

At the Labour Friends of Israel meeting, Miliband said he considers himself a friend of Israel and that "I take incredibly seriously the issues of peace and security." He called for the condemnation of Hamas rocket attacks and affirmed his support for a two-state solution while saying that any questioning of Israel's legitimacy is "just totally unacceptable."

But Miliband also issued a statement to Labour Friends of Palestine suggesting that trade policy could be used as a coercive tool against Israel. The message said, "The major instrument for influence at our disposal in relation to the Middle East is trade policy. I am against blanket boycotts of goods from Israel. But Israel, and all countries in the region, must live up to the commitments they have made to respect human rights as part of trade agreements. The EU must be tough enough to ensure that these commitments mean something."

Officially, the Board of Deputies of British Jews, the country's main Jewish umbrella body, welcomed Miliband's election, emphasizing his opposition to boycotts "which discriminate by targeting Israelis."

But Jonathan Arkush, senior vice-president of the organization, told the Jewish Chronicle that he was worried. "His speech singled out Israel for criticism and lacked balance in relation to the Middle East," Arkush said.

Israeli Embassy staffers in London said they would give Miliband "the benefit of the doubt" and adopt a "wait-and-see" policy. Miliband's perceived policy unknowns have left analysts to scour his personal biography for clues.

At the party conference in Manchester, he spoke openly of growing up the child of Jewish refugees. His late father, Ralph Miliband, fled Poland and the Nazis in 1940 and later became a Marxist, a professor at the London School of Economics and one of Britain's most celebrated left-wing intellectuals.

Miliband's mother, Marion Kozak, 75, escaped mass murder and deportations in Poland and fled to Belgium, where she was hidden by a Christian family. She eventually went to London and became a supporter of groups such as Jews for Justice for Palestinians.

By contrast, Miliband's older brother, David, the former foreign secretary, has an established track record of pro-Israel engagement. In the brothers' race for Labour leader, David Miliband won the backing of more rank-and-file party members, MPs and members of the European Parliament. But the trade union vote went to Ed, helping to push the younger Miliband over the top by 1.3 per cent of the vote.

It's Miliband's dependence on trade unions, which are seen as having anti-Israel policies, that have Jewish leaders worried. Among his supporters during the Labour leadership campaign was Unite, which in June passed a motion "to vigorously promote a policy of divestment from Israeli companies." Unite also supported a motion reaffirming a boycott of goods produced in the West Bank at the last Trades Union Congress conference.

While Labour figures insist Miliband won't be swayed by union positions on Israel, Robin Shepherd, author of A State Beyond the Pale: Europe's Problem with Israel, thinks that fails to account for Miliband's baseline values.

"Miliband comes from left of the Labour Party, which is instinctively hostile to Israel, and if he becomes prime minister, like all others, he will defer to the interests of the Foreign Office and the European Union, both of which have that as their default position as well," Shepherd, the European director of a British think-tank, The Henry Jackson Society, told JTA. "I don't see a lot of manoeuvrability there."

Israel Briefs

ICC asked to prosecute

Israel should be prosecuted for war crimes committed during the interception of a Gaza-bound flotilla, lawyers told an international court. Lawyers representing the nine Turkish passengers who were killed aboard the Mavi Marmara, which was part of a flotilla trying to break Israel's maritime blockade of the Gaza Strip, presented a brief with evidence of what they call war crimes and crimes against humanity to the International Criminal Court in The Hague on Oct. 14. The May 31 incident brought international condemnation on Israel. Neither Israel nor Turkey is a signatory to the ICC. "If there are war crimes, there is jurisdiction and the ICC should act," attorney Ugur Sevgili said, according to the French news agency AFP. The ICC prosecutor will analyze the data to see if a full investigation is warranted, AFP reported, and that could take up to a year.

Spy drone deal signed

Israel has agreed to sell spy drones to Russia in a $400-million (US) deal. The deal for the unmanned aerial vehicles between the government-owned Israel Aerospace Industries and arms maker OPK-Oboronprom, which has Russia as its majority owner, was signed Oct. 12 in Israel. The Russian firm will reportedly buy the drones over a three-year period. They'll be assembled in Russia, Ha'aretz reported. A statement from the two firms said the deal will "strengthen the bilateral relationship between Israel and Russia." Russia bought IAI spy drones in a $50-million deal in April 2009.

Tourism record

Some 2.5 million tourists have visited Israel since the start of 2010, according to figures kept by the nation's Central Bureau of Statistics. The figure is nine per cent more than in 2008, which was the record tourism year in Israel, and a 27 per cent increase over last year. Some 22,300 tourists visited Israel on cruise ships, double the number visiting in September 2009 and three times more than in 2008. Israel's Tourism Ministry is investing more than $19 million (US) until the end of 2010 on marketing Israel. "New countries and new target audiences are expressing an interest in visiting Israel and see it as an attractive tourism destination," Tourism Minister Stas Misezhnikov said. "In the next year, the Tourism Ministry will work to challenge these new target audiences including, for the first time, Muslim groups to visit Israel."

Yahoo! to buy firm

Yahoo! has agreed to buy an Israeli start-up company reportedly for more than $50 million. Dapper Inc., founded in 2006, has developed technology to create interactive display ads and target the personalized ads at Internet users. While neither Yahoo! nor Dapper released terms of the deal, Israeli media are citing sources as saying the deal is for about $50 million. Dapper's development centre in Ramat Gan will become Yahoo!'s development centre in Israel, the Israeli business daily Globes reported. The Internet giant also has a research centre in Haifa.

WEIZMANN CANADA

Science for the Benefit of Humanity

We are pleased to announce that Susan Stern has been appointed National Executive Vice President of Weizmann Canada.

Weizmann Canada represents the Weizmann Institute of Science, based in Rehovot, Israel, and develops philanthropic support in Canada for the Institute's scientific research and education programs.

Susan has been the Executive Director for Weizmann Canada, eastern region for the past five years. In that time, she has significantly increased our presence in this region and developed existing and new sources of support for the excellent and important work being done at the Weizmann Institute of Science.

In her new role as National Executive Vice President, Susan will direct and oversee the organization's development activities across Canada, working with the professional and lay leadership in the regional offices.

We are very pleased that Susan has agreed to take on this new role. She brings exceptional vision and leadership to the Weizmann Institute family and a passion for our mission of science for the benefit of humanity. Her relevant experience will enable us to increase our organization's presence in Canada.

Catherine Beck, President

Weizmann Canada

And now for something completely different: HEEBONICS

Stacey Farber on love, loss and what she wore

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Throughout her life she's been a high school goth, an 18-year-old newlywed and a young woman sharing memories and the clothes that go with them.

In reality, she is 23-year-old actor Stacey Farber.

Known for her role as Ellie Nash in Degrassi: The Next Generation, Farber's show 18 to Life is entering its second season on CBC in January. Currently, she is making her theatrical debut in Love, Loss and What I Wore, written by Nora and Delia Ephron and based on the book by Ilene Beckerman.

Born and raised in Toronto, Farber got interested in acting when she was accepted to Claude Watson School for the Arts, which she attended from grades 4 to 8. She majored in visual arts but acting caught her attention because a number of her classmates were involved in it.

"Suddenly it was a very normal thing to have an agent and be on TV," she said. "I'd never been around that before – no one in my family is in the industry."

After getting an agent when she was in Grade 8, Farber's first major role – on Degrassi – came when she was 15. She was on the show from 2002 to 2008 and "had a great time on that set," she said.

Two of her Degrassi co-stars, Lauren Collins and Paula Brancati, were in Love, Loss and What I Wore at different times, playing the role that Farber now occupies. The cast, which changes every four weeks, includes, in addition to Farber, Trey Anthony, Mary Lou Fallis, Patricia Hamilton and Leah Pinsent.

"It's so fun!" she said of being in the play. "I knew it would be different from TV, which is mainly what I do and it is very different, but I love it. I find it really interesting to see how the audience changes every night and how they react differently to different things.

"It's pretty cool to feel the energy from the audience and use their energy to fuel your own. It's exciting – I definitely get an adrenaline rush before I go on stage."

The play features the five women all dressed in black, who spend the entire show sitting on tall chairs. The few props in the intimate performance include life-size drawings of the outfits that appear in Beckerman's novel.

It is this intimacy in the play that Farber loves.

"All the women share one dressing room, and we do our own hair and makeup pretty much and get ready for the show together. I think that's really fun and it helps us bond, sharing that space, it's so intimate. We have to be close and working off each other on stage, so I think it helps."

When asked how she tackles the darker aspects in some of the roles she plays – Ellie on Degrassi had an alcoholic mother – Farber says it comes to down to imagining what the characters have been through has happened to her.

"I don't really have any darkness in my life. Growing up I had such a happy childhood... For playing Ellie, I'm not sure where I got all that darkness and sadness from, because I couldn't draw from my own experiences. I guess it was my imagination.

"I'm able to really feel things that I haven't necessarily experienced in my own life. So for Love, Loss, if there's a monologue that's darker, I read the script over and over again, really focus on the words. I imagine it happened to me and I'm confiding in the audience. I try to tell the story in a way that's as natural and realistic as possible.

Actor Stacey Farber

"I work on it every night and I try different things. That to me is the fun part. It's sort of like piecing together a puzzle."

In Love, Loss, Farber's character discusses in depth her clothes and the memories – some good, some bad, some embarrassing – that are associated with them, including buying her first bra, her prom dress and her love for short skirts and tall boots. In real life, she is just as much a fan of fashion.

"I've been interested in fashion for a long time," she said. "My interest has changed over the years. I studied it for a long time. I used to buy fashion magazines and study them. I loved fashion writing. I lived in New York for a few years [where she graduated from The New School university in 2009] and I interned for several fashion magazines.

"Now it's more just an appreciation for fashion as a form of expression or even as art.

"In Love, Loss, the whole point of talking about your clothes is to talk about the memories that go with them or experiences you had while wearing a certain piece of clothing."

Judaism is also something that's important to Farber, although she says she's still trying to figure out where she fits in the community.

"I think that's something that people at my age question and start to figure out on their own once they're independent and not living with their parents anymore.

"My family celebrates so many Jewish holidays and we have Shabbat dinners. I had a bat mitzvah and went on Birthright. Lots of my friends in Toronto are Jewish, and I went to a Jewish sleepover camp as a kid. Those things have all contributed to who I am today," she said.

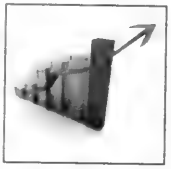
"There's definitely a Jewish thread that runs through [the play]," Farber added. "So many of the stories are about the women and men who are Jewish."

Love, Loss and What I Wore with Farber in it runs to Oct. 30 at the Panasonic Theatre. Tickets can be purchased at www.mirvish.com or by phoning 416-872-1212.

Toronto olim start swimwear business in Israel

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

There was a time when Israel's reputation for fostering business wasn't – let's be charitable about it – not that positive, but that was years ago.



Marci and Harold Rapp have discovered quite a different reality as new olim in the Jewish state. As they try to get their swimwear business off the ground, they've found "lots of support" from various ministries and agencies, Marci said on the phone from their home in Jerusalem.

The Rapps found they qualified for low-interest loans, interest-only payments, free consulting services, help in developing a website and other perks to help them get their feet on the ground.

The result was the creation last January of MarSea Modest Swimwear, a company that produces a line of swimming clothes for a niche market (www.marseamodest.com).

"This is modest swimwear for religious women and for those wanting some protection or those wanting to cover up age, weight or medical imperfections," said Marci. "I designed everything from swim dresses, tops, shorts, capris, swim berets, bandanas and tankinis."

Harold believes that while they're catering to a niche market, it's quite a large niche. "There are lots of frum women who go to beaches, resorts, cruises, and they're making do with what's out there, which isn't much," he said.

There are also plenty of Christian women as well who are looking for "modest" swim gear, plus a substantial number of women who are attracted to the product for vanity reasons. "There are so many months of beautiful weather here, beaches, resorts, the opportunity to go to the beach is greater than in Toronto," Marci said.

Like many other startups, sales numbers in the first year are admittedly "small," said Harold. "This was our first summer and coupled with our financial situation, we couldn't get our inventory in time and now we are carrying inventory."

Although they now have two people selling for them, they have to do most of the legwork themselves, Marci said. After she designs the outfits, she drives to the town of Shoham, near Ben-Gurion Airport, where her pattern-maker resides. Fabric, a high-quality nylon/lycra blend that is manufactured in Italy, comes from a shop in Tel Aviv, is printed in Shoham, brought back to the manufacturer in Tel Aviv for production.

Because they are new customers with a modest order, they often find themselves last in line when it comes to production, Harold said.

Their first run was only 300 swim dresses, which almost sold out, Marci said.

Marketing and sales is also done on a small scale. Many are sold from their apartment in Katamon, others at home shows, mini-malls, fairs or street stalls.

Though still a young enterprise, MarSea Modest is already looking abroad for sales. "We have a store in the Catskills [upstate New York, about a two-hour drive from New York City], that has sold most of the swim dresses sent there.

Aretz Originals in Thornhill, Ont., has also sold a few of their tankini sets, she added.

"We do plan to grow [the business]," she said, "but right now, for the first six months, we're getting used to getting around, introducing ourselves and perfecting new designs. We hope to increase our variety, our customer types, do more home shows, mini-malls and advertising."

Getting a foot in the door at larger retailers has proven a challenge. Most aren't interested and those who are will only do so on consignment, limiting their incentive to sell them, Marci believes.

Hotel gift shops want nothing to do with them – and tell them so in rather abrupt language, Marci said.

Marci Rapp shows off her line of beach clothing.

She has a good mind to complain to the managers – except it was the managers who were less than courteous to them. It's all part of adapting to a new business environment, which includes plenty of challenges along with the advantages, Marci said.

Language is one of the biggest adaptations to deal with, Marci and Harold agree, along with production difficulties at the small plant and "not always getting exactly what you asked for," Marci said.

Cash flow is also an issue for the Rapps, as is getting the product out to where the public can see it. And they rely heavily on local accountants to advise them about Israeli laws and regulations.

Still, with three of their sons living in Israel, the Holy Land is where they want to be. Residents of Thornhill for most of their lives, in 2008 they moved to Israel with their daughter and embarked on new careers as well as new lifestyles. In Toronto, Marci worked as a bookkeeper for Zareinu and Harold was in the kosher food business.

"The whole idea of this business germinated in the Muskokas," Harold recalled. "We rented cottages and we found my wife and friends, to be modest, wore cotton T-shirts over bathing suits. That does not work well in the water," getting heavy and clingy, he said.

There didn't appear to be much available on the market and "if you can't find suitable items, that means there is a need," he added.

Harold is confident the business will grow by 50 per cent this year as word gets out. "It's a huge market and it's only getting bigger," he said.

Google buying Israeli media firm

By GUY GRIMLAND
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

JERUSALEM — Internet giant Google is buying its second Israeli startup, Quiksee, a media company based in Or Yehuda. The deal is estimated at $10 million (all figures US).

Quiksee, also known as MentorWave Technologies, allows users to create location-based interactive media content. Its web-based content, the company says, "lets you quickly and easily create stunning virtual tours… to provide guidance to mankind."

Two investment groups have put $3.5 million into Quiksee, Ofer Hi-Tech and Docor International, while a number of private investment "angels" have also backed the firm.

Quiksee was founded in 2002 by Gadi Royz, Assaf Harel, Pavel Yosifovich and Rony Amira. While the firm's sales revenues are unknown, the amount isn't considered to be very high – for now. But its technology is regarded as the missing link in Google's Street View service, used by both Google Maps and Google Earth, which allows users to view photos along numerous streets around the world.

Both Google Israel and Quiksee refused to comment.

Google acquired Israeli startup LabPixies in April for about $25 million.

450 Tel

Daylight savings? Try all-day savings!
JUST DIAL 10•18•450
Canada, USA & Israel
20 min. for 50¢ per call

Start using 450Tel today. Dial 10•18•450 before your long distance call.

*Calls to cellular phones in some international destinations or special country code terminations are billed at a higher rate. Rates effective January 1/09 and subject to change without notice. 450Tel™ rates are the same, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. All calls under the 20 minute program will be billed at 50c. Thereafter, all calls are billed in one minute increments. rates vary by country. Please dial toll-free 10-18-450-0 or 647-435-2477 to confirm that 450Tel™ long distance is available from your area.

fitness DEPOT
EXERCISE EQUIPMENT SUPERSTORES
fitnessdepot.ca

The Officers of Sunnybrook Jewish Chapel of the Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre extend sincere condolences to Aileen Romberg
and to her family on the loss of her husband
Sam Romberg ז"ל founding member and avid supporter of the chapel and longtime president of the General Wingate branch 256 of the Royal Canadian Legion.

CJN Giveaways
7 lucky readers will win
1 pair of tickets to Teatron Toronto Jewish Theatre's
"Kosher Lutherans"
(total value $62)
The Toronto Centre for the Arts
5040 Yonge St.
Wednesday, November 10th, 8 pm
To be eligible to win click on "Contests" at www.cjnews.com and email us your name, address and daytime phone number or mail fax us the information.
All entries received by 3 p.m. on Wednesday, October 20th are eligible. The winning entries will be randomly selected at The CJN offices on Thursday, October 21st. The winners will be notified the same day. Odds of winning depend on the number of entries received. One entry per person.
The CJN will not enter into any correspondence with contestants.
Email your information to "contest@thecjn.ca" Re: "Lutherans" Contest, or mail to: The Canadian Jewish News, 1500 Don Mills Road, Suite 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4 or fax to: 416-391-0949.
Employees and family members of The CJN and Teatron Jewish Theatre are not eligible to enter.

Health & Lifestyles

Giving back by running for the cure with L'Chaim

By SHAWNA LOVINSKY TATOR
Special to The CJN

When someone is diagnosed with cancer it's as if a bomb has exploded.

Your whole world changes in an instant. It's all-consuming and overwhelming. Friends and family come together to help, and so does L'Chaim Cancer Support Group for Jewish Women, a project of the National Council of Jewish Women of Canada, Toronto section.

L'Chaim was founded in 2000 by Elizabeth Erlich and the late Marci Tannenbaum, two young mothers who had recently survived cancer, to support other Jewish women facing this disease.

Earlier this year, many attended L'Chaim's community-wide cancer awareness evening, "Women and Cancer." A tribute was made in memory of Marci Tannenbaum, who passed away last year.

We also heard speaker Brenda Baskind, a L'Chaim member, cancer survivor and marathon runner. She was so inspiring. This past summer, Brenda sent out a letter offering to train L'Chaim members for the 2010 CIBC Run for the Cure, which was held Oct. 3. In response, a group was formed whose members woke up early on Sunday mornings and met with Brenda and her husband, Colin. They encouraged us, helped us pace ourselves and ran alongside us.

I really felt ready for the Run for the Cure, and when Elizabeth asked me to be team captain, I said yes. Little did I know that we would end up with 28 members on our team. On Oct. 3, we walked and we ran. We were there together – survivors and supporters, friends and family. Our L'Chaim team raised more than $11,000 for breast cancer research. May we all be healthy and well enough to do it again next year

Our team included several women who have directly benefited from L'Chaim's support while battling cancer.

In my own experience, feeling fearful and confused after I was diagnosed, I received a personal visit from Elizabeth, who had been through the experience herself. She gave me a "welcome bag" containing useful information, such as where to buy wigs, support numbers to call, as well as information tailored to Jewish women, who may be facing unique issues that others don't face.

L'Chaim's co-chair, Marsha Urowitz, also teams up newly diagnosed patients with a member of L'Chaim's network of cancer survivors as "telephone buddies." These volunteer buddies are survivors who have been through the process of chemotherapy, radiation and/or surgery and keep in touch by phone and visit with their new friends. They offer understanding and emotional support.

Newly diagnosed patients also can attend monthly L'Chaim programs where they can mix, mingle and shmooze with other patients and L'Chaim volunteer buddies. These evenings provide a relaxing opportunity to socialize with other Jewish women with cancer. Members support each other and have fun together. They remember to smile, to live, to laugh.

In short, L'Chaim provides support for everything a newly diagnosed patient is anxious about, but can't get from her doctor or existing support network, because its members have been through the experience themselves.

L'Chaim readily gives much-needed emotional and practical support to women facing life-threatening illness, including many who have nowhere else to turn. It has become an essential part of our community's support network.

To find out more about L'Chaim's services, call the L'Chaim confidential hotline at 416-630-0203, or e-mail lchaim@ncjwc-ts.org.

Genetic mutation linked to mental disability, epilepsy

BE' ER SHEVA — A research team at Ben-Gurion University of the Negev and Soroka University Medical Center in Be'er Sheva, Israel, has detected a genetic mutation resulting in a progressive disease of severe mental disability and epilepsy beginning in infancy. The research was just published in the American Journal of Human Genetics.

The team, led by BGU Prof. Ohad Birk of the National Institute for Biotechnology in the Negev, determined that the defect is associated with the production of the 21st amino acid, selenocysteine (SEC), which leads to progressive brain atrophy.

According to Prof. Birk, "One out of every 40 Jews of both Moroccan and Iraqi ancestry may be carriers of this mutation. As the disease is both severe and common, testing for these mutations is expected to become a routine prenatal genetic screening test in these two populations, enabling prevention of future cases."

It is believed that further research will identify other mutations in the same gene as the cause of mental disability with epilepsy in other communities. As the disease is progressive, elucidation of its molecular mechanisms might open new venues to treatment, preventing disease progression.

The human genetic code, as deciphered some 50 years ago, encodes 20 amino acids which are the building blocks of all proteins in the human body. However, in recent years it became apparent that a 21st amino acid exists: selenium, entering the body in food, is incorporated in the human tissues into what is known as selenocysteine.

This 21st amino acid is unique in that it is encoded by what is normally a stop codon - that is, a DNA sequence that normally instructs the protein building system to end the chain of amino acids, terminating the generated protein. In contrast with most genes, some 25 genes have a unique component that manipulates the stop codon so that instead of terminating the evolving protein chain, it inserts at that point an SEC building block.

FREE Leaf Bag with order
Protect Your Table
Made-To-Measure Table Pads
Prevents scratches, burns & spills
Free in-home service • Factory Direct Pricing
DOVER PAD
QUALITY SINCE 1950
Now available in Calgary
Montreal: (514) 420-6030
Canada: (800) 354-4445
www.doverpad.ca
*Select model pads are exempt from this special given their already low, low pricing!
20%* Off!
CHANUKAH EXTRAVAGANZA
Sale ends November 2nd

Festival offers a taste of modern Israeli cinema

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

This year's Israel Film Festival in Toronto offers viewers an eclectic program of feature films and documentaries, Oct. 24 to 28, at the Sheppard Grande Cinemas.

One of the films scheduled to be screened, A Green Chariot, is directed by Gilad Goldschmidt.

Released in 2005 and set in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv, it is a drama about identity, belonging and romance.

The central character, Yair (Vitali Freedland), a 22-year-old new Russian immigrant, yearns for acceptance as an Israeli. Such is his desire to fit in that he diconnects himself from his father and his circle of Russian secular friends, finds a modern Orthodox girlfriend and joins a religious nationalist youth movement, Bnei Akiva.

But on the eve of his wedding to Dafna (Daniela Wirzer), his world is upended and his new life is jeopardized.

Rummaging through a package sent by his aunt, Yair, known in Russian as Sasha, discovers a crucifix. His father assures him that his late mother was thoroughly Jewish, but admits that his maternal grandmother was a Christian.

For Yair, who has adopted Orthodoxy and is engaged to be married to an Orthodox woman, the revelation is troubling, to say the least.

Should he tell Dafna? Should he convert? Should he cast off his past completely? Should he return to it?

Forced to make life-changing decisions, Yair confronts his situation with a mixture of confusion and resolution.

The issue that Goldschmidt raises through Yair is relevant to contemporary Israeli society. Since the late 1980s, approximately one million immigrants from Russia and the former Soviet Union have poured into Israel. Since many have been of partial Jewish or Christian ancestry, the Israeli government has encouraged them to submit to formal conversions to Judaism.

A Green Chariot, whose title derives from a Russian folk tale, is a worthy and timely addition to the pantheon of Israeli cinema.

Goldschmidt exerts a firm grip on the proceedings and coaxes credible performances from his actors.

* * *

Apart from A Green Chariot, the festival is screening the following movies:

FOLK AWARD NOMINATIONS: Toronto klezmer folk band Beyond the Pale has scored four Canadian Folk Music Award nominations. Previous winners of best instrumental group at the CFMAs, the group is again being recognized for that award. It also has nods for world group, ensemble of the year and an award for "pushing the boundaries" which recognizes innovation for its album Postcards. The awards take place Nov. 20.

Daniela Wirzer and Vitali Freedland in A Green Chariot.

Avi Nesher's The Matchmaker is a coming-of-age story, set in Haifa in 1968 and 2006, about a young man and the mysterious Holocaust survivor who gives him an unusual summer job.

The Assassin Next Door, by Danny Lerner, is about domestic violence, the sex trade and a new friendship.

Precious Life, a documentary by Shlomi Eldar, focuses on an Israeli physician and a TV reporter who help a Palestinian mother from the Gaza Strip save her infant son's life. He is doomed to die unless he receives a bone marrow transplant in a Tel Aviv hospital. Should she co-operate with the enemy?

A Matter of Size, a comedy by Sharon Maymon and Erez Tadmor, is about a group of overweight people who use their size to advantage and find love and self-acceptance in the process.

A Film Unfinished, a documentary by Yael Hersonski, rigorously examines a Nazi propaganda film made in the Warsaw Ghetto in 1942 and exposes its venality, heartlessness and cynicism.

Haim Tabakman's gay love story, Eyes Wide Open, takes place in Jerusaldem's closed and insular haredi community.

Wasserman – The Rain Man, by Idit Shechori, revolves around a Jewish farmer and atheist who stumbles into a personal conflict, as well as a quandary, when a drought occurs.

For further information about the festival, call 416-239-8668 or click on www.israelfilmfestival.ca.

FLORIDA, ARIZONA, CALIFORNIA, CANADA
WE SEND YOUR CAR & CONTENTS (and return)
CALL 416-225-7754
www.torontodriveaway.com
TORONTO DRIVEAWAY AND TRUCK SERVICE
5803 Yonge St., #101
North York M2M 3V5
Since 1959

SUBSCRIBE TO
The Canadian Jewish news

encore entertainment presents
TONY AWARD WINNER
SPELLING BEE

"Riotously funny and remarkably ingenious"
-The New York Times
October 28- November 7, 2010
Toronto Centre for the Arts
5040 Yonge Street, Toronto

Adults:	Students/Seniors:
$32.50 evenings	$30.00 evenings
$30.00 matinees	$28.00matinees

GROUP DISCOUNTS FOR GROUPS OF 10+
Tickets: 416- 872-1111
Or in person at the Toronto Centre Box Office
Or online: www.encoreshows.com

CJN Snowbirds

1) Arrange for Canada Post to forward The CJN to your winter address with the rest of your regular mail.

2) Advise our Circulation Department to suspend delivery until you return to Canada with your expiry automatically extended. You can still access the eCJN while away.

3) Arrange for our Circulation Department to redirect The CJN to your winter address at a cost of $10.00 per month for U.S. and foreign addresses.

This charge – payable by cheque, Visa, Mastercard or American Express before departure covers the cost of additional postage incurred for out of country mailings.

Fax changes in your delivery to 905-946-1679 or call the Circulation Department at 1-866-849-0864 allowing two weeks notice.

TEATRON Toronto Jewish Theatre
Proudly presents our 8th season of Jewish-themed plays
KOSHER LUTHERANS comedy by William Missouri Downs
November 10 - 21, 2010
HARD LOVE romantic drama by Motti Lerner
January 5 - 16, 2011
A HAMBURGER IN A PITA comedy by Nina Shenhav
March 2 - 13, 2011

FOR TICKETS AND INFORMATION
The Toronto Centre for the Arts (formerly The Kaplan Centre)
5040 Yonge St box office 11am—6 pm, phone 416-733-0545
on-line: www.teatrontheatre.com

EYE ON ARTS

By BILL GLADSTONE

DARK COMEDY LENIN'S EMBALMERS OPENS OCT. 30 AT MILES NADAL JCC

The Harold Green Jewish Theatre Company presents Lenin's Embalmers by Governor General's Award-winning playwright Vern Thiessen that the New York Times described as "a spunky, dark comedy with wit and verve."

The play is based on a true story as related in the book Lenin's Embalmers by Ilya Zbarsky and Samuel Hutchinson, about the two Russian scientists chosen to embalm Lenin after his death in 1924, who used a process that was hailed as a scientific miracle to restore the body to a life-like appearance. Because of this significant contribution, the two gained such prestige and influence that they were seen as a threat by a paranoid Stalinist regime, with fatal consequences.

Lenin's Embalmers previews at the Miles Nadal Jewish Community Centre, Al Green Theatre, on Oct. 30, opens Nov. 2, 8 p.m. and continues until Nov. 21. $40.50 to $64.50. 416-366-7723, www.stlc.com

* * *

Names in the News: Israeli writer David Grossman, whose latest novel To the End of the Land came out in the summer, was awarded the $40,000 Peace Prize at this year's Frankfurt Book Fair "for his commitment to building bridges between Israel and the Palestinians," according to the German Publishers and Booksellers Association. Joachim Gauck, a Protestant pastor and human rights activist, called Grossman a "symbol of the peace movement" in Israel. In accepting the prize, Grossman said Israel should learn from its tragedies and make a fresh start, according to news reports.

Grossman's new book was written during a heart-wrenching personal experience – the death of his 20-year-old son Uri, staff sergeant in an Israeli armoured unit, by an anti-tank missile during the Israel-Lebanon conflict in 2006. The author is in Toronto this week as the headliner for the opening of the Toronto Jewish Book Fair. Admission $25. Beth David Synagogue, Saturday Oct. 23, 8 p.m.

The book fair runs Oct. 23 to 31. Visit www.koffleraarts.org for full details.

Speaking of winners, British-Jewish author Howard Jacobson won the Man Booker Prize for Fiction for a comic book about what it means to be Jewish today.

The book, The Finkler Question, is about "love, loss and male friendship, and explores what it means to be Jewish today."

The 68-year-old author was considered an outsider for the $80,000 prize, which had six books on the shortlist.

* * *

An Evening with Sondheim: Considered by many to be the most important artist to work in the American musical theatre over the past half-century, 80-year-old composer-lyricist Stephen Sondheim is making a rare appearance in Toronto to publicize a new book and an upcoming production.

David Mirvish presents An Evening with Stephen Sondheim. The theatrical legend will be engaged in conversation with journalist Robert Cushman. The event coincides with Sondheim's new book, Finishing the Hat – Collected Lyrics (1954-1981), and the Toronto presentation of the revival of his musical A Funny Thing Happened On the Way to the Forum.

Sondheim is expected to reminisce about his career (including his collaborations with Leonard Bernstein, Jerome Robbins and Tim Burton), his predecessors (including his mentor Oscar Hammerstein II), the state of the musical theatre, the differences between film and theatre, and his own creative process on works such as Gypsy, West Side Story, Company, Follies and Sweeney Todd. Princess of Wales Theatre, Monday, Dec. 6, 8 p.m. $22 to $69. 416-872-1212, www.mirvish.com

* * *

Paper Clips in London schools: The London Jewish Film Festival's South Western Ontario Outreach Program is bringing its message of tolerance to a record-number of school children from Oct. 25 to Nov. 2.

The award-winning 2004 Holocaust education film Paper Clips will be shown to an estimated 4,000 students in London, St. Thomas, Strathroy and Woodstock, Ont.

Peter and Dagmar Schroeder outside the transport car.

Paper Clips chronicles the efforts of a Grade 8 class in Whitwell, Tenn. to understand the enormity of the Holocaust by collecting six million paper clips to represent the Jews murdered in Nazi extermination camps.

German-born journalists Peter and Dagmar Schroeder will make their fourth trip to London to share their experiences documenting the students' efforts.

The couple wrote the book Six Million Paper Clips – The Making of a Children's Holocaust Memorial and tracked down and purchased the German transport car which is now the centrepiece of the Whitwell Children's Holocaust Memorial.

* * *

Arts in Brief

• Safam, a six-person band from Boston famed for its "Jewish-American sound," has an extensive live-concert touring schedule that will bring them to Toronto's Beth Tikvah Synagogue on Oct. 31, 7:30 p.m. The band has produced many Jewish-themed hits such as Leaving Mother Russia, Amnesty and Just Another Foreigner. Band member Joel Sussman grew up in Edmonton.

• Toronto-based Yiddish maven Michael Wex, whose book Born to Kvetch became an international bestseller, has been confirmed as a speaker at this year's International Festival of Authors, set to run Oct. 20 to 30 at Harbourfront. www.readings.org

New solo exhibition features colourful mixed media

By CYNTHIA GASNER
Special to The CJN

Artist Frank Glazier has taken a 180-degree turn since his last exhibition of paintings in 2004.

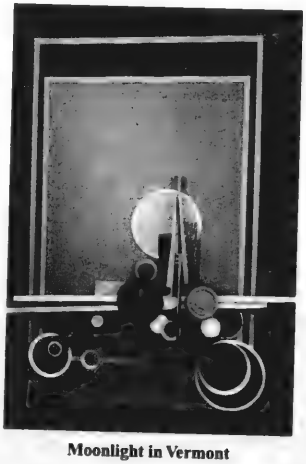
The retired architect has his fourth solo exhibition Oct. 31 to Nov. 4, where he presents his mixed media show "Out of Left Field" at the Cedar Ridge Studio Gallery in the Cedar Ridge Creative Centre, 225 Confederation Dr.

Glazier's previous exhibitions were nostalgic and whimsical paintings of landscapes, urban scenes and people.

"It had become no longer a challenge and I needed a diversion – and mixed media provided it," he says.

"In this technological age, the ever-expanding array of new and readily available materials makes for limitless possibilities that go well beyond the traditional realm of applying paint to canvas.

"This new exhibition is my personal expression of some of those possibilities."



Moonlight in Vermont

Glazier says the variety of materials used is more readily found in garbage pails and recycling bins than on gallery walls.

"The work might, with reason, be characterized as recycling at another level. It is not conventional stuff."

There are 57 vibrant, coloured and animated three-dimensional works included in the exhibit. Titles include Traffic light triptych, Moonlight in Vermont, Flowers (6) and the Red Sea (post partum).

Glazier was born in Toronto, attended Forest Hill Collegiate and graduated from the University of Toronto's school of architecture in 1957. He retired 12 years ago.

His busy career forced him to put his painting on hold, and after his retirement, he presented his first solo exhibition of watercolour paintings at the Edwards Gardens Civic Garden Centre in 2001.

The opening reception of Glazier's new exhibition will be held Oct. 31, 1 to 4 p.m.

Frank Glazier can be reached at 416-444-4208, or call the Cedar Ridge Studio Gallery, 416-396-4026.

Red Sea

Israeli indie musician makes Toronto his home

By JORDANA DIVON
Special to The CJN

By the time the 100th Qassam rocket whistled past his head, Ofir Gal knew two things: one, that he had to get out of Sderot; and two, that music was the only thing he wanted to do with his life.

It was 2002, just a year into the first missile onslaught from nearby Gaza Strip. The 21-year-old had left his native Be'er Sheva to study sound engineering in the western Negev town. His classes were great, but his anxiety was greater.

"At my school we had rockets landing in the parking lot about 50 metres away from us," he recalls. "Destroyed cars. Damage to property. I lived on a kibbutz, and we had a couple of rockets land there as well. It was pretty intense."

Because the rockets were a fairly recent development, the town had yet to set up an alarm system. And while locals appeared to be taking the assault in stride, the lanky, dark-haired youth was having trouble just shrugging everything off.

"There are always risks living in Israel, so people tend to block things out and that's the way for them to cope," he says. "And for me, I can't block things. I try to see things as they really are."

From the time he was very young, Gal had suffused himself in music as a way of coping with these feelings. His tendency to practise guitar with what he describes as an "OCD-like" drive made him the unusual one in a family of scientists, and his preference for 1960s Brit rock separated him from the mainstream.

Before he left for the army, the teen had also picked up drums, bass, piano and composition. It was to songwriting he also turned when the conflict around him became too stressful.

"If I try to associate any of my music to that time, it would be my song Pigs," he says. "It's kind of a happy, easy-listening tune, but I wrote it after a triple suicide bombing at the resort I was staying on a vacation in Egypt. I guess it comes out in the lyrics."

Ofir Gal

Within a few years of graduation, Gal had positioned himself as a full-time musician, writing and producing for film and television out of his own studio. Still, he wasn't happy.

"I didn't feel the [Israeli] industry had the right opportunities that I wanted," he said.

When it came time to move, there was one place the talented songwriter had in mind: Vancouver. He had travelled there years earlier and thought the laid-back vibe and thriving indie music scene would take his career to the next level.

But like most of the best-laid plans, you can probably guess what happened next.

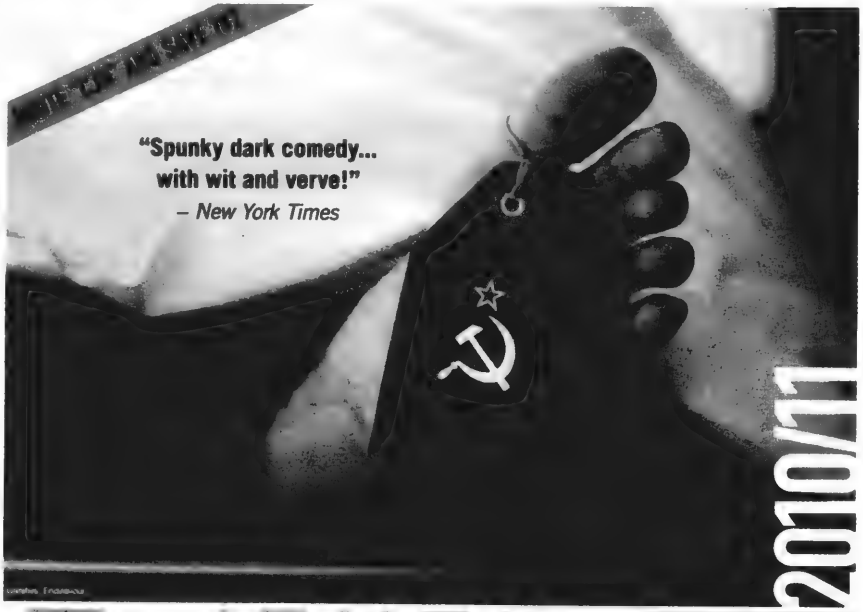
"Before my flight from Israel, my parents told me to check out Toronto on my way to Vancouver. So I thought, OK, I'll go to Toronto and I'll be there for two weeks and once it gets too cold, I will fly away," he says with a smirk.

Within two weeks, Gal had already met the musicians who would form his band, and in a matter of months, was booked for gigs at venues such as the Drake Hotel and Lee's Palace.

Two years later, the musician is building a steady fan base online through his website, ofirgal.com, where he's offering his debut album, Panic, for free.

Although he realized he'd have to start over after everything he'd built up back home, the 29-year-old welcomes the challenge.

At the very least, he's bound to get some great tunes out of it.



LENIN'S EMBALMERS

From one of Canada's most produced and award-winning playwrights comes an absurdist, dark comedy spun from a true story. Lenin's Embalmers tells the captivating tale of Boris Zbarsky and Vladimir Vorobiov, two scientists chosen by The Committee for Immortalization to embalm Vladimir Lenin after his death in 1924, a time when communism and Soviet power were on the minds of many.

Canadian Premiere

OCTOBER 30 – NOVEMBER 21, 2010 AT AL GREEN THEATRE
Single tickets available now by calling 416-366-7723
For group sales call Judy at 416-932-9995 ext 224

Production sponsor:

HAROLD GREEN JEWISH THEATRE COMPANY
www.hgjewishtheatre.com

In partnership with:

The past can be revisited in literature

By BILL GLADSTONE
Special to The CJN

On the several occasions when I've enrolled in creative-writing or memoir-writing workshops, usually with the aim of finishing a particular story that I've written, I've always been struck by the wealth of literary talent seated around the table.

This has generally come as a pleasant surprise, since I've also observed that few people possess the discipline to become a good writer. Yet it seems that people with good stories inside of them often find the drive and determination to get those stories out into the world.

Nochim Mayer Shaikevitsch

Years ago, Fannie Silver, a would-be memoirist in Brooklyn, enrolled in a creative writing workshop while working on a series of sketches about herself and her family. One day she read a story to the class about her father's experiences in a Kishinev pogrom, and her reading gave the tale a remarkable postscript.

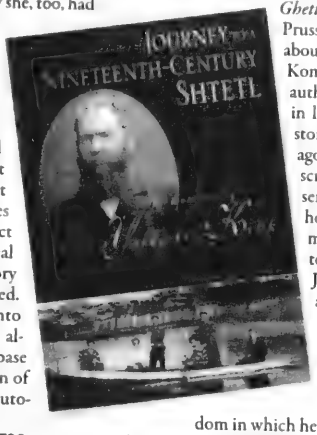
Her story told of how, one Passover night, the Cossacks forced the Jews out of their homes and out of the town altogether. Silver's father, a boy of 10, was holding the hand of his six-year-old sister but somehow lost her in the turmoil. Tragically, neither he nor anyone else in his family ever saw her again. Forever after, even long after he had come to America, he would ask everyone he met, "Do you know Deena Rosenstein from Kishinev?"

"When I finished reading, the silence in the classroom was disrupted by a man's voice calling out, 'It's unbelievable! It's unbelievable,'" Silver wrote in her story collection Better Than Gold: An Immigrant Family's First Years in Brooklyn, which was posthumously published in 1997.

"I thought he wanted to criticize my story, but he continued in a trembling voice, 'I'm stunned by this story. It's unbelievable, but it's true. My mother was Deena Rosenstein!'" Then the man told the story of a mother torn from her family as a girl during a pogrom, and how she, too, had never stopped searching for her family for the rest of her days. Incredibly, his mother had been the very same Deena Rosenstein.

Such a spine-chilling coincidence seems too extraordinary to be real, and so incredible that no novelist would dare attempt to present it as fiction. The episode serves to illustrate how much the act of writing an autobiographical story or sketch of family history can be a transformative deed. Writers transform history into literature and legend just as alchemists tried to transmute base metals into gold. What follows is a discussion of some of my favourite Jewish memoirs and autobiographical works.

Writing in Yiddish from 1689 into the 1720s, the famed Gluckel of Hamelyn penned the first known autobiography by a Jewish woman, but her warm account of her family and commercial affairs over many years was never meant for publication. Like Anne Frank's legendary diary, Gluckel's compelling Life falls into a category of literature defined as "unconscious autobiography," written for the edification of the author and perhaps children and grandchildren. First published only in 1896, it has rarely been out of print since; the Jewish Publication Society produced a new edition earlier this year.



Dating from the auspicious year of 1848, Aus dem Ghetto is a collection of stories by Prussian writer Leopold Kompert about life behind ghetto walls; Kompert is regarded as the first author to treat the Jewish ghetto in literature. I read some of the stories in translation some years ago, but still remember his description of the exhilarating sense of freedom and release he described when, as a boy, he momentarily escaped the ghetto and ran up the hill above the Judengasse despite the stern advice of family members to return immediately.

The narrator of the lovely memoir The Journeys of David Toback records a similar giddy sense of freedom in which he, a shtetl dweller in Ukraine, rides a horse at full gallop across the open plain, his first time in the saddle. That's one of many worthy episodes in his remarkable narrative. Toback came to America and became a butcher; late in life, he traded his apron for the writing desk and penned a Yiddish memoir that was published posthumously in English.

Generations of once-famous Jewish writers are now forgotten; consider the once-popular Yiddish novelist Nochim Mayer Shaikevitsch (Shomer), who was once a household name. In 1939, his daughter, Miriam Shomer Zunser, wrote a worthy family narrative for her children that was published as Yesterday, A Memoir of a Russian Jewish Family in 1978. Its first sentence is unforgettable: "Your great-grandfather had 24 children, all by the same wife." So, too, are the many stories of shtetl life that follow.

Perhaps the most memorable shtetl memoir yet to come to my attention is Yehezkel Kotik's narrative Journey to a Nineteenth Century Shtetl, originally published in Yiddish in 1913 and later in English translation. Like Zunser, Kotik had the remarkable ability, although three generations removed, of telling gripping handed-down stories about his great-grandparents, full of drama, intrigue and human interest. Reading this book about Kotik's tiny native village of Kamenets gives one the sense that the past is not lost, but easily revisited in literature. A good writer – in partnership with a good reader – can seemingly bring a whole world back to life.

Perhaps my favourite book of family history was written by Burton Bernstein, the brother of composer-conductor Leonard Bernstein. Burton's Family Matters: Sam, Jennie and the Kids appeared in two huge instalments in The New Yorker in 1982 and soon afterward was published as a book. In it, his celebrated brother is featured as a late-blooming appendage on a family saga that began a century before in Russia. Burton relates family history par excellence, then shares his experiences with us as the kid brother of a famous composer. Family Matters is an endearing and intimate portrait of a close-knit Jewish family that remains a pleasure to read.

On the Park
Events & Conference Centre
• Weddings • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs • Brunches
• Corporate Meetings & Socials
• 30,000 Square Feet of Versatile Event Space
• Six Beautifully Themed Rooms • Kosher Catering Available
Event Manager Kim Héroux and General Manger John Neretlis with Tzipi Livni at On the Park Events & Conference Centre, October 6, 2010 416-510-2002
www.eventsonthepark.ca
Toll Free 1-877-727-9723
1095 Leslie Street (at Eglinton), Toronto

CLASSIFIED DIRECTORY

5 HOUSES FOR SALE
10 HOUSES FOR SALE PRIVATE
15 HOUSES FOR RENT
20 HOUSES FOR SALE/RENT
24 HOUSES WANTED TO BUY
25 HOUSES WANTED TO RENT
30 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE
35 CONDOMINIUM FOR RENT
40 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE/RENT
45 CONDOMINIUM WANTED
50 ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
55 ACCOMMODATION WANTED
60 SHARED ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
62 SHARED ACCOMMODATION WANTED
65 ACCOMMODATION/SWAP/EXCHANGE
67 HOUSE SITTERS
70 UNIVERSITY ACCOMMODATION
75 APARTMENT FOR RENT
78 SHORT TERM RENTAL AVAILABLE
80 SHORT TERM RENTAL WANTED
81 APARTMENT TO SUBLET
82 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT
84 ROOM WANTED FOR RENT
85 APARTMENT WANTED
87 PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
105 COTTAGE FOR SALE
110 COTTAGE FOR RENT
115 COTTAGE FOR RENT/SALE
120 COTTAGE WANTED
122 TIME SHARE FOR SALE
123 TIME SHARE FOR RENT
124 ARIZONA PROPERTIES
125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE
130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT
135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
140 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION WANTED
143 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM. AVAIL.
145 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM. WANTED
147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION
150 FLORIDA TRANSPORTATION
155 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE
160 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR RENT
165 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
170 ISRAEL PROPERTIES WANTED
175 ISRAEL ACCOMMODATION WANTED
178 ISRAEL TRANSPORTATION
180 OUT-OF-TOWN PROPERTIES
185 OUT-OF-COUNTRY PROPERTIES
190 VACATION PROPERTY AVAILABLE
195 VACATION PROPERTIES WANTED
196 VACATION PROPERTIES-EXCH./SHARE
198 SPACE FOR LEASE
199 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY AVAILABLE
200 OFFICE SPACE AVAILABLE
201 OFFICE SPACE WANTED
202 STORAGE SPACE WANTED
203 STORAGE SPACE AVAILABLE
205 LAND/LOTS FOR SALE
210 LAND/LOTS FOR LEASE
220 INVESTMENT PROPERTIES
225 INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES
230 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES
232 BUSINESS FOR SALE
235 BUSINESS WANTED
237 CAREERS/RECRUITMENT
240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES
245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED
246 VOLUNTEERS
247 DAY CARE AVAILABLE
248 DAY CARE WANTED
250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE
255 DOMESTIC HELP WANTED
257 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE
258 HEALTHCARE WANTED
259 SENIORS
260 BUSINESS PERSONALS
265 PEOPLE SEARCH
270 PERSONALS
273 INTRODUCTION SERVICES
275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED
279 PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY
280 ANNOUNCEMENTS
290 LOST & FOUND
295 PETS
300 ARTICLES FOR SALE
305 ARTICLES WANTED
313 BOATS
315 CARS
320 CONTENTS SALE
325 GARAGE SALE

SERVICE DIRECTORY

345 ACCOUNTING
350 APPLIANCES
355 AUDIO-VISUAL SALES/REPAIRS
357 AUTOMOTIVE
358 BRIDAL
365 CARPENTRY
368 CARPETS
370 CATERING
372 CHUPPAHS
375 CLEANING/CLEANING SUPPLIES
379 CLOCKS/WATCHES
380 CLOTHING
382 COUNSELLING
385 COMPUTER
386 DANCING
387 DECORATING
390 DRIVING
392 DRY CLEANING/LAUNDRY
394 EDUCATION
395 ELECTRICAL
396 ELECTRONICS
400 ENTERTAINMENT
402 FINANCIAL
404 FITNESS & WEIGHT LOSS
405 FURNITURE
406 GARAGE DOORS
407 GIFTS
410 HEALTH & BEAUTY
412 HEATING/AIR CONDITIONING
415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS
416 HOME INSPECTION
419 INTERNET SERVICE
420 INVITATIONS/PRINTING/CALLIG.
425 JEWELLERY
427 JUDAICA
430 LEASING
431 LANDSCAPING/LAWNCARE
432 LAWYERS
433 LESSONS
434 LIMOUSINE/TAXI
435 LIQUIDATION
438 LOCKSMITH
439 MAKE-UP
440 MISCELLANEOUS
442 MUSICAL SERVICES
443 MORTGAGES
445 MOVING
449 PEST CONTROL
450 PAINTING/WALLPAPERING
452 PARTY SERVICES
455 PHOTOGRAPHY/VIDEO
460 PLUMBING
465 PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
470 RENOVATIONS
472 RETIREMENT HOMES
475 ROOFING
478 SATELITE & EQUIPMENT
480 SECURITY SYSTEMS
481 SEWING
485 SNOW REMOVAL
490 TABLE COVERING
493 TAILORING/ALTERATIONS
495 TILING
496 TRAINING
498 TRAVEL & TOURISM
500 TUTORING
510 UPHOLSTERY
512 WAITERING SERVICES
515 WATERPROOFING
520 WINDOW SERVICES
550 WORKSHOPS

REAL ESTATE Section

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

"WE OPEN DOORS FOR YOU"

DAVID EICHORN
REALTY LIMITED BROKERAGE

416-787-1712

www.eichornrealty.com • david@eichornrealty.com

GREAT TIME TO LIST!
Call today for a free evaluation of your property.

BATHURST / LAWRENCE ESTATE SALE — NEW LISTING
Spacious 4 + 1 bdrm ranch bungalow w/ 60 ft frontage in prime central location on East side of Bathurst, close to all amenities. Sep entry to fin bsmt & possible in-law suite, dbl garage. Asking $799,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

BATHURST / STEELES PRIMROSE CONDO — NEW LISTING
Rare, bright & spacious corner unit with magnificent se view. 2 bdrms, 2 baths, combined lr/dr ideal for entertaining. Both bdrms w/o to generous balcony, kitchen w/o to solarium. Amenities galore incl tennis courts & pool. ONLY $299,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

BATHURST / SHELBORNE
Exquisite brand new custom home, 3600+ sq ft. Attention to detail thruout. 5+1 bdrms, 6 baths, hrdwd flrs on 2 levels, sep entry to in-law suite. Fab design, ideal for entertaining & family use. Bright, spacious gem at $1,399,000! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

STRATHALLAN WOOD
Spacious custom built 4+1 bdrm family home in prestigious Lytton Park enclave. 4 baths, hrdwd flrs, combined lr/dr, gourmet kitchen with w/o to deck. Superior quality finishes thruout, ideal for entertaining! $1,149,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

*BROKER OF RECORD

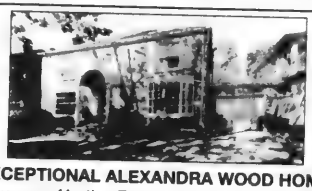
SOLD IN TWO DAYS FOR 97% OF ASKING PRICE

BATHURST/COLDSTREAM
'02 renovation & decoration. Fabulous flow for entertaining! 5 bdrms in total. Situated on wonderful deep lot in prime location. Large principal rooms, family-size Kosher kitchen, generous library w/built-in bookcases. Fin bsmt incl 4 bdrms, 2 baths & playrooms. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

BATHURST / LAWRENCE
3 + 1 bdrm bungalow on generous 47 x 120 ft lot in desirable location surrounded by million $ homes. Live in now, build later — an ideal spot for your dream home. PRICED FOR IMMEDIATE SALE AT $549,000 — ACT NOW! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

2 COVINGTON CONDO
Highly sought after corner unit! Bright & spacious 2 bdrm, 2 baths, approx. 1150 sf, se exposure, upgraded finishes throughout. 2 parking spots, luxurious lobby, fantastic amenities. Close to Lawrence Plaza, TTC. $399,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.



EXCEPTIONAL ALEXANDRA WOOD HOME
4 bedrooms, 4 baths. Executive home on a beautifully landscaped 55' X 134' lot with inground pool in prime Alexandra wood area. Offered at $2,095,000.

Contact Wilf Mandel, Sales Rep.,
416.494.5955 Cell: 416.846.3037
Century 21 Leading Edge Realty Inc., brokerage

SELLING YOUR HOME WITH A STRATEGY FOR SUCCESS!

ROYAL LEPAGE Partners Realty

MARCI KOIFMAN
BROKER

416.229.4454

IT'S YOUR MOVE!

Sheppard & Bathurst
Custom built 3600 sq ft 4 bdrm. Luxury home. Features hdwd floors, 2 skylights, main floor office and family room, huge kitchen w walk in pantry. Situated on a 46' X 161' landscaped lot. Stroll to shops, schools, shuls, TTC and easy highway access. More info @ www.rpt.ca/reiner40 $975,000

"The Excellence" 89 Skymark Dr. spacious 1835 sq ft 2 bdrm, 3 bath w large eat in kitchen, open balcony, 2 ensuites. Gorgeous building w 24 hr concierge and gatehouse, indoor and outdoor pools, tennis, guest suites.
More info @ www.rpt.ca/skymark1712 $559,000

The Community REALTY
ROYAL LEPAGE

Belle Ewart - $309,900.00
3+1 Bedroom Raised Bungalow
2 minute walk to Lake Simcoe
This home backs directly on to Belle Ewart Hebrew Centre.

To view call:
Julie Samide Sales Representative
(905) 727-3154

SEIDMAN
REAL ESTATE LIMITED BROKERAGE
416-633-7373

THORNHILL
2 storey, 3 bdr, 4 bths, fam rm, w/o to deck from kit, fin bsmt, dble gar, quiet Cr.

BATHURST/SHEPPARD
3 bdrms, 2 bths, liv & din comb, fin bsmt, lrge kit, gar, many extras!

416-633-7373

BATHURST / SHEPPARD
Stunning custom home, superior craftsmanship, nestled on a 67x120 lot! Fabulous flow for entertaining and living, hardwood & imported travertine marble flooring. 9 Ft ceiling on main flr, 2nd flr Juliet balcony with cathedral ceiling. Master bdrm coffered ceiling & two person jacuzzi bath in master ensuite, 2nd flr laundry & master bdrm soundproofed, 3 car tandem garage.

ESTHER RUBENSTEIN or CHAYA LAWRENCE, 416 739-7200
Sales Representatives, Sutton Group Admiral Realty Inc., Brokerage

To place a classified ad please call 416-391-1836

SUBSCRIBE TO THE CANADIAN JEWISH NEWS

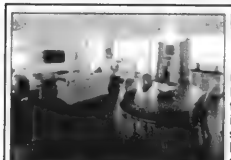
10 PRIVATE HOUSES FOR SALE

Bath/Clark, - 4+1 br. 4 bth. Combined LR/DR. Huge backyard. thornhillhome4sale@gmail.com for info. & appt.

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

Century Village - Deerfield (Newport U). 2 Bedroom 1 1/2 bathrooms. Fully Furnished - laminated floors. $70,000 US. 514-489-5842.

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE



449 Walmer Rd. Suite 604
Open House
Sat. and Sun 2 – 4

Indulge yourself in classic Forest Hill elegance. Enter through priv. dble drs into this bright, reno'd & superbly appointed 1300*, 2 bed / 2 bath lux suite. Enjoy rich herringbone firs, beautiful bthrms & a gorgeous "Cameo" kit. "Schonbek" crystal chandeliers illuminate the suite, while flr-to-ceiling windows welcome in soft SW sunlight. Perfect for those downsizing or in need of a pied-à-terre. Suite comes complete w/ 1 prkng, 1 locker and a Juliette balc... 2nd prkng spot avail. $589,000. *Measurements as per builder. www.449walmer-604.com

Sage Real Estate

Freddie Green Sage Real Estate Ltd., Brokerage
W. 416.483.8000 C. 416-788-3696
Freddie@LoveMyToronto.com
www.LoveMyToronto.com www.SageRealEstate.ca

WHY RENT WHEN YOU CAN OWN?

Eglinton/Bathurst: The ultimate urban lifestyle is available in this 1180 sq ft, 2 bedroom, substantially renovated suite complete with parking and locker. Close to shopping, restaurants, parks, subway and major arteries. All this for $327,900!

Please Contact Avril Wendt, Broker Graydon Hill Realty
416-922-1142

60 SHARED ACCOM. AVAILABLE

Sheppard/Leslie. Lrg., well furn'd. TH to share, close to subway, cable, prkng. Avail. immed. 416-756-9965 after 7:00 pm.

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

BATHURST-SHEPPARD
ELEGANT TWIN BLDS.
Very lrg. 1, 2, 3 Bedrooms, 2 & 3 Bdrms. w/2 balconies and 2 baths, Ample closets plus cedar, Roof laundry, pool, ravine setting, 6 Apts. per flr.
canyon@greenwinpm.com
416-631-9377 / 416-631-0388

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

DELRAY/BOCA Addison Reserve Live in the Perfect Climate..
In an Award Winning Country Club w/ Magnificent Homes from $400's to $4 mil.
CALL: Prudential Florida's On-Site Realtors Cherie & Larry Gross 561-702-7828 Or Visit Us @ HomesBytheGross.com

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

Bigger Than the Average Condo!
3636 Bathurst, "The Empress House"
LARGE 2 bdrm, SPECIAL! Central A/C, Hardwood, New Appliances, Ceramic Tiles, New Kitchens, Quiet "Professional Type" Building, Large Terrace/Balcony, FREE Membership to the Empress House Club- Pool, Sauna, Exercise, Laundry on Site, Underground Parking
416-931-2206 • 416-781-4672 • 416-663-8662

Bath./Egl., 4 bdr., 3 bths., totally renov., huge balc., spec. view, pkg., avail. now. Call 416-721-3599.

Bath/Lawrence - Covington 2 br. 2 bth. 24 hr. sec. balc. parkg. avail. nov.1 416-782-9797.

87 PROPERTY MANGEMENT

SUMMA PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
Professional Property Management & Consulting
With over 25 years experience our superior service includes managing multi-unit Residential/Commercial and Industrial properties. We also offer specialized services to manage individual condominium investments. Summa is first rate in Management, Consulting and Renting!
At Summa, we get "TOP MARKS" for Management, Consulting and Renting!
647-341-7990
www.summapm.com
propman@summapm.com

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

NOW IS THE BEST TIME TO BUY IN FLORIDA IN OVER 10 YEARS

- Home Prices are at 1999 levels. Our properties start at $26,000.
- FORECLOSURES: We have one of the largest inventories of foreclosures in South Florida. Bank Owned Properties are some of the best deals around.
- SHORT SALES are even better. (Ask us why and how to proceed??)
- Seasonal Rentals for either 2, 3, 4 or 5 months.
- We make Buying or Renting EASY.
- Palm Beach and Broward Counties.

PRG PREMIER RESIDENTIAL GROUP LLC
A Real Estate Brokerage Company

Larry Berger
954-567-8910
larrysellsflorida@gmail.com
www.premierrg.net

WARMTH AND SUN-DEPRIVED?

Golf, tennis, spa, swim through winter at Addison Reserve, premier country club living, Delray Beach, Florida. Pristine 3 bdrm, den, 3.5 bath, open plan home w/ golf and lake view. To view video: http://www.hometakesvideos.com/showcase/tour.php?id=11528cat=tour&style=ub
Ask $729k; incentive for CLJ buyer. Call owner 561 496 4347 for more information.

150 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

The Fountains of Lk. Worth, 2 bdr. twnhouse in gated country club commun., liv. rm./din. rm., lrge. scrnd. prch., nicely furn., golf, fitness ctr. Tennis avail. 3 mo. min. $1800. Call Jacqui, 201-436-6161.

Golf Course view, The Fountains, Lk. Worth, 3 bdr., 2.5 bth. villa in gated country club commun., entr. hall, lrge. liv. rm./din. rm., kit., jacuzzi, scrnd. porch, grand piano, cvac., golf, fitness, tennis avail. 3 mo. min. $2200/mo. Julie, 508-655-5056.

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

THIS IS A GREAT TIME TO BUY IN FLORIDA!
Make your dreams come true and take advantage of Bank Foreclosure Condos and Houses at 50-75% below market value!
We specialize in Miami, Miami Beach, Hollywood, Hallandale, Aventura, Ft. Lauderdale, Boca Raton and Delray.

CALL TODAY
Toll Free: (800) 851-2150
Beachfront Realty

SUBSCRIBE TO THE CANADIAN JEWISH NEWS

150 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Lakeworth/Covered Bridge. 55+, nicely furn'd., 2 bed., 2 bth., garden apt. condo enclosed screened porch facing lake, all ammens. incl. Clubhouse, pool, tennis, close to shopping, restaurants & movies. Avail. annual or seasonal. 905-597-9449, 352-861-4833.

COUNTRYSIDE GOLF & COUNTRY CLUB, beautiful 2 bdr., 2 bth., fully equip. kit., Indry., 3 TV's, grnd. flr., lanai overlooking lake, pool & tennis crts., gated golf community & club house with fully equip. workout rm., lrge. pool & tennis crts. & restaurant. Walking to Publix Mall. $2500/US, one mo. min. Avail Jan. 15 (negot.) to end of March. Andrea, 905-528-0874 or: astringer@cogeco.ca

Hallandale, Three Island, renov., lovely furnishings, 1 bdr. w/ sunroom, deck o/looks canal, tennis, pool, close to beach, 3 mo. min. Call 416-630-2177 www.hallandale.webs.com

N. Miami Beach, 1 bed., 1.5 bth., parking, overlooking ocean, CLEAN. 905-886-0347 Lv. msg.

Wynmoor, Coconut Crk. 2 bd./ 2 ba., parq. flr., encl. patio, sunset water vw., Golf, tennis, pools, fitness club. US $1,800/ mo., min. 3 mo. 617-959-4600 or ssswartz@aol.com

Sunny W. Palm Beach - Beautiful 2 br. convertible 2 full bths. New Kit. New furnishings. Views. Balc. Prkg., pool. No shabbos elevator. 3 mos. min. Call 301-907-0842.

Longboat Key, Beaut., 2 bed., 2 bth., Beach Place. Newly, fully reno'd. & furn'd., sunset views, covered prkng., avail. January & April 2011. email: efeis@aol.com or call Elliott at 416-745-2711.

Delray - KP, 2/2, 55+, bright, golf view, breezy, all new, 3 mo. min., $1590/mo. 561-272-1859.

Cent. Village, Deerfield, 2 bdr., 2 bth., 2nd flr., $1500/mo. US, min. 3 mos. Avail. immed. 416-346-5445.

Lauderhill. Lux. condo fully equipped 2 bed., 2 bth. on golf-course. $2200 USD/mo. 3 mos. min. Must be 55+. Emile Malka 450-689-7391, 450-680-1275.

Deerfield Bch., Cent. Vill. 4 winter month, garden apt. 2 br. 1.5 bth. 718-614-4492/315-370-8739.

Palm Aire - Pompano Beach 2/2 Fully renovated. Min. 3 months $1800/month 905-882-8970.

Century Village, Deerfield. One Bedroom, 1.5 bathrooms, corner unit with central air. Very clean, freshly painted, close to pool. Yearly/Seasonal. 514-240-3829.

1-1 1/2 Condo Boca Raton. Furnished, renovated, gated. 24 hour security. Pools, tennis courts, 15 minutes to beach. $1600 monthly. Minimum 3 months. Available December 15th. 514-744-6633.

Hallandale, Fl. Three Islands condo on intracoastal w/FT concierge, 1 br. 2 bth. + den, prkg. & all amenities, close to shops & beach; fully furn., no pets/smoker Avail. for full winter season. 416-880-2322.

HOLLYWOOD FLORIDA JUST LISTED 954-816-8269. 2 bed. 2 bath. seasonal / annual. Walk to shuls, beach & downtown $2200/mo. bfaske@bellsouth.net

Arien House East. 2 bed., 2 bth., For season from Nov. 15th. $1800/mo. USD. 416-256-0862.

Boynton Beach. Gated, adult comm., 2 bed., 2 bth., solarium, fully furn'd., avail. for season. 647-407-2987,416-785-8188 aaronlang@aaronlang.ca

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

Canadian realtor. Florida sun.
The perfect combination to find your next property to rent or buy.

ELIE KOFFMAN

MONTREAL
C: 514.518.3543
O: 514.937.1717

FLORIDA
C: 305.613.4508
O: 305.408.8401

LONDONO REALTY GROUP INC

ECR

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Dec.18-25, $1400. Priv. Sanibel Golf front, Shell Is. Beach Club, 2 br., sleeps 6. All amenities. Sanibel@rogers.com

Arien House East. 1 bdr., 1.5 baths., avail. Jan. 5th, 2 or more mos. Call 416-486-4479.

Deerfield Beach, Century Village. One bedroom, 1 1/2 bathrooms. Furnished, excellent condition. Minimum 4 months. 514-278-8645; 514-488-2772.

Hallandale, 3 Islands, large 2 bdr., 2 bth., fully equip. & furn., 24/7 secur., seas. Call 416-447-1303.

Arien House E., 2 bdrm., 2 bth., for winter season. Pool & intracoastal view. 416-781-5511.

Pembroke Pines/Hollybrook. Seasonal or annual rental. 2 bed., 2 bth., decorator - furn'd., just painted, upgraded kitchen, lake/golf view. Golf, tennis, pool & CH. Call 631-860-1515.

Century Village, Deerfield, 1-1 1/2, bdr. grd. flr. condo, nicely furn. 2 mos. Dec./Jan. U.S.$1500. Eva 416-445-6400/416-424-6618.

SUNNY ISLES 4-6 week rental Jan. - Feb. 15, 3/3, oceanfront, new bldg. $200/day. E-mail sunnyisles33160@gmail.com

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

SOUTH FLORIDA REAL ESTATE
Fort Lauderdale/Pompano to Boca Raton Starting at $50,000
3 Mo Rentals from $1600
Call Wieder Realty, Inc.
954-978-8300
or 1-888-979-9788
www.Palm-Aire.com

Delray Beach, Gleneagles CC, 2 br., 2 bath. condos start at $94,000 with or without golf/tennis member. Season rentals start at $3,200. CC lifestyle; golf, social, tennis & more.
Call Doody Caplan at 561-702-3744
Realty Associates Luxury Partners

230 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

Chair avail. for rent in large hair salon & room avail. for rent for massage, laser, etc. Also, 1 hair-stylist + clients needed. Call Lida 416-445-2611 or 416-858-6565.

240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

Hebrew-speaking Office Admin. 2+yrs exp: incl. Israeli exp., customs paperwork, read/write English. Salary: $41,704 resume to: neild@picadillyfashions.com

245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED

Accountant/Bookkeeper seeks P/T position. Experienced. Computer literate. Call Gerry at 416-733-8013.

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Nanny, Housekeeper, elderly care, NO fee to employer, Filipino from Israel, Singapore & Hong Kong & from the islands. Live in/out, screening guar. Call 416-733-3915.

Caregivers/Nannies/Housekeepers Filipino, Local & Europe. Live in/ live out. 416-932-3042.

Del's Cleaning Service, we can clean houses, renovation clean up, and after hours cleaning. Call 416-743-4174/416-710-0408.

Male support care worker, live-in or live/out, exper., refs. available. 416-887-5872, 647-340-6112.

Exper. cleaning lady available any day including weekends. Please call 416-748-7386.

Honest, reliable, experienced cleaning lady with good refs. Please call 647-351-9232.

Certified home care nurses, PSW's, & companions. Day or night. Svcs. include housekeeping, cleaning, cooking, shopping & exercises. Very low rates. 647-284-7892.

Cleaning lady looking for job Mon., Wed. & Sat. 416-534-1301 or 416-785-9792, leave a msg.

257 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE

Exper HCA/sitter seeks job, exp. in Jewish community. Refs avail. Call Fareeda at 416-356-1350.

259 SENIORS

Reliable, exper. lady to be part time companion for seniors. Own car, errands, shop, etc. 416-875-4738.

Jewish woman with over 20 yrs. exp. is avail. as live-out, light hskpng., cooking, shopping, walks, Dr.'s. appt's., etc. Call 416-675-0553.

275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED

New Year, new beginnings. I am 60 years old, just retired, tall, attractive, full of life, looking for that someone special between 60-65 who has a zest for life, likes to travel, laugh and doesn't take life too seriously. Reply to CJN Box # 5304.

Vivacious, active, 59, loyal female, seeking 50+ sincere, active guy. Write to CJN Box #5254.

Widower, mid 70's, slender, 5'8", healthy, young at heart, would like to meet a lady to enjoy whatever life has to offer. (North York area). CJN Box #5306.

Attractive professional lady, 60+ seeks gentleman to share the music of life. CJN Box #5270.

Looking for a gentleman 60-70's. My life is beautiful, but a loyal friend is missing. Call in Florida 786-284-8254 and in Toronto call 416-575-2265 & ask for Riva.

If you are a woman, sensitive, compassionate & honest, please write to this tall handsome never married man, 60 who strives to be all he looks for in you. BOX 154 , STN.P, Toronto, ON, M5S 2S7.

Replying to an ad with a CJN Box Number?

Address your mail to:

The Canadian Jewish News
1500 Don Mills Rd.
Suite 205
North York, Ont.
M3B 3K4

Don't forget to put the Box Number on your envelope.

CJN Box #'s are valid for 30 days.

300 ARTICLES FOR SALE

AS IS PASSAP DUOMATIC-80 knitting machine. Instruction book included. Excellent condition. Asking $1,200 dollars. Speak to Sarah or Golda. 416-694-3883.

305 ARTICLES WANTED

Seeking Holocaust/Shoah, Founding of Israel, Ghetto, Camp, Pogrom documents, letters & papers for historical preservation. Ben. Discretion assured. 416-890-9644.

Ben Buys Book Collections, manuscripts, diaries, letters, documents & militaria. 416-890-9644.

Support the advertisers who support the

The Canadian Jewish news

SERVICE DIRECTORY Section

370 CATERING

Dairy Treats Restaurant & Catering
Brit Milah • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs (COR)
Home or Office • Shiva Meals • Corporate Accounts
3522 Bathurst St. (S. of Wilson) 416-787-0309
www.dairytreats.com

SHIVA MEALS • BRIT MILAH • HOME • OFFICE
SHORT NOTICE & SAME DAY SERVICE
• DELIVERY AVAILABLE
416-789-7651
3457 BATHURST ST.
www.milknhoney.ca
(COR) milk 'n honey THE DAIRY RESTAURANT

395 ELECTRICAL

All kinds of electrical jobs. For great service call Serge, 416-834-4312. Licensed.

Electrician seeks small jobs ONLY!!!!! Call 416-636-5732.

405 FURNITURE

Carrocel Restorations
CUSTOM MADE FURNITURE
Specializing in Dining Tables
FULL REFINISHING & RE-UPHOLSTERY SERVICES
416-999-2525
www.carrocel.com

Marcantonio Furniture Repair Specializing in touchups. Restoration & general repairs done on premises. 416-654-0518.

Earl Bales Sr. Woodworkers. Caning, chair repairs, regluing, custom, reas. 416-630-6487.

412 HEATING AND AIR CONDITIONING

Cooling, Heating Service, Repair. Fully licensed. FREE estimate. Res/Com. 647-299-7060.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENT

Hardwood Floor sanding, staining, refinishing, new floors, installation & repairs. Jules - 416-726-5338.

General Contractors for all your renovations. Very experienced. Great service. Reasonable rates. SB Construction. 416-834-4312.

HANDYMENCH. SHOWER REPAIRS. Bath. & Kit. renov., cabinet reface, paint/tile. water damage. Call 416-826-0574.

Best Prices!!! Best Quality!!! Best Service!!! Home Improvements & painting. Licensed & Bonded Call Shlomo 416-804-1706.

Odd jobs, small repairs, painting, etc. Please call Fred at 416-420-8731.

HANDYMAN
Plumbing/electrical/carpentry, locks. Ephram. 416-630-3047.

433 LESSONS

BE "COOL," BE A COMPUTER WIZ Learn to use the computer for beginners. All skills made easy CAll JANICE 416-806-0278.

445 MOVING

GEMINI MOVERS & STORAGE LTD.
Since 1972
• Homes • Apartments • Offices
• Professional Piano Movers
Tel: 416-782-8736
Call until 11 p.m.
Fax: 416-240-9133
Top quality service is mandatory!

G&M Moving and Storage. Apts., homes, offices. Short notice. Large or small. We carry supplies. 905-738-4030.

srmmovers2009@hotmail.com A-1 Short Notice. Insured. Home, apt, office, bus. 416-747-7082.

Before signing any contract, make sure your contractor is appropriately licensed with the Metropolitan Licensing Commission 416-392-3000

450 PAINTING/ WALLPAPER

Prof. painting/paper-hanging 416-667-9869 or 905-762-1657 Jacob. No Shabbos calls.

Painting, res., commercial, interior/exterior. Ceramic Tile & Drywall. Reasonable. FREE ESTIMATES. PAINT HOUSE ENT. 416-459-1383.

452 PARTY SERVICES

A-M-A-Z-I-N-G
Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
at
LOOTS LOUNGE
On Bayview
All Inclusive
Packages from $5900
416-787-5668
lootslounge.com

472 RETIREMENT HOME

Ahavath Achim Retirement Home. The home with a Neshama. Planned activities, 24 hr. supervision. For information contact Joseph Sahar, office 416-398-5486 or 905-660-4831.

485 SNOW REMOVAL

Mackin Landscaping & Snow Removal offers quality commercial & residential snow plowing & fall leaf clean-ups 416-816-2672.

500 TUTORING

THE TUTORSHIP ADVANTAGE Math, Chemistry, Physics, Biology, English, French, Essay Writing. 416-386-1595 www.tutorship.ca

Hebrew lessons, all ages, highly experienced tutor. Please call Zohar at 647-867-4515.

510 UPHOLSTERY

All fabrics half price when you upholster with us. NO HST. 416-931-2660.

Bathurst Upholstery. Reupholstering sofas, chairs. Low prices 416-781-1995, 905-886-3148.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

to place an ad call
Monday to Thursday
(CLASSIFIED DEPT. CLOSED FRIDAYS)
416-391-1836 (ask for classified advertising)

Classified Deadlines:
Wednesday at 4:00 p.m.
8 days prior to issue date.*

PLEASE NOTE!* On a week before a statuatory or Jewish holiday, the deadline will be earlier. Please call for exact times.

All Classified ads require prepayment before deadline.
The CJN accepts Visa, Mastercard American Express, Cheque or Cash.

The CJN cannot be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Please bring any problems to the attention of your sales representative before your ad is repeated.

PEERLESS 905-886-5610
TRAVEL & CRUISES Call ext. 369
ISRAEL FALL/WINTER
FROM $726.* +tax
*Specific dates apply

Sports & Leisure

Social Networking @ The Canadian Jewish News
for the :-) generation
YU

Phillies' Amaro has rest of league saying 'Roy Vey'

By ROB CHARRY
JTA

PHILADELPHIA — As the son and grandson of professional baseball players, Ruben Amaro Jr. was as good a candidate as any to become a baseball lifer. Yet soccer was actually his "first love" as a kid, and he was good enough at the sport to qualify for a youth team travelling to play in Germany.

But his Jewish mom nixed the idea – for Holocaust-related reasons.

To whatever degree that decision helped steer Amaro toward the family business, Philadelphia fans should be thankful.

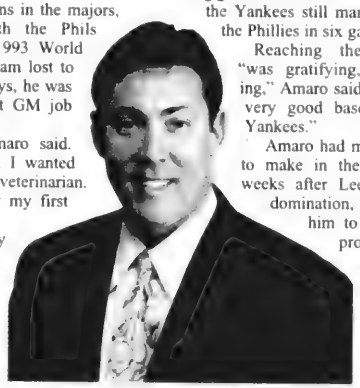
In a decade as assistant general manager of the Phillies, he helped build a squad that would win the 2008 World Series – only the second championship in the team's 126-year history. Days later he was promoted to general manager, a perch he has used to orchestrate a string of high-profile trades and signings that have the Phillies, historically baseball's losingest franchise, looking like a dynasty rather than a one-year wonder.

In 2009, Amaro's first as general manager, the team made it back to the World Series, losing to the New York Yankees. This season the Phillies finished the regular season with the best record in the big leagues and are well positioned, as the playoffs kick off, to become the first National League team since the St. Louis Cardinals in 1944 to reach three straight World Series.

Amaro was new to the job, but not the sport. He has spent the majority of his 45 years in and around baseball – ultimately not a surprise given that his father, Ruben Amaro Sr., spent 11 seasons in the majors, including six with the Phillies, and his grandfather, Santos, was a Cuban-born legend who starred in the Mexican Leagues in the 1940s.

In the early 1960s, Amaro Sr. would marry Judy Herman, a Jewish girl from Philadelphia, and stick around the Phils' organization long enough to acquire a World Series ring as first base coach in 1980. Amaro Jr. was one of the batboys. He went on to star at Stanford University, helping the school win the College World Series in 1987.

After eight seasons in the majors, including five with the Phils and a trip to the 1993 World Series, which the team lost to the Toronto Blue Jays, he was offered the assistant GM job in 1999.



Ruben Amaro Jr.

"It's funny," Amaro said. "When I was little, I wanted to be a doctor or veterinarian. Soccer was actually my first love."

"We had a very diversified family," he said, referring to his Jewish mother and Catholic-Hispanic father. "We did Passover, Yom Kippur, Chanukah. We were exposed to both faiths pretty equally."

Growing up in northeast Philadelphia, Amaro never had a bar mitzvah. But, he recalled, "I had a lot of friends who were bar mitzvahed and went to a lot of them."

Though his wife is Catholic and raising their children in that faith, Amaro said that "We go to seders all the time. For the New Year, we were hanging with my Aunt Linda."

He adds: "I think in the Jewish faith there's an emphasis on family, and the closeness of the family is something that really appeals to me."

Just a few months after becoming general manager of the Phillies, Amaro was inducted into the Philadelphia Jewish Sports Hall of Fame. If performance is a measure, Amaro has lived up to the honour.

Shortly after taking the reins, Amaro would make the first of several great moves, letting longtime left fielder Pat Burrell walk as a free agent and replacing him with Raul Ibanez, who would carry the team with his bat for the first two months of the 2009 season. His biggest successes, however, have involved bringing top-flight hurlers to town.

In 2009, with the pitching staff struggling, Amaro signed 37-year-old Pedro Martinez. He pitched well, but the bigger move came soon after, on July 29. After being rebuffed in his attempt to acquire Roy Halladay – perhaps the best pitcher in baseball – from Toronto, Amaro outmaneuvered a number of veteran GMs to land the 2008 American League Cy Young Award winner, Cliff Lee, in a trade with Cleveland for four prospects.

Lee's spectacular debut in San Francisco two days later and stellar showing the next two months was surpassed only by a near-perfect post-season, in which he went 4-0, and became a certified Yankee killer, winning games 1 and 5 of the World Series. But the Yankees still managed to dethrone the Phillies in six games.

Reaching the World Series "was gratifying, yet disappointing," Amaro said. "We didn't play very good baseball against the Yankees."

Amaro had more big decisions to make in the off season. Six weeks after Lee's World Series domination, the Phillies sent him to Seattle for three prospects. The same day, he traded three other prospects to Toronto for Halladay, the pitcher he had really coveted that summer.

The Phils immediately signed Halladay to a three-year extension and the right-hander was dominant from the start of the season. But Amaro would spend the next several months fending off critics who wondered why the Phils couldn't have kept Lee along with Halladay.

The team got off to a hot start in 2010, but cooled due to a host of injuries. By mid-July, in third place and barely above .500, Amaro began looking for another starting pitcher. One year to the day that he had managed to pry Lee from Cleveland, Amaro outbid several contenders for Houston's Roy Oswalt.

"We had a lot of internal discussions about doing a number of things," Amaro said, including "breaking up the club."

"We felt if we were going to make any move, it would have to really move us forward."

The trade has been a home run: Since arriving in Philadelphia, Oswalt went 7-1 with a 1.65 ERA.

For those keeping score, that's three times in a row that Amaro outmaneuvered the rest of his colleagues to acquire the best starting pitcher on the market.

With Halladay and Oswalt leading the way, it's been "Roy Vey" for the rest of the league. The Phillies finished the season with a 49-19 stretch run that produced their fourth straight division title and the best record in baseball.

The defending NL champs beat the Cincinnati Red in their best-of-five playoff series and moved on to face the San Francisco Giants. How confident was the GM prior to facing the Reds?

"We haven't had the kind of offensive season that we've had in the past," Amaro said. "We're going to have the pitching, but we're going to have to swing the bats better."

RE-ELECT ☑
Nick
PAPA
COUNCILLOR WARD 5

My No.1 Priority
Will Always Be the Residents of Ward 5

RESPONSIBLE REPRESENTATION
NO PERSONAL AGENDA
DEDICATED COMMUNITY LEADER
WORKS HARD TO KEEP YOUR PROPERTY TAX DOWN
LIVING IN WARD 5 FOR MORE THAN 36 YEARS
14 YEARS OF MUNICIPAL EXPERIENCE
KNOWS THE TOWN WELL TO GET THE JOB DONE

For more information
please visit his website at: www.nickpapatocouncil.com or email: re-elect@nickpapatocouncil.com or phone: 905-883-3580.

On October 25, 2010
VOTE TO RE-ELECT
Nick Papa ☑

Future Party funds a playground in Israel

By CARA EDELL
Special to The CJN

Hundreds of people between the ages of 23 to 45 gathered at the Thompson Hotel in Toronto recently for the Jewish National Fund's first Future Party.

JNF Future, a branch of the Jewish National Fund, strives to engage young professionals through programming and fundraising events that support projects in Israel. This year's Future Party committee has chosen to use the evening's proceeds to build a playground for the children of Moshav Rehov in Israel's Beit Shean Valley.

Darren Slavens, JNF Future Party co-chair and Jessica Fenton, JNF Future co-chair

Moshav Rehov is an impoverished area with little infrastructure that relies heavily on farming. Currently, there are no recreational facilities for children and very few meeting points in the community.

"Moshav Rehov is an area heavily populated by new immigrants to the state. The people that populate this area are starting out new lives in a new country. If we can take any little burden off their lives and provide their children with an area to play in, that is pretty great," said Darren Slavens, a Future Party co-chair, along with Michael Kimel, Alana Konopny and Candace Zwicker.

The Oct. 7 party featured musical guest Max Weinberg of Bruce Springsteen's E Street Band, as well as appetizers and desserts and a live auction. Items up for bid included backstage passes for a Bruce Springsteen concert, a guitar signed by members of the group Down with Webster and a painting made during the evening by Melysa Gorlicky.

Slavens said the event was an essential fundraiser, especially for the younger Jewish demographic in Toronto. "We need to be involved with our community and promote a strong, safe State of Israel because no one is going to do it for us. We are losing a PR battle on a massive scale, and it's important that we be proud to be Jewish and proud of Israel. That means the next generation has to get involved."

Jessica Fenton, a JNF Future co-chair, said JNF has so far been "fairly low profile" among young professionals. "With the Future Party and other events going forward, we are hoping to create a younger, savvier image for JNF Toronto. It is our ultimate goal to attract and retain a new generation of supporters and donors."

Fenton said she takes pride in knowing that while young Toronto Jews are out partying and having fun, they are also supporting a community in Israel. "That's the best part about JNF – all funds go directly to Israel. Get ready, Toronto – this is just the first of many Future parties to come!"

Fenton said JNF Future's next event will be the JNF Hoops Classic Five-on-Five basketball tournament on Nov. 28 at the Hoop Dome.

Visit http://toronto.jnf.ca/ for more information.

APPLE TOFFEE CRISP

5 EACH (large) peeled & sliced Granny Smith and McIntosh apples
1 1/4 c sugar, divided
1 1/4 c flour, divided
3/4 c butter, divided
1 8-oz. pkg. Heath Toffee Bits
1 c uncooked rolled oats
1/4 tsp ground cinnamon
1/4 tsp baking powder
1/4 tsp baking soda and 1/4 tsp salt

Heat oven to 375°. Grease 13"x 9"x 2" baking pan. In large bowl, toss apple slices, 3/4 c sugar and 1/4 c flour, coating apples evenly. Spread in bottom of prepared pan. Dot with 1/4 c butter. Stir together toffee bits, oats, remaining 1/2 c sugar, 1 c flour, cinnamon, baking powder, baking soda, salt. Melt remaining 1/2 c butter; add to oat mixture, mixing until crumbs are formed. Sprinkle crumb mixture over apples. Bake 40-45 min or until topping is lightly browned and apples are tender. Serve warm with whipped topping or ice cream. Cover; refrigerate leftovers.

CAPLAN'S

experience
the Caplan's difference

1111 Wilson Road (just south of Eglinton)
416.757.1655 • caplans.ca

A Family Business for over 60 Years

REMEMBERING OUR YESTERDAYS

By BILL GLADSTONE

TEMPLE SINAI UNDER CONSTRUCTION, 1956

The bulldozer and piles of concrete blocks stand on the site of what would soon become Temple Sinai, Toronto's second Reform congregation after Holy Blossom Temple, located on the north side of Wilson Avenue between Bathurst Street and Avenue Road. The congregation was founded in 1954, and the ground-breaking took place in 1956. In 1955, Rosh Hashanah services were held at Bathurst Heights Collegiate and Yom Kippur services in the Glendale Theatre. Founding Rabbi Jordan Pearlson, who died in 2008, was the Temple's spiritual leader for some 40 years. The cars in the background are flowing along Highway 401.

Toronto's Jewish community is changing

By AVRUM ROSENSWEIG

URBAN WRITER

Changes are afoot in the Toronto Jewish community.

Over the last few years we have become less concerned with the collective and more so with our own individual needs. This is a consequence of our being a more comfortable community that's no longer as reliant on our neighbourhood.

This change in our communal character is reflected in the kinds of shuls many of our members are now considering.

While the Ashkenazi community member of old was interested in the larger edifices built upon the awe-inspiring European culture of spiritual service, including rabbinical speeches and cantorial weavings, his/her desire in a shul today is for one that is more intimate, less hierarchical, and has a particular spiritual bent. (Sephardi spiritual needs have not changed as dramatically).

More Jews are now showing they want to belong to a shul tailored to their spiritual needs, such as an egalitarian Orthodox shul, one with a gay-positive environment or a local Conservative synagogue offering environmental tours and hikes predicated on Jewish texts.

Evidence of this change can also be found in large shuls hosting break-off minyanim.

A spiritual flavour exists for everyone, and if the shul you want does not, someone will build it.

Fundraising in our community does not look like it used to either. Tzedakah-times are a-changin'.

In the old days, donors would give vast sums of money without asking questions about how it was to be spent. Today, more philanthropists are earmarking funds for projects of their choice, with the expectation that the recipient/charity will listen to their instructions, not the other way around. The donor gets to sit by the window.

Israel is not what it used to be as far as our giving. Not so long ago it, it received most of our funds and adulation. Today, it does not have the Jewish fan base of old and receives less Diaspora tzedakah.

It will be fascinating to watch these changes and see the new Toronto Jewish community dance.

I will guess most of the gigantic synagogues will shrink in membership, making way for small to mid-size shuls.

Those that survive will do so because of their leaders' adeptness at choreographing the role of the shul in a society questioning the essence of religion and its application to the individual.

Prayer and how it is taught will mature, as will female participation in the services.

I think the large will have to work harder to maintain their broad base through creative fundraising and a kinder, gentler face.

Boutique charities will benefit from the change of donor character.

I am hoping, as the individual's needs trump the collective's, that our community embraces creative Torah study, and launches Jewish art galleries, mentorship programs, a greater selection of journals and newspapers and more Jewish theatre.

While money talks in this community and the wealthy are the dignitaries and stars, I believe the struggling artist, the Jewish teacher and even the mechanic will be recognized for their contribution, as they used to be. Sometimes going forward means going back.

I believe, with a rise in anti-Semitism, Israel will become in vogue again, but until that happens, much of our community will take it for granted and lose sight of its importance in our lives.

There are many changes going on around us. The Toronto Jewish community is growing into a place where individualism is on the rise. While this movement ensures that community members will have a wealth of character, we should always remember the importance of the collective and that things can change in a moment with our people.

Go to http://avrum.net to comment.

Priceless just got a price.

Whether you want sporty or sport-utility, the C-Class and GLK-Class both feature the 4MATIC™ permanent all-wheel-drive system, plus the unmistakable AMG styling package[1]. And the standard 20" twin-5-spoke alloy wheels on the GLK give this SUV a striking accent. Visit your local Mercedes-Benz Toronto Area retailer or mbtoronto.ca

Test drive the 2011 C-Class or 2011 GLK-Class today.

Mercedes-Benz

MBTORONTO.CA

Toronto Area Retail Group
Maple 9300 Jane St (905) 585-9300
Mississauga 6120 Mavis Rd (905) 363-3322

Sales Inquiries (877) 366-8888
Markham 8350 Kennedy Rd (905) 305-1088
Newmarket 230 Mulock Dr (905) 853-6868

Downtown 761 Dundas St E (416) 947-9000
Midtown 849 Eglinton Ave E (416) 847-7400
Thornhill 228 Steeles Ave W (905) 886-6881

© 2010 Mercedes-Benz Canada Inc. *Lease and finance offers based on a new 2010 C 250 / GLK 350 available only through Mercedes-Benz Financial on approved credit for a limited time. Lease example based on $358/$458 (including taxes) per month for 48/48 months. Down payment or equivalent trade of $6,700/$7,300 plus first monthly payment and security deposit of $400/$500 and applicable taxes due at lease inception. MSRP starting at $35,900/$43,500. A.P.R. of 3.9%/4.9% applies. Total obligation is $24,284/$29,784. Finance example based on 60 month term at an A.P.R. of 1.9%/2.9% and an MSRP of $35,900/$43,500. Monthly Payment is $565/$703 (including taxes) with down payment $6,015/$6,715. Cost of borrowing is $1,585/$2,959 for a total obligation of $39,910/$48,844. 18,000 km/year allowance ($0.20/km for excess kilometres applies). Freight/PDI of $1,995, Dealer Admin fee of $295, air-conditioning levy of $100, EHF tires, filters, and batteries, stewardship fee of $29.70 and provincial fee of $5 are now included in the final purchase price. License, insurance, registration taxes, and PPSA are extra. Offer may change without notice and cannot be combined with any other offers. See your local Mercedes-Benz Toronto Area retailer for details. [1] Standard on the C 300 models, C 350 models and C 63 AMG. Only available as part of an option package. C 350 4MATIC™ shown with optional sport package. GLK 350 4MATIC™ shown with optional AMG Sport Package. Offers end October 31st, 2010.

Downtown Toronto's Finest Boutique Hotel
The GRAND HOTEL TORONTO
Reservations 1-877-32-GRAND
www.grandhoteltoronto.com
aeroplan Earn 500 Aeroplan Miles per night and up to 15 000 Aeroplan Miles for Extended Stays
* Aeroplan is a registered trademark of Aeroplan Limited Partnership

The Canadian Jewish news

56 Pages | Thursday, October 28, 2010 | 20 Cheshvan, 5771 | $1.25

MIRVISH
2010–2011
SEASON
SUBSCRIBE NOW
MIRVISH.COM

This Week

National

Israelis and Canadians honoured for relief efforts in Haiti. Page 3

Heebonics

Rhythm method: Drumming for therapy. Page 46

Books & Authors

Lenin and his Jewish origins. Page 50

Sports & Leisure

Israeli boxer rumbles at Rama. Page 54

On cjnews.com

Wine club promotes Israel's finest.

Index

National 3
Editorials & Letters 8
Perspectives 9
Opinions 10
The Kirshner File 11
Jewish Life 18
According to Reports 22
Yiddish Corner 24
On Campus 27
Family Moments 31
What's New 32
Obituaries & Notices 34
Spice of Life 40
Israel & the Jewish World 41
Health & Lifestyles 44
Business 45

www.cjnews.com
Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09694

Peace out of reach, Israeli vice-premier says

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Israel's vice-premier and minister of strategic affairs, Moshe Ya'alon, strongly doubts whether Israel and the Palestinian Authority (PA) can reach a peace agreement in the foreseeable future.

Ya'alon, former chief of staff of the Israeli armed forces and a member of the Likud party, says the land-for-peace formula that enabled Israel to sign a peace treaty with Egypt in 1979 can't be applied on the Palestinian front at present.

In an interview last week with three journalists reporting for the Jewish media in Toronto, Ya'alon suggested that the latest incarnation of the peace process is doomed to fail unless the PA recognizes Israel as a Jewish state and the state of the Jewish people.

Portraying the Palestinians as hard-core rejectionists, Ya'alon said they rebuffed Palestine partition plans presented by the Peel Commission in 1937 and the United Nations in 1947.

Moshe Ya'alon in Toronto
[Sheldon Kirshner photo]

To the PA, Israel's occupation of Palestinian territory began in 1948 rather than in 1967, he said.

"For the Palestinians, the conflict is not about borders but about Israel's very existence."

"I supported the Oslo idea of territorial compromise as the right way to reach peace," said Ya'alon, who was chief of military intelligence when the Oslo peace process was in full flight in the mid-1990s.

But once he concluded that the then president of the PA, Yasser Arafat, was unwilling to recognize Israel as a Jewish state, he was no longer convinced the land-for-peace formula could be applied to the Palestinian track.

Arafat's successor, Mahmoud Abbas, holds similar views, he noted. "He says he'll never recognize Israel as a Jewish state."

Ya'alon acknowledged that the PA recognized Israel as the Oslo peace process got under way in 1993.

Continued on page 25

Solemn ceremony 15 years later

Israelis from all walks of life commemorated the 15th yahrzeit of the assassination of prime minister Yitzhak Rabin last week on 12 Cheshvan. Seen here are youngsters who took part in a memorial ceremony at the president's residence. [Israel Sun photo]

Chaye Sarah
Candlelighting: 5:55
Havdalah: 7:01
Greater Toronto Area

CJN0000860064 12000 13JAN11
PATTI RENIHAN XXDIR(J)
MCLAREN MICROPUBLISHING LT 013
PO BOX 972 STATION F 861
TORONTO ON M4Y 2N9

oday
's.com

Netanyahu urges Palestinians to return to direct talks – please see page 42

The News in Brief

Canada

Mandel Wins Again

EDMONTON — Stephen Mandel, Edmonton's first Jewish mayor, won a third consecutive term last week. He received 55 per cent of the vote, while rival David Doward got 30 per cent.

New 'Buycott' Website

TORONTO — The Buycott Israel campaign unveiled a revamped and expanded website last week – buyisraeligoods.org – that provides a North American database of places to buy Israeli goods. The campaign aims to fight the boycott, divestment and sanctions drive against Israel by promoting Israeli products.

Jews Mull Meeting

CALGARY — Jewish leaders here say they'll canvass community opinion before deciding on meeting with the young neo-Nazi who went on an anti-Semitic graffiti spree last fall. Adam Springer, president of the Calgary Jewish Community Council, said there are pros and cons to meeting the man, now 18, who can't be named because he was 17 when the crimes were committed. He pleaded guilty to spray-painting graffiti on a number of Jewish facilities, including a shul. The idea for him to meet privately with community leaders came from a probation officer and is endorsed by the Crown, judge and defence lawyer, who said his client is open to the idea. The case is adjourned to Dec. 9.

JNF To Fete Melnick

WINNIPEG — The Jewish National Fund of Canada's Manitoba and Saskatchewan branch has announced that Manitoba Water Stewardship Minister Christine Melnick will be its 2011 Negev Dinner Honoree. The word came as Melnick, a longtime supporter of Israel, was in Israel for the signing of an agreement between the province and the Jewish state on ecotourism, birding and the environment.

World

Charges Dropped

CHICAGO — A Chicago man who took his daughter to church despite a restraining order by her Jewish mother was cleared of contempt of court charges last week. Last winter Joseph Reyes took his daughter Ela, 3, to church, accompanied by a TV news crew, despite a restraining order filed by his estranged wife that barred him from exposing the girl to any religion but Judaism. He was cleared because the girl's couldn't be seen in the TV footage.

Rabbis Send Letter

SAN FRANCISCO — A group of North American rabbis launched an online drive to urge Israel to protect women who want to pray at the Western Wall with Torahs and prayer shawls. The 28 rabbis, calling themselves Rabbis for Women of the Wall, sent a letter last week, signed by the heads of the Reform, Conservative, Renewal and Reconstructionist rabbinical associations, to Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, Knesset Speaker Reuven Rivlin, opposition leader Tzipi Livini, Jewish Agency chair Natan Sharansky and Rabbi Shmuel Rabinowitz, rabbi of the Western Wall and holy sites. The rabbis want other rabbis to sign an online petition.

Canada Denies Dubai Arrest Claim

OTTAWA — Canadian officials have denied arresting a suspect in the assassination of a Hamas official in Dubai.

The denial, published Oct. 20 in the Globe and Mail, came a day after Dubai's police chief told several news outlets that a Canadian security official told him that an arrest had been made over the summer in last January's murder of senior Hamas leader Mahmoud al-Mabhouh in a Dubai hotel room.

Dubai police have pointed to the involvement of 33 conspirators, who allegedly used fake passports from England, Ireland, France, Australia and Germany in order to enter the United Arab Emirates. The suspects were placed on Interpol's Most Wanted list.

Israel's Mossad spy agency has been widely suspected as being behind the killing, but Israel has neither confirmed nor denied any involvement.

Mabhouh co-founded the military wing of the Islamist Hamas movement and allegedly was in Dubai to conclude a weapons deal when he was killed.

One arrest has been made in the case. Uri Brodsky, who reportedly has many aliases, was arrested at the Warsaw airport last June and extradited to Germany to face charges of illegally procuring a German passport. Brodsky returned to Israel after a German court released him on bail with a guarantee he'd return if he is sentenced to jail.

IZENBERG GOLDBERG Monuments
SAVINGS OF
$150 SINGLE $300 DOUBLE
Be an educated consumer, compare quality and price.
We do not pay any funeral home commissions for their recommendations.
Our prices are therefore lower.
We will not be undersold!
Serving generations of families in Toronto's Jewish community for over 90 years
We are a family owned and operated with informed, impartial Monument specialists in a no-pressure, non-commissioned sales environment
3173 BATHURST ST.
(4 blocks north of Lawrence)
416-787-0319
www.izenberggoldberg.com

Steeles Memorial Chapel
www.steelesmemorial.com
•Current Listing of Funerals
•Listing of Cemeteries and Maps of Sections
•Yahrzeit Calculator for Civil & Hebrew dates
•Kaddish Texts
•Educational Information about Shiva - Unveiling - After-Care - Prayers - Jewish Burial Rites
•Jewish Holiday Dates
905-881-6003
Serving the Jewish Community since 1927.

ISLAMISM ANTI-SEMITISM — AND THE — BETRAYAL OF REASON
JOIN THE AWARD WINNING BRITISH JOURNALIST MELANIE PHILLIPS AUTHOR OF LONDONISTAN IN A GROUND BREAKING CONVERSATION WITH DR. ELLIOTT MALAMET ABOUT ISRAEL, ISLAMISM AND THE STRUGGLE TO DEFEND WESTERN VALUES AND FREEDOMS. TO BE FOLLOWED BY A RECEPTION AND A SIGNING OF HER NEW BOOK THE WORLD TURNED UPSIDE DOWN.
WEDNESDAY NOVEMBER 10 AT 7:30PM · VILLAGE SHUL 1072 EGLINTON AVE. W.
THE EVENING IS BEING SPONSORED BY THE MALAMET FAMILY IN MEMORY OF COLIN MALAMET Z'L

The Canadian Jewish News
How To Reach Us
Head Office: 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4 Tel: 416-391-1836
Advertising Fax: 416-391-0949 Editorial Fax: 416-391-0829
Advertising E-mail: adscjn@gmail.com Editorial E-mail: cjninfo@gmail.com
Website: www.cjnews.com
Subscription Inquiries: Toll Free: 1-866-849-0864 Fax: 905-946-1679
E-mail: cjnews@indas.on.ca
IMP - Israel Advertising Representatives
POB 7195, Jerusalem, Israel Tel: 02-625-2933 Fax: 02-624-9240 E-mail:info@impmedia.co.il

The Canadian Jewish news
Vol. XL, No 42 (1,971)*
Gary Laforet
General Manager
Mordechai Ben-Dat
Editor
Vera Gillman
Advertising & Assistant General Manager
Carol Jamieson, Controller
Jeff Rosen, News & Internet Editor
Joseph Serge
Arts, Travel and Supplements Editor
Janice Arnold, Carolyn Blackman, Sheldon Kirshner, Frances Kraft, David Lazarus, Elias Levy, Andy Levy-Ajzenkopf, Paul Lungen, Sheri Shefa, Laura Stricker
Staff Reporters
B. Gladstone, Rabbi E. Goldstein, A. Gropper, M. Michaels, M. Mietkiewicz, A. Rosensweig, Rabbi C. Steinmetz, G. Troy, N. Shenhav, L. Speisman, R. Turkienicz, F. Zomparelli
Columnists
Cynthia Gasner, Joel Jacobson, Diane Koven, Lauren Kramer, Myron Love, Rhonda Spivak
Canadian Correspondents
Jenny Hazan, Israel Bureau
Carolan Halpern, Ruth Schweitzer, Daniel Wolgelerenter
Copy Editors
Ella Burakowski
Assistant Advertising Manager
Bev Bergman, Gloria Clamen, Lisa Freid, Sarah Laiken, Honey Mahl, Elie Malka, Sholom Wargon, Grace Zweig
Sales Representatives, Toronto
Doris Perez
Office Manager
Alma Delory, Lucy Semtchenko, Karen Syptak
Office Staff, Toronto
David Collin
Promotions Manager, Circulation
Brian Stoneman
Composing Room Manager
Leo Berlin, José De Freitas, Trevor Miller, Anahit Nahapetyan, Nick Radelja, Lila Sarick, Michael Stavsky
Production Staff
Donald Carr
George A. Cohon, Steven Cummings, Betty Elkaim, Julia Koschitzky, Albert J. Latner, Lionel H. Schipper, Shoel Silver, Robert Vineberg, Elizabeth Wolfe, Rose Wolfe, Rubin Zimmerman
Directors
Ray D. Wolfe
Founding President (1971-1990)
CIRCULATION
Total circulation: 35,160 copies.
Total paid circulation: 34,313 copies.
CCNA verified circulation July 28, 2010
SUBSCRIPTIONS
Canada: $37.80, 1 yr. incl. taxes
$68.00, 2 yr. incl. taxes
Online edition:
$20.95 1 yr. incl. taxes
U.S.A. / Foreign:
$135 Cdn. funds, 1 yr.
Postmaster: Please return 29Bs and changes of address to CJN, 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4.
Postage Paid at Toronto
Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894
*Under current ownership
We acknowledge the financial support of the Government of Canada, through the Publications Assistance Program, towards our mailing costs.
Canada

FRIENDS OF
SIMON WIESENTHAL CENTER
FOR HOLOCAUST STUDIES
416-864-9735
www.fswc.ca
DIRECT ACTION NOW

National

Greater Toronto Area

Planning For Retirement?
Confused about your financial future?
Let us help you understand how to reach your financial goals
Call Sonny Goldstein
Chartered Life Underwriter
Chartered Financial Consultant
416-221-0060
Sonny Goldstein, CFP
President
HIGHEST QUOTES ON RRIF s, ANNUITIES, etc.
Creative Ideas in Financial Planning

Haitian relief efforts to be honoured

Israeli medical staff helping spread joy at a field hospital in Haiti.

Israeli, Canadian teams recognized by Canadian Friends of Meir Medical Centre

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Israeli and Canadian relief efforts in the aftermath of last January's earthquake in Haiti are being heralded by a Toronto-based charity.

Canadian Friends of Meir Medical Center, which supports the innovative Israeli hospital associated with the Sackler Faculty of Medicine at Tel Aviv University, will host a Nov. 14 gala at Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue honouring the Israel Defence Forces' (IDF) Medical Rescue Team and Canada's Disaster Assistance Relief Team (DART) for their work to aid the people of Haiti.

The charity will award its annual Humanitarian Awards of Distinction to both teams, as well as symbolically to the people of Canada and Israel for their financial donations to relief efforts.

MP Peter Kent, minister of state for foreign affairs, will accept the award on behalf of Canada and DART, and Israel's ambassador to Canada, Miriam Ziv, will accept the award for the IDF and Israel.

Keynote speakers will be MP Laurie Hawn, parliamentary secretary to the minister of national defence, and UJA Federation of Greater Toronto president Ted Sokolsky.

Arie Raif, the charity's president and a former Israeli diplomat, told The CJN that he's proud of both countries' dedication to tikkun olam.

"How many other armies in the world would send their personnel to Haiti to save lives and rebuild?" he asked, adding that the Canadian people demonstrated "they care" about the sanctity of life.

Continued on page 24

IF OTHER BANKS ARE ABOUT CONVENIENCE,

WHY IS IT ALWAYS AN INCONVENIENCE TO SPEAK WITH THE BOSS?

MAKING IT HAPPEN

Our branch managers are available whenever you are.

Some would say that's going beyond the call of duty. Managers have a lot on their plates. We think it's professional courtesy. Our business revolves around you after all. So if you want to speak with a manager, stop by the branch. You don't need an appointment. Or call them on their direct line. Because there's no one they'd rather speak to. In fact, they make a point of calling you regularly. To check in. See how you're doing. And if this is how our busy managers respond to you, just imagine the treatment you'll get from everyone else at the branch.

Enter for a chance to win a $5,000 portfolio

Meet with one of our financial advisors* by December 20, 2010 for a chance to win a $5,000[1] Diversified Fund portfolio[2] suited to your investor profile.

New branch at 1590 Avenue Rd
(North of Lawrence Ave W)
416 781 7272

NATIONAL BANK
FINANCIAL GROUP

* Financial advisors provide their services on behalf of National Bank Securities Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of National Bank of Canada.

1. No purchase necessary. One grand prize to be won. The winner must correctly answer a mathematical skill-testing question. The contest is open to residents of Ontario who have reached the age of 18. In order to have a valid entry in the contest, you must complete one of the following during your visit at a branch within Ontario by December 20, 2010, at 11:59 p.m. (Eastern Time): Personalized Investment Plan, Question of Priorities, Debt Analysis Plan, Retirement Horizon, Retirement Index, Cash Flow, Required Savings for Retirement, Portfolio Pro Analysis, National Bank Direct Brokerage Portfolio Analysis. The contest runs from October 25 to December 20, 2010. The draw will be held on December 23, 2010, at 2:00 p.m. (ET). The full contest rules are available in the branch.

2. National Bank Securities Mutual Funds (the "Funds") and National Bank Strategic Portfolios (the "Strategic Portfolios") are offered by National Bank Securities Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of National Bank of Canada. Commissions, trailing commissions, management fees and expenses all may be associated with investments in the Funds and the use of the Strategic Portfolios. Please read the prospectus of the Funds included in the Strategic Portfolios before making an investment. The Funds' securities are not insured by the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation or by any other government deposit insurer. For money market funds, there can be no assurances that a fund will be able to maintain its net asset value per security at a constant amount so that the full amount of the investment in a fund will be returned. The Funds are not guaranteed, their values change frequently and past performance may not be repeated.

HARDWOOD, CARPET & LAMINATE SALE
RIVIERA FLOORING
25 yrs exp.
Warehouse & Showroom at
8111 JANE STREET, UNIT #6
CONCORD, ONTARIO L4K 4L7
"NEW FLOORING WILL BE NO PROBLEM"
JOE RIVIETZ 'The Flooring Broker'
WOOL SPECIALS
Wool Blend $3.99 installed
Hardwood from $3.99 sq. ft.
Engineered wood from $3.49
Laminate from $1.29
We lift and dispose of old carpets, furniture is moved and replaced, new flooring is professionally installed.
Monday - Saturday 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.
• Weekends by appointment
Call Joe Rivietz
By appointment only,
905-738-4588
STAINMASTER®
www.rivieraflooring.com

Benjamin's Park Memorial Chapel
Through the generations ...a sacred trust
JEWISH FUNERALS

"Know that true comfort and support is here for you, in times of sorrow."
Marc Benjamin
People often tell me our dedicated team helped them cope with their loss. Our funeral directors feel a deep responsibility to help you navigate religious requirements, family dynamics and the pain of grief. This is our vocation. We are honoured to serve.
2401 Steeles Ave., West, Toronto
416-663-9060
www.benjamins.ca
The Benjamin Group companies:
Benjamin's Park Memorial Chapel; Benjamin's Landmark Monuments; The Benjamin Foundation; The Benjamin Institute; Benjamin's Lifecycle Financial Services

Remembrance through learning

From the editor's desk...

If a Jewish child of Europe had been 15 years old at the end of World War II, in May of 1945, a young survivor indeed, he or she would be 80 years old today.

And if the child had been 15 at the start of the war, he or she would be 86 years old today.

Increasingly, alas, the victims – the witnesses – of the Nazis' atrocities, are passing from this world. But passing from this world does not, nor can it ever mean, passing from our lives or from the lives of the generations who will, in their own time, take their place after us in the long line of Jewish history.

Through us, the survivors and their testimonies will be remembered, even as our own forebears, in turn, remembered the men and women who carried the line forward to them.

The line must not break.

Memory guarantees it will not break.

If memory guarantees the unseverability of that line, then education – in its many, diverse, wide forms – guarantees the sustaining strength of memory.

That is why, for example, each year at this time, to coincide with Kristallnacht Nov. 10, 1938, communities throughout Canada undertake programs of Holocaust education.

We learn about the Jewish life in Europe that was destroyed; where possible, the individual human beings who comprised that very large life and, of course, how such destruction happened.

The photo inset is of the Great Synagogue of Poland that once stood on Tlomackie Street in Warsaw. The Nazis brought it to rubble by blowing it up after the Warsaw Ghetto uprising, on May 16, 1943. Not one brick or scraping of mortar remains today from the synagogue. Where it stood is a tall, multi-storey office building of glass and steel.

However, the building immediately adjacent (on the left side of the photo) remains as it was in 1939. Although they set fire to it, the Nazis considered it of such undeserving stature, they left it standing. It stands today on the very same spot. The floor still bears the seared and scorched residue of the fire that consumed so much of this building's interior.

The building houses and stands for the very essence of the prewar Jewish life in Europe that we promise, and try with all our heart, to remember. It is now called the Emanuel Ringelblum Jewish Historical Institute. Emanuel Ringelblum was a Jew of Poland who organized, oversaw, participated in and ultimately ensured the retrieval of the chronicling of Jewish life in the Warsaw Ghetto under German occupation.

On Jan. 1, 2009, the Polish minister of culture and national heritage, conferred official status on the building as an institution of Jewish culture of Poland named in honour of Ringelblum. The newly granted status of the institute into the broader Polish pantheon of cultural institutes was but a formality, for it has always been a place and an institute of Jewish history.

Earlier this month, during a visit to the building, The CJN was told by an institute employee that there are four reasons that make the building a very special place.

- The structure is the original pre-World War II one, built in 1936;
- It was "Jewish" before the war and was situated inside the ghetto during the earlier period of the war. It housed the Institute for Judaic Studies. Yet, so zealous were the Germans in their campaign against Jewish life, they closed the institute's library in October 1939, merely one month after they invaded Poland, and carried away all the material there.
- The plans for the violent resistance against the Germans were conceived and debated here. As well, the "passive" resistance of documenting everything was carried out here, too. Ringelblum's 60-person team of chroniclers and observers was based here. The project was called Oneg Shabbat. Of the 60, three survived the war.
- It was here that survivors gathered after the war to make their decisions about the years to come. Some left. Some remained. Those who remained would have to deal with Soviet fascism, which was as unfriendly to the Jewish soul as Nazi fascism was to the Jewish body.

On Sept. 19, 1946, the first part of the Ringelblum archive was unearthed in the rubble of the ghetto. One year later, in 1947, the building once again became a Jewish institute of study.

Today, it is a busy research and cultural centre. It is also the beating heart of the efforts of the small remnant of Polish Jews and some fellow Jews who have joined them from other parts of the world, to revive Jewish life in Poland.

We owe a great debt to the countless individuals, lay and professional, here and abroad and in Europe especially, who make Holocaust education programs possible.

Let us learn. For that is how we will always remember and play our part in holding and strengthening the line. –

MBD

SeeJN

ETHIOPIAN JEWISH SIGD FESTIVAL

Israeli President Shimon Peres recently greeted a delegation of Ethiopian Israelis in his official residence during a ceremony that commemorated the Ethiopian Jewish Sigd festival. The annual Sigd holiday symbolizes the acceptance of the Torah. Approximately 100,000 Ethiopian Jews live in Israel. Many of them arrived in massive rescue airlifts in 1984 and 1991.

[Flash90 photo]

SUMMIT VIEW

THORNHILL WOODS

RARE. VALUABLE.
AND BRIEFLY AVAILABLE TO
THOSE WHO ACT SWIFTLY.

Previewing this November in the heart of Thornhill Woods.

Crescent enclave of singles and semi-towns from the upper $400's

TO PREVIEW, CALL

416-746-1234

www.summitviewhomes.com

Respite, Convalescent and Short Term Care in Amica at Thornhill

If you or your loved one need some time to recover before going home from your hospital stay, then Amica at Thornhill is the ideal location for you.

SERVICES INCLUDE:

- 24 hour on-site Nursing Care
- Fully furnished private suite
- 3 meals daily
- Medication administration
- Daily cleaning of your suite
- Full laundry
- Assistance with bathing twice weekly
- Emergency Call Bell System (In Suite & Pendant)
- Extended Cable & Telephone
- Up to 90 minutes of personal care (grooming, dressing and ambulation)

Daily Rates starting at $89.00 per day.

Lunch & Learn: We are not "Falling" for it
Thursday, November 4th, 2010 - 11:30 am to 2:30 pm
Learn how to prevent "falls" and stay safe during the winter months. The afternoon will start with a tour and lunch. RSVP as space is limited.

Amica at Thornhill • A Wellness & Vitality™ Residence
546 Steeles Avenue West, Thornhill, ON L4J 1A2
905.886.3400 • www.amica.ca

10-1453

• Luxury Independent Rental Retirement Living
• All Inclusive • Full Service Fine Dining
• Wellness & Vitality™ Programs
• Amica VITALIS™ Assisted Living Suites & Services

Gaza blockade group raises $100,000

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

The project to raise funds for a boat aimed at breaking the Israeli blockade of Gaza has reached $100,000 – one-third of the way towards its goal of $300,000.

In a release, Sandra Ruch, a spokesperson for Canadian Boat to Gaza (CBG) said, "It is important to challenge the blockade and send a clear message of Canadians' commitment to human rights and the protection of civilians living under military blockade as mandated by the Fourth Geneva Convention."

Israel has maintained a blockade of the Hamas-controlled Gaza Strip in response to repeated rocket and mortar attacks. Last May, a flotilla attempted to run the blockade. When Israeli forces boarded the ship, they were attacked and in the ensuing melee, nine Islamists were killed.

Israel came under intense international criticism as a result of that incident.

Meanwhile, in Geneva, Switzerland, last week, national representatives of "boat to Gaza" projects from a half-dozen countries met to discuss sailing together to Gaza as Freedom Flotilla II (FF2). Plans are for that flotilla to sail in the spring of 2011, a release stated.

CBG is a Canadian initiative supported by more than 100 Canadian organizations, most of them Arab or Muslim, as well as religious organizations, trade unions and political parties.

Shimon Fogel, CEO of the Canada-Israel Committee, said outfitting a Canadian-owned ship to run the blockade was nothing more than "a PR stunt that has as its goal not the delivery of aid but isolating Israel in the international community."

Israeli authorities are permitting all manner of goods to enter Gaza, so much so that the smuggling tunnels into the Sinai "are going out of business," Fogel said.

"The blockade is there to prevent Gaza from becoming again a platform for the launching of missiles into Israel," he added.

Fogel contrasted the $300,000 that organizers are attempting to raise with the "desperate need in other parts of the world – Africa. It's impossible to believe that it's being driven by legitimate humanitarian relief."

Magazine's photo essay called anti-Semitic

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

A photo essay in a West Coast magazine that compared Gaza to the Warsaw Ghetto has Canadian Jewish Congress fuming.

"When we saw it, it was outrageous," said Congress CEO Bernie Farber. "This to us is anti-Semitism. It meets the test of anti-Semitism as defined by the European Union – comparing the Jewish state to Nazism."

The photo essay appeared in Vancouver-based Adbusters magazine. It features three Holocaust-era photos alongside three photos, ostensibly from Gaza. In one, slain resistance fighters from the ghetto are depicted alongside a photo of three black-clad Palestinians – there's a red beret with a gold decal next to one body – one of whom has blood coming from a headwound. In another, flames are burning down a Warsaw building while in the corresponding photo, firefighters are said to be putting out a blaze at a medical warehouse ignited by Israeli bombs.

In the third, young Jewish boys are shown trying to scale a wall around the ghetto to get food while the corresponding photo shows a man accompanying a sheep through a smuggling tunnel.The collage comes under the headline, "Truthbombs on Israeli TV."

Shimon Fogel

Farber said the photo essay "is absolutely a comparison of the depravity of the Warsaw Ghetto to Gaza. That can be viewed as nothing else but anti-Semitism… It is really a lie. There are no death camps in Gaza. It is an absurd and obscene comparison that inflicts pain in our community."

At its peak in October 1940, 400,000 Jews were crammed into the ghetto. Starvation and disease were rampant, as were random killings, leading to the deaths of 100,000 Jews – far more than the total death toll of Arabs and Israelis in all the region's conflicts since 1948.

Between July 23, 1942, and Sept. 21, 1942, some 250,000 to 300,000 ghetto prisoners were sent to the nearby death camp at Treblinka and murdered.

The first resistance took place in January 1943, and in April 1943, on the eve of Passover, a full revolt took place. It was suppressed after about a month of fighting, and according to the official Nazi report, at least 56,065 people were killed on the spot or deported to death camps.

Continued on page 36

Nothing warms your heart more than a beautiful moment in time, when family traditions are built alongside sandcastles, and barefoot luxury becomes an everyday reality. Welcome to Hyatt Siesta Key Beach, where owning a fractional beachfront residence means enjoying our world-class resort amenities and services, with the added benefit of access to other Hyatt Vacation Club properties across the country. This winter, lose the layers and experience the warmth of a luxurious getaway that can last a lifetime, and longer.

Call 866.982.4546 today to learn more about our special offer to experience Hyatt Siesta Key Beach. Deeded fractional ownership starting at $110,000.

HYATT
HYATT RESIDENCE CLUB
SARASOTA ™

Real. Luxury. Extraordinary Value.

www.HyattSiestaKeyBeach.com

HYATT VACATION CLUB PROPERTIES

Aspen, Carmel, Beaver Creek, Breckenridge, N Lake Tahoe, Sedona, San Antonio, Bonita Springs, Puerto Rico, Key West, Northstar at Tahoe, Siesta Key.

The Canadian Jewish news

An independent community newspaper serving as a forum for diverse viewpoints

Publisher and Proprietor
The Canadian Jewish News, a corporation without share capital
Head Office
1500 Don Mills Rd., Suite 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4

Trash offered as truth

Skilled in the ways of constantly bemoaning to a blindly receptive world their wounded status as blameless, perennial victims, Palestinian spokespeople astutely know how to sell prevarication as truth. Lies, falsehoods and deceptions are the staple products offered by Palestinian leaders in the marketing campaign against Israel that the Jewish state, alas, long ago lost.

Few people examine the product. Fewer still hold Palestinian leaders to account for offering trash as truth. An eye-popping example of this overwrought, false posturing occurred on the weekend. In an interview with the London-based newspaper Al-Hayat, PLO executive committee secretary Yasser Abed Rabbo threatened that the PA is considering abrogating the Oslo Accords.

"There are agreements between the PLO and Israel. One party cannot continue to be committed to these agreements forever while the other party violates them," Rabbo whined. "There may come a time, if the Israelis continue in the same policies, to reconsider these agreements," he added (our emphasis). Rabbo was complaining that Israel had not agreed to extend the construction freeze in the West Bank. He also abjectly rejected the Netanyahu government's request that Palestinians recognize Israel as a Jewish state. Can anyone of fairness, good faith and conscience seriously believe that the PA has not already effectively abrogated the Oslo agreements?

The following are the third and fourth clauses in a letter to then-Israeli prime minister Yitzhak Rabin signed by then-PLO chairman Yasser Arafat on Sept. 9, 1993 that accompanied the adoption of the Oslo principles. "The PLO commits itself to the Middle East peace process, and to a peaceful resolution of the conflict between the two sides and declares that all outstanding issues relating to permanent status will be resolved through negotiations.

"The PLO considers that the signing of the Declaration of Principles constitutes a historic event, inaugurating a new epoch of peaceful coexistence, free from violence and all other acts which endanger peace and stability. Accordingly, the PLO renounces the use of terrorism and other acts of violence and will assume responsibility over all PLO elements and personnel in order to assure their compliance, prevent violations and discipline violators" (our emphasis).

Not long after he signed the documents, the PLO leader was scheming his next terrorist subterfuge. His treachery has been documented. For example, Mahmoud al-Zahar, Hamas foreign policy adviser, recently told the world that Arafat gave "the green light" to Hamas launch terror strikes in 2000. Similarly, Palestinian Authority Communications Minister Imad Al-Faluji also recently stated that the terror against Israel was as a result of a "strategic decision" by Arafat. Arafat's signature on the Karin-A ship's manifest of heavy armaments and weaponry merely proved what most already knew: the PLO effectively abrogated the Oslo Accords soon after they were signed. Someone should tell Abed Rabbo. He, the PLO and the PA should sit down with Israel and do the courageous and hard thing. Negotiate.

25 years ago in The CJN

The Toronto Vaad Harabonim and B'nai Brith Canada told a parliamentary justice committee that Canadian divorce laws should be changed to prevent a Jewish spouse from withholding a get in order to extort a favourable financial settlement or custody of children in a civil divorce. They proposed changes that would prevent a court from granting a civil divorce until both spouses remove all barriers to each other's remarriage.

Editorials & Letters

Dry Bones
IN 1947 THE U.N. CALLED FOR DIVIDING PALESTINE
INTO A JEWISH STATE AND AN ARAB STATE
1947
BUT THE ARAB RESPONSE WAS
NO TO A JEWISH STATE!
IN 2010 NETANYAHU CALLED FOR PALESTINIAN
ACCEPTANCE OF THE TWO-STATE SOLUTION
2010
BUT. . .
NO TO A JEWISH STATE!

DryBonesBlog.com

Editorial Advisory Board: Guy Aboodi, Maurice Benzacar, Michael Brown, Donald Carr, Rabbi Michael Dolgin, Daniel Ferman, Igor Korenzvit, Keith Landy, Hindy Najman, Lou Ronson, Alan Sandler, Rabbi Philip Scheim, Mike Shriqui, Pamela Medjuck Stein, Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, Ehud Telem, Nelson Wiseman.

Sources of Orthodox feminists' innovations

I enjoyed and learned a lot from Rabbi Martin Lockshin's thoughtful article on halachic views on women reading Torah "Torah reading by women poses dilemma for modern Orthodoxy" (Oct. 14). In it, he notes that many Orthodox shuls now permit women to do things such as recite Mourner's Kaddish, call their coming of age a bat mitzvah and observe it in shul, serve as president of a shul, dance with the Torah or teach Torah to men, which were not permitted 100 years ago. He then credits the efforts of lay people working with their local Orthodox rabbis as the catalyst for this change. The origin of all of these practices, as well as baby namings for girls and Rosh Chodesh groups, starting almost 90 years ago with the first in-shul bat mitzvah, was in non-Orthodox synagogues. It was not merely their secular feminism that motivated lay people to press their rabbis to approve more ritual participation for women, but the power of seeing the roles permitted their non-Orthodox sisters. The great strides that Orthodox feminists (male and female) have made should allow them the strength to acknowledge the sources for their innovations.

Aurora Mendelsohn
Toronto

* * *

The Torah and homosexuality

In a recent letter to the editor, I was accused of judging who can be called an Orthodox Jew ("Not up to us to judge others," Sept. 29). Orthodox Judaism believes the Torah is the word of God, and I merely reiterated what the Torah says about homosexual behaviour. Don't blame the messenger. Furthermore, the letter writer implied that I violated the laws of the Torah by speaking ill of others. He is referring to my comments concerning gay rights advocate David Brody, who gave a lecture at Congregation Shaar Hashomayim in Montreal on the topic of "Being Orthodox and Gay." In my original letter, I argued that the two terms are mutually exclusive. I did not write badly of Brody's personal orientation, nor did I exclude him from our religion by questioning his Jewishness. I only took issue with Brody's attempt to have others think that one can be both Orthodox and gay. The suggestion that Orthodox Judaism gives its imprimatur to homosexual behaviour had to be rebutted. It is indeed correct to say that it is not up to us to judge our fellow human beings. Only God has that right. And He has spoken, loud and clear.

Rabbi Mordechai Bulua
Montreal

* * *

Primrose Club founders' aims clarified

Thank you for your coverage of the University of Toronto's Faculty Club, formerly called the Primrose Club, receiving a Heritage Toronto plaque in honour of its 50th anniversary ("U of T club gets Heritage Toronto plaque," Sept. 29). However, information given to the reporter needs clarification.

In 1920, Jewish men who loved to socialize and play cards wanted a place of their own. They had no desire to go elsewhere or apply anywhere else. They acquired land at 41 Willcocks St. and hired Benjamin Brown, one of the city's first successful Jewish architects, to design the building. In 1959, the building was handed to U of T for $1 by club members.

My late father, Edmond Creed, was a member of the Primrose Club.

Estelle A. Creed Kaufman
Flint, Mich.

* * *

Adele Wiseman's contributions

It was encouraging to read the article "A mainly forgotten writer" (Rosh Hashanah supplement, Sept. 8) by Merle Gould, because Adele Wiseman was certainly one of the greatest Canadian writers who deserves to be ever recognized and appreciated. One of Wiseman's important contributions to Canadian literature was sadly omitted from the article, namely her powerfully energetic, sensitive encouragement and support of both emerging and established writers and the stimulation of post-secondary students to an interest in contemporary Canadian literature. She accomplished this through her positions as director of the writing program at the Banff School of Fine Arts for many years and as writer-in-residence at many universities and colleges from coast to coast.

Shieky Brownstone
London, Ont.

* * *

Debate about Israel's boundaries

The writer of the letter "Negotiating territory away" (Sept. 29) should re-read the early history of Mandate Palestine. Britain received the mandate at the San Remo Conference in April 1920, but boundaries and terms were not approved by the League of Nations until July 1922 and came into effect September 1923. The text clearly set out two separate areas – Palestine and Transjordan. Further, the Balfour Declaration did not apply to Transjordan. This stipulation was also approved by the league. Finally, the map submitted to the 1919 Paris Peace Conference by the Zionist delegates excluded almost all of Transjordan.

Bernard Katz
Toronto

LET THEM GO...

Ron Arad, Zachary Baumel, Zvi Feldman, Guy Hever, Yehuda Katz

1587

The number of days Hamas has held Gilad Schalit captive

The Canadian Jewish News reserves the right to refuse advertising that in its opinion is misleading, in poor taste or incompatible with the advertising policies of the newspaper. Acceptance of advertising does not imply endorsement by The Canadian Jewish News. The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Letters are welcome if they are brief, in English or French, typewritten with lines double spaced, and of interest to our reading public. Readers are cautioned not to make sweeping claims against persons or institutions which they cannot verify, as libel laws are very stringent. We reserve the right to edit and condense letters, which must bear the sender's address, phone number and both handwritten and typed signatures. Letters sent by e-mail must also include the sender's municipal address.

cjninfo@gmail.com

Perspectives

Building meaningful connections at home and abroad

"Yisrael arevim zeh l'zeh" – being responsible for one another – is one of the principal values that guides communal work in Canada. It propels us to act on behalf of those who may not be able to act for themselves and to support strong collective Jewish communal organizations so that as many voices as possible can be heard.

Our sense of responsibility for one another begins at home and then extends more broadly, on many levels, to a larger social enterprise to help build rich Jewish identity and commitment to a sense of belonging to the Jewish People. Thus, we are simultaneously local and global.

In Canada, community building takes place on three levels: locally, nationally, and internationally, particularly in Israel.

In most large Canadian communities, there is a well-developed communal infrastructure that consists of synagogues from all denominations, Jewish day schools along the full ideological spectrum and secular social-service organizations that serve the vulnerable, the aged and the sick. The possibilities to affiliate and to become Jewishly literate are diverse. Yet we know even in large communities, some segments of the population feel isolated and marginalized due to the barriers to participating in communal life such as cost, access, status and motivation.

The challenges are even more daunting in a community with fewer than 1,000 Jews, where there is little or no formal Jewish infrastructure and services.

There are 40 regional communities in Canada with an approximate total of 22,000 Jews. There are also communities with a Jewish population of fewer than 5,000 people, totalling 13,500 Jews.

Many of the Jews in these small communities are committed to maintaining their Jewish identity and affiliation, but their respective community capacities are such that they can no longer do so alone. Most of these regional communities are not projected to increase in Jewish population, with a few notable exceptions such as Kingston and Kitchener-Waterloo.

Sadly, however, the ability of these communities to sustain an active and vibrant Jewish life, to educate their children Jewishly and to maintain a Jewish infrastructure that cares for the members of the community throughout the life cycle is increasingly limited. The ability of small communities to attract educational and religious leaders who will permanently provide Jewish education and preside over ritual prayer services is slight.

Because of this, we must develop new ways to create and sustain relationships with Jews and help deliver services to them in small communities.

Larger Canadian Jewish communities need to provide assistance to the smaller ones to ensure that there is an adequate Jewish "safety net" there. We need to make certain that there is a well-developed Jewish educational system that includes both formal and informal experiences, and we need to develop a strong and effective cadre of leaders for the future.

It is therefore time for us to create a forum to think of new possibilities and new models to make this happen. For example, perhaps there are opportunities to tap into the talents of local students and faculty as sources of new energy and expertise?

But this is only part of the equation.

We must try to make sure that Canadian Jews feel connected to and can participate in discussion surrounding political and social issues that are part of the larger national and international environment.

Failing to do so weakens us all.

This summer, for example, two different issues surfaced that called for a coordinated, collective response from Jewish communities in Canada. Both issues, one emanating from Ottawa, the other from Jerusalem, had far-reaching consequences for the Jewish communities of Canada.

By Linda Kislowicz

The first issue involved the government's decision to eliminate the long form of the census. As everyone knows, it has been the practice in Canada to survey the general population every 10 years in order to collect personal and family data that will be useful for both government departments and NGOs that are required to predict social and economic trends and the consequences of these trends. This data is vital to knowing the demographic profile of the population to enable the appropriate planning for future financial supports necessary to underpin welfare, health care, educational, pension, housing, employment and other needs.

The decision to eliminate the long census form was of major consequence to the Jewish communities of Canada since the data collected has always been the basis for specific community analysis and strategic planning.

In the case of the census, organizations from a variety of sectors expressed their concerns to the government. The data generated by the use of the new form will be inadequate for communal purposes. Moreover, meaningful comparison with previous census data will no longer be possible.

What started as a few voices soon swelled into a great many from various sectors, cultural communities and government departments that use census data for urban planning. While the federal government did not ultimately change its position regarding the legislation, the negative reaction from so many sources forced the government to take heed and to deliberately and precisely respond to the concerns voiced.

Speaking out with one voice against the proposed census change allowed the large diversity of our voices to be heard more vociferously without regard to community size and influence from Toronto and Montreal, as well as Moncton, Thunder Bay and Victoria.

It was equally important for the Jewish communities in Canada to join forces with other Canadians about a matter of wide national importance.

The second issue is the conversion bill that was tabled in the Israeli Knesset. While the original intention of the bill was positive in its goal of facilitating the conversion in Israel of immigrants from the former Soviet Union, a number of related issues arose from the language of the bill that had the potential to create a rift with the wider Jewish world.

As concerns regarding the potential impact of the bill on Diaspora Jewry were clarified, it became important to find a collective way to express the opinions of Canadian Jewish communities.

It was important for Jews of all denominations and parts of the country to understand the potential divisiveness of the bill and the harm that could result in the relationship between Jews in the Diaspora and Jews in Israel. Engaging in a dialogue with peers across the country was critical to developing a successful advocacy strategy on the issue vis-a-vis the Israeli government and its final intentions for the bill.

There are many reasons why these two examples are important.

It is vital to make common cause with other concerned Canadians on issues of national significance. We must always find ways to become involved in such issues to demonstrate our deep commitment to the larger society in which we live. The census issue was relevant to our needs much in the same way as it was to every other ethnic community and their respective institutions. Speaking out collectively strengthened us all.

Similarly, being part of a coalition of Diaspora Jewish communities that is concerned about the far-reaching Diaspora implications of legislation in Israel is an important expression of our commitment to the future of the entire Jewish people, in Israel and in Canada.

We believe it is important for all of our voices to be heard on issues of national and international concern, that it is imperative to sustain the quality of Jewish life in Canada where Jews live regardless of community size. We also believe that connecting these communities to the larger Jewish world is a collective responsibility.

We must therefore reaffirm our commitment to national collective responsibility in Jewish Canada.

Linda Kislowicz is CEO of United Israel Appeal Federations Canada (UIAFC). UIAFC represents 10 Canadian federations and four regional councils, each of which raises and distributes funds annually for social welfare, social services and educational needs in Canada, Israel and overseas. For more information about UIAFC, visit www.jewishcanada.org.

The United Israel Appeal Federations Canada's Aviva Barth High School Outreach program is for post-bar/bat mitzvah teens from small Ontario Jewish communities. Through the program, recent participants, above, learned about Israel and Jewish history, culture and identity.

Opinions

What are the odds?

"What are the odds?" should be the Jewish motto. Amid the highs and lows of Jewish history, Jews have become aficionados of "mazel," acutely aware of life's possibilities and vulnerabilities. We cherish good luck, and wish others "mazel tov." And we certainly know what bad luck looks like. I don't need to recite the annals of Jewish suffering, from Nebuchanezar to Nasrallah, to remind you of Jewish bad luck.

Rabbi Chaim Steinmetz in Montreal

Today we live in an era of good and bad luck. Undoubtedly, the American dream has been a Jewish dream too. An exchange during the confirmation hearings for Elena Kagan underlines just how mainstream Jews are. Senator Lindsey Graham was questioning Kagan about the Christmas Day bomber, and started by asking "Where were you on Christmas Day?" After a short aside, Kagan answered with a laugh, "You know, like all Jews, I was probably in a Chinese restaurant." The Senate filled with laughter. Jews are very much at home in North America.

But as I pointed out in my last column, with this success comes rampant assimilation. In the United States, there are fewer Jews today than there were in 1960. What are the odds that the best time in Jewish history would also be the worst time in Jewish history?

However, it's a mistake to give up on the Jewish future. The Jews are what Simon Rawidowicz called "an ever-dying people." Every time we're down, we beat the odds.

And we beat the odds because it takes only one committed person to ensure the Jewish future.

Rabbi Akiva had 24,000 students who perished. Yet Rabbi Akiva soldiered on, and with five students rebuilt the Jewish tradition.

I've always wondered what it must have been like for Rabbi Akiva. Here was a man used to lecturing in packed auditoriums who was reduced to teaching in a broom closet. How do you not lose your faith in the future?

But Rabbi Akiva persevered because he understood that if statistics mattered, the Jews would have disappeared a long time ago. For the Jewish mission to continue, all you need is one devoted teacher, or one devoted matriarch such as Yitta Schwartz.

Yitta, a survivor, lost two children during the Holocaust. When she died last year at 93, she left behind 2,000 living descendants. What are the odds of that happening?

But that's precisely the point. The Jews should have disappeared long ago, and we face major challenges in our future. But we're here now because Jewish survival is not about statistics, it's about committed people.

And if you asked Rabbi Akiva and Yitta Shwartz, the odds for Jewish survival are very good indeed.

Were we punished for supporting Israel?

Canada's failure to win a seat on the UN Security Council has triggered a predictable debate – with a surprising twist. Predictably, most have seen the move as a rejection of Prime Minister Stephen Harper's muscular, pro-western, pro-Israel, anti-terrorism foreign policy.

But the columnist David Frum has injected a fascinating perspective. After actually doing some research, Frum suggested that the vote had more to do with European power dynamics, western rivalries, and the peculiarities of the UN regional voting bloc system. Outsiders will have a hard time figuring out who is correct. Hopefully, historians in the future will be able to sort it out. Still, the debate about the failure illustrates some enduring anomalies regarding how we discuss foreign policy, Israel and the United Nations itself.

Gil Troy in Montreal

For starters, the central assumption guiding the partisans in the debate is depressing. The most passionate talk has focused on whether Canada was being punished for supporting Israel. We are at a dangerous moment here. We are starting to take Israel's toxicity for granted. Why should support for Israel bear such a price? Israel's enemies have been so successful in maligning Israel and elevating Israel into such a powerful symbol that where a country stands on Israel risks defining its entire foreign policy.

As we approach the 35th anniversary of the General Assembly's despicable "Zionism is racism" resolution, Israel's adversaries are poised to enjoy a double victory. The anti-Israel package they sell involves both demonizing Israeli actions and exaggerating Israel's centrality in the Middle East, and world politics. The Palestinians' ultimate conceit traditionally has been to make everything about Israel be about them, pushing a perspective suggesting that no conversation about the Jewish state should be about anything but the Palestinian issue. Now, the Palestinian conceit – fed by the UN – is even more grandiose, suggesting that the Palestinians' problems are not just the most significant in the world today but the key to world peace. It is extraordinary how many foolish diplomats, politicians, academics, students and activists.

Amid all the hysteria, Frum's alternative perspective noting that Canada was boxed out because the European bloc secured seats for Germany and Portugal was doubly welcome. First, both pro-Israel and anti-Israel partisans need to remember that not everything is about the Palestinians and the Jews. At the end of the day, the Arab-Israeli conflict is a minor regional conflict. Even if some peace agreement could be signed, Iran would still be trying to go nuclear, North Korea would remain a bad citizen of the world, Islamist terrorists would still target westerners – and their own people – the economy would waver, the environment would be at risk, etc. Pro-Israel forces also have to be careful not to see everything through the Palestinian-Israel prism. We should remember that it is not helpful to jump at every attack on Israel.

Frum's perspective also reminds us how complex, political, and bureaucratic the UN has become. The high hopes of the 1940s continue to mislead most of us when we talk about the UN. Even after decades of watching it degenerate into the Third World dictators' debating society, we still want to see it as the biggest do-good organization in world history. Even when the UN is not being corrupt, or not being obsessive about Israel, politics rules. Regional rivalries are only one of the many distracting side shows that stop the UN from fulfilling its main mission to advance the causes of peace and justice throughout the world.

Getting a seat on the Security Council is not an award for doing good – or much of anything else. It is one of many privileges and responsibilities constantly doled out, periodically in play, in the world organization. Of course, it was delusional to expect that the UN would be politics-free. But rather than having Canada's loss trigger yet another round of pro-Israel versus pro-Palestinian fireworks, perhaps it is time for all of us to start learning about how the UN functions, what is does right, where it goes wrong, and how it can improve.

Driving Jewish values

I was driving to work the Monday after Yom Kippur. It was a beautiful day, and I was feeling good: our sukkah was built, and on Canadian Thanksgiving, all three of my kids were coming home, so I was planning the vegetarian "tofurkey." (In our family, on Thanksgiving, even the turkeys have something to be thankful for.)

I felt the beauty of autumn approaching, and I was contemplating how the High Holidays have stirred in me a real desire for change, renewal, compassion and atonement. I was thinking about how to be better this coming year, how to be kinder in the coming year – in short, how to manifest all the themes of the holy days in my daily life.

Rabbi Elyse Goldstein in Toronto

Darn! A driver cut me off getting onto Allen Road in Toronto. The nerve, edging up alongside the crawling line on Eglinton Avenue and manipulating his way in! Just because his car is bigger than mine, what makes him think he can do that? I moved forward to lean on the horn, annoyed and impatient. But wait a minute! Wasn't I just trying to manifest Jewish values in my daily life?

Driving may seem like a small thing; after all, it's just how we get from point A to point B. But the way we drive says so much about the way we live – fast, anonymous, self-absorbed and utilitarian. Few people smile while they're driving. Many of us consciously move up bit by bit so that the car trying to get in, to make a left or to enter a driveway can't do it until we pass, until we cross that coveted green light. "Oh no you don't," we seem to say. "Don't even think of getting your car into my lane."

In Tom Vanderbilt's New York Times bestselling book, Traffic: Why We Drive the Way We Do (and What It Says About Us), he quotes a bumper sticker he once saw – "Horn Broken: Watch For Finger." How many people who would normally never curse in front of their kids have no problem "giving the finger" out the window while their kids play in the back car seat?

Vanderbilt writes, "We are how we move. Something deeper and more transformative happens when we move from people who walk to people who drive… Frustrated by our inability to communicate, we gesture violently or we honk."

Have you ever talked to the driver in front of you? "Hey darling, move. The light's green. Helllooo? Can't you see? Can we move pleeezzzz?" There's an asymmetry in being seen but not being heard. We spend much of our time looking at the backs of people's heads or the rears of their cars. It's not easy to humanize the experience. Why not cut that driver off? You likely don't know them and won't ever see them again. Freed from our normal identity, we're rendered mute, autonomous beings in control of a machine. In our climate-controlled bubble, we can say what we like or do what we like with few social consequences.

But on that Monday, I made a conscious decision. I'm going to drive my Jewish values. I'm going to let in every driver who tries to get in before me. I'm going to let every pedestrian cross before trying to make that turn. I'm going to let cyclists turn right before I do. I'm not ever going to honk unless it's an emergency. I'm going to wave cars in, give the "thank you" sign to those who let me in, and not get angry at those who don't. I'm going to smile while I drive.

It may not change a single other driver, but it will change me. It already has. I like driving now. And my High Holiday resolutions are closer to reality, even if only for 15 minutes going west on Eglinton.

The Kirshner File

Iran consolidates its influence in Lebanon

On a state visit to Lebanon in mid-October, Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad was greeted effusively as a hero by local Shiites and accorded five-star treatment by Lebanese politicians ranging from Prime Minister Saad Hariri to Hezbollah's secretary general, Hassan Nasrallah, who emerged from his bunker to meet him at Iran's embassy.

Sheldon Kirshner in Toronto

Visiting Israel's northerly neighbour for the first time since his election five years ago, Ahmadinejad, representing the supreme Shiite power in the Middle East, was in Lebanon to consolidate Iran's growing influence there.

Contrary to media speculation, he neither ventured right up to the Israeli border nor, as the Palestinian American activist Edward Said in the wake of Israel's unilateral withdrawal from Lebanon in May 2000, contemptuously threw stones into Israel.

Starting his tour in Beirut, he went as far south as Bint Jbail, a town only four kilometres from the frontier. It was an apt choice. Bint Jbail was the scene of fierce fighting during the 2006 Second Lebanon War, which pitted Hezbollah, Iran's client, against the Israeli army. After the three-week war, the rebuilding of Bint Jbail, a Hezbollah stronghold, was partially financed by Iran.

Ahmadinejad wasted little time in provocatively attacking his nemesis and arch enemy, Israel.

Praising Bint Jbail as a bastion of resistance to Israel, he ritualistically called for "the Zionists to be wiped out" and predicted that Israel would "eventually disappear."

From afar, Israel watched the spectacle with equanimity, though Arieh Eldad, a right-wing parliamentarian known for his extremist views, urged Israel to assassinate the fiery Iranian leader.

In response to his verbal barrages, Israelis released blue and white balloons at the Lebanese border, and in a subtle but telling rejoinder, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu delivered a speech in a Tel Aviv building in which David Ben-Gurion declared statehood in 1948, saying that Israel "will continue to build our country and... defend it."

The timing of Ahmadinejad's trip was politically inspired.

Later this year, the International Court of Justice, based in The Hague, is due to release a long-awaited and potentially damaging report concerning the assassination of the former Lebanese prime minister, Rafiq Hariri, in 2005.

The tribunal's prosecutor, Daniel Bellemare, a Canadian, may yet indict Iran's regional allies, Syria and Hezbollah, both of which were probably involved in Hariri's death.

Hariri, a pro-western politician who played a major role in rebuilding Beirut after the interminable civil war, opposed Syria's high-handed domination of Lebanon. Hezbollah, the single most powerful military and political force in Lebanon, is aligned with Syria and does its bidding.

Claiming that Bellemare's investigation imperils Lebanon's fragile stability, Syrian President Bashar Assad has called for an end to his probe. Syria's foreign minister, Walid Moallem, has disparaged it.

Hezbollah, meanwhile, has blamed Israel for the massive car bombing that killed Hariri and declared it will not accept an indictment of any of its members.

Apart from providing moral support for Syria and Hezbollah, Ahmadinejad went to Lebanon to achieve two overlapping objectives: bolstering Iran's already considerable influence in Lebanon and currying favour with the Shiites, who comprise approximately one-third of its overall population and who, until quite recently, were an economically disadvantaged, if not an oppressed, minority.

Two months before Ahmadinejad's visit, King Abdullah of Saudi Arabia, a Sunni Muslim, turned up in Lebanon, which has long been a cockpit of regional rivalries. He was accompanied by none other than Bashar Assad. Analysts regarded the king's visit as a move to counter Iranian influence in Lebanon and an implicit endorsement of Syria's traditional role there.

In the aftermath of Hariri's death, Syria, branded as the instigator of Hariri's assassination, was forced to withdraw its military garrison from Lebanon. Syrian troops were dispatched to Lebanon under an Arab League mandate shortly after the eruption of the 1975 civil war. The vacuum was filled by Iran, which has been Syria's foremost ally since the Iran-Iraq War of the 1980s.

But in the past two years, the Syrians have gradually rebuilt their position in Lebanon, which was once part of greater Syria.

Syria's dominance is such that Saad Hariri, Rafiq's son, has been forced to bury his resentment of Syrian machinations since becoming prime minister at the head of the anti-Syrian March 14 movement in 2009.

Hariri, in the past year, has gone to Damascus several times, in an unmistakable sign of Lebanon's subservience to Syria.

Ironically, Hariri needs Syria to fend off the challenges of the March 8 alliance, a coalition of 12 pro-Syrian parties spearheaded by Hezbollah, Amal (Hezbollah's Shiite rival) and the Syrian Social Nationalist party.

Lebanese Prime Minister Saad Hariri

Given Lebanon's dependence on Damascus, Syria has begun to reassert its singular role as the kingmaker of Lebanese politics.

In addition to his acceptance of Syria's renewed role in Lebanon, Hariri has had to come to terms with the presence of Hezbollah ministers in the Lebanese cabinet.

Hezbollah, which emerged following Israel's 1982 invasion of Lebanon, has morphed into a formidable force since the second war in Lebanon, and has not hesitated to assert its power.

In the spring of 2008, Hezbollah seized control of much of western Beirut, in the city's worst bout of violence since the bad old days of the civil war.

The fighting was touched off after Hezbollah rejected demands by the Lebanese government to disarm, as mandated by United Nations resolutions 1559 and 1701, and to shut down its illegal telecommunications network.

With these demands impinging on its independence, Hezbollah revolted. As a result of the unrest, Hezbollah's right to carry arms as an armed militia was enshrined, as was its right to operate an independent communications network. Last but not least, Hezbollah gained veto power in the Lebanese cabinet.

Hezbollah's rise to primacy in Lebanese politics has occurred as Iran has correspondingly deepened its influence in Lebanon.

Hezbollah, which models itself after Iran's Revolutionary Guards, receives weapons and training, as well as financial and diplomatic backing, from Iran.

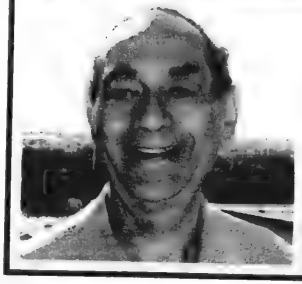
Like Iran, Hezbollah – which is linked to the 1983 bombings of the American Embassy and U.S. marine barracks in Beirut – is committed to Israel's destruction.

Hezbollah's armed wing was instrumental in Israel's decision to withdraw from southern Lebanon unilaterally. Its social services arm runs mosques, schools, hospitals and clinics. Hezbollah has thereby ingratiated itself with the Shiites, who are concentrated in southern Beirut, southern Lebanon and the eastern Bekaa Valley.

With Hezbollah's and Syria's consent, if not encouragement, Iran has heightened its profile in Lebanon through bilateral agreements with the Lebanese government. But due to Lebanon's time-honoured confessional political system, the 1943 National Pact, which guarantees representation for all its religious and ethnic groups, the Lebanese government has refrained from officially joining the regional axis led by Iran and Syria. Nonetheless, judging by Ahmadinejad's triumphant trip to Lebanon, Iran continues to build and reinforce its base in Lebanon.

For Israel, this ominous development will be a continual source of concern.

Every nigh[illegible]ray for Romspen's continued success.



After 31 years working at the TTC I retired in 1988 on pension and investment income.

My brother Stanley got me into Romspen 10 years ago. Today my Romspen investment has tripled in size. Combined with my TTC pension, I earn much more today than when I was working. Truth is, I would not be able to enjoy my independent lifestyle otherwise. Every night I say a prayer for the boys at Romspen to continue to be healthy and successful. My life would not be the same without them.

Marvin Feder

Introductory Seminar Wednesday, November 10 @ 6:00 p.m.
Refreshments and hors d'oeuvres @ 5:30. RSVP as seating is limited.

ROMSPEN
mortgage investment fund

162 Cumberland Street, Suite 300
Toronto, Ontario M5R 3N5

416.966.1100
1.800.494.0389

www.romspen.com

Modern Orthodox rabbis meet in Toronto

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, standing, left, hosted rabbinic colleagues for a conference in Toronto this month.

Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, of Toronto's Shaarei Shomayim Congregation, hosted about two dozen of his modern Orthodox rabbinic colleagues for a two-day conference earlier this month.

West Coast Rav, originally a group of young rabbis on the west coast of the United States and Canada, started about nine years ago and has expanded throughout North America, Rabbi Strauchler told The CJN. The group meets once a year to talk shop and meet with mentors.

A former age limit was lifted, and now the conference is geared to "rabbis who still see themselves as developing... There's no limit on that."

Along with Rabbi Strauchler, participants from Canada included Rabbi Andrew Rosenblatt of Vancouver and rabbis Joe Kanofsky and Rafi Lipner of Toronto.

Among other issues, the rabbis discussed connecting with their congregants and the wider community through Twitter and Facebook. Rabbi Strauchler hasn't used either with his congregation, but for the past two years he's been e-mailing weekly personal reflections and divrei Torah through an e-mail service that maintains a list of contacts.

"It's a means of touching more people... and it's a vehicle for teaching as well," he said. There are 700 addresses on his list.

As well, the rabbis discussed how to protect their personal prayer and study time, Rabbi Strauchler said. He noted that, when teaching Jewish text, there's a greater push toward having students more engaged in the learning.

The role of women in Orthodoxy wasn't an official agenda item, but is "something we're thinking a lot about as rabbis now," he said.

"The ability to come together and share experiences strengthened us all," said Rabbi Strauchler.

He said it's "a useful model" for the Jewish community to see rabbis – of all denominations – as people. "I don't think that's intuitive for our community."

Seeing rabbis as real people is better because "the truth is always better," Rabbi Strauchler said. "Rabbis are going to make mistakes, be human. If you expect them to be something other than human, it can cause problems of faith. [This way,] rabbis are able to connect better and do their job better."

DINNER CO-CHAIRS
LAWRENCE S. BLOOMBERG
MICHAEL D. HARRIS

HONOURARY CHAIRS
ELIZABETH COMPER
SYDNEY COOPER
LESLIE L. DAN, O.M.
HOWARD DAVIDSON
SAUL FELDBERG, LL.D. (HON.)
LORNE WEISS

GENERAL CANVASS CO-CHAIRS
ANTHONY HOFFER
IRA KUCHINSKY
BEN SPRINGER

ADVERTISING COMMITTEE
TONY GENCO
BILL LAMPERT

JNF FUTURE
JESSICA FENTON
JIAN MAGEN

ARRANGEMENTS
PATRICIA FRIEDLAND

JNF TORONTO PRESIDENT
NATHAN DISENHOUSE

CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD
JERRY WERGER

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
JOSH COOPER

MASTER OF CEREMONIES
BELINDA STRONACH

ISRAEL 60 JNF

JEWISH NATIONAL FUND OF TORONTO
2010 NEGEV TRIBUTE DINNER
IN HONOUR OF
FRANK STRONACH

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 2010 | THE FAIRMONT ROYAL YORK HOTEL TORONTO
FOR INFORMATION, RESERVATIONS & ADVERTISING OPPORTUNITIES:
TEL:416.638.7200 FAX:416.638.7345 TOR@JNF.CA WWW.JNFTORONTO.CA

SPECIAL PERFORMANCE: JEFF MADDEN, "FRANKIE VALLI" OF THE TORONTO JERSEY BOYS

Canadian Friends of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem invites you to an evening with Jerry and Jackie.

AN EVENING OF

MOVERS AND SHAPERS

November 15, 2010 Toronto Centre for the Arts
Festivities begin at 7:30 p.m.

- A Tribute to The Honourable Jerry Grafstein
- Launching The Honourable Jerry and Carole Grafstein Network for Cancer Research at the Institute for Medical Research Israel-Canada and The Honourable Jerry and Carole Grafstein Distinguished Visiting Professor Program in Jewish Studies at the University of Toronto
- Special musical guests: Bowfire – A Total String Experience
- Master of Ceremonies: Steve Paikin, anchor and senior editor of The Agenda with Steve Paikin

With Comedy Legend Jackie Mason, as you've never seen him before...

Call (416) 485-8000, ext. 123 or email Grafsteinevent@cfhu.org

www.cfhu.org/grafstein

RENTAL RETIREMENT LIVING AT YONGE & EGLINTON

You make me feel So Young!

CHEERS TO THE DUNFIELD

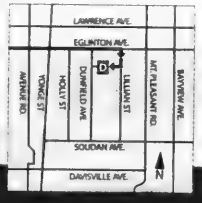
Remember, your favourite meeting spot. That place, where you were always assured of meeting old friends. The place where Johnny, the bartender, knew your order, before you even asked. Experience those great moments again at The Dunfield, a resort-inspired, retirement residence designed to make you feel young again. Cheers!

ALL INCLUSIVE FROM $3,500/MTH

The Dunfield RETIREMENT RESIDENCE

Limited SNOWBIRD SUITES Now Available

BOOK NOW AND SAVE THOUSANDS!*



Model Suite Now Open!
77 Dunfield Ave., Toronto
Call today for more information or personal tour.
416-481-8524

*See sales representatives for details
Prices and specifications subject to change without notice. E. & O. E. 2010.

WWW.THEDUNFIELD.COM

Greater Toronto Area

Peter Van Loan spoke at Yad Vashem during his visit to Israel earlier this month. [Sasson Tiran photo]

Van Loan impressed by first trip to Israel

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Although Minister of International Trade Peter Van Loan only made his first trip to Israel earlier this month, he already knew a lot about the country.

Growing up in Toronto's York Mills area to an Estonian family that fled persecution in Europe, Van Loan said he felt a kinship with his Jewish peers and had been "immersed" in the politics and history of Israel.

"It was very much what I expected. But the one surprise was I'd had so many people drill into my head how small Israel was that I was surprised at how big it [felt]," he said.

While in Israel, he paid a visit to Yad Vashem, which he said was "very well done and moving. I wish I had more time to be there."

He added: "Much of my family died at the hands of the Soviets. I grew up with friends and classmates who were a product of the parallel experience being Jewish and Holocaust victims from World War II. So I was very much sensitive and aware of what [dictatorial] ideologies like that can do to humanity and the need to be vigilant about it."

Van Loan said he has been taken aback by how it seems the Holocaust and World War II are now "drifting into the past and do not represent more immediate history for the newer generations… [and] perspectives that are anti-Israel, anti-Jewish are achieving an acceptance that would never have been tolerated when I was growing up. That underlines the importance of something like Yad Vashem."

As reported in The CJN last week, Van Loan and his Israeli counterpart, Benjamin Ben-Eliezer, minister of industry, trade and labour, have agreed to conduct "exploratory" talks on how best to expand and modernize the existing Canada-Israel Free Trade Agreement (CIFTA), which came into force in 1997.

Those talks are ongoing.

"We're negotiating other free trade agreement expansions with the EU, Colombia… and there is a gap in [CIFTA] in terms of the breadth and scope of what is covered" between Israel and Canada versus other agreements, he said.

Greater Toronto Area

Novopharm founder to be honoured

By RON CSILLAG
Special to The CJN

Leslie Dan is still not crazy about public kudos, even though the honours keep coming.

The humble Hungarian-born philanthropist and business mogul is a member of both the Order of Canada and the Order of Ontario. In 2006, the University of Toronto completed the Leslie L. Dan Pharmacy Building. He's received honorary doctorates from Dalhousie University, the University of British Columbia and the University of Toronto.

The most recent accolade came on Oct. 15, when Dan received another honorary doctorate, this one from York University.

In Jerusalem, the new $20 million Aish HaTorah World Center, which takes up some 40 per cent of the land adjacent the Western Wall and Temple Mount, bears the name, "The Dan Family of Canada Building."

His name also adorns the sign outside Leo Baeck Day School in Thornhill.

The latest garland comes from the Canadian Centre for Diversity (formerly the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews), which will present Dan and his wife, Anna, with its 2010 Human Relations Award at its 63rd annual gala Nov. 3 at the Metro Toronto Convention Centre.

Co-honorees will be Earle O'Born, president and CEO of the Printing House Ltd., and his wife Janice, who heads the company's charitable arm.

"I prefer not to be honoured," the taciturn Dan told The CJN. "But they were insistent."

Anna and Leslie Dan

Apart from the millions he gives to Jewish causes and to programs that ship medicine overseas, Dan is best known as a leader in the pharmaceutical industry. As the founder of Novopharm (now Teva Canada), he built one of the country's largest manufacturers of generic drugs.

By the time he sold Novopharm in 2000 to Israel-based Teva Pharmaceuticals, annual sales were $750 million and it employed 3,000 people in Canada, the United States and Hungary. Among potential buyers, Dan settled on Teva because it was "a very competent, stable organization. It was a good strategic fit for both partners."

Dan also founded the Canadian Medicine Aid Programme (CAN-MAP) in 1985, which to date has shipped some $50 million worth of life-saving medicines and other aid to the Third World.

Dan now owns and operates a biotech company called Viventia, which owes its origins to research conducted by his son, Dr. Michael Dan, a neurosurgeon who also has a PhD in science. The company's focus is solely on developing better medicines for cancer, particularly in the bladder, head and neck. To date, some $220 million has been invested in the company's quest.

Dan was married to his first wife, Judith, for 37 years. They had three children, Michael Dan; Aubrey Dan, a businessman and arts impresario; and Andrea Dan-Hytman. In 1996, he married Anna Mirkina, a patron of the arts whose involvement extends to the Toronto Symphony and the Canadian Opera Company.

Dan operates on clearly defined principles both in business and his approach to charitable giving.

In business, "be absolutely honest and upright in all dealings. This is important, because if you look at the dealings happening in the States, it's a little bit discouraging."

Regarding philanthropy, "there are a lot of people who are fortunate to do well in this economy and they should share it. I'm not any smarter than anybody else. I'm just perhaps lucky that I'm in pharmaceuticals and not something else. The important thing is that we should remember those who are not as fortunate as we are."

As for supporting causes across the Jewish religious spectrum, "I don't believe we should in any way discriminate. We all have to stick together."

ROLEX • PATEK • CARTIER
DIAMONDS
BUY • SELL • TRADE
VAN RIJK • INSTANT CASH
440-1233 vanrijk.com

SWISS ASSET PROTECTION
For Secure Banking and Investment
www.ashstreetmanagement.com
Ken H. Finkelstein, Attorney
250-507-6175

PROVINCIAL TABLE PADS
Manufacturers of Custom Built Table Pads
•Free in-home service
•Made in Canada
•Choose from 3 qualities
•Best service -price -quality
LOWEST PRICES GUARANTEED
Toronto.....416-283-2508
Hamilton.....905-383-1343
Ottawa.....613-247-3334
Canada Wide.....1-800-668-7439
www.ptpads.com

Attention Accredited & Other Qualified Investors.
Over the last 16 quarters the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange (TASE) has significantly outperformed the Toronto Stock Exchange (TSX). 30% better.
TEL AVIV: +27% VS TORONTO: -3%
Doesn't it make sense to invest at least 10% of your portfolio in Israel?
BOND STREET PROUDLY INTRODUCES THE
Holy Land Investment Fund
... a uniquely Canadian opportunity to invest in the world's most dynamic economy.
Here's why you should consider the Holy Land Investment Fund (HLIF):
• The HLIF is a conservatively weighted, balanced fund of Israeli equities, bond and fixed income funds, which provides a lower risk way to invest in Israel.
• The HLIF includes the HA Opportunities Fund, the #1 performing fund in Israel in 2009 (244% return), higher than any fund in Canada*
• RRSP and RRIF eligible.
• Low minimum investment.
• Consider investing 10% of your investment funds in Israel.
At last... the chance to put your money where your heart is.
EXCLUSIVE WEEKLY INVESTMENT SEMINARS
Call 416-783-0505 to book your seat at our for accredited-investors-only presentations. Learn how you can participate in HLIF's excellent investment opportunity.
Register Now.
Don't Be Disappointed.
Zale Newman, President
zale@bondstreetmercantile.com
BOND STREET MERCANTILE
www.BondStreetMercantile.com

New head says kolels 'shape' communities

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Rabbi Mordechai Lebhar, the new rosh kolel of Kollel Yismach Moshe – The Sephardic Outreach Centre, says he wants to provide as many learning opportunities as possible for people at all levels of religious observance.

The 35-year-old Montreal native moved to Toronto from Los Angeles to replace former Rosh Kollel Rabbi Eliyahu Attias at the beginning of September. Rabbi Attias retired and made aliyah.

Rabbi Lebhar, who received smichah from the chief rabbi of Jerusalem 15 years ago, served most recently as rosh kolel at the Los Angeles Intercommunity Kollel in Westwood, Calif.

"There is a movement like a silent revolution of kolelim sprouting all across North America," he said, citing examples in cities as diverse as Las Vegas, Seattle, Phoenix, and Calgary.

Kolels – Torah learning centres, often for married Orthodox men – "shape a lot of Jewish communities," the rabbi said. "The kolel is a place where young Torah scholars are able to build themselves more, like on a post-graduate level. They spend most of their day learning and researching and developing themselves more, until they move on to positions in the community."

His priority, he said, is ensuring kolel classes are stimulating and challenging so that students at all levels can make Torah part of their lives.

"Any change – even one that looks like a micro-change – that makes a person smile at his neighbour, say a kinder word, be honest in business, or make an extra tfillah, is a gain for the Jewish community and the world at large."

Among the classes offered at Yismach Moshe – a 10-year-old institution located on Bainbridge Avenue near Bathurst Street and Sheppard Avenue – are philosophy, halachah, Gemara and ethics. Separate classes are offered for men and women, taught by an all-male faculty of six full-time and four part-time staff.

Rabbi Mordechai Lebhar

Although Yismach Moshe welcomes everyone, it's geared to the Sephardi community, said Rabbi Lebhar.

Rabbi Yaron Razak, principal of Or HaEmet Sephardic School, and Rabbi Shmuel Pinto of Magen David Sephardic Congregation are among Sephardi community leaders who have studied at the kolel, Rabbi Lebhar said. "This is all a ripple effect and a way to build the community."

Rabbi Lebhar, who has written a book on Moroccan Jewish customs, said that he is heavily rooted in Sephardi tradition despite having studied in Ashkenazi yeshivot, including the Telshe Yeshiva in Chicago. He also spent 10 years studying in Israel, and taught Halachah (Jewish law) at Yeshivat Darché Noam/David Shapell College of Jewish Studies in Jerusalem.

In Los Angeles, he was rabbi of a Sephardi minyan in an Ashkenazi kolel, an arrangement he described as very harmonious.

It's "a mistake" to put everyone in one minyan, he believes. He likens the situation to marriage.

"Each person retains their individuality, and then they find common ground," said the married father of seven. "Taking away someone's individuality is not the healthiest approach. Each one has a beautiful culture and heritage."

The Torah binds the two communities, he said. "The Torah is the same."

Investment Advisors have moved to Macquarie Private Wealth this year.
Most recently, Monica Weissmann, CFP.
MACQUARIE
We are proud to have another new face appearing in our North York branch. Why are so many advisors moving to Macquarie Private Wealth?
Monica was drawn to our global perspective. When you consider Canada only accounts for about three per cent of the global economy, it is no wonder she and her clients hunger for a broader universe of investment opportunities.
She was also attracted by the freedom she will have to advise her clients objectively, free of product or platform bias, and the flexibility we give her to operate her business in the manner that suits her best.
There is also our award-winning research that helps Monica and her investors to make more informed investment decisions.
She also finds it refreshing to be able to pick up the phone and talk directly to top management, who actually know her by name.
Please contact Monica Weissmann, CFP, Investment Advisor for a private conversation about your financial future.
Monica Weissmann, CFP Investment Advisor
T 416 512 3658 E monica.weissmann@macquarie.com
Visit Monica's website at www.macquarieprivatewealth.ca/weissmann
No entity within the Macquarie Group of Companies is registered as a bank or an authorized foreign bank in Canada under the Bank Act, S.C. 1991, c.46 and no entity within the Macquarie Group of Companies is regulated in Canada as a financial institution, bank holding company or an insurance holding company. Macquarie Bank Limited ABN 46 008 583 542 (MBL) is a company incorporated in Australia and authorized under the Banking Act 1959 (Australia) to conduct banking business in Australia. MBL is not authorized to conduct business in Canada. No entity within the Macquarie Group of Companies other than MBL is an authorized deposit-taking institution for the purposes of the Banking Act 1959 (Australia), and their obligations do not represent deposits or other liabilities of MBL. MBL does not guarantee or otherwise provide assurance in respect of the obligations of any other Macquarie Group company. Macquarie Private Wealth Inc. is a member of the Canadian Investor Protection Fund and IIROC.

APPLE PICKING: Jonah Grunberg picked an apple to eat and two to take home when Robbins Hebrew Academy kindergarten students went apple picking this month.

Morah Kate hadn't considered a career in education

By Frances Kraft

Kate Sable, a Grade 5 teacher at the Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School, feels very lucky to be doing the work she does.

At the suggestion of her husband, Jordan, a teacher at the Anne and Max Tanenbaum Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto, Sable began to consider a career in education after moving to Toronto in 2000.

Volunteering in a couple of schools gave her "a sense that it was the right thing for me."

When the couple met, Kate, a native of Des Moines, Iowa, was working for a non-profit in North Carolina, and Jordan, who is from Toronto, was in graduate school there.

She has helped research the effects of domestic violence on children, and taught violence prevention programs in the Durham, N.C., school system. In Toronto, at first, she worked as a violence prevention counsellor for women and children.

A graduate of the University of Toronto's Ontario Institute for Studies in Education, Sable, 39 – "Morah Kate" to her students – also has a bachelor's degree in biology from Yale University.

Her work as a Grade 5 core teacher at Penna, where she has been teaching since 2002, is "incredibly stimulating," she said.

In the classroom, she strives to be warm, firm, excited and caring – and to set a high standard, she said.

Sable especially loves teaching math. For practice in computation, she likes to use "$1 words." and her students seem to enjoy the exercise as much as she does. A monetary value is assigned to each letter of the alphabet ("a" equals 1 cent, "b" equals 2 cents, and so on), and the students have to try to find words that add up to a dollar.

Although Sable wasn't specifically looking to work in a Jewish school, she found the environment comforting, having lost her father shortly before she began working there.

"Finding this school has been incredibly special. It's been deeply gratifying to me… It just felt like a very safe and nurturing place."

Kate Sable

A LESSON FROM THE TEACHER

"Even though it's my fourth year teaching Grade 5, it still stays new. I have 16 kids and there are 16 different brains trying to learn new information… Each kid is like a puzzle you have to figure out."

As well, she noted, she and Jordan have chosen to send their two sons to the school. "My husband's family – his grandfather, his father and mother – have provided a great model for commitment to Jewish education… My husband and I have tried to follow that model in some small way."

And yes, she said, she does talk shop with her husband – as well as with his brother, Josh, who is also a teacher at TanenbaumCHAT, her in-laws (a teacher and a former teacher), and her sister-in-law, who works in the school system, too.

"I really love what I do," she said.

Come discover:

- An uncompromising commitment to educational excellence
- A vibrant link to our tradition, heritage and today's Jewish world
- A community that is home to families from all backgrounds
- Innovative approaches to individualization, literacy, the environment and the arts

Join us for an Open House

Posluns Education Centre
18 Neptune Drive
(Bathurst and Wilson)
Sunday, October 31st
10:00 am

Kamin Education Centre
300 Atkinson Avenue
(Bathurst and Centre, Thornhill)
Sunday, November 7th
10:00 am

Babysitting available onsite

For further information, please contact Pearl Greenspan at 905-889-3998 ext. 337 or visit www.agreatschool.com

Associated Hebrew Schools of Toronto

A Great School

PRiPSTEiN'S CAMP

all your favourite landsport, waterfront and creative activities

…skate into summer at our amazing Ice Palace!

Just 25 hours from downtown Toronto!

PARENTS: upset about the new HST? Check out our special promotion (campers in grades 1-5), with savings of over $500! OCA

www.mishmar.com 1-866-481-1875

THE KASHRUTH COUNCIL OF CANADA

COR

Please be advised that the following products made by

David Roberts Food Corp

were labeled with an unauthorized COR 564

- Two For The Road Ju Jubes, 80 g packet
- Two For the Road Red Berries, 70 g packet

These products are not kosher even when bearing the COR 564.

* * * * *

To receive Kosher Alerts via e-mail, visit our website at www.cor.ca and click on "Kashruth Alerts"

CAROLE TANENBAUM VINTAGE COLLECTION & BIKUR CHOLIM invite you to a sale and appraisal of vintage costume jewelry

Wednesday, November 10th 2010

a portion of the proceeds will benefit
BIKUR CHOLIM

SALE:
11:00 am – 4:00 pm
and 5:00 pm – 8:00 pm

APPRAISAL:
11:00 am – 4:00 pm

for information and to rsvp:
(416) 783-7983
Event Coordinator: Beverley D. Burdeyney

'KOSHER' LABEL IN ADVERTISING

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency Guide to Food Labelling and Advertising reads as follows:

"In the labelling, packaging and advertising of a food, the Food and Drug Regulations prohibits the use of the word kosher or any letter of the Hebrew alphabet, or any other word, expression, depiction, sign, symbol, mark, device or other representation that indicates or that is likely to create an impression that the food is kosher, if the food does not meet the requirements of the Kashruth applicable to it.

The terms "kosher style" and "kind of kosher" are not allowed, unless they meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish-style food" or "Jewish cuisine" are not objected to, although the foods may not necessarily meet the requirements of the Kashruth.

Rationale: "Kosher style" is considered to create the impression that the food is kosher, and therefore the food must meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish style" food may not necessarily create this impression."

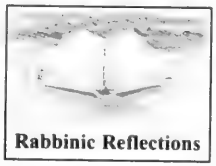
The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Jewish Life

Finding value in the land

By RABBI ROY D. TANENBAUM

In this week's parshah, Chayei Sarah, Abraham pays top shekel for the first purchase of Israeli land. Surprised? Don't be. Ask any good businessperson why he might not want to scoop up every shekel on the table. He might want to keep a deal from unravelling. She might want to cement a relationship with a supplier or a purchaser. Only that particular land parcel might do. Maybe he wanted to create a loyal employee. Or maybe he just wanted an eight-cow wife.



Rabbinic Reflections

Johnny Lingo was known as the go-to man on the islands. If you wanted to know the best fishing spot or the best place to get pearls, you went to Johnny. If you needed the best negotiator for a prize gift to take back home, Johnny was your man. If you wanted the best price for something you were selling, once again, Johnny was the agent you wanted. Yet, mention "Johnny Lingo" and, underneath the admiration, you might catch a smirk.

You see, on the islands, if a woman were of average appearance and beauty, it was the custom to offer two or three cows as dowry to the father of a potential new bride – if less than average, fewer cows. If a particular young woman were extremely beautiful and talented, a young man might pay as high as four cows. In rare situations, he might offer as many as five.

The intelligent, savvy, sharp trader Johnny Lingo had paid old Sam Karoo eight cows – eight cows! – for a plain, stoop-shouldered, mousey woman afraid of her own shadow, when even one cow would have been a lot. Everyone on the islands talked about it behind his back.

When six months after the wedding, a visitor to Johnny's house caught sight of a woman setting out dainties in the adjoining room, he couldn't believe his eyes. The lift of her shoulders, the tilt of her chin and the sparkle in her eyes all spelled self-confidence and pride – not an arrogant and haughty pride, but a confident inner beauty that radiated in her every movement. Was this the woman that everyone was talking about?

"There is only one Sarita," Johnny said, surmising his thoughts. "Think about how it must make a girl feel to know her husband paid a very low dowry for her? It must be insulting to her to know he places such little value on her. Think about how she must feel when the other women boast about the high prices their husbands paid for them. It must be embarrassing for her. I would not let this happen to my Sarita."

"Then you paid eight cows to make your wife happy?" he was asked

"Well, of course I wanted the woman I loved to be happy – but more than that, too. Many things can change a woman. There are things that happen on the inside and things that happen on the outside. What I wanted was an eight-cow wife."

Imagine the implications for us today if we knew Abraham had bargained Ephron the Hittite down to the lowest price, if we knew the Land of Israel was had for a song. Rashi says that when Abraham paid top shekel for the first purchase of Israeli land, he raised the land up. Thank God for Abraham the businessperson.

Rabbi Roy D. Tanenbaum is rosh yeshiva of the Canadian Yeshiva and Rabbinical School and dean of the Institute for Jewish Liturgy and School for Shamashim. (The original Johnny Lingo story, from which this story is derived, was copyrighted by Patricia McGerr in 1965.)

Celebrating the knowledge of Chanukah

Believe it nor not, we're on the verge of Kislev, the month of Chanukah. It has arrived so quickly. The days are shorter and the darkness is getting longer, and it all happened so quickly.

We're familiar with Kislev as the month that ushers in Chanukah. We sing songs and light the chanukiyah, and somehow it speaks to us of heroism, warmth and light. But Kislev ushers in more than Chanukah. It ushers in a new Jewish perspective that's nuanced through Chanukah. Occurring in Jewish history, the events of Chanukah sit outside the prophetic era and just before the exile that will last 2,000 years. It's the historic bridge between old and new.

MIDRASHIC MOMENTS
By Rachael Turkienicz

The Hasmoneans were a family of priests and there was never any suggestion they were prophetic. They accomplished what they did through intense passion and human vision of what things ought to be, not what they were. They rallied the nation together under a common cry of monotheism. They accomplished the seemingly impossible by defeating an empire and regaining religious autonomy. Yet never do they speak God's words – they're not prophets.

Prophecy has long ceased to be the effective expression of Jewish spirituality. It's the passion of the Maccabees, the vision of the soul shining through a united nation, that speaks most strongly to us.

The Hasmonean leadership corrupted as time progressed, and Jewish history shows us an honest portrayal of this unfortunate legacy. With that said, the end of the Hasmonean era ushers in the beginnings of what will be a thriving new Jewish world. The rabbinic era will continue the vision of building Judaism through human innovation, passion and vision. Completely removed from searching for prophecy, the brilliance of the sages shape Judaism by searching for creative knowledge rooted in divine wisdom.

In today's Jewish world, we celebrate the heroism of the Maccabees and we certainly need to celebrate Jewish warriors. As Kislev begins, we look forward to Chanukah and lighting the candles, which we connect with the candles of the menorah that the Maccabees lit. Yet we ignore the symbolism of our actions.

How interesting that candles in Judaism symbolize knowledge, and yet we don't speak of the knowledge that Kislev ushered in. Perhaps we need to step back and take a much broader view of Jewish history.

Kislev brings us the holiday of Chanukah, and it also brings us the beginnings of a new Judaism that we all take for granted. The knowledge of the candles could be seen as the knowledge of a new system that the sages will teach us. The knowledge of each individual's understanding of Judaism and Torah. The knowledge we achieve when we listen to each other rather than straining to hear the voice of a prophet long gone. We are the candles, and our Jewish identities seek knowledge.

There's no doubt that Kislev reminds us that Chanukah is fast approaching, and soon the excitement of Chanukah will take over. But as Kislev begins, we can take a moment and remember the new age it ushered in and the knowledge we gain when we stop and listen.

The brilliance of this symbol is said beautifully in the midrash when it states, "Many candles can be kindled from one candle without diminishing its flame."

Rachael Turkienicz is director of Rachaelscentre.org.

Jewish Life

The Patriarchs revisited

Past Forward
By Alex Gropper

Why are the Patriarchs a source of fascination for us? There are many answers to this question. They are our forefathers, after all. They are also the fathers of other nations, most notably the Arabs, who are descendants of Ishmael, Abraham's first-born.

An element of romance is associated with the Patriarchs. They were nomads who were free to roam, picking up their tents at a moment's notice.

There is also an exotic element to the Patriarchs. Abraham originally came from the fabled city of Ur, one of the birthplaces of civilization. It's no wonder then that archeologists have been fascinated by the Patriarchs. It's a fascination that stretches back to the beginning of so-called "biblical archeology," a term that has fallen out of favour.

The American scholar William Foxwell Albright, who died in 1971, was the father of biblical archeology and played a major role in looking for the historical background of the patriarchal stories. His student, John Bright, wrote what was the definitive Albright-inspired history of ancient Israel based on the archeological evidence amassed by Albright and his disciples. These students played a major role in educating generations of biblical scholars at universities in North America and Israel.

Albright was most sympathetic to Israel and Jews. A number of prominent Israeli scholars either studied with him or were influenced by his ideas. Among them was Eliezer Sukenik, the father of the legendary Yigael Yadin, who would become one of the first professors of archaeology at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. (It was Sukenik who would be one of the first scholars to see the Dead Sea Scrolls and realize their importance, while Albright was one of the first to verify the authenticity of the scrolls.)

Archeology became a national pastime in Israel in its early days as we wanted to show the world our connections to the land. Archeology gave us a tangible link to our past, starting off with the Patriarchs.

Albright had placed the Patriarchs in the first part of the Middle Bronze Age, which has been dated from 2000 to 1500 BCE. That period seemed to fit with the stories of the Patriarchs as nomads in a land that was sparsely settled. Both Israeli and American archeologists began to excavate sites associated with the Patriarchs. The Americans began a long-term excavation at Shechem in the late 1950s, while the Israelis excavated sites such as Be'er Sheva.

I remember once listening to a tour guide tell his awe-struck charges as they stood in the middle of the ruins of the Middle Bronze gate at Shechem that Abraham himself had crossed through its portals. It was a very effective speech, and the tourists stood mesmerized as they listened to him.

The kind of certainty the tour guide had no longer exists. The further back we go in time, the more murky and cloudy our tangible evidence about the Patriarchs becomes. And yet for me, the Patriarchs transcend archeology as the fathers of our faith. It is a faith that by its very definition goes beyond material evidence.

It is not so much the historicity of the Patriarchs that is important, but the message that they represent. That message, which has resounded across the millennia, can never be undermined by the haphazard nature of archeological discovery.

Amazing young people

Jewish & Digital
By Mark Mietkiewicz

At the best of times, planning a bar or bat mitzvah is a joyful – and stressful – event for everyone involved. But if the child preparing for the big day also has special needs, it can make the celebration daunting. Today, I would like you to meet some amazing young people, who along with their dedicated families, found ways to celebrate their Jewish coming of age.

In "A bat mitzvah for Jenny," Marlena Thompson tells of the challenges of being the mother of an autistic daughter – while coping with a system that only made things harder for them. Thompson realized that having a standard ceremony with Jenny being called up to the Torah would have little meaning for her daughter. She felt it would be more appropriate to celebrate during the Havdalah ceremony marking the end of the Sabbath. The light of the candle, the taste of the wine, the aroma of the spices would be just right to inspire Jenny. But when their rabbi refused to be part of the unconventional ceremony, Thompson planned one herself in a local hotel. [http://bit.ly/mitz01]

"Gazing at my daughter's lovely face, luminous with the joy of achievement, and hearing her remark, 'Being Jewish smells like oranges and cinnamon,' I had no doubt that [the prophet] Elijah had indeed made his way to our self-styled sanctuary. His presence would be a fitting tribute to the sanctity of innocence and my unwavering belief that, differences and disabilities notwithstanding, God simply does not make mistakes."

Rabbi Julian Shindler says, "According to Jewish tradition, a boy becomes bar mitzvah upon reaching the age of 13 years and one day, a girl becomes bat mitzvah at 12 years and a day. This occurs automatically upon reaching the prescribed chronological age. It is totally independent of the means by which this is celebrated... It follows that if a child has special needs to the extent that he/she cannot celebrate his or her bar/bat mitzvah in the conventional way, while this is understandably disappointing, it does not affect his/her Jewish status, neither does it violate any Jewish law." [http://bit.ly/mitz03]

Speech therapist Leslie Kessler says families considering a special ceremony should also ask themselves this question: "'What's best for the child, or do I really want this for me?' because many of these children can't tell you if they don't want this. Parents need to take a very careful inventory of their child's abilities." [http://bit.ly/mitz04]

But when the conditions are right and the community is supportive, the results can be rewarding. That was the case for Benny Ellenbogen [http://bit.ly/mitz05], Jesse Martinez [http://bit.ly/mitz06] and Chaim Goldman. [http://bit.ly/mitz07] If you've never attended this type of ceremony, you can get a taste of one from the video Nes Gadol (Great Miracle). [http://bit.ly/mitz08]

After viewing the video, you'll understand why one visitor to the site was moved to add this comment: "This is what God bestows upon us to help anyone who has the soul, respect and dignity to take upon a challenge such as in preparing for a bar/bat mitzvah. What you did for these two special young men is beyond a mitzvah. You prepared them to succeed in this challenging world. Mazel tov!"

Next time, advice for planning your special celebration.

Mark Mietkiewicz is a Toronto-based website producer who writes, lectures and teaches about the Jewish Internet. He can be contacted at highway@rogers.com.

FOLLOW US
petvalu
182 Wilson Avenue 416-482-1300
(One block west of Avenue Rd.) Parking available
Owner
Cindy Stern
COME IN AND RECEIVE YOUR PERSONALIZED REWARDS LOYALTY CARD
petvalu REWARD CARD
FOR EVERY 9 BAGS OF FOOD PURCHASED GET THE 10TH BAG FREE petvalu.com
LIMITED TIME OFFER

ISRAEL 2010-2011
COMPARE APPLES to APPLES
The BEST Family Tours in North America!!!
Call us for Recent References
Bar/Bat Mitzvah Ceremony Included
All-inclusive deluxe hotels
• More days of sightseeing
• More meals
• A true family itinerary
www.israelfamilytours.com
or call Kathy ext. 345
WINTER SPECIAL 2010
BOOK NOW AND SAVE
SPACE VERY LIMITED
Dec. 16 - Dec. 30
Dec. 19 - Jan. 2/11
MARCH BREAK 2011
Mar. 9 - Mar. 20
PASSOVER 2011
April 16 - April 30
SUMMER 2011
Jun. 26 - Jul. 10
Jun. 3 - Jul. 17
Jun. 17 - Jul. 31
Jun. 24 - Aug. 7
Jun. 31 - Aug. 14
Aug. 14 - Aug. 28
FALL/WINTER
TO TEL AVIV
FROM $686 +TAX
Community Mission
May 12 - 26 2011
If you've been to Israel before or you're a first timer...
THIS IS THE TOUR FOR YOU!!
Call Kathy ext. 345
PRIVATE CUSTOM TOURS
INNOVATIVE ITINERARIES & GREAT PRICES!
No one is more experienced than we are!
DON'T TRY TO DO IT ON YOUR OWN BOOK WITH US AND SAVE!
Call Ehud Ext. 322
Air Canada online
For more tours & to book visit:
www.peerlesstravel.com
BEST AIRFARE TO ISRAEL
Don't book with anyone else before talking to us first!
PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES
YOUR FULL SERVICE TRAVEL AGENCY
905-886-5610
800-294-1663
info@peerlesstravel.com
7117 Bathurst St., Just N. of Steeles, Thornhill, ON L4J 2J6

Pardes Chaim officially opens to community

Will accommodate between 70,000-90,000 burial plots

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

Toronto Hebrew Memorial Park (THMP) officially opened its second cemetery, Pardes Chaim, at a community event held Oct. 10 at the cemetery.

More than twice the size of THMP's original cemetery, Pardes Shalom, Pardes Chaim sits on 200 acres at 11818 Bathurst St. in Vaughan, and will accommodate between 70,000 to 90,000 burial plots.

William Draimin, a lawyer, and president of THMP for the past 20 years, said that the new cemetery became necessary because Pardes Shalom is fully allocated by 75 organizational members, including synagogues, landsmenshaft and mutual benefit societies. (It also has a community section for the unaffiliated.)

At the Oct. 10 event, Draimin credited Sidney Freedman, founder and honorary life president of THMP, for being the "person behind the initial vision of THMP. He studied the needs of the community and found the required lands."

Freedman, a lawyer and land developer, said that it has been 45 years since he started this "adventure, and it is a legacy I will always carry with me."

He said that THMP came into being in 1965, when, as a 39-year-old, he realized that a newly structured cemetery operation could be the vehicle for his ongoing contribution to the community.

"It could be run in an entirely new way, in a way that to my knowledge had never been attempted or achieved by any major Jewish community. It could be run as a business by a corporation, but it could be owned by the whole community in all its diversity."

Sidney Freedman, founder of Toronto Hebrew Memorial Park

His aim, he said, was to produce a new model in cemetery usage, and in its administration. "It would set new standards for beauty, for service and for the correction of abuses. The time had come to make the vision a reality."

In 1970, he said, he bought the land, which became Pardes Sholom, and began the process to rezone the land for cemetery usage. "By November 1972, when some of the approvals had been received, I gifted both the property and the business to the community."

Freedman said that with careful planning and with building the cemetery in stages, Pardes Shalom "was not a financial burden to community coffers from the beginning. I am gratified that [UJA Federation of Greater Toronto] has never had to invest a penny toward the establishment of the cemetery, its operation or its growth."

He said that there is no reason that cemeteries have to be "forbidding, ugly places which people are reluctant to visit. There is nothing in Halachah that constrains the beautification of a cemetery. Quite the contrary.

"I had at the beginning determined that our cemeteries would be beautifully landscaped and maintained."

A survey of the treed areas at Pardes Shalom was recently completed, he said, and "I am proud to report that we are third in the variety of tree species of institutional grounds surveyed in Toronto. We are surpassed only by Mount Pleasant cemetery and the University of Toronto grounds. Both of these institutions predate us by more than 110 years."

Pardes Chaim will eventually be landscaped and maintained to a similarly high standard, he said.

Also speaking at the opening, York Centre MPP Monte Kwinter called it a "very special day in the community. This location offers serenity for remembering and mourning, [where] we can experience nature and spirituality together."

Peter Shurman, MPP for Thornhill, said that most people have negative thoughts when they think of cemeteries, "but cemeteries are also for the living. The beauty that [THMP] has created helps us to reflect on the good times."

Also speaking were York Region Chair Bill Fisch, Vaughan Mayor Linda Jackson and Alan Winer, chair of UJA Federation of Greater Toronto.

Discover Jerusalem Package at Mamilla Hotel

Experience our indulging package including complimentary drinks at the Mirror Bar, shopping privileges at Alrov Mamilla Avenue and 15% savings on all spa treatments. Stay 3 nights or more and receive a complimentary Shabbat meal or 30% discount on your 3rd night.

Valid January through March 2011. Restrictions apply.

Reservations +972.2.5482200 reservations@MamillaHotel.com www.MamillaHotel.com

Mamilla Hotel, Jerusalem, enters The Sunday Times Travel Magazine's 'World's 100 Best Hotels' and Condé Nast Traveller UK & US editions' 'Hot List 2010'

MAMILLA HOTEL

Dr. Max & Gianna Glassman Israel Exchange Scholars

JOINT PUBLIC LECTURE:

ODED IRSHAI & RINA TALGAM
Professors, Hebrew University

APPROACHING LATE ANTIQUE SYNAGOGUES:
BETWEEN LITERARY TEXTS & VISUAL REPRESENTATIONS

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 3 AT 4PM
Koeffler House, Room 108, 569 Spadina Ave.

PLEASE ALSO JOIN US FOR THEIR ADDITIONAL INDIVIDUAL SEMINARS:

ODED IRSHAI
The Christian Appropriation of Jerusalem in the Fourth Century: The Case of the Bordeaux Pilgrim
Tuesday, November 2, 5pm-7pm
Jackman Humanities Building, Room 318, 170 St. George St

RINA TALGAM
Interactions Between Christian and Jewish Art in Late Antiquity
Thursday, November 4, 12pm-2pm
Sid Smith, Room 2098, 100 St George St
Co-sponsored with the Department of Fine Art

All lectures are free and open to the public. No registration required.

Centre for Jewish Studies
UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO
מרכז למדעי היהדות

cjs.toronto@utoronto.ca
416.978.1624
www.cjs.utoronto.ca

INSPIRING JEWISH ADULT LEARNING

כולל KOLEL

November 2 / 8-9:30 p.m.
A YEAR IN ISRAEL: REFLECTIONS OF AN OUTSIDER FROM THE INSIDE
Through the use of provocative photos, articles, and real-life daily experiences of her year in Israel, Rabbi Goldstein will take us past "Disney Israel" in this entertaining and thought-provoking presentation. FREE / Prosserman JCC / Room 211

December 5 / 10:30 a.m.-12:00 p.m.
THE DECEMBER DILEMMA: DEALING WITH CHRISTMAS & CHANUKAH
Presented in partnership with the Downtown Jewish Community School and Miles Nadal JCC Sundays on Bloor
How do you handle social events, decisions about which holidays to celebrate and how family gatherings, and those awkward questions from children? What other issues come up? How do you find resources in the community and become part of Jewish life? This is an opportunity for participants to discuss these questions within a safe, like-minded group. Instructor: Alena Strauss.
FREE/ Miles Nadal JCC / Room 124

December 6 / 8-9:30 p.m.
WHO IS A JEW? / Rabbi Michael Klein-Katz, Jerusalem
Through our examination of how a formula for Jewish status affects Israeli citizenship and Diaspora conversions, intermarriage and intra-faith Jewish relations, assimilation and synagogue membership in North America, we shall come to a working definition that will shed light upon the meaning of being a Jew in our time. FREE/ Prosserman JCC / Room 124

December 13 / 7:30-9:30 p.m.
THE FEMALE RUSE: STORIES OF WOMEN'S DECEPTION IN GENESIS
Rabbi Elyse Goldstein and Dr. Rachel Adelman, Jerusalem
Why do women deceive in the Bible? Is it a "good" or a "bad" thing? Does it reinforce gender hierarchies or undermine them? We will study the figures of Rebekah and Tamar: both dissemblers, both mothers of twins, and both don a veil. Join us for this unique co-teaching with an Orthodox female scholar and a Reform female Rabbi. $10 at the door / Prosserman JCC / Room 105

FOR MORE INFORMATION PLEASE CALL 416.638.1881 X.4255

Kolel and Prosserman JCC welcome Rabbi Elyse Goldstein back from her year in Israel. We are in full swing with many new classes and events to enhance your Jewish journey.

www.kolel.org
visit us on facebook and twitter: kolelTO.

Rabbi Elyse Goldstein
416.638.1881 x.4472
rabbi@prossermanjcc.com

HALF THE KINGDOM: the next generation

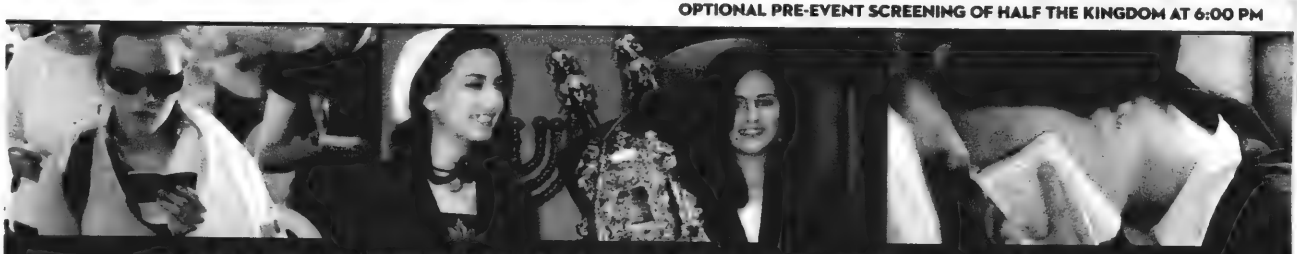
20 years ago the film Half The Kingdom challenged us all to rethink the role of women in Judaism. It had the first footage of Women of The Wall, a baby-naming as "normative," and opened discussions of Orthodox Jewish feminism. Now in its 20th year we ask, "what is next?"

Join us for a panel with Michelle Landsberg, Dr. Norma Joseph, Rabbi Elyse Goldstein, and Dr. Naomi Goldenberg together with today's new thinkers Alison Pick (author of Far To Go), Rabbi Miriam Margles, and Rabba Sara Hurwitz, the first ordained Orthodox woman in America and assistant rabbi at Hebrew Institute of Riverdale, New York. Moderated by Francine Zuckerman, director/producer and Marilyn Lightstone, actress.

TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 7:15 PM / BLOOR CINEMA / 506 BLOOR ST. WEST
OPTIONAL PRE-EVENT SCREENING OF HALF THE KINGDOM AT 6:00 PM



General admission $36 / students with ID $20 / "The Queendom" $180 includes: tax receipt for $136, reception with the panelists, DVD of Half The Kingdom, reserved seats and acknowledgment in booklet.

FOR TICKETS AND MORE INFORMATION PLEASE CALL 416-638-1881 EXT 4235. ONLINE TICKET SALES AT HTTP://HALFTHEKINGDOM.EVENTBRITE.COM

CO-PRESENTED WITH

POWERED BY UJA FEDERATION — Hillel of Greater Toronto — כולל KOLEL — Miles Nadal JCC — prosserman

Sponsored through the generosity of The ShaRna Foundation

Vote says more about UN than it does about Canada

Never before, it appears, has a vote at the United Nations concerning Canada resulted in such an avalanche of domestic media attention.

News reports and commentary ran non-stop for several days after Canada lost its bid to Portugal for a two-year term on the UN Security Council.

According to Reports

By PAUL MICHAELS

Since the vote for the seat, one of five up for grabs, was conducted by secret ballot in the General Assembly, the analysis of why Canada lost was filled with speculation. Quite a lot of it pointed to Prime Minister Stephen Harper's support for Israel as a key factor in the defeat.

But substantial amounts of commentary placed the blame directly on dysfunction and lack of principle at the UN.

In its Oct. 13 editorial, the Globe and Mail wrote: "Under the Conservatives, Canada has maintained its position of global leadership. It led at the G20/G8 this summer… It may hedge on an issue like climate change, but has enunciated an unambiguous message in terms of human rights and democratic principles. It has aligned itself squarely with countries, such as Israel, which respect such principles. If Canada's failure to win a Security Council seat is a result of Conservative foreign policy, then it says more about the UN than it does about Canada."

The following day, the National Post weighed in: "According to various media reports, we lost because Ottawa refused to sell off bits of its principles to satisfy the UN's various special-interest blocs. The best way for Canada to have guaranteed itself a Security Council seat, diplomatic insiders say, would have been to bash Israel, align more closely with China, sign on to fashionable climate-change initiatives and spread aid money thinner in order to bribe the largest possible number of countries."

In the same issue of the Post, David Frum argued that while "[a]nti-Israel voices inside the Canadian civil service have murmured to friendly journalists that Canada was punished for Prime Minister Harper's staunch support for the Middle East democracy," the real reason lay elsewhere: the structural nature of the Western European and Others bloc, which, along with Germany and Portugal, also includes Canada. The "internal politics" of the European Union strongly favoured Portugal over Canada, Frum said, even if the Organization of the Islamic Conference (OIC) also voted for Portugal.

Speaking of which, in the Oct. 25 issue of Maclean's, Andrew Coyne concluded his review of what led to Canada's loss with the following: "Ah, Israel. According to former UN ambassador Paul Heinbecker, Canada's current 'pro-Israel' stance probably cost us votes among the UN's 57 Arab and Muslim members. I've no idea if that's true, but if so, we should wear our defeat like a badge of honour."

* * *

There's another way of evaluating the importance of this "honourable defeat." Consider this: there's growing attention being paid in media circles to the Palestinian threat to (once again) declare unilateral statehood, this time along the 1967 "borders" and get it adopted in a UN Security Council resolution.

In an Oct. 20 opinion piece in the Wall Street Journal, John Bolton, the former U.S. ambassador to the UN, warned that if the Obama administration doesn't veto such a move, "[a] Security Council resolution fixing the 1967 lines as borders would call into question even Israel's legitimacy, dramatically undercutting prospects for security and defensibility."

What must not be forgotten is that UN Security Council Resolution 242, adopted in 1967 (and bound in 1973 by Resolution 338) remains the bedrock of the "peace process." It calls specifically for a negotiated resolution of the Mideast conflict based on the "right of all states to live in peace within secure and recognized boundaries." Resolution 242 deliberately left open a modification to the indefensible "ceasefire" lines of 1949.

Any attempt by the Palestinians to circumvent negotiations, which require compromise, would violate the centrality of these resolutions and be threat to peace and stability. Canada's presence on the Security Council at this time would have provided a crucial voice on this matter, if it's needed.

Paul Michaels is communications director for the Canada-Israel Committee.

The Executive Committee, The Board of Directors and the staff at Israel Cancer Research Fund deeply mourn the passing of a committed friend, supporter, Board member and Women of Action 2009 Honouree

Vicki Campbell ז"ל

Her leadership in the community and her connection to ICRF will always be remembered.

We extend our heartfelt condolences to her husband Henry, her children Jon, Elliot, Leanne and Jordan and the entire Campbell family.

May her memory be a blessing to those who were fortunate to have known her.

ICRF

CAMP RAMAH IN CANADA AT 50

The Max and Beatrice Wolfe Campus

RAMAH@50 INVITE

CELEBRATE 50 YEARS OF CAMP RAMAH IN CANADA

Ramah@50 Banquet Honourees

Phyllis & Ab Flatt

Harold & Carole Wolfe

Phyllis & Ab Flatt and Carole & Harold Wolfe have been champions of Camp Ramah in Canada for many years. As we celebrate the Camp's 50th anniversary we also honour their incredible generosity, dedication and on-going commitment to the remarkable summer camp they have helped shape for generations.

Proceeds from this celebratory event are being directed towards the camper scholarships and the Tikvah program for campers with special needs.

Please honour the Flatt & Wolfe families and Camp Ramah in Canada by taking an ad in our tribute book.

For information please contacting Ilana Hirt by phone: 416-789- 5822 or email: ilana@campramah.com

Join us to celebrate 50 fabulous years of Camp Ramah in Canada

November 12-13, 2010 Beth Tzedec Congregation
1700 Bathurst Street, Toronto, Ontario

Featuring: Craig Taubman - Entertainer & Ramah Alumnus
(Saturday Evening – Gala Dinner & Dessert Reception)

Weekend Celebrations:
Friday, November 12, 2010
» Kabbalat Shabbat Dinner, 5:30pm $50

Saturday, November 13, 2010
» Shabbat Services and enhanced Kiddush 9:00 am – 1:00 pm

» Ramah@50 Gala Banquet $180
Honouring Ab & Phyllis Flatt and Carole & Harold Wolfe
(Includes Havdallah & Dessert Reception)
Cocktails: 6:15pm Dinner: 7:00pm
» Havdallah & Dessert Reception 9:00pm $50

ESCAPE THE ORDINARY

From the simple to the sublime, Taps showrooms offer inspiring ideas no matter how low or high your budget.
Always with knowledgeable "toilet trained" service and great prices.

Azzura Bayla Tub

Soak and relax in this neo-classic freestanding tub. All white, 65.5˝ x 31˝ x 32˝. Amazing price, limited supply. Drain sold separately.

$999

Special Purchase

Riobel Zendo Shower Kit

Great shower power with good looks. Kit comes complete with 1/2˝ coaxial thermostatic pressure balance system, hand shower rail and 8˝ square shower head. Priced in chrome.

$649

Brushed Nickel $899

KWC Systema Kitchen Faucet

If you are the resident chef, you'll love the look and performance of this Swiss-made faucet system. 160˚ swivel spout with pullout aerator/spray. Priced in chrome.

$659

Stainless Steel $779

Inax C621 Dual Flush Toilet

Technologically advanced high efficiency dual flush toilet unites water saving and unique Whirlpool flushing for unsurpassed cleaning and sanitation.

$469

Riobel Zendo Faucet

Single hole bathroom faucet with new open spout design. Priced in chrome.

$279

Heated Towel Warmers

20% OFF

Mirolin Fina Soaker Tub

Enjoy spacious bathing in this deckless contemporary soaker tub. With sloping lumbar support and sleek looks, your experience can be enhanced by optional chromatherapy features. 60˝ x 32˝ x 22˝. Priced in white.

$529

TORONTO
1020 LAWRENCE AVE. W.
2 LIGHTS WEST OF DUFFERIN
416.785-0224 or 1.800.263.2976
Mon-Wed 9-5, Thurs-Fri 9-8, Sat 9:30-5

TAPS WHOLESALERS CELEBRATING 26 YEARS

MISSISSAUGA/OAKVILLE
3050 VEGA BLVD.
1 LIGHT EAST OF 403, NORTH OFF DUNDAS
905.569.1262 or 1.866.899.8801
www.tapsbath.com

Greater Toronto Area

'As Jews, we have to save lives wherever they need saving'

Continued from page 3

He said all proceeds from the gala will go to the Meir Medical Center for its work as a medical technology innovator and hospital for more than 700,000 people in the Tel Aviv region.

"As Jews, we have to save lives wherever they need saving," Raif said, adding that the hospital, which is roughly the size of Toronto's Sunnybrook Hospital, is on the leading edge of life-saving technology and improvements to quality of life.

In a statement, Dr. Asher Elhayany, the hospital's CEO and chief of staff, said he "salutes" all the award winners and is proud that his staff members were "among those outstanding individuals in Haiti." He will also attend the gala.

Elhayany called his hospital "a highway junction for the meeting of Arab and Jewish populations … [that] serves as a local symbol of Arab-Jewish coexistence in Israel."

Raif noted that Meir Medical Center doctors recently announced three "major" breakthroughs in medical technology.

The first was the discovery that IDF flight simulator technology could be tweaked for use in detecting fetal abnormalities in pregnant women. The technology began its testing phase two years ago and is now being exported for use around the world, Raif said. Secondly, Meir Hospital staff have developed a microchip that can be implanted under the skin of Type 2 diabetes patients and submit real-time insulin levels for monitoring purposes.

Lastly, the hospital recently developed a new "mini-surgery" cataract procedure that greatly reduces the amount of cutting needed on the eye of a patient, making it less intrusive and lengthy.

Part of Israeli field hospital

"We believe we are on the vanguard of making contributions to humanity," Raif said. "We are proud of what we've done. I'm not saying we're the only [Israeli] hospital making innovations, and I tip my hat to all the others… but we believe the centre has value."

Raif said he hopes the Jewish community will respond "with donations and support" and come to the gala to let the IDF, DART and Meir Medical Center teams know that their work is appreciated.

For more information on the gala, visit www.meirfriends.com

Reserve Now!

SHOMRAI SHABBOS CHEVRAH MISHNAYOS
120th Anniversary Dinner

RABBI & REBBETZIN YACOV FELDER שליט"א
MR. & MRS. BENTZION HEITNER
MR. & MRS. HARRY MARDER
MR. & MRS. MOSHE REICHMANN
MRS. ROCHELLE REITER
MRS. BONNY SILVER
MR. & MRS. JACK WEINBAUM

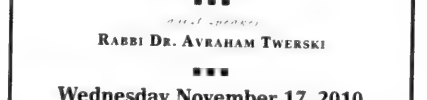
■■■

RABBI DR. AVRAHAM TWERSKI

■■■

Wednesday November 17, 2010

FOR MORE INFORMATION:
email shaindy@rogers.com or call 416.879.2065



Welcoming the Toronto Jewish Community Back to the Beach

BAYT Search – Senior Rabbi

BAYT

Beth Avraham Yoseph of Toronto is a vibrant & engaging Orthodox Synagogue Centre in Thornhill, Ontario. We have a diverse membership of 650 families offering multiple daily and Shabbos minyanim and a broad spectrum of youth, social, and Torah programming.

We are seeking a dynamic, experienced Mara D'Asra who is an accomplished talmid chacham has a University degree, and is a skilled orator with general cultural and intellectual awareness. The Rabbi must be a strong supporter of the State of Israel and an inclusive leader capable of educating & fostering commonality and unity amongst a diverse membership.

The successful Rabbi and Rebbetzin will have the skills and enthusiasm to represent the congregation while encouraging membership, and strengthening Jewish education.

Salary and benefits are commensurate with experience

If interested please submit cover letter and resume to rabbisearchbayt@gmail.com.

דער יידיש ווינקל

דזשערי קעין

ירושלים ד'ליטע

אן די יונג וילנע שרייבער

נאָדעמבער 1-9 איז Holocaust Education Week. די וואָך איז געווידמעט פֿראָגראַמען וואָס שטאַרקן די חיסקייט פון די נייע דורות וועגן די דעוולטאַציע פון דער שואה און פון ראַסן האַס, נישט בלויז פֿאַר יידן אַבער אויך פֿאַר דער מענטשהייט. די וואָך איז מערסטנס אָפּגענעבן צו דער עדותשאַפֿט פון די וואָס האָבן דורכגעמאַכט די לאַגערן און פֿאַרטיידיקן בריגאַדעס און פֿאַרשטייַן וווּ וויכטיק ס'איז אַז די וועלט זאָל קיינמאָל נישט פֿאַרגעסן וואָס יידן האָבן געליטן אונטער הילטלערס ממשלה.

יידערע וועלטער נעבן אמת צו אַ מאָמענט אין דער נעשיכטע פון צוויציקסטן יאָר הונדערט וואָס אונדזערע קינדער און אייניקלעך זאָלן וויסן וואָס יידן האָבן געליטן בעפֿעלקערונג געפֿינען היימען נאָר אין ביכער. אין א צייט וועו ראַסן האַס איז נאָך אלץ א קראַנקייט מיט אַן א מערצין איז וויכטיק צו לאָזן וויסן וואָס דער קאָסט איז געווען און קען נאָך וויסער זיין וועג מען לאָזט דעם סם פון האַס זיך קאָכן.

איינע פון די פֿראָגראַמען איז געווידמעט וילנע – אינדזער ירושלים ד'ליטע. די כעפּיע וועגן וילנע וועט פֿאָרקומען דעם אָטן נאָוועמבער, זיבן אין אָוועגס, אין זאָל פון אריינ, די היסאַניסטישע קאָנגרעגאַציע, 18 וועקאָרד דרייוו. מיר וועלן וויזין א פֿילם וועגן לעבן אין וילנע אידער דעם רייטישען איבערפֿאַל. נאָכן פֿילם וועט פֿאָרקומען א דיסקוסיע וועגן די יונג וילנע שרייבער מיט רעציטאַציעס פון ווייַר פֿאָעזיע אין יידיש און אין ענגלישער איבערזעצונג.

יונג וילנע איז געווען אַן איינגאַרטיקע סאָלאָנטירטע גרופּע פֿראָוויינקער און פֿאָעטן. זיי זענען געווען אַנערקענט וויי א וואָגאַרד פון דער מאָדערנער יידישער ליטעראַטור. צווישן די שרייבער האָט מען געפֿונען חיים גראָדע, שמערקע קאַטשערגינסקי, אַבֿרהם סוצקעווער, לייזער וואָלף, שמשון קאַהאַן, משה לעווין, פרץ מירענסקי און הירש גליק. זייער נעזאַנג איז פֿאַרשפּילט געווארן וועג דאָס ליכט פון יידישקייט אין פֿאָלקסן נעווארן אין די פֿאָגאַרט תעלדער און אין די אוועגס פון טרעבלינקע. אייזיקע פון די פֿאָעטן זענען אַדרעס פון וילנער גטאָ און האָבן זיך נעראַטעוודט אין די וועלדער מיט די פֿאַרטיזאַנער אָדער אין ראַטן פֿאַרבאַנד.

אַבֿרהם סוצקעווער, וועמען די וועלט האָלט וויי איינעם פון די דעהרויבענע פֿאָעטן פון צוואַנציקסטן יאָרהונדערט, איז מיט א יאָר קריק נעשטאָרבן אין ישראל. פרץ מירענסקי, אַנאַרקעט וויי א וועלט באַרימטער משלים שרייבער און פֿאָעט האָט אויסגעלעבט זיינע פֿורכטבאַרע, נאָך מלחמהדיקע יאָרן אין מאָנטרעאָל און אין סאָראָנטא.

פֿאַרוואָס האָט מען נעדרוקן וילנע ירושלים ד'ליטע? וילנע, פון היבעזטן יאָרהונדערט אָן איז נעווען א ויכטיקער צענטער פון יידישער ויסנשאַפֿט. וילנע איז נעווען די היים פון דעם וילנער גאון. ער האָט נעזען חסידות וויי א הערזעיע און ער האָט נעשטעלט די חסידים אין חרם. וילנע איז אויך נעווען דער צענטער וווּ די מאָדערנע יידישער קולטור און פֿאָליטיק איז נעלעגן אין קימפּעט. דער בונד איז נעגרינדעט נעווארן אין וילנע. די מזרחי און תּורה- ציון זענען אויך אָנגעשטאַנען אין וילנע. דער יידישער ויסנשאַפֿליכער אינסטיטוט – ייווא- איז נעגרינדעט נעווארן אין וילנע. וילנע האָט נעהאַט זעקס יידישע און העברעישע טאָג צייטונגן, די סטראָשון ביבליאָטעק, און די באַרימטע וילנער טרופּע. וילנע איז נישט נעווען אַזוי גרויס וויי וואַרשע, לאָדש אדער קראַקע – אָבער גלייך מיט אין איר קולטורעלער און פֿאָליטישער אינפֿלוס אויפֿן לעבן פון יידן.

אויב איר האָט נעראַטקעווען וועגן אונדזער וויקל שרייבערס דורך פּאָסט אָדער בליץ-פּאָסט info@thecjn.ca

Ya'alon calls for different approach to peacemaking

Vice-premier favours 'bottom up' process

Continued from page 1

But he noted that Abbas' Fatah faction denies the linkage between Jews and Israel, remains committed to the concept of armed struggle and has yet to amend its national covenant calling for Israel's destruction.

Ya'alon, who was chief of staff during much of the second Palestinian uprising, added, "We don't have a Palestinian leadership willing to recognize Israel as the state of the Jewish people."

Claiming not a single Israeli cabinet minister believes a peace accord with the Palestinians is achievable today, he said the PA's real objective is to eliminate Israel by incremental means.

Calling for a different approach to peacemaking, Ya'alon said it should be a "bottom-up" process by which the PA promotes peaceful coexistence with Israel, gives up all claims against Israel, reforms its vital institutions, builds a vigorous economy, roots out corruption, and improves security in co-operation with the Israeli army.

"This should be a performance-based process," said Ya'alon, a 60-year-old sabra who divides his time between his weekend getaway in Grofit, a kibbutz in the Negev Desert; his residence in Modi'in, a town midway between Jerusalem and Tel Aviv; and his office in Jerusalem.

Asked why the Israeli government agreed to open talks with the PA early last month when the prognosis appears to be so grim, Ya'alon replied, "We manoeuvre politically."

Israel is under internal and external pressures to keep negotiations with the PA going, he explained. "Both sides are pushed by the United States. The White House is pressing for a final political settlement. It won't succeed."

Echoing a recent comment by Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman, Ya'alon declared, " I can't see a final political settlement in my generation."

He said his vision of peace will take many years to implement.

Ticking off a list of peace talks with the Palestinians that have faltered since the Camp David summit in the summer of 2000, Ya'alon predicted that the current effort, promoted by the United States, would be a failure as well.

Urging caution, he said Israel should invest its energy in conflict management rather than in conflict resolution.

He conceded that progress might be made if the PA accepts Israel as a Jewish state. But, dashing that scenario, he said, "There's no chance this will happen."

Coming out against an Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank, he said it would bring Hamas to power there.

Ya'alon said the land-for-peace formula is only applicable to sovereign states.

Asked whether Israel should pull out of the Golan Heights in exchange for a peace treaty with Syria, Ya'alon said Syrian President Bashir Assad is not ready to commit to a peaceful resolution of Syria's conflict with Israel.

Assad is neither prepared to distance himself from his ally Iran, nor is he ready to work for the disarmament of Hezbollah. "He prefers to be a leader of the resistance camp."

Describing Iran as "the main instigator of instability" in the Middle East, Ya'alon called on the international community to impose "crippling" economic sanctions on Tehran to pressure it to stop its nuclear program.

But the military option should always be kept on the table. "I don't want to elaborate," he added.

Iran's Islamic fundamentalist regime should be toppled by the Iranian people, not by external powers, he said.

Moshe Ya'alon as Chief of Staff of the Israeli Defence Forces. [File photo]

Asked if he expects a second round of warfare pitting Israel against Hezbollah, he replied, "Hezbollah [has been] deterred from initiating a new wave of hostilities." Hamas, too, has been deterred since the Gaza war, he added.

He said Israel should neither apologize nor pay compensation to Turkey over an incident last May in which Israeli commandos killed nine Turkish activists aboard a Turkish vessel trying to break Israel's siege of Gaza.

"The flotilla was led by a Turkish jihadist group and was supported by the Turkish government. Turkey used to be [Israel's] important ally, but the [Turkish government] decided to change policy, to go east rather than west."

He accused Turkey's prime minister, Recep Tayyip Erdogan, of promoting an Islamist ideological agenda and cozying up to Iran and Hezbollah.

Before visiting Toronto, Ya'alon met MP John Baird, the Conservative party leader in the House of Commons, in Ottawa. "Israel appreciates very much Prime Minister Stephen Harper's very positive role," Ya'alon said. "Canadian policy is based on values, principles and moral clarity."

JOIN OUR FAMILY AS BIALIK GROWS NORTH

Bialik is excited to announce the opening of registration for our future northern branch to be located on the Lebovic Campus in September 2013

Applications will be accepted beginning November 1, 2010 for students entering JK – Grade 1 in 2013 and beyond

Join us for an Information Session at
TanenbaumCHAT Kimel Centre
Perlis Boardroom
9600 Bathurst St. Vaughan

Wednesday, November 24 – 7:00 pm

Please RSVP to Danielle Waltman
at 416 783 3346 ext 285
www.bialik.ca

Bialik Hebrew Day School
בית ספר יומי ע"ש ביאליק טאג שול

UJA Federation of Greater Toronto

Survivor, researcher take journey into memory

By RON CSILLAG
Special to The CJN

Memory – its slipperiness, its accuracy, its toxicity – is the unusual theme of the opening program of this year's Holocaust Education Week.

Entitled "The Void: In Search of Memory Lost," the Nov. 1 evening will explore what the program calls "a terrifying empty space."

But in the hands of Stephen Smith, the memories of Pinchas Gutter, while the stuff of nightmares, glow with warmth and humanity.

The evening will feature more or less a conversation between Gutter, a local Holocaust survivor, and Smith, director of the University of Southern California's Shoah Foundation Institute, founded by director Stephen Spielberg.

Between Gutter's tortured memories of death camps and the Warsaw Ghetto, and Smith's sometimes laborious but ultimately rewarding attempts to extract them, the two men, despite being a generation apart – and one Jewish, the other Christian – have formed a deep bond.

"We are going to be exploring Pinchas' journey as a Holocaust survivor," Smith told The CJN in a phone interview from Los Angeles. "The underlying message is that memory is a very deep and traumatic experience with many layers to it and that we haven't even begun yet to really hear what survivors have to tell us about what it means to survive. We've heard many thousands of testimonies, but behind the life histories is also a life."

The two first met about a decade ago in Cape Town, South Africa, where Smith was taking survivors' testimony for the local Holocaust centre. The Christian son of an English Methodist minister, Smith recalled that "something quite profound leapt out at me."

He was struck by the way Gutter described his pre-war boyhood home in Lodz, Poland. Gutter had come from the Gerer chassidic community, and "the way in which he spoke about the community was deeper and it wasn't as stereotyped [as other testimonies]. He talked about the characters and way in which they went about their lives and the kind of life they lived and values that they had.

Pinchas Gutter

Stephen Smith

"It brought the whole community to life. I realized he was back there when he was talking. And he took me into that community in a way that I'd never really experienced before when listening to a Holocaust survivor. Because he was there, I was back there, too. I felt part of the story.

"I could also see he thought very profoundly about what it meant to be a Holocaust survivor. And I thought to myself, 'I'd really like to talk this man again.'"

For the next five years, the two talked, with Smith collecting 40 hours of Gutter's testimony in Toronto, Cape Town and London. They even travelled to Poland together.

"We spent five years journeying back into his memory and to some degree, recovering that memory," said Smith, the founding director of the UK Holocaust Centre in London, Britain's first dedicated Holocaust memorial and education institution.

Gutter was seven years old when the Second World War began. Having fled Lodz, he and his family were incarcerated in the Warsaw Ghetto for 3-1/2 years until April 1943, the time of the famous uprising.

The family was deported to the Majdanek death camp, where his father, mother and twin sister were murdered. Gutter endured other Nazi camps, including Terezin, and a death march. Liberated by the Soviet Red Army in May 1945, he was taken to Britain and South Africa before coming to Canada.

One part of that tale has gripped Smith.

"He came to visit me in England and told me a very moving story in which he described how he and his sister were going into a selection at Majdanek. He went one way, she went the other, and as she went around the corner, there was her long golden braid, and it disappeared. And only half an hour later did he realize what had happened.

"He looked at me and said, 'She was my twin sister and I have no recollection of her except for long golden braid going around the corner. I can't remember her at all. I want you to help me find my sister.'

"What became clear," Smith says, "is that the past haunts him. Many things came out [about how] deeply traumatized he is, even to this very day."

Through that haze of raw emotions, the two also spoke about religion, forgiveness, love and Poland, and they "try and make some sense of it in a way that is open," Smith says.

"Pinchas is willing to unmask himself, and show how notwithstanding all that confusion and emotion and disarray, somehow this man got his life back together and continues.

"He struggles on so many levels with his identity and spirituality. It was amazing to have observed all that, and for him to allow me in."

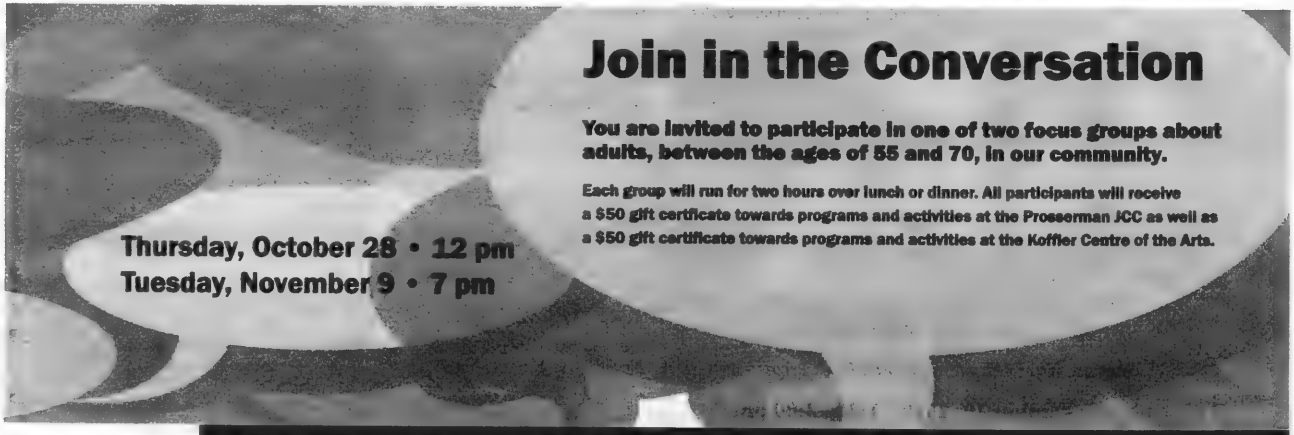
But because memory is fallible, "I don't look for factuality. I look for the person that's telling me their story. With all [their] pitfalls – and there are many – when survivors' testimonies are taken together, there is a lot we can learn from them, because they do corroborate each other and there is an amazing amount of unusual detailed fact in them."

The two are friends now. "We know more about each other than any person in our lives probably," Smith says. He and Gutter are now collaborating on a book on their experience.

Says Smith: "I dared to step into some unknown and difficult territory with him. It's been a really tough journey. And it brought us very close."

The talk will be held at Adath Israel Congregation, 37 Southbourne Ave., at 7.30 p.m.

Watch for more coverage of Holocaust Education Week in these pages and on our website, cjnews.com, in the coming weeks.



Join in the Conversation
You are invited to participate in one of two focus groups about adults, between the ages of 55 and 70, in our community.
Each group will run for two hours over lunch or dinner. All participants will receive a $50 gift certificate towards programs and activities at the Prosserman JCC as well as a $50 gift certificate towards programs and activities at the Koffler Centre of the Arts.
Thursday, October 28 • 12 pm
Tuesday, November 9 • 7 pm

POWERED BY
UJA FEDERATION

Sherman Campus / Prosserman JCC / 4588 Bathurst Street / www.prossermanjcc.com
PRE-REGISTRATION IS REQUIRED. CALL 416-631-5717 BY MONDAY OCTOBER 25.

On Campus

Program aims to train defenders of Israel

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

A new Canada-wide program is aiming to turn university students into leaders and defenders of Israel on campus

The Israel Ambassador Program, established by the Canadian Network for Israel Affairs (CNIA), offers a select group of students leadership training, networking opportunities and conference calls with Israeli politicians and heads of Israeli and Palestinian organizations.

The response to the program, which began this month, has been overwhelmingly positive, said Sammy Katz, managing director of CNIA.

Turning university students into leaders

"[We] got somewhere between 45 and 60 applicants all across Canada," he said. "When we first developed the idea and put it out there, I didn't think we'd get as many applicants."

The deadline to apply was Oct. 4, after which 20 applicants were accepted. There are now 19 students in the program (one declined due to other commitments). The students live all over the country, including in Winnipeg, Vancouver, Victoria, London, Ottawa and Toronto.

When going through the selection process, the organization looked for students who demonstrated passion and were already involved on campus, Katz said.

"What we were looking for was students who we saw had the potential to be leaders on their individual campuses. Individually, it's the sense you get from somebody – whether they were eloquent, what sort of interest they showed, what they've done so far.

"We wanted to get them interested in Israel on campus before their time is taken up by other extracurricular activities… It was really on a case-by-case basis. Somebody who showed involvement was definitely a plus. Someone who showed interest was definitely a plus."

The program accepted a large number of first-year students in order to get them involved on campus sooner.

"The goal of the program is to take students who are emerging as campus leaders or who have the potential to be presidents or vice-presidents, or at least involved, in the next few years which is why we've taken many first-year students. [We want to] give them the tools they need now and give them an opportunity to get involved today," Katz added.

A major part of the program are the conference calls. The most recent one was held Oct. 24 with Ashley Perry, senior adviser in the Ministry of Foreign Affairs in Israel. Each call lasts one hour, with the speaker talking for 15 minutes. The students then get 45 minutes to ask questions.

"To turn students into leaders, you have to be able to let them engage and let them take part in the process, which is going to make them much more interested," Katz said.

Another project in the works is to send the students to at least one high-profile community event per semester. As well, they want to get students both in and outside the Ambassador Program understanding and utilizing social media to defend Israel.

"There are at least 100 new forms of social media that [students] don't know about," Katz said.

To help train students in effectively using social media, CNIA is hosting "Israel and the Social Media War," with Neil Lazarus, at 5 p.m. on Nov. 7 at Shaarei Shomayim Congregation in Toronto.

Something else the program strives for is inclusiveness. It is open to all students, regardless of religion, and this year one non-Jewish student was accepted to the program.

"There's a world… outside the Jewish community who support Israel, but the outlets for them are more minimal than other students… The idea is to include these students as well."

For more information on CNIA or the Israel Ambassador Program, visit www.israelnetwork.ca.

The 6th Annual Senator David A. Croll Memorial Lecture

MIND MATTERS:
Make Your Memory Work for You!

JEWISH FOUNDATION

Featuring Dr. Gordon Winocur, Senior Scientist
Rotman Research Institue at Baycrest

Free Admission, Light Refreshments and Door Prizes

Wednesday November 10, 2010 1:30 - 3:00 pm

Bernard Betel Centre
1003 Steeles Avenue W, Toronto, ON M2R 3T6 | 416.225.2112 x126

renew

your health your beauty your life

WE'VE CREATED A WHOLE NEW FEELING IN OUR STORE. EXPERIENCE THE DIFFERENCE.

- Shoppers Drug Mart® Pharmacy. Your health is our priority.
- Find your beautiful at our beautyBOUTIQUE™
- Quick quality prints at easypix™ Express
- Convenient food aisle for everyday basics
- Our Healthy Living section caters to your overall wellbeing
- Convenient full-service Canada Post Office

Join us for our Opening Celebrations on Saturday, October 30th

Store opens at 9am

- 10 Draws for $50 Shoppers Drug Mart Gift Cards*
- Free Cosmetic Makeover & Skin Analysis

Plus, look for our Grand Opening Specials!

* While quantities last; see store for details.

YORK MILLS CENTRE
2528 Bayview Avenue
416-444-8411
Open Monday-Friday 8am to 10pm
Saturday & Sunday 9am to 10pm

SHOPPERS DRUG MART

A BIG THANK

ISRAEL CHILDREN'S CENTRES

SERVING 13,000 KIDS EVERY WEEK

The Israel Children's Centres [established in 1976 as the Israel Tennis Centers] provide an "oasis" for over 13,000 children every week. The 14 centres across Israel provide programs that promote social, psychological and physical development in a safe and nurturing environment.

EVERY Israeli child has a place within our centres. Arab/Israeli Co-Existence Programs, Immigrant Assimilation Initiatives, and programs for the developmentally/physically - challenged, focus on tolerance and the virtues of teamwork, using the game of tennis as a framework, and as a means of reinforcing the organization's core values.

When you think of giving to Israel, please think of the ICC.

7th Annual York Racquets 2010 Charity ProAm

york RACQUETS CLUB

IN SUPPORT OF THE ISRAEL CHILDREN'S CENTRES

CONGRATULATIONS TO OUR 2010 CHAMPIONS!

ProAm PHOTOS COURTESY OF JACK BEKER

▲ Competitors Larry Tanenbaum and Miles Nadal with Toby Rosner, Executive Director, ICC

◀ Men's 2010 Champ: Michael Kalles with Pro Matthew Baccarani [LEFT]

◀ Women's 2010 Champ: Shari Wilson with Pro Richard Nicolson [RIGHT]

HARVEY KALLES umbra Avanti Simmie Antflick Catering HERZIG EYE INSTITUTE the TRAVEL NETWORK STERLING KARAMAR PROPERTY MANAGEMENT

YOU TO ALL

JULY 6 2010 • 18TH ANNUAL
ANGUS GLEN GOLF CLUB
SmartCentres CHARITY GOLF CLASSIC

Join us next year! Tuesday, July 5, 2011 at Angus Glen

Wendel Clark [L] and Kevin Green [R] at 2010 SmartCentres CHARITY GOLF CLASSIC

PLATINUM SPONSOR

CALLOWAY
REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST

BUILDER SPONSORS

RBC Capital Markets®

CIBC
For what matters.

DIAMOND SPONSORS

VERDIROC DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

THE CARPENTERS' UNION

GREENWIN

GOLD SPONSORS

TD Securities

Scotia Capital

The Sacks Partnership
CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS

PRICEWATERHOUSECOOPERS

CANACCORD Genuity

RUBY SPONSORS

Altus Group Limited
Loblaw Properties Limited
Torkin Manes LLP

SILVER SPONSORS

A & W Food Services of Canada Inc.
Abbarch Architecture (Ontario) Inc.
Ajax Downs
Ardor Investments Limited
Blaney McMurtry LLP
BMO Capital Markets
Canadian Tire Real Estate Limited
Canam Canada
CIMA+
Davies Ward Phillips & Vineberg LLP
Deloitte & Touche LLP
Durabond Products Ltd.
Ellard-Willson Engineering Ltd.
Fowler Construction Company Limited

SILVER SPONSORS

Genivar
Goodmans LLP
Great-West Life
GSP Group Inc.
Manorcore Group Inc.
Oberfeld Snowcap Inc.
Petroff Partnership Architects
Reitmans (Canada) Limited
Retrocom Mid-Market REIT
Shea Nerland Calnan LLP
Solid Electric Inc.
Sterling Tile and Carpet
The Sernas Group Inc.
The Total Contracting Group Inc.
Wood Bull LLP

BRONZE SPONSORS

Aetna Electric Co.
Banerjee & Associates Ltd.

BRONZE SPONSORS

Chandler Associates Architecture Inc.
Devlan Construction Ltd.
Downsview Drywall Contracting
Filion Wakely Thorup Angeletti LLP
Heenan Blaikie LLP
Intelligarde International Inc.
Murray & Company Limited
Northwest Atlantic (Canada) Inc.
Penalta Group Ltd.
Quadrant Capital Partners, Inc.
Rankin Construction Inc.
Rapid Steel Inc.
Redwood Construction Limited
Rosenthal Zaretsky Niman & Co., LLP
Soil Engineers Ltd.
Stendel + Reich, Architects
The TDL Group Corp. (Tim Hortons)
Telus Business Solutions
TACC Construction Ltd.
Young+Wright/IBI Group Architects

INTERNATIONAL CHAIRMAN: Kevin Green
CHAIRMAN, CANADA: Joseph Frieberg
EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR: Toby Rosner

TO DONATE OR FOR MORE INFORMATION
www.israelchildren.ca

ISRAEL CHILDREN'S CENTRES

SERVING 13,000 KIDS EVERY WEEK

1 Valleybrook Drive Suite 201 Toronto Ontario M3B 2S7 PHONE 416.444.5700 www.israelchildren.ca info@israelchildren.ca

ROSH CHODESH: Ulpanat Orot students (and Netivot HaTorah Day School graduates) and their Netivot sisters – from left Shalva and Eliana, Adina and Rivka, and Stephanie and Amanda – took part in a joint Rosh Chodesh celebration at Netivot on Oct. 8.

[Rebecca Ansel photo]

Rabbi advances in heroes campaign

Compiled by CJN Staff

MONTREAL — Rabbi Yisroel Bernath, director of the NDG Chabad and the Jewish chaplain at Concordia University, is the only Canadian to make the semi-finals of the 2010 Jewish Community Heroes campaign, organized by the Jewish Federations of North America (JFNA.)

Rabbi Bernath, 28, finished in 12th place among more than 200 nominees, receiving 7,722 online votes by the time voting closed Oct. 15, after three months.

"I'm shocked and humbled," he said. He was even surprised that he was nominated. "The first time I heard about the campaign is when someone said, 'I voted for you'. I didn't know what they were talking about."

Five finalists will soon be selected from among the 20 semi-finalists by a panel of judges. They will be evaluated on "their efforts to strengthen the Jewish community and uphold the ideals of tikkun olam – repairing the world," according to a JFNA announcement.

The top five will be invited to the JFNA General Assembly Nov. 7-9 in New Orleans, La., where the Jewish Community Hero of the Year will be named and receive $25,000 for his or her nonprofit organization or project. The four runners-up will receive smaller grants.

This is the second year that the JFNA has organized the campaign, which "celebrates the selflessness and courage of those who put others before themselves," especially those who are otherwise unsung.

Anyone could nominate via a special JFNA website anyone in the community, who is a resident of the United States or Canada, 13 years of age or older, and not an employee of the JFNA.

Similarly, anyone could vote online for a nominee. More than 311,000 virtual ballots were cast. (Votes were limited to one per user per hero each day.)

Rabbi Bernath, a native of Chicago, Ill., opened the NDG Chabad in the heart of the fashionable Monkland Village two years ago, and heads the Chabad program at Concordia's Loyola campus.

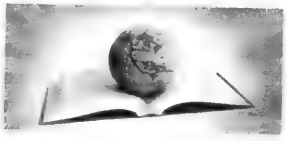
The NDG Chabad, which Rabbi Bernath runs with his wife Sara, has become a centre for young adult educational, community service, and social activities. More than 250 people showed up for its "Sushi in the Sukkah" party last month. He is also quite a matchmaker. "I set up about 25 dates this week [alone.] There's been about 15 marriages in the past two years."

UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, is proud to participate in the upcoming Global Day of Jewish Learning.

This worldwide initiative honours Rabbi Adin Steinsaltz's translation of the Talmud into usable, modern English, and the culmination of nearly five decades of groundbreaking work. Toronto salutes Jewish Learning and the Rabbi's tireless efforts.

The Rabbi's mission is based on the belief that the texts of our heritage belong to us all!

For more information about any of these FREE events, please call the organization listed below.



SUNDAY NOVEMBER 7, 2010

10 am | NCJW House, 4700 Bathurst Street
Eilu V'eilu Rosh Chodesh Silent Tefillah followed by Talmud study with Rabbi Ed Elkin.
For adults. For more information 416.505.9324

10:30-11:30 am | Shaarei-Beth El Congregation of Oakville
Jewish views on Life after Death with Rabbi Stephen Wise.
For adults. For more information visit www.sbe.ca

2:30 pm - 5:00 pm | Miles Nadal JCC
An afternoon of Jewish dialogue and exploration with Rabbi Ed Elkin, Rabbi Elyse Goldstein, Rabbi Michael Stroh, Annie Gilbert, Rhonda Rosenheck, and many more.
For adults. For more information 416.924.6211 x 154 or visit www.milesnadaljcc.ca

3:00 pm | Dufferin Clark Library, 1441 Clark Ave., W, Vaughan
Interactive storytime with PJ Library on the theme of sharing and tzedakah.
For children ages 3-6 with their parents.
For more information 416.621.5675 or visit www.pjlibrary905.ca

3:30 pm | Beth Tzedec Congregation
Test The Jewish Nation. A multi-synagogue, multi-generational Trivia Extravaganza.
All ages. For more information 416.781.3514

4:30 pm | Second Cup Kosher, 441 Clark Avenue
G-d's "Facebook" Page, with Rabbi David Eligberg.
For adults. For more information 416.458.5507

UJA FEDERATION OF GREATER TORONTO
Across the street. Across the globe.

Singles Events

is an advertising feature of The Canadian Jewish News

Deadline:
Wednesday, 4 p.m.,
8 days preceding issue date

For rates or to place an ad, please call 416-391-1836

"SOULMATES" BTH
Personalized Jewish matchmakers.
Matches are made in heaven, we just assist! Register FREE on our confidential website!
www.soulmates.net
905-709-3868

Meet Match Love

Denise Miedzinski 289-597-2060
dmiedzinski@rogers.blackberry.net

Class Acts

REMEMBERING HER SONS: On the 11th day of Cheshvan, the yahrzeit of the matriarch Rachel, students at Netivot HaTorah Day School were reminded how Rachel represents our nation's concern that all her sons, including Gilad Schalit, return home safely. Pictured, from left, are Grade 8 students David, Tamar, Shiraz, Bat-Ami and Raphael. [Rebecca Ansel photo]

WASTE REDUCTION: Houses at Bialik Hebrew Day School, which are named after universities in Israel, kicked off Waste Reduction Week with Smart Board presentations to all house members that reviewed proper waste management. Pictured instructing Hebrew University House are captains and vice-captains, from left, Adam Lechter, Evan Krikler, Rikki Blankenstein (obscured) and Hannah Wulfsohn.

Ask us how to Grow When Markets are Rising, Yet Protect & Still Grow When Falling

Inquire about our Unique Solution for Today's Markets

Allan Newman
H.B.A., LL.B.

Greg Newman
B.Comm., LL.B.

ScotiaMcLeod
The Newman Group
Wealth Advisors
Expect More
416-863-7756 or 800-387-0489

E-mail us to receive a brief e-mail explanation (PDF) or call for a Brochure
greg_newman@scotiamcleod.com

® Registered trademark used under authorization and control of The Bank of Nova Scotia. ScotiaMcLeod is a division of Scotia Capital Inc. Member CIPF

FAMILY MOMENTS

Mazel Tov
The Canadian Jewish news

Mazel Tov
to
JUDY KATZENBERG & JORDAN SILVER
on their recent engagement!

LOVE FROM Your parents,*
Israel and Mila Katzenberg
Sheldon and Carol Silver.
Delighted grandparents,
Alexander and Eva Sokolovsky,
Beverley Levman and Anita Silver.

Mazel tov Alex Bisgould!
You did an amazing job at your bar mitzvah and we're all so proud of you. Love, from the Bisgould and Elgin families.

Mazel tov Rose & Ralph Etigson on your 70th anniversary. Continued good health and happiness. Love, your children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Natalie & Lorne – You're 'over the moon.' We're ecstatic! Mazel tov on your engagement! Love, Brenda & Rick Bornstein and Sandra & Myron Rapkin.

Sharabi/Tobe - Mazel tov, Idan & Sarah of Tel Aviv on the Rosh Hashanah gift, baby girl Yael. Love, Mom, Dad, Ilana, Adam, Josh, Arielle and Jordana.

SEND US YOUR PHOTOS!!
Email your digital photos to cblackman@thecjn.ca or go online to WWW.CJNEWS.COM and click the Family Moments button!

JNF
Say it with Trees
"Yasher Koach — Well Done!"
JEWISH NATIONAL FUND
416-638-7200

What's New

By LAURA STRICKER

Weather: Ft. Lauderdale, Florida
TRAVEL INSURANCE
• Snowbirds
• Visitors to Canada
• Trip Cancellation
25% OFF LIMO VOUCHER TO TORONTO PEARSON AIRPORT WITH PURCHASE
call 416-636-3575
or email alana@travel-secure.com
Travel Secure

Deadline for Nov. 11 is Nov. 1. Deadline for Nov. 18 is Nov. 8. Phone 416-391-1836. Fax 416-391-0829. E-mail cjnwhatsnew@gmail.com.

Thursday, Oct. 28

THE VOLOZHIN YESHIVA

Aaron Nussbaum discusses "The 1892 Closing of the Volozhin Yeshiva." 7:30 p.m. Beth David. 416-633-5500. Free.

JUDY KLITSNER SPEAKS

Judy Klitsner, senior faculty of Pardes Institute and author of Subversive Sequels in the Bible, lectures at Baycrest Terrace. 8 p.m. Minimum donation $18.

Saturday, Oct. 30

SHABBAT SERVICE

Kol Yisroel Congregation Shabbat service at 9:30 a.m. Kiddush follows. No membership fees. Borochov Cultural Centre, 272 Codsell Ave. 416-630-9444.

LUNCH AND LEARN

Beth Tzedec Congregation Little Minyan presents Abraham Israel, founder of Hazon Yeshaya, on volunteers in Israel and growing up in poverty. $10 adults; $5 kids under 13. Children under 5 free. RSVP: Marlene: mlaba@beth-tzedec.org, 416-781-3514, ext. 234.

SOVIET JEWRY

Beth Tikvah Shabbat morning service includes speaker Moshe Ronen. Panel of Soviet Jewry activists follows.

Sunday, Oct. 31

GIFT SHOW

Shaarei Shomayim, 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Limited vendor spots available. 416-789-5552.

Monday, Nov. 1

LECTURE SERIES

Temple Emanu-El's lecture series. "Madness, White Nights and a Swamp: The Making of St. Petersburg," with Julia Zarankin, assistant professor of Russian at U of T. 2-4 p.m. $10. 416-449-3880.

STOLEN ART

Beth Tzedec Chaverim presents Bonnie Czegledi, international art and cultural-property lawyer and author, speaking about stolen art in a Jewish context. 1:30 p.m. $3.

Tuesday, Nov. 2

LUNCH & LEARN

Gerald Ziedenberg, historian and chair of Beth Tikvah's adult education committee, on "The Nobel Prize and the Jews." 12:15 p.m. Reserve: 416-221-3433.

'FOCUS ON ART'

Doug Purdon on "Focus on Art: The Wyeths." 1:30 p.m. Council House, 4700 Bathurst St. $10.

CELLPHONE REVOLUTION

"The Connected Future," with Gemini Waghmare. 7 p.m. $15 advance, $20 at the door. Lipa Green Building. RSVP: 416-635-2883 ext. 5244.

Wednesday, Nov. 3

CONTEMPORARY FICTION

Nancy-Gay Rotstein discusses her novel Shattering Glass at Beth Tzedec library. 7:30 p.m. Dessert reception follows. $10. Register: 416-781-3514, ext. 225.

Other News

HOLOCAUST EDUCATION WEEK PROGRAMS

Temple Har Zion: Karen Lasky, Toronto Genealogy Society, discusses her trip to Poland in search of her family's roots. Bernice Eisenstein, author of I Was a Child of Holocaust Survivors, shares her story. A survivor and her children born in displaced persons camps also speaks. Nov. 2.

Continued on page 33

THE FINEST IN RETIREMENT LIVING

FROM THE AWARD-WINNING TEAM AT DIVERSICARE
Comes a community where extraordinary luxury, comfort and security are just an ordinary part of everyday living.
WELCOME TO FOUR ELMS RETIREMENT RESIDENCE

- Elegantly appointed studio, one & two bedroom suites with weekly housekeeping
- Three meals daily including snacks
- Professional staff and 24 hr Emergency Response
- Stylish amenity spaces including a Library, Media Room, Computer Lounge, Wellness Centre and Fitness room
- Brain Gym® & More – A multi-sensory Brain Stimulation Program exclusive to Diversicare
- Secure Assisted Living Floor

Call today for more information or to reserve your suite
905-738-0905
1500 Steeles Ave. West, Thornhill, ON L4J 4H6
FOUR ELMS RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
Diversicare

Reena FOUNDATION
WOMEN OF Strength SPEAKER'S SERIES

Please join us to hear Emmy® award-winning talk show host of "The View" comedienne and actress

Sherri Shepherd

Committee

Danielle Goose, Co-Chair
Heather Goose, Co-Chair
Mary Bien
Melissa Bien
Jasmine Eliav
Vera Eliav
Marsha Fenwick
Rachel Greenspoon
Barbara Henechowicz
Susan Klein
Malka Rosenbaum
Shelley Rable
Kathy Samuel
Sheri Schwartzberg
Julie Steiner
Brenda Weshler

Friday November 12, 2010
Spirale Banquet Hall,
888 Don Mills Road, Toronto
Breakfast 9:15 am, Speaker 10:30 am SHARP

Tickets $75 per person. To order contact Jessica Kassabian 905-764-1081 x 34

What's New

Continued from page 32

Bring lunch at noon; presentation at 12:30 p.m. Members $3, guests $5. "Who Will Teach Them After Me?" with John Berrys and Yael Cohen. Nov. 4, 7:30 p.m. 905-889-2252.

Beth Sholom: Deborah Lipstadt on "Confronting Holocaust Denial When There Is No One Left to Say, 'I was there.'" Nov. 6, 8 p.m. 416-783-6103.

Oraynu Congregation for Humanistic Judaism: Screening of The World Was Ours: Pre-Holocaust Jewish Vilna in Film and Poetry, followed by a poetry reading by CJN columnist Gerry Kane. Nov. 8, 7:30 p.m. 18 Wynford Dr. RSVP: Roby, 416-385-3910.

Beth David: Slide-show presentation and lecture by Ian Leventhal: "Art as Witness." Artistic works by Jews and non-Jews portraying their reactions to the Holocaust. Nov. 4, 7:30 p.m. Free.

Adath Israel: Nov. 1, 7:30 p.m. "The Void: In Search of Memory Lost," with Steven Smith. Holocaust education advocate, and Pinchas Gutter, survivor, sharing how Smith was able to elicit Gutter's Holocaust memories he had suppressed.

Beth Tzedec: Nov. 1-9, Treasures That Survived. Rare Judaica objects highlighting the richness of Jewish life in Europe before the Holocaust.

Grace Church on the Hill: Nov. 3, 8 p.m. "Keeping the Music Alive: A Choral Tribute." Benjamin Maissner directs and performs musical selections from Jewish communities and composers across Europe. 300 Lonsdale Rd.

Shaar Shalom: Nov. 3, 8 p.m. "Preserving the Message When There Are No More Eyewitnesses." With Elly Gotz, survivor; Sara Horowitz and Robert Jan Van Pelt.

LUNCH ON THE WEB

Rabbi Eleanor Steinman discusses how Jewish tradition impacts food choices. Looking at a variety of sources to consider as part of one's personal food ethic. Nov. 3, 10 and 17. Log on at 12 p.m. or call in to participate. 416-487-3281 or education@templesinai.net.

FUN NIGHT OUT

Hospice Thornhill is having a cocktail reception, casino and silent auction preview, Nov. 4 at 6 p.m. Dinner and show 7 p.m. $90. Paradise Banquet and Convention Centre. Joy: 905-764-0656 ext. 224.

JUDAICA BOOKS

The Art of Writing with many Pens... Holy Works consists of 21 display cubes housing Judaica books dating back to the 1450s. At Adath Israel for the next 12 months.

SATELLITE AT SINAI

Temple Sinai's interactive session with Alan Dershowitz and Bret Stephens. Nov. 4. Doors 7:30 p.m., program at 8. Members $10, guests $15 at the door. 416-487-3281.

BEETHOVEN CONCERT

Pianist Stewart Goodyear performs in an all-Beethoven program. Nov. 28, 3 p.m. Royal Conservatory of Music. $40, includes transportation from Temple Sinai. 416-487-3281.

TOT SHABBAT

Junior Congregation and Tot Shabbat with Pride of Israel. Nov. 6, 10 a.m. A real service with songs and a parashah play.

VENDORS WANTED

Shaar Shalom Religious School's second annual Chanukah Boutique. Nov. 21, 9:30-2 p.m. Shaar Shalom. Early-bird rate for vendors to Oct. 31. 905-889-4975, schoolfundraiser@shaarshalom.ca.

JF&CS GROUPS

Call Shawna Sidney, 416-638-7800, ext. 6215, or visit jfandcs.com. Registration required.

Widow/widowers 65+ bereavement: For those who have recently lost a partner or spouse. Nov. 2, 1-2:30 p.m. at 4600 Bathurst St.

Successful Step-parenting: 6 sessions for couples living in blended families. Nov. 3, 7:30-9 p.m. Promenade Mall, Suite 313.

Living with Teens: 6 sessions for parents with teenagers on how to parent them without losing your cool. Nov. 3, 7:30 p.m. Lipa Green

One Family, Two Homes: 6 sessions for families experiencing separation and divorce. Kids participate in age-appropriate groups. Nov. 4, 6:30-8 p.m. Promenade, Suite 313

FOR SENIORS

Active Seniors Miles Nadal JCC, 416-924-6211 ext. 155. Oct. 28, 1:30 pm. "Jewish Canada: Immigrant Toronto, Portrait of a Jewish Past," with Prof. Harold Troper. Refreshments, $3.

Connecting the Generations. Meet a student and enjoy a catered lunch. Share in a Jewish heritage visit at the ROM.

Complimentary computer workshop, Nov. 18. Call to pre-register.

Adath Israel Congregation. Wednesday social afternoons. Bridge, mah-jong, Rummikub, refreshments. $2. All welcome. Pearl, 416-635-6317, or Marcia, 416-932-1229.

Earl Bales Seniors Club in the Park, 416-395-7881. Casino Rama Nov. 17, departs 10 a.m. Hairdresser/barber every other Thursday, 9-11 a.m. Line dancing Thursdays, 10-11:30 a.m. Social bridge Thursdays, 12:30-3 p.m. Canasta Tuesdays and Thursdays, 12-3 p.m. Do you needlepoint, crochet, etc.? Share your crafts, please call. Tuesdays, 10-11:30 a.m. Seniors woodworking: skilled craftsmen, 416-630-6487.

Bernard Betel Centre, 1003 Steeles Ave. W., 416-225-2112.

Advanced computer classes, Tuesdays, to Dec. 14. 9-11 a.m. $60 members, $90 non-members. Dianne, ext. 128.

Lecture: "Famous Jewish Trials - Alfred Dreyfus." With Gerald Ziedenberg. Nov. 2, 10-11:30 a.m. $3 members, $6 non-members.

30-minute lesson on your own equipment, i.e. camera, cellphone. Fridays, to Dec. 17. 10 a.m.-12 p.m. By appointment. Ext. 128.

PROSSERMAN JCC

Sherman Campus, 4588 Bathurst St. 416-638-1881, www.prossermanjcc.com.

Mastering Knife Skills for adults. Are you uncertain as to which knife to use for which food application? Chop your way through a delicious recipe. Nov 1, 1:30 p.m. Members $20 guests $35.

"A Year in Israel: Reflections of an Outsider from the Inside." Rabbi Elyse Goldstein lived with her family in Jerusalem Aug. 2009-Aug. 2010. Presentation explores the relationship of Diaspora Jews to Israel, including perspectives on religious pluralism, women of the Wall, Arab-Israeli conflicts and Israeli politics. Nov. 2, 8-9:30 p.m. Free, no registration necessary.

Daycare and preschool open house 9:30-11:30 a.m Oct. 29. Ext. 4351.

Register for beginner bridge. Wednesdays, Nov. 3-Dec. 22. 10 a.m.-12 p.m. $45 members, $60 guests.

MILES NADAL JCC

750 Spadina Ave., 416-924-6211, www. mnjcc.org.

Michael Bernstein Chapel services Sundays 8 a.m. and Thursdays 7:15 a.m. Kosher breakfast follows. Coleman Bernstein, 416-968-0200.

World Music for the armchair traveller. Thursdays, 7-8:30 p.m. Oct. 28-Nov. 18. Register for series, drop in for $18. Ext. 0, music@mnjcc.org.

Harold Green Theatre presents Lenin's Embalmers. Oct. 30-Nov. 21. 2 and 8 p.m. Al Green Theatre. $49-$76. (416) 366-7723 for tickets.

The Cinema of Israel: film critic Shlomo Schwartzberg leads discussions with film clips. Nov. 1, religious films: Kadosh, Va, vis et deveins Ushpizin and more. 7-9 p.m. $12. Ext. 606.

Four Seasons Lodge – documentary follows Holocaust survivors on what might be their last summer together in the Catskill Mountains. With Shirley Kumove. Nov. 7, 4 and 7:30 p.m. Al Green Theatre. $15, $10 ages 18-29 (7:30 screening only). film@mnjcc.org.

Toronto Jewish Film Society renewal subscriptions for 2011. Deadline for members is Nov. 9. Membership: joellem@mnjcc.org. Film: esthera@mnjcc.org.

Global Day of Jewish Learning, Nov. 7, 2:30-5 p.m. With Rabbis Ed Elkin and Michael Stroh, Annie Gilbert and Rhonda Rosenheck. $10 suggested. Ext. 154.

Nov. 7, 11 a.m. "Tales of the Shoah," with Eli Rubinstein. Free. sharonis@mnjcc.org.

Renee Barda: Life Begins Again! With Dorothy Krizmanic, Gideon Wilk and John Lettieri. Dec. 11, 7:30 p.m. Al Green Theatre. $22, $18 group. Ext. 0.

What's New is now online, for subscribers only. You can find it at cjnews.com

NA'AMAT TORONTO BOOK LAUNCH: Na'amat Toronto held a breakfast program at the Borochov Cultural Centre with Judie Oron to launch her book Cry of the Giraffe, based on a true story about Wuditu, an Ethiopian "Beta Israel" Jewish girl, and her terrifying and perilous journey to reunite with her family in Israel. From left are Oron and Wuditu. [Mollie Rothman photo]

SINGLES EVENTS CAN BE FOUND ON PAGE 30

OBITUARIES
and Related Notices

BENJAMIN'S PARK MEMORIAL CHAPEL

Cecile Feldman	Oct 10/10	129 Almore Ave
Bronka Krygier	Oct 8/10	1101 Steeles Ave W
Leon Krym	Oct 10/10	333 Clark Ave W
Gertrude Greenspoon	Oct 9/10	55 Skymark Drive
Irena Goldfinger	Oct 9/10	866 Sheppard Ave
Earl Worth	Oct 10/10	28 William Carson
Charles Feldman	Oct 11/10	330 Spadina Rd
Zofia Pakula	Oct 10/10	66 Munro Bl
Rosa Barnes	Oct 12/10	3560 Bathurst St
Jean Anshan	Oct 15/10	2200 Avenue Rd
Ronald Groll	Oct 14/10	47 St. Clair Ave W
Saul Stockhamer	Oct 17/10	29 Miranda Crt
Sandy Wall	Oct 15/10	5 Old Sheppard Ave

Steeles Memorial Chapel

Orzech, Lloyd Daryl	Oct. 5/10	267 St. George St
Pruskin, Anthony	Oct. 6/10	1131 Steeles Ave. W
Levin, Mordchai Matka	Oct. 7/10
Gordon, Mary	Oct. 7/10
Bayer, Anatoly	Oct. 8/10
Wardinger, Albert	Oct. 9/10	21 Fallingdale Cres
Michaelev, Michael	Oct. 9/10	Private

We would like to express our gratitude and appreciation to all our family and friends who have been so supportive and generous during the difficult loss of our beloved

ELIZABETH SHABES ז"ל

She will be in our hearts forever.

Jeff, Melissa, David and the entire Shabes family

SHIVA MEALS • BRIT MILAH • HOME • OFFICE
SHORT NOTICE & SAME DAY SERVICE • DELIVERY AVAILABLE
416-789-7651
3457 BATHURST ST.
www.milknhoney.ca
milk 'n honey
THE DAIRY RESTAURANT

ALEF'S FAIRLAWN MONUMENTS
NOW TOGETHER TO SERVE OUR JEWISH COMMUNITY
Two trusted names, Alef Monuments and Fairlawn Monuments are now merging to better meet our customers' needs. Come and visit our new showroom.
Alef's Fairlawn Monuments
3331 Bathurst St. (at Fairlawn)
416-784-5268
QUALITY MONUMENTS... FACTORY PRICES

Obituary

Journalist was IDF commander in south Lebanon

By MYRON LOVE
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — Yoram Hamizrachi was one of the most colourful characters to have ever made his home in Winnipeg's Jewish community.

Hamizrachi, who anglicized his name to "East," died on Oct. 13, at the age of 68, of complications from diabetes. He was, by turn, a journalist and author, soldier and counter-terrorism expert, lecturer and community activist, restaurateur, artist and fortune teller. And, in stereotypical Israeli style, he was blunt and direct with his views, letting the chips fall where they may.

Yoram Hamizrachi

Hamizrachi was born in Jerusalem. On his father's side, he was a seventh-generation Jerusalemite. At age 17, he joined the Israeli Defence Force and became a paratrooper After his army duty, he studied at the Bezalel Fine Arts School in Jerusalem and then continued his studies in Wiesbaden, Germany. In 1967, as a reservist, he fought in the battle for Jerusalem, and immediately thereafter returned to civilian life.

He worked for many years as a radio and TV journalist for Israeli and foreign media in Israel and abroad. During the Yom Kippur War of 1973, Hamizrachi covered the war for German TV.

In the late 1970s, he rejoined the army as a colonel for what was supposed to be a year to work with the Lebanese Christians on the other side of the border. He stayed for several years and became the first Israeli officer to work with the South Lebanon Army. After that, he returned to journalism and, in the spring of 1982, he immigrated with his young family to Winnipeg. He had several relatives on his mother's side of the family living here.

In Winnipeg, Hamizrachi continued to serve as a correspondent for Israeli media. He also began writing a regular column in the Jewish Post and News, commenting on political developments in Israel. To say that his column was not well received is a bit of an understatement. He was highly critical of the then-Likud government that was led by Menachem Begin. He was also an early advocate for a "two-state" solution for the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

In Winnipeg, he quickly became involved in community work, becoming the co-ordinator of the International Centre's multicultural committee. As such, he uncovered a scandal involving forged signatures on application documents for the funding for his position. He pursued the matter through the courts to a successful conclusion.

He subsequently helped found the Manitoba Intercultural Alliance and became the co-director of the Winnipeg-based Counter-Terrorism Centre.

The problem with being a community activist is that it doesn't pay the bills. In the late 1980s, Hamizrachi's wife, Beate, went to work as a school principal in a couple of native communities in northern Manitoba. Hamizrachi went with her.

While in the north, he and his wife separated. He returned to Winnipeg and eventually married again. In recent years, until his health began to decline, he was involved in a variety of ventures, ranging from running a restaurant (where he would tell fortunes using a deck of cards he created that combined elements of tarot and Kabbalah), to lecturing on world affairs at local universities and synagogues, churches, temples and mosques. Later in life, he also resumed painting.

He is survived by his wife, Carol Merhav, two sons, Ron and Dan, daughter Tahl and five grandchildren.

Holocaust aftermath drove Spector to community service

By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — Norman Spector, who was one of the most visible leaders of the Montreal Jewish community in the 1970s and '80s, died Oct. 20 at age 84.

Spector, an executive in the retail heating-oil business for many years, was the 1975 general chair of the Combined Jewish Appeal and held the top leadership positions in the State of Israel Bonds organization.

In addition to his business and community endeavours, Spector was a pioneer in energy conservation and an inventor, including of an electric car and a garbage-burning furnace.

Two pivotal events in his life motivated him to devote himself to the welfare of Jews here and in Israel.

As a soldier in the U.S. Army during World War II, he witnessed the atrocities of the Holocaust. The New York-born Spector enlisted in 1945 and was sent to Germany with the U.S. occupation forces. He was shocked by what he saw at the concentration camps and took part in the relief effort for the survivors and other refugees.

Another turning point was participating in a mission to Israel in 1968, led by Allan Bronfman, which opened his eyes to what the state meant to the future of the Jewish people.

Spector moved to Montreal with his family at the age of four, grew up in the Jewish district around The Main, and attended Baron Byng High School.

From an early age, he worked alongside his father in his coal-delivery business.

Although never a large man, young Norman daily hauled 100-pound bags to customers, often up the winding staircases typical of older parts of the city.

It was hard, dirty work over long hours, and friend Joe King says Spector never forgot his roots or the people who were good to him before he became a wealthy, prominent person.

"Of course, he would always be covered in black coal dust, and no restaurant would let him in," said King. "But there was one waitress who would serve him from the kitchen back door. Years later, she worked at the Brown Derby and Norm [who held countless meetings at the restaurant] would give her generous tips and all kinds of gifts, including a fridge.

Spector is survived by his wife, Selma, their children, Ivan, Charles and Lisa, and their families.

Wiesel slams Chinese over Xiabo's treatment

Nobel Peace Prize winner remains in prison

By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — Elie Wiesel severely criticized the Chinese government for the imprisonment of dissident Liu Xiaobo, who was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize this month.

"I think the Chinese are crazy. They are a great country, I really respect the people, but why do they do that?... Liu should be immediately released and declared a national hero. Imagine the reaction of the world," Wiesel said during a lecture at Concordia University on Oct. 19.

Wiesel, who won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1986, spoke in the main auditorium of Concordia's downtown campus at the invitation of the Concordia Student Union (CSU). It was the same room where current Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu was scheduled to speak eight years ago before the event was cancelled because of a massive and violent demonstration.

CSU leaders at the time were among the opponents of the then-former Israeli leader's presence on campus.

By contrast, Wiesel drew a near-capacity audience in the 650-seat hall, mostly students, and was given a respectful reception during his 45-minute lecture, including three standing ovations.

No reference was made in the opening remarks by CSU president Heather Lucas or Adrien Severyns, vice-president for external relations, to the 2002 episode. Wiesel himself hailed Concordia as "a great school."

Answering selected written questions, Wiesel, 82, said he plans to organize some kind of protest on behalf of Liu, for whose safety he fears. "People all over the world should not rest until he is free," Wiesel said, which brought the audience to its feet.

Elie Wiesel signs a copy of his memoir Night for a student at Concordia University.

Liu was sentenced to 11 years last December after co-authoring a petition calling for political reform and respect for human rights in China.

Wiesel also defended the cause of Tibetan autonomy led by the Dalai Lama, whom he considers a close friend.

"The Dalai Lama has said he does not want political independence, but only cultural and religious autonomy. What does [Beijing] care for a small, God-forsaken province? [If it extended autonomy], China would have the respect of the world," Wiesel said.

Wiesel's only comment about the Middle East was that Israelis and Palestinians should meet face-to-face to talk peace.

"When two human beings meet, something happens," he said.

Wiesel believes, "like everyone in Israel, even Sharon," in a two-state solution.

"I think all the problems can be solved, including the borders and even Jerusalem, if they start with the small problems first. There's already a lot of co-operation, economic co-operation, even co-operation on security," he said.

Without referring to the Middle East, Wiesel said in his formal remarks: "I believe it is incumbent upon everybody to choose between the deadly war of adults and children growing up without fear, whoever those children are. When a child falls, we should run to him and not check his pockets for identification, just bring him to a hospital."

And also, "I have difficulty living in a world where my hope is someone else's despair."

While Wiesel's appearance was without incident, the campus group Solidarity for Palestinian Human Rights issued a statement prior to his visit describing his views as "anti-Palestinian" and the event "partisan." The student newspaper, The Link, reported that Wiesel had called the CSU "anti-Semitic" at the time of the Netanyahu debacle, without citing a source.

Wiesel's lecture was only widely publicized less than a week beforehand.

He was invited in the context of the CSU's first ever Peace Week. While free, attendance was by registration, and student identifications were carefully scrutinized before anyone was allowed into the auditorium and security was visible.

Most of Wiesel's lecture was on the importance of memory and the danger of indifference.

He reflected on what he has tried to accomplish since the Holocaust.

If he had not devoted his life to teaching and writing, Wiesel thinks he would have been an orchestra conductor.

On the growing body of Holocaust-themed literature, Wiesel thinks that this is not a subject for fiction. "If a novel is about Auschwitz, it is either not a novel, or not about Auschwitz."

He reiterated that he does not hold post-war Germans responsible for the Holocaust. "I never believed in collective guilt, whatever the situation or conflict, or in collective innocence. Only the [perpetrator] can be judged," he said.

Young Germans should not feel guilty, he said. "We tell them they are victims, too, of their grandparents or the regime."

Wiesel stayed on to sign his books for a long line of students.

At a reception afterward sponsored by David Azrieli, also a Holocaust survivor, Concordia president Judith Woodsworth spoke about what Wiesel means to her personally and, more particularly, to her late father.

Her family had been affected by the Holocaust and her father, whom she described as "a very modest man with a limited education," admired Wiesel as a "landsman."

When Wiesel won the Nobel, he tracked down Wiesel's address at Boston University and wrote him a congratulatory letter. "You replied and he was very touched, and I still have that letter," she said.

After Wiesel published A Jew Today, her father, who was ill, wrote, "My God, let Elie Wiesel live long and be well." He passed away two months later in 1990.

Woodsworth gave Wiesel a copy of his letter to her father and of her father's notes on A Jew Today, as a thank-you gift.

"My father would have been so proud that I was standing with you here today," she said.

Alexis Wronzberg undergoes treatment

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Alexis Wronzberg – the 27-year-old with acute lymphoblastic leukemia who is getting potentially life-saving treatment at Tel Aviv's Ichilov Hospital – received a bone marrow and stem cell transplant from her mother Debra last week.

The haploidentical transplant followed six days of chemotherapy aimed at reducing the level of the disease, which recurred for the second time Sept. 28.

The $300,000 cost of the treatment was raised through an urgent fundraising campaign by family and friends, and doctors at Toronto's Princess Margaret Hospital provided the treatment necessary for her to fly to Israel.

Alexis Wronzberg

Alexis is expected to have to remain in Israel for a total of three months.

"All is moving along," her father Rick told The CJN in an e-mail from Israel, where he joined his wife and daughter last week. "Next is waiting for engraftment over next few weeks and avoid infections."

Coast to Coast

Manitoba and Israel have 'sister' marshes

By RHONDA SPIVAK
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — A recent agreement will link environmental experts who work to preserve Israel's Hula Valley in the Upper Galilee with their counterparts in Manitoba, who are responsible for the Oak Hammock Marsh.

Manitoba entered into the partnership agreement with the Jewish National Fund (JNF) on Oct. 18.

"Thanks to strong partners such as the Jewish National Fund and Ducks Unlimited, we have reached a 'sister' marshes agreement that will allow both countries to share their expertise on protecting precious wetlands," said Manitoba's minister of water stewardship, Christine Melnick, in a statement.

Melnick and Efi Stenzler, world chairman of JNF-Keren Kayemet LeYisrael (KKL), signed the agreement at the Hula Valley Nature Reserve.

In addition to sharing expertise on wetland science, the agreement will promote environmental stewardship and ecotourism, and provide the opportunity for the development of educational materials.

In a telephone interview, Erez Rotem, JNF emissary for Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, told The CJN that to kick off the partnership, JNF is "looking into inviting staff personnel from Oak Hammock Marsh to Israel in the winter and then Israelis from Hula Valley will visit Oak Hammock Marsh during the summer."

Rotem said that wetlands are important to both jurisdictions as they "act as a filter for lakes, and remove phosphates and improve the water we drink and air we breathe."

Mel Lazareck, president of the JNF, Prairie region, said that after the signing ceremony in the Hula Valley, the group

Christine Melnick, Manitoba's minister of water stewardship and Efi Stenzler, the world chairman of the Jewish National Fund-Keren Kayemet LeYisrael

"got a tour of the site and saw all of the pelicans and cranes in the Hula. It was fabulous."

Israel's Hula Valley was once an important resting and "refuelling" place for migrating birds on their annual trip from Europe to Africa and back. Shortly after the establishment of the state, the Hula swamp and lake was drained to turn it into arable land. However, a lake was kept as a nature reserve.

Tens of thousands of birds of over 200 species, including cranes, storks, pelicans, cormorants and egrets, stay in the reserve, knowing they can find an abundance of food. The reserve is also the home of some rare aquatic plants.

Manitoba's Oak Hammock Marsh is an important staging area for hundreds of birds that stop and feed there, building up fat reserves before continuing on their journey. Approximately 90 per cent of the birds found at the marsh migrate south, anywhere from the southern United States to the south tip of South America.

Melnick, who has been to Israel five times, was instrumental in bringing about the first-ever Manitoba-Israel Water Symposium hosted by Manitoba in August 2008 and the second Manitoba-Israel Water Symposium hosted by JNF-KKL in January 2010. During those symposiums, attendees from Manitoba and Israel learned that they had a common interest in preserving and protecting wetlands.

The new partnership agreement for wetlands comes on the heels of an agreement relating to birding, bird migration and ecotourism that was signed several days earlier, between Manitoba and the Society for the Protection of Nature in Israel.

Images obtained from Holocaust museum

Continued from page 6

The images Adbusters employed were obtained from the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, D.C. They were provided about 1-1/2 years ago for another story and were intended for one-time use.

"Our lawyer has sent a desist notification demanding the magazine remove the images from their website," said museum spokesperson Andy Hollinger.

He said comparing the Warsaw Ghetto to Gaza is a "wildly inaccurate misrepresentation of the facts and offensive to victims of the Holocaust.

"We never would have provided the images if we knew they would have been used in this fashion," he said.

Shimon Fogel, CEO of the Canada-Israel Committee, said the European Union "has put into place criteria that confirm that this kind of comparison amounts to explicit anti-Semitism."

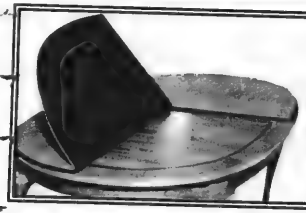
[The European Union Agency for Fundamental Rights defines anti-Semitism, in part, as "Drawing comparisons of contemporary Israeli policy to that of the Nazis."]

"Adbusters is an anti-establishment magazine, and in the case of Israel and Jews, in 2004 came out with an article that U.S. intervention in Iraq was at the behest of a Jewish cabal in Washington and set out who is Jewish," Fogel said.

"There is a pattern of hostility to Israel and Jews, in the magazine, so we should understand where it's coming from."

Congress and Honest Reporting Canada are asking supporters to avoid purchasing the magazine and to inform store owners where the publication is carried that the content is offensive, Farber stated.

Adbusters did not respond to a request for comment.



FREE Leaf Bag with order
Protect Your Table
Made-To-Measure Table Pads
Prevents scratches, burns & spills
Free in-home service • Factory Direct Pricing
DOVER PAD
QUALITY SINCE 1950
Now available in Calgary
Montreal: (514) 420-6030
Canada: (800) 354-4445
www.doverpad.ca
*Select model pads are exempt from this special given their already low, low pricing!
20%* Off!
CHANUKAH EXTRAVAGANZA
Sale ends November 2nd

Coast to Coast

Free Thinking Film Festival planned for Ottawa

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

A few years ago, Fred Litwin was eager to see a documentary by an American filmmaker that took to task Academy Award-winner Michael Moore. Coming out shortly after Moore's Fahrenheit 9 11, Fahrenhype 9 11: Michael Moore Hates America intrigued Litwin, but when he approached a local theatre about bringing it in, he was turned down flat.

Fred Litwin

In fact, he noticed that few documentaries from a conservative perspective were being screened in his hometown, Ottawa.

"It hit me that to see the films I wanted to see I'd have to bring them in myself," Litwin said.

He did just that in January 2007. Almost 200 people turned up to see Obsession, Radical Islam's War Against the West. Soon afterward he created the Free Thinking Film Society

From Nov. 12 to 14, the society will host its first annual Free Thinking Film Festival at Library and Archives Canada in Ottawa. The festival opens with Kalifornistan, a satiric exploration of a terrorist plotter, and concludes with The Stoning of Soraya M, the story of an Iranian woman falsely accused of adultery who was put to death.

Altogether, 19 films will be shown, including Reclaiming Pride, a film by Toronto lawyer and gay activist Martin Gladstone about the anti-Israel controversy surrounding the 2009 Toronto Pride Parade; Crossing the Line: The Intifada Comes to Campus; Katyn, the story of the mass murder of Polish officers by Soviet forces during World War II; The Cartel, an exploration of the U.S. educational system; Decryptage, a look at the way the media portrays the Arab/Israeli conflict; Atomic Jihad, about the Iranian pursuit of nuclear weapons; The Battle Over Durban II and Conflict: The Power of Propaganda, a look at media bias against Israel.

Other films address the environmental movement and profile one-time presidential candidate Barry Goldwater, as well as one that documents the current financial meltdown. Speakers and panel discussions are also on the agenda, highlighted by a debate between Conservative commentator Ezra Levant, author of Ethical Oil: The Case for Canada's Oilsands, and Elizabeth May, leader of the Green Party. Also on tap is a lecture by French media analyst Philippe Karsenty, who exposed "the Mohammed al-Dura fraud," in which Isareli soldiers were falsely accused of killing an unarmed Palestinian teenager at the onset of the intifadah.

Litwin believes there is a large market for films of a conservative or libertarian slant, but it's a demand that local cinemas seem to be ignoring. Worst, they seem to be intimidated by naysayers who want to see some of the films barred. Two weeks before Obsession was slated to be run at an Ottawa movie house, "an ex-professor at Carleton University sent a letter to the theatre saying the film maligns Muslims. They cancelled," Litwin said.

Since Obsession ran, Litwin has brought in films every two or three months, with 200 to 300 spectators attending on average. "I've shown a lot of stuff of interest to the Jewish community," he said, pointing to The Case for Israel: Democracy's Outpost, with Alan Dershowitz, as well as speakers Bruce Bawer, author of Surrender: Appeasing Islam, Sacrificing Freedom and Bat Ye'or, an Egyptian-Jewish author who writes about minorities in Middle Eastern countries.

"We've always done a lot of stuff in support of the Jewish community and Israel," said Litwin, who is Jewish. "Last year, we said, why not do a film festival?"

Many of the films are an antidote to the one-sided sort of documentaries that are often screened, he continued. "Theatres don't bring in many documentaries to begin with, and by and large, there's a ton of great documentaries people will never see unless I bring them in. You don't see the mainstream films about radical Islam. People on the left do not want to rock the boat," he said, attributing that in part to "fear, cowardice."

Being gay, he continued, "is one of the main reasons I worry about radical Islam.

"There are a lot of gay activists on the left and a lot of gay media on the left. You don't hear the voices of gay activists who are conservative."

"I'm a conservative. I'm not a social conservative, but a fiscal conservative. I'm an anti-fascist, and I see a major problem out there being radical Islam and the delegitimization of Israel. A lot of it is being driven by the postmodern left which has made common cause with radical Islam."

Tackling "irrational leftism is an important part of what we do. I want to take on political correctness, irrational leftism and be anti-fascist," Litwin said.

Visit www.freethinkingfilmfest.ca for more information.

aish

Aish Toronto & Aish Jerusalem
Gala Dinner

RAISING Leaders

Inspiring & Impacting the Jewish World

A Tribute to the Canadian Parents of Current Aish Rabbis & Leaders

TUESDAY
NOVEMBER 9, 2010

Beth Avraham Yoseph of Toronto, Thornhill

Guest Speaker
Charles Krauthammer
Pulitzer Prize Winner
Washington Post Columnist
Fox News Commentator

with
David Shore
Creator & Executive Producer of "House"

Honorees
Dr. Harvey & Mrs. Myrtle Coopersmith
Mr. Ami & Mrs. Renee Farkas
Mr. Frank & Mrs. Lyla Schwartz
Mr. Marvin & Mrs. Cecile Shore
Mr. Joel & Mrs. Phyllis Zelcer
Mr. Bernie & Mrs. Mary Fran Zeldman
Mr. Alan & Mrs. Michelle Zelunka

For more information and/or to purchase dinner tickets
905-764-9340 | aishleaderdinner@gmail.com

PAYLESS TRAVEL
and Cruises
Israel Specialist, Professional Agents, Superior Service

Israel Culinary Tour:
Led by Rabbi Elyse Goldstein & Bonnie Stern
Feb. 7-14, 2011
Call Michelle 416-922-0116 ext. 1

Pathway of our Biblical & Cultural Heritage
Rome & Israel with Channa Sargon
May 22 - June 5, 2011

Jewish Heritage Tour - CHINA
May 9 - 24, 2011
Call Miki at 416-840-0855/1-877-840-0855 ext. 222

EL AL Economy
Oct 21 - Dec 14, Dec 25 - Mar 31, 2011 $625.00 + tax

ISRAEL WEEKLY GUARANTEED DEPARTURE TOURS
VISIT OUR WEBSITE - goisraeltravel.com

Downtown Office– 416-922-0116 Michal ext. 1
Toll-Free 1-866-344-6342 – 1027 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON
Promenade Office – 905-770-3300 – Sima ext. 225
Toll-Free 1-888-900-4747
7700 Bathurst Street & Centre, Thornhill, ON

Coast to Coast

TEACHING GARDEN: Junior kindergarten students at the Toronto Heschel School peer into a hole that was dug in the school's teaching garden. The students learned about worm habitats and created a worm composting box that's now housed in their classroom. The soil from the compost box will be used to plant flowers and crops in the spring.

ManChef.ca
Peter Graben's Cooking Program for Men
Mature Gentlemen · Caregivers · Baby Boomers · Stags · Bachelors · GenXers · Poker Nights 416-967-1818
peter@manchef.ca · www.manchef.ca

Temple Emanu-El
Presents
an Evening Featuring
Internationally Acclaimed Canadian Journalist and Award Winning Author of "SEA SICK, The Global Ocean in Crisis"
Alanna Mitchell

"Finding Hope in the Global Ocean Crisis"
Friday, November 5th 2010
Shabbat Services 8:00 p.m. Presentation to follow

"It is often said that our oceans are less understood than the surface of the moon. Alanna Mitchell's informative and deeply moving book gives a wonderful portrait of a global marine ecosystem, that desperately needs both greater popular understanding and international protection against looming catastrophe."
Mark Lynas, Environmentalist and author of 'Six Degrees'

The community is invited to hear this outstanding speaker.

Temple Emanu-El
120 Old Colony Road, Toronto • 416-449-3880

EXCLUSIVE LIFE PARTNER SEARCH
Executive Life Partners, Canada's most exclusive relationship search firm, is currently representing a very attractive, fit, fun loving, worldly, refined and highly accomplished female with an adventurous spirit and strong family values. This engaging beauty enjoys a number of eclectic pursuits including: health and fitness, tennis, biking, international cultural/adventure travel, the arts, music, fine dining, philanthropy, movies and pop culture. She seeks a long-term, committed relationship with a bright, confident, successful, well-educated gentleman with a generosity of spirit and a kind and loving nature (late 40's to late 50's). If you are sincere, fun loving, worldly and debonair and interested in sharing your life with a creative woman of warmth and substance, please reply to:
John Brownlee, (416) 703-1212 Ext. 201 or e-mail:
jbrownlee@pulsemg.com. No financial obligation. Discretion assured.

Good News For All Dialysis Patients !

ESCAPE THE BITTERLY COLD WEATHER

Dialyze at Universal Kidney Center in South Florida

You do not have to make payments for your dialysis treatments.

We will bill Provincial Health Care directly.

Call now for reservations
(954) 802 - 8100

Seminar on kashrut planned

By MYRON LOVE
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — Organizers are hoping to attract as many as 40 Manitoba food processors to a free seminar on kashrut in Winnipeg next week.

The Nov. 2 event aims to give the companies an opportunity to learn about the process of obtaining a hechsher and the potential benefits to their businesses of kosher certification.

The seminar is being jointly sponsored by the federal government, the government of Manitoba, the Manitoba Food Processors Association and the Orthodox Union.

Rick Stokoloff, a Winnipeg-based marketing associate for the OU, said the genesis of the seminar was a study released during the summer by the provincial government's Manitoba Agriculture Food and Rural Initiatives (MAFRI) that looked into opportunities in the kosher and halal markets for Manitoba meat processors.

"This seminar seemed like the next logical step," Stokoloff says.

The seminar is scheduled to start with an overview of the specialty foods market, presented by an Agriculture and Agri-Foods Canada representative, and the MAFRI halal and kosher study. That will be followed by an explanation by an OU representative of what kosher certification entails.

A subsequent "health break" will feature kosher food products.

The second part of the seminar will include a presentation by the Manitoba Food Development Centre – located in Portage La Prairie, about 100 kilometres west of Winnipeg – explaining kosher product and process development.

It will also include a talk by Shaun Crew, president of Winnipeg-based Hemp Oil Canada, which is under OU supervision, about the challenges and benefits of being a kosher food producer, and it will give seminar participants the opportunity to receive feedback from the presenters on their products.

The OU assumed responsibility for western Canadian kosher certification at the beginning of this year through its association with New Jersey-based Rabbi Dovid Jenkins, who purchased Winnipeg-based Winnipeg Kosher and its WK hechsher in August 2008.

All WK clients are switching to the OU certification as packaging expires, Stokoloff reported.

Orthodox group criticizes anti-veil bill

Bill 94 creates 'hierarchy' of rights

By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — An Orthodox Jewish group has expressed serious reservations about proposed Quebec legislation on reasonable accommodation that would ban face coverings in provincial public institutions.

The Orthodox Jewish Council for Community Relations of Quebec appeared Oct. 20 in Quebec City before public hearings of the National Assembly committee studying Bill 94.

The presentation was made by Rabbi Moshe Glustein, head of Yeshiva Gedola Merkaz Hatorah in Montreal, and lawyer Lionel Perez, a board member of the school.

They described the council as having been founded in 2003 and now representing 10,000 Orthodox Jews in Quebec.

As it's now written, the bill would be open to constitutional challenge, which could lead to "an aggravation of social tensions," Perez said.

While Article 6 of the bill, which deals with face coverings, does not directly affect Orthodox Jews, Perez said, such a law would have far-reaching implications both legally and in everyday relations.

Perez pointed out that the bill is aimed at the approximately 100 women who veil their faces in public out of a provincial population of eight million.

"The council questions whether the state should make a law to target a group of people causing a certain difference, that could degenerate towards a road we would all like to avoid."

He stressed that there is no need for this law, because conflicts that arise over reasonable accommodation can be resolved under human rights charters of Quebec and Canada.

"[I]t should be underlined and repeated that there is no accommodation crisis, religious or otherwise, contrary to the idea that is spreading in public opinion and overblown by the media in Quebec on these questions," he said. "Consequently, there is no need to see a serious threat weighing on the foundations of Quebec society."

He also said the state should not dictate how a person looks in order to deliver or obtain government services.

"The fact that someone belongs to a religion and wears an outward religious sign should not automatically [prevent him or her] from working in the public service or receiving government services," Perez said.

"Religion is a part of the identity of a person… And it's not for the state to set out what that person should do. The choice should be the citizen's."

Wearing a religious symbol does not impinge on the principle of state neutrality, he said.

Rabbi Glustein, who introduced himself by saying "Je suis québécois," noted that it was the first time the Orthodox community had participated in this type of public debate, and that it had never before submitted a brief on a Quebec bill.

Perez said the council is concerned that Article 4 of Bill 94 creates a "hierarchy" of rights that would give primacy to gender equality above all other rights. The Quebec Charter of Human Rights and Freedoms does not subordinate one right to another, he added.

While the council isn't opposed to the equality of men and women, he suggested, a law such as this one could make everyday situations that can be worked out more complicated

He gave the examples of a hospital patient wanting to be cared for by a person of the same sex or a person taking a driving test asking to be served by a license bureau staff member of the same sex.

He noted that although the media played it up, there were only six such latter requests among 25,000 driving exams last year, two of which came from Jewish people.

"There must be a certain proportionality," he said. Most accommodation requests are reasonable, he said, and there's no need for excessive constraints.

Bill 94 might also be interpreted so as to prevent a girl from wearing a head scarf or hijab at a public school, which conflicts with her legal right to a public education, he added.

Requiring a person to show their face for reasons of security or identification is reasonable, but the bill's inclusion of "communication" with a government employee is too broad, the council believes.

"[W]e have profound reservations… because this term could be considered too vague by the courts, raising serious doubts regarding its validity in accordance with the charters," Perez stated.

The main community organizations that speak for the Jewish community, Quebec Jewish Congress and B'nai Brith Canada, chose not to participate in the public hearings on Bill 94, which is entitled An Act to Establish Guidelines Governing Accommodation Requests with the Administration and Certain Institutions.

The association of Jewish lawyers, the Lord Reading Law Society, did submit a brief last spring that was strongly against the proposed legislation, saying it threatens religious freedom in general.

CANADIAN FILM PREMIERE OF

"Man On A Balcony"

FOLLOWED BY Q&A WITH THE AWARD WINNING AUSTRIAN FILM DIRECTOR KURT BRAZDA.

Thursday, November 4th

Time: 8:00 pm
Place: Congregation Habonim,
5 Glen Park Avenue (one block north of Bathurst & Glencairn)

Rudolf Gelbard leads us through his childhood in Vienna, where the "Jewboy" endured humiliation after Hitler's 1938 march in to Austria. He also witnessed first hand the events of "Kristallnacht" and the fire that engulfed the big synagogue in Vienna's Tempelgasse. In October 1942, Rudolf was deported to Theresienstadt alongside his family, where he spent his childhood years from 1942 to 1945. Of Theresienstadt's 15,000 children, only about 200 survived, including him. In the film, we accompany him on his return to Theresienstadt – a most difficult journey.

NOT Limited Seating
Come Early.

WITH THE SUPPORT OF THE AUSTRIAN EMBASSY OTTAWA & TRIDELTA FINANCIAL PARTNERS

LODZER CENTRE CONGREGATION

invites the community to

Remembrance:
An Israeli Surgeon's Reflections on War and Peace

Dr. Oren Benlulu

An inspiring presentation by Dr. Oren Benlulu about his experiences in an elite intelligence unit in the Israel Defence Force and as an Orthopedic Surgeon treating both Jewish and Arab patients.

Moderator: Dr. Brian Goldman, host of CBC Radio's 'White Coat, Black Art'

DATE: Remembrance Day November 11, 2010
TIME: 7:30 p.m.
PLACE: Lodzer Centre Congregation
12 Heaton Street (Bathurst/Sheppard)
Free admission and parking.
Sarah at Synagogue Office 416-636-6665

THE CJN PARTY PLANNER DIRECTORY

CATERERS
Caterers York
Chapman's Catering
Ely's Fine Foods
Liebman Catering
Lesley's Party Sandwiches & Catering
PR Creative Catering
Snapsy's

CONSULTANTS
Heidi Grunspan
Mingless Sophistication
Tamara Temes Bridal & Party Consultant
Up & Coming Events

DECOR
David's Fine Linens

ENTERTAINMENT
Magen Boys Entertainment Ltd.
Mandell World
Superfly Entertainment
Swaye Entertainment

EVENT PLANNERS
A Wi
Chee

FASH
Beath
Crawf
Legs P
Si Ho
Tzatz

FLOR
Fran

GIFT
Gold
Israel

HEN
Little

INVITATIONS
Invitation House
Partyzzzz Invitations

KETUBOT
Ketubah Ketubah

MUSIC
Ascension Groove
Erez Kafman Music For Every Occasion
Fern Lingon Musical Entertainment
HU-TSA-TSA
Joe Star Band
Kenny Simon Hourglass Band, The
OneMoreTime

ONE STOP PARTY SHOP
Dynamite Games and Novelties
Incredible Novelties Inc.

PHOTOGRAPHERS
Eric Benchimol Photography
Studio Twenty-Five

VIDEOS
D.M.S. Video Productions
Lisa Productions
Rafael Studios
Redstone Pictures
Twins Photo & Video
Video Productions By Josh

WEBSITES
www.TorontoPartyGuide.com

WHERE TO PARTY
Adath Israel Synagogue
Asian Legend
Atlantis Pavilions
Baycrest Hospitality Services
Bellvue Manor
Berkeley Heritage Venue, The
Bill's Pit North Steak and Seafood
Cantine Bistro and Bar
Copper Creek Golf Club

PLANNING A PARTY?
Want A Little Help?
The CJN Party Planner Online Directory will give you easy access to all our [illegible] Advertisers' websites.
Go to WWW.CJNEWS.COM,
click on the PARTY PLANNER DIRECTORY
where you will find Live Links to Everything you Need to Make Your Party a Sensation!
To Advertise in the next CJN Party Planner call 416-391-1836.

Spice of Life

Forget the meat — veggie's the new norm

By NORENE GILLETZ
Special to The CJN

If you're always on the lookout for creative ways to incorporate more vegetarian dishes into your family's diet, search no further. Robin Asbell's cookbook, New Vegetarian (Chronicle Books) contains a colourful selection of more than 75 fresh, contemporary recipes for pasta, tagines, curries, soup and stews, and desserts. Asbell is a chef, food writer and cooking teacher based in Minneapolis who specializes in natural foods.

In New Vegetarian, Asbell shares a variety of inventive dishes that she has served to passionate omnivores. When served alongside the meat dishes that her guests were certain they preferred, her vegetarian specialties were quickly devoured, to rave reviews. She decided to compile a collection of recipes that any vegetarian can take to a feast where omnivores are present. Each savory recipe makes something that can stand in as a complete vegetarian meal and is certain to be shared by everyone.

New Vegetarian will take your palate on an international tour, with appetizers, soups, main dishes and desserts from Mexico to Greece, dishes rich with the flavours of India, Italy, Vietnam and Morocco. In this treasure trove of recipes, you'll find Greek Vegetable Feta Pie in Phyllo, Szechuan Tofu in Spicy Black Bean Sauce with Whole Wheat Noodles, Spicy Italian "Meat" Loaf, Jamaican Veggie Patties, Mac and Cheese with Hidden Veggies, Big Salad with Caramelized Pumpkinseeds, Pears and Pomegranate, Pecan Shortbread, and Chocolate Cream and Raspberry Napoleons with Walnuts.

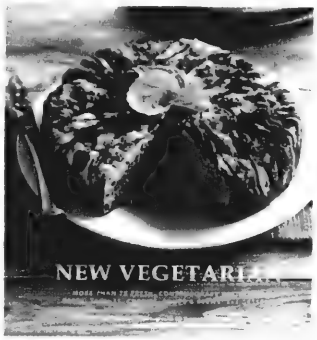
Asbell strongly believes in shopping for foods that are as unrefined and natural as possible. She writes: "Vegetarians, especially vegans, need to eat almost exclusively whole grain, with copious amounts of dark green leafy greens, vegetables, nuts and seeds, and beans in order to get the nutrients they need. Giving up meat is just part of the healthful veg diet – it has to be replaced with the most nutrient-dense plant foods to create the kind of vibrant health you want. Just because potato chips and beer are vegetarian doesn't make them a nutritious dinner."

The following recipe from Robin Asbell's New Vegetarian is guaranteed to bring fresh, new tastes to your table! Enjoy…

BAKED CREAMY SQUASH PASTA WITH ARUGULA

Tomato sauce is fine, most of the time. But even tastier is a creamy sauce with squash and chèvre, and serve it in a pasta al forno. This recipe calls for kabocha squash, but butternut or others will do – they are just a little more moist, so use 2 tablespoons less stock with them.

1 small kabocha, red kuri, or butternut squash
1 tbsp. olive oil
1/2 cup onion, diced
2 cloves garlic, chopped
1 tbsp. fresh sage, chopped
1/2 cup white wine
2 cups arugula
1/2 cup vegetable stock
4 oz. chèvre (goat cheese), at room temperature
1 tsp. salt
2 cups tubular pasta, fusilli or macaroni
1/4 cup shredded Parmesan cheese
2 tbsp. chopped walnuts



Preheat the oven to 375. Halve, seed, and bake the squash for about 40 minutes, or until tender when pierced with a paring knife. Cool the squash, then purée it, reserving 1 cup for this recipe.

Put on a large pot of salted water to boil for the pasta. In a large sauté pan over medium heat, heat the olive oil and sauté the onion until tender, about 5 minutes. Add the garlic and sage, and cook until both are golden. Add the wine and bring to a boil. Add the arugula and toss it in the pan to wilt.

In a large bowl, whisk together the vegetable stock, the 1 cup pureed squash and salt. Add the mixture to the pan. Heat until barely bubbling, then remove it from the heat and stir in chèvre until melted.

Cook the pasta in salted water according to package directions, testing a minute sooner than the package says, to make sure the pasta is just al dente. Drain well and toss with the squash mixture. Transfer the pasta mixture to a 2-quart casserole and top with Parmesan and walnuts. Bake at 375 for 20 minutes. Serve hot. Serves 4.

Norene Gilletz is a cookbook author, food writer, culinary consultant and food spokesperson. For more information, visit www.gourmania.com, contact her at goodfood@gourmania.com or call 416-226-2466.

The CJN serves up more exciting recipes at cjnews.com

Have you seen it lately?
www.cjnews.com
• Columnists • eCJN
• Features • Heebonics
• Breaking News • Contests
• Past Issues and much more!

International

Israel & the Jewish World

Have you seen it lately?
www.cjnews.com
• Columnists • eCJN
• Features • Heebonics
• Breaking News • Contests
• Past Issues and much more!

Killing of nine Turks unavoidable, IDF chief says

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

JERUSALEM — Opposition leader Tzipi Livni testified before a commission probing Israel's raid on a Gaza-bound aid convoy in May, telling the panel that Turkey had exploited the event as a provocation against Israel.

"In the absence of a peace process, with Israel's policies toward the Palestinians unclear, Turkey was able to fill a political vacuum by engineering provocations," Livni told the commission, headed by former Supreme Court Judge Jacob Turkel.

Nine Turkish activists were killed when Israeli naval commandos stormed the decks of the Mavi Marmara, the lead ship in the six-boat flotilla, at dawn on May 31. The raid plunged relations between Israel and Turkey, traditionally close military allies, into crisis.

The boats had been trying to break Israel's blockade on the Gaza Strip, imposed in 2007, when Hamas militants seized power from rival Palestinian faction Fatah in a bloody coup, at a time when Livni was foreign minister.

Livni told the commission that many of the prohibitions, eventually eased in response to a wave of international protest after the flotilla raid, had been too harsh. But she denied responsibility for imposing them.

On Sunday Israel Defence Forces Chief of Staff Gabi Ashkenazi testified to the commission for a second time, insisting the killings aboard the Mavi Marmara had been unavoidable.

Ashkenazi said Israeli commandos had fired 308 live bullets aboard the ship to repel passengers who attacked them with lethal weapons.

A top aide to the general told Reuters that 70 of the bullets were aimed to cause injury, while the rest were warning shots.

That appeared consistent with Turkish forensic findings that the nine dead activists were shot a total of 30 times, and there were gunshot wounds among another 24 passengers who were hurt.

Ashkenazi told the panel commission that navy commandos who boarded the Mavi Marmara were equipped with riot-dispersal gear, but quickly switched to live fire to confront armed passengers because "if they had not done this, there would have been more casualties."

In a sometimes testy second round of testimony before the state-appointed inquest, Ashkenazi insisted the navy's killing of nine Turks on the converted cruise ship Mavi Marmara had been unavoidable.

Israel informed the organizers of the six-boat flotilla that the ships would not be allowed to reach the Gaza shores, and soldiers boarded all the ships to compel them to change course.

Ankara, which wants compensation and an apology from Israel, has dismissed the Turkel panel as lacking in scope.

The probe commission has solicited testimony from Mavi Marmara passengers – many of whom insist the commandos' onslaught was unprovoked – and signalled it may probe Israel's navy deeper.

"Those who are asking questions [about tactics] should propose an alternative solution," Ashkenazi said.

Ashkenazi said passengers grabbed three Glock handguns and an Uzi machine pistol from commandos whom they overpowered. The troops had been dropped from helicopters onto the crowded ship as it ploughed through Mediterranean high seas at night.

"We have testimony of one activist running at them [commandos] and firing with a mini Uzi, and them shooting him," he said. "They hit those who were clearly involved in the attack on them, and not those who were not."

Mavi Marmara activists have said any guns taken from the troops were disposed of, rather than used.

Ashkenazi said commandos had fired some 350 beanbag rounds and non-lethal paintballs, all according to "protocol." The navy opted against rubber bullets – a mainstay of Israel's tactics against Palestinian demonstrations on land – because of a lethal risk within the Mavi Marmara's confines, Ashkenazi added.

Ashkenazi, who is scheduled to retire early next year, made it clear that he had returned to testify in order to spare scrutiny from subordinates, including the admiral in charge of the navy.

Bristling at Turkish and other foreign fury over the Mavi Marmara raid yet wary of international war crimes suits, Israel set up the Turkel Commission to help prepare its submission for a separate probe under United Nations Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon.

Ashkenazi, a career infantryman, said the commission had received "word for word" accounts from marines, including two who were shot and wounded upon boarding.

Commission members asked Ashkenazi if lowering soldiers into a crowd on the ship's deck was wise. He said there was no better way to stop the ship. "If we had a special trick to stop the flotilla, we would have used it. We maintain intimate co-operation with other armies, and we haven't heard of another solution."

Endorsing the commandos' recollection, Ashkenazi said they were combat veterans who "know when they are being shot at."

But he also seemed to make allowances for the haze of melee.

"I won't take issue with a soldier who might confuse a slingshot, and the whiz its missile makes as it flies past, with a pistol, during nighttime," he said.

March of the Living Canada

Express its sorrow over the passing of

BRONKA KRYGIER ז"ל

(1925-2010)

Holocaust Survivor & March of the Living Chaperone

"To see the [death camps on the March of the Living], to touch them, reminds me of the tragedy of my people and the Six Million who should not have died, who should not have been murdered. Those we must remember. Every Jewish person, especially the children, must be witness to the truth of this past. The tragic lessons and legacy must be passed on to the children so they can be watchful, so they can be certain the world does not forget." Bronka Krygier, after the 2004 March of the Living

Bronka Krygier accompanied the Toronto March of the Living delegation in 2004, 2007 and 2008 to Poland and Israel, imparting the lessons of the Holocaust to some 700 students and chaperones, lessons that will remain with them for the rest of their lives.

May the entire family be comforted among the mourners of Zion.

WEIZMANN CANADA

Science for the Benefit of Humanity

The Board of Directors of Weizmann Canada is pleased to announce the appointment of Alana Silverman as Director of Development in the Toronto office.

Alana will work closely with the National Executive Vice President, volunteers and other team members to build on the success of the organization as we position for exponential growth in Toronto, Central Ontario, and Western Canada. All development activities support the outstanding research and education programs at the Weizmann Institute of Science.

Alana brings 18 years of fundraising experience to her new role, including senior positions at the Royal Ontario Museum Governors, Baycrest Centre for Geriatric Care and the National Ballet of Canada.

As a volunteer, Alana served on the Board at Bialik Hebrew Day School and chaired the fundraising committee.

We are pleased that Alana has joined our dream team and we wish her much success in her new role.

Susan Stern, National Executive Vice President | Catherine Beck, President

Netanyahu urges PA not to declare unilateral statehood

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

JERUSALEM — Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu urged the Palestinians on Sunday not to take unilateral steps toward statehood, saying Israel is working closely with Washington on ways to restart peace talks.

"We expect the Palestinians to fulfil their commitment to hold the direct talks. I think that any attempt to circumvent them by going to international bodies is not realistic, and it will not advance the real diplomatic process," he said.

Peace talks that began in Washington on Sept. 2 are in limbo over Palestinian demands for a freeze of Israeli construction on land they want for a state and Netanyahu's refusal to reimpose limits on building in settlements in the West Bank after a 10-month settlement construction freeze expired on Sept. 26.

The impasse has raised speculation the Palestinians might abandon negotiations with Israel and launch a diplomatic campaign to seek recognition of a Palestinian state by the United Nations or other international organizations.

Last week, Palestinian Authority spokesperson Ghassan Khatib said that if peace efforts with Israel failed, Palestinian aspirations for statehood should not be "held hostage" to Israeli consent.

"Peace will be achieved only through direct negotiations, and I hope that we will return to this path with full force in the very near future," Netanyahu said, addressing his cabinet in public remarks.

He said Israel was "engaged in close contacts with the United States" aimed at restarting talks the Palestinians suspended when the settlement freeze expired.

'Peace will be achieved only through direct negotations'

Diplomats have said Washington has offered Israel a package of incentives, including ideas on security, to persuade Netanyahu to resume the partial freeze for two months.

"Our aim is not just to restart [talks] but to restart them in a way so that we do not stop in a few weeks or two months," Netanyahu said, calling for a year of "serious negotiations about fundamental issues" leading to a framework peace deal.

Palestinians say they fear settlements that Israel has built on land captured during the Six Day War in 1967 will deny them a viable state. Netanyahu says the settlement issue should be discussed in negotiations and not serve as a condition for talks.

Meanwhile, in related developments, the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) said it would consider breaking agreements signed with Israel if the Israeli government continues with its current policies, a PLO official said Saturday in an interview with the Arab newspaper Al-Hayat.

"There are agreements between the PLO and Israel. One party cannot continue to be committed to these agreements forever while the other party violates them," said PLO Executive Committee Secretary Yasser Abed Rabbo.

"There may come a time, if the Israelis continue in the same policies, to reconsider these agreements," he added.

In an interview with the London-based Arab newspaper, Abed Rabbo referred to the Israeli settlement policy and said that "any freeze should be total and comprehensive and not limited by time."

"If we start negotiations without clear goals, then two months or two years or two decades will not be enough for the negotiations to reach their goal," he said.

The PLO official accused Netanyahu of "making an alliance with the right wing in the U.S. to weaken the Obama administration."

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu [File photo]

Israel Briefs

Loyalty oath to be amended

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu ordered Israel's justice minister to redraft the loyalty oath amendment to include Jews. Netanyahu said the new amendment to the Citizenship Act, which requires a pledge of allegiance by non-Jews to the Jewish and democratic state of Israel, should also include Jews seeking Israeli citizenship under the Law of Return. The change approved by cabinet applies only to non-Jews seeking Israeli citizenship. Human rights and political groups in Israel and abroad have criticized the amendment for its selectivity.

Schalit talks resume

Negotiations to release captured Israeli soldier Gilad Schalit from Hamas have resumed, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said. Netanyahu said that Israel has "renewed contact with the German mediator" in order to free Schalit, who has been held in Gaza since he was captured in a cross-border raid in June 2006. But Schalit's grandfather, Zvi Schalit, told Israel Radio he doesn't see any evidence that talks had been renewed and said Netanyahu "is killing" his grandson if he doesn't bring about his release. Hamas seeks the release of 1,000 Palestinians from Israeli jails, including some responsible for the deaths of Israelis.

Soldier jailed for stealing

An Israeli soldier who stole electronic equipment from an intercepted ship bound for Gaza was sentenced to five months in jail. He was also fined, demoted and removed from an officers' course for taking the items from the Mavi Marmara, which Israeli commandos boarded on May 31. Violent resistance on the Turkish ship led to the deaths of nine Turkish nationals, including a dual Turkish-American citizen. The soldier expressed remorse in court and apologized. Three other soldiers are to be brought to trial for the same incident.

Chilean miners invited to Israel

Israel's tourism minister invited the 33 rescued Chilean miners to spend Christmas in Israel. Stas Misezhnikov invited the miners for a one-week, all-expenses-paid trip with their wives to Israel, where they'll tour the country, including Christian holy sites. "Your bravery and strength of spirit, your great faith that helped you survive so long in the bowels of the earth, was an inspiration to us all," the invitation says.

Union leaders to meet

The leaders of Israeli and Palestinian trade unions have agreed to meet to plan joint activity. The heads of Israel's Histadrut and the Palestinian General Federation of Trade Unions will meet in Berlin in early December, TULIP-Trade Unions Linking Israel and Palestine, said. Histadrut chairman Ofer Eini and Palestinian General Federation general secretary Shaher Sa'ed met with leaders from the International Trade Union Confederation (ITUC), which will sponsor the meeting. ITUC is the global trade union umbrella group for 175 million workers in 155 countries. The unions agreed to draft a joint statement promoting regional peace. "The program will contribute to the promotion of peace and will serve as an answer to the unions around the world that promote a boycott of Israel," Eini said in a statement. "The aim of the projects is to promote cooperation between the unions through an understanding that the solidarity between workers on both sides will contribute to the peace process." Eini is vice-president of ITUC.

Bombardier wins contract

Montreal-based Bombardier has received an order worth $185 million (US) from Israel Railways for the delivery of 78 double-deck coaches. Bombardier announced Oct. 22. The vehicles will be made at Bombardier's Gorlitz facility in Germany and in Israel.

State of Israel Bonds Obligations de l'État d'Israël
Canada

The Officers, Directors and Staff of State of Israel Bonds Canada express deep sorrow on the passing of

Norman Spector, z'l
Past National President

Heartfelt sympathies to his wife Selma, his children, grandchildren and the entire extended family.

Norman was a key figure in the ongoing success of Israel Bonds in Canada; his passion for the State of Israel was an inspirational force for many decades.

May the family be spared further sorrow.

Hon. Chairman of the Board
George A. Cohon

Chairman of the Board
Edward Sonshine, QC

National President
Eric W. Slavens, FCA

Vice President
Robert B. Issenman

Co-Chairs, Israel Bonds Montreal
Ora Stolovitz Ralph Benatar

Treasurer & Vice President
Mike Florence

Executive Vice President & CEO
Yona Gazit

Executive Director, Quebec Region
Vicky Pardo

Israeli chess grandmaster sets world record

JTA

JERUSALEM — An Israeli chess grandmaster bested an Iranian's world record by playing 527 ranked chess players simultaneously in Tel Aviv and winning 87 per cent of the games.

Alik Gershon began playing the concurrent matches last Thursday morning in Tel Aviv's Rabin Square in an attempt to break the Guinness simultaneous chess world record set in 2009 by the Iranian grandmaster Morteza Mahjoub. Gershon completed the games by early Friday.

The event was sponsored by the Jewish Agency and the Israel Chess Federation to mark the 20th anniversary of the mass aliyah from the former Soviet Union. Natan Sharansky, a former prisoner of Zion and now the head of the Jewish Agency, attended.

Many of Gershon's opponents, who are registered and ranked by the Israel Chess Federation, as per the requirements of the Guinness Book of Records, are immigrants from the former Soviet Union. Gershon, 30, is a native of Dnepropetrovsk, Ukraine, who immigrated to Israel in 1990.

Public figures were among those watching the matches, which were under the close scrutiny of a judge representing the Guinness Book of Records. To set the world record, Gershon had to win at least 80 per cent of the games. Mahjoub's record is 500 games.

Jewish Agency Chairman Natan Sharansky played a match with Gershon at the beginning of the event.

Gershon began to learn chess at age two and by five was competing. He became an Israeli youth champion, won the world championship in 1994 for youth up to age 14, and became Israeli champion in 2000.

Alik Gershon challenges Tel Aviv to chess.
[Israel Sun photo]

JEWISH COMMUNITY FOUNDATION OF CALGARY

7th Annual
THE DOV AND ARLEIN CHETNER
CHAI ESSAY CONTEST

The topic:

Recent statistics indicate a change in feelings for Israel in the under 35s.

How will this affect Israel?
What might this mean to the Jewish Diaspora?

First Prize $2,700
Second Prize 1,800
Third Prize 900

Chai entrance award of $18
for the first 76 essays

All entries must be received prior to February 28, 2011

Rules and registration form are online at www.jcfc.ca or www.jewishcalgary.org

The Jewish Public Library proudly Jewish Book Month 2010 announces this year's winners of the

J. I. Segal Awards 2010

The prizes will be presented at a special Awards Evening on Wednesday, November 10 at 7:30 p.m. at the Jewish Public Library, 5151 Côte Ste-Catherine Road. Free admission.

Rosenfeld Yiddish & Hebrew Literature Award:
PROF. DAVID E. FISHMAN
(Editor)
"Droshes un ksovim" by Rabbi Joseph B. Soloveitchik
and
BORIS SANDLER
"Royte Shikhelekh Far Reytshel"

Shulamis Yelin English Fiction and Poetry Award on a Jewish Theme:
RHEA TREGEBOV
"The Knife Sharpener's Bell"

Touben English Non-Fiction Award on a Jewish Theme:
JEFFREY VEIDLINGER
"Jewish Public Culture in the Late Russian Empire"

French Literature on a Jewish Theme:
MAURICE CHALOM
« Va, Moshone »

Barbara Kay Translation of Book Award with a Jewish Theme:
MOSHE DOR
"Fly Off into the Strongest Light"
by Seymour Mayne

Canadian Jewish Studies Award:
ESTHER TRÉPANIER
"Jewish Painters of Montreal:
Witnesses of Their Time 1930-1948"
and
ALLAN LEVINE
"Coming of Age:
A History of the Jewish People of Manitoba"

Jacob Zipper Prize in Education:
NIRA FRIEDMAN

Michael Moskovitz Film Award on a Jewish Theme:
GARRY BEITEL
"The 'Socalled' Movie"

The J.I. Segal Awards of the Jewish Public Library were established in 1968 to honour and perpetuate the memory of the great Canadian Yiddish poet J.I. Segal (1896-1954) with awards to encourage and reward works on Jewish themes and to recognize contributions to Jewish education.

Jewish Public Library
Bibliothèque publique juive
הספריה היהודית העממית
ייִדישע פּאבליקע ביבליאָטעקע

Refreshments will be served. Books and DVDs will be sold.
For information, please call (514) 345-2627 ext. 3017.
Admission is free, but call for registration.

Prevention looks more promising for ovarian cancer

By LAUREN KRAMER
Pacific Correspondent

VANCOUVER — There's good news and there's bad news when it comes to research on ovarian cancer.

The bad news is that this disease, dubbed the "silent killer," is still the leading cause of cancer-related deaths among women, affecting one in 70, with a much larger concentration in women of Ashkenazi descent. The good news is that while the outlook is still bleak for screening and treatment, prevention is looking more promising.

Approximately 50 women gathered to hear this good news at Vancouver's Jewish Community Centre recently, at a presentation delivered by gynecologic oncologist Dr. Sarah Finlayson and gynecologist Dr. Mark Rosengarten.

"I've seen too many of my patients lose a very courageous battle against ovarian cancer," Rosengarten said. "In eastern Europe, we didn't dilute our gene pool enough, which is why Ashkenazi Jews have a higher risk of these cancers."

Rosengarten noted that the disease tends to spread fear and panic in the community, and that until now the only preventative treatment has been removal of the ovaries. "That's not an easy thing to live with and often leaves women a shell of their former selves," he said.

Finlayson, who works at Vancouver General Hospital and the BC Cancer Agency, said that until three years ago, researchers at the BCCA thought of ovarian cancer as one disease and used a single treatment approach. "Today we know there are five subtypes of the disease, and we have a screening test in development," she said.

Each of those subtypes has different etiology, symptoms, treatment and prognosis, but the most common is high-grade serous cancer, also associated with the BRCA 1 and BRCA 2 gene mutations. Those gene mutations are found in one out of every 40 women of Ashkenazi descent.

"In the past, we were looking at the ovary to see where the cancer started, ignoring the fallopian tube," Finlayson said. "When we began looking at the fallopian tube, we started getting some answers. We realized these aren't ovarian cancers at all, they're fallopian tube cancers, and learned that the fallopian tube is the culprit in the majority of these cancers."

Finlayson, and her team have begun a B.C.-wide educational initiative to take their research from the laboratory to the operating room. "We're asking doctors to remove the fallopian tubes at the time of hysterectomy and tubal ligation," she said.

Rosengarten added that it is reasonable for women with a family history of gynecological cancer, for those who are anxious and concerned about getting ovarian cancer, and for those who have tested positive for BRCA 1 or BRCA 2 to consider having their fallopian tubes removed by age 40, provided that they did not intend on having more children. By age 50, he said it is reasonable for women concerned about the disease to have their ovaries removed, too.

"This is important because we're talking about prevention, not screening or treatment, which are still a sad story," Finlayson stressed. "We really believe that by making these simple surgical changes, we could see up to 50 per cent reduction in ovarian cancer deaths in the next 20 years."

fitness DEPOT
EXERCISE EQUIPMENT SUPERSTORES
fitnessdepot.ca

L'Chaim
CANCER SUPPORT FOR JEWISH WOMEN
Cancer?
We've "been there".
We are Jewish women cancer survivors who can "be there" for you during your cancer journey.
We provide confidential peer support to Jewish women undergoing cancer treatment.
Hotline: 416-630-0203
A project of
National Council of Jewish Women of Canada, Toronto Section

Herzog Hospital program named for CAMH doctor

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

Of all the recognition he has received throughout his career, Dr. Paul Garfinkel says the naming of a mental health program in his honour at the Sarah Herzog Hospital in Jerusalem really speaks to him.

Canadian Friends of Herzog Hospital-Ezrath Nashim will announce the establishment of the Dr. Paul Garfinkel Mental Health Program for Israel's Immigrants at a concert featuring Dan Hill and the Frontier Brass Ensemble, Nov. 2 at 8 p.m. at the Toronto Centre for the Performing Arts.

Using the proceeds from the concert, the organization will develop a program to provide psychological counselling geared to the Ethiopian and Russian immigrants in their native languages.

A former president and CEO of the Centre for Addiction and Mental Health (CAMH), Garfinkel is now a staff psychiatrist at CAMH and a professor in the department of psychiatry at the University of Toronto.

A researcher, clinician and administrator, he's the author and editor of nine books on eating disorders.

He said that he is especially honoured with the tribute "because of the nature of the program, and because Herzog is a remarkable facility."

The story of Israel, he said, is a story of immigration. "Immigrants are the country's strength and pride."

However, he said, they do have problems, particularly "with feeling a sense of belonging, and with a loss of status, occupation and language. I know from studies that Ethiopian males have four times the suicide rate as the general population."

Dr. Paul Garfinkel

In any society, said Garfinkel, most people don't get treated for mental illness. "They may be embarrassed to seek help, or they may [consult] someone who either downplays [the symptoms] or makes a misdiagnosis. In developing countries, it is likely that 90 per cent of the people don't get help for mental health problems."

Even if immigrants get treatment, he said, it's often not beneficial because of the language barrier. "This program is addressing that problem. It will provide training for future practitioners and will hopefully do research as well."

For information on the tribute concert, co-chaired by Dr. Dorothy Pullan and Lena Shugar, call Terry, 416-256-4222.

JACS TORONTO
Jewish Addiction Community Services
DAILY CRISIS SUPPORT
Are you or is someone you love struggling with a drug, alcohol or gambling problem?
Thursday night Here to Help meetings at 8 PM for newcomers and family support
Call 416-638-0350 for help
www.jacstoronto.org
858 Sheppard Avenue West
Toronto, Ontario M3H 2T5
CRA863109757RR0001
Saving Lives by Solving Addiction Problems
TEAM UP
The Ontario Trillium Foundation
La Fondation Trillium de l'Ontario

RESPITE CARE
ASSISTED LIVING
PALLIATIVE CARE
L'CHAIM GROUP HOME FOR SENIORS
A dignified middle ground between the independence of a retirement home & the dependence of a nursing home
Who outshines the fall colours? Our residents!
Thank you for filling our lives with joy
L'chaim occupies a unique middle ground between retirement and nursing homes. It's a perfect fit for seniors who require special attention for physical and cognitive impairments BUT who also want to retain their sense of independence and dignity. Our assisted living programs and caring staff allow them to do just that. Discover everything L'chaim has to offer. — Judy Cohen, Founder 416.398.7898
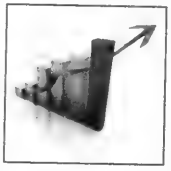
www.lchaimretirement.ca
L'chaim
718 Sheppard W.
Open house every Thurs. 10-4
Full-time residence • Respite Care • Assisted Living • Palliative care

Business valuator sometimes dons detective hat

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

Farley Cohen does not wear a trench coat and fedora, and sit in a car sipping stale coffee during an all-night stakeout hoping to catch a bad guy red-handed, though he is a private investigator of a sort.

At times, Cohen does have to don his detective hat – usually to determine the truth about the finances of certain individuals who don't want the truth about their finances known.



It's not exactly cloak and dagger stuff being a business valuator, but Cohen has become adept at appraising the value of businesses and attaching a dollar figure to them. Usually that entails poring over financial statements and economic forecasts, but sometimes it means following a money-trail to its source, often offshore, where some people attempt to hide their business interests from prying eyes.

Cohen, who holds an MBA, also serves as chair of the Canadian Institute of Chartered Business Valuators, an independent industry organization that regulates the profession, trains individuals in the intricacies of valuing enterprises and is seeking to establish standards that cross national borders. It's not as simple as merely studying financial documents, Cohen said. It's "finding its value at a point in time, looking forward."

"You look at more than inventory and receivables," he continued. That includes studying the final product, the size of the market, the price and the prospects for future sales.

"The real skill is in evaluating the goodwill [the value of a business beyond assets and liabilities] and that's based on future profits," he said.

Most of his clients are people involved with private companies, though he has worked for some publicly traded ones. The trick is in being able to value businesses of all kinds for different purposes, and for that he sometimes has to call in industry experts. "We say our business is more than an art than a science. You try to assess the risk of what might happen."

Since he opened his firm, Cohen Hamilton Steger, six months ago, he's employed 13 valuators, most of them chartered accountants, attesting to the value placed on his business by those in other businesses. The firm gets called when business partners can't agree on a price for a buy/sell on dissolution of the business; by those with financial reporting demands; for estate planning; for litigation purposes and to determine damages in patent-infringement suits.

"I usually get involved when owners are arguing among themselves, there's a shareholder dispute or during a divorce," he said.

Sometimes the beneficiaries of a will, who can't agree to the value of an estate asset, call him in to settle matters.

A lot can turn on the figure he comes up with. Cohen recalled a particularly notorious case involving giant steel-maker Stelco. At one point, there was speculation the company, which was in bankruptcy protection and had huge debts, was virtually worthless, but Cohen came up with a figure of $750 million.

Sure enough, after it emerged from bankruptcy, it reached a value on the stock market of $800 million and one year later it sold for $1.2 billion, he said.

In coming up with a number for that company, Cohen relied on outside advice specific to the industry and did his own research that showed steel prices were bound to rise substantially due to increased demand from the booming Chinese economy and a shortage of scrap steel internationally.

Another memorable case came out of a messy divorce in which he was asked to determine the value of a company within a family group. Donning his detective cap and employing the tools of a forensic accountant, he found the profits had been moved to offshore corporations. "I found hundreds of thousands or even millions of dollars. It's a bit of a needle in a haystack. Sometimes you're lucky, sometimes you're not," he said.

Farley Cohen

So how do you find money that's been placed offshore?

It can be from the simplest sources, Cohen said, such as a banking statement from another jurisdiction, credit-card charges from abroad or payments to lawyers in other countries.

When you suspect assets have been moved abroad, "you get an authorization letter from the owning spouse to allow you to talkto the financial institution. If they won't sign the authorization, then we know we're on to something" and the next step might be to request a court order requiring the owning spouse to provide the pertinent documents.

Cohen, 53, has been in the valuation business since 1987. He put himself through school by working summers at the Canadian National Exhibition, where he was the man behind the mike for the birthday game. "It was a lot of fun, and I learned a lot about business and how people spent money," he said, recalling it as the most popular game on the midway.

A member of the Shaarei Tefillah Congregation, Cohen also has worked as a volunteer fundraiser for Baycrest's golf tournament, has sat on the Baycrest board of governors and on the advisory board for the Jewish Home for the Aged.

Prior to opening his own firm six months ago, he worked for two large public companies in the same field.

Lately, he's noticed something that should hearten anyone concerned with the economy. Business disputes occur in all environments, he said, but during the slowdown "companies did not want to spend their money on litigation that could be postponed."

Two thousand and nine was slow, but in the last six months, Cohen has quadrupled his staff and "we have lots of clients," he said.

Better times may well be ahead.

ALS treatment shows promise

By LIOR ZENO
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

JERUSALEM — Biotech startup BrainStorm Cell Therapeutics has received clearance from the Health Ministry to begin clinical trials of its NurOwn stem-cell therapy on amyotrophic lateral sclerosis (ALS) patients, the company announced recently.

The testing will take place at Hadassah University Hospital, Ein Kerem, whose ethics committee gave its approval for the trials last February. ALS, commonly known also as Lou Gehrig's disease, is a degenerative, disabling and eventually fatal disease that attacks nerve cells in the brain and spinal cord.

The agreement between BrainStorm and Hadassah calls for trials to be carried out in Hadassah's Ein Karem laboratories by a joint team headed by the hospital's Prof. Dimitrios Karussis. The company, which has allocated 5 million shekels ($1.4 million US) to fund the research, estimates that if the therapy is successful, it will open the door to a market estimated at hundreds of millions of dollars in the United States alone.

BrainStorm is controlled by haredi businessman Chaim Lebovits, the company's president, along with Jacky Ben-Zaken. Its shares trade at a market value of $22.8 million (US).

BrainStorm's therapy, based on patents developed by neurologist Eldad Melamed and cell biologist Daniel Offen, involves isolating stem cells taken from the patient's own bone marrow and transforming them in the lab into nerve cells, which are then re-injected into the patient. The treatment is expected to slow – perhaps even stop – the degeneration of nerve cells brought on by ALS.

The onset of the trials awaits a technical validation process of various parameters of the treatment, as required by the Health Ministry, as well as the recruitment of test patients. These steps are expected to be completed within a few months.

"To our delight we have reached the critical stage where we can reach the patients themselves," said Lebovits. "I was warned for years not to invest in ALS, since if the large pharmaceutical companies haven't developed a treatment for the disease, how could we expect to? But I put my faith from the start in our company's scientific team and our technology, which are today the most respected in the world. The greatest satisfaction comes from saving a human life, not to mention thousands of lives. God willing, I am hopeful we can achieve that."

Thursday, November 4th, 2010
Paradise Banquet & Convention Centre
7601 Jane Street, Concord
Cocktail Reception, Casino and Silent Auction Preview 6:00 PM
Dinner & Show 7:00 PM
Vegas In Vaughan
Hospice Thornhill goes Vegas
Fundraising Gala
TICKETS SELLING FAST! DON'T MISS OUT!
Thanks to you, we will be there when families need us most.

The security of a GIC.
A 7.25%* rate of return.
Yes, really.
[Suitable for ages 60-80. Minimum investment $50,000. Certain conditions apply.]
*Rate based on a 70 year old male.
GIC Income Exchange Inc.
Call for details.
416.787.1366

And now for something completely different: HEEBONICS

Therapist uses drumming to bring isolated people together

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Terri Segal's love of music goes back to her childhood.

"I've always been into music, playing guitar and piano growing up," she said.

Today, the 32-year-old expressive arts therapist is the owner and director of Rhythmic by Nature, which holds group drumming and percussion workshops for schools, social service agencies, summer camps and community events, to name a few.

Her passion for playing the drums began when she was a student at McMaster University, where she studied English.

"I started taking my first African drumming classes and more and more workshops. I found that as I started learning, the main passion was to share, so I would start drum circles... at the university," she said. "Wherever I went, I would gather people together in the community to play music on the drums."

Segal is a graduate of the expressive arts therapy program at the International School for Interdisciplinary Studies (ISIS) Canada.

"That is really what informs my practice," she said of the program. "I'm an expressive arts therapist."

Rhythmic by Nature, which Segal established in 2004, offers drop-in drumming sessions open to the public, corporate sessions, beginner and intermediate drumming courses and wellness sessions.

The health and wellness benefits involved in group drumming are numerous, Segal said. They include social, mental and physical benefits, as well as stress reduction.

"It [drumming] builds a group bond and camaraderie. So, for example, for people who are often isolated, they can come and participate and feel an immediate sense of belonging... That's where the more therapeutic benefits come in – like long-term care for people with mental illness or people who are often marginalized and isolated from day-to-day activities. That's a real great therapeutic benefit.

"[It causes] stress reduction because you can't really think about anything else when you're drumming. It's both mental and physical exercise, because you're playing with both hands.

"It does everything that helps stress lower. It gets the parasympathetic nervous system activated... into a more relaxed state."

The hour-long workshops start with a drum call, letting people know the session is about to begin. Segal incorporates rhythm and ice-breaker games to get everyone warmed up and comfortable with playing. There is also an educational component involved.

"[We explore] a bit about the drums we're playing, which come from West Africa, to understand, appreciate and respect the cultures from where they come – the musical traditions that are deeply rooted in the people, the land and the culture, which is also an oral tradition that is passed down one generation to the next."

The workshops also teach basic drumming techniques.

"Even though you can tap a drum and get a sound, there's a right way to play the drum, a technique to play it like any instrument," Segal said.

Rhythmic by Nature takes its drumming workshops all across Ontario, "wherever we're called," Segal said. "I have a branch in Muskoka. We work all over the GTA, and basically all over Ontario, really."

The company has recently undergone an expansion, with associates and lead facilitators working under Segal.

"The expansion now is the associates and lead facilitators. That's basically happened over the last year and a half, where I've been training people, and they're now certified under my guidelines to go out and work for me."

Another area of focus for Rhythmic by Nature is in professional development.

"I offer professional development to organizations, which focuses on implementing their own sustainable drumming programs, including training the staff and purchasing their own set of drums," Segal said. "This has been successful at a number of long-term care facilities and adult day programs."

What she enjoys most about Rhythmic by Nature, Segal said, is getting to work with different people.

"I love working with so many different groups. There's never a dull moment, and it's never the same. How much joy people get from it – that's really fulfilling – and the transformations that happen, small or large or subtle, that happen within the hour.

"I love drumming. I'm a student of the drum. I take classes. It's my passion, my hobby. As I teach, I'm always learning as well," she said.

In order to participate in the drumming circles, being musically inclined is not necessary, Segal said. Anyone can participate.

"You don't have to have any previous musical background, and that's what is so accessible with the way I facilitate the program. Anyone can come up to a drum and tap it and get an immediate sound. Therefore, they can be part of the group – they can contribute. Whether they feel like they have rhythm or not, everybody kind of lands in the same boat. It brings everybody together."

Rhythmic by Nature's next community drum circle is Nov. 21 at 25 Cecil St. in downtown Toronto. The cost is $10 suggested, or pay what you can.

For more information on Rhythmic by Nature, visit www.rhythmicbynature.com or call Segal at 416-662-6488.

Expressive arts therapist Terri Segal

Biblical history of Jews covered with drama and song

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

The Covenant, The Story of My People, an upbeat road show that touched down at the Toronto Centre for the Arts three years ago after a swing through Israel, Europe and the United States, is back in town – this time on TV.

On Wednesday, Nov. 3, at the ungodly hour of midnight, when most viewers are sound asleep, Vision TV will broadcast this stage pageant.

Presented by the Canadian branch of the International Christian Embassy, The Covenant is both a drama and a musical, recreating the biblical history of the Jewish people through words, song and dance in fulsome fashion.

Produced and directed by Chuck King and Robert and Elizabeth Muren, this lavish production features some 30 performers and musicians in full throat and full flight.

Spanning the ages from the dawn of Judaism to the birth of Israel, it conjures up images of Abraham directing the Israelites to the Promised Land, Moses leading his flock from slavery in Egypt to freedom in Canaan, Solomon building the temple in Jerusalem and Mordechai and Esther conspiring to undo the machinations of Haman.

The Assyrian conquest of Israel, the fall of Judea and the Babylonian exile are also recounted in bursts of emotion and colour by an energetic cast.

The Jewish revolt against the Roman occupation is followed, somewhat disjointedly and jarringly, by the Holocaust in Poland. This fragmentary segment surfaces within the framework of the persecution of Jews.

In Warsaw, an Orthodox Jewish family stands around a sabbath table and rejoices in the Lord as Nazi terror lurks menacingly outside.

Newsreel pictures of Nazi rallies, fluttering swastikas, the dreaded yellow star and Hitler reinforce the perception of a looming catastrophe.

Despair turns to joy as David Ben-Gurion, the first prime minister of Israel, declares statehood, as the ingathering of the Jewish people takes place and as the national anthem, Hativkah, is sung.

The presence of actors in Israeli army uniforms suggests that Israel fights for its survival.

The Covenant, which is infused with religious symbols and impregnated with religiosity, comes full circle as Abraham reappears in the final frames.

It's candy for the eyes and morsels for the mind.

The Covenant* is worth staying up for.

'Smart comedy' about life and politics'

By KATHRYN KATES
Special to The CJN

Like many young people, the members of Warm Summer Hotness bonded with each other over a mutual love of drinking and a mutual hatred of everything else.

The sketch/improv comedy troupe will be taking to the Comedy Bar stage Nov. 2 as part of the Toronto Sketch Comedy Festival, now in its sixth year.

Zanna Seipp Katz, one of five members of the troupe, which includes Seema Lakhani, Troy McFadyen, Niall O'Halloran and Laura Salvas, has wanted to perform since she was little and moved to Toronto in 2008 after finishing acting school in her hometown of Winnipeg.

"I ended up going to Second City when I first moved here. I had no friends, and I ended up making great friends with this group of people and ended up forming our group at the end of the year's classes," Seipp Katz, 26, says.

"We just loved each other and wanted to continue to meet on each week. So we wanted to make our own improv team, but our first gig that we got was a sketch show, so we ended up writing a sketch. Then everything we got booked for became sketch shows, so we became a sketch troupe, which I think I have more of a passion for because I prefer the scripted material."

Seipp calls her comedy "smart comedy" – not going for the obvious joke so that the audience has to really listen to what is being said to get the joke. The group's humour runs the gamut, touching on politics or sometimes just the hilarity of life itself.

"We all do the writing. Niall and Laura are our head writers, then we all tweak it, and then we work it to find out what works and what doesn't work as a group. For SketchFest, we put together our best sketches. We have a good lineup, including four parodies based on the Cash Man [jeweller Russell Oliver]... and a haunted house sketch where there is flailing and killing, but it's very comical," she says.

Warm Summer Hotness has played various shows at the Rivoli and Comedy Bar. Last March, the group self-produced its first full-length show titled PROROGUED! They will be doing some sketches from it at SketchFest.

"We get our ideas sometimes from doing improv and seeing where that leads. If it leads to something funny then we write it as sketch. We also get ideas from life. Sometimes in a day something really weird happens, and that ends up on paper."

Seipp Katz hopes one day to write a sketch based on Jewish characters and situations from her past. "We all have that one old Jewish aunt or that ridiculous Passover story."

There are 40 North American acts performing at SketchFest, which takes place at the Lower Ossington Theatre, 100A Ossington Ave., and the Comedy Bar, 945 Bloor St. W. at Ossington.

Warm Summer Hotness performs at the Comedy Bar Stage, Nov. 2 at 10 p.m. Advance tickets are available online at www.totix.ca or in person at the T.O. Tix Booth at Yonge-Dundas Square. Day-of tickets are also available at all venue box offices.

CJN Snowbirds

1) Arrange for Canada Post to forward The CJN to your winter address with the rest of your regular mail.

2) Advise our Circulation Department to suspend delivery until you return to Canada with your expiry automatically extended. You can still access the eCJN while away.

3) Arrange for our Circulation Department to redirect The CJN to your winter address at a cost of $10.00 per month for U.S. and foreign addresses.

This charge – payable by cheque, Visa, Mastercard or American Express before departure covers the cost of additional postage incurred for out of country mailings.

Fax changes in your delivery to 905-946-1679 or call the Circulation Department at 1-866-849-0864 allowing two weeks notice.

SUBSCRIBE TO
The Canadian Jewish news

FLORIDA, ARIZONA, CALIFORNIA, CANADA
WE SEND YOUR CAR & CONTENTS (and return)
CALL 416-225-7754
www.torontodriveaway.com
TORONTO DRIVEAWAY AND TRUCK SERVICE
5803 Yonge St., #101
North York M2M 3V5
Since 1959

TEATRON Toronto Jewish Theatre presents a comedy by William Missouri Downs

Directed by Ari Weisberg
Nov. 10 - 21, 2010

A perfect Jewish couple who desperately want to have a child of their own meets a young woman from Iowa who offers them to adopt her baby. Just before the adoption papers are signed, they realize she doesn't know they're Jewish. How far are they willing to go to have a family?

PURCHASE YOUR TICKETS NOW!
At the Toronto Centre for the Arts (formally The Ford Centre)
5040 Yonge St. 11am—6 pm, by phone: 416-781-5527
or online: www.teatrontheatre.com

TEATRON TO STAGE KOSHER LUTHERANS

A Jewish couple, Hanna and Franklyn, can't have a child of their own, and pose as Lutherans in order to adopt a child offered to them by a young God-fearing pregnant woman from Iowa. That is the premise of Kosher Lutherans, a comedy by playwright William Missouri Downs that Teatron Toronto Jewish Theatre is staging in November.

Despite its high comedy, the play "doesn't stay away from tackling serious issues," said Teatron founder and artistic director Ari Weisberg, who directs the cast of five. Toronto Centre for the Arts, Studio Theatre, 5040 Yonge St. Nov. 10 to 21. $31 to $48. Previews $19. 416-616-5350, www.teatrontheatre.com

* * *

Harold Green Jewish Theatre presents Lenin's Embalmers, an "absurdist, savagely funny dark comedy" that comes straight from Broadway. Based on a true story, the play spins a tale of two Jewish scientists who were chosen by the Committee for Immortalization to embalm Vladimir Lenin after his death in 1924. Al Green Theatre, Oct. 30 to Nov. 21. $49 to $76. 416-366-7723, www.stlc.com

* * *

Israeli Cinema: Film critic Shlomo Schwartzberg presents a thoughtful discussion of "The Cinema of Israel" with film clips. The focus is on religious, political and social films that examine the plight and realities of religious Jews, immigrant Jews, Israeli Arabs and women. Religious films (Kadosh, Va, vis et deveins Ushpizin and more) are featured on Monday, Nov. 1, 7 to 9 p.m. Classes are weekly on Monday evenings. Miles Nadal Jewish Community Centre. Drop-in fee, $12 per class. www.mnjcc.org

* * *

Four Seasons Lodge*: Toronto Jewish Film Society presents Four Seasons Lodge, a documentary that follows a group of Holocaust survivors during what might be their final summer together at a bungalow colony in the Catskill Mountains. The film reveals the survivors' lives after the war and their contagious passion for living in the aftermath of enormous loss.

Presented as part of Holocaust Education Week. Guest speaker Shirley Kumove. Miles Nadal JCC, Al Green Theatre. Sunday, Nov. 7, 4 & 7:30 p.m. $15, $10. Rush seats on sale 15 minutes before each screening. 416-924-6211, ext. 606.

* * *

Arts in Brief

• Show One Productions presents the Moscow Virtuosi Chamber Orchestra with conductor-violinist Vladimir Spivakov in performance at Roy Thomson Hall, Thursday, Nov. 18, 8 p.m. $45 to $105. www.roythomson.com, 416-872-4255.

• The Richmond Hill Centre for the Performing Arts recently announced its highly impressive upcoming season of more than 30 shows. They include a production of Golda's Balcony, coming in April 2011, in which Tovah Feldshuh recreates her powerful performance as Golda Meir. Other talented performers include Patti LuPone, Jerry Stiller, Jane Krakowski, Andrea Martin and Kim Mitchell. www.richmondhill.ca

• Two independent local theatre companies, Acting Up Stage and Studio 180 Theatre, are collaborating to present the Tony Award-winning musical Parade, by Jason Robert Brown and Alfred Uhry, to be directed by Joel Greenberg. The piece, which premièred at the Lincoln Center Theatre in 1998, tells the story of the infamous case of Leo Frank, the young Jewish factory manager in 1913 Atlanta who was railroaded for a horrendous crime that he didn't commit. The production is to open at the Berkeley Street Theatre Upstairs on Dec. 30.

• Planet Music – lectures on world music, for the armchair traveller, is a series of four Thursday lectures at the Miles Nadal JCC, Oct. 28 to Nov. 18, 7 to 8:30 p.m. Register for the series or drop in for $18 per lecture. 416-924-6211, ext. 0.

* * *

Healing Power of Stories & Music: The Parent Child Mother Goose Program presents Talking You In, a story created and told by Dan Yashinsky with music by Brian Katz. This is the story of a family's journey through the harrowing realm of a neo-natal intensive care unit, hoping that the sound of their voices telling stories, rhymes and songs will connect them with their fragile "starchild" and possibly help with his healing and theirs. (Yashinsky wrote the piece when his child was in the neonatal intensive care unit.)

The duo perform the work at the Hollywood Theatre at the Hospital for Sick Children (enter at 170 Elizabeth St. and go to the Black wing.) $25; all proceeds to support the Parent Child Mother Goose Program. Saturday, Oct. 30, 8 p.m.Reception to follow. www. nald.ca/mothergooseprogram

* * *

At the Galleries

• Dogs, a series of paintings by Julie Glick, are on view at the Jacobs Lounge Visual Arts Space in the Miles Nadal JCC, Oct. 20 to Nov. 21.

• Yael Brotman's Mnemonic Stoop and Candida Girling's Marcovaldo: Where the Sidewalk Ends are the exhibitions on view at the loop Gallery, 1273 Dundas St. W. Until Nov. 14. 416-516-2581.

Lenin's Embalmers continues Thiessen's interest in Jewish themes

By KATHRYN KATES
Special to The CJN

Lenin's Embalmers, by Governor General's Award-winning playwright Vern Thiessen, kicks off the Harold Green Jewish Theatre Company's 2010/11 season later this month.

Thiessen's work is inspired by the non-fiction book Lenin's Embalmers, by Ilya Zbarsky and Samuel Hutchinson. Although the piece deals with many issues, Thiessen focuses on Lenin's embalming and takes huge liberties by fictionalizing it.

"The play takes place in 1924," says the Winnipeg-born playwright, who moved to New York City three years ago with his partner, Susie Moloney, a horror novelist.

"It's the story of two Jewish scientists who are pegged by Joseph Stalin to embalm Vladimir Lenin or face death," Thiessen says.

The dark, absurdist comedy is based on the true story of Vladimir Vorobiov and Boris Zbarsky, Lenin's real embalmers.

"I found it incredibly ironic that the two scientists that were doing this were Jewish and that Lenin was also part Jewish, and, although not terribly religious people, normally they would be putting these people in the ground within 24 hours, let alone trying to make them live forever."

Thiessen said the protagonists in the play are torn between their loyalties to each other, their science and their cultural background, somewhat.

Although Thiessen, one of Canada's most produced playwrights, is not Jewish, he's written on Jewish themes a lot. He says his Jewish friends are convinced that if he did DNA testing, he'd find roots back to a shtetl somewhere.

"Personally, the story had a great interest to me, because my parents grew up in the southern Ukraine," says Thiessen. "I'm of Mennonite origins, and both my grandfathers were taken away to concentration camps in their early '30s during one of the Stalinist purges. The cultural aspect of the play, the time period and why I wrote the play is really a testament to my grandparents and to my parents and their survival underneath that system."

Another reason he devoted a couple of years to the project was his interest in the scientific aspects of it. Lenin's embalming was quite the feat of science at the time.

Thiessen received a commission from the Sloan Foundation in the United States, which funds artistic ventures dealing with science themes, and he made a connection with New York's Ensemble Studio Theatre, where the play premiered in March 2010 to critical acclaim.

This production marks the Canadian premiere and is a co-production with the Winnipeg Jewish Theatre (WJT). It's directed by Geoffrey Brumlick and stars James Durham, David Fox, Martin Julien, Hardee T. Lineham, Arne Macpherson, Harry Nelken, Steven Ratzlaff and Janine Theriault.

The playwright had numerous offers from other companies wanting to produce Lenin's Embalmers, including the Stratford Festival. He choose Harold Green and the WJT because they were the most passionate, and he said he's thrilled about his decision after seeing the cast in rehearsal in Winnipeg.

Next spring, Lenin's Embalmers will be produced by Theatre Artists Studio in Phoenix, Ariz. It's also been optioned for translation into Polish for a production in Warsaw and into Hebrew for a production in Tel Aviv.

Thiessen has written for radio, television and the stage. His plays – which include Shakespeare's Will, Apple, Einstein's Gift, Blowfish, The Resurrection Of John Frum and Vimy – have been produced across North America and Europe.

When not working, Thiessen, who has won numerous awards, including the Canadian Jewish Playwriting Competition, and the Governor General's Literary Award, enjoys being a sports fan. He roots for the New York Mets baseball team and is an Edmonton Oiler hockey fan, because of a loyalty to the city where he spent much of his adult life.

Lenin's Embalmers runs at the Al Green Theatre, Miles Nadal JCC, 750 Spadina Ave., Toronto from Oct. 30 to Nov. 21. Buy tickets at 416-366-7723 or online at www.hgjewishtheatre.com.

Painted Visions from the Written Word

By CYNTHIA GASNER
Special to The CJN

Words in literature and song often conjure up images in our minds.

"There is often one sentence, one phrase or an idea which captures the essential theme of the entire story," artist Ruth Frankel says.

"It could be a message of unconditional love, hope, belief, desperation, glory or one of the many human predicaments that entangle or threaten us – stories of naïveté or sophistication, ignorance or profundity, cruelty or perseverance."

Frankel's current exhibition, titled, Painted Visions from the Written Word, is on display at Bookclub-in-a-Box Literary and Activity Centre, 875 Eglinton Ave. West, Suite 210.

Frankel, an award-winning artist who has had many group and solo exhibitions, uses a multimedia, three-dimensional approach in her works. "I never strive to illustrate but to respond with a personal vision that I hope can be shared with the viewer and thus heighten an awareness of some aspect of the human condition."

She says this show includes 20 of her works inspired by writers as diverse as Anne Frank and Anne Michaels, and Isaac Bashevis Singer and S.Y. Agnon.

In her multi-dimensional art, Frankel works with canvas, paper, acrylic, fabric, pastels, wood, string and other materials.

She began painting as a very small child. She recalls that on freezing cold days, she and her sister would take a shortcut to school through the Art Gallery of Ontario "and thus I frequently saw many masterpieces."

As a teenager, she was introduced to Irving Stone's novel Lust for Life. "I discovered the great art of Vincent Van Gogh. And, I discovered that the purpose of great art was to say something about the human condition, to raise awareness of some aspect of life which might lead to change, in line with the Jewish credo to make the world a better place."

On a trip to New York, she says she discovered the collages of American artist Romare Bearden, "whose fragmentations and distortions captured the history, vitality, tragedy and triumph of the Black people in American. I resolved to do the same for the Jewish people."

An art teacher and lecturer, she says that she found "tremendous inspiration in the work of Isaac Bashevis Singer, whose words fly off the page and form pictures real enough to touch."

The exhibit runs until Nov. 24 and is open from 1 to 4 p.m., Monday to Thursday. Arrangements can also be made to view it on evenings and weekends. For more information on Painted Visions from the Written Word, go to www.bookclubinabox.com, call 416-578-5571 or call Ruth Frankel, 905-709-1420.

Yochna and Shmelka*, a multimedia work by Ruth Frankel from a short story by Isaac Bashevis Singer.

Happy Days' Mr. C lost family in Shoah

JTA

Actor Tom Bosley, best known as Happy Days dad Howard Cunningham, died last week of lung cancer. He was 83.

Bosley, who was Jewish, was a Tony Award winner, but he gained his greatest fame as the patriarch of the Cunningham clan on Happy Days, the 1970s sitcom about life in 1950s Milwaukee.

Bosley was nominated for an Emmy Award in 1978. The show ran from 1974 to 1984.

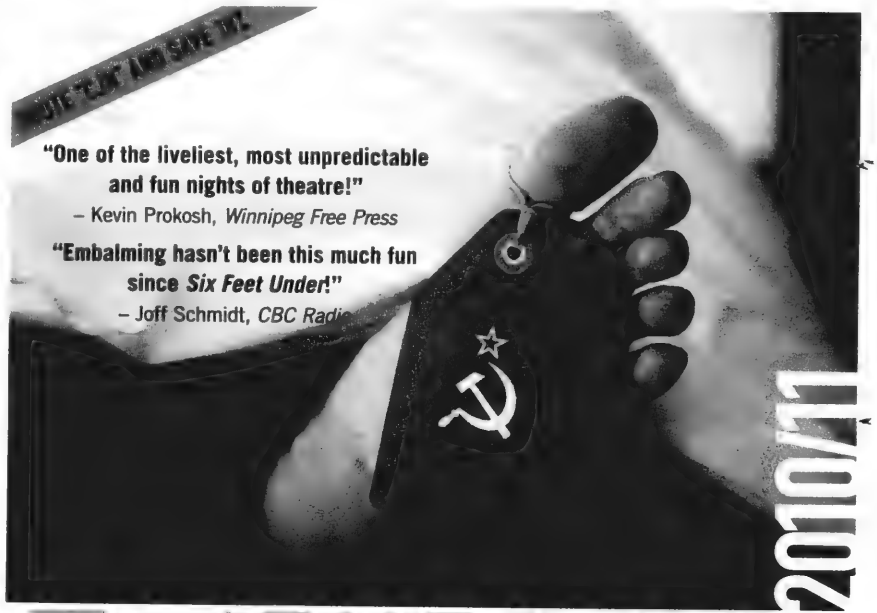
Bosley was also known for his portrayal of the crime-solving priest on Father Dowling Mysteries and Sheriff Amos Tupper in Angela Lansbury's Murder She Wrote.

He played himself in the 2004 movie Paper Clips, about the efforts of middle-school students in Whitwell, Tenn., to collect six million paper clips in memory of Holocaust victims.

The effort and the paper clip he contributed was meaningful to him, Bosley told the Philadelphia Jewish Exponent.

"It was important for me as a Jew to do it," he told the newspaper. "I had lost a great-uncle, whom I never met, in the Holocaust."

Bosley reportedly found it amusing that he played numerous priests during his acting career, even though he was Jewish.



"One of the liveliest, most unpredictable and fun nights of theatre!"
– Kevin Prokosh, Winnipeg Free Press
"Embalming hasn't been this much fun since Six Feet Under!"
– Joff Schmidt, CBC Radio
2010/11
LENIN'S EMBALMERS
From one of Canada's most produced and award-winning playwrights comes an absurdist, dark comedy spun from a true story. Lenin's Embalmers tells the captivating tale of Boris Zbarsky and Vladimir Vorobiov, two scientists chosen by The Committee for Immortalization to embalm Vladimir Lenin after his death in 1924, a time when communism and Soviet power were on the minds of many.
Canadian Premiere
OCTOBER 30 – NOVEMBER 21, 2010 AT AL GREEN THEATRE
Single tickets available now by calling 416-366-7723
For group sales call Judy at 416-932-9995 ext 224
HAROLD GREEN JEWISH THEATRE COMPANY
www.hgjewishtheatre.com
koffler

Lenin's 'Jewishness' as seen by pro-and anti-Communists

By JOSEPH SERGE
Arts Editor

There was a popular joke doing the rounds in the Soviet Union that went something like this: in the early days of the Communist era, whenever the Bolsheviks needed a break during their meetings, Trotsky would turn to the other ministers in the room, point at Lenin and say in a mixture of Russian and Yiddish: "If this goy leaves the room, we can have a minyan and can daven Minchah."

The joke being, of course, that the Russian Revolution was Jewish in origin. But more telling was that in the mind of Soviet citizens who told this joke, Lenin was not part of this cabal, because Lenin was not Jewish.

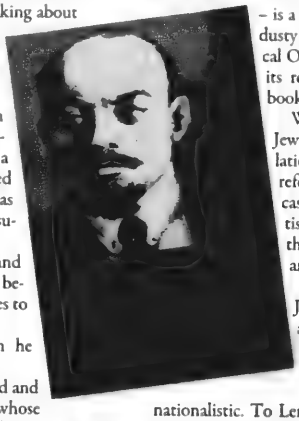
Why then did Yohanan Petrovsky-Shtern, associate professor of history at Northwestern University and the director of the school's Crown Family Center for Jewish Studies, write a book called Lenin's Jewish Question (Yale University Press)?

In his defence, he wrote the book almost apologetically and admits in the preface that his inclination was not to do it. But after reflecting on the subject matter, he realized that although Lenin was not Jewish, the perception that he was, or might have been, was a convoluted, highly charged and significant subject. Why did the Soviet-era governments hide any traces of Lenin's Jewish past, such as they were? And why, later, did the right-wing anti-Communists exaggerate Lenin's Jewish genealogy?

First things first: if Lenin was alive today, he would not be able to make aliyah under the Law of Return. Neither of Lenin's parents were Jewish, his mother was a Christian of German heritage, and he was baptized and never circumcised.

Lenin's Jewish origins go back to his great-grandfather, Moshko Blank, who was born sometime between 1758 and 1763. He was an Ashkenazi, Yiddish-speaking Jew, married to the devout Miriam Froimovitch.

The author spends much time talking about Blank, a town pest who spent his life at odds with his local Jewish community, frequently engaging in long drawn-out squabbles and lawsuits.



He was a prototype for the modern self-hating Jew who considered assimilation into the Russian culture as a "redeeming escape from the uncivilized and rustic Jewish environment filled as he thought with obsolete rites and superstitions."

He converted both his sons, Abel and Yisrael, who were sent to state schools, became doctors and changed their names to Dmitrii and Alexander.

Moshko himself converted when he turned 80, shortly after his wife died.

It was his son, Alexander, converted and assimilated, a doctor in St. Petersburg, whose daughter, Maria Alexandrovna, gave birth to Vladimir Ulianov, or Lenin.

"In the strictest terms of Jewish tradition, Lenin's mother, Maria Blank, was born to a family of a Christian convert, married someone Russian Orthodox and was not Jewish on either side. Lenin would be flatly denied that opportunity [to make aliyah], even by the most liberal Jewish agency. There was nothing Jewish about Lenin."

As the author writes, somewhat tongue-in-cheek, "The main character of this study – a Jewish Lenin – is a fictitious artifact that belongs on a dusty shelf of the East European Historical Old Curiosity Shop – together with its researchers and the author of this book."

Whether Lenin even knew about his Jewish ancestry is a subject of speculation. He certainly never made any reference to it in his lifetime. His occasional condemnation of anti-Semitism was only as a tool to bring down the Czarist regime, which was highly anti-Semitic.

As a Marxist, Lenin believed that Jews should seek assimilation into a decentralized and proletarian international culture. He was no fan of the Bund, the union of Jewish workers, which he saw as too nationalistic. To Lenin, nationalism was a blasphemy against proletarian internationalism and he thought the Bund's claim that anti-Semitism penetrated the workplace contradicted class theory.

But Jews, as such, the author writes, "did not interest him in the least. [He] treated and mistreated the Jews according to his immediate pragmatic needs."

After his death, Lenin's sister discovered her family's Jewish origins while she was writing a biography of him. When she brought this to light, the Soviet authorities chose to suppress the information.

The book argues that it wasn't anti-Semitism per se that caused the Communists to be weary of publicizing Lenin's heretofore unknown Jewish roots so much as they didn't want to dispel the cult image of Lenin as an individual of pure Russian blood. "Stalin's vision of the Communist party... had no room for a Jewish Lenin."

This suppression lasted until the collapse of the Soviet Union. Lenin's Jewish ancestry, such as it was, was considered top-secret information in the Soviet Union, even during Gorbachev's perestroika years.

Lenin's Jewish origins surfaced just before and immediately after the collapse of the Soviet Union and for most commentators this suppression was proof of the anti-Semitism of the regime.

But it was the anti-Semitic right-wing anti-Communists who seized upon this discovery. The revelation that Lenin had Jewish origins was enough to make sense of each and every action Lenin had undertaken against Russia. They went so far as to reinvent Lenin's ancestry, even portraying his mother as a Jew.

To these Russian nationalists, made up of anti-Semitic xenophobes, Lenin's Jewishness was the most important issue for understanding the Russian Revolution.

Concise and to the point, this book is for anyone interested in Lenin, the formative years of the Soviet Union, and the impact anti-Semitism had, and continues to have, on Russian history.

On the Park

Events & Conference Centre

• Weddings • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs • Brunches
• Corporate Meetings & Socials
• 30,000 Square Feet of Versatile Event Space
• Six Beautifully Themed Rooms • Kosher Catering Available

Event Manager Kim Héroux and General Manger John Neretlis with Tzipi Livni at On the Park Events & Conference Centre, October 6, 2010

416-510-2002
www.eventsonthepark.ca
Toll Free 1-877-727-9723

1095 Leslie Street (at Eglinton), Toronto

REAL ESTATE

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

ALAN NEWTON
REAL ESTATE LTD., BROKERAGE

HOUSES FOR SALE

CENTRE/NEW WESTMINSTER
Freehold 3 Br. Townhouse; New Kitchen, Huge family rm, Finished Bsmt, Garage entry.Show's Well *Helen Winer

BATHURST/CENTRE
Corner Unit Exquisite 2 Br. Condo with u/g Parking & Locker, Fabulous Finishes Thru'out, S/S Appl.Great North-West Unobstructed View, Extras Galore!! Must See! Asking $379,900 *Ted Waxman

BATHURST/ANTIBES
Great View! Fab 2 Br, 2 Baths + Solarium, Dark Stained Herringbone Flrs, New Broadloom, Appliances, Great Value! $249,000 *Ted Waxman

* Sales Representatrv Broker

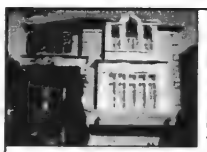
905-764-7200



616 WOBURN AVE — NEW LISTING
Presitigious Avenue Road / Lawrence! Beautifully appointed custom-built home on the best block in this high-demand area. Professionally decorated, fully landscaped, mouldings, pot lights, bay windows, vaulted ceilings, skylights, all appliances. First time offered — must see!

Call SAUL GOLDKIND 416 739-7200
Sales Representative, Sutton Group Admiral Realty Inc., Brokerage

SEIDMAN
REAL ESTATE LIMITED BROKERAGE
416-633-7373

BATHURST/WORTH BLVD.
2 storey, 3 bdr, 4 bths, fam rm, w/o to deck from kit, fin bsmt, dble gar, quiet Cr.

WILMINGTON/OVERBROOK
3 bdr, 2 bth, mod kit, L shaped liv & din, fin bsmt, dble drive, gar.

416-633-7373

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING

to place an ad call
Monday to Thursday
(CLASSIFIED DEPT. CLOSED FRIDAYS)
416-391-1836 (ask for classified advertising)

Classified Deadlines:
Wednesday at 4:00 p.m.
8 days prior to issue date.*

*PLEASE NOTE: On a week before a statutory or Jewish holiday, the deadline will be earlier. Please call for exact times.

All Classified ads require prepayment before deadline.
The CJN accepts Visa, Mastercard, American Express, Cheque or Cash

The CJN cannot be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Please bring any problems to the attention of your sales representatrve before your ad is repeated.

"WE OPEN DOORS FOR YOU"

DAVID EICHORN
REALTY LIMITED BROKERAGE

416-787-1712
www.eichornrealty.com • david@eichornrealty.com

GREAT TIME TO LIST!
Call today for a free evaluation of your property.

ARMOUR HEIGHTS ESTATE SALE — NEW LISTING
Attn builders & renovators! Classic 3 bdrm, 2 storey on 41 x 130 ft lot in desirable location close to many newly renovated homes, TTC, shops, schools. $649,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

BATHURST / SHELBORNE — NEW PRICE
Exquisite brand new custom home, 3600+ sq ft. Attention to detail thruout. 5+1 bdrms, 6 baths, hrdwd flrs on 2 levels, sep entry to in-law suite. Fab design, ideal for entertaining & family use. A bright, spacious gem @ $1,299,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

2 COVINGTON CONDO
Highly sought after corner unit! Bright & spacious 2 bdrm, 2 baths, approx. 1150 sf, se exposure, upgraded finishes throughout. 2 parking spots, luxurious lobby, fantastic amenities. Close to Lawrence Plaza, TTC. $399,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

BATHURST / LAWRENCE
3 + 1 bdrm bungalow on generous 47 x 120 ft lot in desirable location surrounded by million $ homes. Live in now, build later — an ideal spot for your dream home. PRICED FOR IMMEDIATE SALE AT $549,000 — ACT NOW! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

FEATURE HOMEOF THE WEEK

STRATHALLAN WOOD
Spacious custom built 4+1 bdrm family home in prestigious Lytton Park enclave. 4 baths, hrdwd flrs, combined lr/dr, gourmet kitchen with w/o to deck. Superior quality finishes thruout, ideal for entertaining! $1,149,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

2 NEPTUNE CONDO CORNER UNIT — NEW PRICE!
The ideal home for seniors. Eligible buyer must be 65+. Rare, bright & spacious 2 bdrm + den, 2 full baths, large lr/dr combo. Sw exposure. 24-hr security, amenities incl rooftop garden, library, exercise room, party room. Lowest priced 2 bdrm + den in building @ $329,000 — ACT NOW! Call Richard Cash, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

*BROKER OF RECORD

Slavens & Associates

www.SlavensRealEstate.com
416.483.4337

FINE PROPERTIES

SILVERWOOD AVENUE - $3,349,000.
Beautiful, elegant Forest Hill custom home w/quality luxurious finishes. 2 yrs. new w/sensational kitchen & butler's pantry, open to family rm. Unique master retreat w/his & hers dressing rms. & ensuites. Mahogany panelled library on 2nd flr. L/Vl boasts heated flrs., rec. rm., exercise rm & guest suite. Elevator to all floors. Richard Sherman

ONE ST. THOMAS - $2,450,000.
Prestigious Condo Residence designed by Robert Stern. Split bdrm. plan approx. 2556sq.ft. /w 2 Master Suites, each w/ensuite; Panelled Library w/built-in SOLD der rm off rotunda; Large principal rms, gas FP; w/o to spacious covered Terrace w/SW City Views. Spectacular amenities. Barbara Kaplan / Edith Weiss

LOWER VILLAGE - $2,295,000.
Magnificent reno'd residence w/outstanding addition. 5+1 bdrms. Main flr. family rm. & gourmet kitchen w/2 walk-outs to private garden. Charming & elegant - fabulous family home for entertaining! *Edith Weiss/ *Barbara Kaplan/ Richard Sherman

LOWER VILLAGE - $2,150,000.
Best Value for this gracious family home in Forest Hill. Recently reno'd w/style & flair. R SOLD 6 bdrms., 6 baths, 3 fireplaces, exquisite family room. Move in condition. Private yard. *Betty Cohen

AVENUE RD/ST. CLAIR - $1,650,000.
Unbelievable investment opportunity in one of Toronto's finest neighbourhoods. Triplex on 45 x 173 ft. lot in prime Deer Park. Can be converted to single family residential. Darren Slavens/ * Andrew Roher

BATHURST / FLAMINGO - $1,599,000.
Beautifully appointed 4 bdrm., 6 bath home features grand foyer, large principal rms., main flr. family rm. & office. Eat-in kitchen w/walk-out to large deck overlooking inground pool. Fin. L/lvl with wetbar & gym. 3 car garage. *Corinne Pencer/Darren Slavens

CASA LOMA - $1,189,000.
Stunning townhome in highly sought after location features a gourmet eat-in kitchen and gorgeous 2nd flr. family rm. Large master bdrm. w/spa-like ensuite. Rooftop terrace w/absolutely breathtaking views.Darren Slavens/Marlene Federman

BRIAR HILL AVE. - $1,299,000.
Rarely available 50 ft. front, Upper Forest Hill home with main flr. family room addition on bright, south-facing lot. Double garage. *Erica Binder/Richard Sherman

UPPER FOREST HILL - $619,000.
Brick bungalow on large lot (33 x 136 ft.) on quiet mature street in desirable neighbourhood. Walk to all amenities including great schools, parks and transportation. Fantastic opportunity to build new or renovate to suit. *Donna Taylor / * Linda Rose

CLARK / NEW WESTMINSTER - $544,900.
Upgraded home in wonderful Thornhill neighbourhood. Huge family rm. w/fireplace. Professionally finished l/lvl. w/custom built-ins & nanny quarters. Attached 2 car garage. Steps to parks, schools, community centre, TTC & more. *Sam Stemer

SKYMARK DRIVE - $449,000.
This elegant 2 bdrms., 3 bath suite features family rm., eat-in kitchen, expansive principal rms. w/fabulous flow for entertaining & walk-out to balcony. Locker. Luxurious amenities. 2 parking spots. Darren Slavens / * Lena Rauchwerger

YONGE / CLARK - $424,900.
Gorgeous, fully reno'd condo townhome in lovely gated community. Large master w/hardwood flrs., walk-in closet, cathedral ceiling & skylight. Finished lower level. Parking. 24 hr. gate house sec. Steps to schools, park, shops, restaurants & more. *Corinne Pencer

BAYVIEW / 401 - $319,000.
Lovely split 2 bdrm. plan in a 36 unit Boutique bldg. Master features 4pce ensuite w/soaker tub & separate shower. Eat-in kitchen overlooks bright living/dining rm. area w/walk-out to balcony. Parking. Emily Naretto

YONGE / SIXTEENTH - $299,900.
Bright & spacious corner 2 bdrms., 2 bath condo in the luxurious Vineyards by Empire, boasts hardwood flrs. S/S appl., granite counters & eat-in brkst. area in kitchen. Locker & parking incl. *Elliot Gordon

*Salesperson Broker

10 PRIVATE HOUSES FOR SALE

Bath/Clark, - 4+1 br. 4 bth. Combined LR/DR. Huge backyard. thornhillhome4sale@gmail.com for info. & appt.

Private sale, 4 bdr., 3 bth. home on prime St., in Greenlane/Leslie area. Please call 905-731-0819.

15 HOUSES FOR RENT

Winterized cottage, 45 min N. of T.O., 5 bdrms, 2 bths, partly furn., lake view. Nov. - April, $800./mo. + util. Write to: ldassas@rogers.com or call 416-574-6047.

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

ESSIE SHER

Trendy Yonge & Eglinton $579,900

Stunning 2 bdr 2 bath newly built condo. Amazing view corner unit over 1000sq ft in luxury bldng, open plan, prkng & locker.

Call Essie 416-464-5261

Re/Max Realtron Rlty. Inc.

416-782-8882

35 CONDOMINIUMS FOR RENT

Central North York, furn. 1 bdr. + den, balc., a/c + appls., new bldg., centrally loc., bus stop to subway in front of bldg., suit. for a prof. or sabbatical. Immed. 416-616-5195.

75 APARTMENT FOR RENT

BATHURST-SHEPPARD
ELEGANT TWIN BLDS.
Very lrg. 1, 2, 3 Bedrooms, 2 & 3 Bdrms. w/2 balcomes and 2 baths. Ample closets plus cedar. Roof laundry, pool, ravine setting. 6 Apts. per flr.
canyon@greenwinpm.com
416-631-9277 / 416-631-0388 Supe

82 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT

In condo-safe Bathurst/Steeles/Sheppard. Reduced rent to male for periodic light help (no cleaning) with older male. Shared kitchen, living rm. & den, incl. util., cable, laundry & private washroom. Near TTC. No smoking or pets. $500. Call 416-522-8147.

87 PROPERTY MANAGEMENT

SUMMA PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
Professional Property Management & Consulting

With over 25 years experience we manage Condominiums and Individual property investments. We also manage larger multi-unit Commercial/Industrial and Residential Properties.

At Summa, we get "TOP MARKS" for Management, Consulting and Renting!

647-341-7990
www.summapm.com
propman@summapm.com

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

THIS IS A GREAT TIME TO BUY IN FLORIDA!
Make your dreams come true and take advantage of Bank Foreclosure Condos and Houses at 50-75% below market value!
We specialize in Miami, Miami Beach, Hollywood, Hallandale, Aventura, Ft. Lauderdale, Boca Raton and Delray.

CALL TODAY
Toll Free: (800) 351-2150
(954) 816-0760; (305) 904-2365
Beachfront Realty

SO. FLORIDA CONDOS – PRICES REDUCED 30-50%
Aqualina-Beach Club-Coronado-Hamptons-Hemispheres- Hidden Bay-Jade-LaMer LaPerla-Mystic Pt.-Oceania-Ocean-Oceanview-Ocean Palms-Olympus-Parker-Pinnacle Quadoman-Renasannce-Residences-Turnberry-Summit-Trump-Wave....and others.
Personalized service. Canadian references provided.
Jerry Savlov, Licensed Realtor Optimar Int'l Realty (Sunny Isles, FL) Direct (954)540-5232
e-mail: jas2468@gmail.com www.jerrysavlov.com

DELRAY/BOCA Addison Reserve Live in the Perfect Climate..
In an Award Winning Country Club w/ Magnificent Homes from $400's to $4 mil.
CALL: Prudential Florida's On-Site Realtors Cherie & Larry Gross 561-702-7828 Or Visit Us @ HomesBytheGross.com

Century Village - Deerfield (Newport U). 2 Bedroom 1 1/2 bathrooms. Fully Furnished - laminated floors. $70,000 US. 514-489-5842.

Cent Vill., Deerfield, 1/1.5, 4th flr. deluxe, Newport N-4048. exc. loc., pool in front, water & preserved view from patio, new tiles & carpet, fully furn., 1-888-910-4447.

Pembroke Pines, Florida - Hollybrook Golf and Tennis Club. 1 bedroom, 1 1/2 bathrooms. Free golf and tennis. Security. Just bring your toothbrush! Firm $55,000. 1-954-431-3253.

Century Village Deerfield. Most gorgeous reno'd. unit in the village, 2 br., 2 bth. Furnished. Cathy 514-287-1256.

MIAMI BEACH NEW TO MARKET LARGE CONDO ON THE OCEAN GREAT TERRACE OCEAN VIEW David/Kotler Rlty. 305-895-3000

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Hallandale, Three Island, renov., lovely furnishings, 1 bdr. w/ sunroom, deck o/looks canal, tennis, pool, close to beach, 3 mo. min. Call 416-630-2177 www.hallandale.webs.com

Sunny W. Palm Beach - Beautiful 2 br. convertible 2 full bths. New Kit. New furnishings. Views. Balc. Prkg., pool. No shabbos elevator. 3 mos. min. Call 301-907-0842.

Longboat Key, Beaut., 2 bed., 2 bth., Beach Place. Newly, fully reno'd. & furn'd., sunset views, covered prkng., avail. January & April 2011. email: efeis@aol.com or call Elliott at 416-745-2711.

Cent. Village, Deerfield, 2 bdr., 2 bth., 2nd flr., $1500/mo. US, min. 3 mos. Avail. immed. 416-346-5445.

Inverary - 2 bed., 2 bth. on golf course. Avail. Jan. - Apr. 2011. Call 416-733-0411 extn. 23.

N. Miami /Sunny Isles. across ocean,walk to shops. Full winter seas. 1.5 br 2 bth.,647-284-3754.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Wynmoor, Coconut Crk. 2bd./2ba., parq. flr., encl. patio, sunset water view, golf, tennis, pools, fit. club. US $1,600/mo, min. 3 mo. 617-959-4600 or sswartz@aol.com.

1-1 1/2 Condo Boca Raton. Furnished, renovated, gated. 24 hour security. Pools, tennis courts, 15 minutes to beach. $1600 monthly. Minimum 3 months. Available December 15th. 514-744-6633.

Hallandale, Fl. Three Islands condo on intracoastal w/FT concierge, 1 br. 2 bth. + den, prkg. & all amenities, close to shops & beach; fully furn., no pets/smoker Avail. for full winter season. 416-880-2322.

Arlen House East. 2 bed., 2 bth., For season from Nov. 15th. $1800/mo. USD. 416-256-0862.

Boynton Beach. Gated, adult comm., 2 bed., 2 bth., solarium, fully furn'd., avail. for season. 647-407-2987,416-785-8188 aaronlang@aaronlang.ca

Arlen House East, 1 bdr., 1.5 baths., avail. Jan. 5th, 2 or more mos. Call 416-486-4479.

Deerfield Beach, Century Village. One bedroom, 1 1/2 bathrooms. Furnished, excellent condition. Minimum 4 months. 514-278-8645; 514-488-2772.

Hallandale, 3 Islands, large 2 bdr., 2 bth., fully equip. & furn., 24/7 secur., seas. Call 416-447-1303.

Arlen House E., 2 bdrm., 2 bth., for winter season. Pool & intracoastal view. 416-781-5511.

Pembroke Pines/Hollybrook. Seasonal or annual rental. 2 bed., 2 bth., decorator - furn'd., just painted, upgraded kitchen, lake/golf view. Golf, tennis, pool & CH. Call 631-860-1515.

SUNNY ISLES 4-6 week rental Jan. - Feb. 15, 3/3, oceanfront, new bldg. $200/day. E-mail sunnyisles33160@gmail.com

Century Village, Boca Raton 2 Bedrooms, 1 1/2 bathrooms. Flexible dates (3 months preferred). 514-951-7466.

Hollywood, beautiful 15th floor beachfront condo with exceptional views. Very spacious. One bedroom with convertible, 2 bathrooms. Sleeps 6. Recently renovated. Two pools, gym. $2200/monthly, minimum 4 months. 514-488-2772.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Palm Aire C. C. Pompano Beach, Fl.
Seasonal Rentals
2 & 3 Bdrm. Garden Apts. with 2 & 3 baths, fully Beautifully furnished Available for Seasonal Rental
Please phone: Milton Realty 561-487- 9620, 561-866-0493 cell, or Email miltonreal@aol.com

Longboat Key, West Coast Fla. Veranda Bch. Club, beautiful 2 bed., 2 bth. condo on bch. from Dec. 4 - Dec. 18 (1 or 2 weeks). Call 905-731-0880.

CV Deerfield Bch. Seasonal. 4 mo. rental. 1 bed.,1.5 bth., 2nd flr. garden. No lift .Excel. condition. $1500 USD/mo. 954-725-6137.

GOLF IN NAPLES, COUNTRY-SIDE GOLF & COUNTRY CLUB, beautiful 2 bdr., 2 bth., fully equip. kit., lndry., 3 TV's, grnd. flr., lanai overlooking lake, pool & tennis crts., gated golf community & club house with fully equip. workout rm., lrge. pool & tennis crts. & restaurant. Walking to Publix Mall. $2500/US, 1 mo. min. Avail Jan. 15 (negot) to end of March. Andrea, 239-353-5154 or astringer@cogeco.ca.

MIAMI BEACH SEASON RENTAL OCEANFRONT LARGE CONDO BALCONY DIRECT OCEAN VIEW BEAUTIFUL. 305-895-3000

Cent. Vill. Boca 55+ Luxury. 2/2. Waterview, new kit. appl. A/C & furnishings. Winter rental (4 mos.) or yearly. 718-698-6269.

Del Ray, 2 bdr., 2 bth., overlooks golf crse., 2nd flr. w/elev., Jan. & Feb. 905-731-1220.

Sunny Isles, across beach. Nicely furnished. One bedroom, 1 spacious dining and living room with balcony. 1 1/2 bathrooms, KOSHER kitchen. Three months winter minimum. 450-973-9920; cell 514-691-9920.

Miami, Oceanfront, lux. lrg. 1 bed., 2 bth. kosher condo., nr. shul & Bal Harbour. reasonable. Jan. 1-April. 416-783-9173 or 416-893-9598. No Saturday calls.

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

Canadian realtor. Florida sun.
The perfect combination to find your next property to rent or buy.

ELIE KOFFMAN

MONTREAL
C: 514.518.3543
O: 514.937.1717

FLORIDA
C: 305.613.4508
O: 305.908.5401

LONDONO REALTY GROUP INC

ECR

Cent. Vill. Boca 2 br., 2 bth. LR & DR. Excel. condit. Beau. decor. Florida rm. encl. Fully furn. delux bldg. Elevator. 416-512-0620.

147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION

Miami Beach - New spacious, lux., furn'd. studio, 1 bed. & 2 bed apts. w/balcs. avail. at oceanfront Crown, 40th & Collins. Avail. daily, wkly., mnthly. Daily hskpg., outdr. pool, gym, valet pkng. incl. 877-424-7848, stay@churchillsuites.com, www.churchillSuites.com

147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION

Sunny Isles - Lux. spacious, furn'd. 1 bed., 2 bed. & 3 bed. apts. w/ balcs. & intracoastal views. 2 bl. from beach. Avail. daily, wkly., mnthly. Daily hskpg., outdr. pool, gym, marina. Call 877-424-7848, lyc@churchillsuites.com, www.churchillSuites.com

240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

Hebrew-speaking Office Admin. 2+yrs exp: incl. Israeli exp., customs paperwork, read/write English. Salary: $41,704 resume to: neild@picadillyfashions.com

245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED

Accountant/Bookkeeper seeks P/T position. Experienced. Computer literate. Call Gerry at 416-733-8013.

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Nanny, Housekeeper, elderly care, NO fee to employer, Filipino from Israel, Singapore & Hong Kong & from the islands. Live in/out, screening guar. Call 416-733-3915.

Caregivers/Nannies/Housekeepers Filipino, Local & Europe. Live in/ live out. 416-932-3042.

Del's Cleaning Service, we can clean houses, renovation clean up, and after hours cleaning. Call 416-743-4174/416-710-0408.

Male support care worker, live-in or live/out, exper., refs. available. 416-887-5872, 647-340-6112.

Shiny cleaning for houses, apts. & condos., 15 yrs. exper., refs. Call 416-820-5925 (leave msg.).

Hardworking, strong young man avail. to do odd jobs, help moving, clean up, garden work, etc. Very reas. rates. Call 416-385-2266.

Polish & English speaking woman avail. to work as live in/out caregiver: cleaning, cooking, prepare medication. Exper. 416-255-0344.

English/Polish speaking lady willing to take care of elderly person. Refs. 416-446-7609.

257 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE

PSW seeks job as priv. caregiver, 5 yrs. exper., has own car, live out. Please call 647-347-1143.

275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED

Vivacious, active, 59, loyal female, seeking 50+ sincere, active guy. Write to CJN Box #5254.

305 ARTICLES WANTED

Ben Buys Book Collections, manuscripts, diaries, letters, documents & militaria. 416-890-9644.

Seeking Holocaust/Shoah, Founding of Israel, Ghetto, Camp, Pogrom documents, letters & papers for historical preservation. Ben. Discretion assured. 416-890-9644.

Replying to an ad with a CJN Box Number?

Address your mail to:

The Canadian Jewish News 1500 Don Mills Rd. Suite 205 North York, Ont. M3B 3K4

Don't forget to put the Box Number on your envelope.

CJN Box #'s are valid for 30 days.

Support the advertisers who support the

The Canadian Jewish news

SERVICE DIRECTORY

370 CATERING

Dairy Treats Restaurant & Catering
Brit Milah • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
Home or Office • Shiva Meals • Corporate Accounts
3522 Bathurst St. (S. of Wilson) 416-787-0309
www.dairytreats.com

REGINA'S CATERING & FINE FOODS
A Family Tradition for 48 Years
• BRIT MILAH & NAMINGS
• SIMCHAS
• SHIVA MEALS
• SHABBOS DINNERS
844 Sheppard Ave. W.
(at Wilmington)
www.reginasfinefoods.com
416-636-1044

395 ELECTRICAL

All kinds of electrical jobs. For great service call Serge, 416-834-4312. Licensed.

405 FURNITURE

Marcantonio Furniture Repair Specializing in touchups. Restoration & general repairs done on premises. 416-654-0518.

Earl Bales Sr. Woodworkers. Caning, chair repairs, regluing, custom. reas. 416-630-6487.

412 HEATING AND AIR CONDITIONING

Cooling, Heating Service, Repair. Fully licensed. FREE estimate. Res/Com. 647-299-7060.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENT

Hardwood Floor sanding, staining, refinishing, new floors, installation & repairs. Jules - 416-726-5338.

General Contractors for all your renovations. Very experienced. Great service. Reasonable rates. SB Construction. 416-834-4312.

HANDYMENCH. SHOWER REPAIRS. Bath. & Kit. renov., cabinet reface, paint/tile. water damage. Call 416-826-0574.

Best Prices!!! Best Quality!!! Best Service!!! Home Improvements & painting. Licensed & Bonded Call Shlomo 416-804-1706.

Odd jobs, small repairs, painting, etc. Please call Fred at 416-420-8731.

A-1 Handyman. Expert kitchen repairs and refacing. New kitchens and countertops, plumbing and electrical. For free estimate call 647-887-9075.

HANDYMAN. Plumbing, electrical, carpentry, plastering, ceramics, locks. Ephram, 416-630-3047.

433 LESSONS

BE "COOL," BE A COMPUTER WIZ Learn to use the computer for beginners. All skills made easy CAll JANICE 416-806-0278.

445 MOVING

GEMINI MOVERS & STORAGE LTD.
Since 1972
• Homes • Apartments • Offices
• Professional Piano Movers
Tel: 416-782-8736
Call until 11 p.m.
Fax: 416-240-9133
Top quality service is mandatory!

G&M Moving and Storage. Apts., homes, offices. Short notice. Large or small. We carry supplies. 905-738-4030.

srmmovers2009@hotmail.com A-1 Short Notice. Insured. Home, apt. office, bus. 416-747-7082.

450 PAINTING/ WALLPAPER

Prof. painting/paper-hanging 416-667-9869 or 905-762-1657 Jacob. No Shabbos calls.

Painting, res., commercial, interior/exterior. Ceramic Tile & Drywall. Reasonable. FREE ESTIMATES. PAINT HOUSE ENT. 416-459-1383.

455 PHOTOGRAPHY /VIDEO

Memories fade. Slides, home movies, and videos collect dust. We're "Specialists" in DVD transfers and Preserving Memories. Fred; 416-229-6000; frednelson@madisonvideo.tv

460 PLUMBING

PLUMBER ON CALL!
Drain, Plumbing, Heating, A/C
Call TOM the Plumber
647-654-8099

485 SNOW REMOVAL

Mackin Landscaping & Snow Removal offers quality commercial & residential snow plowing & fall leaf clean-ups 416-816-2672.

500 TUTORING

THE TUTORSHIP ADVANTAGE Math, Chemistry, Physics, Biology, English, French, Essay Writing. 416-386-1595 www.tutorship.ca

510 UPHOLSTERY

All fabrics half price when you upholster with us. NO HST. 416-931-2660.

CLASSIFIED DIRECTORY

5 HOUSES FOR SALE
10 HOUSES FOR SALE PRIVATE
15 HOUSES FOR RENT
20 HOUSES FOR SALE RENT
24 HOUSES WANTED TO BUY
25 HOUSES WANTED TO RENT
30 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE
35 CONDOMINIUM FOR RENT
40 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE RENT
45 CONDOMINIUM WANTED
50 ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
55 ACCOMMODATION WANTED
60 SHARED ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
62 SHARED ACCOMMODATION WANTED
65 ACCOMMODATION/SWAP EXCHANGE
67 HOUSE SITTERS
70 UNIVERSITY ACCOMMODATION
75 APARTMENT FOR RENT
78 SHORT TERM RENTAL AVAILABLE
80 SHORT TERM RENTAL WANTED
81 APARTMENT TO SUBLET
82 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT
84 ROOM WANTED FOR RENT
85 APARTMENT WANTED
87 PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
105 COTTAGE FOR SALE
110 COTTAGE FOR RENT
115 COTTAGE FOR RENT SALE
120 COTTAGE WANTED
122 TIME SHARE FOR SALE
123 TIME SHARE FOR RENT
124 ARIZONA PROPERTIES
125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE
130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT
135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE RENT
140 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION WANTED
141 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM AVAIL
145 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM WANTED
147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION
150 FLORIDA TRANSPORTATION
155 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE
160 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR RENT
165 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
170 ISRAEL PROPERTIES WANTED
175 ISRAEL ACCOMMODATION WANTED
178 ISRAEL TRANSPORTATION
180 OUT OF-TOWN PROPERTIES
185 OUT-OF COUNTRY PROPERTIES
190 VACATION PROPERTY AVAILABLE
195 VACATION PROPERTIES WANTED
196 VACATION PROPERTIES-EXCH /SHARE
198 SPACE FOR LEASE
199 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY AVAILABLE
200 OFFICE SPACE AVAILABLE
201 OFFICE SPACE WANTED
202 STORAGE SPACE WANTED
203 STORAGE SPACE AVAILABLE
205 LAND LOTS FOR SALE
210 LAND LOTS FOR LEASE
220 INVESTMENT PROPERTIES
225 INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES
230 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES
232 BUSINESS FOR SALE
235 BUSINESS WANTED
237 CAREERS/RECRUITMENT
240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES
245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED
246 VOLUNTEERS
247 DAY CARE AVAILABLE
248 DAY CARE WANTED
250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE
255 DOMESTIC HELP WANTED
257 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE
258 HEALTHCARE WANTED
259 SENIORS
260 BUSINESS PERSONALS
265 PEOPLE SEARCH
270 PERSONALS
273 INTRODUCTION SERVICES
275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED
279 PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY
280 ANNOUNCEMENTS
290 LOST & FOUND
295 PETS
300 ARTICLES FOR SALE
305 ARTICLES WANTED
313 BOATS
315 CARS
320 CONTENTS SALE
325 GARAGE SALE

SERVICE DIRECTORY

345 ACCOUNTING
350 APPLIANCES
355 AUDIO-VISUAL SALES/REPAIRS
357 AUTOMOTIVE
360 BRIDAL
365 CARPENTRY
368 CARPETS
370 CATERING
372 CHUPPAHS
375 CLEANING/CLEANING SUPPLIES
379 CLOCKS/WATCHES
380 CLOTHING
382 COUNSELLING
385 COMPUTER
386 DANCING
387 DECORATING
390 DRIVING
392 DRY CLEANING/LAUNDRY
394 EDUCATION
398 ELECTRICAL
399 ELECTRONICS
400 ENTERTAINMENT
402 FINANCIAL
404 FITNESS & WEIGHT LOSS
405 FURNITURE
408 GARAGE DOORS
407 GIFTS
410 HEALTH & BEAUTY
412 HEATING/AIR CONDITIONING
415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS
416 HOME INSPECTION
419 INTERNET SERVICE
420 INVITATIONS/PRINTING/CALLIG.
425 JEWELLERY
427 JUDAICA
430 LEASING
431 LANDSCAPING/LAWNCARE
432 LAWYERS
433 LESSONS
434 LIMOUSINE/TAXI
435 LIQUIDATION
438 LOCKSMITH
439 MAKE-UP
440 MISCELLANEOUS
442 MUSICAL SERVICES
443 MORTGAGES
445 MOVING
448 PEST CONTROL
450 PAINTING/WALLPAPERING
452 PARTY SERVICES
455 PHOTOGRAPHY/VIDEO
460 PLUMBING
465 PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
470 RENOVATIONS
472 RETIREMENT HOMES
475 ROOFING
476 SATELLITE & EQUIPMENT
480 SECURITY SYSTEMS
481 SEWING
485 SNOW REMOVAL
490 TABLE COVERING
492 TAILORING/ALTERATIONS
495 TILING
496 TRAINING
498 TRAVEL & TOURISM
500 TUTORING
510 UPHOLSTERY
512 WAITERING SERVICES
515 WATERPROOFING
520 WINDOW SERVICES
550 WORKSHOPS

Israel & the Jewish World

Iran rejects AMIA trial

JTA

BUENOS AIRES — Iran has rejected Argentina's proposal to put on trial in a neutral country those accused in the bombing of a Jewish community centre in Buenos Aires.

In a letter sent last week to UN Secretary General Ban Ki-moon, Iran called the proposal "unsustainable."

"The Iranian government has ensured that no Iranian citizen was involved, directly or indirectly, in the bombing of the AMIA," the letter said.

Argentine prosecutors have accused Iran of masterminding the July 1994 attack on the AMIA central Jewish umbrella building, which killed 85 and wounded hundreds. Prosecutors in Buenos Aires have issued warrants for the arrest of five Iranians, including Iranian Defence Minister Ahmed Vahidi, in the case.

Argentine President Cristina Fernandez de Kirchner had made the proposal to hold a trial in a third country while at the United Nations General Assembly meeting in New York on Sept. 24.

Argentina will issue a response to Iran's letter, Kirchner said.

Lift Gaza blockade, Jimmy Carter says

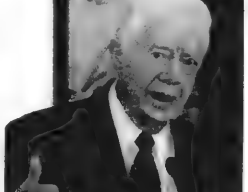
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

DAMASCUS — Former U.S. president Jimmy Carter, during a visit to Damascus last week, called for Israel to completely lift its blockade on the Gaza Strip.

Carter made the remarks in the forum of a delegation known as the Elders, comprising former world leaders, who met with Syrian President Bashar Assad and Hamas leaders in Syria.

Despite the U.S. and the European Union's labelling of Hamas as a terrorist organization, the Elders met with exiled Hamas politburo leader Khaled Meshal, as Carter has done during previous regional visits.

Following their talks with Assad and Meshal, the Elders said people in the region have "very low expectations" that the current U.S.-led talks between Israel and the Palestinian Authority, which excluded Hamas, would succeed.



Jimmy Carter

Carter, who has visited the Gaza Strip several times in recent years, did not accompany the rest of the delegation on their trip there Oct. 16.

Despite his absence from Gaza, Carter renewed calls for Israel to lift its blockade of the Hamas-governed Gaza Strip. Israel imposed the blockade in 2007 after Hamas wrestled control over the territory in a violent coup.

"The blockade is one of the most serious human rights violations on Earth and it must be lifted fully," Carter said from Syria.

Besides Carter, the Elders delegation included former Irish president Mary Robinson and former UN envoy Lakhdar Brahimi. While in Gaza, the group described Israel's blockade as an "illegal collective punishment" and "an impediment to peace."

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES 905-886-5610 Call ext. 369
ISRAEL FALL/WINTER
FROM $686* +tax
*Specific dates apply

Sports & Leisure

If you're reading this
ADVERTISING WORKS!
To book your ad in this spot call
416-391-1836

Israeli boxer ready to rumble at Rama

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

It's hard to imagine that in a sport as brutal and primal as boxing, there's a cerebral element to it as well. But Hagar Finer Smoelfield might well be the thinking man's – or woman's – fighter, who considers a bout to be a chess match as much as a slugfest.

"I like technique. I like to be smart. I like to break an opponent in the head, not the body, psychologically," she said on the phone from Israel.

Smoelfield, 26, is part of the under card at the upcoming "Rumble at Rama XIII," a boxing event at Casino Rama on Oct. 30. Headlining the five-card fight will be Canada's former world cruiserweight champion, Troy Ross, who will take on Carl Handy.

Smoelfield will defend her Women's International Boxing Federation (WIBF) bantamweight title against Julia Sahin, a German boxer who defeated her in 2006. Smoelfield vividly recalls that match, which was fought in Germany and which she believes she won, except for the judges' decision.

"All the audience booed" when the verdict was delivered, she said. "It was obvious she didn't win."

The revenge factor is being touted prior to the contest at Rama, and although she agrees Sahin "is very tough," Smoelfield is confident she will prevail.

"I know it will go all the way, because she won't go down and I won't go down," she said.

Smoelfield has won 21 fights, six by knockout, lost seven and drawn three. She attributes her record and her never-say-die spirit to her first love, karate and the martial arts, as well as her own obsession to be perfect.

"I started training in martial arts when I was 13, and at age 18 I won the Israeli championship in karate. Then my trainer told me I should continue in fighting as I had good potential to successful, but in boxing.

"So I moved to boxing."

What is it about either sport that attracted her?

"I took it up for self-defence. When you live in Israel, the national security is not so good. You have to protect yourself. I fell in love with martial arts. I like the discipline, the way you learn, that you have to repeat every exercise many times."

"You have the responsibility on yourself," she continued. "If you practice not so much, you are not so good. The more you work, the better you get."

Her parents were not particularly happy at her choice of sports. "They didn't like it," Smoelfield acknowledged. "They're still afraid about it... I told them, 'Either you're with me or I'll be alone.'"

They now come to watch her fight occasionally. "My mom always cries," and her sister "worries about me."

It's not like you can avoid injuries when you're an internationally ranked fighter. Smoelfield admits to some rib injuries – she brushes them off as minor inconveniences – but a few years ago she was hurt pretty seriously. During one match, a fighter bumped her head against Smoelfield's face, breaking a bone near her eye socket. She suffered nerve damage and was out of action for a year. "I couldn't feel part of my face," she recalled.

Yet that hasn't dissuaded her. "In the ring, I never give up," she said. "I get that from martial arts training. You never give up, never give up. You always have a chance, right to the end."

And that's where the cerebral side of the sweet science comes in. "You look at who you're standing against and go opposite your opponent's strengths. It's like chess," she said.

Looking back, she recalls a match against Regina Halmich, a German fighter who was ranked number 1 at the time, as "the fight of my career.

"I was much better than her, but she was such a good opponent, she brought out the best in me."

Her performance launched her career and opened lots of doors in the boxing world.

Interestingly, Smoelfield considers boxing more of a hobby than anything else. Although a professional, her main source of income is from a martial arts studio she runs in the heart of Tel Aviv, where she teaches karate and krav maga, the Israeli army's hand-to-hand combat techniques. During her one-week visit to Toronto and Rama, she expects to meet local martial arts fighters and train with them.

"I know I'm going to hit, but I don't know who," she quipped.

Smoelfield wears her Israeli heritage proudly – one set of blue trunks are adorned with a white Star of David. She's a real fan favourite and even in Germany, when she fought the local hero, "I had Germans who picked up Israeli flags" and waved them.

"That's the best. I give all the champions the best fight they had."

Hagar Finer Smoelfield

OperaYork Presents Giacomo Puccini's
La Bohème
Sabatino Vacca, Artistic Director
October 31, 2010 2pm
November 4 & 6, 2010, 8 pm.
Tickets: $40 to $50
Richmond Hill Centre for the Arts
10268 Yonge St., Richmond Hill
Call 905 787-8811
or visit http://rhcentre.ca
Full production with orchestra, chorus and supertitles

Toronto's dim, underground world

NEW TO CANADA
By NINA SHENHAV

"They want me to start working next Monday," I shout excitedly. Meir, who's frying me some potatoes, puts the pan away, looks at me long and then hugs me even longer.

"At last," he whispers, "at last you'll make some money." I back away a bit. "It's, uh, for free… I'm volunteering." He keeps hugging me.

But the fries don't taste so good, and he forgets to season my salad (a form of aggression). I don't complain. Instead I say, "So, you'll give me a ride back and forth, right? It's only 40 kilometres from here."

Meir stops preparing his cutlets. His eyes say no. I'm angry. "Some day, when I'm rich and famous, you'll come crawling to me!" I promise. "When? When will you be rich and famous already?" he answers.

"Well… well, you'll see. And then I'd leave you! You'll regret the day you were born," I shout. "I already regret that day," he says pensively and puts a cutlet on my plate.

On Monday, I'm excited and nervous. I take one bus, then another, then I enter the subway. I've only used the subway once before in my life. I'm puzzled like crazy. The signs seem to be in Chinese. Where the hell are all the trains? And more importantly, where the hell am I? I ask a lady for directions, and she points to the escalators, saying I should go down.

Standing on the moving stairs, I notice I'm going toward heaven, and with all due respect, my place is not there yet, if at all. I try to move down, but the escalators are stronger than me, and so are the two tough-looking guys in my way.

Canadians don't like to chat. I'm in a silent world. Everybody has iPods. At last, I enter this train of horror. None of the stations' names sound familiar. (Meir wrote the names down for me.) So I get out of the train and step onto the platform.

A guy with blue hair shows me the way out. Problem is, now that I'm out in the open, I'm not allowed back. So I pay again, and return to the dim, underground world. Millions of people, and I feel so alone. I miss Meir.

I see a bunch of people in a hurry. I join them and ask a smiling Asian guy where we're headed. He doesn't know, either, and little by little his smile fades. I let him go from my strong arms and turn to a blond woman. My English is a mess. When I talk to Chinese people, Pakistanis, Indians, I'm good. But God forbid, when I turn to "real" Canadians, all of my self-esteem vanishes. I'm voiceless.

Somehow, after 80 hours, I get to the place I was trying to reach. At least from now on, I'll know the way there.

The employer hands me a note with addresses. "These are all the places you'll have to be at. Each day you volunteer in a different place. You'll never be bored, eh?"

I thank him with tears, lots of tears.

Nina.shenhav@gmail.com

BAKED SWEET & WHITE POTATO SPEARS

1-1/2 lb. sweet potatoes, cut into spears
1-1/2 lb. baking potatoes, cut into spears
1/2 c zesty Italian dressing
1/4 c grated Parmesan cheese
2 tbsp. chopped fresh parsley

HEAT oven to 375°F. Toss potatoes with dressing. SPREAD onto lightly greased baking sheet. BAKE 30 min.; turn potatoes over. Bake 30 min., topping with cheese after 25 min. Sprinkle with parsley.

CAPLAN'S

experience
the Caplan's difference

1111 Weston Road (just south of Eglinton)
416-767-1655 • caplans.ca
Caplan's parking lot directly across from the store

A Family Business for over 60 Years

Exercise and cancer

FITNESS CORNER
By FELYCE ZOMPARELLI

Regular physical activity has been proven to help reduce your risk of developing a number of cancers, but did you know that exercise can also help during and after cancer treatment?

The Canadian Cancer Association and the American College of Sports and Medicine strongly suggest that cancer patients be as physically active as possible during and after treatment. A growing number of studies have shown that physical activity is safe during cancer therapy and can help patients cope with and recover from treatment.

Recent studies have shown exercise, supervised and modified for the individual, can improve quality of life, physical function, cardiovascular fitness, muscle strength, physical endurance, immune function and reduce cancer-related fatigue. Physical activity may even reduce the risk of the recurrence of cancer while prolonging survival.

Studies have shown exercise can help minimize cancer-therapy side effects such as nausea, diarrhea, pain, anxiety, depression and constipation.

Exercise such as flexibility training during and after treatment can increase mobility, and once treatment is finished, it may even help you regain normal range of motion. Exercise reduces stress, improves mood, boosts energy, stimulates appetite, improves body image, promotes good sleep and can help you regain strength during recovery.

Two studies done in 2006 found that staying active after cancer can help keep you healthy and cancer free. Before starting any exercise program, consult your doctor, and then, if you are a cancer survivor, contact a physiotherapist or a fitness professional with experience in this area who can design a program specifically for you.

Want to learn more? Visit me at felycesfitnessw.ca or e-mail me at felycesfitness@rogers.com.

The sea split in Chile

By AVRUM ROSENSWEIG

URBAN WRITER

The story of the Chilean miners was magnified, as all great events are, allowing us to see every nuance, shade and gradation of this historic happening.

Between August and October, 33 men survived in a small room in the San José copper and gold mine for 69 days. There they created a structure and a regimen. Anarchy was possible in that mine – writer and activist Elie Wiesel talks about sons beating their fathers for food in the concentration camps – but it was nowhere to be found.

The Chilean miners gave us a concentrated view into the intense love of family, nation and the Saviour. Each miner, beginning with Florenco Avalos, after stepping on the face of earth, hugged his wife and family. A few hugged their mistresses. But the embraces did not last long. It seemed the miners understood their "15 minutes" of Warholian fame also belonged to the Chilean people, the world and God.

Some fell to their knees first and prayed to the Lord. Some then laughed and sang parts of the Chilean national anthem, and all of them hugged Chile's president, Sebastian Pinera, thanking him for his refusal to abandon them in the bowels of that mine.

Faith was aplenty in Chile that day. "God," a miner said, "joined us in the hole," Superstition followed closely behind, and apparently the devil paid a visit or two. There was no word of a trapped atheist, but had there been, would he have prayed?

Rebirth and birthing happens around us every moment. Our skin dies and is then regenerated. When the rescue capsule – the Phoenix – entered the earth, it cast the impression of conception, of creation. The mine was the womb. When the engineered contraption erupted through the hole, it seemed as if a child would soon be reborn.

Six rescuers went down the shaft, likely thinking they might never return. How often do we see bravery like this or witness a man being lowered into a half-mile tunnel to rescue other men, not knowing if the shaft will collapse, the twine-rope will snap, or the cage will jam and be hampered by its own inefficiencies? We saw the rescuers' faces before they descended. They were smiling. So that's the way life-and-death courage looks.

The rescue of the Chilean miners felt like Apollo 11 landing on the moon, the first Beatle dying, the Israeli defeat of half a dozen armies. In our minds, and no doubt in the chronicles of history, it's an event that will be remembered forever. Why?

The Chilean mining disaster and the subsequent rescue had everything, including guts, determination, strength, humility, love, skepticism, humour, creativity, corporate irresponsibility, ingenuity, faith, community and hope. The rescue had it all with no disappointments, only celebration.

It was an event that was akin to well-written fiction, detailed and magical in its message and twists of phrases. The mining disaster and rescue, however, was real. It was not composed and then delivered. It was gracefully raw, and in it we saw ourselves – our fears, our dreams and our salvation.

An undertaker will tell you the earth is where we go upon our death. A gardener reminds us it's where we plant seeds that sprout and blossom. The rescue of the Chilean miners reminded us that a potential grave can turn into a garden.

On Oct. 13, the sea split once again, this time at the San José copper and gold mine.

(Help the world's miners.)

Send comments to avrum@veahavta.org.

PORTRAIT CONDOMINIUMS.COM

NOW UNDER CONSTRUCTION

OCCUPANCY BEGINS EARLY 2012

FREE PARKING, LOCKER & HARDWOOD FLOORS*

ELEGANT TERRACED SUITES up to 1,700 sq.ft.

MON. - THURS.: 12 - 7 PM
SAT., SUN. & HOL.: 12 - 5 PM
FRIDAY: CLOSED

695 SHEPPARD AVE W.
416-282-9600

VISIT PORTRAITCONDOMINIUMS.COM
TO VIEW
CONSTRUCTION PROGRESS
AT OUR 24 HOUR LIVE LINK

NORSTAR

Downtown Toronto's Finest Boutique Hotel
The GRAND HOTEL TORONTO
Reservations 1-877-32-GRAND
www.grandhoteltoronto.com
aeroplan

The Canadian Jewish news
60 Pages | Thursday, November 4, 2010 | 27 Cheshvan, 5771 | $1.25

RX 350

This Week

National

New mayor thanks Jewish community. Page 3

Spice of Life

Coconut milk makes for great curry chicken. Page 30

Heebonics

No mountain is too high to climb for cancer. Page 48

Arts & Travel

Susan Cogan launches her latest CD. Page 52

On cjnews.com

Appreciating the little things in life.

Index

National 3
Editorials & Letters 8
Perspectives 9
Opinions 10
The Kirshner File 11
Jewish Life 20
According to Reports 24
On Campus 27
Spice of Life 30
Family Moments 31
What's New 32
Obituaries & Notices 34
Just Between Us 36
Israel & the Jewish World 45
CJN Profile 50
Arts & Travel 51

www.cjnews.com

Canada Post Publication Agreement #4000684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

Canadian grandmothers petition for Schalit

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

If Sally Zerker, 81, and a group of grandmothers she assembled have their way, Canada will soon play more of an active role in the attempt to free captured Israel Defence Forces (IDF) soldier Gilad Schalit from Hamas.

A York University economics professor emeritus, Zerker formed the group Grandmothers for Gilad in September. The group consists of some 50 grandmothers who are determined to push Canada into a leadership position on the Schalit file.

To that end, Zerker drafted a petition that calls on the Canadian government, the United Nations and the International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC), as well as other humanitarian relief agencies, to "uphold the applicable standards of international humanitarian law, including proof of life, visitation rights and communication between him and his family as a bare minimum."

The petition also states that Canadian aid be transferred to Gaza on the condition that the Palestinian Authority "commit itself to Schalit's repatriation, and that Canada use its good offices to put an end to these violations of international humanitarian law to secure his release and return him to his family as a matter of fundamental decency and justice."

Zerker's petition was tabled in the House of Commons on Oct. 27 by Liberal MP and human rights advocate Irwin Cotler.

Schalit was taken captive by Hamas on June 25, 2006, after operatives of the terrorist group attacked his IDF unit in a cross-border raid at Kerem Shalom.

All Israeli and international efforts to determine his location and negotiate his release have failed to date, although he's presumed to be held in Hamas-controlled Gaza.

A videotaped message from Schalit dated Sept. 14, 2009, was obtained by Israel in exchange for the release of 20 female Palestinian prisoners held in Israeli jails. In it, he states he's being treated well by his captors and longs to be free. It's so far the only proof of Schalit's condition.

Speaking to The CJN last week, Zerker said there are 56 signatories on her petition, all of whom are grandmothers who sympathize with the Schalit family.

Twenty-five signatures are required on a petition for it to be tabled in Parliament.

"In August, I sent out a group e-mail to my grandmother-friends and wrote the petition and started a blog," Zerker said.

Continued on page 37

During a moment of consternation last weekend in Jerusalem, Gilad Schalit's mother, Aviva, expresses concern for her son, who was kidnapped more than four years ago and is still being held in Gaza. [Flash90 photo]

Toldot
Candlelighting: 5:46
Havdalah: 6:52
Greater Toronto Area

Don't mis to ha deliv
Access the

CJN0000860064 12000 13JAN11
PATTI RENIHAN XXDIR(J)
MCLAREN MICROPUBLISHING LT 017
PO BOX 972 STATION F 867
TORONTO ON M4Y 2N9

Jewish communities take precautions after failed Chicago bombs – see page 45

The News in Brief

Canada

Buyout In Works?

EDMONTON — Canada's Gehermezian family is in talks to buy Clal Insurance from its Tel Aviv-based owner, the Israeli business paper Globes has reported. Globes said the Jewish family, with estimated wealth of $4 billion, is in talks with Clal's majority owner, IDB Holdings, to buy its 55 per cent stake in Clal for $1.1 billion. The family has holdings in real estate, hotels, and oil and gas, but is perhaps best known for building the West Edmonton Mall.

World

Shchitah Warning

AUCKLAND — New Zealand Jewish life is in jeopardy if the community loses its legal battle over a new ban on kosher slaughter, Jewish leaders warned. An Oct. 22 e-mail titled "Save The Future of Judaism in New Zealand," sent to the country's 1,000 Jewish families, warned that if the community loses the case, it will be badly harm the community, which dates back two centuries. "It will mean our religious families will be forced to leave New Zealand....We will be seen as a country where Jews are not welcome, and where our traditions and beliefs are not respected or valued," Auckland Hebrew Congregation president Garth Cohen and Wellington Jewish Community Centre chair Claire Massey said in the e-mail.

Opera Rejects Boycott

CAPE TOWN — The Cape Town Opera has rejected South African Nobel laureate Desmond Tutu's call for the group to cancel shows in Tel Aviv. The company is performing Porgy and Bess Nov. 12 to 27 on its first trip to Israel. "Just as we said during apartheid that it was inappropriate for international artists to perform in South Africa in a society founded on discriminatory laws and racial exclusivity, so it would be wrong for Cape Town Opera to perform in Israel," the former archbishop of South Africa, said last week. But managing director, Michael Williams, told the Sowetan that while the company respects Tutu, it's "first and foremost an arts company that believes in promoting universally held human values through the medium of opera."

Green Leader Praised For Stand on Event

TORONTO — The Friends of Simon Wiesenthal Center for Holocaust Studies (FSWC) said last week it was pleased that Green Party leader Elizabeth May advised her party's candidates to cancel a planned "peace" conference featuring a virulently anti-Semitic speaker, as well as Iranian academics who support the Islamic Republic.

Elizabeth May

But the self-titled "Group of Four" – comprising two current and two former Green candidates – ignored May and went ahead with its "Just and Sustainable Peace" conference Oct. 28, featuring Davood Ameri, director general of the Iran-based Islamic World Peace Forum, which claims Zionists are not only responsible for 9/11 but also for all "criminal events" in the Muslim world today, including places such as Afghanistan, Iraq, Lebanon and Pakistan.

The RCMP reversed course last week and decided not to send an outreach officer to the event, one day after Public Safety Minister Vic Toews criticized the move.

Dichter Avoids Spain

JERUSALEM — Kadima MK Avi Dichter, former head of Israel's Shin Bet intelligence agency, decided not to attend an international peace summit this month in Spain after Spain wouldn't grant him immunity from arrest or prosecution while there. The meeting, organized by the Madrid Coalition, invited Israelis and Palestinians to a summit on the peace process. Dichter is under threat of legal action in Spain and other countries for ordering the killing of a Hamas leader when he headed Shin Bet, and for his involvement in the Gaza invasion as minister of public security. In a letter to Spain's foreign minister, Dichter said "it's absurd" Palestinian Authority representatives faced no difficulties upon arrival in Spain.

Spying Alleged

TEHRAN — Two Iranian citizens will go on trial for their lives for spying for Israel. Iranian state radio quoted Tehran's prosecutor general as alleging last week that the two unnamed men "were linked to the Zionist regime's intelligence services" and had received money from Israel. Last month, Iran said five Iranians would go on trial for passing secrets to its enemies, a likely reference to Israel and the United States.

Stone Craft Monument Factory

large inventory of top quality

Granite Monuments

in our own North York factory

Single Stones from $750.

121 BRISBANE RD., #1 DOWNSVIEW 416-667-1474

WWW.STONECRAFTMONUMENTS.COM

Steeles Memorial Chapel

www.steelesmemorial.com

- Current Listing of Funerals
- Listing of Cemeteries and Maps of Sections
- Yahrzeit Calculator for Civil & Hebrew dates
- Kaddish Texts
- Educational Information about Shiva - Unveiling - After-Care - Prayers - Jewish Burial Rites
- Jewish Holiday Dates

905-881-6003

Serving the Jewish Community since 1927.

The security of a GIC. A 7.25%* rate of return.

Yes, really.

Suitable for ages 60-80.
Minimum investment $50,000.
Certain conditions apply.

*Rate based on a 70 year old male.

GIC Income Exchange Inc. Call for details. 416.787.1366

The Canadian Jewish news

Vol XL, No 43 (1,972)*

Gary Laforet, General Manager

Mordechai Ben-Dat, Editor

Vera Gillman, Advertising & Assistant General Manager

Carol Jamieson, Controller

Jeff Rosen, News & Internet Editor

Joseph Serge, Arts, Travel and Supplements Editor

Janice Arnold, Carolyn Blackman, Sheldon Kirshner, Frances Kraft, David Lazarus, Elias Levy, Andy Levy-Azrenkopf, Paul Lungen, Sheri Shefa, Laura Stricker, Staff Reporters

Rabbi B. Baskin, E. Burakowski, B. Gladstone, L. Hart, G. Koren, J. Siblin-Librach, E. Malamet, P. Michaels, M. Mietkiewicz, L. Spersman, G. Steinberg, Columnists

Cynthia Gasner, Joel Jacobson, Diane Koven, Lauren Kramer, Myron Love, Rhonda Spivak, Canadian Correspondents

Jenny Hazan, Israel Bureau

Carolan Halpern, Ruth Schwertzer, Daniel Wolgelerenter, Copy Editors

Ella Burakowski, Assistant Advertising Manager

Bev Bergman, Gloria Clamen, Lisa Freid, Sarah Laiken, Honey Mahl, Elie Malka, Sholom Wargon, Grace Zweig, Sales Representatives, Toronto

Doris Perez, Office Manager

Alma Delory, Lucy Semtchenko, Karen Syptak, Office Staff, Toronto

David Collin, Promotions Manager, Circulation

Brian Stoneman, Composing Room Manager

Leo Berlin, José De Freitas, Trevor Miller, Anahit Nahapetyan, Nick Radelja, Lila Sarick, Michael Stavsky, Production Staff

Donald Carr, George A. Cohon, Steven Cummings, Betty Elkaim, Julia Koschitzky, Albert J. Latner, Lionel H. Schipper, Shoel Silver, Robert Vineberg, Elizabeth Wolfe, Rose Wolfe, Rubin Zimmerman, Directors

Ray D. Wolfe, Founding President (1971-1990)

CIRCULATION

Total circulation: 35,160 copies.
Total paid circulation: 34,313 copies.

CCNA verified circulation July 28, 2010

SUBSCRIPTIONS

Canada: $37.80, 1 yr. incl. taxes
$68.00, 2 yr. incl. taxes
Online edition:
$20.95 1 yr. incl. taxes
U.S.A. / Foreign:
$135 Cdn. funds, 1 yr.

Postmaster: Please return 2985 and changes of address to CJN, 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4.

Postage Paid at Toronto
Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

*Under current ownership

We acknowledge the financial support of the Government of Canada, through the Publications Assistance Program, towards our mailing costs.

Canada

The Canadian Jewish News

How To Reach Us

Head Office: 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4 Tel: 416-391-1836
Advertising Fax: 416-391-0949 Editorial Fax: 416-391-0829
Advertising E-mail: adscjn@gmail.com Editorial E-mail: cjninfo@gmail.com
Website: www.cjnews.com
Subscription Inquiries: Toll Free: 1-866-849-0864 Fax: 905-946-1679
E-mail: cjnews@indas.on.ca
IMP - Israel Advertising Representatives
POB 7195, Jerusalem, Israel Tel: 02-625-2933 Fax: 02-624-9240 E-mail:info@impmedia.co.il

PROVINCIAL TABLE PADS
Manufacturers of Luxury Vinyl Table Pads
• FREE IN-HOME SERVICE
• MADE IN CANADA
• BEST SERVICE-PRICE-QUALITY
LOWEST PRICES GUARANTEED
TORONTO 416-783-2508 | HAMILTON 905-383-1343
CANADA WIDE 1-800-668-7439
www.ptpads.com

National

Greater Toronto Area

Planning For Retirement?
Confused about your financial future? Let us help you understand how to reach your financial goals
Call Sonny Goldstein
Chartered Life Underwriter
Chartered Financial Consultant
416-221-0060
HIGHEST QUOTES ON RRIF's, ANNUITIES, etc.
Creative Ideas in Financial Planning
Sonny Goldstein, CFP

Jewish councillors eager to work with mayor-elect

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

"We're one step closer to a minyan," Josh Matlow, councillor-elect for Ward 22 – St. Paul's, quipped to The CJN in a post-election interview last week.

Matlow is one of three Jews on the incoming Toronto City Council, the others being James Pasternak, who won a tight race in Ward 10 – York Centre to replace the retired Mike Feldman, and David Shiner who was re-elected in Ward 24 – Willowdale. Two Jews sat on the previous council.

Mayor-elect Rob Ford will start work next month with a revamped and relatively fresh-faced group – 14 of the 44 councillors are new to the job, including Matlow and Pasternak.

Matlow, the incumbent public school trustee in his ward, won after Michael Walker, the area's longtime incumbent, also retired. Matlow said he's looking forward to bringing change to City Hall.

"My record [as a trustee] will reflect the kind of representation I will provide to the Jewish community of Toronto. I've never accepted hateful attacks on the community, and my votes will reflect that," he said, adding that he'll carefully scrutinize city-supported events such as the annual Pride festival, which has allowed the group Queers Against Israeli Apartheid (QuAIA) to participate in its last two parades.

He said he also wants the city to do "all it can to assure the security needs of the Jewish community and of all communities are met."

Matlow said he's glad to see that a group of new "moderate" councillors have been elected, which should enable City Hall to function more "congenially, thoughtfully and respectfully," and tone down the bickering that occurred during the last term.

Continued on page 14

Ford thanks community

Rob Ford

"I want to thank the Jewish community for its support."

That was the message from Toronto mayor-elect Rob Ford in a brief interview last week following his Oct. 25 landslide victory.

Speaking to The CJN, Ford reiterated his position of "zero-tolerance" toward racism and bullying directed at the city's Jewish community.

Regarding the issue of the Pride Parade and the participation of the controversial group Queers Against Israeli Apartheid (QuAIA), Ford said he has been clear with Pride organizers: they won't get city funding if they allow the group to participate again next year.

"I guarantee I will not tolerate any racism or hate crimes against the Jewish community, or any community for that matter. I'm simply not going to tolerate it. And I will support the Jewish community any time they feel they're being threatened or intimidated," he said.

Asked if he'd ever visited Israel, Ford said he hadn't, but would like to travel there at his earliest convenience, because it would be a "great learning experience."

He added: "If I can travel to Israel, I will. But I won't be using taxpayers' money. I'll be using my own."

— A.L.A.

Attention Accredited & Other Qualified Investors.

Over the last 16 quarters the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange (TASE) has significantly outperformed the Toronto Stock Exchange (TSX). 30% better.

TEL AVIV: +27% VS TORONTO: -3%

Doesn't it make sense to invest at least 10% of your portfolio in Israel?

BOND STREET PROUDLY INTRODUCES THE

Holy Land Investment Fund

... a uniquely Canadian opportunity to invest in the world's most dynamic economy.

Here's why you should consider the Holy Land Investment Fund (HLIF):

- The HLIF is a conservatively weighted, balanced fund of Israeli equities, bond and fixed income funds, which provides a lower risk way to invest in Israel.
- The HLIF includes the HA Opportunities Fund, the #1 performing fund in Israel in 2009 (244% return), higher than any fund in Canada!
- RRSP and RRIF eligible.
- Low minimum investment.
- Consider investing 10% of your investment funds in Israel.

At last... the chance to put your money where your heart is.

THIS JUST IN!
The HLIF has achieved a return of 10.25% in its first four months.
As of October 15, 2010

EXCLUSIVE WEEKLY INVESTMENT SEMINARS
Call 416-783-8585 to book your seat at our for accredited-investors-only presentations. Learn how you can participate in HLIF's excellent investment opportunity.
Register Now.
Don't Be Disappointed.

Zale Newman, President
zale@bondstreetmercantile.com

BOND STREET MERCANTILE

www.BondStreetMercantile.com

REDUCE RISK?
ENHANCE RETURNS?
ACHIEVE THE GOALS MOST IMPORTANT TO YOU.

Irwin Igra, Investment Advisor
Tel: (416) 646-6926
Wellington West Capital Inc
Suite 501, 4100 Yonge Street
Toronto, Ontario M2P 2B5

WELLINGTON WEST
Capital Inc.
Wellington West Capital Inc. Member CIPF

Benjamin's Funeral Service Listings

A new service delivered straight to your email.

Michael Levitt,
Vice President Business Development,
The Benjamin Group

Every day, thousands of people visit the Benjamin's website to stay informed about deaths in the Jewish community.

Benjamin's is pleased to announce a new service that will deliver the news directly to your email – twice daily – so that you will always be kept up-to-date.

Benjamin's Funeral Service Listings is the most complete source for all Jewish funerals in the GTA, no matter where the service is being held. The Listings include details about funerals, shivas and unveilings. Whether you are in town or travelling, it's simply the best way to stay connected.

Sign up for Benjamin's Funeral Service Listings today. Just visit our website at www.benjamins.ca.

Through the generations... a sacred trust.

The Benjamin Group companies:
Benjamin's Park Memorial Chapel, Benjamin's Landmark Monuments, The Benjamin Foundation, The Benjamin Institute, Benjamin's Lifecycle Financial Services

Truth or Nobel?

From the editor's desk...

Saul Bellow, the late, award-winning, Nobel laureate in literature, once wrote that Israel was often used as a moral resort for many of the world's high-minded and high-sounding didacts who delight in wagging their long, ethical fingers in full-blown, righteous opprobrium at the Jewish state.

He made that observation in the mid-1970s. Israel had, by then, already refused to yield its existence to the genocidal aspirations of its neighbours five times – in 1948, 1956, 1967, 1969-1971 (the War of Attrition) and 1973 (the Yom Kippur War).

Thus, having determinedly emerged victorious – i.e., survived – in five wars in the first three decades of its existence, the tiny Jewish state found itself recast by many commentators and pundits in the imagery of the Middle East conflict.

It was now inconvenient and certainly no longer quite the compelling news story for those same experts to still see Israel as slingshot David battling the arrogant giant Goliath comprising the 20-plus member Arab League and their cheerleaders, supporters and allies in the 50-plus-member Islamic Conference, the rigidly controlled countries of the Soviet bloc and the scores of countries in the falsely named Non-Aligned Bloc.

Israel was now seen as the militaristic Goliath menacing and oppressing the stone-throwing Palestinian David.

To the surprise of the Jewish world, David was now embodied by the grizzled, sunglasses-shading, keffiyeh-wearing, gun-toting, "anti-colonial," "revolutionary" leader of the Palestinians, Yasser Arafat.

Ironically, or perhaps not, the United Nations officially enshrined the David status upon him – and thus, too, upon the people whom he represented – on Nov. 10, 1975, 37 years after Kristallnacht, when the General Assembly voted to equate Zionism with Racism. The label of racism placed on the national project of the Jewish people (Zionism) was the blueprint for the structure of hatred that has disbursed its poison against the Jewish state ever since.

It is true that in the wake of the first heady days of the Oslo accords, the United Nations revoked the infamous equation. But by then the poison had malignantly infected the UN body politic and a majority of the governments of its member states. A mere glance, for example, at the agenda items and the voting record of the UN's Human Rights Council confirms this. Anti-Israel venom is the elixir that most of the council's members imbibe, constantly, almost ritualistically. They are saturated with contempt for the Jewish state, oozing anti-Israel, even anti-Jewish toxin from virtually every pore. The atmosphere of the chamber is rank with the fumes of hatred and execration.

Were he alive today, Bellow indeed might point out the flaws and the imperfections of the Jewish state, but in a manner proportionate to the entirety of the country's society and humanity.

However, he would also point to the hypocrisy, if not also the malevolence, of the many individuals who reside so self-righteously in Israel's "moral resort" of which he wrote in 1975. In particular, he might point with great disappointment to fellow Nobel laureate Archbishop Desmond Tutu as one of the chief residents of the resort.

Last week, the celebrated South African prelate pleaded with a Cape Town opera troupe to cancel a performance they had scheduled next month in Israel.

Tutu said the proposed visit to Israel was comparable to international artists performing in apartheid South Africa, when it was "a society founded on discriminatory laws and racial exclusivity." He said that bringing international artists to perform in the Tel Aviv Opera House "advances Israel's fallacious claim to being a civilized democracy."

Thankfully, the opera's managing director, Michael Williams, refused to accede to Tutu's urging. Hanna Munitz, the Israeli Opera's general director, responded in a statement, saying that her house and Cape Town Opera were apolitical.

Tutu has long excoriated Israel in the world media. Given his stature as a champion against the brutal system of apartheid under which he lived for most of his life, he is regarded as a man of great credibility. His word carries weight with those who see Israel as Goliath.

That he clearly does not care that he spreads calumny against Israel and thereby aids Israel's enemies is perplexing. But that he is silent when those enemies call for Israel's elimination is infuriating.

For example, Ramadan Shallah, the leader of Islamic Jihad last week in Damascus said: "The slogan of all should be that Israel must be wiped out of existence."

Tutu said nothing.

The core constitutional document of the government in Gaza – Hamas – calls for the annihilation of the Jewish state. The Hamas government kidnapped and holds captive Gilad Schalit.

Tutu says nothing.

The moderate Palestinian Authority refuses to allow that Israel should be and can be a Jewish state.

Tutu says nothing.

But not us.

We will not be cowed by Tutu's Nobel stature. We will rather embrace Bellow and point to the truth about Tutu as Bellow might have also done today.

–MBD

SeeJN

EXHIBIT CHRONICLES BABI YAR MASSACRE

A graphic photo exhibit on the Nazi massacre of Jews at Babi Yar, Ukraine, 70 years ago will be displayed in Parliament, Nov. 8-9, as parliamentarians gather from around the world for the second annual conference of the Inter-Parliamentary Coalition for Combating Anti-Semitism. The Ukrainian delegation, headed by MP Oleksander Feldman, created the exhibit. Some 150,000 Jews were slaughtered at Babi Yar, just outside Kiev, over a three-day period. Next week's conference is being hosted with the Ministry of Citizenship and Immigration Canada and is being sponsored by the Canadian Council for Israel and Jewish Advocacy.

SUMMIT VIEW

RARE. VALUABLE.
AND BRIEFLY AVAILABLE TO
THOSE WHO ACT SWIFTLY.

Previewing this November in the heart of Thornhill Woods.

Crescent enclave of singles and semi-towns from the upper $400's

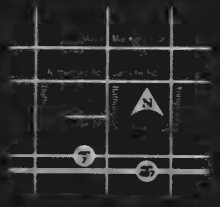
TO PREVIEW, CALL

416-746-1234
www.summitviewhomes.com



Singing protesters call for cafe boycott

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

Employing a bit of street theatre, about a dozen green-clad protesters called for a boycott of the Israel-linked Aroma Espresso Bar recently.

The protesters, members of Independent Jewish Voices, presented a choreographed message to passersby at the cafe's Bloor Street outlet, singing "boycott, boycott."

The protest was posted to YouTube and the website of the Coalition Against Israeli Apartheid. It was made in solidarity with the call for a boycott requested by Palestinian civil society. The video slams Aroma as part of an Israeli-owned chain that has one restaurant in the "illegal Jewish only settlement" in Ma'aleh Adumim.

Responding to the boycott attempt, Buycott Israel, an arm of the Canada-Israel Committee, called on its supporters, to "visit your closest Aroma Espresso Bar for fabulous Middle Eastern-inspired coffees, sandwiches, salads and snacks – and help support Israel!"

UJA Jewish Federation of Greater Toronto also called on its supporters to patronize one of the cafe's five Toronto-area locations

According to sources, Aroma's business has not been affected by the protest.

Operating partner Anat Davidzon said that "the company has decided not to make any comment on the situation so as not to escalate or get involved in a political dispute right now."

Davidzon said Aroma Espresso Bar Canada Inc. is a four-year-old Canadian-controlled private corporation. The cafes are franchise operations operating under license from the Israeli parent company. The Bloor Street cafe was opened in 2007 and was the second, after New York City, outside Israel.

According to its website, the Aroma chain "boasts 100 branches nationwide, with new branches opening at a rate of about two or three per month, and serves about 25 million customers per year."

It operates branches in the United States, Ukraine, Cyprus and Romania.

Protesters gathered at the Bloor Street location of Aroma Espresso Bar last week calling for a boycott of the Israel-owned chain. [Ruth Schweitzer photo]

DINNER CO-CHAIRS
LAWRENCE S. BLOOMBERG
MICHAEL D. HARRIS

HONOURARY CHAIRS
ELIZABETH COMPER
SYDNEY COOPER
LESLIE L. DAN, C.M.
HOWARD DAVIDSON
SAUL FELDBERG, LL.D. (HON.)
LORNE WEISS

GENERAL CANVASS CO-CHAIRS
ANTHONY HOFFER
IRA KUCHINSKY
BEN SPRINGER

ADVERTISING COMMITTEE
TONY GENCO
BILL LAMPERT

JNF FUTURE
JESSICA FENTON
JIAN MAGEN

ARRANGEMENTS
PATRICIA FRIEDLAND

JNF TORONTO PRESIDENT
NATHAN DISENHOUSE

CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD
JERRY WERGER

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
JOSH COOPER

MASTER OF CEREMONIES
BELINDA STRONACH

100% ISRAEL

JNF

JEWISH NATIONAL FUND OF TORONTO
2010 NEGEV TRIBUTE DINNER
IN HONOUR OF
FRANK STRONACH

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 2010 | THE FAIRMONT ROYAL YORK HOTEL TORONTO
FOR INFORMATION, RESERVATIONS & ADVERTISING OPPORTUNITIES:
TEL:416.638.7200 FAX:416.638.7345 TOR@JNF.CA WWW.JNFTORONTO.CA

SPECIAL PERFORMANCE: JEFF MADDEN, "FRANKIE VALLI" OF THE TORONTO JERSEY BOYS

act now

RICHMOND HILL

Preview Opening

Smart OPPORTUNITY

SINGLES & SEMIS

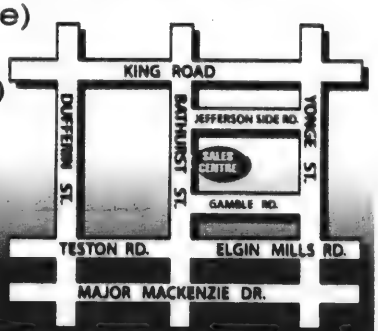
FROM THE $300's

This new dream home destination Opportunity will only come around once in a lifetime – so ACT NOW!

- Walking Paths • Ponds • School
- Established Community • Shopping Nearby • William Neal Park

- Only a Limited Release- (Then they'll all be gone)
- Touchsational Pricing - (Unbeatable)
- Outstanding location - (Richmond Hill's Best)
- Exceptional Designs - (Stone & Brick)

Models up to 2638 sq.ft.



Sat & Sun. 12pm-6pm
Mon to Thurs 12pm-8pm
Fri Closed

touchstone HOMES

RICHMOND HILL

mytouchstonehome.com

The Canadian Jewish news

An independent community newspaper serving as a forum for diverse viewpoints
Publisher and Proprietor
The Canadian Jewish News, a corporation without share capital
Head Office
1500 Don Mills Rd Suite 205, North York, Ont M3B 3K4

A very bad odour at Aroma protest

And so it has come to this. Some 65 years after the end of World War II, on the streets of Toronto, in the ethnically diverse, tolerant, trendy Annex neighbourhood, once the centre of the city's Jewish immigrant life, about a dozen green-shirted political activists sang, danced and urged upon many unlucky passersby the modern-day equivalent of the demon slogan that horrifically cut the frenzied air of Nazi Germany: Kauft Nicht bei Juden! Boycott Jews. Don't buy from Jewish establishments.

It wasn't Jews, per se, the activists targeted. Rather it was the Aroma Espresso Bar. The coffee shop in the Annex, like four others in the Greater Toronto Area, is an individually owned franchised café of a Canadian-controlled private corporation. But the franchises operate under licence from an Israeli parent company, and this is what so exorcised the consciences of the protesters. Aroma is Israeli! Moreover, one of its shops is in Maaleh Adumim, on the outskirts of Jerusalem, which the protesters consider an illegal settlement.

Thus they were moved to bring the expression of their outraged consciences to the streets of Toronto with foul, plastic theatre.

"Boycott, boycott. Human rights are hot," was the main chorus refrain they sang. But human rights weren't their real concern. If it were, the green-shirts would have also sang perhaps for the people of Darfur, the Congo, China, North Korea, Syria, Iran and Gaza, to name simply a few places where people have no human rights.

"Don't be part of apartheid" they exhorted. It is a brazen lie to associate Israel with apartheid. Yet, it is effective. And the singers know it. The lie of apartheid is the sword by which Israel's enemies aim to pierce the heart of the sovereign Jewish state.

"Israel out of Palestine" they cheerfully chirped. But what are we to understand by this? Do they mean Israel out of the West Bank? If so, why did they not sing "Israel out of the West Bank"? Without any apparent affront to their highly honed consciences, the singers have simply adopted the language, slogan and dare we say intent of Hamas, Hezbollah, Islamic Jihad and Mahmoud Ahmadinejad.

"Free Palestine" was the message on the front of their T-shirts to ensure that there was absolutely no confusion about the message they were singing. Gaza is already Judenrein (free of Jews). In lock step with the publicly expressed preferences of the Palestinian Authority, it seems the singers want the West Bank as well to be Judenrein.

"Boycott Israeli products" was the message they wore on the backs of their green T-shirts. Ah. So it is not simply the Aroma Espresso Bar that the singers want us to boycott. It is all Israeli products. In other words: Kauft Nicht bei (Israelisches) Juden!

This particularly pernicious message should forevermore and always be thrown into the garbage heap of history, where it belongs. At this time of the year especially, a week before the anniversary of Kristallnacht, it shocks sensibility that we continue to hear it.

25 years ago in The CJN

Israel's ambassador to the United Nations, Benjamin Netanyahu, addressing a UN General Assembly debate on South African apartheid, denounced the policy as being contrary to Jewish values and tradition, and urged Pretoria to end it. He also said that Arab states that condemned Israel for its ties to South Africa had more ties to it than Israel did.

Dry Bones
DEMOCRACY BALANCING ACT
HOPES FOR A MODERN DEMOCRATIC MIDDLE EAST ONCE RESTED ON THREE LEGS.
DEMOCRACY IN CHRISTIAN LEBANON
THE DEMOCRATIC SECULAR STATE OF MUSLIM TURKEY
AND THE DEMOCRATIC JEWISH STATE OF ISRAEL
DryBonesBlog.com

Editorial Advisory Board: Guy Abeodi, Maurice Benzacar, Michael Brown, Donald Carr, Rabbi Michael Dolgin, Daniel Ferman, Igor Korenzvit, Keith Landy, Hindy Najman, Lou Ronson, Alan Sandler, Rabbi Philip Scheim, Mike Shriqui, Pamela Medjuck Stein, Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, Ehud Telem, Nelson Wiseman.

Disband the UN

The United Nation's rejection of Canada's bid for a non-permanent seat on its Security Council is merely a reflection of the perfidy and dysfunction of the council. Prime Minister Stephen Harper should be hailed and should wear the rejection as a badge of honour ("Vote says more about UN than it does about Canada," Oct. 28).

Let's face it: the the UN has long since destroyed its own credibility by defying the purpose of its creation. Rather than carrying out its mission, it has become a corrupt, biased, Third World self-serving organization.

Where is the sanity of the civilized world's leaders who aim to become leaders of an organization in which Libya and Iran sit on its human rights council, while it shuns its responsibility toward countries whose citizens are most in need of human rights protection, among them Iran, Sudan, China and Saudi Arabia, and calls Israel a racist and apartheid state?

Time is long past due for civilized western countries to free themselves of this criminal institution, disband it and form a real United Nations in service of all.

Goldi Steiner
Toronto

* * *

Campus advocacy training

I think columnist Seymour Epstein has got it wrong when he says that "there is no reason to teach militant advocacy" on campus ("Is militant campus advocacy the solution," Oct. 21.) Epstein's preferred approach is to teach "Semitic literacy" through "deep Jewish learning to produce proud and courageous Jews." Who would argue with that long-term goal? But the campus battlefield is a matter for today, and our young people are being overwhelmed and cowed by organized, militant anti-Semitic advocacy. Our youth must have an equally articulate, and equally powerful voice simply to bolster the self-esteem and confidence of our kids, if nothing else.

While we are at it, we must give words and a voice to otherwise well-educated and supportive non-Jews, whether in the student body, teachers or administration, who are inclined to speak but need advocacy training as well. Organizations such as Fighting Anti-Semitism Together (FAST) will help, and they ought to be encouraged and supported. If we say nothing, we cede the field to our enemies. Together we can make our campuses a place where critical discourse and critical thinking can prevail. First, however, we must be prepared to fight fire with fire.

Ron Hoffman
Toronto

* * *

LET THEM GO...

Ron Arad, Zachary Baumel, Zvi Feldman, Guy Hever, Yehuda Katz

1594

The number of days Hamas has held Gilad Schalit captive

Israel as a spider web

In the article on Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad's visit to southern Lebanon, "Did Ahmadinejad's visit help or hurt Hezbollah?" (Oct 21), reference was made to the famous "spider web" speech by Hassan Nasrallah in May 2000, after Israeli troops withdrew from southern Lebanon. In that speech, the secretary general of Hezbollah claimed that Israel is "weaker than a spider's web" and "stressed that his supporters do not fear it." Well, it may be useful for Nasrallah and his cohorts to know, that in spite of its extreme thinness, a spider web is not at all weak. Quite the contrary: it is made of the strongest material known to man, based on the cross-sectional area of its very fine, quasi-invisible silk threads. In that vein, I must agree with Nasrallah's analogy. Israel's strength and reach may indeed be likened to a spider's web. It is no wonder then that the Hezbollah chief is holed up in a secret bunker and never dares to show himself in public.

Albert Herscovitch
Montreal

* * *

Heschel School doesn't 'suck'

My answer to the headline of Avrum Rosensweig's column "School sucked. Does it still?" (Oct. 14) is an emphatic no. I feel saddened that his own education disappointed him, and that his expectations for his son's education are so low. Like Rosensweig, I have a son who just started junior kindergarten, and I have another son in Grade 1. After a lot of research into public and Jewish schools, my husband and I decided to send our kids to the Toronto Heschel School. I can honestly say that the school has exceeded my highest expectations.

A few things stood out for us about Heschel. It is a pluralistic school that embraces the diversity of our city's Jewish population and encourages students to explore the different ways in which families observe and interpret Judaism.

At Heschel, Jewish themes are explored from kindergarten onwards in age-appropriate and creative ways. The kindergarten teachers take Chumash stories as a jumping off point for covering the Ontario curriculum.

The Toronto Heschel School aims to instil in its students a sense of awe and wonder, and as a parent, I feel that it is successful. There is no rote learning at this school. Lessons are carefully designed so that students discover new knowledge on their own.

Lisa Richler
Toronto

The Canadian Jewish News reserves the right to refuse advertising that in its opinion is misleading, in poor taste or incompatible with the advertising policies of the newspaper. Acceptance of advertising does not imply endorsement by The Canadian Jewish News. The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Letters are welcome if they are brief, in English or French, typewritten with lines double spaced, and of interest to our reading public. Readers are cautioned not to make sweeping claims against persons or institutions which they cannot verify, as libel laws are very stringent. We reserve the right to edit and condense letters, which must bear the sender's address, phone number and both handwritten and typed signatures. Letters sent by e-mail must also include the sender's municipal address.
cjninfo@gmail.com

Perspectives

Israeli electoral system is an obstacle to peace

Israel's electoral system is the real danger to Israel's future. The flawed electoral system, to a large extent, is the reason why more substantial progress toward peace has not been achieved thus far.

Israelis, therefore, have to engage in a passive, refusal-to-vote revolution in order to force the Knesset to adopt electoral change. Alternatively, Israelis must boycott the upcoming elections, which no doubt are looming by the end of December 2010 with the spectre of the collapse of the coalition due to peace-process complications.

Recent debates in the Knesset illustrate the current peace-process/electoral-system dilemma.

"You have turned Israel into a weak, fearful state which is losing its friends in the world, which defies the leader of the free world, the source of its strength," Tzipi Livni said last week, in reference to Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

"Perhaps you have led Israel to this position out of weakness due to your inability to make a decision and take a stand. You refuse to pay a political price for the peace process. As your main interest is the coalition, you will not be able to make the right decisions."

Speaker of the Knesset, Reuven Rivlin, predicted last week that "by the end of the current session, six months from now, the date of the next elections will be set."

Ehud Barak, leader of the Labor party, gives the coalition until the end of next March, but then hedged his prediction on the collapse of the coalition: "I would say it will happen by the end of December," he said.

Labor party Welfare Minister Isaac Herzog threatened to leave the coalition if direct negotiations with the Palestinians are not renewed by the end of the month.

Given the deeply flawed electoral system, why hold elections at all? As absurd as it sounds, a new election will change nothing. New constellations of coalitions will also be unable to move the peace process forward since new coalition partners will once again threaten the collapse of the government and with that new elections will be called, in a disheartening cycle of stalemate and frustration.

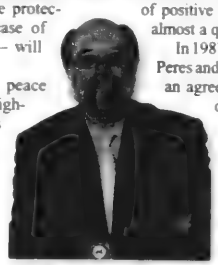
There is still time for the current Knesset to deal with this most fundamental issue. But the reality, unfortunately, is that politicians are reluctant to endanger their parliamentary status.

It is, however, imperative that the system be reformed because the survival of Israel is at stake. Israel is the only country in the world that is at war every seven years and replaces its government every two. Since its creation in 1948, Israel has had 31 governments, of which only two have completed a full four-year term in office.

Knesset members are not elected directly. No Knesset member is accountable to the Israeli public. A member's loyalty is solely to the party. The real decision-makers are mercazei hamiflagot (party centres) and the Va'adot Mesadrot (organizing committees).

After the votes are counted and party strength allocated in the Knesset, based upon strict proportional division of 120 seats of the Knesset, the politicians depend on potential coalition partners to form a government.

Forming a coalition usually requires massive concessions and backroom dealings. Given the distribution of votes, this means concessions are made mostly with religious party partners, Zionist and non-Zionist, who have likely promised their supporters that their pet issues – such as the protection of settlements, in the case of the religious Zionist parties – will be protected.



By Arie Raif

In terms of reaching a peace agreement with Israel's neighbours, such accommodations to the religious parties were, are, and will be, a constant obstacle.

Of course, the failure to reach a peaceful solution with our neighbours cannot be said to be Israel's fault. But a dysfunctional Israeli electoral system has crucial implications for the peace process and for regional stability.

Because of the operation of the strictly proportional electoral system, a minority of some 12 per cent of the Israeli population – who are actively involved in the settlement enterprise – are effectively blocking a settlement with the Palestinians. Without the electoral power wielded by the supporters of the settlement enterprise, it is reasonable to surmise that Israel could have already reached an agreement with those Palestinians who also sincerely seek coexistence and peaceful solutions with Israel.

Many Israelis view the religious parties as speaking on behalf of a nationalism that shows little, if any, respect for political outlooks that differ with their own. As a secular Zionist, however, I cannot abide that. I seek a state that encompasses a framework far greater than that of the religious groups alone. Their views, in the main, are not the road to peace with our neighbours.

Most leaders avoid taking bold, new initiatives toward peace for fear of losing the support of their coalition partners. In the result, our politicians diminish the one quality that is so essential for a people to retain – hope.

One of the most egregious examples of how the electoral system prevented the possibility of positive change in our region occurred almost a quarter century ago.

In 1987, then-foreign minister Shimon Peres and Jordan's King Hussein reached an agreement in London on a number of significant bilateral issues. The document became known as the "London Accord."

It was an excellent agreement for Israel. Had it been implemented, it would have changed the face of the Middle East. It mentioned three entities: the State of Israel, Jordan – which were to remain as they were – and a new entity that was supposed to include the West Bank and the Gaza Strip in the context of a Jordanian-Palestinian federation.

By the terms of this agreement, Israelis living in the territories could have retained their Israeli passports. Jerusalem would have remained united, with each religion taking responsibility for its own holy sites. The accord was supposed to be presented to the public in the name of the United States, whose representatives agreed to this.

Israel's prime minister Yitzhak Shamir torpedoed the plan.

He justified his opposition to the agreement by saying that the accord would not stand the test of time and that he was opposed in principle to any international involvement of the resolution of the conflict (although he took part not long afterward in the multilateral Madrid conference, and he also claimed that he had been surprised by Peres' trip to London, even though deputy chief of the Mossad, Ephraim Halevi, who reported directly to the prime minister, accompanied Peres to London).

Torpedoing the London Accord was the biggest political mistake of Shamir's government. It was also the biggest political mistake since the establishment of the State of Israel.

The need for a rotatzia arrangement (a rotation) between Peres and Shamir – due to the demands of the electoral system compromises – destroyed the possibility of attaining a long-lasting agreement for Israel.

Today, 23 years later, the U.S. and the European Union are pressuring Israel regarding renewed peace talks. Many people in the U.S. and the EU believe, rightly or wrongly, that it is the Israelis, not the Palestinians, who are "obstacles to peace."

Israelis are an emotional, hot-tempered people loaded with many deeply based traumas and fears that are justified given our history. Our leadership therefore is obliged to behave calmly and intelligently in the face of crisis and not to encourage feelings of fear or exaggerate the sense of danger that play upon already deeply rooted legitimate worries, concerns and fears.

Zionism is not a colonial movement. It did not set out to seize control of another people or of their natural resources. It set out to ensure the right of the Jews to live on our own plot of land in our ancestral homeland in the Middle East in freedom and security.

I am haunted by the possibility that what we built yesterday might fall apart tomorrow. Right-wing political coalitions – of secular and messianic religious stripe – opposed to compromise or reconciliation with our neighbours are damaging the cause of peace.

The majority must stand up now and say aloud: "We were wrong. It is time to realize that one must make peace with one's enemies and not with one's friends.

As a member of a political party, together with my colleagues, I tried in the past, to change the system from "inside." We failed.

Peace will happen only when real change in the electoral system takes place. The current system, which resembles more of a "market of hagglers," rather than a respectable ideological arena, also prevents a better "quality" of Israelis to venture into politics. The wheeling-dealing is so shameful that the best and the brightest do not want to take part in the charade.

That is why I suggest that we lead a passive, no-vote revolution to force the Knesset to vote for a change in the system. Alternatively, we should boycott the upcoming elections.

Alas, it is only our dead and fallen who have seen the last of war. We, the living, still yearn to see the end of it.

Arie Raif is an Israeli political activist and former diplomat. He fought in three Israeli wars in which he lost relatives and friends. In 1974, he stood for election in Israel for the Liberal party. He is president of the Peres Center For Peace-Canada.

Israeli Defence Minister Ehud Barak looks over his right shoulder at a recent meeting of the Israeli cabinet. [Israel Sun photo]

Opinions

Advocacy revamp coming soon

It's by now an open secret that the Canadian Council for Israel and Jewish Advocacy (CIJA) is in the process of a makeover. Founded in 2004 and serving as "the advocacy agent of UIA Federations Canada," CIJA is mandated to promote the Jewish community's position in the media, on university campuses and to various levels of government.

Lawrence Hart in Hamilton

That CIJA has reached a point in its evolution where it's seen by some to need reorganization seems to imply that either new demands in the public space require it to adapt or that internal dynamics are driving the current shake-up. Either way, perceptions surrounding the motives for the restructuring have fuelled much skepticism, with many in the community expressing concern that there has been insufficient consultation with a broader spectrum of stakeholders during the early stages of the process.

On the pretext of improving efficiencies and streamlining its operational and leadership structures, CIJA has, since its inception, been seen to be tilting toward an increasingly exclusionary model where more and more influence has been wielded by a core group of insiders who have empowered a cadre of professional staff to direct our community's advocacy agenda. This has resulted in a heavily "top-down" approach that has tended to shut out a large segment of what used to be a vibrant volunteer leadership, thereby reducing the Jewish voice to a monotone that no longer represents the diversity of opinion and essential introspection that has defined the Canadian Jewish mosaic for decades.

And as the "new CIJA" begins to take shape, there's talk of "a single board of directors" and a "single operating structure," suggesting that still further consolidation may be in the works. If this is so, it's feared that there will be even less accommodation for differing or dissenting viewpoints and that there will be little opportunity for a broad grassroots representation within whatever national configuration emerges.

Furthermore, it's troubling that many members of the "CIJA re-org committee" – who are apparently also engaged, though perhaps not principally so, with the recruitment of the organization's next CEO – are the same insiders who founded the council initially, while others represent agencies under its umbrella. Why is this so? Wouldn't an independent "arms length" committee have been more fitting?

Once the CIJA revamp has been completed, it's likely that there will be a sea change in the way that Israel and Jewish advocacy will be conducted in Canada. What precisely will this look like? Will there be an elected and representative lay leadership? And to whom will the CIJA board be accountable? These questions, and many others, need urgently to be addressed.

Netanyahu must dump Lieberman and his party

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu says he's serious about making headway in negotiations with the Palestinians. If that's true, sometime soon he'll have to rid himself and his government of Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman and his Yisrael Beitenu party.

Yair Lewstein in Jerusalem

Many Israelis support Lieberman because he exhibits a lot of brawn and bravado. He says exactly what he thinks and won't let Israel be pushed around. He doesn't believe in peace with the Palestinians and refuses to take part in talks with them. Others believe he is damaging Israel's reputation in the world, a world that will jump at any opportunity to vilify it, and that his actions are aimed at undermining efforts to advance peace.

Recently, he's been acting like a bull in a china shop even more than he usually does. In the midst of renewed attempts to jump-start direct talks with the Palestinians, and just days after the end of the contentious 10-month moratorium on building in West Bank settlements, Lieberman addressed the UN General Assembly, declaring that reaching comprehensive peace in the Middle East "could take decades" and that "the guiding principle for a final-status agreement must not be land-for-peace but rather, exchange of populated territory."

Less than two weeks later, after meeting with the French and Spanish foreign ministers it was leaked to the press that Lieberman had told his guests they should solve their own problems in Europe before coming to Israel with complaints and that "Israel will not be the Czechoslovakia of 2010."

These intentional remarks from Israel's very undiplomatic foreign minister aren't isolated events. By not formally rebuking him for these actions, Netanyahu gives credence to assertions that Lieberman expresses positions Netanyahu can't support publicly, fuelling doubts about his sincerity regarding the peace process.

Lieberman's agenda goes beyond foreign policy. During the last election campaign, his party based its platform on a slogan aimed at Israel's Arab minority, demanding citizenship only be given to people willing to pledge allegiance to the state. Yisrael Beitenu hasn't succeeded in passing sweeping "allegiance" legislation, but recently, through Netanyahu's political manoeuvring, the government approved a watered-down bill drafted by the justice minister, who was appointed to the position at Lieberman's behest. According to the amendment, those seeking naturalized citizenship will have to take an oath that their allegiance is to "a Jewish and democratic" State of Israel.

Sounds OK, right? The United States requires all new citizens to pledge allegiance. Why shouldn't Israel? But like so many other things in this country, the issue is more complex than it appears. The new law would calculatedly apply only to non-Jewish – i.e., mostly Arab – naturalized citizens. Jews can automatically become citizens under the Law of Return. Hence the outrage from civil rights organizations, politicians and commentators, followed by the international community, asserting that the proposed amendment is racist.

The bill is also aimed at breeching the delicate equilibrium that exists between Israel's Jewish majority and its Arab minority. It won't transform Israeli Arabs into Zionists, and it unnecessarily heightens tensions between the communities. There are better ways to make Arabs feel they're wanted citizens in this country.

Realizing Lieberman's initiative had once again placed him in an uncomfortable corner, Netanyahu began back-peddling. He ordered the justice minister to amend the amendment so that Jews too would be required to take the oath of allegiance upon receiving citizenship. That in turn led to another crisis, as some in the haredi community voiced opposition to the part of the pledge that recognizes Israel as a democracy.

There's a saying in Hebrew that, roughly translated, states "it's not enough to be right, you also have to be smart." It's becoming increasingly applicable to Lieberman, and through him to Netanyahu.

If he's earnest about his desire to make real inroads both domestically and with our neighbours, Netanyahu has to get smart. The time has come to replace Lieberman and Yisrael Beitenu with Tzipi Livni and her Kadima party. That won't be easy either. Personal and collective egos will have to be set aside. But the responsibility of leadership demands it.

Margaret Atwood duped by NGO propaganda

Margaret Atwood is highly respected for her writing and her devotion to human rights. She's not a hard-core Israel basher and is usually careful, both in her writing and her political stands, including opposition to the immoral boycott, divestment and sanctions (BDS) campaign. But this wasn't the case for a recent article attacking Israel for the "suffering of Palestinian children." Atwood's authorship reflects the degree to which anti-Israel NGO propaganda has infected even the most well-meaning people.

Gerald Steinberg in Jerusalem

On Sept. 17, Atwood published an article in Ha'aretz headlined "Suffering of Palestinian children is something both sides can agree on." In it, she blamed Israel for malnutrition of Palestinian children in Area C, the portion of the West Bank under Israeli control, which she said is "higher even than that in Gaza, and many kids are not only developmentally stunted, but are dying from related illnesses." It's libels like this that feed the effort to demonize Israel.

Atwood's mistake was to believe the claims in a Save the Children-UK (STC-UK) publication (Life on the Edge), published in October 2009. In June 2010, STC-UK issued a press release linked to the report, headlined, "Children in West Bank facing worse conditions than in Gaza." The text included the claim that "Areas of the West Bank under complete Israeli control have plummeted into a humanitarian crisis worse than Gaza." Such accusations – like others from political NGOs such as HRW and Amnesty international – are highly misleading, but Atwood fell victim to the "halo effect."

STC-UK has a record of using humanitarian frameworks for anti-Israel propaganda, and this is another example. The press release is completely misleading, as the statistics didn't concern the general condition of West Bank children, but focused on a very small group.

And the evidence was not even based on STC-UK's own research, but rather from the "UNRWA/UNICEF/WFP household survey: Food Security and Nutrition Survey For Herding Communities In Area C." UNRWA has been shown to be particularly unreliable and biased – many of its officials are deeply involved in the assault against Israel's legitimacy – so its statistics need to be taken with more than a grain of salt.

Even if the report's factual claims were reliable and its analysis had credibility, the condemnation of Israel would still be another example of double standards used to single out and target Israel. Such double standards are central to BDS and other campaigns that exploit human rights and other moral principles for political propaganda.

Major disparities in child nutrition can be found in pockets of many countries, including advanced western economies. There are usually cultural, economic and social factors that lead to these anomalous nutritional situations. This is clearly the case regarding the herder communities on the edges of Area C that are the basis for the UNRWA/STC-UK assault.

When these discrepancies were noted in a letter from my own organization, NGO Monitor, to STC-UK, the group said that it "did not contact Atwood directly and is not responsible for her statement."

Atwood didn't respond to NGO Monitor directly, but Ha'aretz published a response on its website. Instead of an apology and correction, she went on the offensive: "As for the notion that the bad condition of the children of Area C is a lie made up by me, or that Israel bears no responsibility for Area C conditions, please see the following, from the STC-UK press release of June 2010… If the STC-UK report is wrong, or if there are other, more accurate statistics, these should also be published."

Sadly, Atwood again relied on STC-UK's false headlines, misleading packaging and double standards. Instead of uncovering and condemning the role of these powerful NGOs in the cynical exploitation of human rights and humanitarian norms, she repeated their biased agendas and propaganda. Atwood isn't alone in being duped by the NGO halo effect. But given her deep commitment to these principles, instead of joining this mob, she should join those who are exposing this abuse and working to restore the moral foundations of human rights.

The Kirshner File

The Balfour Declaration reshaped the Mideast

In a momentous moment that irretrievably reshaped the Middle East, the British government issued the Balfour Declaration 93 years ago this week. A source of joy to Zionists but an act of deceit and betrayal to Arabs, it was addressed to Walter Rothschild – the unofficial leader of Britain's Jewish community and the scion of an illustrious Jewish family – on Nov. 2, 1917, when Britain was bogged down in a protracted war in Europe and Asia.

Sheldon Kirshner in Toronto

The declaration read: "His Majesty's Government view with favour the establishment in Palestine of a national home for the Jewish people, and will use their best endeavours to facilitate the achievement of this object, it being clearly understood that nothing shall be done which may prejudice the civil and religious rights of existing non-Jewish communities in Palestine, or the rights and political status enjoyed by Jews in any other country."

The historic declaration, the outcome of tortuous negotiations, was delivered to Rothschild's home in London several days after the British army, commanded by Gen. Edmund Allenby, launched an offensive to capture Palestine, a neglected Turkish Ottoman province since 1516.

Herbert Samuel

The modern Zionist movement, created almost single-handedly by an assimilated Austrian Jewish journalist named Theodor Herzl, was satisfied with Britain's endorsement of a Jewish homeland in Palestine, though its long-range objective was still a Jewish state. When Britain threw its prestige and power behind the concept of a Jewish homeland in Palestine, 85,000 Jews, representing one-ninth of its population, lived in Palestine.

Britain's pro-Zionist policy, the result of both canny and misconceived notions, was fundamentally a function of the Ottoman Empire's decision to join Germany in an alliance and declare war on Britain and its allies, Jonathan Schneer suggests in his book, The Balfour Declaration: The Origins of the Arab-Israeli Conflict (Doubleday Canada). As he writes, "When the Ottoman Empire entered the war on the side of the Central Powers, they called into question the future of their own empire, which meant the future of Palestine as well."

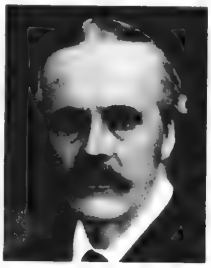
Prior to the war, the geopolitical situation did not favour the Zionists.

In 1913, a year before the outbreak of World War I, Nahum Sokolow, a top official of the World Zionist Organization, requested a meeting with the permanent under secretary of Britain's Foreign Office, Sir Arthur Nicolson, to discuss Zionist aspirations in Palestine. Eager not to offend the Ottomans, who opposed Zionism, Nicolson rebuffed Sokolow. He did, however, permit his private secretary, the Earl of Onslow, to meet Sokolow. Afterward, Nicolson told Onslow, "We had better not intervene to support the Zionist movement."

With the eruption of the war, Britain's attitude to Zionism changed completely, making it possible for Zionists such as Chaim Weizmann to engage Britain in constructive talks to further the Zionist agenda in Palestine. Weizmann, a scientist who developed acetone, a flammable liquid used in the production of explosives, was held in high esteem by the British. Nonetheless, as Schneer observes in this first-rate account of tangled wartime diplomacy, British interests in the region were also closely attuned to the Arabs.

In 1915 and 1916, in a secret exchange of letters between British diplomat Sir Henry McMahon and the Ottoman-appointed ruler of Mecca, Ibn Ali Hussein, Britain promised to recognize the formation and independence of a large Arab state in return for Hussein's pledge to lead an Arab revolt against the Ottomans. Britain hoped that the rebellion would divert Ottoman resources from the war, blunt Ottoman calls for jihad and convert Arabs to the Allied cause. The revolt erupted in June 1916 as Hussein's armies conquered several cities in the Arabian peninsula – Mecca, Jeddah, Taif and Aqaba – and besieged Medina. T.E. Lawrence, popularly known as Lawrence of Arabia, participated in this campaign.

With the ink barely dry on the Hussein-McMahon correspondence, Britain and its ally, France, signed the Sykes-Picot Agreement in 1916, dividing Ottoman lands to be conquered among themselves. Since Britain and France both coveted Palestine, they decided it would be administered by an international condominium.



Alfred James Balfour

Neither Arabs nor Zionists were informed of the agreement, which, in any case, was never implemented.

As these developments unfolded, Zionist officials continued to press Britain for a statement of support that would, as Schneer notes, "constitute a binding form of official recognition. He adds, "Shrewdly, delicately, implacably, they pressed forward, unaware that Palestine already was spoken for in the Sykes-Picot Agreement and perhaps in the McMahon-Hussein correspondence."

The Zionists had friends in Britain's government, notably Herbert Samuel, a Jewish cabinet member who would be appointed the first British high commissioner in Mandate Palestine.

Shortly after the war erupted, he met with Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Edward Grey, saying an opportunity might arise for the Jewish people to fulfil their "ancient aspiration" for a Jewish state in Palestine. Later, in a memorandum, he advocated a British protectorate in Palestine that would enable Jews to build a homeland there.

Samuel, the first self-professing British Jew to sit in the cabinet, was supported by two key allies, David Lloyd George – who would replace Herbert Henry Asquith as prime minister in 1916 – and his foreign secretary, Arthur James Balfour. Mark Sykes, the British diplomat who co-signed the Sykes-Picot Agreement, was also on side, as was C.P. Scott, the editor and publisher of the influential Manchester Guardian.

Sharing the common prejudices of the day, virtually all of them harboured anti-Semitic sentiments of one sort or the other.

As they attempted to court prominent Jews and British officials, the Zionists met fierce resistance from Jewish assimilationists such as Edwin Montagu, a member of the cabinet who happened to be Samuel's cousin. Montagu and like-minded Jews argued that Palestine was of little strategic importance to Britain and that Zionism would undermine the status of Jews in British society.

Zionist hopes were threatened not only by Jewish assimilationists and Arabists, but by rumours that the Ottoman Empire might squirm out of its alliance with Germany and sue for peace. Had this occurred, Schneer writes, Britain would probably have accepted Ottoman claims to Palestine.

On the eve of throwing its support behind a Jewish homeland, the British cabinet, in a fit of indecision, consulted the United States. Weizmann, in response, mobilized American Zionists to extract a promise of support from President Woodrow Wilson.

In hindsight, Schneer believes, Britain's pro-Zionist policy was guided by misconceptions. British politicians, their vision clouded by anti-Semitic myths, believed that "world Jewry" might help fund the cost of the war and convince Russia to remain in it. They also feared that Germany, in a bid to rally Jewish opinion behind the Central Powers, would play the Zionist card and force the Ottoman Empire to grant autonomy to the Jews of Palestine. "In this sense, the Balfour Declaration sprang from fundamental miscalculations about the power of Germany and about the power and unity of Jews," he says.

Ultimately, the interests of Britain and the Zionist movement converged, since both parties wanted the Ottomans out of Palestine. The war did indeed push the Ottomans out of Palestine, thereby laying the foundation for the State of Israel.

If you are looking for a home run, forget Romspen.

Since we became clients of Romspen almost 20 years ago we have become very conservative investors. We no longer look for investments that give us a home run. The consistent annual income of 8.4-10.5% from Romspen with interest deposited monthly in our bank account suits us just fine.

The accessibility of the Romspen partners and their personal service is very much appreciated by us. So much so that we have always felt comfortable in encouraging our family and friends to become investors as well.

Marvin & Leslie Kirsh

Introductory Seminar Wednesday, November 10 at 6:00 p.m.
Refreshments and hors d'oeuvres 5:30 RSVP as seating is limited

ROMSPEN
mortgage investment fund

162 Cumberland Street, Suite 300
Toronto, Ontario M5R 3N5

416.966.1100
1.800.494.0389

www.romspen.com

Greater Toronto Area

Pluralistic group plans silent prayer service

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

The individuals who organized a public prayer service in Toronto in support of Women of the Wall (the group that organizes women's prayer services at the Kotel) this past February have organized as a formal group and are holding their next event this Sunday, Nov. 7.

To honour its pluralistic vision of the Jewish community, the group has adopted the name Eilu ve'Eilu, a phrase from the Talmud indicating the value of the schools of both Hillel and Shamai, even though their visions and practice of Judaism differed markedly.

"Our main focus is to get people from the various movements together," said Rabbi Michal Shekel, executive director of the Toronto Board of Rabbis.

The upcoming event – a silent Shachant (morning worship) service, with guest speaker Rabbi Ed Elkin of the First Narayever Congregation– will be part of the Global Day of Jewish Learning, honouring Rabbi Adin Steinsaltz' completion of nearly five decades translating the Talmud.

It will be held at the National Council of Jewish Women, 4700 Bathurst St. at 10 a.m. Participants are asked to bring their own prayer books and Jewish ritual items.

Educator (and CJN columnist) Rachael Turkienicz, who suggested the group's name, said she thinks the event is very important "because I think that the ability for all of us to leave our comfort zones and reinforce unity, to reinforce a strong and larger community, and start to focus on the things we have in common and less on the things that separate us, is crucial. I think it's crucial that our kids see it.

"Really, it's the question of what are we modeling for them. Do they ever see us leave our communities of comfort and support another Jewish person and their right to express their Judaism?"

The group, which has a mailing list of more than 150 people, recognizes that the upcoming service does not represent "everyone's comfort zone," she said. "It's probably everyone's discomfort zone."

Rabbi Michal Shekel

Having a silent prayer service – which will include some readings and a Kaddish d'Rabbanan – means avoiding "tension as to which service to use," Rabbi Shekel said. "The important thing is for everyone to be together.

"There's something very powerful and very spiritual about silence as well."

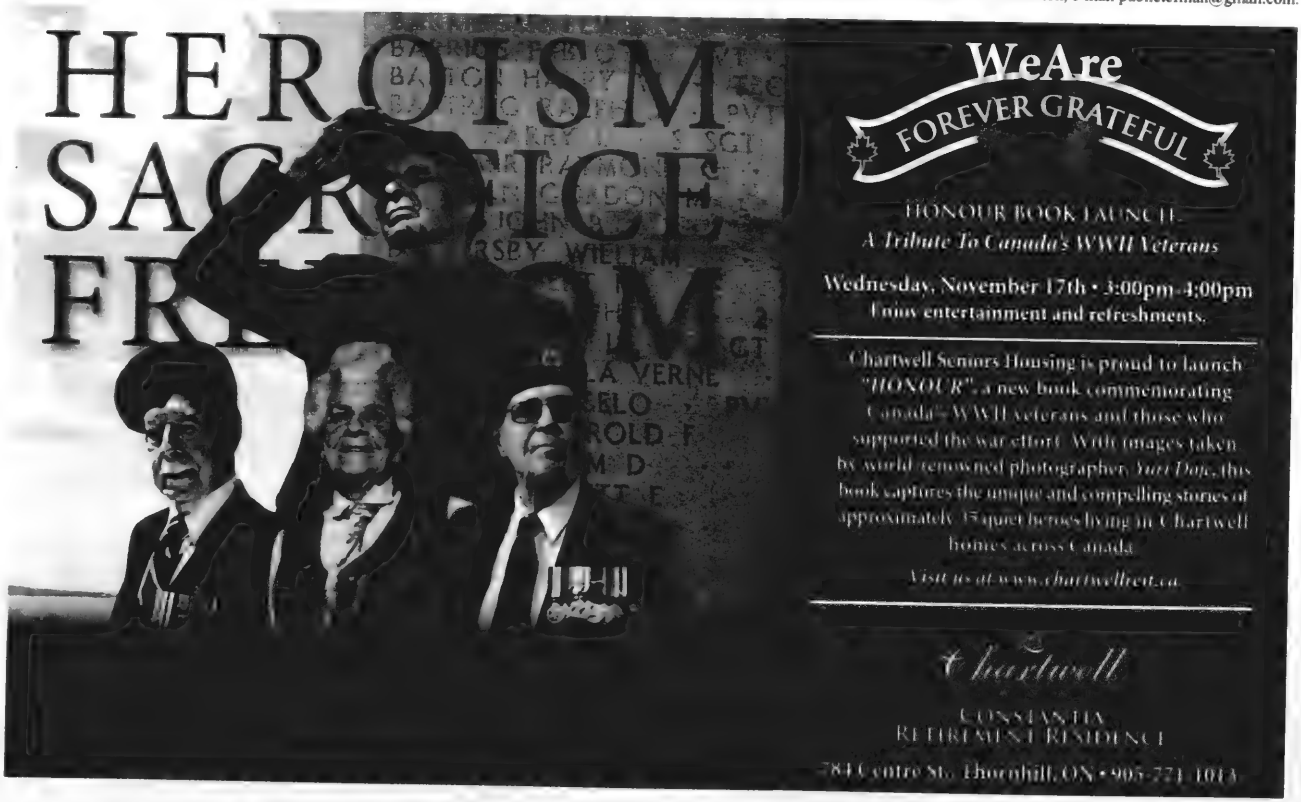
The service is the first of what organizers expect to be two- or three-times-yearly events on Sundays that are also a Rosh Chodesh, the celebration of a new month in the Jewish calendar.

With one exception, the organizers are all women, because the initial event last winter was related to women. "We definitely want to get more men involved on the organizational level," Rabbi Shekel said.

Religiously, the group is more diverse, with Reform, Reconstructionist and Orthodox members. There is no one from the Conservative movement at the moment, but the group has the support of the movement's local rabbinic umbrella, the Rabbinical Assembly, Ontario region, she added. "We have the support within the Conservative movement but don't have a Conservative individual on our committee."

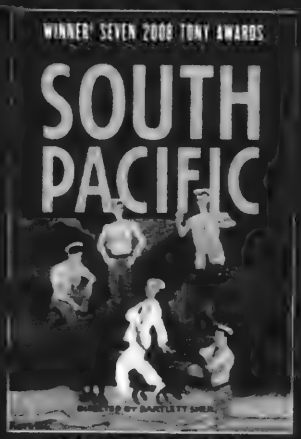
For further information, e-mail publictefillah@gmail.com.

HARDWOOD, CARPET & LAMINATE SALE
RIVIERA FLOORING 25 yrs exp.
Warehouse & Showroom
at
8111 JANE STREET, UNIT #6
CONCORD, ONTARIO L4K 4L7
"NEW FLOORING WILL BE NO PROBLEM"
JOE RIVIETZ "The Flooring Broker"
WOOL SPECIALS
Wool Blend $3.99 installed
Hardwood from $3.99 sq. ft.
Engineered wood from $3.49
Laminate from $1.29
We lift and dispose of old carpets, furniture is moved and replaced, new flooring is professionally installed.
Monday - Saturday 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m.
• Weekends by appointment
Call Joe Rivietz
By appointment only,
905-738-4588
STAINMASTER®
www.rivieraflooring.com



HEROISM
SACRIFICE
FREEDOM
WeAre
FOREVER GRATEFUL
HONOUR BOOK LAUNCH
A Tribute To Canada's WWII Veterans
Wednesday, November 17th • 3:00pm-4:00pm
Enjoy entertainment and refreshments.
Chartwell Seniors Housing is proud to launch "HONOUR", a new book commemorating Canada's WWII veterans and those who supported the war effort. With images taken by world renowned photographer, Yuri Dojc, this book captures the unique and compelling stories of approximately 15 quiet heroes living in Chartwell homes across Canada.
Visit us at www.chartwellrcf.ca
Chartwell
CONSTANTIA
RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
784 Centre St., Thornhill, ON • 905-771-1014

THE 2011 DANCAP SUBSCRIPTION SERIES

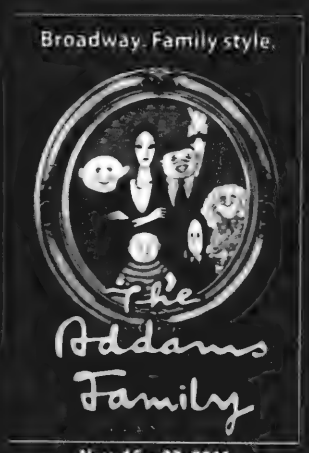


Feb. 15 – Apr. 10, 2011
Toronto Centre for the Arts

Jun. 29 – Jul. 10, 2011
Toronto Centre for the Arts

Jul. 19 – 31, 2011
Four Seasons Centre
for the Performing Arts

Aug. 16 – 28, 2011
Four Seasons Centre
for the Performing Arts



Nov. 16 – 27, 2011
Toronto Centre for the Arts

Dec. 6 – 24, 2011
Toronto Centre for the Arts

6 GREAT SHOWS FROM $210!

SUBSCRIBER BENEFITS!

- BEST SEAT LOCATIONS
- SAVINGS OF UP TO 25%
- COMPLIMENTARY TICKET EXCHANGE
- ADVANCE TICKET PURCHASING
- SUBSCRIPTION TO 'DANCAP NEWS' E-NEWSLETTER
- RESTAURANT DISCOUNTS
- SHOW REMINDERS

BOOK NOW FOR THE BEST OF BROADWAY IN TORONTO

ONLINE
DancapTickets.com
Fast and convenient 24/7

CALL
416-644-3665 or 1-866-950-7469
Monday – Friday 9am – 5pm, Saturday 11am – 4pm

IN PERSON
Dancap Productions Inc., 5000 Yonge St.
Suite 1705 (at North York Blvd.)
Monday – Friday 9am – 5pm

Official Dancap Subscription Series Sponsor
VISA

Captivating Broadway Theatre

dancap

RENTAL RETIREMENT LIVING AT YONGE & EGLINTON

You make me feel So Young!

CHEERS TO THE DUNFIELD

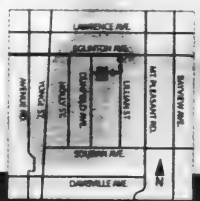
Remember, your favourite meeting spot. That place, where you were always assured of meeting old friends. The place where Johnny, the bartender, knew your order, before you even asked. Experience those great moments again at The Dunfield, a resort-inspired, retirement residence designed to make you feel young again. Cheers!

ALL INCLUSIVE FROM $3,500/MTH

The Dunfield RETIREMENT RESIDENCE

Limited SNOWBIRD SUITES Now Available

BOOK NOW AND SAVE THOUSANDS!*



Model Suite Now Open!
77 Dunfield Ave., Toronto
Call today for more information or personal tour.
416-481-8524

*See sales representatives for details.
Prices and specifications subject to change without notice. E. & O. E. 2010.

WWW.THEDUNFIELD.COM

Greater Toronto Area

Jewish councillors elected north of Toronto

Continued from page 3

He said he has "never been supportive" of the city's land transfer and vehicle registration taxes, but that before getting rid of them, it would "only be prudent" to have a responsible conversation about how to replace these revenue streams.

Pasternak, who was the incumbent school trustee in his own ward, said he's eager to work with the mayor-elect and the rest of council, and to represent the Jewish community.

"Councillors elected in Jewish wards have a tremendous responsibility to educate and inform other councillors on… issues of concern [to the Jewish community], the need to stamp out anti-Semitism in all its forms and to make sure that world conflict zones are not recreated in our city," he said.

He said the Pride Parade has lost the trust of council and won't get any more funding "as long as they let groups like QuAIA participate. This councillor will not be doing business with Pride, and I will urge my colleagues… to not give them public funding."

Another issue he said he'll highlight is the relationship between the city and its university campuses when it comes to hateful events such as Israeli Apartheid Week (IAW). He said he worked hard as a trustee to ban IAW events from city schools.

"This is an event that divides people, is discriminatory and produces no benefit to society. If the University of Toronto and York University want to do business with the City of Toronto, they will have to think long and hard about whether they want to continue to host [IAW]," Pasternak said, adding that anytime these institutions come to the city for partnerships from now on, he will urge council to ask them about what their "time-frames are" for ending IAW.

Pasternak said that he invited Ford to light the chanukiyah at Mel Lastman Square on Dec. 1, and Ford accepted the offer.

"I have confidence that [Ford] will represent what's important to the Jewish community and be passionate about our issues."

Like Ford, Shiner also campaigned on a platform to abolish the land transfer and vehicle registration taxes, and to scrap the city's proposed "Transit City" light rapid transit plan. He's held his seat for 19 years.

Shiner was unavailable to speak with The CJN before deadline, but in an Oct. 25 InsideToronto.com report, he said he was "glad there are changes on council. I think it's for the better. Some councillors need to remember the suburbs count."

He added that he had "no problem working with Mr. Ford. He will work to reduce expenditures across the city. The time has come, and the people have spoken."

Ford said last week that he'd spoken briefly with Matlow, Pasternak and Shiner to congratulate them and welcome them to council, but the four had not yet discussed any particular Jewish community concerns.

Council will be sworn in Dec. 1.

* * *

In Vaughan, despite an election that saw the ouster of Mayor Linda Jackson plus the defeat of three other councillors, Alan Shefman managed to retain his Ward 5 – Thornhill seat.

Alan Shefman

Shefman said he's only had preliminary "congratulatory" conversations with mayor-elect Maurizio Bevilacqua, the former Liberal MP who resigned to run in Vaughan, but anticipates that Bevilacqua will become sensitized to issues in Shefman's heavily Jewish ward.

"I think he has a basic awareness of the Jewish community of Thornhill, but that's something I will help provide to him and work with him on," Shefman said, noting that he helped plan previous mayor Michael DiBiase's trip to Israel and his participation on a March of the Living trip.

"I'm hoping that over time, Mr. Bevilacqua will also develop a greater interest in the Jewish community, as well as the broader diversity that exists in Thornhill," he said.

Howard Shore

* * *

In Markham, Howard Shore, who won in Ward 2, becomes the lone Jewish councillor, replacing Erin Shapero, who retired from politics and endorsed Shore.

Markham's Ward 2 is bounded in the east by Highway 404, in the west by Bayview Avenue, in the south by Steeles Avenue and in the north by Highway 7.

Shore, a former York Region District School Board trustee, said he plans to continue Shapero's environmental initiatives and to serve with an eye to Jewish values and concerns.

"I've never been prouder to be a Jew than in this election campaign. I'm not the most observant Jew, but the values of the community are ones I will carry forward with me" on council, he said, adding: "I've asked Rabbi [Avraham] Plotkin of Chabad Lubavich of Markham to swear me in on Dec. 7."

Shore said that while he represents a "wonderfully diverse community" in his ward, he hopes to raise awareness of the Jewish community and promote cultural initiatives between faiths. He said he anticipates being able to work well with returning Mayor Frank Scarpitti, as they've known each other for almost 20 years.

Celebrating the power of Jewish women

Enjoying the recent UJA Women's Philanthropy Lion of Judah Luncheon are (l-r) Carol Handelman, Anne Handelman, Bonnie Goodman-Bloom, Grace Goodman, Sherry Firestone, Sarena Koschitzky, Marina Nemat, Felicia Posluns, Leanne Matlow, Micki Mizrahi, Sara Gorman, Michele Rotman, Debbie Gorman-Sadja and Beverley Gorman Herzig

By Daniel Horowitz

Approximately 300 caring, committed and visionary Jewish women of all ages recently celebrated the work of United Jewish Appeal's Women's Philanthropy at the annual Lion of Judah Luncheon.

Women's Philanthropy, chaired by Sarena Koschitzky, continues to play a pivotal role in the success of UJA's annual campaign and has already raised close to $7 million.

The vice chair of Women's Philanthropy is Felicia Posluns.

"We are extremely grateful to the entire Women's Philanthropy team for their stellar achievements," said Sherry Firestone, chair, along with Jeff Rosenthal, of UJA's 2011 Campaign. "The proof is in the numbers. Consistently, year in and year out, women's philanthropy has outpaced every other division in our annual campaign and is the benchmark by which all the other divisions are measured."

This year, a special focus of the Annual UJA Campaign, which has raised approximately $38 million to date from over 14,000 donors, is to leap forward in programs and initiatives designed to instill a strong Jewish identity in our next generation, while connecting them to Israel. The campaign comes at a time of a global movement attempting to delegitimize Israel as a Jewish state.

"Our campaign focus is built on creating a future partnership and future relationship with our youth," Koschitzky told the audience. "Our youth will lead us in the not so distant future, but we must give them the proper tools to do so. The tools to advocate, the tools to create Jewish affiliations and social networks. The tools to create and choose strong Jewish identities and the tools for strong leadership development. We must provide Jewish learning in many different shapes and forms and teach our youth the secrets of a strong Jewish community."

"For all of us here today, tzedakah, the righteous act of giving to others, is a way of life," said Elizabeth Wolfe, senior vice chair of the UJA Board. "That's what Jewish tradition teaches. But tzedakah is much more than that. Our great sages viewed tzedakah as equal to all other worthy deeds combined. Today, we celebrate each of you, and I want to thank you for leading the way. You are our philanthropic leadership. You model, in action and deed, the Jewish value of tzedakah. I am honoured to be among you today as we celebrate the power of what happens when women work together towards a common goal to make the world a better place."

This year's event, held at Toronto's Four Seasons Hotel, was chaired by Leanne Matlow and Micki Mizrahi as well as Honourary Luncehon Chairs Grace Goodman, Bonnie Goodman-Bloom, Sara Gorman, Beverley Gorman Herzig, Debbie Goodman-Sadja, Michele Rotman, Anne Handelman and Carol Handelman.

The event featured a riveting, emotional address by Marina Nemat, a native of Tehran, Iran, who, after the Islamic Revolution of 1979, was arrested at the age of sixteen, and spent more than two years in a political prison where she was tortured and narrowly escaped death. She came to Canada in 1991 and has called it home ever since.

UJA Federation's twinned city wins tender for Renewable Energy Centre

Over 20 years ago, UJA Federation of Greater Toronto recognized that the socio-economic gaps emerging between central Israel and its geographic frontier were one of the country's most critical strategic challenges. In 1988, UJA took the bold step of creating a partnership with Israel's most geographically remote region, and made key, long-term investments in a place where these gaps were very serious – Eilat and Eilot.

There are five components to UJA's strategy in Eilat and Eilot:

- Promoting Higher Education
- Promoting the Educational System
- Promoting Renewable Energy
- Promoting Career Development Services
- Promoting Health Care

Last month, UJA's ongoing investment in the Region yielded yet more dividends, when it was announced that the Arava Group, initiated by Ben-Gurion University, and the Eilat-Eilot municipality, won a tender from the Israeli Ministry of Industry, Trade and Labor to establish and operate a technology centre for renewable energy in the south of the country.

The Eilat-Eilot group's bid was chosen over that of the National Renewable Energy Centre Group by the country's Chief's Scientist's Committee.

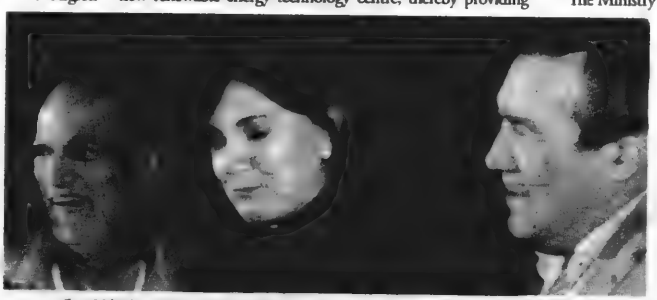
Eilat-Eilot's renewable energy technology centre will be built in the Arava region, just north of Eilat, part of the Eilot Regional Council administration. The winning consortium will invest NIS 57 million, more than $16 million CAD, in the new centre over the next five years while matching funds will be provided by Israel's Chief Scientist, according to the contract with the Israel government.

"Promoting the development of a renewable energy industry in Eilat and Eilot has been a primary component of Toronto's strategy for strengthening and transforming the region into a centre of opportunity," said Lorri Kushnir, chair, along with Morland Brown, of UJA Federation's Partnership 2000 initiative, which partners Toronto with the Eilat-Eilot Region. "Winning this tender is an incredible vote of confidence by the Government of Israel in what the Region has been able to develop in a mere four-year period. Not only does the tender allow the Region to establish and operate a new renewable energy technology centre, thereby providing Eilat and Eilot with the base from which to become a leader in renewable energy development and technology. It also enables the Region's leaders to harness its vast natural assets – land and sun - for the benefit of all of citizens. It was an honour and joy for our Committee to have played a role in realizing this dream."

"By winning the tender, many professionals in the field of renewable energy will be moving to Eilot/Eilat and will be bringing their families with them," said Brown. "This will help change the demographic nature of the region by introducing a more diverse population not dependent on agriculture or tourism. Also, these new families will require services in the region, not the least of which is housing. These requirements will help increase economic activity in the region."

The Ministry of Industry, Trade and Labor praised the new technology centre, expecting it to encourage technological entrepreneurship in the cleantech centre and create frameworks for assistance to entrepreneurs who are starting out, require direction and need funding for their business plans.

"Renewable energy will generate job opportunities for the residents and make us leaders in the global effort to sustain our planet. All of these factors will contribute to establishing the region as the silicon valley of renewable energy," says Udi Gat, Chair of the Eilat Regional Council. "Toronto's Jewish community was the first to believe in the Renewable Energy Project."



(l-r) Udi Gat, Chair of the Eilat Regional Council, Lorri Kushnir, Morland Brown, Chairs of UJA Federation's Partnership 2000 initiative.

Creator of House to host local galas

Shore to appear at programs for Ve'ahavta and Aish

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

For David Shore, charitable participation is something that runs in the family.

On Nov. 7 and 9, the creator and executive producer of the award-winning TV show House will make appearances in Toronto as the MC at Ve'ahavta's Starry Nights Gala and at Aish's Raising Leaders Dinner Gala.

Shore became involved with Ve'ahavta, a Canadian humanitarian and relief organization, through his friend Mark Diamond, chair of the Ve'ahavta board. Shore's wife is on the board as well.

In 2009, he attended the gala as a guest of honour.

"It was really quite a special time for all of us because he's a good guy," said Avrum Rosensweig, founder and president of Ve'ahavta (and a CJN columnist). "He's very caring and very philanthropic."

"I started writing some cheques and wanted to know what they were doing with [them]," Shore said of his involvement with Ve'ahavta. "My son made it his bar mitzvah project.

"You see somebody doing something good, you feel guilty and you get sucked in, is what it is."

Shore's involvement with Aish, whose mission is to provide opportunities for Jews to discover their heritage in an open and respectful atmosphere, came through his younger twin brothers, who are both rabbis. They got involved with the organization "because Aish brought them religion," he said.

"I try and lend my name to things. I've done some online promotion for [Aish]. I've spoken at various conferences for them.

"I've hosted events in L.A. for them, and I've written a few cheques. Which is not as cool as the rest of the stuff I could be doing, but I just want to help wherever I can."

The Raising Leaders Gala honours Canadian parents of Aish rabbis and leaders. This year, Shore's parents, along with six other couples, are being recognized.

"They're thrilled," Shore said of their reaction to being honoured.

"My parents are the stereotypical Jewish parents in a very good way. They love their kids to an annoying extent. They're very proud of their children, they think their children can do no wrong. It's very cool to see them get a little pat on the head for that."

David Shore

Shore believes everyone who is able should give something back to the community, saying status has nothing to do with it.

"I don't particularly do it because I'm in the public eye... let's not kid ourselves about the extent to which I'm in the public eye. I'm capable of walking down the street without being accosted.

"All of us have had some luck in our lives, and there's a lot of people who haven't been nearly so fortunate. All of us can improve the way we live and what we do for our community," he said.

"I want to serve as a role model first and foremost to my children. I am to some extent aware of the fact that people are looking at me a little bit. I want to use that not so much to get reservations at restaurants, but to help in a tiny way to set an example to people that live better lives [financially]."

While Shore does not consider himself a religious person, he still tries to incorporate Judaism's lessons into his life.

"I'm not a religious person, but I am a Jew and I'm very much aware of that... I try to be aware of our role in the world, tikkun olam, and make the world a better place."

While House, which airs on Global Mondays at 8 p.m. PST/EST, has featured its fair share of Jewish moments (including an Orthodox wedding), the show also takes a look at religion in general, he said.

"I think my connection to my brothers has made me more aware of the role religion plays in people's lives. I think we probably do more religious-themed episodes than almost any other show on TV. House is not a religious man, but people facing death ask the big questions.

"My background has inspired cases on the show and my Jewishness is part of my background."

Ve'ahavta's Starry Nights takes place on Nov. 7 at the Toronto Centre for the Arts. For tickets, call 416-964-7698.

Aish's Raising Leaders is happening Nov. 9 at Beth Avraham Yoseph of Toronto. For tickets, call 905-764-9340 or e-mail aishleaderdinner@gmail.com.

menchie's frozen yogurt
grand opening!
saturday, november 6, 2010
free yogurt and gifts from noon to 6pm*
• have your picture taken with menchie
• self-serve frozen yogurt with 100 rotating flavours and 40+ toppings
1. mix 2. weigh 3. pay 4. yumm!
menchie's bloor street west (the annex)
511 bloor st. west
(between bathurst and spadina)
toronto, on m5s 1y4
416.645.0222
menchies.com

PAYLESS TRAVEL
and Cruises
Israel Specialist, Professional Agents, Superior Service
Israel Culinary Tour:
Led by Rabbi Elyse Goldstein & Bonnie Stern
Feb. 6 – 15, 2011
Learn more about this unique trip: Sun., Nov 28, 4 pm
Bonnie Stern School of Cooking, 6 Erskine Ave.
RSVP by Nov 26: 416-922-0116 ext. 1 – Michelle
Pathway of our Biblical & Cultural Heritage
Rome & Israel with Channa Sargon
May 22 – June 5, 2011
Jewish Heritage Tour – CHINA
May 9 - 24, 2011
Call Miki at 416-840-0855/1-877-840-0855 ext. 222
EL AL Economy
Nov 4 – Dec 14, Dec 25 – Mar 31, 2011
$625.00 + tax
ISRAEL WEEKLY GUARANTEED DEPARTURE TOURS
VISIT OUR WEBSITE - goisraeltravel.com
Downtown Office 416-922-0116

Hebrew University gets gift from ex-senator

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Canadian and Israeli medical researchers and academics are about to get a double-dose of philanthropy from a former senator.

Toronto lawyer Jerry Grafstein – recently retired from his Senate seat – and his wife, Carole, have initiated two new projects that they hope will foster more ties between Canada and Israel.

The first, the Honourable Jerry and Carole Grafstein Network for Cancer Research, will support cancer research being conducted at Hebrew University of Jerusalem's Institute for Medical Research Israel-Canada (IMRIC) and eventually facilitate collaboration on cancer research with Toronto's Mount Sinai Hospital.

The second, the Honourable Jerry and Carole Grafstein Visiting Professor Program, will bring a "noted scholar" annually to the University of Toronto's Centre for Jewish Studies to teach two courses. The program will also bring a Hebrew U PhD to Toronto for a post-doctoral fellowship at the centre.

The overall aims of the Grafsteins' programs are to promote the transfer of knowledge between Canadian and Israeli scientists and academics, and expose Israel's medical and scholarly contributions to society and, in so doing, help combat anti-Semitism and anti-Israel sentiment.

Both programs are being promoted by the Canadian Friends of Hebrew University (CFHU), which said the projects will cost $1.5 million to complete. Between the Grafsteins' donation and other fundraising activities, the organization has managed to raise two-thirds of the money.

The Grafsteins will be fêted at a CFHU gala event this month, when both programs will be officially launched, and it is hoped event attendees will donate enough to complete the fundraising goals of the projects.

The majority of the proceeds will go to IMRIC to help advance research on cancer.

Speaking to The CJN last month, Grafstein said he and his wife were motivated to create and give seed funding for the projects out of a desire to "neutralize academic anti-Semitism on university campuses" in Toronto.

"We have to fight political correctness," Grafstein said. "The people who are arraigned against [Israel on university campuses] are hiding under the guise of academic freedom. Our battle starts at the university."

Rami Kleinmann, CHFU's national director, who was present at Grafstein's office, said his organization was deeply indebted to the Grafsteins for their initiative. He added that he was determined to fight anti-Semitism on Canadian campuses and that as a result of these new projects, Hebrew U is now better positioned to do so.

"One of the ways we can combat anti-Semitism… is to partner with every Canadian university campus," Kleinmann said, adding that this was the founding vision for CFHU.

"We're trying to replace anti-Semitism with affinity," Grafstein said.

Both Grafstein and Kleinmann spoke of the emerging global "knowledge economy" – the idea that knowledge is becoming viewed as a product that can be commercialized and capitalized on – and noted that universities will play a critical role in generating economic benefits for countries in the future.

Jerry Grafstein

"We wanted to make a shidduch between Israel and Canada on technology and [knowledge] transfer," Grafstein said. He added that he's also trying to drum up private and public local venture capital to help Israeli startups take root in Toronto.

Kleinmann said Hebrew U is currently in the top 10 of the world's knowledge economies.

He said the university's strategy, and Israel's on the whole, is to expose itself to all comers, Jews and non-Jews alike, by offering what it now does best "and that's in our knowledge. Our [hasbarah] track record over the years has been to attract sympathy for our country.

"But we're in a new age. We now want to attract partners and investors who view Israel as a destination hub for large corporations. It's about time for Jewish communities worldwide to support this endeavour."

CFHU's Evening of Movers and Shapers honouring Grafstein takes place on Nov. 15 at 7 p.m. at the Toronto Centre for the Arts. Steve Paikin, anchor of TVOs The Agenda, will host the gala and comedian Jackie Mason is scheduled to perform.

For more information, call 416-485-8000, ext. 123.

CAREER OPPORTUNITY

Full-time Fundraising & Development Officer for Na'amat Canada Toronto to:

- Develop and execute a comprehensive fundraising strategy focusing on individual and corporate donors; and;
- Work with current membership to plan and develop fundraising activities.

Ideal candidates will possess the following skills/abilities:

- Proven track record in fundraising and working with volunteers;
- Work independently and be self-motivated;
- Possess strong communication, written and administrative skills; and,
- Demonstrate strong leadership and interpersonal skills.

Candidates should submit resume prior to November 19, 2010 to: naamat@bellnet.ca

We thank all applicants for their interest; however, only those selected for an interview will be contacted. No phone inquiries please.

The newest addition to the CJN…

The Canadian Jewish Shmooze

Read the CJN's new blog!

http://canadianjewishnews.blogspot.com

BUBBIE APPROVED

What's the difference between homemade chicken soup and store bought? Your grandmother can tell you. She knows that in cooking, as in life, you can settle for mediocre or you can put in extra effort and enjoy the best. At Kensington Place, we get it! We use the freshest ingredients and offer two menu selections plus five alternative dishes at each meal. All our delicious entrees are made from scratch and prepared under the supervision of the Kashruth Council COR. Come taste the difference at Kensington Place. Don't settle for less.

For a full list of our free events, visit www.thekensingtonplace.com

(416) 636-9555
www.thekensingtonplace.com
866 Sheppard Ave. West

Kensington Place

TORONTO'S FINEST KOSHER RETIREMENT RESIDENCE

Benefit to raise funds for Israel Elwyn

Organization serves over 2,000 children, adults with special needs

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

Moshe Greengarten, chairman of the board of Canadian Friends of Israel Elwyn, calls the organization a hidden gem.

Since he learned about it on a trip to Israel about 12 years ago, he said, he's been intent on "uncovering it, polishing it, and discovering its treasure."

Founded in 1984, Israel Elwyn serves more than 2,000 children and adults with special needs. The ultimate goal of all of Israel Elwyn's programs is to provide individuals with the tools they need to lead more independent lives within the community.

Services include early intervention centres and preschool centres, education services, adult development centres that focus on independence and work skills, and work activities centres that provide basic work opportunities in the occupational training centre or supported work in the community.

Supported group homes are available for 48 adults and teenagers who can live more independently, and there are residential services for 235 children and adults who are in need of total support.

A transitional training program provides special education for students aged 18 to 21, with both classroom instruction and a wide range of job experiences in the community and at Israel Elwyn centres.

Funds raised by Canadian Friends of Israel Elwyn support the preschool development centre.

Greengarten, 61, a health-care management consultant, said that he was immediately attracted to the organization because it is "entrepreneurial and visionary, and it pushes the boundaries. It combines the highest quality of services with the pursuit of knowledge."

Moshe Greengarten

He said that since its inception in Jerusalem in 1984, it has expanded from one program serving 60 people to country-wide programs serving more than 2,000 people.

"Its major thrust is that it normalizes the lives of those with special needs. It places people in the regular workforce with training and coaching, and integrates them into Israeli society," he said.

He said Israel Elwyn has partnered with such places as the Knesset, Supreme Court, hospitals, and Aroma Espresso Bar to place thousands of clients in permanent jobs.

"They also advocate for the rights of workers with special needs, and they share their knowledge with the Jewish world and the rest of the world."

He said that in order to expose the work of Israel Elwyn, Canadian Friends of Israel Elwyn has partnered with Beth Sholom Synagogue for an evening of wine tasting with Michael Pinkus, "The Grape Guy," Nov. 11, at 7:30 p.m. For information, call Patricia Starr, 416-787-1151, ext. 300.

Taste The Good Life

If you're too busy to act retired take a bite out of life at a Tridel inspired retirement rental residence in your neighborhood. Enjoy hotel style service from a staff that knows you don't live in their building, they work in your home:

- 1 and 2 bedroom rental suites
- 24 hour concierge
- Healthcare professionals on staff
- Hotel-style services
- Dining room with table service
- Piano, pub and fireplace lounges
- Patio café
- Serenity Spa and massage
- Personal LivingWell coaching
- Hair salon and esthetician
- Housekeeping and laundry services
- Transportation for scheduled events
- Building wide emergency response system
- Cable and telephone included

Act now for move-in and rental bonuses

DELMANOR
Northtown

(416) 225-9146
5351 Yonge Street,
south of Finch

TRIDEL

Visit www.delmanor.com for all our GTA locations.

Good News For All Dialysis Patients !

ESCAPE THE BITTERLY COLD WEATHER

Dialyze at Universal Kidney Center in South Florida

You do not have to make payments for your dialysis treatments.

We will bill Provincial Health Care directly.

Call now for reservations
(954) 802 - 8100

Greater Toronto Area

Former campers to gather for reunion Nov. 12-14.

Camp Ramah returns to its roots

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Camp Ramah in Canada is celebrating its 50th year with a weekend-long reunion Nov. 12 to 14, at Toronto's Beth Tzedec Congregation.

The weekend will kick off with Friday night dinner "Ramah style," and will feature Los Angeles-based Craig Taubman, a former Ramah Canada staffer, singing in concert as part of a Saturday night gala banquet fundraiser honouring the Flatt and Wolfe families. As well, morning Shabbat services will be followed by an enhanced Kiddush, and havdalah services will also be conducted Ramah-style.

Money raised will be put toward scholarships for camp enrolment fees, said Ramah's development director, Ilana Hirt. "We're looking to raise about $100,000 for kids who are in need of a scholarship."

Michael Wolf, Ramah's director for the past eight years, "grew up at the camp," he said. The 45-year-old Pittsburgh native, who now lives in Detroit, noted that the camp serves between 400 and 450 youngsters per session, not just from Ontario, but from Montreal, western Pennsylvania, upstate New York and Michigan.

Ramah is "based on Jewish values, but we do all kinds of life skills," Wolf said. "We're known for our waterfront – waterskiing, sailing, canoeing, swimming. We have a brand new sports field, and we offer a whole lot of different hobbies.

"What makes us unique is the spirit and Jewish values. It's Conservative Jewish, but we have campers from Conservative and Orthodox congregations, and some Reform… [but] I think like most good camps, the thing we generate is friendships. Lifelong friendships are formed each summer at camp.

"It's exciting to be able to reconnect live, not just through Facebook."

Reunion chair Howard Slepkov, who lives in St. Catharines, is a former longtime Ramah parent and has been on the camp's board for 12 years. He hopes that alumni with growing families will rekindle friendships at the reunion and remember "how important Ramah was to them."

Jewish camping is "a formative experience," said Slepkov, who is an educator.

Rabbi Mitch Cohen – director of the New York-based National Ramah Commission and former director of Ramah Canada for 11 years until 2000, said that Ramah has a "probably the most beautiful natural setting of any of the camps." As well, he added, a combination of the environment and the young staff who serve as role models have a lifelong impact, inspiring Jewish identity and commitment.

"The key to successful Jewish identity-building is social relationships, friendships," he said. For that reason, it also impacts the other ten months of the year, he explained.

Rabbi Cohen said that, as much as he's gained from serving the camp, he especially appreciates the "powerful impact" it has had on his children.

It's very appropriate that the reunion is being held at Beth Tzedec, because the synagogue was where it all started for the camp, said Ab Flatt, a reunion honoree with his wife Phyllis and brother- and sister-in-law Harold and Carole Wolfe. Ramah – more formally known as Camp Ramah in Canada, the Max and Beatrice Wolfe Campus – is named for Phyllis' and Harold's parents.

Ab, a former camp chair who has been involved with Ramah for about 40 years, said Beth Tzedec's then rabbi – Stuart Rosenberg, who died in 1990 – was one of the camp's founders.

Rabbi Rosenberg and the late J. Barney Goldhar, a congregant who would become the camp's first chair and whose daughter had attended a Ramah camp in the United States, approached the Jewish Theological Seminary, which oversees Ramah camps, for permission to open Canada's first and so far only Ramah camp.

Founders purchased the site of the former Camp Winnebago with funding from 11 Conservative synagogues in Ontario and Quebec, said Flatt. The three major supporters were Beth Tzedec and Beth Sholom Synagogue in Toronto, and Congregation Shaar Hashomayim in Montreal, he added.

"It's a wonderful camp with great Jewish values," said Flatt, whose four children are Ramah alumni and whose 14 grandchildren of camp age have attended the camp.

Some people think that kids who attend Jewish day school don't need a Jewish overnight camp, or that it's "too religious," he noted. But, he said, a camp such as Ramah means "living Jewishly 24 hours a day.

"One is living," he clarified. "One is theory."

When it comes to health care, you deserve more.

Take advantage of these and other helpful services
AT ABSOLUTELY NO COST TO YOU.

FREE PRESCRIPTION CHECK-UP
FREE MED-ORGANIZER PACKS
FREE ONE-ON-ONE COUNSELLING
FREE PRESCRIPTION DELIVERY
FREE EASY REFILL SERVICE

Transferring your prescription is easy*. Call 1 800 SHOPPERs.
*By law, not all prescriptions can be transferred. See store for details

Health & Wellness Seminars

Join your Shoppers Drug Mart Pharmacist for an informative seminar

BLOOD PRESSURE SEMINAR
November 3rd - Noon to 1:00pm

CHOLESTEROL SEMINAR
November 17th - Noon to 1:00pm

NATURAL HEALTH SEMINAR
November 10th - Noon to 1:00pm

COLD & FLU SEMINAR
November 24th - Noon to 1:00pm

NOW OPEN
YORK MILLS CENTRE
2528 Bayview Avenue
416-444-8411
Open Monday - Friday 8am to 10pm,
Saturday & Sunday 9am to 10pm

SHOPPERS DRUG MART

905-881-3334
info@dearbornbaby.com
Est. 1979
Dear-Born Baby
www.DearBornBaby.com
Voted Toronto's Best Baby Store!
Nursery Furniture, Strollers, High Chairs, Car Seats, Bedding, and so much more.
72 Doncaster Avenue, Thornhill
(One Stop Light North of Yonge & Steeles)
Visit us online at DearBornBaby.com
Come see us at the babytime show prenatal to preschool
November 12 - 14, 2010
Metro Toronto Convention Centre, North Building show specials
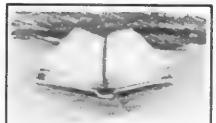
You don't want to miss this show!
Check our blog for updates!
www.DearBornBaby.Blogspot.com

Jewish Life

Civilization: learning to be kind

By RABBI DAVID CADOCH



Some time ago, while observing my congregants, I wondered what makes this place of worship different. Having had the opportunity to meet wonderful people throughout the various phases of my life, this time I was looking through the lens of a rabbi. Indeed, every rabbi is proud of his congregation, so what distinguishes the congregation I serve and what particular characteristic am I so proud of?

Before answering this question, I'd like to share a conversation. I was once approached by a person who decided to learn the Tanach. In the midst of her reading journey, she shared with me her bewildered feelings as to why the Tanach is so filled with violence, treachery and suffering? In response, I remembered the words of my teacher and rebbe, Rabbi Aryeh Leib Baron, who summed up this enigma with a simple and gentle truth. He taught that the Tanach is the journey of mankind from a state of being a diamond in the rough to an on-going process of refinement. This is what we call civilization, which is defined by most dictionaries as a society that has a high level of culture and social organization.

Plato said that "poetry is nearer to vital truth than history." There's a kind of writing – containing personal cries wrung from men and women in the strong twist of life – to which we cannot remain indifferent. Those of us who have spent countless hours reciting and studying the psalms of the poet of Israel, King David, will testify to their power, with words that "pluck the strings with just the touch the human heart craves."

Those of us who imbued Hannah's prayer to the Almighty at a time when she was barren and longed for children – the same woman who, years later, the Talmud tells us, was destined to lose her seven sons in the sanctification of God's name – cannot remain indifferent.

What makes us human if not the distinct ability to feel empathy for creatures and fellow humans? But empathy isn't enough. One must act on these feelings with intelligent compassion. We begin by understanding what compassion and empathy mean, as defined by a standard dictionary. Empathy is the ability to identify with and understand somebody else's feelings or difficulties. Compassion is defined as sympathy for the suffering of others, often including a desire to help. Sympathy is the ability to enter into, understand or share somebody else's feelings.

Clearly, the mark of a civilized nation is its ability not only to feel for the unfortunate and those suffering from personal crisis, but also the ability to stimulate immediate and appropriate acts to help and relieve those in need.

This is the hallmark of the synagogue I serve at Maimonides Geriatric Hospital in Montreal. Congregants from outside take up the duty to assist residents who might not be very mobile. Their acts of kindness vary from a simple "Shabbat shalom" to helping residents with their religious devotions. Even more touching is the children's involvement. These young four- to 12-year-olds might push a resident's wheelchair to the bimah for an aliyah or prepare the kiddush table and help serve kiddush plates to residents.

This is first-hand education for the children in the meaning of kindness to the elderly and those incapacitated by illness. It's amazing how the children do this naturally and with such pride and pleasure, not to mention the immense enjoyment the residents receive from watching these angels at work.

This is what makes me so proud to serve this congregation – acts of chesed thrive vibrantly amidst our prayers, and that is a true brachah!

Rabbi David Cadoch is spiritual leader of the Beth HaRambam Synagogue at the Maimonides Geriatric Hospital in Montreal.

Observing Remembrance Day

After the carnage of World War I, Albert Einstein asked Sigmund Freud this question: "Is war natural to man?" Freud's response was pessimistic: aggression, truculence and strife, he asserted, are endemic features of the human condition.

Is this true? Over the years, dozens of scientific studies have emphasized that aggression is not essentially innate, but a learned form of anti-social behaviour. Violence is neither in our evolutionary legacy, nor in our genes.

Alfie Kohn, in his book about popular beliefs, You Know What They Say, wrote, "The idea that [aggression is] biologically determined – a proposition with which about 60 per cent of Americans agree, according to several surveys – is far-fetched. 'When one country attacks another country, this doesn't happen because people in the country feel aggressive toward those in the other,' explains Richards Lewontin. 'If it were true, we wouldn't need propaganda or a draft: all those aggressive people would sign up right away.' State 'aggression is a matter of political policy, not a matter of feeling'"

Pessimism is not necessarily realism. When we observe Remembrance Day, what shall we remember? In the first place, over and above the clichés and the platitudes, we should remember what war is really like.

In World War I, the British and their allies fought the enemy for four years and three months. It began with strategic army manoeuvres in Belgium and northern France, which ended when both sides were locked in the terrible and infamous trench system.

When the madness finally came to an end, eight million men in uniform – including 61,000 Canadians – would be dead. Twelve million civilians would perish in the accompanying revolutions, famine and epidemics. The incalculable tragedy about all this that no one knew what this war was all about. Certainly not those who fought in the trenches or the historians who are still arguing about it over 90 years later. It was as senseless as it was barbaric.

World War II, unparallelled in its ruthlessness and fuelled by the flames of Nazi ethnic, political and religious genocide, led to the death of all causes, of 55 million men, women and children – among them 42,000 Canadians.

It is often reported that the recent war in Iraq led to the death of more than 5,000 American soldiers. It is seldom mentioned that over 100,000 Iraqi civilians were killed and more than a million uprooted from their homes.

It is commonplace to assert that atomic weapons can destroy our vaunted civilization. Weapons, small in size but great in power – easily hidden and transported – can now find a place in the hands of the emotionally disturbed and the morally irresponsible.

The late astronomer Carl Sagan, warned, "If we are content in a world with nearly 30,000 nuclear weapons, we are betting our lives on the proposition that no present or future leaders, military or civilian – the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France, China, Israel, India, Pakistan and North Korea and whatever other nuclear powers there will be will ever stray from the strictest standards of prudence. We are gambling on their sanity and sobriety even in times of great personal and national crisis."

The achievement of a warless and a just world order will require undreamed of spiritual strength and unimagined restructuring of the current political, social and economic order. And like love and friendship, it must forever be nurtured, renewed, and consciously sustained.

On Remembrance Day, we might consider for a brief moment poet Eve Merriam's dream of giving birth to a child who will ask: "Mother, what was war?"

Jewish Life

The sustaining power of peoplehood

By ELLIOTT MALAMET

In shuls, of course, but also in airports. Hotel lobbies. Office board rooms. Living rooms of shiva houses. A restaurant. At the Kotel. By a river. At the bottom of a mountain. By the side of the road. Where I was the only English speaker. Where I was the only Ashkenazi. Where I was the only one with a knitted kippah. The only one in a suit. The only one without a suit. All of these places and situations became sacred for me, complete with the various ad hoc minyanim that were formed there, during my 11 months of saying Kaddish a few years ago for my father, Colin Malamet.

Perhaps the most memorable space, geographically and emotionally, was a thoroughly secular kibbutz in Israel, where I had gone with a small group of students for one night only. It appeared that there would be little or no chance of mustering up the requisite quorum for Kaddish the next morning.

But late at night, I ran into some guests, in their requisite sandals and shorts and open shirts, with not a kippah to be found. We spoke, and in my halting Hebrew, I asked if they would be so kind as to rouse themselves early the next morning to fill out the necessary 10 so that I could say Kaddish. An odd but not unkind look appeared on the faces of the men as they said, simply, "Nireh" (we will see).

At 6:45 a.m. I showed up at the designated place. My two male students who had joined me were highly skeptical that anything would come of this, especially as 7:00 and 7:15 a.m. passed. Close to 7:30, when it seemed like my request had found its inevitable answer, a still half-asleep, but good-natured group of Israeli men shuffled toward me. I had almost finished Shacharit, but there was now, as through the millennia, the ability to once again say the words "Yitgadal veyitkadash shmei rabbah." In unison, my "secular" brethren intoned "Amen."

In a world that often demonizes Jews and Israelis, that small moment on a quiet Negev kibbutz was a reminder to me of the sustaining power of Jewish peoplehood, no matter what seems to divide us.

When I watch the BBC, or read transcripts from the various assemblies of the United Nations, or books such as Jimmy Carter's Palestine: Peace not Apartheid, I have the feeling they're not quite seeing the same Israel, or even the same world, that I do. But Jewish history shows, if nothing else, the unlikely endurance of this small yet remarkably creative and meaning-centred people, and I believe that we will continue into the future, long after certain of our enemies have left this earth.

On Nov. 10 at 7:30 p.m. at the Village Shul in Toronto, I will be interviewing the British journalist Melanie Phillips on some of the key issues facing the West at this crucial time. My family is sponsoring the event, and we invite the community to join us to commemorate the third yahrzeit of my father. May his memory be for a blessing.

ECOFLEXTRA - Guaranteed Income for Life

- Guaranteed income for life - no matter how markets perform!
- Lock-in market growth with automatic tri-annual resets
- 5% Annual bonus* up to 15 years
- Death Benefit Guarantee
- Tax efficient for non-registered accounts

KENSTERN

500-1867 Yonge St.
Toronto, ON M4S 1Y5
T: 416-545-5323 | www.kenstern.ca

IA CLARINGTON INVESTMENTS

IA INDUSTRIAL ALLIANCE

Provided no withdrawals are made. Industrial Alliance Insurance and Financial Services Inc. is the issuer of the ECOFLEXTRA Individual Variable Annuity Contract. Certain restrictions apply. The IA Clarington Funds and the IA Clarington Target Click Funds are managed by IA Clarington Investments Inc. IA Clarington is a trademark of IA Clarington Investments Inc. and the IA Clarington logo is a trademark of Industrial Alliance Insurance and Financial Services Inc. and are used under license. Sponsored in part by IA Clarington Investments Inc.

The Canadian Jewish Shmooze

Read the CJN's new blog!

http://canadianjewishnews.blogspot.com

Children with special needs, Pt. 2

One of the heroes in developing bar and bat mitzvah programs for children with special needs is Judith Edelman-Green. American-born and now living in Israel, Edelman-Green founded and directed the country's Bar/Bat Mitzvah Program for Children with Special Needs. Established in 1995, the program has helped thousands of youngsters celebrate their special day. The program is run by Israel's Masorti (Conservative) movement, but children from all backgrounds are welcome. As Edelman-Green says, "Although a child may be limited physically or mentally, he or she need not be limited spiritually." You can read more at the program's website. [http://bit.ly/mitz11]

Becca Hornstein is another pioneer who gained first-hand experience when she planned a bar mitzvah for her son, Joel, who is autistic. Hornstein, co-founder of the Council for Jews with Special Needs in Phoenix, Ariz., says that for every challenge, there is a creative response. [http://bit.ly/mitz12]

• If a child cannot learn to read Hebrew: write the "script" in transliteration (phonetic English) or prepare an audiotape with all the prayers in Hebrew and English.

• If a child cannot verbalize: a boy who was profoundly multiply disabled and had absolutely no communications skills "sat on his father's lap, his fingers lovingly curled around the wooden handles of the scroll, as his father chanted the Hebrew in his son's honour."

• If a child cannot stay in one place for long: Hornstein tells the story of one hyperactive boy's bar mitzvah. Knowing that he might wander during the Shabbat service, the rabbi explained to the congregation, "Today is Ben's day. The entire chapel is his bimah, and he can move in it as he wishes [to] communicate with God in his way." [http://bit.ly/mitz13]

Bnaimitzvahguide.com has tips about photographing a child with special needs as well as advice about what to look for in a professional photographer for your simchah. There's also an article that poses these questions: "Where does the parent of a reading or physically disabled child go when looking for study materials for the bar or bat mitzvah? Where can one find a parshah in Braille? How does the dyslexic child learn their Haftorah when standard print is incomprehensible?" The answer: JBI International. Once known as the Jewish Braille Institute, this organization provides Torah and Haftorah readings in audio and Braille or large print for bnai mitzvah, as well as customized Jewish readings. At the JBI International site, you can watch a brief video as bar mitzvah candidate, Alan, recites readings from his parshah, thanks to his hard work and a Braille text. [http://bit.ly/mitz10]

Sometimes the right timing – and location – for the ceremony can make all the difference in the world. As Mitchell Parker explains, when Brian David was called to the Torah to celebrate his bar mitzvah, "on hand were Brian's parents, two sisters, brother, and family friends, as well as almost 600 of his closest friends – the campers and staff of Camp Ramah in Canada." At 21 years of age with Down syndrome, Brian was also a veteran of the camp's tikvah program for children with special needs. When Brian was 13, his parents had decided to forgo a formal ceremony, "but now that he had a community of his own, with a congregation that welcomes him just as he is, we decided to have a bar mitzvah where Brian is both loved and respected." [http://bit.ly/mitz14]

Mark Mietkiewicz is a Toronto-based website producer who writes, lectures and teaches about the Jewish Internet. He can be contacted at highway@rogers.com.

ISRAEL 2010-2011

COMPARE APPLES to APPLES

The BEST Family Tours in North America!!!
Call us for Recent References
Bar/Bat Mitzvah Ceremony Included
All-inclusive deluxe hotels
• More days of sightseeing
• More meals
• A true family itinerary
www.israelfamilytours.com
or call Kathy ext. 345

WINTER SPECIAL 2010
BOOK NOW AND SAVE
SPACE VERY LIMITED
Dec. 16 - Dec. 30
Dec. 19 - Jan. 2/11
MARCH BREAK 2011
Mar. 9 - Mar. 20
PASSOVER 2011
April 16 - April 30
SUMMER 2011
Jun. 26 - Jul. 10
Jun. 3 - Jul. 17
Jun. 17 - Jul. 31
Jun. 24 - Aug. 7
Jun. 31 - Aug. 14
Aug. 14 - Aug. 28

PROMOTION PACKAGE
AIR INCL. 3 NT. in 5 STAR HOTEL
FROM $1266

Community Mission
May 12 - 26 2011
If you've been to Israel before or you're a first timer...
THIS IS THE TOUR FOR YOU!!
Call Kathy ext. 345

PRIVATE CUSTOM TOURS
INNOVATIVE ITINERARIES & GREAT PRICES!
No one is more experienced than we are!
DON'T TRY TO DO IT ON YOUR OWN BOOK WITH US AND SAVE!
Call Ehud Ext. 322

Air Canada online
For more tours & to book visit:
www.peerlesstravel.com

BEST AIRFARE TO ISRAEL
Don't book with anyone else before talking to us first!

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES
YOUR FULL SERVICE TRAVEL AGENCY
905-886-5610
800-294-1663
info@peerlesstravel.com
7117 Bathurst St. Just N. of Steeles, Thornhill, ON L4J 3Z6

Reena

Synagogues embrace Reena Clients

As in past years, Reena clients were given the opportunity to attend High Holiday Services in their neighbourhood synagogues at no charge.

Participation in religious practices is very important to our clients. Reena wishes to thank the boards and members of the following synagogues who responded to our request and warmly welcomed our clients into their communities.

Adath Israel Congregation
Aish Toronto & The Thornhill Community Shul
Beth Avraham Yoseph of Toronto Congregation
Beth David B'nai Israel Beth Am
Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda
Beth Radom Congregation
Beth Sholom Synagogue
Beth Tikvah Synagogue
Beth Torah Congregation
Beth Tzedec Congregation of Toronto
Congregation Bnai Torah
Holy Blossom Temple
Kehillat Shaarei Torah
Kolel: The Adult Centre for Liberal Jewish Learning
Pride of Israel Synagogue
Shaar Shalom Synagogue
Shaarei Shomayim Congregation
Shaarei Tefillah
Temple Emanu-El
Temple Har Zion
Temple Sinai Congregation of Toronto
Village Shul

Towards a better future ... integrating people with developmental disabilities into the community

In the same room with greatness

By BERNIE M. FARBER

From left, Elizabeth Wolfe, chair elect, UJAFED, Bernie Farber, His Holiness the Dalai Lama, Mark Freiman
[Adrienne Leong photo]

In 1969, my Tibetan friend Shamar told me about the mystique that is Tenzin Gyato, Tibet's 14th Dalai Lama.

I was a young university student: impressionable, fearless and open-minded, probably to a fault. The world at the time was a "happening place." Jewish students were at the centre of both Jewish and world politics, marching in the streets.

Guest Voice

Opposing the war in Vietnam or fighting for the right of Soviet Jews to immigrate to Israel made us feel empowered. Given the world today, it's fair to say that both these struggles were examples of youth taking conflict by the scruff of the neck and winning. Into all this stepped Shamar. He was quiet and dignified; he brought an interesting calm into my life at a time when the world seemed to be raging.

In university, I majored in world religions, so understandably, I found interesting commonalities in Judaism and Buddhism. More importantly, I came to see that the clear and humbling messages of the Dalai Lama mirrored many of Judaism's messages. In Judaism, we are told that one of the greatest of mitzvot is to perform acts of loving-kindness. One of the Dalai Lama's main faith themes states: "Be kind whenever possible. It is always possible."

Over the years, I gained a new understanding of patience from the manner in which the Dalai Lama has dealt with his forced exile from Tibet. The Chinese have occupied Tibet since 1950, arguably the longest occupation in modern history. While the Israeli-Palestinian issue preoccupies many, the Dalai Lama has been unwavering in his consistent attempts at finding a peaceful resolution with China. He has never given up hope that a resolution will come.

A couple weeks ago, I received a call from Tenzin Khanzar, formerly chief of staff for Citizenship, Immigration and Multiculturalism Minister Jason Kenny. But on this call, he was acting as an emissary for the Dalai Lama's upcoming trip to Canada. "We would like a delegation of Jewish leadership to attend a small luncheon in honour of the Dalai Lama," he told me. "Interested?" he rhetorically asked. As a representative of the Canadian Jewish Congress for more than 25 years, I've had the honour of meeting prime ministers and presidents, actors and philosophers. But the opportunity of being with the Dalai Lama would be a singular honour.

And so on Oct. 24, I joined Elizabeth Wolfe, incoming chair of UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, and Canadian Jewish Congress national president Mark Freiman at a luncheon hosted by the Tibetan Canadian Cultural Centre in Toronto.

As I approached the building, I noted the tight security. Roads were cordoned off, and parking was limited to only those invited to the luncheon. However, thousands of people were on the grounds, hoping only for a glimpse of the man they hold in such reverence – a true testament to the man's popularity.

The small luncheon included businessmen such as former New Brunswick premier Frank McKenna and politicians, including senators Con Dinino, Vivienne Poy and Vim Kochar and MPs and MPPs, including Borys Wrzesnewskyj, Cheri Di Novo and Olivia Chow. At the table next to me sat former mayoralty hopeful and always elegant Rocco Rossi. At our table sat Cindy Chung and Tenzin Jigme, both representatives of the Tibetan/Chinese Youth Dialogue. We chatted about how Tibetan and Chinese students in Toronto have found a bridge of reconciliation. It gave me great hope for the future on many fronts.

As we were chatting, I noticed an excited gathering of the crowd by the door. As would be his wont, His Holiness the 14th Dalai Lama, Tenzin Gyato, entered the room unannounced. He needed no introduction. His charisma and sheer presence were introduction enough. Dressed in his customary red and gold robes, he looked the same as the first picture I saw of him in 1969. He spoke briefly, his message almost secondary to his presence. I was struck by the joy and heartiness of his laugh. It was absolutely infectious – the kind of laugh we could all recognize as coming from a trusted friend, a beloved uncle. We met him briefly, got a photo (that one goes on my wall), and it was over all too soon.

I left the centre knowing that I had been in the same room with a great man. I learned in the end that words are one thing, but the sense of calm and tolerance that can come from a person of greatness is so much more. I thought of Shamar and how incredibly excited he would have been had he known I met the Dalai Lama.

Bernie Farber is the CEO of the Canadian Jewish Congress.

ISRAELI LAW OFFICE

Legal advice & service on matters of Israeli Law only

Property • Wills & Estates • Family • Litigation

• Member of the Israeli Bar Association
• Approved as a Foreign Legal Consultant in Ontario by the Law Society of Upper Canada

Itamar Cohen
B.A. LL.B. (Israel)

905.709.3896
www.IsraeliLawOffice.com

The Second Annual Tribute to Yiddish

Laughter, Nostalgia and Song

In English, Yinglish and Yiddish

Featuring:
(clockwise from the top)
Mitch Smolkin
Deb Filler
Jack Newman
Nina Shapilsky
Hart Pomeranz
Alf Kwinter &
Gloria Valentine

Sunday November 14, 2010
2–4 pm

Beth Tikvah Synagogue
3080 Bayview Avenue
Toronto

General admission:
$10 in advance
$15 at the door
$36 patron - includes reserved section and reception following
Group rates available.

For tickets call:
416.221.3433

Forest Hill Place
Pine Villa
Terrace Gardens

YIDDISH

Jewish Book Fair

Mideast conflict casts shadow on Israeli novelist

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Israel's struggle for existence is a theme Israeli novelists cannot usually slough off, says David Grossman, the internationally renowned novelist.

"You can't turn your back on this reality," he told the Toronto Jewish Book Fair at Beth David B'nai Israel Beth Am Synagogue on Oct. 23.

Grossman, here to promote his latest novel, To the End of the Land, said "the situation," or ha matzav – Israel's ever-present conflict with the Palestinians and its Arab neighbours – invariably casts a giant shadow on a writer's creative direction.

Fresh from winning this year's Peace Prize at the Frankfurt Book Fair, Grossman explained he wanted to write about ha matzav from the point of view of a normal Israeli family.

David Grossman

In his novel, a woman and her old friend, her former lover, take a hike through the Israeli countryside after their son returns to his army unit. According to a review in the Globe and Mail, the book is about "multiple journeys through time and space."

Grossman had nearly completed the novel when his son, Uri, 20, was killed in the final hours of the Second Lebanon War in August 2006.

Uri lost his life when his tank was hit by a Hezbollah missile. Three days earlier, at a press conference in Tel Aviv, Grossman and major Israeli writers had called for a ceasefire.

Four months after his son's untimely death, Grossman denounced the then-Israeli prime minister, Ehud Olmert, for a failure of leadership.

In an allusion to these traumatic events, Grossman said ha matzav, "this almost impossible situation of ever-lasting war," has an effect on him.

Grossman made his comments as he answered questions from interviewer and fellow writer Noah Richler, the son of the late Canadian novelist Mordecai Richler.

Describing Israel as "a war zone," Grossman lamented that Israelis cannot imagine "a situation of peace" and feel that their destiny is to live and die by the sword.

He acknowledged that a "political layer" coats To the End of the Land, but said that the "human condition" interests him more.

When he begins a novel, he observed, he never knows what the ending will be. "My books surprise me."

Grossman admitted that writing this novel was "an excuse" to hike the Israel Trail, which runs the length of Israel from the Lebanese border to Eilat. He spent 32 days on the winding trail, sometimes in the company of his wife, Michal.

Born in Jerusalem, and now living in a town near the capital, Mevasseret Zion, Grossman described Israel as the only country in which he feels truly at home.

He likened Israel to "an idea," saying it encompasses the story of a people who returned to their ancestral home against all odds and created a democracy and revived the ancient Hebrew language.

Grossman dwelled briefly on one of his previous books, The Yellow Wind, a non-fictional account of Israel's occupation of the West Bank that made him famous.

He recalled that Yitzhak Shamir, the then Israeli prime minister, berated him for writing a "literary fantasy." But three months later, the first Palestinian uprising erupted, jolting Israelis into the realization that Israel is an occupying power.

During the short question-and-answer period, Grossman asked for "literary" rather than "political" questions. But most of the questions he fielded turned on politics.

He talked about his contacts with Palestinians during the Oslo peace process era, expressing regret they had ended but hope they might resume one day.

Praising U.S. President Barack Obama, Grossman said he understands the contradictions and nuances of Israel's dispute with the Palestinians, and is the only politician who can "make things move" in terms of constructive peace negotiations.

He said Israel needs "a friend in the White House" who is both "attentive to our situation" and "sensitive" to the needs of both sides.

Arts festival added to annual book fair in Winnipeg

please see page 36

TRIBUTE COMMITTEE
Hon. Carolyn Bennett
Howard Brown
Hon. Elinor Caplan
Hon. David Caplan
Ken Cheung
Nancy Colds
Hon. Ken Dryden
Hon. Avi Eggelton
Gary Gladstone
Dr. Allan Gordon
Hon. Bill Graham
Hon. Eric Hoskins
Susan Kadis
Joseph Kozlebrodt
Cheuk Kwan
Dr. Barbara Landau
Michael Levitt
Hon. John McCallum
Hareesh (Mike) Mo
Dr. Reza Mondi
James Morton
Mark Pearlma
Hon. Jim Peterson
Susan Rowland
Les Scheinin
Hon. Judy Sgro
Sherry Shan
Gilbert Sharon
Linda Silver
Paul Stevenso

TRIBUTE TO KAREN MOCK
Elinor Caplan, John McCallum, Ken Dryden & Carolyn Bennett invite you to a special cocktail reception to acknowledge Karen Mock's outstanding contribution to Human Rights, Race Relations and our Jewish Community.

TRIBUTE CO-CHAIRS
Tuesday, November 9 7:00 pm to 9:30 pm
Le Parc 8432 Leslie Street Thornhill, ON
$250 per person* *tax information provided
RSVP to karen@karenmock.ca or phone 905-597-7564 or fax 905-881-9031

the Biggest. the Best. the Original.
Wm. Ashley Annual November
Warehouse SALE
save up to 90%*
STARTS TODAY!
DON'T MISS Our Best Sale Ever!
save up to 90%* on Brand Names
Wedgwood
Royal Doulton
Waterford • Lenox
Aynsley • Krups
Portmeirion • Atlantis
Rosenthal • Aram
Denby • Dansk
Royal Crown Derby
Villeroy & Boch
Mikasa • Noritake
CANADA'S LARGEST GIFT CENTRE
Amazing Warehouse Sale Savings
ReStocked Daily
Over 40,000 Sq. Ft. of Incredible Savings
62 RAILSIDE RD TORONTO
SALE HOURS
Wednesday Nov. 3 10 AM – 9 PM
Thursday Nov. 4 10 AM – 9 PM
Friday Nov. 3 10 AM – 9 PM
Saturday Nov. 6 10 AM – 6 PM
Sunday Nov. 7 10 AM – 6 PM
(Closed Monday & Tuesday)
WILLIAM ASHLEY
62 Railside Rd, Toronto • 416-515-SALE
www.WilliamAshley.com/WarehouseSale
*Save up to 90% off the Mfr. Sugg. Price or Comp. Reg. Value. We reserve the right to limit quantities. No strollers or car seats permitted. Personal shopping only. Cash, Debit, Visa, Mastercard & Amex. All sales are final. No cheques or credit notes. Not all items illustrated are available. E. & O.E.

Palestinians still waffling on recognizing Israel

According to Reports

By PAUL MICHAELS

The Oct. 21 column touched on a controversial issue worthy of further examination. It claimed that the Palestinians, in Algiers in 1988, by accepting the UN's 1947 Partition Resolution that called for the creation of "Jewish" and "Arab" states – something they had rejected, often violently, during the previous 47 years – had, in effect recognized the Jewish state.

Space restrictions did not allow an elaboration of that claim, which will be addressed here.

To begin, the Palestinians did not willingly or deliberately recognize Israel as Jewish, that is, as the nation-state of the Jewish people. What they did say in their Algiers declaration is that the Partition Resolution "still provides the legal basis for the right of the Palestinian Arab people to national sovereignty and independence." But if it provides the legal basis for statehood for the Palestinian people, it must also by extension provide the same for the Jewish people.

The Palestinians cannot adopt one part of the Partition Resolution – the one that relates to the rights of the Palestinian Arabs – without also accepting the other part relating to the rights of the Jewish people.

To put it another way, since the resolution calls for two states for two peoples, the Palestinians cannot choose to see it as legitimizing just one of those states. That's why the Oct. 21 column said that in accepting the Partition Resolution in 1988, the Palestinians recognized the Jewish state. But this was meant only as a logical implication of endorsing the resolution, not something the Palestinians openly espoused or even tacitly accepted.

In the Oct. 25 New York Times, Isabel Kershner wrote about the Algiers declaration and reminded readers that the Palestinians began their acceptance of the Partition Resolution by denouncing it as a historic injustice. In fact, throughout the 13-page declaration, Israel is denounced in the most vile terms – as "settler," "colonialist," and "racist." This demonization of Israel is of course the very opposite of acceptance. So it can be argued that the Palestinians' reluctant acceptance of the Partition Resolution did not amount to the "ground-breaking" development that some Israeli historians and analysts took it to be.

Indeed, it can even be reasoned that if the Palestinians accepted the resolution only in part but not in whole, they did not actually endorse a genuine two-state agreement.

To be sure, unlike Israeli leaders who have repeatedly stated that they recognize the legitimate sovereign aspirations of the Palestinian people, Palestinian leaders have refused to reciprocate. And this rejectionism signals to Israelis that peaceful co-existence remains elusive at best, impossible at worst.

Kershner left open the question of what exactly the Palestinians had agreed to in accepting the Partition Resolution. But she did mention an interview that then-Palestinian Authority President Yasser Arafat gave to Ha'aretz in June of 2004 that was published under the headline "A Jewish State? 'Definitely.'" That headline, however, was the only definitive element in what was otherwise a rambling eight-page exchange marked by Arafat's vagueness, evasiveness and contradictions.

While Arafat began by insisting that the Palestinians "accepted [a Jewish state] openly and officially in 1988 at [Algiers]," in the words of his Ha'aretz interviewers, he was "far from definite on key details of crucial issues."

PA President Mahmoud Abbas

Clearly, there was no "open," or other, endoresment of Israel's Jewish character. Reminiscent of his stand at Camp David in 2000, Arafat refused to acknowledge that Jews had any historic attachments to their holy sites in Jerusalem, insisting that the Western Wall is actually in Nablus. This is just one of many such absurdities.

Current PA President Mahmoud Abbas has been no more forthcoming about indicating to Israelis that the Palestinians are prepared to accept Israel as originally conceived by the United Nations.

The importance of this issue rests not in semantics or in games of logic or in political manoeuvrings. It rests instead in the necessity for a fundamental attitudinal shift by the Palestinian leadership if peace is to have any chance at all.

Paul Michaels is communications director for the Canada-Israel Committee.

CAMP RAMAH IN CANADA 50

The Max and Beatrice Wolfe Campus

RAMAH@50 INVITE

CELEBRATE 50 YEARS OF CAMP RAMAH IN CANADA

Ramah@50 Banquet Honourees

Phyllis & Ab Flatt

Harold & Carole Wolfe

Phyllis & Ab Flatt and Carole & Harold Wolfe have been champions of Camp Ramah in Canada for many years. As we celebrate the Camp's 50th anniversary we also honour their incredible generosity, dedication and on-going commitment to the remarkable summer camp they have helped shape for generations.

Join us to celebrate 50 fabulous years of Camp Ramah in Canada The Max and Beatrice Wolfe Campus

November 12-13, 2010 Beth Tzedec Congregation
1700 Bathurst Street, Toronto, Ontario

Featuring: Craig Taubman - Entertainer & Ramah Alumnus
(Saturday Evening – Gala Dinner & Dessert Reception)

Weekend Celebrations:
Friday, November 12, 2010
» Kabbalat Shabbat Dinner, 5:30pm $50

Saturday, November 13, 2010
» Shabbat Services and enhanced Kiddush 9:00 am – 1:00 pm
» Ramah@50 Gala Banquet $180
Honouring Ab & Phyllis Flatt and Carole & Harold Wolfe
(Includes Havdallah & Dessert Reception)
Cocktails: 6:15pm Dinner: 7:00pm
» Havdallah & Dessert Reception 9:00pm $50

Proceeds from this celebratory event are being directed towards the camper scholarships and the Tikvah program for campers with special needs.

For information please contacting Ilana Hirt by phone: 416-789- 5822 or email: ilana@campramah.com

FAN 590 morning man a real 'Judeophile'

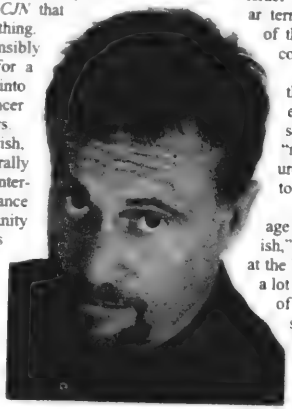
By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

"I think I suffer from Jewish envy."

With that, Andrew Krystal, the new, irreverent morning man at the FAN 590 Toronto's sports talk-radio station, told The CJN that he's big on the whole Jewish thing.

And so what was ostensibly going to be an interview for a sports story instead turned into a confessional by the announcer on his love for Israel and Jews.

Krystal, who is not Jewish, admitted that while he generally shies away from granting interviews, he "jumped" at the chance to talk to the Jewish community via The CJN because he wants the community to know that he's a friend and fervent supporter.



Andrew Krystal

"I'm a Judeophile. I've never done an interview like this," he said, adding that his impudent, on-air approach matches what he says he admires in the Jewish narrative.

"I'm excited by intelligence and balls – chutzpah. That's what Israel and the Diaspora represent," he said, arguing that those who malign Israel are "just jealous" of its successes in the face of incredible survival odds.

He said it's easy for "the goyim" to make pronouncements about what Israel should or shouldn't do with respect to its policies toward the Palestinians or its own security.

"Israel is on the frontlines of nuclear terrorism. The hard-won success of the Jewish community did not come by accident," Krystal said.

Though not a member of the tribe, Krystal said he flirted with the idea of converting some years ago while dating a "nice Jewish girl," but the failure of the relationship put an end to that idea.

Krystal, who won't reveal his age other than to say he's "40-ish," studied international relations at the University of Toronto and has a lot to say about the world outside of sports. He said he aims to use sports subject matter for talk-radio purposes and not use talk-radio for sports.

While it's his day job, talking sports is, Krystal said, "an escape valve" that lets his thoughts move away from "the more dire consequences" found in the daily news.

That said, he's an unabashed Toronto Maple Leafs fan and takes every opportunity to deride and poke fun at their hated rivals, the Montreal Canadiens.

He predicts the Leafs will make the post season this year by finishing eighth in their conference and claiming the final playoff spot in the east.

Krystal said he won't go out of his way to interview sports figures on the basis of their religion.

"People are people first. I just happen to be drawn to Jews," he said.

His new job at The FAN marks Krystal's return to Toronto after previous stints at AM 640 and CFRB, and after spending time in Halifax as a talk radio host, where, despite loving the city, he said he couldn't find matzah ball soup anywhere.

"The first thing I did when I went to Halifax is look up the Jewish community," Krystal said, noting that he was very involved with the Atlantic Jewish Council while out east, where he would speak at Jewish events.

He said he hopes to find similar opportunities to work with the Toronto Jewish community now that he's returned to his hometown, although he said he doesn't always toe the line on community issues.

"The other reason I feel affinity for the Jewish community is that 50 per cent of my audience hates me," Krystal said, laughing.

While his sardonic radio style rubs some listeners the wrong way, he said it's something he refuses to change.

"Canadian radio is often milquetoast, and I will use vulgarity in context" to keep it lively, he said.

SWISS ASSET PROTECTION
For Secure Banking and Investment
www.ashstreetmanagement.com
Ken H. Finkelstein, Attorney
250-507-6175

ROLEX • PATEK • CARTIER
DIAMONDS
BUY • SELL • TRADE
VAN RIJK • INSTANT CASH
440-1233 vanrijk.com

NER ISRAEL YESHIVA
250 Bathurst Glen Drive, Thornhill, Ont. L4J 8A7
Celebrating 50 Years of Torah Continuity
Provides for
KADDISH SERVICES, OBSERVING YAHRZEIT and MEMORIAL PLAQUES
Please invest in the future. Remember Ner Israel in your will.
CALL 905-731-1224

JOIN OUR FAMILY AS BIALIK GROWS NORTH

Bialik is excited to announce the opening of registration for our future northern branch to be located on the Lebovic Campus in September 2013

Applications are now being accepted for students entering JK – Grade 1 in 2013 and beyond

Join us for an Information Session at
TanenbaumCHAT Kimel Centre
Perlis Boardroom
9600 Bathurst St. Vaughan

Wednesday, November 24 – 7:00 pm

Please RSVP to Danielle Waltman
at 416 783 3346 ext 285
www.bialik.ca

Bialik Hebrew Day School
בית ספר יומי ע"ש ביאליק טאג שול

UJA FEDERATION

Federations look to Toronto to fight delegitimization of Israel

By JACOB BERKMAN
JTA

Organizers of a new, multimillion-dollar initiative to fight anti-Israel campaigns are looking at the response to an attempted boycott of last year's Toronto International Film Festival (TIFF) for inspiration.

The Jewish Federations of North America (JFNA) and the Jewish Council for Public Affairs (JCPA) are launching the initiative, called the Israel Action Network.

When TIFF organizers decided to focus on filmmakers from Tel Aviv, more than 1,000 prominent actors and filmmakers signed a statement saying that the organizers had become part of Israel's propaganda machine, and they threatened to boycott the event. In response, UJA Federation of Greater Toronto and the Jewish Federation of Greater Los Angeles worked together to come up with a counter-statement supporting the festival. That statement was signed by even more prominent Hollywood figures, including Jerry Seinfeld, Natalie Portman, Sacha Baron Cohen, Lisa Kudrow, Jason Alexander and Lenny Kravitz.

"The partnership started last year around the Toronto International Film Festival," said Ted Sokolsky, president of the Toronto federation. "We jointly produced an ad saying that we don't need another blacklist."

Sokolsky went on to say, "I spoke to Jay [Sanderson, the CEO of the Jewish Federation of Greater Los Angeles] and said, 'Here, there are a lot of prominent Hollywood types on the delegitimization protest. Can you reach out to the Hollywood community and find some pro-Israel leadership?' He reached out to some key leadership in Hollywood. And it was like waking up a sleeping giant. Then we realized we can't all fight this alone."

Ted Sokolsky

He added that it was "a great lesson, and set a template on how to respond because, clearly, the other side is running a linked campaign with international funding and global strategy but local implementation."

Howard English, UJA Federation's vice-president of strategic communications and a member of an advisory committee for the new initiative, told The CJN that one of the most important functions of the network will be the ability to connect communities with each other for support and advice to help them deal with delegitimization.

"The federation is uniquely equipped to deal with that, because it's based on a donor model… and on community governance," said English. "To my knowledge, there is no other network that is fulfilling that particular role."

In Canada, the federations will work closely with the Canadian Council for Israel and Jewish Advocacy, Canadian Jewish Congress and the Canada-Israel Committee, English said. The work of those national advocacy organizations is "quite complementary to the work being done at the community and federation level," he added.

JFNA and the rest of the Jewish federation system have agreed to invest $6 million in the new network over the next three years. The federations will work in conjunction with JCPA, an umbrella organization that brings together local Jewish community relations councils across North America.

The network is expected to serve as a rapid-response team charged with countering the growing campaign to isolate Israel as a rogue state akin to apartheid-era South Africa – a campaign that the Israeli government and Jewish groups see as an existential threat to the Jewish state. In fighting back against anti-Israel forces, the network will seek to capitalize on the reach of North America's 157 federations, 125 local Jewish community relations councils and nearly 400 communities under the federation system.

"There is a very, very high sense of urgency in [fighting] the delegitimizing of the State of Israel," JFNA president and CEO Jerry Silverman said.

In fact, Silverman added, Israeli leaders identify this as the second most dangerous threat to Israel, after Iran's pursuit of nuclear weapons.

Under a plan approved in late September, JCPA's senior vice-president, Martin Raffel, will oversee the new network, working in concert with the head of JFNA's Washington office, William Daroff. Over the next several months, Raffel will be putting together his team, including six people in New York, one in Israel and one in Washington.

The network will monitor the boycott, divestment and sanctions movement worldwide and create a strategic plan to counter delegitimization wherever it crops up. It will work with local federations and community relations councils to enlist the help of key leaders at churches, labour unions and cultural institutions to fight anti-Israel boycott, divestment and sanctions campaigns.

The Jewish federations have agreed to give JFNA $1.6 million to fund the project fully in its first year. In the two subsequent years, the federations will split the cost 50-50 with JFNA.

"Israel's government has been advocating for this, especially over the past six or eight months," Silverman said. "It has been in dialogue within our federation movement for a while, especially following the Toronto incident and… divestment movements in the Protestant and Presbyterian churches. This idea was born out of the large city executives meeting that said, 'It is time. And time is running out.'"

Silverman said he expects the Israel Action Network to be fully staffed and up and running by Jan. 1.

"We're very excited about the establishment of this network," English said.

With files from Frances Kraft

Associated Hebrew Schools of Toronto

its students, faculty, parents, administrators, staff, officers Boards of Governors and Directors - is very proud to wish

מזל טוב

to our Director of Education

Rabbi Dr. Mark Smiley

on the honour of receiving the Doctor of Pedagogy, bonoris causa from The Jewish Theological Seminary.

The degree was presented on November 1, 2010 in recognition of Rabbi Dr. Smiley's many years of service and significant contribution to the field of Jewish education.

We applaud the Jewish Theological Seminary for recognizing Rabbi Dr. Smiley's tremendous achievements and wish him continued success at our school and on behalf of the cause of Jewish education.

Sally Zigler, President
Sheldon Carr, Chairman of the Board

Associated Hebrew Schools of Toronto

A Great School

State of Israel Bonds Canada
Buy. Build. Believe.

Sunday hours

Sundays: October 17, 24, 31
November 7, 2010
Time: 10:00am until 3:00pm

STATE OF ISRAEL BONDS /CANADA-ISRAEL SECURITIES, LIMITED
970 Lawrence Avenue West, Suite 502, Toronto, ON M6A 3B6

T: 416.789.3351 Toll Free 1.800.771.9301
F: 416.789.9436 E: toronto@israelbonds.ca

BuyBuildBelieve.ca

On Campus

Hillel called 'agent of a foreign government'

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Hillel at York University has come under attack from a history professor who accused it of being an "agent of a foreign government" because of its Israel advocacy efforts.

In an Oct. 8 letter to York University president Mamdouh Shoukri, David Noble wrote that "[Hillel at York] serves as, in effect, an agent of a foreign government."

Noble, who is Jewish but has a history of criticizing Israel and Jewish groups on campus, added: "In the case of Hillel at York [corruption of the educational mission of the university] is already well underway, with York University's tacit approval... York University must formulate and adopt policies that would prohibit all such activities on behalf of foreign governments on campus."

Last month, Noble dropped a defamation suit against Canadian Jewish Congress regarding a flyer he published in 2004 titled, "The York University Foundation: The tail that wags the dog." CJC alleged the flyer contained anti-Semitic material.

The document suggested the university was influenced when disciplining pro-Palestinian activists by the board of its fundraising foundation, which the flyer stated "is biased by the presence and influence of staunch pro-Israel lobbyists, activists and fundraising agencies."

The pamphlet set out an incomplete list of foundation board members and officers, noting their connection to Jewish groups such as UJA Federation of Greater Toronto.

In addition to Congress, others sued by Noble in that case included Hillel at York University, Hillel of Greater Toronto, the board of the York University Foundation, the foundation itself, senior York officer Paul Marcus and former York president Lorna Marsden, as well as UJA Federation. The suits against those other groups and individuals are ongoing.

Calls to Noble about the Oct. 8 letter targeting Hillel were not returned by The CJN's press time.

Alex Bilyk, York's director of media relations, said Robert Tiffin, York's vice-president of students, responded to Noble's charges in an Oct. 21 letter of his own, which stated that Hillel is recognized by York because it complies with the university's principles and policies that student groups must abide by, as well as with the "three pillars of tolerance" specified by York's Inter-Faith Council.

"On many occasions, Dr. Shoukri has noted that it's the right of any community member to express his or her view within the law without fear of intimidation or harassment," Bilyk said. "This extends to the members of a student organization such as Hillel."

Brandon Crandall, Hillel at York's president, told The CJN that it's "quite comical and absurd that somebody would say that anyone who supports the Jewish state or a democratic Jewish state is an agent for a foreign country."

He noted as well that "Canada supports the State of Israel – we're democratic allies. Hillel has had a strong presence on campus both politically and socially since the university began."

Joshua Wais, a third-year York student and vice-president of AEPi's Eta Pi chapter at York, wondered why Noble only focused on a Jewish campus group.

"If he were to have a valid argument that Hillel is 'an agent of a foreign government' then why hasn't he targeted other student groups around campus? There are several groups around the campus that blatantly support their respective countries and their governments."

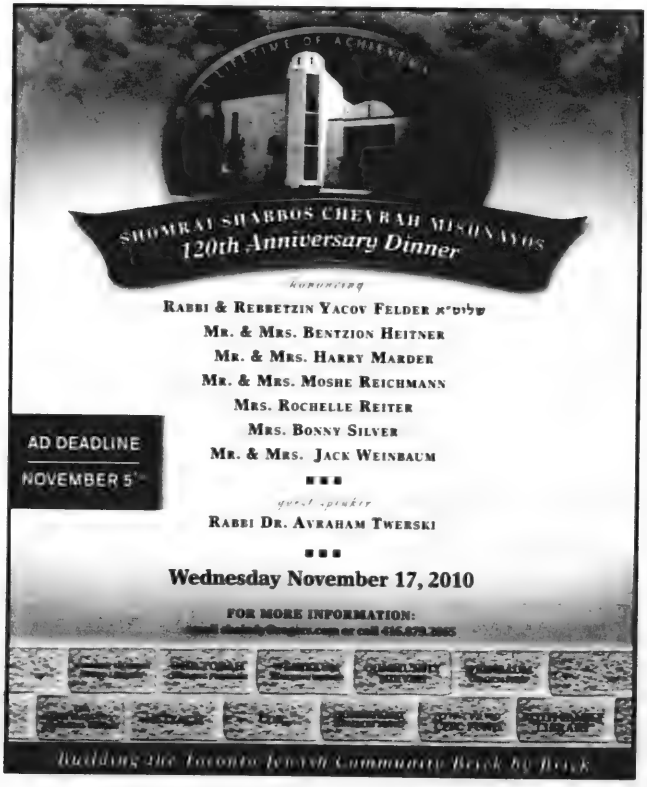
Sammy Katz, a York graduate and managing director of the Canadian Network for Israel Affairs, called Noble's statements "ridiculous."

"Advocating or promoting a country on campus that isn't Canada doesn't mean you're acting on behalf of a foreign state. When it comes to Israel, it means that you support democracy, you support equality, you support human rights, you support women's rights, gay rights, all minority rights. It could be many different reasons.

"It's laughable, because he didn't mention any other group. He talks about support on behalf of [a] foreign government – he didn't speak of any other group on campus.

"His claims don't really have that much standing within the greater community, at least in our perspective."

Visit www.cjnews.com for photos of Hillel@York's Unity March, held Nov. 1 in response to Noble's allegations.



FROM SINATRA TO BUBLÉ
A SALUTE TO THE BIG BANDS

A FABULOUS CONCERT STARRING
SIMON SPIRO
AND THE SPECTACULAR 22-PIECE
JOHN MacLEOD ORCHESTRA
SPECIAL MUSICAL GUESTS INCLUDING JEFF MADDEN, STAR OF "JERSEY BOYS"

WEDNESDAY NOVEMBER 10 AT 7:30PM

$50 GENERAL ADMISSION
$75 PRIORITY SEATING (VERY FEW LEFT!)
FOR TICKETS CALL 416-781-3511

BETH TZEDEC CONGREGATION, 1700 BATHURST STREET, TORONTO
בית צדק Beth Tzedec Congregation

Special Report

Synod position on Middle East angers Jews

Archbishop rejects idea of a Jewish state

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

A Vatican synod (assembly) that was supposed to examine the state of declining Christian communities in the Middle East has drawn fire from around the Jewish world for "political attacks on Israel" and for contradicting longstanding Catholic positions on the Middle East.

The synod's final document and explanatory remarks by one of the document's authors – that God's promise to the Jewish People had been nullified – does not represent the views of local Catholics and will likely be left to gather dust on Vatican shelves, say observers of Catholic-Jewish relations in Canada.

The document at the centre of the dispute was published last week after a month-long series of meetings at the Vatican. Titled, Synod for the Middle East: a Message to the People of God, it urged creation of societies where all peoples share equal rights and standing. It also called for an end to anti-Semitism, anti-Christianity and Islamophobia, and for Mideast peace ensured by the international community, as well as resolution of disputes in Iraq and Lebanon.

However, some of the synod's strongest language was reserved for Israel while concern over the fate of Christians in Muslim-dominated countries was expressed in a passive voice. And in a news conference that followed its release, one of the document's authors, the Lebanon-born Archbishop Cyril Salim Bustros, asserted that "Holy Scriptures cannot be used to justify the return of Jews to Israel and the displacement of the Palestinians, to justify the occupation by Israel of Palestinian lands."

Archbishop Bustros also rejected the idea of a Jewish state and said God's promises to the children of Israel "were nullified by Christ. There is no longer a chosen people."

The synod's document itself was critical of Israel, referring to the "Israeli occupation, the lack of freedom of movement, the wall of separation and military checkpoints, the political prisoners, the demolition of homes, the disturbances of socio-economic life and the thousands of refugees."

However, when it "recalled the Christians assassinated in Iraq," it did not name the assassins, and where it acknowledged that "emigration has become a generalized phenomenon by Christians, Muslims and Jews alike," it failed to note who is pressuring people to leave.

In a section titled "Co-operation and Dialogue with our Fellow Citizens, the Jews," the document states, "Both Christians and Jews" are called to commit to a permanent and just peace.

"Recourse to theological and biblical positions which use the Word of God to wrongly justify injustices is not acceptable," it stated.

Later, the synod calls for a sovereign homeland for the Palestinian people and for peace and security for Israel. "The Holy City of Jerusalem will be able to acquire its proper status, which respects its particular character, its holiness and the religious patrimony of the three religions: Jewish, Christian and Muslim. We hope that the two-state solution might become a reality and not a dream only."

Abe Foxman

Around the same time as Archbishop Bustros was saying that the Jewish People do not have a biblical right to Israel, Franciscan Father Pierbattista Pizzaballa, who participated in the synod, said in an interview with Rome's Zenit News that Christians in Israel do not suffer discrimination, but "there are… inequalities of treatment of approach… Along with this, there is the influence of the ever-difficult relationship between Judaism and Christianity. There is a deep-rooted prejudice that was born and developed in the course of the centuries in Judaism in confrontations with Christianity, for reasons that are known and that in Israel became tangible."

Responding to Archbishop Bustros' remarks, ADL national director Abe Foxman said, "By stating that God's covenantal promise of land to the Jewish people was 'nullified by Christ' and that 'there is no longer a chosen people,' [he] is effectively stating that Judaism should no longer exist. This represents the worst kind of anti-Judaism, bordering on anti-Semitism."

Israel's Deputy Foreign Minister Danny Ayalon said the synod had "become a forum for political attacks on Israel in the best history of Arab propaganda."

The synod had been "hijacked by an anti-Israel majority," said Ayalon. He called on the Vatican to reject Archbishop Bustros' remarks.

Vatican spokesman Father Federico Lombardi responded by saying personal comments by individual synod participants "should not be considered as the voice of the synod in its entirety."

However, Ottawa Rabbi Reuven Bulka discounted that statement. "You can't make a guy your spokesman and then say he doesn't speak for us," said Rabbi Bulka, who represents Canadian Jewish Congress on interfaith dialogue.

"The Roman Catholic Church can't play these games. If they reject it, it has to be in an unequivocal condemnation of what he said. They can't do it in a wimpy manner," he said. "They can't say, 'We want to work with you and have a new atmosphere,' but when we're attacked, be equivocal about it."

Continued on page 29

LODZER CENTRE CONGREGATION

invites the community to

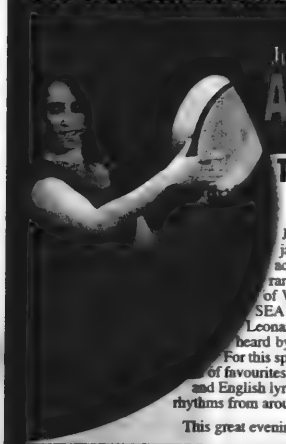
Remembrance:
An Israeli Surgeon's Reflections on War and Peace
Dr. Oren Benlulu

An inspiring presentation by Dr. Oren Benlulu about his experiences in an elite intelligence unit in the Israel Defence Force and as an Orthopedic Surgeon treating both Jewish and Arab patients.

Moderator: Dr. Brian G[illegible]dman, host of CB[illegible]dio's 'White[illegible] Black Art'

Date: Remembra[illegible] 12 Heaton[illegible]
November 11, 2010 Free admission and parking.
TIME: 7:30 p.m. Sarah[illegible] Synagogue Office
PLACE: Lodzer Centre Congregation 416-636-6665

The Beth Sholom Music Series Presents...



Juno award nominee
AVIVA CHERNICK
in Concert

Thursday, November 18th, 2010
8:00 p.m.

Join award-winning singer Aviva Chernick with Canadian jazz and improvisational greats Tania Gill (piano/accordion) and Andrew Downing (bass and cello) for this rare concert event. In 2008, the trio released a collection of World and Cabaret music in an album entitled IN THE SEA that continues to delight audiences. Aviva's rendition of Leonard Cohen's Dance Me to the End of Love continues to be heard by listeners across the country regularly on CBC Radio. For this special evening, the trio will be arranging a new collection of favourites. They will delight with Judeo-Spanish, Hebrew, Yiddish and English lyrics, traditional, contemporary and original melodies and rhythms from around the Jewish World and beyond.

This great evening of music is sponsored by Margaret and Arthur Shiff.

Cost: $18.00, including dessert reception
Beth Sholom Synagogue
1445 Eglinton Ave W (across from Eglinton West Subway) 416-783-6103 ext 228

Special Report

Rabbi Bulka weighs in on Vatican document

'It has a bad odour, to put it mildly'

Continued from page 28

As for the document's impact, Rabbi Bulka said, "It's too early to tell how significant it is. From the point of view of the Jewish community, it has a bad odour, to put it mildly.

Rabbi Reuven Bulka

"It's going to have impact. How can it not? Where are you when we need you?

"They're wagging their finger and saying, 'Naughty boy, you're not behaving,' which I find offensive.

"This is a church with a history of over 2,000 years of fomenting anti-Semitism of the worst sort and they invoked the world of God for that. All of a sudden, they're saying we are doing the same thing as that. It's disgraceful."

Victor Goldbloom, former CEO of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews, said it appeared documents the synod had consulted, which were "rather constructive and even-handed," had been ignored when putting together the final statement.

"I had hoped the synod, which was focusing on the life of the church in the Middle East and the ability of the church to sustain that life, would avoid the political unpleasantness we encounter there. It seems there were members of the synod with a different, more aggressive view of the situation involving Israel, and they prevailed."

Goldbloom said the document does not change Vatican policy. "Church doctrine comes from the Vatican itself, and there's been no [indication] at this point they will take any action or endorse what these bishops brought forward."

He said the Jewish community's relations with the Canadian Catholic church are "positive" and he doesn't believe the synod's document reflects the views of local bishops.

No one from the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops was available for comment.

On previous occasions, when tensions arose over the Middle East, "the Roman Catholic Church has been solidly supportive and refused to go along with the negative position regarding Israel that other churches have brought to their general assemblies," Goldbloom said.

Nevertheless, Goldbloom believes the synod's statement will come up at the next meeting of the Canadian Christian-Jewish Consultation, likely in December.

Eric Vernon, director of government relations and international affairs for Congress, said, "We certainly want to remove any impediments to harmonious relations."

ManChef.ca
Peter Graham's Cooking Program for Men
Mature Gentlemen · Caregivers · Baby Boomers · Stags
· Bachelors · GenXers · Poker Nights 416-967-1818
peter@manchef.ca · www.manchef.ca

Experienced Mohel
Rabbi Avraham Sultan
Cantor Shaarei Shomayim
Performs lifecycle events
Sephardic & Ashkenaze rituals.
Bar/bat mitzvah lessons. Weddings
FREE CONSULTATIONS
FREE FIRST BAR MITZVAH LESSON
Contact: rabbisultan@yahoo.ca
Cell: 416-735-8736

ATTENTION SNOWBIRDS

Cardiologist
Ronald M. Gabor, MD, FACC
Board Certified
Education: Albert Einstein College of Medicine
Univ. of Miami-Jackson Memorial Hospital
McGill University
READY & ABLE TO CARE FOR ALL YOUR CARDIO-VASCULAR NEEDS
WHILE IN FLORIDA
CARDIOLOGY ASSOCIATES OF BOCA RATON
9980 Central Park Blvd. N. #304
Boca Raton, FL. 33428
10151 Enterprise Center Blvd. #203
Boynton Beach, FL. 33437
TRAVEL INSURANCE ACCEPTED
561-483-8335
www.cabr1.com

CHOOSE YOUR PATH TO
PROFESSIONAL EXCELLENCE
Helping you make a difference.

Study in
New York City
MSW SUMMER BLOCK PROGRAM
- Three June/July academic sessions on NYC campus
- Two years of field placement in Canada or USA
- Special focus on clinical casework group work and community organization/ administration
- Outstanding faculty, small classes, diverse student body
- Advanced Standing for qualified BSW graduates

OPEN HOUSE
TORONTO
Tuesday November 16, 2010 7PM-9PM
36 Harbord Street Toronto Canada
RSVP at wurzadmiss@yu.edu or 212-960-0810
YESHIVA UNIVERSITY
WURZWEILER SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK

Kosher coconut milk great for curry chicken dishes

By BARBARA SILVERSTEIN
Special to The CJN

On a late Friday afternoon, Nina Kagan stands at the stove stir-frying chicken in a large skillet. The York University student spends most Friday nights with various families in the Aish HaTorah community, but on this day, she's home for Shabbat preparing a Thai dish for her family.

To make the curried chicken sauce creamy, Kagan uses milk. Yes, milk, but it's pareve. Her recipe calls for coconut milk, a dairy-free food that's been a staple of South-Asian cuisine for centuries.

Coconut milk – it comes in a can – has long been available in North American. However, kosher coconut milk has been on store shelves in the Greater Toronto Area for only about a year.

East West Foods (www.eastwest-food.co.il), an Israeli food importing company, introduced a kosher Asian line called Taste of Asia in Israel three years ago, and this brand can now be found in the GTA. The main products offered are light and regular canned coconut milk, which the company calls Coconut Liquid and Coconut Liquid Gold, respectively, and red or green curry paste.

These products are not widely available in the GTA. They can be found in some independent kosher supermarkets and the kosher sections of a few grocery chain stores. In midtown Toronto, Loblaws in Forest Hill and Fortino's on Lawrence Avenue West carry the milks and pastes.

In the Bathurst and Wilson area, they are sold at No Frills, Kolbo Kosher Foods and Kosher City Plus, and further north in Toronto, at Price Chopper at Bathurst and Cedarcroft and No Frills at Centerpoint Mall.

In Thornhill, you'll find Taste of Asia products at Sobeys, Taste of Israel and the No Frills on Centre Street.

The light coconut milk is 66 calories and has 5.7 grams of fat per100 ml, while the same quantity of the higher-fat version is 115 calories with 12 grams of fat. The curry pastes, which are roughly 220 calories with about 20 grams of fat per 100 ml, are sold in 195-ml jars.

Negba Eckerling, the Israeli import coordinator for Taste of Asia products, told The CJN in a recent phone call that the company imports the coconut milk from Thailand because it is the "highest quality." She stressed that the kosher certification is authorized by the chief rabbinate of Israel.

Eckerling said that initially, only foreigners in Israel used coconut milk and other East Asian foods. But over the years, Israelis began to develop a taste for Asian food, and that has led to a growing demand for kosher Asian products like coconut milk and curry paste.

Unlike kosher coconut milk, kosher coconut oil has been on the market for years and is available at many health and bulk food stores. The oil comes in a jar, because it is solid at room temperature. Orphelia, Spectrum and Omega Nutrition are brands with hechshers and they're all organic. Coconut oil is a saturated, stable fat that can be used for cooking and frying.

NINA KAGAN'S RED CURRY CHICKEN

1 onion, chopped
1 to 2 cloves garlic, chopped
1 red pepper, sliced
1 package frozen broccoli or 1 1/2 cups fresh broccoli, cut into florets
1 cup snow peas, trimmed
1/2 cup water chestnuts
1 cup mushrooms, sliced
2 large skinless, boneless chicken breasts, sliced in strips
2 to 4 tbsp. olive oil
2 14-oz. cans coconut milk
1 heaping tbsp. red or green curry paste
1/2 tsp. hot sauce
1 tsp. paprika
2-3 tbsp. brown sugar
salt for seasoning
1 tsp. cornstarch for thickening (optional)

In a large skillet, brown chicken (cook about 8 minutes) in 2 tbsp. olive oil on medium heat. Remove chicken from pan and set aside. Add 1 to 2 tbsp. oil to the skillet and sauté onion. Add garlic and sauté another 2 minutes. Add coconut milk, curry paste, hot sauce, paprika and brown sugar. Mix well. Let mixture boil to reduce liquid to thicken sauce. Lower heat to simmer and add red pepper, mushrooms, broccoli, snow peas and chestnuts. Cook 1-2 minutes Add chicken and simmer another 2 to 3 minutes. Season with salt to taste.

Sauce may not thicken as well with low fat coconut milk, so cornstarch can be used for thickening. To serve, spoon chicken and vegetables over rice. Makes 4 servings.

MALAYSIAN CHICKEN CURRY

This recipe comes from A Year in Lucy's Kitchen by Lucy Waverman (Random House Canada, 2009).

Curry Mix
1 tbsp. chopped ginger root
1 tbsp. chopped garlic
1 tbsp. finely chopped lemon grass, tender bulb only
1 tbsp. hot Asian chili sauce
1 tbsp. ground coriander
1 tbsp. ground cumin
1 tbsp. ground turmeric
2 tbsp. vegetable oil

Combine ginger, garlic and lemon grass in food processor or pound with a mortar and pestle. When mixture is pasty add chili sauce, coriander, cumin, turmeric and oil. Mix well.

Chicken
2 tbsp. vegetable oil
1 cup onion, chopped,
2 lb. skinless boneless chicken breast
salt and freshly ground pepper to season
1 cup coconut milk
2 tbsp. lime juice
2 tsp. granulated sugar
1 small red onion, thinly sliced
2 green chilies, seed and thinly sliced

Heat oil in a large deep skillet over medium heat. Add onions and sauté for 2 minutes. Stir in curry mix and sauté for 1 minute until or until mixture is fragrant.

Season chicken with salt and pepper and add to skillet. Cook for 3 minutes or until chicken has browned slightly. Add coconut milk, lime juice and sugar. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for 10 minutes until chicken is cooked. If sauce is too thin, remove chicken and boil sauce to reduce to desired thickness. If sauce is too thick, thin with coconut milk. Serve with rice and garnish with green chilies and red onion. Makes 4 servings.

We Salute Our Veterans
EVENT DETAILS
We Salute Our Veterans
With Jack Cahan,
Retired Squadron Leader
Friday, November 12th
1:00 – 2:00pm
Seating is limited. RSVP to Ann Marie, Marsha or Rhona at 905-731-4300
Please join us as retired Squadron Leader Jack Cahan talks about the role of the Jewish community in Canadian military history. Mr. Cahan is a founding executive member and former National Commander of the Jewish War Veterans of Canada. Very active in the community, Mr. Cahan has held numerous executive positions with military and community organizations and has been awarded several medals in recognition of his contribution to Canada, his community and fellow Canadians.
A question and answer session and a dessert reception will follow the presentation.
Join Thorne Mill on Steeles as we pay tribute to our veterans and veterans worldwide.
THORNE MILL
ON STEELES
A SENIOR SENIOR LIVING COMMUNITY
484 Steeles Ave. W
(between Yonge and Bathurst)
Thornhill, ON L4J 0C7
905-731-4300
www.thornemillonsteeles.ca
INDEPENDENT LIVING
Assisted Living • Memory Care

Class Acts

A TASTE OF CAMP: From left, Aaron Malka, Jonah Dembe, Alex Tessier, Ethan Feldman, Zane Rodak, Sarah Winemaker, Carl DeLeon Jr., Hannah Byrne-Wolfson, Talia Waxman, Regan Berlin Bromstein, and Maya Earn enjoyed a recent overnight at Camp George, which is affiliated with the Union for Reform Judaism. The children, from Temple Anshe Sholom in Hamilton, Ont., took part in "Taste of George" camp activities along with students from other congregations.

REMEMBERING RABIN

Robbins Hebrew Academy middle school students Jordan Zuckerman, left, and Sydney Bernknopf perform the song Shir Lashalom during the school's recent memorial service for slain Israeli prime minister Yitzhak Rabin, 15 years after his death.

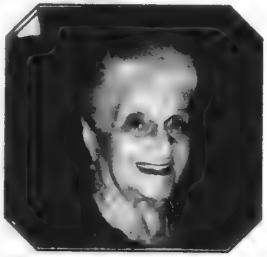
SICKKIDS FUNDRAISER

Zachary and Maya Winkler got their faces painted at the Do Something Sweet 2009 fundraiser for SickKids Hospital. Zachary, 9, has been raising money for the hospital for four years. This year's fundraiser is Nov. 7 from 3 to 5 p.m. at 81 Ramblewood Lane in Thornhill, with cotton candy, games, balloon animals and a silent auction.

FAMILY MOMENTS

Mazel Tov

The Canadian Jewish news



Mazel tov to Rita Ginsberg on your 89th birthday. With love from your children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Best wishes from your family and friends.

Happy fourth birthday Geoffrey, from your loving parents Paul & Sharron Lungen, brother Matthew and grandparents Al & Diane Miller.

Lindsay Newman & Dr. Neil Gottheil, son of Doris and the late Saul Gottheil of Montreal, were married in Ottawa on May 23.

Gavin & Jennifer are engaged! Mazel tov from parents Abe & Frances Wang, Ronnie & Lorraine Neumann, grandparents Sam & Rose Potok and Doreen Berger.

Aggie Zichermann and Alex Zichermann, and Shirley Anne & Harvey Haber announce the engagement of Kevin to Sandra. Sharing in the excitement are both families.

Myles Itzkovitch shows off his sister, Jayce Nora, born Aug. 12. Parents, Sandra & Jonathan. Grandparents, Brenda & Ernie Waltman and Debby & Sonny Itzkovitch.

SEND US YOUR PHOTOS!!

Email your digital photos to cblackman@thecjn.ca or go online to WWW.CJNEWS.COM and click the Family Moments button!

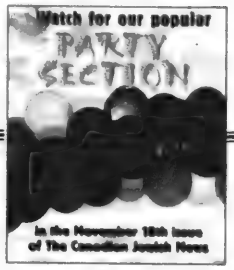
JNF
Say it with Trees
"In Loving Memory"
JEWISH NATIONAL FUND
416-638-7200

What's New



Deadline for Nov. 18 is Nov. 8. Deadline for Nov. 25 is Nov. 15. Phone 416-391-1836. Fax 416-391-0829. E-mail cjawhatsnew@gmail.com.

Thursday, Nov. 4

DAN BAHAT SPEAKS

Dan Bahat, former chief archeologist of Jerusalem on "Jerusalem in the Crusader Period." 7:15 p.m. 100 St. Joseph St. Carr Hall, room 403. Free, all welcome.

Friday, Nov. 5

'GLOBAL OCEAN CRISIS'

Temple Emanu-El presents an evening with journalist and author Alanna Mitchell. Following Shabbat services at 8 p.m., she speaks on "Finding Hope in the Global Ocean Crisis." 416-449-3880.

Saturday, Nov. 6

SHABBAT SERVICES

Join Beth Emeth for Shabbat services. Gil Hoffman speaks on "Efforts to Prevent a Nuclear Iran and Advance Mideast Peace." Services at 8:45 a.m.

TORAH STUDY

Beth Tikvah Torah class, Saturdays to December. Henry Alkin on parshah Toldot. 9:45 a.m.

VETERANS DAY SHABBAT

Join Beth Tzedec to honour all Canadian, Israeli and Russian war veterans. 9 a.m. Kiddush following. George Stern, 416-223-7481.

REDUCE STRESS

BDBIBA Synagogue Sisterhood presents Judith Shier-Weisberg on "Jewish ways to reduce stress and gain energy." 8 p.m. Beth David, Sisterhood Hall. Sisterhood members free, guests $5.

Sunday, Nov. 7

TALMUD DISCUSSION

Temple Har Zion presents Marty Lockshin on "The Gored Ox or the Bored Ox: Is the Talmud Relevant Today?" 10 a.m. Leo Baeck Day School. 905-889-2252.

TEFILLAT SHAHARIT

Silent morning worship with Rabbi Ed Elkin. 10 a.m. National Council of Jewish Women, 4700 Bathurst St. Bring own prayer book and Jewish ritual items. publictefillah@gmail.com.

Monday, Nov. 8

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Beth Emeth Continuing Education presents Food for Thought with Kitty Wintrob, author of I'm Not Going Back - Wartime Memoirs of a Child Evacuee. 12 p.m. $12. Call to reserve. 416- 633-3838.

'TEA PARTY NATION'

Temple Emanu-El's lecture series. "Tea Party Nation: Populism in America," with Hugh Innes, professor of media studies at Ryerson. 2-4 p.m. $10. 416-449-3880.

BIOMEDICAL ETHICS

Adath Israel Congregation Adult Study presents "Conflict Resolution: Choosing the Higher Ethical Value," with Cantor Eli Kirshblum. 8 p.m.

Tuesday, Nov. 9

MINYANAIRES CLUB

Join Beth Sholom's Minyanaires Club for minyan, dinner and a movie. 4:30 p.m. 416-783-6103.

ISRAEL PHILATELISTS

Monthly meeting of Society of Israel Philatelists. Antibes Community Centre, 140 Antibes Dr. 7 p.m. All welcome. Slide presentation of an account of the S.S. Pentcho and the Italian internment camps at Rhodes and Ferramonti. Philip, 416-226-2050.

Continued on page 33

FROM THE AWARD-WINNING TEAM AT DIVERSICARE
Comes a community where extraordinary luxury, comfort and security are just an ordinary part of everyday living.
WELCOME TO FOUR ELMS RETIREMENT RESIDENCE

- Elegantly appointed studio, one & two bedroom suites with weekly housekeeping
- Three meals daily including snacks
- Professional staff and 24 hr Emergency Response
- Stylish amenity spaces including a Library, Media Room, Computer Lounge, Wellness Centre and Fitness room
- Brain Gym® & More – A multi-sensory Brain Stimulation Program exclusive to Diversicare
- Secure Assisted Living Floor

Call today for more information or to reserve your suite
905-738-0905
1500 Steeles Ave. West, Thornhill, ON L4J 4H6
FOUR ELMS RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
Diversicare

Discover Jerusalem Package at Mamilla Hotel

Experience our indulging package including complimentary drinks at the Mirror Bar, shopping privileges at Alrov Mamilla Avenue and 15% savings on all spa treatments. Stay 3 nights or more and receive a complimentary Shabbat meal or 30% discount on your 3rd night.
Valid January through March 2011. Restrictions apply.

Reservations +972.2.5482200 reservations@MamillaHotel.com www.MamillaHotel.com

Mamilla Hotel, Jerusalem, enters The Sunday Times Travel Magazine's 'World's 100 Best Hotels' and Condé Nast Traveller UK & US editions' 'Hot List 2010'

MAMILLA HOTEL

What's New

Continued from page 32

'ONE MAN'S JOURNEY'

Temple Har Zion Brotherhood presents Paul Stancer on "How One Man's Journey Ended in Monte Casino," the story of a man's life before and during WWII. 7:30 p.m. Temple Har Zion. RSVP: harzionbrotherhood@gmail.com.

Wednesday, Nov. 10

YORKMINSTRELS PERFORM

The Yorkminstrels Show Choir performs Broadway show selections, contemporary music, folk songs and seasonal favourites. Temple Sinai Social Club members $8, guests $10. 7:30 p.m. 416-487-3281, education@templesinai.net.

THEATRE NIGHT – WICKED

Yad Sarah is Israel's volunteer network of home-care support services. Give your support by purchasing tickets to see Wicked. Orchestra level seats. Partial tax receipt will be issued. 416-781-6416.

THE BINDING OF ISAAC

Three-part course on The Binding of Isaac: A Family Drama, with Sarit Kattan Gribetz. Wednesdays to Nov. 24. 8-9:30 p.m. $40. Men and women welcome. Shaarei Shomayim. 416-877-2050.

VINTAGE JEWELRY

Carole Tanenbaum Vintage Collection and Bikur Cholim's sale and road show of vintage costume jewelry. Portion of sales to Bikur Cholim Toronto. 11 a.m.-4 p.m. and 5-8 p.m. RSVP: 416-783-7983.

Other News

HOLOCAUST EDUCATION WEEK PROGRAMS

Beth Tikvah: Doris Bergen on "Holocaust Survivors and Holocaust Historians: Changing (and Challenging) Relations." Nov. 9, 12:15 p.m. By reservation. 416-221-3433.

Beth Tzedec: Holocaust educator and scholar Christopher Browning discusses his book Remembering Survival: Inside a Nazi Slave Labor Camp. All welcome. Nov. 8, 7:30 p.m.

Pride of Israel: "The Legacy of Jan Karsi: The Man Who Tried to Stop the Holocaust. Presented by Ewa Wierzynska, leader of the Jan Karski Unfinished Mission program. Nov. 7, 7:30 p.m. On display Nov. 8 and 9, 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

Kehillat Shaarei Torah: "Can Faith Be Restored? Suffering and Belief After the Holocaust." Rabbi David Weiss Halivni with Elliott Malamet. Nov. 6, 8:15 p.m. 416-633-5770.

Shaarei Shomayim: "May Your Memory Be Love," closing program. Ephraim Kaye presents a project that preserves the legacies of Holocaust survivors. Commemorating the 72nd anniversary of Kristallnacht. Nov. 9, 8 p.m.

Stashover-Slipia: Join the congregation for Shabbat services at 9 a.m. Ralph Wintrob speaks on "The Survival of the Warsaw Ghetto Archive." His talk is based on the book Who Will Write Our History? by Samuel Kassow at 11:30 a.m. 416-789-1333.

Temple Sinai: Arnold Reisman, author of An Ambassador and a Mentsch: The Story of a Turkish Diplomat in Vichy, France, to speak on Nov. 7, 10 a.m. 416-487-3281.

PARSHAH CLASS

Parshah-of-the-week class each Wednesday with Judy Hazan. Free. 7:30-8:30 p.m. Lodzer Centre. 416-636-6665. All welcome.

DR. OREN BENLULU SPEAKS

Dr. Oren Benlulu speaks about his experiences in an intelligence unit in the IDF and as an orthopedic surgeon treating Jewish and Arab patients. Nov. 11, 7:30 p.m. Lodzer Congregation. Free. Sarah, 416-636-6665.

WINE-TASTING

An evening of Israeli wines and food with wine expert Michael Pinkus. Beth Sholom. $50. Nov. 11, 7 p.m. 416-783-6103 to reserve.

BIG BAND CONCERT

Nov. 10, 7:30 p.m. Beth Tzedec presents From Sinatra to Buble: A Salute to the Big Bands. Simon Spiro with the John MacLeod Big Band Orchestra and Jackie Richardson and Jeff Madden. $50 general, $75 priority. 416-781-3511.

NEW YORK TRIP

Rabbi Danny Bahar with Project Inspire is running a New York trip with shopping, kosher restaurants and adventure for high school girls. Dec. 2-6. $99 US if booked before Nov. 8, $150 after. 905-882-6755.

NCSY CONCERT

30th annual NCSY concert and gala dinner. Eli Gerstner and Yeshiva Boys Choir perform. Dec, 12, 7:30 p.m. Toronto Centre for the Arts. ncsyconcert.com, 905-761-6279, ext. 230, for tickets.

YAHRZEIT BRUNCH

Brunch to commemorate the 200th yahrzeit of Rebbe Nachman of Breslov. 10:30 a.m. Nov. 14. Thornhill Community Shul. Rabbi Jonathan Rietti speaks on "Simplicity: Connecting with Your Real Self." Rabbi Chaim Kramer will speak on Rebbe Nachman's legacy.

SINGLES EVENTS CAN BE FOUND ON PAGE 36

AMERICAN SONGBOOK

The Great American Songbook with Jordan Klapman on piano. Holy Blossom. Nov. 11, 8 p.m.

YIDDISH TRIBUTE

"Laughter, Nostalgia and Song: The Second Annual Tribute to Yiddish." Beth Tikvah. Nov. 14, 2-4 p.m. General admission $10, $15 at door. Patron: $36. 416-221-3433.

'EVOLUTION OF PRAYER'

Rabbi Barry Freundel speaks on "The Evolution of Prayer." Nov. 13. Mizrachi Bayit, 296 Wilson Ave. 416-633-1604.

JF&CS GROUPS

Call Shawna Sidney, 416-638-7800, ext. 6215, or visit jfandcs.com. Registration required.

Stepping stones for women: creating your journey toward employment: For women looking to enter or re-enter the workforce. Nov. 8, 9:30-11:30 a.m. or Nov. 16, 7:30-9:30 p.m. Lipa Green.

Loss of a Sibling: 6 sessions for people who have recently lost a brother or sister. Thursdays starting Nov.11, 7:30-9:30 p.m. Lipa Green.

Couple Communication: 4 sessions. Nov. 11, 7-9 p.m. Lipa Green.

FOR SENIORS

Beth Sholom Synagogue: Chai Society invites seniors for lunch and a talk by Diane Mingail on "Jews of Morocco." Nov. 10. 12 p.m. $15. 416-783-6103 ext. 228 to reserve.

Adath Israel Congregation. Wednesday social afternoons. Bridge, mah-jong, Rummikub, refreshments. $2. Pearl, 416-635-6317, or Marcia, 416-932-1229.

Earl Bales Seniors Club in the Park, 416-395-7881. Casino Rama Nov. 17, departs 10 a.m. Lunch and Laughter: latkes, etc., Nov. 30, 12 p.m. Line dancing Thursdays, 10-11:30 a.m. Social bridge Thursdays, 12:30-3 p.m. Canasta Tuesdays and Thursdays, 12-3 p.m. Do you needlepoint, crochet or knit? Share your crafts, call Tuesdays, 10-11:30 a.m.

For seniors woodworking, call 416-630-6487.

Bernard Betel Centre, 1003 Steeles Ave. W., 416-225-2112.

Croll Memorial Health Lecture: "Mind Matters: Make Your Memory Work for You!" with Dr. Gordon Wincour. Nov. 4, 1:30-3 p.m.

Lecture: "Uniquely you." Nov. 11. 1:30 p.m. Free.

Lecture: "Famous Jewish trials: Alfred Dreyfus," with Gerald Ziedenberg. Nov. 9, 10-11:30 a.m. $3 members, $6 guests.

Wagman Centre, 55 Ameer Ave., 416-785-2500, ext. 2267.

The entertainers of the Wagman Centre are looking for energetic seniors to join in their program of providing entertainment to other seniors. Judy, 416-733-0580.

Lunch and Learn: Nov. 25, 11:30 a.m. Fireside Lounge. Jackie Barron on "Safety Hazards and Wellness." Kosher dairy lunch. Reserve at service desk. $7 members, $8 guests.

Book club meets once a month. Members will receive a copy of a book to read one month prior. Next meeting is Nov. 18, 1:30 p.m. Register at the service desk.

PROSSERMAN JCC

Sherman Campus, 4588 Bathurst St. 416-638-1881, www.prossermanjcc.com.

Lunch & Learn with Rabbi Moshe Stern. Nov. 5, 12-1 p.m. Free. Bring lunch. Call morning of to confirm program is running.

Movie Mondays with Larry Anklewicz. Nov. 15: Heartbreak Kid. Movie 1:30 p.m. $5. Nov. 16, Defiance screening. 7:30 p.m. $8.

Nov. 21, 2-4:30 p.m. Launch of mind, body and soul seminar series. "Raising and Sustaining Healthy Families." Free. Natalie, ext. 4036.

Twenty years ago, Half the Kingdom challenged us to rethink the role of women in Judaism. Now we ask "what's next?" Nov. 30, 7:15 p.m. Bloor Cinema. Optional screening of movie at 6 p.m.

Class for those people who have never made Shabbat dinner from scratch. Margie will teach you how. Nov. 4, 7-9:30 p.m. Ext. 4235.

MILES NADAL JCC

750 Spadina Ave., 416-924-6211, www. mnjcc.org.

Lectures on world music for the armchair traveller. 7 p.m. Nov. 4, 11 and 18. $18 per lecture. Ext. 0.

Jewish Issues for Interfaith Couples. Thursdays, Nov. 4-25. 7:30 p.m. Register at 416-638-1881.

Global Day of Jewish Learning. Nov. 7, 2:30-5 p.m. Rabbi Ed Elkin, Rabbi Michael Stroh, Annie Gilbert, Rhonda Rosenheck. $10 suggested. Ext. 154.

Sundays on Bloor. Nov. 7, 11 a.m. "Tales of Courage from the Shoah." Free. Ext. 154.

Media Mondays, Israeli cinema: film critic Shlomo Schwartzberg leads discussions. With film clips. 7-9 p.m. $12 per class. Ext. 606.

Camp Gesher Shabbat. Nov. 12, 7 p.m. Dinner with dancing, trivia and games. Talk by Shaul Zobary. RSVP: info@campgesher.com, 416-633-2511.

What's New is now online, for subscribers only. You can find it at cjnews.com.

Swiffer WetJet All-In-One Mopping Starter Kit

Perfect on Wood, Vinyl, Tile, Laminate and Marble!

Includes Mop, Cleaning Pads and Multi-Purpose Solution

Lowest Price In Ontario

24.99 KIT Compare at 36.99

Full Money-Back Refund Policy

Always 1st Quality!

Pay Cash 2% OFF Your Total Purchase

Cayne's The SUPER HOUSEWARE Store

Shop Online at www.cayneshousewares.com

112 BOSCASTER, Thornhill, Ont. One Traffic Light North of Steeles Ave. East of Yonge St. 905-764-1188

Mon-Fri 9-9 Sat+Sun 10-6 Now Open FRIDAY

OBITUARIES
and Related Notices

Steeles Memorial Chapel

Wall, Regina	Oct. 10/10
Olwyn, Martin	Oct. 10/10	400 Walmer Rd
Goldsmith, Helene	Oct. 10/10	2045 Finch Ave. W
Goodfellow, Harry	Oct. 12/10	176 Armour Blvd
Bermack, Sylvia	Oct. 11/10	Private
Brockman, Harry	Oct. 12/10	131 Beecroft Rd
Sipos, Miklos	Oct. 12/10	333 Clark Ave. W
Glass, Eva	Oct. 11/10	429 Walmer Rd
Trus Hyde, Gwendolyn	Oct. 15/10	51 Van Stassen Blvd
Simon, Bernard	Oct. 16/10	25 Parkway Forest Dr
Rotholc, Sam	Oct. 16/10	1 Clark Ave. W.
Shoosterman, Alexander	Oct. 16/10	74 Chilmar Cres
Azar, Oren Abraham	Oct. 15/10	659 Northcliffe Blvd
Kirsh, Rose	Oct. 16/10	644 Briar Hill Ave
Sigal, Martin	Oct. 17/10	70 Brickstone Circle
Bibi, Itshak	Oct. 18/10	180 Dudley Ave
Shuman, Manuel	Oct. 19/10	81 Mosedale Cres
Friedman, George	Oct. 19/10	3560 Bathurst St
Miller, Margaret	Oct. 19/10
Gelbstein, Martha	Oct. 18/10
Fisher, Fern	Oct. 19/10	474 Wellington Rd
Solomon, Sarah Sally	Oct. 21/10	1601 Bathurst St
Nussbaum, Samuel	Oct. 21/10	151 Clanton Park Rd
Kheyfets, Boris	Oct. 22/10	Private

We would like to express our appreciation to all our friends and family for being supportive during this difficult time of our grief, on the passing of

ALBERT WARDINGER ז"ל

Ruth, Sandra, Marla and Mark

REGINA'S CATERING & FINE FOODS
A Family Tradition for 48 Years
SHIVA MEALS
SEUDAT HAVRA'AH
(Traditional Meal After Funeral)
844 Sheppard Ave. W.
(at Wilmington)
www.reginasfinefoods.com
416-636-1044

ICRF
Israel Cancer Research Fund
Your help will find a cure for cancer!
ICRF Tribute Cards
leave a lasting impression
Phone: 416-487-5246
Sponsored by The Elegant Garage Sale

IZENBERG GOLDBERG Monuments
Nov. 1 – Dec. 31/10 SAVINGS
SINGLE MONUMENTS $1400 any colour granite
DOUBLE MONUMENTS $2400 any colour granite
Be an educated consumer, compare quality and price.
We do not pay any funeral home commissions for their recommendations.
Our prices are therefore lower. We will not be undersold!
Serving generations of families in Toronto's Jewish community for over 90 years
We are a family owned and operated with informed, impartial Monument specialists in a no-pressure, non-commissioned sales environment.
3173 BATHURST ST.
(4 blocks north of Lawrence)
416-787-0319
www.izenberggoldberg.com

To place an unveiling notice, please call at least 15 DAYS prior to the date of the unveiling. To place any other family-related notice, please call at least 10 DAYS prior to the issue date.
416-391-1836

Coast to Coast

Sam Katz handily defeated ex-NDP MP Judy Wasylycia-Leis. [Myron Love photo]

Katz wins third term as Winnipeg mayor

By MYRON LOVE
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — In most civic elections, two factors are key to winning: name recognition and incumbency.

As a longtime NDP MP for north Winnipeg, Judy Wasylycia-Leis enjoyed high name recognition. But it wasn't enough to trump sitting Mayor Sam Katz in the Winnipeg mayoralty race on Oct. 27, because he had the benefit of both incumbency as well as name recognition.

It was the latter that helped win Katz his first mayoralty race in 2004. Winnipeg's first Jewish mayor was already well known in the city as the man who brought professional minor league baseball back to Winnipeg when he decided to throw his hat into the ring. He had also been involved in a number of other business ventures and active in the entertainment industry, bringing high-profile acts to the city.

Katz's first race was a by-election brought about by then-mayor Glen Murray's decision to run (unsuccessfully) for a seat in the federal election that year. (Murray has since moved to Toronto and was recently elected – in a byelection – to the Ontario Legislature representing Toronto-Centre.) In a race without an incumbent, Katz finished first with 43 per cent of the vote.

Last time out, four years ago, defending his position against a group of lesser known candidates, he won 63 per cent of the vote.

This time, the Israeli-born son of Holocaust survivors faced a more formidable challenger in Wasylycia-Leis. She had been an NDP MLA for seven years (1986-1993) and an MP since 1997. She's also been a strong supporter of Israel, both in Parliament and within her own party. She first sought a federal seat, unsuccessfully, in 1993.

Katz ran on his record. His main promises were to hire more police and firefighters, add more 911 operators and maintain his freeze on a property tax increase, a position he has held to since his first election. Wasylycia-Leis' major plank was calling for yearly property tax increases of two per cent over the next four years to go toward infrastructure repair.

Katz's winning margin was almost 25,000 votes, and he received 55 per cent of the votes cast.

While there's speculation that this will be his last term in office, he's not tipping his hat yet.

At the city council level, there were two races with Jewish content. In the inner-city ward of Fort Rouge-East Fort Garry, 12-year veteran councillor Jenny Gerbasi, who is Jewish but not involved in the Jewish community, beat back a challenge from Jewish candidate Ian Rabb..

And in the affluent ward of River Heights-Fort Garry, with its sizeable Jewish population, businessman Michael Kowalson took on incumbent John Orlikow, who although not Jewish himself, is a nephew of the late, longtime Jewish MP David Orlikow. The race pitted a scion of a well-known NDP family, the Orlikows, against the son of a leading Jewish Conservative family. Kowalson's father, Aaron, was a past president of the Manitoba Conservative Party.

It was also the city's most contentious campaign, with each side accusing the other of improper behaviour.

The final result gave Orlikow, who was first elected in a byelection a year ago, a little more than 50 per cent of the vote.

A dreidel, menorah, some Chanukah gelt Chanukah gifts you gave your children

Now that they're all grown up, give them something that will connect them to the community throughout the year

Give them their own subscription to The Canadian Jewish News

The Canadian Jewish news

P.O. BOX 819 STN MAIN,
MARKHAM, ON, L3P 8A2
P: 1-866-849-0864,
F: 905-946-1679
www.cjnews.com

New address only
$27.80* for 1 YR. in PRINT
Quote Code: N10CHK
Canadian Delivery, New Address Only
* Expires Dec. 31st 2010

Doc key: S10PHCJN, S10WMCJN

CJN SUBSCRIPTION RATES

$68.00*	2 YR. CANADA	❑
$37.80*	1 YR. CANADA	❑
$20.95*	1 YR. digital edition (eCJN)	❑

*H.S.T INCLUDED H.S.T. #R105201149

$135.00 CND 1 YR. U.S.A. / FOREIGN ❑

Name_____

Address_____

City_____

Province_____ Postal Code_____

Telephone_____

Email_____

❑ I am purchasing this subscription as a gift

Subscriber No._____

PLEASE RETURN WITH YOUR PAYMENT.

AMOUNT ENCLOSED $_____

CHEQUE ENCLOSED ❑

❑ ❑ ❑

NUMBER_____

EXPIRY DATE_____

Winnipeg adds art festival to annual book fair

By MYRON LOVE
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — This year, Winnipeg's annual Jewish book fair will be preceded by a new arts festival.

The week-long book fair, scheduled for Nov. 25 to Dec. 2, will feature the usual readings from selected authors, such as local writers Carol Matas, a popular children's author; Eva Wiseman, whose novels for young people speak to her Hungarian Jewish heritage, and Nurit Drory, as well as appearances by former Winnipegger Sidura Ludwig and perennial favourite Norene Gilletz.

Also appearing will be authors Lesley Simpson (The Shabbat Box), who teachers writing at McMaster University; University of Toronto cultural historian Ivan Kalmar (Imagined Together: Western Views of Muslims and Jews); Toronto-based author Anna Porter (Kasztner's Train: The True Story of Rezso Kasztner, Unknown Hero of the Holocaust), and Vancouver-based former Winnipegger Rhea Tregebov reading from Arguing the Storm: Stories by Yiddish Women Writers, an anthology that grew out of a Yiddish women's reading circle in Winnipeg. Tregebov edited the collection of short stories that were translated into English by members of the reading circle.

But while in years past, the authors' readings as well as the many books on display would constitute the sum total of the Jewish book fair, this year, the Rady JCC – which organizes the week-long event – has chosen to enhance the event with something extra.

"We decided to create a larger Jewish arts festival around the book fair," said JCC program director Tamar Barr. "We wanted to appeal to a broader audience and hopefully bring more people to the book fair."

The Tarbut: Festival of Jewish Culture will include the book fair, elements of the annual Israeli Concert Series, as well as comedy shows and films.

The arts festival kicks off Saturday, Nov. 13 – two weeks before the formal book fair – with a performance by the Israeli Chamber Project. The trio consists of harpist Sivam Magen, the first Israeli to win the International Harp Contest (2006); pianist Assaff Weisman, who won the Iowa International Piano Competition in 2006, and violinist Itamar Zorman, who made his solo debut at Carnegie Hall with the American Symphony Orchestra.

On Nov. 14, Belle Millo will reprise the launch of "Voices of Winnipeg Holocaust Survivors," an account of the experiences of Winnipeg Holocaust survivors that Millo compiled and edited on behalf of the Freeman Family Holocaust Centre.

In the evening on the 14th, comedian and author Joel Chasnoff will be introducing a Winnipeg audience to The 188th Crybaby Brigade: A Skinny Jewish Kid From Chicago Fights Hezbollah, his memoir of serving in the Israel Defence Force.

Nov. 16 will feature an evening of songs written by Leonard Cohen, as interpreted by local singer Anna-Lisa Kirby.

The Tarbut week concludes with two concerts, on Nov. 20 and 21, by the 3 Cohens – Israeli jazz musicians and siblings Avishai, Anat and Yuval Cohen – accompanied by local musicians.

"We have planned high-calibre programs," Barr says. "People are very excited about this new concept."

Singles Events is an advertising feature of The Canadian Jewish News

Deadline:
Wednesdays, 4 p.m., 8 days preceding issue date.

Jewish Connections Inc.

A personalized introduction service for Professional individuals looking to meet quality people

For a complimentary consultation call me: 905-889-3900

Carole Linden

carole@jewishconnectionsinc.com
www.jewishconnectionsinc.com

'KOSHER' LABEL IN ADVERTISING

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency Guide to Food Labelling and Advertising reads as follows:

"In the labelling, packaging and advertising of a food, the Food and Drug Regulations prohibits the use of the word kosher or any letter of the Hebrew alphabet, or any other word, expression, depiction, sign, symbol, mark, device or other representation that indicates or that is likely to create an impression that the food is kosher, if the food does not meet the requirements of the Kashruth applicable to it.

The terms "kosher style" and "kind of kosher" are not allowed, unless they meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish-style food" or "Jewish cuisine" are not objected to, although the foods may not necessarily meet the requirements of the Kashruth.

Rationale: "Kosher style" is considered to create the impression that the food is kosher, and therefore the food must meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish style" food may not necessarily create this impression."

The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Toronto Jewish Free Loan Cassa
Gemilath Chasodim Association

Notice Of Annual General Meeting

Take Notice that the Annual General Meeting of the Members of Toronto Jewish Free Loan Cassa will be held at Prosserman JCC Sherman Campus 4588 Bathurst Street Room 123 on November 16, 2010 at 7:00 p.m.

for the following purposes:
(a) Hearing and receiving the reports & statements required by the Corporations Act to be read and laid before the Society at an Annual Meeting
(b) Appointing the auditor and fixing or authorizing the Executive to fix his or her remuneration and
(c) Transacting any other business properly brought before the meeting

Upon the completion of the above, the Board of Directors will convene to review suggested amendments to the Constitution and Loan Committee policies.

416-635-1217 www.tjflc.com
freeloan.ujafed.org

ש'שאר ק'נ'ט

גידי קורן וחברים

מה יהיה

אני שומע מיותר ויותר חברים קנדיים שאין להם סבלנות לישראל, ושהם אינם מאמינים שישראל מעוניינת בשלום. אלה הם אנשים שמכירים את הפרטים ובורחים הנדול אין להם סימפאטיה למוסלמים, אבל לדבריהם- ברור שהשלטון הימיני בישראל אינו מעוניין ליותר למען השלום.

למני כאחד פרסם השבוען "טיים" מאמר כותרת שקובע שהישראלים אינן מעוניינים בשלום. לדברי העיתון- המצב הכלכלי בישראל משופר, והיא עלה על שכנותיה בסדרי נחל רציניים, ועל כן מה שמעניין את הישראלים זה ביטחון אישי, ולא שלום.

במקביל, יש סימנים ברורים לכך שחלקים של הקהילה היהודית בצפון אמריקה פעלים להרחיק את עצמם מישראל בנלל המדיניות הישראלית כלפי הבעייה המדינית, ונם בנלל היחס של ישראל לקהילה הרפורמית.

בסופו של דבר-כל זה עלול להביא למפולת שתגרום לישראל איבוד של התמיכה המסורתית של ארצות הברית.

חשוב להקשיב וללמוד היטב את הנטיות האלה, כי לצד המדיניות הישראלית פעלת בצפון אמריקה כיום מכוח הסברה משומת היטב של הארגונים הפלשתינאים, והם נשמעים בכל עוז.

אבל שישאר בינינו.

"הרשת החברתית"

סרט חובה על הסטודנט מהרווארד שהמציא את פייסבוק וחיבר מיליונים רבים של אנשים ב-250 מדינות למערכת חברתית, תוך שהוא עושה מהפכה רדיקאלית באיך דורות שלמים של אנשים מתקשרים ביניהם. אין יום שאינני מקבל הזמנת להיות "חבר" של מישהו במייספבוק. אני אינני עונה כי אין לי זמן לתקשר אפילו עם החברים שיש לי עכשיו, אבל אנשים רבים בני גילי מסתרים לי שדרך כניסה למייספבוק הם יודעים מה קורה בזמן אמת לילדים שלהם! מעניין ומדהים.

הסרט עצמו מרתק, עשוי בקצב מהיר, עם מוסיקה נפלאה.

הנקודה המרתקת ביותר היא זו שהאיש הנאמי שהבין אין צעירים רצים לתקשר כיום- הוא עצמו כמעט לא מסוגל לתקשר וליצור חברים, ומתקשה במנעים חברתיים. כאילו- נאן שלמד אין יצורים, נניד כלבים או דברים, יכולים לתקשר, למרות שאינו מבין בכלם מה הם אומרים.

הוא כיום מיליארדר בשנות העשרים לחייו. האם הוא איש מאושר בקשריו האישיים! תחליטו בעצמכם.

תשע בסולם קורן.

"בקרב תפנשי נבר נבוה וקהה" - וחדי אלן

כמו במין טקס שנתי-אני ממתין בכליון עיניים לסרטיו החדשים של וחדי אלן. סרטו החדש, כמו נם ארבעת האחרונים, איננו מתרחש בניו יורק אלא באירופה, והוא עצמו איננו מופיע בהם. נם המנע- טימור סבדן עם מספר עלילות מקבילות על אהבה, בנידה, אכזבות ותקוות. האלמנטים בכלם מאוד פשוטים, אך וחדי אלן מטפל בהם בחוש ההומור המושחז שלו, תוך רגישות לפרטים הכי קטנים. ולמרות התקציב היחסית נל שיש בידו, טובי השחקנים בעולם מוכנים להופיע בסרטיו כמעט בהתנדבות, מה ששטה את החזיה מעצמו מאין כמוה. המעט מתבלטת נעמי ואטס המדהימה. בראיון עיתונאי היא סיפרה שפנשה את וחדי אלן רק יום לפני הצילומים וכמעט התפלצה מהתרנשות בשלתה את ידו.

שמה בסולם קורן.

Petition sent to Cotler's office for review

Continued from page 1

She then sent her petition to Cotler's office for review, and his office responded saying it was a "strong" document and that the MP for Mount Royal would gladly table it in front of Parliament.

Zerker said the world community has been largely silent on Schalit's four-plus years in captivity and that if no one speaks up more vociferously, the only outcomes that await Schalit are indefinite captivity or his release at the extreme cost of Israel.

Hamas has asked for Israel to release 1,000 Palestinian prisoners, many of whom have been convicted on terrorism charges, and the release of all female and underage prisoners in exchange for Schalit. Israel has balked at the conditions.

"I don't know if [my petition] will make any difference. But my feeling is one has to try and bring this into the international arena, much like you see with other cases of abduction. Those become a focus for international protest, and this has not happened in the case of Gilad Schalit," Zerker said.

Irwin Cotler

"I can only start this in Canada, but I think it should spread to France, where the Schalit family is from... but we see no action outside of Israel. And I don't think it should be left to only Israel."

Zerker said she's urging the members of her grandmothers' group and anyone else to write their MPs and ask them to act on the petition.

In Parliament last week, Cotler read the petition and said he was "pleased" to table the document, which he described as "grounded in a profound commitment to international law and human rights."

Zerker said she's now planning to make her cause more public.

For more information, visit http://grandmothersforgilad.blogspot.com.

Former BBC official gets jail time

Compiled by CJN Staff

MONTREAL — Bill Surkis, a former executive director of B'nai Brith Canada, Quebec region, and before that, of the Montreal Holocaust Memorial Centre, will likely spend 45 days in prison for his conviction on child pornography charges.

Both the Crown and defence agreed at a sentencing hearing Oct. 28 that the 71-year-old Surkis should receive the minimum sentence allowed by law for conviction on one count each of accessing and possessing child pornography, downloaded from the Internet. The time would be served on weekends.

Prosecutor Cynthia Gyenizse and Surkis' lawyer, Steven Slimovitch, also agreed that he should serve 240 hours of community service and be subject to three years of probation.

Surkis, a former executive director of B'nai Brith Canada, Quebec region, and before that, of the Montreal Holocaust Memorial Centre, will be sentenced Dec. 9.

Still to be settled are certain probation conditions, such as whether Surkis can have a computer at home and whether he should be listed on the national sex offender registry.

He apologized and expressed remorse for his crimes at the hearing, saying he was ashamed and broken.

Former federal cabinet minister Gerry Weiner was among eight people who wrote letters of reference on behalf of the defence, supporting Surkis' character. However, a pre-sentencing report described Surkis as having always been interested in pornography involving adults and migrating to child pornography out of curiosity.

For full story, please go to cjnews.com

Equal access strategy

Family Matters

by

John Syrtash

B.A. (Hon.), LL.B.
Counsel
Garfin Zeidenberg LLP
Family Lawyer & Mediator for 30 years

Question: I was married for almost 10 years and have a six-year-old son. My wife was having an affair with a close family "friend" which resulted in the birth of a baby girl. The truth came out about the affair and the baby girl in May when the baby was seven months old, making it an affair of more than two years.

Now my ex wife is on maternity leave and she has more time with my son in a new house into which she moved with the boyfriend, baby girl and my son. I am trying to get 50 per cent of access time with no luck. How is that possible? What are my rights?

Answer: The problem in getting "50 percent" access is that you appear to be seeking advice after the most significant event has already happened and a period of time has elapsed since she left you. This is a crucial mistake most men make. She has no legal right unilaterally to leave with your child without a court order or your express consent. But because you appeared to acquiesce to her doing so a "status quo" situation has now developed and it is now difficult to undo the damage.

Normally, I advise clients that if their spouse attempts to take matters into their own hands, to make an urgent application to locate the child. They should also apply to a court for sole or shared custody on the basis that their spouse has attempted to leave without prior consent since, in law, both parents are presumed to share the child's time equally until a court orders otherwise. I give this advice even if such a parent leaves by giving notice of where they are going because I take the position that, in the absence of violence or the threat of violence, no other parent has the right to unilaterally take a child away from the other parent without prior consent or a court order. It's often not in a child's best interests.

In your case you are best to have your lawyer assemble good witnesses about your relationship with your son. Alternatively, you may ask the court to order the Children's Lawyer to investigate your relationship with the child or to order a private clinical assessment with a social worker or psychologist to do so. These clinicians interview everyone and then make recommendations to the court that can often maximize your time with your son.

Mr. Syrtash is Counsel to Garfin Zeidenberg LLP, Suite 800, 5255 Yonge Street (at Norton) just north of Mel Lastman Square, Civic Centre Subway station, Toronto, ON M5G 1E6. John Syrtash can be reached at (416) 642-5410, Cell (416) 886-0359. Visit www.freemychild.com; www.spousalsupport.com; www.garfinzeidenberg.com.

Neither Garfin Zeidenberg LLP nor John Syrtash is liable for any consequences arising from anyone's reliance on this material, which is presented as general information and not as a legal opinion.

Sponsored by the Community for Jewish Culture of B'Nai Brith Canada.

Anti-Israel BDS conference termed a dud by QIC

CUPW chair skips scheduled speech

By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — A three-day conference held at the Université du Québec à Montréal Oct. 22 to 24 to promote the boycott of Israel in Quebec was a bust, the Quebec-Israel Committee (QIC) says.

"The conference was a dismal failure, and it's clear that the boycott is not only not gaining momentum in Quebec, as the organizers claim, but has been marginalized," said QIC executive director Luciano Del Negro.

Luciano Del Negro

The attendance peaked at about 200 at the opening Friday night panel discussion, where the most prominent speaker was Omar Barghouti, a founder of the Palestinian Campaign for the Academic and Cultural Boycott of Israel, said Del Negro, and the closing plenary on Sunday barely mustered 100 people. The QIC had an independent observer at the conference.

The workshops on the Saturday were also poorly attended and one that was to have been addressed by Québec solidaire leader Amir Khadir was cancelled.

The provincial party adopted a resolution a year ago supporting the so-called international boycott, divestment and sanctions (BDS) campaign against Israel, and Khadir, the party's sole MNA, has been trying to get the National Assembly to consider a motion on the issue.

Absent were Quebec union leaders, including those of the Centrale des syndicats du Québec (CSQ), which last year also passed a resolution supporting the BDS campaign.

That federation represents some 170,000 workers in the education, health and social services, and other public sectors, Del Negro noted, adding that he knows its membership was informed of the conference.

"It's clear that CSQ could not mobilize their people, and, given that 90 to 95 per cent of the conference was in English, we think that one-third of those attending came from outside Quebec," he said.

Moreover, the conference received no coverage from the mainstream media, he added.

The conference, which began its publicity almost a year ago, was organized by a number of organizations, principally the Coalition for Justice and Peace in Palestine, which includes the CSQ; the Montreal Council of the Fédération des travailleurs and travailleuses du Québec; Fédération des femmes du Québec; Palestinian and Muslim, left-wing, international aid groups; Jewish groups against Israeli government policies, and Tadamon, an anti-Israel group that wants Canada to de-list Hezbollah as a terrorist organization.

The Ottawa-based Canadian Union of Postal Workers, which endorsed the BDS movement in April 2008, the first national union in North American to pass such a resolution, was also listed as an organizer. Its president, Denis Lemelin, was supposed to be at the conference, but he did not speak as scheduled.

The QIC is concerned that the conference adopted a position in support of South African union leader Bongani Masuku, who has been accused of making menacing comments directed at Jews and Israelis. Last year, the South African Human Rights Commission upheld a complaint of hate speech against him filed by the South African Board of Jewish Deputies.

Masuku, the international secretary of the Congress of South African Trade Unions, was originally on the Montreal conference's program. That was changed prior to the conference and another congress representative was substituted.

"To think that they are supporting a man with a history of anti-Semitic utterances, that they claim he is the victim of a defamation campaign, is quite rich," said Del Negro.

"The BDS campaign is built on sand. Its handful of promoters thrive on bombastic rhetoric, but really there is nothing there," Del Negro said. The fact is that since the campaign was launched in Quebec, relations between Quebec and Israel have only been strengthened, he added.

In 2007, an agreement between Quebec and Israel on economic, cultural and scientific exchange was renewed and expanded, he pointed out. The following year, then-Economic Development Minister Raymond Bachand led the largest commercial delegation ever from Canada to Israel.

That trip was the subject of a 16-page supplement in Les Affaires, Quebec's leading business magazine, and last month – on the eve of the BDS conference – La Presse published a 10-article section touting Israel's innovation as a business model for Quebec.

On Oct. 22, Bombardier announced a $185-million contract with Israel Railways to build coaches, Del Negro added.

In contrast to the BDS conference, that same weekend 450 Quebecers attended a symposium held in Quebec City, organized by a new politically conservative movement called Réseau liberté Québec. Its guest speaker was an anglophone Jew from Calgary, Ezra Levant.

Chassidic school fights to keep going

MONTREAL — A Quebec court will now decide whether a nearly 60-year-old chassidic school can continue to operate as it has historically, or will be closed because it does not conform to the law.

Over three days last week, Superior Court judge Gerard Dugre heard arguments from lawyers for the Toras Moshe Academy, a Satmar community boys' elementary school founded in 1952, and the education ministry.

The school, which has about 200 students, is refusing to fully teach the government-prescribed curriculum under the Education Act, devoting more time to religious than secular studies.

The children receive some instruction in French, English and math – but not at the level required – and a little geography and history, but no science, except that which can be derived from the Talmud. The school does not teach the ethics and religious culture course introduced two years ago.

Government lawyer Eric Dufour told the court the children are receiving 35 hours a week of religious instruction and only six hours of secular studies.

The government minimum for compulsory subjects is 18 hours, whether the school is public or private, subsidized or not. Toras Moshe has never received government funding.

— J.A.

YIDDISH LIVES! !יידיש לעבט
THE SECOND ANNUAL
YIDDISH TO YIDDISH
LAUGHTER, NOSTALGIA AND SONG
In English, Yinglish and Yiddish
Featuring: Mitch Smolkin | Deb Filler
Jack Newman | Nina Shapirsky, Hart Pomerantz | Alf Kuwitter | Gloria Valentine
$10 in advance • $15 at the door
$36 Patron (includes reserved section and reception following)
FOR TICKETS: 416.221.3433
Sunday November 14th, 2010
2:00PM - 4:00PM
Beth Tikvah Synagogue
3080 Bayview Avenue, Toronto
HOLOCAUST EDUCATION WEEK
Film & Speaker
"The Photographer" (1999), produced and directed by Dariusz Jablenski,in Polish, German, and Yiddish with English subtitles.
76 minutes long.
Arts. Culture. Heritage.
YIDDISH
יידיש
www.committeeforyiddish.com
Prosserman JCC, 4588 Bathurst St. Toronto, Ontario
Tel: 416.635.2881

SOBERMAN LLP

Soberman LLP is pleased to announce that Omosalewa laboni and Howard Zerker have recently been admitted to the partnership.

Please join us in welcoming Omosalewa and Howard to the Soberman LLP partnership.

For additional information, please visit us online at www.soberman.com.

Omosalewa (Shalewa) laboni
BAcc, CA, CFP
Partner, Assurance & Advisory 416 963 7125
oiaboni@soberman.com

Howard Zerker
CA
Partner, Assurance & Advisory 416 963 7231
hzerker@soberman.com

Add joy to your Home.

Winter is on its way. But inside your home it can be as warm and cozy as you want it to be.
Visit Taps this month and add more joy to your world.

Taps Smart Shower Kit #1

A shower kit made exclusively for us at a price that's made for you! Includes handshower, 1/2" thermostatic valve and rainhead. Priced in chrome.

$549

Brushed Nickel $649

Hansgrohe Talis S Faucet

High arc single hole kitchen faucet with dual spray pullout adds both symmetry and functionality to your kitchen. Priced in chrome.

$419

Steel Optik $499

KWC Domo Kitchen Faucet

A classic Swiss-made best seller. Pull-out spray with swivel spout. Priced in chrome. Stainless Steel $499.

$349

Our Lowest Price Ever!

Mirabelle Cordoba Suite

Beautify your powder room with this one-piece elongated comfort height toilet and matching pedestal sink, 27.5" x 21.2" x 35.5". Limited supplies.

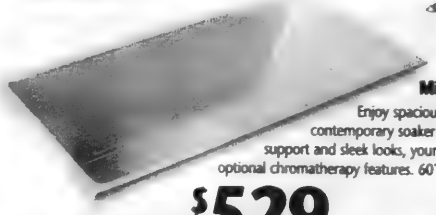
$599

Previously Sold At $899

Stand up for Taps

From our Boutique, all towel warmers, toilet paper stands and towel stands.

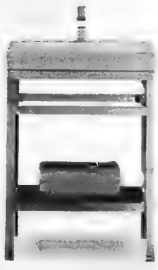
20% OFF



Mirolin Fina Soaker Tub

Enjoy spacious bathing in this deckless contemporary soaker tub. With sloping lumbar support and sleek looks, your experience can be enhanced by optional chromatherapy features. 60" x 32" x 22". Priced in white.

$529



Mirabelle Console 24

Contemporary styled console perfect for small bath spaces. Polished chrome or stainless steel. Includes white basin. 23.6" x 18.7". Faucet extra.

$599

Basin Only $199

TORONTO
1020 LAWRENCE AVE. W.
2 LIGHTS WEST OF DUFFERIN
416-785-027[illegible] or 1.800.263.2976
Mon-Wed 9-5, Thu[illegible]-Fri 9-8, Sat 9:30-5

TAPS
WOLSELEY

26 YEARS

MISSISSAUGA/OAKVILLE
1050 VEGA BLVD.
1 LIGHT EAST OF 403, NORTH OFF DUNDAS
905.569.1262 or 1.866.899.8801

www.tapsbath.com

Guests are pampered at Muskoka's Trillium Spa

Spa Life
By KATHRYN KATES

The Trillium Resort & Spa sits on 86 acres of woodland on the banks of Clear Lake in Muskoka, Ontario's cottage country.

Located in Port Sydney, Ont., the full-service luxury spa is housed in a modern but "countrified" three-storey, 5,000-square-foot post-and-beam, reddish-brown building with a view of a pristine waterfall.

"We have five treatment rooms, including a relaxation room, two pedicure and two manicure stations," says Betty Ballantine, the Trillium Spa's manager.

"There are a number of large windows. Our relaxation room and our couples' treatment suite have lake views. Within the spa building, we have a hot tub and steam room. There's also an outdoor wood-fired Finnish sauna and a swimming pool. In the summer we use our screened-in porch for treatments as well.

"The spa is designed with lots of natural wood and earth tones... it blends in well with the woodsy outdoor area. The ambience is very laid-back. There are four full-time therapists and others available, as needed. So, if we have a large group, we are certainly able to accommodate them," Ballantine says.

Services at the Trillium Spa include makeup, body wraps, facials using the Guinot product line from France, express and deluxe manicures, pedicures and depilatory waxing. The most popular treatments are hot-stone treatments, facials and body wraps. The spa retails Guinot, Organic Bath Co. and, for nails, OPI.

The spa caters to locals and resort guests, many of whom are repeat customers.

About 15 to 20 per cent of the spa's clients are men. Its couples business is growing. It offers couples packages in the couples room, with the use of the Jacuzzi tub, as well as chocolates and non-alcoholic champagne. One treatment offers side-by-side couples' massage, and the other includes a spa package with back scrub, back hot-stone massage, express facial and a paraffin-wax hand-and-foot treatment with pressure-point massage. Healthy spa lunches are available for an extra charge from the restaurant at the spa or in the resort's dining room.

The ambience at the Trillium Spa is relaxed and laid back. [K.Kates photos]

The Trillium Spa is known for its girls' getaway weekends and for its spa parties, perfect for groups of women, birthdays, baby showers or any other special occasion.

"Bring your party to the spa and have a sampling of treatments for the whole group, offered in different price ranges. Some packages will include a spa gift for the special person," Ballantine says.

"We want people to just leave feeling so much better than when they arrived, feeling relaxed and pampered... and have the best spa experience they could ever have."

The Muskoka lodge opened its doors in 1819. It now houses a dining room, a reception area and parlour rooms where guests can play board games, watch DVDs or chat the night away.

To spend time at this resort is to know why it's a Muskoka favourite for weddings and business conferences.

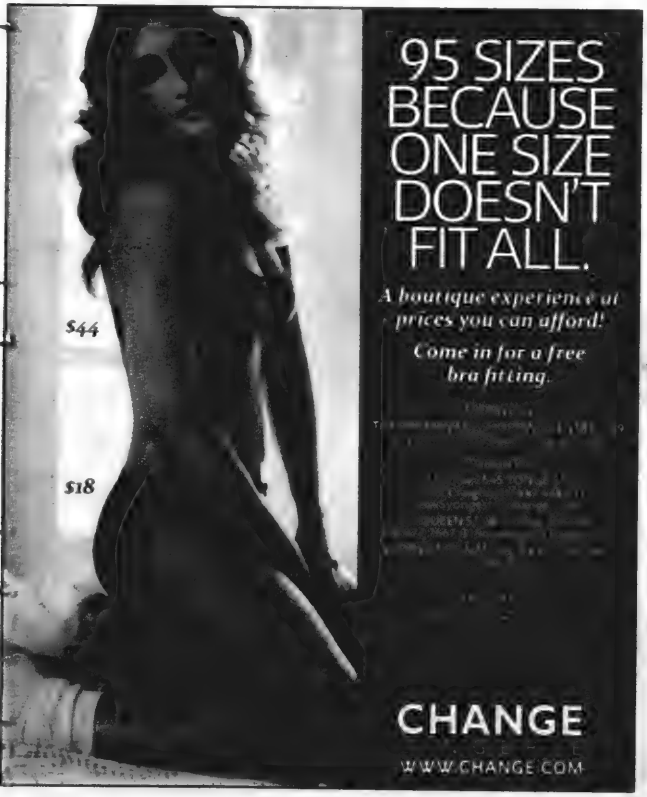
The rustic property includes six spacious waterfront loft chalets and 11 cosy bed-sitting cottages. There's also a fitness centre and tennis courts.

Summer activities include hiking, biking – mountain bikes are available – rock climbing and swimming, Also available to guests are non-motorized boats, windriders, kayaks, canoes and paddleboats.

When winter rolls around, guests can enjoy skating, snowshoeing, cross-country skiing and snowmobiling. For those who like to shop, Huntsville, now famous for hosting the G8 Summit last summer, is only 15 minutes away and chock-full of boutiques.

For more information or to make a reservation at the Trillium Resort & Spa, call 1-800-263-6600 or visit www.trilliumresort.com.

Spa packages include pressure-point massages.



Beauty must haves

News Canada

The change in seasons can wreak havoc on your hair and skin. The lack of humidity in the air can strip away moisture from any available source, causing dull, dry and itchy skin and hair issues such as split ends and static. However, it's easy to stay summer fresh as the temperature drops by using the key beauty essentials already in your makeup kit.

When your skin is depleted of moisture it can become flaky and itchy. Avoid harsh scrubs and soaps and keep skin moist with a cream-based cleanser and a rich moisturizer. Choose a cream such as Pond's Dry Skin Cream—without harsh, irritating chemicals—that is designed for dehydrated and sensitive skin and deep overnight hydration.

Next, revive your dry summer locks with a polished coif. Attempt to leave more time between washes, so that the natural oils in your hair can prevent dryness. When washing, follow this simple routine:

• Wash your hair with a mild shampoo and follow with a deep intensive conditioner.

It's easy to keep your skin dry using the key beauty essentials already in your makeup kit. [NC photo]

• After washing, wrap your hair in a towel for ten minutes, which will create a humid environment, allowing the conditioner to penetrate into the hair follicle.

• Rinse with cold water to lock in the moisture and add shine.

• Blow-dry the hair thoroughly on a cool setting with a flat paddle brush, smoothing as you dry from root to end.

Finally, focus on reviving lacklustre and grey-toned skin with fresh berry-stained cheeks.

• Dip one end of a Q-Tips cotton swab into Vaseline petroleum jelly and place on the back of your hand.

• Then, with the wand of a Q-Tips cotton swab gently scrape the back of your favourite lipstick shade—and mix it into the Vaseline.

• Apply with your fingers on the apples of your cheeks to give you a pop of colour with a gorgeous dewy finish.

DESIGNER BLOWOUT SALE
3 DAYS ONLY!
FIRST ANNUAL SAMPLE SALE UP TO 80% OFF
DESIGNER DAYS SHOW DATES
Friday November 12, 2010 10-6PM
Saturday November 13, 2010 10-6PM
Sunday November 14, 2010 10-4PM
aeroplan

Bringing the fashion of Shenkin Street to Toronto

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Two Toronto women are bringing unique Israeli fashions to Canada. Ariella Moss and Ellie Stern are the founders of ShenkinWest, a new boutique that exclusively features Israeli clothing, shoes, jewelry and handbags. The store, named after Shenkin Street – Tel Aviv's most fashionable street – has been open since August.

Stern met Moss, who is originally from Israel, through her daughter, who made aliyah to Israel. When she came to Israel, Moss would take her shopping in off the beaten track places.

Before opening ShenkinWest with Moss, Stern, who has more than 30 years experience in the fashion industry, ran a store called Ellie's Closet.

"We thought it would be a great idea... in the sense that for designers in Israel it's so amazing for them to have this exposure abroad," Moss said.

"We get requests from designers everyday."

ShenkinWest currently stocks six Israeli clothing designers including Ronen Chen, Sigal Dekel, Kedem Sasson and Rina Zin. Their jewelry designers include Ruby Star, Shuna and Mira Mori. The store also carries Achat Achat shoes and Gal handbags.

Aside from supporting Israeli designers, it's important to show that there is more to Israel than just politics, Moss said.

"We believe that these designs aren't only for the Jewish community," she said.

ShenkinWest features a variety of Israeli clothing, jewelry, shoes and handbags.

"Fashion is just another channel to show that there are other things going on in Israel. As somebody from Israel, many times you hear Israel and automatically think about the violence, the terror, the politics. There are amazing things coming out of Israel, whether it's medical innovations or technological, but also the fashion is absolutely up there."

"At a time when there is so much negative attention on boycotting Israeli products, we would like to promote 'Buy Israel,'" Stern added.

"Women love fashion and love to shop. Why not support Israel at the same time and enhance Israel's image in a positive fashion."

An important aspect of the business is the personal shopping aspect, Moss said. ShenkinWest has regular business hours and also schedules appointments. Their weekly newsletter includes their hours for that week, as well as a special promotion.

"We very much like to focus on the one-on-one."

They are also very excited by the opportunity to share Israel's fashionable side with Canadians.

"I see ShenkinWest as an opportunity to expose as many people as possible who have not seen this side of Israel to its amazing fashion industry," Stern said.

For more information visit the ShenkinWest website at www.shenkinwest.com. For store hours call 416-932-9778.

NEED A COAT?
By far the best selection of beautiful cloth, down and all weather coats
Made in Canada.
Luxurious coats from Italy and designer brands including Michael Kors, GEOX, Junge, Sanyo Shokai, Soia & Kyo and Rainforest.
Women's sizes 0 to 24.
Men's 34 to 50,
in lots of colours.
Children's down coats - Ages 4-14.
Find the perfect coat for travel or any season in less than 5 minutes.
LORNE'S
COATS THAT LAST
101 Spadina Ave.,
(at Adelaide), Toronto
Mon.-Sat. 9-7
Sun. 10-6
416-596-1058

Achat Achat shoes in the designer's Jaffa studio.

Top designers embrace velvet this fall

By ANITA SZABADI-GOTTESMAN
Special to The CJN

Follow the fashion blogs of the season, and you will find everyone atwitter about the versatility, style and sheer wearability of velvet.

The luxurious feel and elegance of velvet and its fanciful draping qualities have seen it come and go as both a fashion staple and a must-have accessory. Fall and winter 2010 see velvet and its cousin, velour, return in a big way.

Velvet was traditionally woven from silk fibres. Velour is typically made from cotton, but it may also be made from artificial materials such as polyester. Extremely elastic fibres are used by some velour manufacturers to make the fabric a uniquely stretchy and flexible knit.

Soft to the touch, velvet has always been seen as a luxurious fabric. Kings, queens and their courts have always favoured velvet clothing.

Vintage is still the rage, and velvet lends itself beautifully to creating a fanciful yet romantic look. Designers Ralph Lauren, Dolce & Gabbana, Alexander Wang, Karen Walker, Zac Posen and Thakoon have embraced velvet for this fall and winter.

The runways are showing entire women's wardrobes of velvet in dresses, pants, jackets and capes. The velvet colour palette includes basic black, rich red and burgundy, olive green and midnight blue.

Draping is an essential quality of velvet and as such creates a beautiful silhouette on women of all shapes and sizes. And velvet can be worn by women of all ages. Slim legging-style pants, affectionately labelled "jeggings," are a beautiful option in velvet. Paired with high boots and a long top, jeggings are an easy-to-wear stylish look for fall.

Velvet fashions in dresses range from the mini and higher to below the knee and floor length. A royal red mini sheath worn with thigh-high black suede boots is one way to bring velvet back. Or add a long flowing skirt to a short military-look jacket, from last's years collection, with a wide belt and you're ready for a power lunch.

Velvet is versatile, easily transitioning from day to evening. A striking tailored velvet suit is appropriate for the boardroom as well as a dinner party.

Not to be overlooked is velvet menswear. Canadian designer Bustle has introduced a line of men's velvet suits, vests and pants. It's easy to spruce up a tired-looking suit by adding a form-fitting velvet vest and a funky tie. Velvet dinner jackets will add panache to a man's look and take him from an elegant brunch to a candlelit dinner.

If you are not ready to invest in a few signature velvet pieces, try accessorizing by adding a velvet hobo bag or small evening clutch purse. Adding a velvet shawl over a-dress or sweater, and velvet bows in your hair or a plain velvet headband, will give a nod to fall 2010. Try accessorizing a cocktail dress with elbow or shorter-length velvet gloves for dramatic flair.

Proper foot care essential for seniors

By ANITA SZABADI-GOTTESMAN
Special to The CJN

We often think that as we age we can expect to develop foot pain. In fact, foot pain and muscle aches are not normal at any age and are not necessarily a part of aging. Seniors, in particular, can take measures to prevent or fix many foot ailments.

The Canadian Podiatric Medical Association stresses that having healthy feet is an integral part of overall health. The association stresses that the average adult applies over one million pounds of force on their feet daily. The complex structure of the foot which has 26 bones and hundreds of ligaments and tendons can lead to chronic heel pain, Achilles tendon issues, bunions or shin splits.

As we age, foot problems such as high or low arches, hammer toes and bunions, become more acute.

Custom-made orthotics, molded plastic insoles that provide support, are often the answer to prevent or slow down the progress of many debilitating foot conditions. Orthotics allow for better gait and weight distribution.

Additionally, orthotics provide an important extra layer of cushioning, which compensates for the loss of cushioning which occurs in the aging foot. Fitted by a podiatrist or an orthotist, a plaster cast impression is taken of the patient's foot and a plastic insole is crafted for each client.

Montreal based podiatrist, Dr. Bluma Girzon, stresses the importance of the right kind of orthotic for the senior. "An orthotic is not just a mold. There are many different orthotics on the market for a variety of medical conditions. The right diagnosis must be established before the appropriate orthotic is designed to match the condition."

Many off-the-rack insoles are available and should be regarded as a temporary solution. Whether custom-made or off-the-shelf, the proper way to use the insoles is to insert them into the shoe after removing the manufacturer's insole. Good quality shoes will not only perform better for the wearer but always allow for the insole to be removed. Choose top quality running shoes or shoes designed specifically for walking.

As baby boomers age and want to lead more active lives, more and more fashionable, yet functional walking shoes are appearing in the market place. Fashion-forward, functional shoes with removable insoles have flooded the marketplace and are easily accessible at the local mall or a multitude of speciality shoe websites.

Seniors suffering from diabetes must pay special attention to foot care and maintenance. The proper use of orthotics will safeguard the feet against many problems that can lead to more serious consequences of diabetes, such as blisters, dry, cracking skin and unchecked ulceration.

"Wearing an improperly fitted orthotic can have side effects especially for diabetics," says Dr. Girzon. "If pain persists, the orthotic needs to be modified."

Custom-made plastic orthotics fit in most shoes creating stability and improving gait and overall foot health.
[Anita Szabadi-Gottesman photo]

The Public Health Agency of Canada has issued a foot care information-sheet for seniors. The agency suggests that many foot problems can be avoided through basic foot care: check your feet every day; don't wait until your feet hurt; and take a few minutes every day to look for cuts, blisters, bruises, sores, infected toenails or swelling.

Wash your feet every day using warm water, but do not soak feet longer than 10 minutes or the skin will get dry and start to crack. Dry well between your toes.

Keep feet soft and smooth using cream on the tops and bottoms, paying attention to wipe off excess cream and not applying between the toes. Use talcum powder if your feet sweat a lot.

Wear comfortable shoes and socks with proper support and grip; wear a clean pair of socks every day; and avoid socks with ridges or an elastic at top that can irritate or restrict circulation.

Take care of your toenails, cutting or filing nails regularly with appropriate nail care tools, trimming them straight across and never shorter than the end of the toe.

Social Networking
@
for the :-) generation

Health & Lifestyles

"YOU DIDN'T GET MY CHEQUE?" IT'S IN THE MAIL, HONEST!"
Sound Familiar?
Michael Lebovic, Paralegal
25 Years in Debt Recovery (416) 784-3770 x 224
www.lawyidebtpay.com • lawyidebtpay@cciclaw.ca

Beit Issie Shapiro aids disabled in Israel

By JENNIFER M. MACLEOD
Special to the CJN

If you've never heard of Beit Issie Shapiro, you're not alone. But if you have friends or family in Israel, they probably have.

The Israeli you know may well be among the 30,000 people whose lives are touched each year by this multi-purpose organization serving children and adults with developmental disabilities.

For 30 years, Beit Issie has helped many mothers like Yulia Ben Moshe, whose son, Lavi, was born with Canavan disease, a degenerative neurological condition. For her, Beit Issie "combines the qualities of a professional organization with the love and warmth of a family."

Canadian Friends of Beit Issie Shapiro hosted a kosher tapas reception on Oct. 21 at the Avenue Banquet Hall, on the theme "The Art of Entertaining." The evening featured as hosts, cookbook author Fay Lewis and event designer Craig Gruzd of Designing Trendz, who offered their insights into planning an event.

One-on-one hydrotherapy at Beit Issie Shapiro

Both were thrilled to be able to help raise funds and awareness for Beit Issie. "I consider myself privileged to be associated with this organization," said Lewis.

Beit Issie offers Israel's most vulnerable residents special-needs hydrotherapy; early-intervention daycare; Snoezelen multi-sensory environments (in which children and adults with disabilities enjoy gentle stimulation of the primary senses); dental services; social and recreational clubs and even university programs.

Founding director Naomi Stuchiner, who spoke at the Toronto event, has made Beit Issie, the legacy of her father, the late Issie Shapiro, her life's work. Before making aliyah in 1977, Shapiro established the Selwyn Segal Hostel in South Africa for people with special needs. He moved to Israel with the dream of establishing a similar organization, but died three years later, on a fundraising trip, and never saw it become a reality.

He would certainly be astonished by the breadth of its services and programs today. But none of the programs is as significant as Beit Issie's work in changing attitudes and influencing public policy.

It hasn't been easy, says Stuchiner. Israeli society values achievement, and it's hard to accept that "some people are not going to achieve in the same way." Parents used to feel ashamed, but now "there's much more understanding [that] one has got to make space for people with special needs… and demand what they should be getting."

Thirty years ago, most government funding went to residential programs. Beit Issie has successfully fought for the idea that "there are better options for children with disabilities than institutionalization." In 1980, early intervention before age five was non-existent; these days, it is viewed as an urgent priority, since therapy and stimulation can make a world of difference to a child's quality of life.

There are still many frontiers, Stuchiner believes. "There's work to be done… There still aren't enough services. There are new challenges and new breakthroughs."

Beit Issie is instrumental in research and training – including holding international conferences on developmental disabilities. The last, in 2006, brought more than 1,400 participants from around the world to Tel Aviv to share and learn together. Another conference is planned for 2011.

One of Beit Issie's more recent initiatives is a therapeutic daycare for special-needs children from Arab communities, where stigma is still common. The program has won recognition from government officials as a model of co-operation.

As Stuchiner told attendees at the Toronto event, the organization's growth has been nothing less than astonishing. "We started with 16 children" in a small group home in Herzliyah. "We never dreamed we would serve 30,000." She credits it all to her father's faith in "families being able to raise children in their homes with dignity."

Lewis (http://faylewis.com), a recent transplant from South Africa to Boston, brought her light-hearted energy to the evening with delightfully common-sense food and entertaining tips drawn from her cookbooks, including her latest, this year's Be My Guest.

Her cooking philosophy boils down to "if you can't fit a recipe onto one page, it's not worth making." All her advice was just that down-to-earth. When you know your guests, understand their tastes and plan well, your event is almost bound to be a success. Even an amateur cook can create a menu offering tasteful colour, flavour and texture variations. And small details such as table-setting still count, Lewis says. Do it right, and then opt for the simplest, freshest presentation you can.

Gruzd offered "insider secrets" for hosting with flair. When entertaining at home or away, it's easy to build in the "wow factor" – even on a limited budget.

Beit Issie Shapiro offers opportunites for international participation, including bar/bat mitzvah twinning projects and dedication and sponsorship opportunities.

For more information about Canadian Friends of Beit Issie Shapiro, visit www.beitissie.org.il/eng or e-mail cfobis@rogers.com.

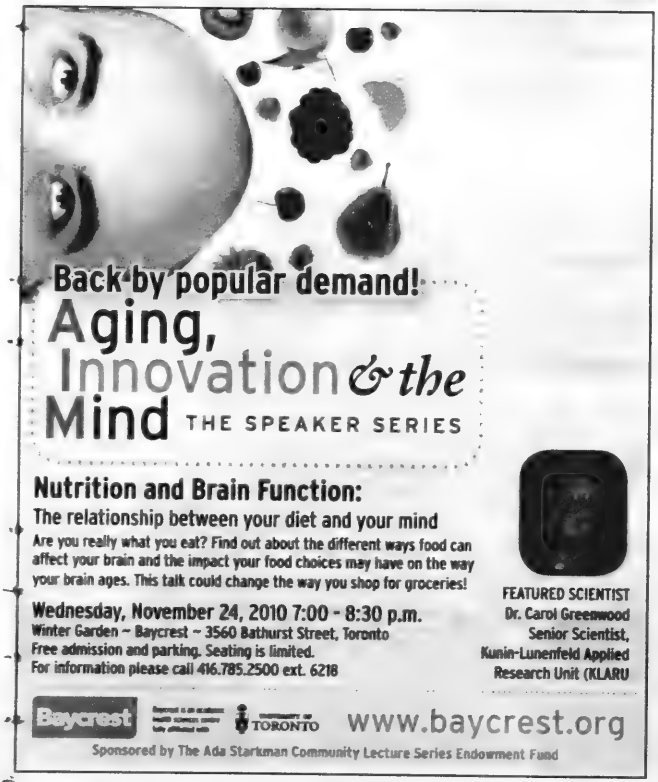
Watch for our popular PARTY SECTION in the November 18th issue of The Canadian Jewish News

fitness DEPOT
EXERCISE EQUIPMENT SUPERSTORES
fitnessdepot.ca



Back by popular demand!
Aging, Innovation & the Mind
THE SPEAKER SERIES
Nutrition and Brain Function:
The relationship between your diet and your mind
Are you really what you eat? Find out about the different ways food can affect your brain and the impact your food choices may have on the way your brain ages. This talk could change the way you shop for groceries!
Wednesday, November 24, 2010 7:00 - 8:30 p.m.
Winter Garden – Baycrest – 3560 Bathurst Street, Toronto
Free admission and parking. Seating is limited.
For information please call 416.785.2500 ext. 6218
FEATURED SCIENTIST
Dr. Carol Greenwood
Senior Scientist,
Kunin-Lunenfeld Applied
Research Unit (KLARU
Baycrest
TORONTO
www.baycrest.org
Sponsored by The Ada Slaitman Community Lecture Series Endowment Fund

Now. I have global perspective
Macquarie Private Wealth Inc. is a member of Canadian Investor Protection Fund (CIPF).

International

Israel & the Jewish World

At Macquarie, I can deliver more.
Macquarie Private Wealth Inc. is a member of Canadian Investor Protection Fund (CIPF).

U.S. official warns of more mail bombs

JTA

WASHINGTON — More mail bombs such as those that were mailed to synagogues in Chicago may be out there, a top U.S. security official told news shows.

John Brennan, the deputy national security adviser, said on Sunday morning American news programs that there might be more mail bombs like the two discovered last Friday. He added that the potential attacks are characteristic of the group Al Qaeda in the Arabian Peninsula.

"They are a dangerous group. They are a determined group. They are still at war with us, and we are very much at war with them," Brennan told Meet the Press. "They are going to try to identify vulnerabilities that might exist in the system."

In Canada over the weekend, Canadian Jewish Congress issued an alert directed to Jewish community institutions asking them to implement "security protocols we've put in place over the last several years," said Congress CEO Bernie Farber.

"We issue alerts based on an abundance of caution. But sadly, we understand that Jews today have to be especially careful," he said.

Asked if Congress had been alerted by Canadian security services over the weekend about any similar threats aimed at the country's Jewish institutions, Farber said it had not.

Also Sunday, Yemen security officials released a Sana'a University engineering student who had been arrested after being suspected of mailing the bombs. Hanan Al-Samawi, 22, was released after protests by her fellow students. Police now believe that another woman used Samawi's name and identity, Reuters reported.

Samawi's mother, 45, was reportedly also arrested, according to reports, but there was no word about whether she was released.

U.S. President Barack Obama said last Friday in a televised news conference that the packages headed for the United States constituted a "credible terrorist threat" and had been addressed to Jewish organizations in the Chicago area.

One of the reported targets was Congregation Or Chadash, which serves gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender Jews, and shares space with Emanuel Congregation, a Reform temple, in a building along Chicago's lakefront, according to the Chicago Tribune.

A second targeted synagogue reportedly was in Chicago's East Rogers Park neighbourhood, according to the Tribune, though the newspaper reported that no synagogues have been operating in the neighbourhood since 2002.

The head of Emanuel, Rabbi Michael Zedek, said he received information from a reliable and well-placed Jewish community source that it appeared Or Chadash was one of the bomb plot targets. Rabbi Zedek called it a wake-up call for the Jewish community, saying it must recognize this new reality and plan accordingly.

Jewish community leaders in Chicago had been warned to be on alert for suspicious packages addressed to synagogues in the city, even before the explosives were found. The executive vice president of the Chicago Jewish Federation, Michael Kotzin, said the community had been told to maintain high security alert around synagogues and pay particular attention to the handling of mail.

One of the bombs, which was identified and defused last Friday at a FedEx way station in the United Arab Emirates, bore the hallmarks of an Al Qaeda bomb, Dubai police said, according to reports. A second, similar bomb was located on the same day in London.

The mail bomb found in Dubai reportedly travelled on two passenger planes to reach the country, Qatar Airways reportedly said Sunday.

Hidden inside printer cartridges, the explosives were large enough to bring down an airplane and could be detonated by remote control.

Brennan said that officials are trying to determine whether the planes or the synagogues were the intended targets.

With files from Andy Levy-Ajzenkopf and Ha'aretz.

Rudd to lead Australian delegation to Israel

JTA

SYDNEY, Australia — Australia's foreign minister will lead the largest-ever parliamentary delegation to Israel.

Kevin Rudd, the former prime minister, will lead 17 members of the house of representatives and senators from both sides of the political aisle to Jerusalem next month to participate in the Australia Israel Leadership Forum, a two-day conference to discuss "issues of mutual strategic interest," according to its chair, Albert Dadon.

Kevin Rudd

The 40-member Australian delegation, which also will include businesspeople, power brokers and media representatives, will engage with a similarly high-profile delegation of Israelis.

During the trip, the Australians will attend a ceremony at Yad Vashem to honour William Cooper, an Aboriginal elder who in December 1938 protested to the German Consulate against the persecution of the Jews just weeks after Kristallnacht. It's the first time Israel's national Holocaust memorial has recognized an indigenous Australian.

Palestinian statehood gambit puts Israel against wall

By LESLIE SUSSER
JTA

Analysis

With talks at a stalemate and no agreement from the Israelis to reinstate a settlement freeze, the Palestinians are playing a new card: an end game to statehood through an appeal to the international community.

The card hasn't actually been played, but the mere threat that the Palestinians would push for international recognition of a state from the United Nations has been enough to push the Israeli government to reconsider options to return to the negotiating table.

On Sunday, partly to pre-empt a Palestinian move toward statehood that would bypass negotiations with Israel, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said he is working intensively with the Obama administration on a formula to restart the stalled peace process.

"We are in close contact with the American administration with the aim of restarting the peace process," Netanyahu said at his weekly cabinet meeting. "Our aim is not only to renew the process, but to renew it in such a way that it won't collapse in a few weeks or in two months, but that we will go into a full year of serious negotiations on the core issues in an effort to reach a framework agreement on the way to a peace deal.

"Any attempt by the Palestinians to circumvent this process by going to international organizations," he said, "is not realistic, and will not in any way advance a genuine peace process."

Israeli, Palestinian and U.S. leaders all say publicly that a negotiated peace deal is much preferred to unilateral steps that could spark a sharp response from the other side. But the Palestinians warn that if the direct peace talks remain on hold, they will consider approaching international bodies for recognition of a Palestinian state along the 1967 borders with eastern Jerusalem as its capital.

It isn't clear whether this is merely a tactic to frighten Israel back to the peace table – talks that were renewed in early September broke down four weeks later over Israel's refusal to extend a building freeze in the West Bank – or part of a new strategy aimed at achieving a better deal for the Palestinians through the international community.

Either way, given Israel's precarious position on the international stage and the lack of international support for its West Bank settlement construction policy, the Palestinian threat carries weight and is being taken very seriously in Jerusalem.

Much depends on the American stand, which gives the Obama administration added leverage over Israel.

PA President Mahmoud Abbas

The new Palestinian thinking has been evolving over the past few years and is based on two key principles: winning enhanced international support for Palestinian goals and, in parallel, building the institutions of a functioning Palestinian state from the bottom up.

The idea is that if the American-mediated peace process with Israel proves fruitless, the Palestinians can invoke Plan B: gaining the world's approval for an already functioning Palestinian state, on conditions favourable to the Palestinians, at a time of their choosing.

With Palestinian confidence in the Israeli government on the wane and Israel's international standing in decline, Plan B has emerged as a genuine threat to Israel.

Last week, the Palestinians made their first significant move for recognition as a state by approaching the International Criminal Court at The Hague to urge recognition of the Palestinian Authority as the equivalent of a full-fledged state government. That designation would enable the Palestinian Authority to press war crimes charges against Israel for its conduct in the 2008-09 Gaza war because only states have standing before the court.

Recognition of the Palestinian Authority by the international court not only would open a crack for the possible prosecution of Israeli civilian and military leaders, it also would hand the Palestinians a major public relations victory in their quest for internationally recognized statehood. The Palestinians would be able to cite the court's recognition as legal backing for their case for a state.

Last week the court's prosecutor, Luis Moreno-Ocampo of Argentina, heard arguments from legal experts, backed up by non-governmental organizations, from both sides. The Israeli side argued that the Palestinian Authority is not a state and therefore cannot claim standing before the court, and that in any event, the court is not empowered to prosecute a state like Israel, which has effective and credible legal mechanisms for dealing with suspected war crimes.

A decision is not expected for several weeks.

If the Palestinians do press ahead in earnest with Plan B, the United Nations will be the main battleground. Given the certain backing for a Palestinian state by the non-aligned and Muslim states, the Palestinians easily would be able to secure a majority in the General Assembly – the same body that granted Israel international recognition in November 1947 by a vote of 33 to 13.

But the Palestinians want more than mere recognition: they want a binding allocation of territory based on the 1967 borders. For that they will likely seek a resolution from the UN Security Council, whose votes are binding. Such an effort likely would be blocked by the United States, which has veto power in that body. Therefore, for such a gambit to work, it would need to have the backing of the Obama administration. That's unlikely.

In the run-up to a crucial Arab League meeting in early November that will discuss the stalled Israeli-Palestinian peace talks, PA President Mahmoud Abbas has been canvassing Arab leaders on his UN strategy.

The Palestinians see an important convergence in early November of key events for the future of the peace process: the Arab League meeting and the U.S. midterm elections. They believe that after the midterm elections, Obama will have a freer hand to deal with Israel and will press Israel to return to the negotiating table on the Palestinians' terms to head off any UN strategy.

For Israel this constitutes a major headache. The Netanyahu government fears that many countries, including the Europeans, would go along with the Palestinians and recognize a Palestinian state based on the pre-1967 border between Israel and Jordan.

If Israel remains in control of large swaths of the West Bank after a Palestinian state is declared and recognized, even if it's just in the General Assembly, it would further sink Israel's international reputation and provide additional fodder for the campaign to delegitimize Israel.

"The Palestinians will declare a state. Virtually the whole world will recognize it. And we will be left without security arrangements," Israeli Trade and Industry Minister Benjamin Ben Eliezer said Monday.

Israel's response to the challenge has been a combination of defiance and diplomacy.

"Like [prime minister David] Ben-Gurion, Netanyahu will not allow the United Nations, or any other organization, to dictate our borders," Israel's U.S. ambassador, Michael Oren, said last Friday. "They will be determined through negotiations."

JEWISH VALUES. GLOBAL IMPACT.
PROVIDING INSPIRATION TO THE NEXT GENERATIONS

THE CHARLES BRONFMAN PRIZE

ACCEPTING NOMINATIONS

November 1, 2010 to January 14, 2011

An internationally recognized panel of Judges selects the Prize recipient(s) and bestows an award of $100,000. For information about the nomination process, to download nomination guidelines and forms, and to read about prior recipients, please visit

WWW.THECHARLESBRONFMANPRIZE.COM

The Charles Bronfman Prize is a humanitarian award that celebrates the vision and endeavor of an individual or team under 50 years of age whose humanitarian work has contributed significantly to the betterment of the world. Its goal is to bring public recognition to young dynamic innovators whose Jewish values infuse their humanitarian accomplishments, providing inspiration for generations to come.

110 East 59 Street, New York, NY 10022 • 212.931.0127 • info@TheCharlesBronfmanPrize.com

Russian census to find large Jewish drop, expert predicts

JTA

MOSCOW — The Russian census under way will show a Jewish decline of as much as 25 per cent, a specialist on Russian Jewish demography predicts.

The estimate for the 2010 census by Mark Kupovetsky, director of biblical and Judaic studies at the Russian State University for the Humanities, is based on the stable decline of the Jewish population in Russia over the past years, as death rates rise and birth rates fall.

Kupovetsky told the Russian news agency RIA Novosti at a news conference last week that he believes the current census will show 40,000 to 60,000 fewer Jews than the 233,000 Jews from the most recent Russian census, in 2002. The first post-World War II census, in 1959, revealed 875,000 Jews.

Census workers frequently fail to ask respondents to declare their ethnic origins, Kupovetsky said.

Evgenia Mikhalyova, head of the Federal Jewish Cultural Autonomy, told JTA that she declared herself Jewish only to be asked by the interviewer, "Are you positive?"

Kupovetsky said the Jewish birth rate is dropping because the majority of the Jewish population is urbanized and families have one or two children.

According to the demographer, half of the Jewish population in Russia lives in Moscow and its suburbs, and 20 per cent lives in the St. Petersburg area. The rest reside in cities with populations over one million.

Ongoing assimilation is another reason for the decline of the Jewish population in Russia, according to Kupovetsky. Up to 90 per cent of Russia's Jewish children now come from mixed marriages, he said.

In addition, between the census of 1989 and that of 2002, about 40 per cent of the Jewish population left the country.

The potential inaccuracies notwithstanding, the census will serve as the only source of information about the numbers of the Jewish population in Russia because since the 1990s, no statistical data on mortality, marriages and birth have been collected based on ethnic groups.

Israel Briefs

Israeli team in Haiti

An Israeli team left last week for Haiti to assess Israeli aid programs in the aftermath of last winter's devastating earthquake on the island. The team from IsraAID – The Israel Forum for International Humanitarian Aid left despite a cholera outbreak in Haiti that has killed more than 200 and reached the outskirts of the capital city, Port-au-Prince. IsraAID medical staff members on the ground have been attending United Nations meetings to discuss the effect of the cholera on its aid programs in the region. IsraAID has had Israeli staff on the ground in Haiti since Jan. 16, four days after the earthquake. Its teams have provided services to thousands affected by the earthquake. From Haiti, the team will travel to New Orleans to take part in the Jewish Federations of North America's General Assembly.

Jordan bars kippot

Israelis have been asked to leave their kippot at the border when entering Jordan, Ynet reported. An Israeli businessman told Ynet that his kippot were taken and put in a safe upon entry into Jordan, with a police officer telling him that it was for his own good. Tfillin and other religious articles also aren't allowed into the country. A spokesperson at Israel's Foreign Ministry, told Ynet that there were "disagreements with our Jordanian counterparts in regards to Jewish religious objects" entering the country. "We receive a growing number of complaints by Israeli visitors who report of religious items being confiscated at the border crossing 'for security reasons,'" he told Ynet. "They explain this by the need to protect visitors carrying 'obvious Israeli identification means.'"

Aliyah funds pledged

The Jewish Agency for Israel has pledged funds to bring the remaining Ethiopian Jews waiting in transit camps to Israel. Some 8,700 Ethiopians claiming Jewish ancestry are waiting to make aliyah. The Jewish Agency allocated $4.7 million to assist in bringing the Ethiopians, known as Falash Mora, to Israel during a vote last week at the organization's board meeting in Jerusalem. The Israeli cabinet is expected to approve the absorption of the remaining Ethiopians during next week's regular meeting. Ashkenazi Chief Rabbi Shlomo Amar and Rabbi Ovadia Yosef have confirmed their Jewish status. Israeli officials have said this will be the last mass immigration of Falash Mora.

Hezbollah spy convicted

A leading Arab-Israeli political activist has admitted to spying for Hezbollah. Amir Makhoul, director general of Ittijah-the Union of Arab Community-Based Associations, an umbrella group for Arab non-governmental organizations in Israel, admitted to charges of espionage, contact with a foreign agent and conspiring to assist an enemy in a plea bargain reached in Haifa District Court. Makhoul reportedly gave his Hezbollah handlers the exact location and layout of two Shin Bet facilities and a Mossad intelligence agency office. He reportedly admitted to meeting with a Hezbollah operative in Denmark, when he agreed to start collecting information on Israeli security services for the terror group. Sentencing is Dec. 5. The state is seeking a 10-year jail sentence, the maximum, while the defence wants seven.

Prime Minister's Office
Ministry of Immigrant Absorption
Ministry of Industry, Trade & Labor

For details about the program, visit our website:
www.klita.gov.il

It's Time to Return Home

The Government of Israel has formulated unprecedented Benefits and Assistance especially for Israelis who have lived abroad for more than 5 years and want to return home.

And now for something completely different: HEEBONICS

'Outdoors guy' goes climbing for cancer

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

When Hart Togman's cousin was diagnosed with Hodgkin's lymphoma, he went climbing for the cause.

Through his charity Summit for SickKids, the 23-year-old has to date raised $14,764 for the Hospital for Sick Children. The money is being split between the hospital's cancer genetics program and the oncology division at the hospital.

The cancer genetics program is the first of its kind in a pediatric academic health sciences centre. The program helps people with a family history of cancer by assessing how at risk they are for developing cancer and makes recommendations for monitoring high-risk patients and their families.

Togman's desire to raise money for the hospital came from seeing first-hand how SickKids staff looked after patients.

"After being at SickKids for a while and seeing [my cousin] go through what he went through and the care that SickKids gave to every one of their patients... I decided that I wanted to do something to help out."

In September, Togman and a friend climbed Mount Rainier in Washington state on what was initially supposed to be a climb of 3-1/2 days.

"Late into the second day... some weather blew in. We didn't hit the summit, which was our original goal, only secondary to raising the money. We had to weather out a storm, which ended up being 150-kilometre-an-hour winds, with temperatures dropping way into the minus... On our guide's advice, we had to come off the mountain," he said.

Hart Togman, left, and Itan Saffer climbed Mount Rainier in Washington state to raise funds for the Hospital for Sick Children.

Despite not reaching the mountain summit, Togman still reached his "financial summit," as he put it.

"My personal goal was to raise $14,411, which equals $1 per foot of the mountain... Because we financially 'summitted' the mountain, we started planning for a 2011 climb.

"The experience was life changing," he added.

Togman has previous mountain climbing experience – he climbed Mount Kilimanjaro in Tanzania in 2008 – but said climbing Mount Rainier was an entirely different experience.

"This was my first real alpine environment," he said. "It wasn't as intense of a climb [as Kilimanjaro], though it was higher. It's a very different environment. This climb was glaciated... and the weather was a lot harder to deal with."

Training to take on the 14,000-foot mountain was an intense process that began five months in advance. It consisted of Togman going to the gym three days a week, doing a lot of cardio exercises and spending one day every two weeks hiking. About a month before setting out on the real climb, he started climbing ski hills around Toronto.

"I would go out for the day and put on a pack and do two, three, sometimes four – once or twice five hours – up and down the ski hills," he said.

For Togman, being outdoors is something he's well acquainted with. Aside from mountain climbing, he is an avid rock climber, camper and hiker. "Pretty much a typical outdoors guy," he said.

The Summit for SickKids is still accepting donations – the goal is to raise $25,000 – and will continue to do so until the end of November, at which point a teaser page for the 2011 climb will go online.

Of the almost $15,000 raised so far, more than $5,000 of that came from a fundraising evening, Party at Base Camp, held at Toronto's London Tap House this past August.

With the success of the 2010 summit, Togman hopes to turn the climb into an annual event. Planning for 2011 has already started, with more climbers taking part this time around.

"We're going to start over again. We're adding to our climbing team, there are a couple more guys that want to come out. Hopefully, we're going to grow from here."

Togman, who works at the advertising agency MacLaren McCann, hopes to get the Jewish community involved in the Summit, especially now that he hopes to make it a yearly event. Volunteers are always welcome, especially to help out with fundraising and event planning.

Togman's goal for the Summit for SickKids, he says, is to help out not only now but in the future as well.

"My idea was not only to help the kids in the department today, but to hopefully do something for future generations."

Visit www.summitforsickkids.com for more information about the Summit for SickKids. The Hospital for Sick Children's Cancer Genetics Program website is at www.sickkids.ca/cancergeneticsprogram.

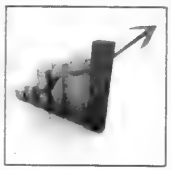
Business

Innovation summit aims to link Israeli, Canadian firms

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

The government of Ontario spent north of $1 billion on eHealth with little to show for it, but in Israel the electronic collection of medical data is a done deal. An Israeli high-tech firm accomplished what we are still waiting for in Ontario, proving there is plenty Canadians can learn from Israelis when it comes to implementing good ideas in high tech.

So said Jerry Grafstein, the retired Canadian senator who partnered with Raphael Hofstein, president and CEO of MaRS Innovation, to put together a one-day "Innovation Summit" last week. Speaking at the MaRS Discovery District on College Street, Grafstein told The CJN the summit was meant to promote the creation of high-tech jobs in Canada and increased co-operation with Israeli firms active in knowledge industries.



"Within 100 yards is some of the best research in the world, but they are slow to bring it to commercialization. Canada is great in per capita education and in research," he said. "We fail in transferring research from universities to commercial applications."

The summit examined a number of startups and looked at the financial and mentoring support they required to become successful enterprises.

The event, given the theme "Creating Jobs in the Knowledge Economy," brought together representatives from a number of Toronto hospitals, entrepreneurs, venture capitalists and government officials. It also included an Israel-focused panel discussion on "Modern Approaches to Technology Transfer." Panelists included Yigal Erlich, CEO of Yozma Ventures; Nissim Darvish, CEO of Orbimed (Israel) and Yaacov Michlin, president and CEO of Yissum of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem. Hofstein served as moderator.

Michlin noted that Yissum, the technology transfer company of Hebrew U, has been responsible for registering 6,100 patents, 1,750 inventions and 450 licenses, while spinning off 68 firms.

It is among the top 15 technology transfer companies in the world.

Yissum aims at finding a practical, commercially viable application for the scientific research conducted at Hebrew U, he continued. Hebrew U is responsible for 43 per cent of Israel's biotechnology research and 30 per cent of all Israeli academic scientific research.

Historically, scientists came up with a good idea, patented a product and waited around for outsiders to request a licence to use it. Yissum, Michlin said, "takes products off the bench" and commercializes them.

Unlike the older, passive approach, Yissum goes out to find funding for projects at different stages of development, assures adequate research and development support, and makes sure the project get proper consulting advice.

Looking at 2009 alone, Michlin said 120 new projects were created, 90 of them with potential commercial value. Sixty of those required further R&D and funding, and 30 were eventually commercialized, either through licensing agreements with other firms or by creating spinoffs companies to produce and market the products.

Orbimed CEO Darvish said the company is a venture capital firm that invests in small businesses, grows them and sells them to larger businesses in the field. According to its website, Orbimed is the world's largest health-care investment firm, with more than $50 billion (US) under management.

Yozma CEO Erlich said that "Israel has complete solutions for seed money and for transfer of technology. There is funding for venture capital and private equity. All you need to start a company is there."

Yozma, perhaps the earliest Israeli entrant into the venture capital field, makes equity investments in technology companies, particularly in communications, information technology, and the life-sciences sectors.

Asked why there seemed to be a pattern of Israeli companies being sold off before they got very big, Erlich replied it was something that "does not bother me. I think this is something you can't mix into. It's natural.

"As a venture capitalist, you do not know if a company will succeed or not."

He said the Israeli economy has benefited from the entry of large foreign firms that acquired Israeli startups. Prior to the 1990s, there were maybe 10 international companies in the country. They came for the cheap workforce and government research funds. Today, there are about 300 big-name foreign companies doing business in Israel. "Most came by acquiring smaller companies," he said.

In concluding remarks, Israeli economic consul and trade commissioner Jonathan Levy suggested Israel had become an international innovation hub because "there is tolerance for failure. That's something crucial and in entrepreneurship, that is part of the learning process."

In addition, Israel is a small market for local companies, who have to think internationally to do well.

Levy said that in recent years, the premiers of Quebec and Ontario have visited Israel with an eye to examining Israeli innovations, while premiers from British Columbia, Saskatchewan and Alberta are expected to visit soon.

Two Canadian business delegations are participating this week in a nano-technology conference and in a homeland security conference this week, while Israeli software firms visit Toronto.

High tourism volume stresses hospitality industry

By IRIT ROSENBLUM
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

JERUSALEM — October could turn out to have been the country's best month for tourism in a decade, approaching the record set in October 1999 on the eve of the second intifadah, with more than one million hotel nights.

But the 350,000 tourists are maxing out the capacity of the country's hotels and placing incredible stress on service, which is suffering as a result, industry professionals say.

Hotel capacity in Jerusalem and Tel Aviv is approaching 90 per cent. Jerusalem hoteliers are begging their peers in the city to take their overflow, since they're subjected to heavy fines if they book rooms for groups they later have no room for. Tour guides and drivers are being sent to sleep at their own homes, not at hotels with their groups.

Some tourists are even being sent to sleep in Ashkelon and Be'er Sheva, instead of Tel Aviv and Jerusalem.

This year, Israel is expected to host more than 3.2 million tourists, said Tourism Minister Stas Misezhnikov at the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) tourism conference in Jerusalem recently.

That's 500,000 more than visited in 2009. Now that Israel has joined the OECD, which officially makes it a developed country, it's pulling in more tourists. May and October are peak tourist season in Israel.

"The demand shows that we don't have enough hotel rooms and that we're at maximum capacity in peak tourist season," said Oren Drori, head of the ministry's marketing division.

Israel is seeing an increase in tourism from the United States and Russia, as well as from emerging markets including Brazil, India and South Korea. They include pilgrims as well as people interested in Israel's culture, he said.

The country is planning to build another 9,000 hotel rooms by 2015, said Misezhnikov.

It's not the quantity of tourists that matters, but who the tourists are, said Ami Etgar, the director general of the Israel Incoming Tour Operators Association.

Visitors in October rent more hotel rooms than summer tourists, many of whom are French Jews who own or rent apartments, he said.

The country doesn't have enough infrastructure to handle the amount of tourists in October, Etgar said.

"The quality of service in October isn't good," he added. "Groups are waiting an hour and a half at Ben-Gurion International Airport and the Old City of Jerusalem is very crowded."

450 Tel

Call home for the holidays.

JUST DIAL 10•18•450

Canada, USA & Israel

20 min. for 50¢ per call

Start using 450Tel today. Dial 10•18•450 before your long distance call.

Calls to cellular phones in some international destinations or special country code terminations are billed at a higher rate. Rates effective January 1/09 and subject to change without notice. 450Tel™ rates are the same, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week. All calls under the 20 minute program will be billed at 50¢. Thereafter, all calls are billed in one minute increments; rates vary by country. Please dial toll-free 10-18-450-0 or 647-435-2477 to confirm that 450Tel™ long distance is available from your area.

Saul Mimran brought affordable fashions to Canadians

Mimran Group cranks out an eclectic line of licenced products

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Saul Mimran has changed the face of the Canadian apparel industry.

By all accounts, he and his brother, Joe, brought the concept of affordable, ready-to-wear fashion – some call it "cheap chic" – to consumers in Canada.

In league with designer Alfred Sung, Saul and Joe, who work independently today, unveiled a line of simple yet elegant clothes in 1985 with the launch of Club Monaco, which has since been purchased by the American company Polo Ralph Lauren.

Although the brothers parted ways after selling Club Monaco – which took the Canadian market by storm and set new standards of style – they remain partners in the Mimran Group, of which Saul is president.

The proprietor of the Alfred Sung trademark, the Toronto-based, privately owned Mimran Group cranks out an eclectic line of licenced products ranging from clothes and fragrances to eyewear and fashion accessories.

The licencing system, which supplanted the factories closed by the Mimran Group in 1990 and 1991, has been successful.

"We just changed our strategy," said Saul in an interview in a midtown café. "We reinvented ourselves into a modern entity."

Born in Morocco, Saul has been in the fashion business since 1976, the year he and his mother, Esther, a designer/couturier who worked for a French fashion chain in Casablanca, joined forces to create Ms. Originals.

Saul, 60, and his family arrived in Canada shortly after Morocco was granted independence by France in 1956.

Before he and his mother created Ms. Originals, Saul – a York University dropout who had studied sociology – was a concert promoter, having brought performers such as Santana and Chicago to Toronto. He was also, albeit briefly, an advertising salesman for The CJN.

Saul learned the fundamentals of the business by talking to people in the needle trade. "I found them to be interesting and smart," he recalled. "They were my inspiration."

Ms. Originals, which was eventually folded into the Mimran Group, specialized in cocktail dresses.

Esther designed the gowns, and Saul was in charge of sales and promotion. Joe, an accountant, came aboard in 1978 as an equal partner.

Saul's father, Elie, worked in warehousing and administration for a grocery chain. He was never involved in Ms. Originals.

Ms. Originals evolved into something much bigger after Alfred Sung was hired in 1979. Born in Shanghai and raised in Hong Kong, Sung studied in Paris and New York before becoming a designer for a Manhattan dress manufacturer and Toronto sportswear firm. Veering off on his own, he opened a small boutique, Moon, in Yorkville, a fashionable district in downtown Toronto.

Joe, taking a stroll in Yorkville one night after dinner, stumbled upon Moon. It was a revelatory moment that would rock Canadian fashion.

Saul, like Joe, was impressed by Sung's exceptional fashion illustration skills. "I thought, 'This is a real talent,'" said Saul.

By coincidence, the Mimrans were searching for a new designer. "We invited Alfred to meet us," said Saul.

The meeting went well and Sung joined Ms. Originals as an equal partner.

"Right off the bat, we got along well," said Saul. "And after 30 years of partnership, I'm proud to say that we have a close, collaborative relationship. We respect each other's abilities."

In 1980, they formed the Monaco Group, which would develop the Alfred Sung brand and the stylish yet affordable collection of tailor-made clothes for working women.

Not long afterward, the Alfred Sung label was introduced in the United States through such major department stores as Saks Fifth Avenue, Macy's, Bergdorf Goodman, Neiman Marcus and Nordstrom's.

Club Monaco, which ultimately ballooned into a 125 global store chain, soon emerged. Thanks to an aggressive advertising campaign and the allure of lower-cost, off-the-rack clothes, which were made in Hong Kong, Club Monaco was an immediate hit and flourished.

"We were astounded by the reception," said Saul. "Shoppers were interested. We felt we had a future."

In 1986, the three partners diversified, launching a series of signature perfumes. Today, through about 10 licencees with factories mainly in China, the Mimran Group sells dozens of products, including home décor, kitchenware, furniture and bedding.

Two years ago, with an eye on competitors such as H&M and Zara, the Mimran Group unveiled the Pure Alfred Sung line at Zellers. This past August, the Moon line went on sale at the Bay.

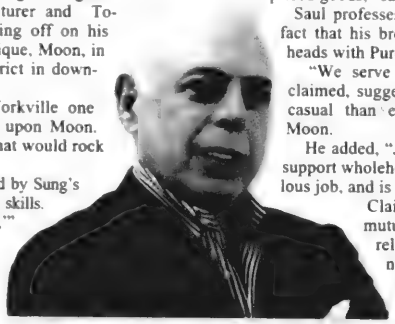
"Today, there's no shame in selling lower-priced goods," said Saul. "They're popular."

Saul professes not to be bothered by the fact that his brother's Joe Fresh line butts heads with Pure Alfred Sung and Moon.

"We serve two different markets," he claimed, suggesting that Joe Fresh is more casual than either Pure Alfred Sung or Moon.

He added, "Joe chose to go solo, which I support wholeheartedly. He's done a marvellous job, and is a true talent."

Claiming that he and Joe have a mutually loving and supportive relationship, he brushes off the notion that sibling rivalry defines their relations today.



Saul Mimran

Much to his delight, two of his three children work alongside him. "I feel blessed working with them," he said.

Jordin, 28, a graduate of the Ontario College of Art and Design, is the creative director of Moon and a designer of the home line. Tamara, 26, a McGill University graduate who majored in business, heads the merchandising department of Moon and Pure Alfred Sung.

Zoe, 22, a recent McGill graduate, is forging her own path. "She's looking to be a competitor. She wants to do her own thing. She loves fashion. It's in her blood."

Saul described his wife, Ann, as the "home manager." He said always consults her when he is ready to make a business decision.

Nearly 35 years after forming Ms. Originals, his first foray into the world of fashion, Saul is still going strong.

"I feel energetic," he said. "There is still plenty of stuff to do."

PLANNING FOR RETIREMENT?

Are you dismayed by low interest rates, but nervous about Equity Investing?
Huge bargains still exist in Equity markets!
They can be safely accessed by using a good, solid, diversified portfolio of Blue Chip Mutual Funds.
Let us show you how!

Year-end tax planning could save you money!
Now is the time to review your taxable income and make adjustments.

Don't wait until the last minute!
For a free consultation with no obligation, call 416-221-0060
MUTUAL FUNDS PROVIDED BY GOLDSTEIN FINANCIAL INVESTMENTS INC.

Creative Ideas in Financial Planning

Madness film fest features two Jewish-themed movies

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

The 18th edition of the Rendezvous with Madness Film Festival is showcasing two movies that will be of particular interest to Jewish filmgoers.

The first, Prisoner of Her Past, focuses on a Holocaust survivor suffering from post-traumatic stress disorder. The second, On Leave, is about an emotionally disconnected Israeli soldier.

Both will be screened on Sunday, Nov. 7, starting at 1 p.m. at Workman Hall, 651 Dufferin St.

Howard Reich's Prisoner of Her Past concerns his mother, Sonia, a prickly widow who refuses to acknowledge, much less discuss, her horrific past as a Jewish child in hiding.

Reich, the jazz critic of the Chicago Tribune, has had a fraught relationship with her.

"I'm absolutely not crazy," declares Sonia, who has lived in a nursing home since the death of her husband, the only person she ever fully trusted.

Though she's not deranged, Sonia has been markedly affected by her experiences during the war.

She was born in Dubno, a town in eastern Poland before World War II. Certain that the Nazis would murder its 12,000 Jewish inhabitants, Sonia's mother sent her away, hoping she would somehow survive. Sonia's mother was right. The Jews of Dubno, having been stripped naked, were machine-gunned and thrown into pits.

The details about Sonia's flight from the ghetto and her survival in a hostile environment are absent from the film, since Sonia won't talk about them.

Sonia is "fighting" the past, refusing to come to terms with it. And therein lies the problem of her secret childhood.

The symptoms of her debilitating disorder are apparent. She's paranoid, convinced she's still being stalked by Nazis. She stares out the window, "guarding" her dwelling and "protecting" her two children. She hoards bread, lest there is no food tomorrow.

One-third of the way into this absorbing documentary, Reich travels to Poland and Ukraine, where Dubno is now located due to shifting borders. He hopes to unravel the mystery of his mother's childhood.

His travelling companion, Leon, is a resident of Warsaw and a blood relative who grew up with Sonia.

Though they gather some information about the Holocaust in Dubno, a miserable backwater, they are no wiser about Sonia's childhood.

Sonia Reich in Prisoner of Her Past, to be screened at the Rendezvous with Madness Film Festival in Toronto.

She remains an enigma. Had she been medically treated, she might have been receptive to her troubled past.

• • •

Asat Saban's 20-minute Hebrew-language short, On Leave, unfolds menacingly.

Yotam, an Israeli soldier completing his national service, returns home for a break. His parents berate him for not having been in touch. He hardly says a word. He and his girlfriend, Noa, spend time together, taking a motorbike ride and making love in a field. Noa wants to talk, but Yotam is characteristically monosyllabic. Returning from their jaunt in the countryside, they go back to his parents' house. Table talk ensues, followed by an utterly shocking event.

The ending is explosive yet hackneyed, marring On Leave.

For more information about the film festival, visit www.rendezvouswithmadness.com.

Taut thriller about Iraq's weapons of mass destruction

Doug Liman's taut political thriller, Fair Game, unfolds as the 2003 war in Iraq draws menacingly closer.

Scheduled to open in Toronto on Nov. 5, the film rehashes the controversy over Iraq's alleged arsenal of weapons of mass destruction.

It also brings into focus the attendant scandal that engulfed Valerie Plame, a covert Central Intelligence Agency agent assigned to monitor Iraq's nuclear program, and her husband, Joe Wilson, a former U.S. diplomat whom the CIA recruited to corroborate rumours that Baghdad had acquired fissile material from Niger.

The scandal erupted when Robert Novak, a syndicated columnist, blew Plame's cover and forced her to resign. She was, as the film's title suggests, "fair game." Novak obtained the scoop from highly placed U.S. government officials, including the vice-president's chief of staff, Lewis Libby, who sought to punish Plame's husband by "outing" the agent.

Wilson incurred the wrath of the Bush administration by publishing an op-ed piece in the New York Times denying that Iraq had acquired 500 tons of yellowcake uranium ore from Niger, an impoverished African country.

Wilson's article undercut claims by the United States that Iraq was working to build an atomic bomb, one of the reasons cited for launching the invasion of Iraq. With the scandal simmering, Libby was convicted of obstruction of justice, fined and thrown into prison. President George W. Bush commuted his sentence, spelling finis to a sordid chapter in American politics.

Fair Game, which is set in Washington, D.C., Kuala Lumpur and three Arab capitals, opens as Wilson (Sean Penn), a retired diplomat once posted to Baghdad, is asked to investigate allegations that Saddam Hussein has bought yellowcake ore from Niger.

As he pokes around Niger, a nation whose hotel bathroom taps emit muddy water, Plame (Naomi Watts), who is blessed with brains and grit, engages her colleagues in a debate as to whether Iraq is already in the process of manufacturing a nuclear device.

In the quest to answer this burning question, Plame contacts an Iraqi nuclear scientist in Cairo who's passing himself off as an innocuous Egyptian scholar, and tries to recruit the sister of an Iraqi nuclear physicist working for Saddam.

Plame's intention is to compile a list of Iraqi nuclear scientists and whisk them out of Iraq for debriefings and resettlement in the United States. As she goes about her business, Libby attempts to determine whether aluminum tubes purchased by Iraq can be used in a centrifuge to enrich uranium.

Having ascertained that Iraq's nuclear program was destroyed in the 1991 Gulf War and its aftermath, Plame informs her boss that Iraq is free of atomic weapons. Wilson, meanwhile, submits his piece to the New York Times after Bush, in his State of the Union speech, falsely claims that Iraq bought yellowcake ore from Niger.

At this point, Fair Game goes into high drive as Plame's elaborate cover is blown away and her career and marriage unravel.

The film, in essence, is a cautionary tale and object lesson in betrayal.

Plame, having been reassigned after Novak's exposé, can no longer assure the personal safety of the Iraqi scientists and expedite their flight to the United States. "It's all over," her boss says coldly, leaving Plame high and dry in questionable moral terrain.

Plame, unlike her voluble husband, remains silent and loyal to her masters, refusing to sully the image of the CIA. "You can't pick a fight with the White House," she says, imploring Wilson to be quiet. But eventually, she has a change of heart.

Fair Game, whose realistic tone includes news clips of Bush and his vice-president, Dick Cheney, adopts a hard-hitting approach to the topic at hand, and is critical of U.S. foreign policy. Top-drawer performances from Watts, Penn and the rest of the cast enhance its quality.

Fair Game is the latest addition to a fairly long list of Hollywood films whose theme has turned on the war in Iraq. More are bound to follow. – S.K.

CJN Snowbirds

1) Arrange for Canada Post to forward The CJN to your winter address with the rest of your regular mail.

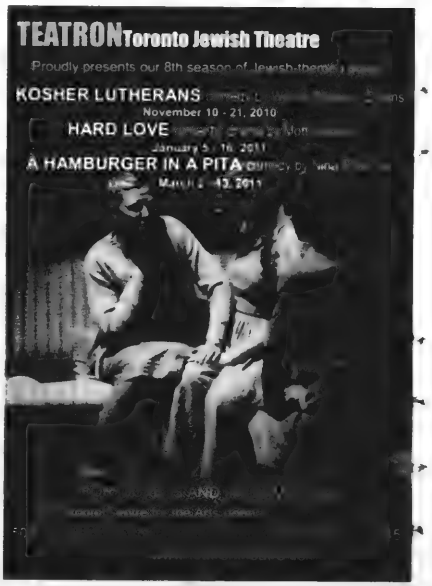
2) Advise our Circulation Department to suspend delivery until you return to Canada with your expiry automatically extended. You can still access the eCJN while away.

3) Arrange for our Circulation Department to redirect The CJN to your winter address at a cost of $10.00 per month for U.S. and foreign addresses.

This charge – payable by cheque, Visa, Mastercard or American Express before departure covers the cost of additional postage incurred for out of country mailings.

Fax changes in your delivery to 905-946-1679 or call the Circulation Department at 1-866-849-0864 allowing two weeks notice.

FLORIDA, ARIZONA, CALIFORNIA, CANADA
WE SEND YOUR CAR & CONTENTS (and return)
CALL 416-225-7754
www.torontodriveaway.com
TORONTO DRIVEAWAY AND TRUCK SERVICE
5803 Yonge St., #101
North York M2M 3V5
Since 1959



EYE ON ARTS

By BILL GLADSTONE

HAROLD GREEN JEWISH THEATRE PRESENTS EVENING WITH ANDREA MARTIN

Harold Green Jewish Theatre Company presents One Night Only, The Sequel – An Evening of Songs from Jewish Composers, hosted by Andrea Martin. Performers featured at the fundraising event include the Yiddish group Sisters of Sheynville and the Toronto Music Theatre Youth Choir. Jane Mallett Theatre, St. Lawrence Centre, Monday, Nov. 22, 7:30 p.m. $118, $154. 416-366-7723, www.stlc.com

• • •

Choosing Life in Canada: Robert Eli Rubinstein discusses his book, An Italian Renaissance: Choosing Life in Canada, an account of how his Holocaust survivor parents succeeded in reconstructing their shattered lives in Toronto. Shaarei Shomayim Congregation, 470 Glencairn Ave. Free admission. Sunday, Nov. 7, 8 p.m. 416-633-5770, www.torahinmotion.org

• • •

Dead Sea Scrolls Online: As part of its 20th anniversary celebrations, the Israel Antiquities Authority (IAA) is launching a unique project, the Leon Levy Dead Sea Scrolls Digital Library, to make all of the Dead Sea Scrolls available over the Internet.

With major funding from the Leon Levy Foundation and others, the IAA is using advanced technologies to "image" the entire collection of 900 manuscripts comprising about 30,000 Dead Sea Scrolls fragments in hi-resolution and multiple spectra. The Google R&D Centre in Israel is assisting the IAA to upload the digitized images to the Internet in a fully searchable format.

• • •

Names in the News: Singer-songwriter Evan Malach took a wrong turn last winter while working for the Olympics in Whistler B.C. He found himself lost in Blackcomb Mountain backcountry and spent 28 frigid hours in the wilderness without food, water or a cellphone before finding tracks that led him to safety.

After coming face to face with his own mortality, Malach says he has found the inspiration to kick his music career into high gear. Feeling "a newfound respect for the preciousness of time," he decided to finish his band Stone Angel's first CD.

Malach performs with several local musical acts on Nov. 11 at the Cadillac Lounge, 1296 Queen St. W. $10, $15; doors open 7 p.m. The story of his survival quest that has fuelled his new outlook on life is being featured in SUN TV's new series Callout, Sunday, Nov. 21.

• • •

Arts in Brief

• Planet Music is a series of three lectures on world music for the armchair traveller. Miles Nadal JCC, three Thursdays, Nov. 4, 11 and 18, 7 to 8:30 p.m. Drop-in fee $18 per lecture. 416-924-6211, ext. 0.

• Lenin's Embalmers is an "absurdist, savagely funny dark comedy" about two Jewish scientists chosen by the Committee for Immortalization to embalm Vladimir Lenin after his death in 1924. Presented by the Harold Green Theatre Company at the Miles Nadal JCC, Al Green Theatre. On stage now until Nov. 21. $49 to $76. www.stlc.com, 416-366-7723.

• Film critic Shlomo Schwartzberg discusses "The Cinema of Israel" and shows film clips in a Media Monday presentation at the Miles Nadal JCC. On Nov 8., 7 to 9 p.m., the topic is "Political Films" (Cup Final, Walk on Water, Waltz with Bashir) Drop-in fee $12. 416-924-6211, ext. 606, www.mnjcc.org.

Fern Lindzon

• Fern Lindzon performs A Little More Brazilian Music with Bill McBirnie, Louis Simao and Silas Silva at Chalkers Pub, 247 Marlee Ave. at Glencairn; cover $10. Saturday, Nov. 6, early evening to 9 p.m. Lindzon also performs with Sisters of Sheynville at the Reservoir Lounge, 52 Wellington St. E., cover $5. 416-955-0887.

• • •

Passages: Joseph Stein, author of Fiddler On The Roof and more than a dozen other Broadway musicals, has died in Manhattan at the age of 98.

Stein won a Tony Award for Best Author of a Musical when Fiddler first debuted in 1965. The show pulled in another eight Tony awards.

After earning a degree in social work at Columbia University in 1937, he worked as a psychiatric social worker for a decade before branching into musical theatre. He began by writing some material for actor Zero Mostel, who played the original Tevya in the first Broadway production of Fiddler. He also wrote Enter Laughing, based on an autobiographical book by Carl Reiner, as well as the shows Zorba and Rags.

Singer-songwriter 'pushes out' her ninth CD

By KATHRYN KATES
Special to The CJN

Singer-songwriter Susan Cogan is launching her new album, The Fields of Friendship, on her daughter's birthday.

Her daughter, Ora, turns 28 on Nov. 7, the date of Cogan's CD release concert at Hugh's Room in Toronto.

"Twenty-eight years ago, I was going push, push, and now I'm pushing out The Fields of Friendship," says Cogan with a chuckle.

Born in Toronto but now based in British Columbia, Cogan has been working on the CD for a couple of years with Bob Cohen on guitar, Michael Rosen on drums and David Woodhead on bass. The songs fuse folk, jazz and world music.

"The uniting factor of these three guys is that they are all pros, fabulous musicians and that they all started out together in a high school band in Montreal," Cogan says.

"They hadn't played together since, but I was the link between them and it unfolded in this project. It was kind of a thrill to put these old friends together, and they sound really good. So, we recorded in Toronto, and it was really quite fun and fun for me to watch the reunion."

Other people playing on the album include daughter Ora, who sings and plays guitar on one track, as well as Cogan's friends, Tara MacLean and Brent Titcomb.

Ora, MacLean and Titcomb are slated to join Cogan on the Hugh's Room stage.

The Fields of Friendship includes 15 tracks, including a song in Hebrew called If The Wind, along with an English spoken-word poem recited by poet Joe Chandler.

Susan Cogan

"I get a lot of feedback from people who say they like to hear me sing in Hebrew, whether they are familiar with Hebrew or whether it is just an exotic sounding language for them," Cogan says.

After the release concert, she will be touring until the spring in support of the CD, her ninth, both as a solo act and with Cohen, Rosen and Woodhead, who are collectively known as The Weeds.

Cogan plans to release two more CDs soon: Lady Slipper, a jazz album, and an English version of the album Merciful Me in Canada, along with a Hebrew version in Israel.

For tickets to Cogan's record release, visit hughsroom.com/wordpress or call 416-531-6604. www.susancogan.com

Godard won't go to L.A. to pick up Oscar

JTA

LOS ANGELES — Film director Jean-Luc Godard will not appear in person to accept an honorary Oscar that some have urged be withdrawn because of views deemed anti-Semitic.

The news announced last week by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences elicited little surprise in Hollywood and came exactly two months after the academy's invitation to Godard kicked off a lively discussion about the New Wave filmmaker's alleged anti-Semitism and acknowledged anti-Israel record.

The charges were first examined by the Jewish Journal of Los Angeles and the Forward.

The Zionist Organization of America and other critics have pressed for the withdrawal of the award for the French-Swiss director.

Godard was to have been honoured at the academy's Governors Awards dinner in Los Angeles on Nov. 13, but he left the academy hanging for two months regarding whether he would attend.

Though an early admirer of Hollywood films, Godard in recent decades has expressed his contempt for the movie capital and harshly attacked director Steven Spielberg.

Cabaret performer releases her debut CD

BY KATHRYN KATES
Special to The CJN

Gabi Epstein is releasing her debut CD, Show Off, next month, and that's exactly what she's planning to do – show off her sultry voice to a wide audience.

Show Off, a cabaret CD filled with standards from the musical theatre repertoire, and sprinkled with pop and jazzy tunes, will be launched on Nov. 7 at Revival, 783 College St., Toronto, at 8 p.m.

After graduating from Montreal's McGill University with a bachelor of music degree, Epstein, an actor and singer, took to the musical stage, and to cabaret rooms, making a name for herself as one of Toronto's leading young solo cabaret performers. Epstein has performed at popular Toronto venues, including the Pantages Hotel, Trane Studio, and the Toronto Centre for the Arts, as well as at the historic Algonquin Hotel in New York City.

Show Off is produced by Canadian jazz singer John Alcorn and features Mark Kieswetter on piano, Artie Roth on bass, and Davide Direnzo on drums and percussion. Epstein's favourite track on the CD is You're Gonna Hear From Me, by André Previn, from the 1965 Natalie Wood movie, Inside Daisy Clover. Epstein was unfamiliar with the song before recording Show Off.

In addition to standards, Epstein also sings contemporary tunes on the CD, including the track I Would Have Wanted, written by her friend and colleague Zachary Florence.

"It became very apparent to me at an early age that other people were better writers than I was, and I was a better song stylist and reinterpret other people's material a lot better than writing my own," Epstein says.

"I especially love taking someone's brand-new material and making it my own. The song that Zachary wrote, I actually sang on a demo CD of his, of his brand-new material.

"The title Show Off is tongue-in-cheek, and is meant to let people know that I am a serious artist, but I don't need to be taken all that seriously," insists Epstein.

"It's fun and it's me. I never wanted to do the pop route. I love performing live in stage musicals, and this is an extra layer of that. In addition to performing as other people, when I'm acting in a musical, this is me performing as myself… sort of a heightened version of myself."

Epstein hopes that the release of Show Off will result in bookings of her live solo cabaret show both in Canada and the United States.

"One of the big influences of mine when wanting to do this record was the early albums of Barbra Streisand," says Epstein. "She just had that great Jewish cabaret flare that I love. So, what we actually wanted to do was to do a contemporary version of one of the very early Streisand records."

Epstein has a strong Jewish identity. "I kept my last name Epstein, because that is who I am and that is who I wanted to be through this album," she says.

"There are a couple songs that show my Jewish side, like I Would Rather Cha Cha Than Eat, and the last song on the CD, Laila Laila, is a Hebrew lullaby a song I used to sing at Camp Gesher, that I thought would be a nice way to end the album."

Epstein, who lives in Toronto's Annex neighbourhood, is also a children's vocal coach. She's the daughter of author Kathy Kacer and lawyer Ian Epstein, and the sister of the actor, singer and musician Jake Epstein.

Visit www.gabiepstein.com for more information about Epstein.

The Cover of Gabi Epstein's Show Off

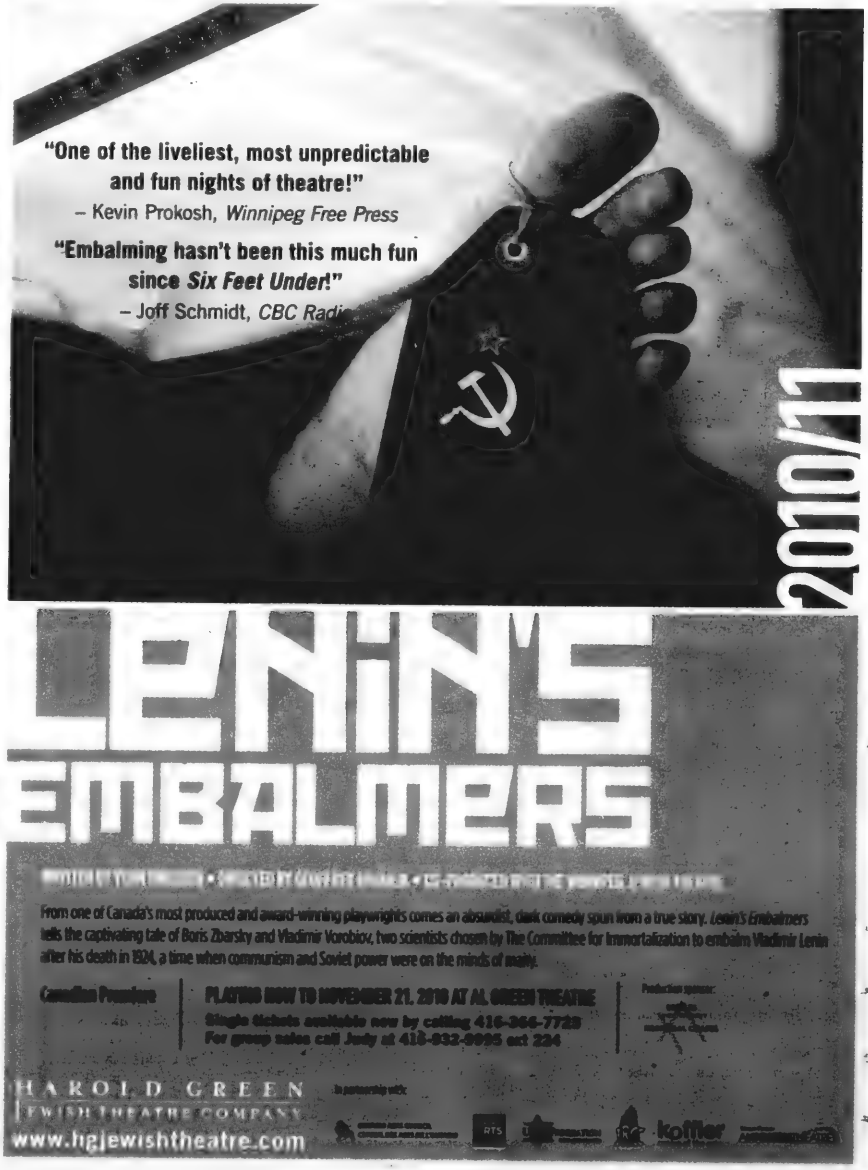
On cjnews.com

Chicks in Jeeps: Find out what happens when writer Rena Godfrey goes trekking in the Negev Desert on a jeep expedition.



"One of the liveliest, most unpredictable and fun nights of theatre!"
– Kevin Prokosh, Winnipeg Free Press
"Embalming hasn't been this much fun since Six Feet Under!"
– Joff Schmidt, CBC Radi
2010/11
LENIN'S EMBALMERS
From one of Canada's most produced and award-winning playwrights comes an absurdist, dark comedy spun from a true story. Lenin's Embalmers tells the captivating tale of Boris Zbarsky and Vladimir Vorobiov, two scientists chosen by The Committee for Immortalization to embalm Vladimir Lenin after his death in 1924, a time when communism and Soviet power were on the minds of many.
Canadian Premiere
PLAYING NOW TO NOVEMBER 21, 2010 AT AL GREEN THEATRE
Single tickets available now by calling 416-366-7723
For group sales call Judy at 416-932-9095 ext 224
HAROLD GREEN JEWISH THEATRE COMPANY
www.hgjewishtheatre.com

Soviet Jewish region in Siberia was a failed experiment

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Birobidzhan, the Jewish autonomous region established by the Soviet Union during the heyday of communism, was a flash-in-the-pan historically speaking.

But when this project was at its apogee in the 1920s and 1930s, it garnered the support of a surprising number of Jews in North America.

Two organizations in the United States devoted themselves body and soul to Birobidzhan's success – the Association for Jewish Colonization in the Soviet Union, which appealed to first- and second-generation working-class Jews of eastern European origin, and the American Committee for the Resettlement of Jews in Birobidjan, which catered to native-born, middle class Jews.

Henry Srebrnik

The two groups merged in 1946, but disbanded five years later amidst the raging Cold War and increased evidence of state-sponsored anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union.

Henry Srebrnik, a Canadian scholar, has written an original and absorbing book about their rise and fall. Dreams of Nationhood: American Jewish Communists and the Soviet Birobidzhan Project, 1934-1951, published by Academic Studies Press, is the first volume of its kind.

"My research aims to rectify this major gap in our knowledge of the Jewish left," writes Srebrnik, a professor in the department of political studies at the University of Prince Edward Island whose previous work, Jerusalem on the Amur, dealt with the pro-Birobidjhan movement in Canada.

Birobidzhan, in the sparsely inhabited wastes of eastern Siberia, was ostensibly a noble concept, coming to fruition after the Soviet leader Vladimir Lenin acknowledged that Jews were a legitimate nationality. In this spirit, a big chunk of territory was set aside for Jewish settlers willing and able to build socialism in an extremely remote region.

To calculating politicians in Moscow, Birobidzhan was not just a gauzy utopian experiment.

It was, in fact, a creature of Realpolitik, formed to help safeguard Siberia against a possible Japanese or Chinese invasion and neutralize Zionist fervour among Jews in the Soviet Union.

In an effort to attract still more Jews to Birobidzhan, Moscow promised to convert it into a full-fledged republic when its Jewish inhabitants comprised a majority of its population.

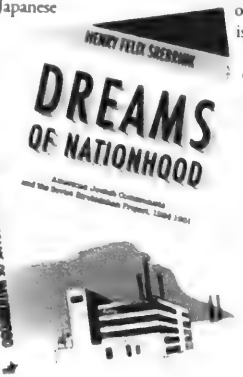
As might have been expected, Birobidzhan aroused widespread interest among Jews, both in the Soviet Union and abroad. Jews of all stripes, from liberals to Communists, responded to Soviet requests for support and material aid.

The Association for Jewish Colonization in the Soviet Union, known as ICOR, was founded in 1924. The American Committee for the Settlement of Jews in Birobidjan, or Ambijan, was created in 1934.

To Srebrnik, the formation of these groups remains a cautionary tale, at least in retrospect.

In an allusion to the Soviet Union, he observes, "It illustrates how otherwise intelligent, critical people were misled by an unscrupulous, indeed murderous, regime, and placed their hopes for a better world in the hands of people who turned out to be political criminals."

ICOR, with 12,000 members in 100 branches before World War II, was dedicated to achieving four objectives: assisting Jewish pioneers build a socialist Jewish republic in Birobidzhan; persuading Jews in the Diaspora to sympathize with and defend the Soviet Union, which was allegedly dedicated to eliminating anti-Semitism; helping Jewish victims of anti-Semitism, and exposing Zionism as a flawed, capitalist ideology.



Ambijan, boasting a membership of 1,000 in eight branches by 1939, was a popular-front organization that focused more on anti-fascist politics than on programs dealing with socialist construction. Its members regarded Birobidjhan as a potential haven for persecuted Jews in Europe.

A cavalcade of top-flight personalities embraced their vision, including the physicist Albert Einstein, the painter Marc Chagall and the U.S. senator Claude Pepper.

ICOR and Ambijan, as well as the entire Jewish Communist movement, were damaged by the Soviet Union's non-aggression pact with Germany, signed on the eve of the war. It was not only a bombshell but a devastating blow to their beliefs.

By the end of 1940, ICOR faced financial ruin, while Ambijan was forced to cease operations for a few years, Srebrnik says.

Their attitude to Zionism was ambiguous.

With the Holocaust having claimed the lives of six million Jews and with the Soviet Union having endorsed Jewish statehood in Palestine, pro-Birobidjhan figures could no longer perpetuate their hostility to Zionism. Indeed, Ambijan would eventually support "progressive" voices in Israel.

As Srebrnik points out, the postwar era would prove to be chilly for Jewish groups sympathetic to the Soviet Union.

Susceptible to the accusation that it was a dupe or agent of Moscow, Ambijan was increasingly marginalized. Not surprisingly, the Federal Bureau of Investigation monitored it closely.

Growing anti-Semitism in the Soviet Union, as exemplified by the Doctors' Plot, the closing of Jewish institutions, the purge of Jewish Communists and the murder of the actor Solomon Mikhoels, took its toll as well.

Ambijan closed in 1951, when animosity between the United States and the Soviet Union was at its height.

Amid all these adverse developments, Birobidjhan fared badly. When a New York Times correspondent visited Birobidjhan in 1954, he observed that it was bereft of "Jewish character" and had "lost its significance as a Jewish centre a long time ago." In a parting shot, he wrote that Birobidjhan was now part of the Soviet gulag system.

Summing up an experiment in social engineering that ultimately failed, Srebrnik writes: "As the State of Israel became the central and most important feature of postwar Jewish life, Birobidjhan receded into the mists of memory."

He tellingly adds, "The Jewish Communists, for all their ideals, their cleverness and their efforts, were never able to prove that a Soviet Jewish republic had actually emerged in the Far East. As Israel's star rose, so did groups like Ambijan ossify and wither away."

Touché.

CLASSIFIED DIRECTORY

5 HOUSES FOR SALE
10 HOUSES FOR SALE PRIVATE
15 HOUSES FOR RENT
20 HOUSES FOR SALE RENT
24 HOUSES WANTED TO BUY
25 HOUSES WANTED TO RENT
30 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE
35 CONDOMINIUM FOR RENT
40 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE RENT
45 CONDOMINIUM WANTED
50 ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
55 ACCOMMODATION WANTED
60 SHARED ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
65 SHARED ACCOMMODATION WANTED
66 ACCOMMODATION SWAP EXCHANGE
67 HOUSE SITTERS
70 UNIVERSITY ACCOMMODATION
75 APARTMENT FOR RENT
80 SHORT TERM RENTAL AVAILABLE
84 SHORT TERM RENTAL WANTED
85 APARTMENTS TO SHARE
90 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT
94 ROOM WANTED FOR RENT
95 APARTMENT WANTED
96 PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
100 COTTAGE FOR SALE
105 COTTAGE FOR RENT
110 COTTAGE FOR RENT SALE
115 COTTAGE WANTED
120 TIMESHARE FOR SALE
125 TIMESHARE FOR RENT
130 ARIZONA PROPERTIES
135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE
140 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT
145 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE RENT
146 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION WANTED
147 FLORIDA SHARES ACCOMM AVAIL
148 FLORIDA SHARES ACCOMM WANTED
149 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION
150 FLORIDA TRANSPORTATION
155 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE
160 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR RENT
165 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE RENT
170 ISRAEL PROPERTIES WANTED
175 ISRAEL ACCOMMODATION WANTED
180 ISRAEL TRANSPORTATION
185 OUT OF TOWN PROPERTIES
190 VACATION PROPERTY AVAILABLE
195 VACATION PROPERTIES WANTED
200 TIMESHARE PROPERTIES EACH SHARE
205 TIMESHARE LEASE
210 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY AVAILABLE
215 OFFICE SPACE AVAILABLE
220 OFFICE SPACE WANTED
225 STORAGE SPACE AVAILABLE
230 LAND FOR SALE
235 LAND LOTS FOR LEASE
240 INVESTMENT PROPERTIES
245 INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES
250 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES
255 BUSINESS FOR SALE
260 BUSINESS WANTED
265 CAREERS RECRUITMENT
270 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES
275 EMPLOYMENT WANTED
280 VOLUNTEERS
285 DAYCARE AVAILABLE
290 DAYCARE WANTED
295 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE
300 DOMESTIC HELP WANTED
305 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE
310 HEALTHCARE WANTED
315 SENIORS
320 BUSINESS PERSONALS
325 PEOPLE SEARCH
330 PERSONALS
335 CONVENTION SERVICES
340 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED
345 PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY
350 ANNOUNCEMENTS
355 LOST & FOUND
360 PETS
300 ARTICLES FOR SALE
305 ARTICLES WANTED
313 BOATS
315 CARS
320 CONTENTS SALE
325 GARAGE SALE

SERVICE DIRECTORY

345 ACCOUNTING
350 APPLIANCES
355 AUDIO-VISUAL SALES/REPAIRS
357 AUTOMOTIVE
358 BRIDAL
365 CARPENTRY
368 CARPETS
370 CATERING
372 CHUPPAHS
375 CLEANING/CLEANING SUPPLIES
379 CLOCKS/WATCHES
380 CLOTHING
382 COUNSELLING
385 COMPUTER
386 DANCING
387 DECORATING
390 DRIVING
392 DRY CLEANING/LAUNDRY
394 EDUCATION
395 ELECTRICAL
396 ELECTRONICS
400 ENTERTAINMENT
402 FINANCIAL
404 FITNESS & WEIGHT LOSS
405 FURNITURE
406 GARAGE DOORS
407 GIFTS
410 HEALTH & BEAUTY
412 HEATING/AIR CONDITIONING
415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS
416 HOME INSPECTION
419 INTERNET SERVICE
420 INVITATIONS/PRINTING/CALLIG
425 JEWELLERY
427 JUDAICA
430 LEASING
431 LANDSCAPING/LAWNCARE
432 LAWYERS
433 LESSONS
434 LIMOUSINE/TAXI
435 LIQUIDATION
438 LOCKSMITH
439 MAKE-UP
440 MISCELLANEOUS
442 MUSICAL SERVICES
443 MORTGAGES
445 MOVING
449 PEST CONTROL
450 PAINTING/WALLPAPERING
452 PARTY SERVICES
455 PHOTOGRAPHY/VIDEO
460 PLUMBING
465 PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
470 RENOVATIONS
472 RETIREMENT HOMES
475 ROOFING
478 SATELLITE & EQUIPMENT
480 SECURITY SYSTEMS
481 SEWING
485 SNOW REMOVAL
490 TABLE COVERING
493 TAILORING/ALTERATIONS
495 TILING
498 TRAINING
498 TRAVEL & TOURISM
500 TUTORING
510 UPHOLSTERY
512 WAITERING SERVICES
515 WATERPROOFING
520 WINDOW SERVICES
550 WORKSHOPS

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

Forest Hill

REAL ESTATE INC. - BROKERAGE

416-488-2875	416-785-1500	416-226-1987
Forest Hill Village	Central	Bayview

CENTRAL PROPERTIES

NEW HOME IN FOREST HILL ON BELT-LINE
3400' of Superb finishings + fin. w/o low level + 10' ceilings, hrdwd thru-out, 3 fireplaces, b/ins + more. A. Feldman* 416-488-2875

1ST AD! 227 HILLHURST BLVD! ALEXANDRA WOOD AREA!
$1,999,000! Incredible "Richard Wengle" Designed 5+2Br 5Bth W/ Attention To Detail! Fab 50x136' Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

29 RUSSELL HILL RD $1,595,000 JUST REDUCED $200K 10++
Totally Renovated, 3+1 Bdrms, 4 Bths, Mn Flr Fam Rm, 5pc Ens, W/in from Garage. Russell Pearsall* 416-488-2875

564 FAIRLAWN AVE CLOSE TO BATHURST $1,448,000
Stunning 6 ½ Yr Home w/4+1 Bdrms, Large Gourmet Kit, Fam Rm, Huge DR, Dble Garage. Caroline Bokar 416-785-1500

15 AUSTIN CRESCENT - STATELY 2 STOREY RESIDENCE
In Demand Neighbourhood, Splended Principal Rms, 4 Bdrms, Fin Lwr Level, 40' Frontage. Cheryl Sniderman* 416-488-2875

1ST AD! 80 UPPER CANADA DRIVE! YONGE N/YORK MILLS!
$719,000! Spectacular 1.5St 3+2Br 4Bth Centre Hall Res Nestled On An Amazingly Landscaped 60x150'! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

BAYVIEW PROPERTIES

201 WILLOWDALE AVENUE! JUST N/SHEPPARD!
$699,000! Impeccable 1.5St 3+1Br 3Bth W/Legal Nanny Ste! Fab 44x90.49' W/Much New Dev't In Area! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

EAST PROPERTIES

258 WESTVIEW BLVD! $635,000!
St Clair/O'Connor! Topham Park Area! Gorg'Us 4+1Br 4Bth W/Nanny Ste! Fab 35x120'! Move Right In! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

CONDOMINIUM PROPERTIES

NEW PRICE – FABULOUS FOREST HILL RENO $469,000
2+1 Bdrm, 2 Storey, 1900 sq ft, New Kit w/Granite Hrdwd Flrs, 2 Bths, 1Pkg Near Subway, Shops, Prks. S. Merrick* 416-480-2875

1ST AD! 1 AVONDALE AVE! YONGE S/SHEPPARD!
$379,000! Lux "Shane Baghai" 2Storey Lofts! Chic 1+1Br 2Bth W/Rare 2Car Prkg+Locker+Balcony! Move In! Sandon Schwartzben 416-226-1987

FABULOUS LIFE LEASE – 2 NEPTUNE, MOVE NOW!
Sunfilled 1 Bdrm, 1 Bth, W/I Closet, Great Activities/Programs for 65 yrs Plus. Lynne Elkind* 416-488-2875

Broker * Sales Representative

www.foresthill.com

REAL ESTATE Section

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

LESLIE DENNIS
Sales Representative
www.lesliedennis.com

Forest Hill
REAL ESTATE INC. • BROKERAGE
416-785-1500
Please Call Us For An Appointment

DANIEL GREENBAUM
Sales Representative
www.danielgreenbaum.com

UPPER VILLAGE GEM!

$939,000. Lovingly maintained family home on child friendly dead end block. Awaits someones personal touch. 4 Bedrooms, 3 Bathrooms, Private Drive, Detached Garage. Walking distance to Shuls and Subway.

LIVE IN, RENOVATE OR BUILD NEW!

FOR SALE BY OWNER
At reduced price, Bathurst - Lawrence Area

5+1 bedrooms, 5 baths, 3000 sq. ft. executive home on beautifully landscaped 41' x 124' lot, close to shuls, schools, kosher stores. Custom upgrades throughout, incl. hardwood floors, granite counters, crown mouldings, and marble fireplace.

By appt. 416-781-4115
No Agents Please

DAVID EICHORN
REALTY LIMITED BROKERAGE

416-787-1712

www.eichornrealty.com • david@eichornrealty.com

GREAT TIME TO LIST!
Call today for a free evaluation of your property.

RARE INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITY — NEW LISTING
BATHURST / LAWRENCE. Classic 6-plex on Meadowbrook Rd. Open balconies, 6 garages. Close to Spadina subway, TTC, shops, schools. Call for details! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

STRATHALLAN WOOD
Spacious custom built 4+1 bdrm family home in prestigious Lytton Park enclave. 4 baths, hrdwd flrs, combined lr/dr, gourmet kitchen with w/o to deck. Superior quality finishes thruout, ideal for entertaining! $1,149,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

* * *

ARMOUR HEIGHTS ESTATE SALE
Attn builders & renovators! Classic 3 bdrm, 2 storey on 41 x 130 ft lot in desirable location close to many newly renovated homes, TTC, shops, schools. $649,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

* * *

BATHURST / SHELBORNE — NEW PRICE
Exquisite brand new custom home, 3600+ sq ft. Attention to detail thruout. 5+1 bdrms, 6 baths, hrdwd flrs on 2 levels, sep entry to in-law suite. Fab design, ideal for entertaining & family use. A bright, spacious gem @ $1,299,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

2 COVINGTON CONDO
Highly sought after corner unit! Bright & spacious 2 bdrm, 2 baths, approx. 1150 sf, se exposure, upgraded finishes throughout. 2 parking spots, luxurious lobby, fantastic amenities. Close to Lawrence Plaza, TTC. $399,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

SOLD

BATHURST / LAWRENCE
Spacious 4 + 2 bedroom ranch bungalow on family-friendly street in prime central location close to TTC, shops, schools, shuls. 60 ft frontage, sep entry to fin bsmt, attached double garage. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

BATHURST / LAWRENCE
3 + 1 bdrm bungalow on generous 47 x 120 ft lot in desirable location surrounded by million $ homes. Live in now, build later — an ideal spot for your dream home. PRICED FOR IMMEDIATE SALE AT $549,000 — ACT NOW! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

2 NEPTUNE CONDO CORNER UNIT — NEW PRICE!
The ideal home for seniors. Eligible buyer must be 65+. Rare, bright & spacious 2 bdrm + den, 2 full baths, large lr/dr combo. Sw exposure. 24-hr security, amenities incl rooftop garden, library, exercise room, party room. Lowest priced 2 bdrm + den in building @ $329,000 — ACT NOW! Call Richard Cash, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

*BROKER OF RECORD

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

BAYVIEW/YORK MILLS - $2,299,000

Timeless Style in prime location!

South 60' X 175' Sun-Filled Lot! 4+1 bedroom, 6 bath, circular drive, 3 car garage, large principle rooms.

Robert Kroll
Re/Max Realtron Realty Inc. Broker
416-222-8600

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

SANTEL REALTY INC. (BROKERAGE) 416-441-2001

SKYMARK DON MILLS & FINCH

Skymark 55 – Zenith reno penthouse - approx. 1400 sq ft. 2 bdrm. + sol, 2 baths., skylight, enclosed bsmt. locker, 2 pkg. Todays price is tomorrows bargin. Hurry; reduced

SANTEL LEUNG, ERE (BROKER OF RECORD)

2 NEPTUNE DRIVE -Life Lease-CONDO

Residence for Active Independent Seniors
Great Programs and Activities to Enjoy
Very Spacious 1 Bedroom Suite
Facing Courtyard @ $179,000
Large Kitchen, Ensuite Laundry, Parking, Locker
www.rpt.ca/neptune815
For More Information contact
Amelia Ipp, Carol Shapiro & Shami Zimmerman
Sales Representatives
Royal LePage Partners Realty, Brokerage
416-229-4454

35 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

FURNISHED CONDO THORNHILL

2 BR. or 1 plus Large Den; 2 full baths, E.I.K. – All Reno'd: Oversized Laundry/Ensuite Locker; Wood Firs: Sunny Exposure; Walk to All; Suitable for Couple; Single; Buildg. Amenities & Utilities. Pkg.Incl. Shorter or Longer Term Lease poss.
PAULA G. BERNSTEIN, Sales Rep. Harvey Kalles R.E Ltd. 416-441-2888 ext. 228

Central North York, furn. 1 bdr. + den, balc., a/c + appls., new bldg., centrally loc., bus stop to subway in front of bldg., suit. for a prof. or sabbatical. Immed. 416-616-5195.

Bath/Lawrence - Beautiful Covington 2 br. 2 bth. Dec.1 $1600/mos 416-782-9797.

45 CONDO WANTED

Looking to rent/buy condo in Jewish area, not facing traffic, approx. 1200 sf, 2 bdrm., reno'd if in older bldg. Or I would consider sharing your home. Needed asap! 416-224-8406 leave message.

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

BATHURST-SHEPPARD
ELEGANT TWIN BLDS.
Very Vg. 1, 2, 3 Bedrooms, 2 & 3 Bdrms. w/2 balconies and 2 baths
Ample closets plus cedar. Roof laundry, pool, ravine setting
6 Apts. per flr
canyon@greenwimm.com
416-631-9277 416-631-0388

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

Bath/Lawrence - Beautiful Covington 2 br. 2 bth. Dec.1 $1600/mos 416-782-9797.

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

THIS IS A GREAT TIME TO BUY IN FLORIDA!

Make your dreams come true and take advantage of Bank Foreclosure Condos and Houses at 50-75% below market value!
We specialize in Miami, Miami Beach, Hollywood, Hallandale, Aventura, Ft. Lauderdale, Boca Raton and Delray.

CALL TODAY
Toll Free: 800 451-2150
(954) 818-9760; (305) 904-2366
Beachfront Realty

SO. FLORIDA CONDOS - PRICES REDUCED 30-50%

Aqualina-Beach Club-Coronado-Hamptons-Hemispheres- Hidden Bay-Jade-LaMer LaPerla-Mystic Pt-Oceana-Ocean-Oceanview-Ocean Palms-Olympus-Parker-Pinnacle Quadoman-Renaisannce-Residences-Turnberry-Summit-Trump-Wave....and others.
Personalized service. Canadian references provided.
Jerry Savlov, Licensed Realtor Optimar Int'l Realty (Sunny Isles, FL) Direct (954)540-5232
e-mail: jas2468@gmail.com www.jerrysavlov.com

DELRAY/BOCA
Addison Reserve
An Award Winning Country Club w/ Magnificent Homes from $400's to $4 mil.
CALL: Prudential Florida's On-Site Realtors Cherie & Larry Gross 561-702-7828 Or Visit Us @ HomesBuytheGross.com

Pembroke Pines, Florida - Hollybrook Golf and Tennis Club. 1 bedroom, 1 1/2 bathrooms. Free golf and tennis. Security. Just bring your toothbrush! Firm $55,000. 1-954-431-3253.

MIAMI BEACH NEW TO MARKET LARGE CONDO ON THE OCEAN GREAT TERRACE OCEAN VIEW David/Kotler Rlty. 305-895-3000

Century Vill. Boca 2 br., 2 bth. LR/DR. Excel. cond. Beau. decor. Florida rm. encl. Fully furn. delux bldg. Elevator. 416-512-0620.

Cent. Vill., Deerfield, Westbury F., 1 bdr., 1.5 bth., fully furn., waterview, walk dist. to synag. Very good cond. $69,900 US. Call 416-807-6055 or 289-553-1664.

FLORIDA IS ON SALE!! FREE AIRFARE @ closing. Come on down! Weather's warm, prices are at lowest, your loonies are cool! Call or email: Weinstein Team - 561-373-5977 or email Rose@WeinsteinFineHomes.com CENTURY 21 Tenace Realty.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Hollywood, totally renov & newly furn., 2 br., 2 bth., directly across from bch., nr. golf & casinos, lux. bldg., valet, secur., indr. pkg., outdoor pool, gym. $2,750 US/mo.++ 905-731-0609, email: dhcooper@yahoo.com

HOLLYWOOD FLORIDA JUST LISTED 954-816-8269. 2 bed. 2 bath. seasonal / annual. Walk to shuls, beach & downtown $2200/mo. bfaske@bellsouth.net

Aventura/Waterways. Intracoastal condo, designer's own, 2 bed., full svc. bldg., 2 pools, avail. immed. Call 212-585-0441.

Boca Raton. Spacious sunny 3 bedrooms, 2.5 bathrooms. 4 to 6 months. Available Jan. 3, 2011. Ocean clubhouse/new gym. $4,500 negotiable. Mary Ann 1-561-866-8544.

Delray Beach, mod., 2 bdr., 2 bth., 1 km to bch., trendy Atlantic Ave. Available Dec. - Apr. $2300./mo. Call 416-540-3176.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

BOCA RATON, FL
Century Village West
Seasonal/Annual Rental
End Unit Sunny Garden Condo 2 Bedroom 1.5 Upgraded Baths Newly Painted, Fully Furnished Walking Distance to Synagogues. Near Pool/Buses Avail Dec 1st.
Includes Amenities
Call Owner: 301-758-7750

Boynton Beach. Gated, adult comm., 2 bed., 2 bth., solarium, fully furn'd., avail. for season. 647-407-2987,416-785-8188 aaronlang@aaronlang.ca

Deerfield Beach, Century Village. One bedroom, 1 1/2 bathrooms. Furnished, excellent condition. Minimum 4 months. 514-278-8645; 514-488-2772.

Century Village, Boca Raton 2 Bedrooms, 1 1/2 bathrooms. Flexible dates (3 months preferred). 514-951-7466.

MIAMI BEACH SEASON RENTAL OCEANFRONT LARGE CONDO BALCONY DIRECT OCEAN VIEW BEAUTIFUL. 305-895-3000

Hallandale - Florida. Luxurious oceanfront condo for rent, sleeps four. 514-295-4720. Available from December 17th.

100 Arlen House East, 1 bdrm. convertible. 2nd floor. 3 mos. min. U.S.$1500/mo 416-636-6470.

Hallandale Beach Club. 3 bed., 3 bath. Brand new condo, tastefully furnished. 40th floor with spectacular views, gym and self parking. Kosher Kitchen. Minimum 4 months. $4800 US monthly. 514-229-7429.

Delray Beach/Huntington Lakes. Beautiful, big newly redone. Furnished 2/2 waterfront, balcony, laundry room. $2300.00/mo. 4 months min. 561-450-8746.

Siesta Key, Sarasota- Lux. 2 br. 2 bth. condo. Directly on beach. Now through Jan. still available. 404-851-0067.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Hallandale, Three Island, renov., lovely furnishings, 1 bdr. w/ sunroom, deck o/looks canal, tennis, pool, close to beach, 3 mo. min. Call 416-630-2177 www.hallandale.webs.com

Sunny W. Palm Beach - Beautiful 2 br. convertible 2 full bths. New Kit. New furnishings. Views. Balc. Prkg., pool. No shabbos elevator. 3 mos. min. Call 301-907-0842.

Inverary - 2 bed., 2 bth. on golf course. Avail. Jan. - Apr. 2011. Call 416-733-0411 extn. 23.

N. Miami /Sunny Isles. across ocean,walk to shops. Full winter seas. 1.5 br 2 bth.,647-284-3754.

Cent. Vill. Boca 55+ Luxury. 2/2. Waterview, new kit. appl. A/C & furnishings. Winter rental (4 mos.) or yearly. 718-698-6269.

Sunny Isles, across beach. Nicely furnished. One bedroom, 1 spacious dining and living room with balcony. 1 1/2 bathrooms. KOSHER kitchen. Three months winter minimum. 450-973-9920; cell 514-691-9920.

1-1 1/2 Condo Boca Raton. Furnished, renovated, gated. 24 hour security. Pools, tennis courts. 15 minutes to beach. $1600 monthly. Minimum 3 months. Available December 15th. 514-744-8633.

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Boca Raton, FL
Century Village West
Seasonal/Annual Rental
End Unit Sunny Garden Condo 2 Bedroom 1.5 Upgraded Baths Newly Painted, Fully Furnished Walking Distance to Synagogues. Near Pool/Buses Avail Dec 1st.
Includes Amenities
Call Owner: 301-758-7750

Boynton Beach. Gated, adult comm., 2 bed., 2 bth., solarium, fully furn'd., avail. for season. 647-407-2987,416-785-8188 aaronlang@aaronlang.ca

Deerfield Beach, Century Village. One bedroom, 1 1/2 bathrooms. Furnished, excellent condition. Minimum 4 months. 514-278-8645; 514-488-2772.

Century Village, Boca Raton 2 Bedrooms, 1 1/2 bathrooms. Flexible dates (3 months preferred). 514-951-7466.

MIAMI BEACH SEASON RENTAL OCEANFRONT LARGE CONDO BALCONY DIRECT OCEAN VIEW BEAUTIFUL. 305-895-3000

Hallandale - Florida. Luxurious oceanfront condo for rent, sleeps four. 514-295-4720. Available from December 17th.

100 Arlen House East, 1 bdrm. convertible. 2nd floor. 3 mos. min. U.S.$1500/mo 416-636-6470.

Hallandale Beach Club. 3 bed., 3 bath. Brand new condo, tastefully furnished. 40th floor with spectacular views, gym and self parking. Kosher Kitchen. Minimum 4 months. $4800 US monthly. 514-229-7429.

Delray Beach/Huntington Lakes. Beautiful, big newly redone. Furnished 2/2 waterfront, balcony, laundry room. $2300.00/mo. 4 months min. 561-450-8746.

Siesta Key, Sarasota- Lux. 2 br. 2 bth. condo. Directly on beach. Now through Jan. still available. 404-851-0067.

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

SOUTH FLORIDA REAL ESTATE
Fort Lauderdale/Pompano to Boca Raton Starting at $50,000
3 Mo Rentals from $1600
Call Wieder Realty, Inc.
954-978-8300
or 1-888-979-9788
www.Palm-Aire.com

Canadian realtor. Florida sun.
The perfect combination to find your next property to rent or buy.

ELIE KOFFMAN

MONTREAL
C: 514.518.3543
O: 514.937.1717
LONDONO

FLORIDA
C: 305.613.4508
O: 305.428.8401
ECR

200 OFFICE SPACE AVAILABLE

Professional Office Space for SubLease
Thornhill – Promenade Mall
Free parking. Approx. 1,000 sq. ft.
Available for occupancy now.
Call 905.731.7132

240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

Recent retirees for customer service work. Bathurst/Finch. PM201@rogers.com

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Nanny, Housekeeper, elderly care, NO fee to employer. Filipino from Israel, Singapore & Hong Kong & from the islands. Live in/out, screening guar. Call 416-733-3915.

Caregivers/Nannies/Housekeepers Filipino, Local & Europe. Live in/ live out. 416-932-3042.

Male support care worker, live-in or live/out, exper., refs. available. 416-887-5872, 647-340-6112.

Experienced cleaning lady will clean your home. Please call Vicky at 905-671-0124.

Cleaning for You!
We clean apartments. Please call Deborah at 416-781-4138.

Honest, reliable housekeeper/ caregiver available to work. Please call 416-492-6929.

Experienced babysitter avail. with refs. Also, experienced cleaning lady avail. with refs. 647-209-8787.

255 DOMESTIC HELP WANTED

Weekend nanny required for 3 children, 2, 3 & 4 yrs old. Bathurst/ Lawrence area. 416-781-6336.

257 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE

Exper HCA/sitter seeks job, exp. in Jewish community. Refs avail. Call Fareeda at 416-356-1350.

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

259 SENIORS

Jewish woman with over 20 yrs. exp. is avail. as live-out, light hskpng., cooking, shopping, walks, Dr.'s. appt's, etc. Call 416-785-0553.

Reliable, exper. lady avail. to be part-time companion for seniors. Owns car, errands, shop, etc 416-875-4738.

275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED

Vivacious, active, 59, loyal female, seeking 50+ sincere, active guy. Wrte to CJN Box #5254.

Good natured gentleman, slim, in good health & fin. secure, looking to meet a warm, caring woman in her 70's. CJN Box # 5305.

Marriage-Minded Mench Wanted! Let's spoil each other. Pretty, witty TO lady, 60, retired, kind, bright & sensitive, loves cooking, fishing, theatre. Seeks kind, non-smkng., independent TO man, financially secure (retiree/widower welcome), 55+. Own home/car. Please call 416-224-8406.

305 ARTICLES WANTED

Seeking Holocaust/Shoah, Founding of Israel, Ghetto, Camp, Pogrom documents, letters & papers for historical preservation. Ben. Discretion assured. 416-890-9644.

Ben Buys Book Collections, manuscripts, diaries, letters, documents & militaria. 416-890-9644.

Replying to an ad with a CJN Box Number?

Address your mail to:

The Canadian Jewish News
1500 Don Mills Rd.
Suite 205
North York, Ont.
M3B 3K4

Don't forget to put the Box Number on your envelope.

CJN Box #'s are valid for 30 days.

Got a fixer - upper?
Check out the Service Directory!
Call 416 391 1836

Travel Talk

By BILL GLADSTONE

ISRAEL CONTINUES TO SET NEW TRAVEL RECORDS

For several months this summer, Israel welcomed record-breaking numbers of visitors. In July, some 280,000 visitors arrived, and a similar number arrived in August. Both of these figures are significantly above last year's figures and also higher than 2008, the best year ever for travel to Israel until now.

There is a Dickensian irony in this: it is the best of times, yet also the worst of times, since Israel is continuously being maligned in the public sphere. Fortunately, it seems that many people have recognized that there is no better time to visit Israel, despite the vociferous anti-Israel campaigns that are fuelled by a deadly combination of malice and ignorance.

Visit the website www.goisrael.ca and start planning your trip to Israel today.

• • •

Archeological News from Israel

• The Israeli Antiquities Authority recently uncovered a 1,500-year-old Samaritan synagogue during excavations southwest of Beit She'an. A 16-by-20-foot hall in the synagogue faces southward toward Mount Gerizim, a Samaritan holy site. Among the uncovered items was a colourful mosaic decorated with a geometric pattern, with a Greek inscription that reads: "This is the temple." The synagogue evidently played an important part in the lives of the farmers who inhabited the region, serving as a centre of spiritual, religious and social life.

• Recent excavations at Herodion National Park, near Gush Etzion, uncovered a royal box at the upper level of King Herod's private theatre. The 26-by-23-foot royal box is the central space among a group of rooms, and some of its walls are adorned with paintings and plaster mouldings never before seen in Israel. The box also features a series of windows painted with naturalistic landscapes, including scenes of the countryside, the Nile River and a nautical tableau in a style familiar in Italy about 10 BCE. The Israel Museum in Jerusalem is planning to mount a first exhibition of the finds of Herod's grave.

• A 2,000-year-old stone bearing the image of Cupid was exhibited for the first time at the recent City of David Archeology Conference in Jerusalem. The semi-precious cameo, measuring one centimetre in length, features an image of Cupid engraved in blue, with Cupid's left hand resting on an upside-down torch. Likely once part of a piece of jewelry, the stone was discovered in the Givati parking lot excavation site at the Jerusalem Walls National Park.

• A priceless 2,200-year-old gold coin was discovered this summer during excavations at Tel Kedesh in northern Israel. The coin is believed to have been minted in Alexandria by Ptolemy V in 191 BCE. The head of the coin depicts the wife of King Ptolemy II who ruled Egypt from 283 to 246 BCE. "This is the heaviest gold coin with the highest contemporary value of any coin ever found in an excavation in Israel," said Dr. Donald T. Ariel, head of the coin department of the Israel Antiquities Authority.

• Archeologists from Bar-Ilan University have discovered a 10th-century Philistine temple in the ancient city of Gath in southern Israel. The temple is believed to be reminiscent of the architectural image described in the biblical story of Samson and the Philistines.

• • •

Exhibitions

• Budapest-born poet and diarist Hannah Senesh volunteered for a mission to rescue downed Allied fliers and Jews from Nazi-occupied Hungary, and became an enduring symbol of courage and determination. Fire in My Heart, The Story of Hannah Senesh is on view at the Museum of Jewish Heritage, 36 Battery Place, New York City, until August 2011. www.mjhnyc.org

• An exhibition featuring the works of renowned female Jewish cartoonists opened recently at The Cartoon Art Museum in San Francisco. Graphic Details: Confessional Comics by Jewish Women includes works by Canadian cartoonists Bernice Eisenstein, Miriam Libicki and Sarah Lazarovic. The exhibition continues in San Francisco until January 2011, then moves to Toronto's Koffler Centre. www.cartoonart.org.

• • •

Kolel & Prosserman JCC Tours: The Kolel Adult Centre for Liberal Jewish Learning and the Prosserman JCC offer an Israel Culinary Tour, Feb. 7 to 14, 2011, led by Rabbi Elyse Goldstein and Bonnie Stern. This all-new itinerary includes a workshop in northern Israel with chef Erez Komoravski; a "shuk and cook" adventure in Jerusalem's bustling market; visits to Tel Aviv's hippest new restaurants; and a visit to one of Israel's first kibbutzim. Info session at the Bonnie Stern School of Cooking, 6 Erskine Ave., on Nov. 28, 4 p.m., by RSVP only. 416-922-0116 ext 1.

A second tour, Tikkun Olam: Guatemala, is co-led by Rabbi Elyse Goldstein and Adrienne Rosen. This "voluntour" takes in gorgeous lakes, cloud-forests and Mayan ruins while providing an opportunity to meet indigenous native Jews and help build a school in a small rural village. Travel dates April 29 to May 8, 2011. For both tours, contact Michelle at Payless Travel, 416-922-0116, ext. 1.

• • •

Travel Briefs

• The first section of the new 80-mile Sea of Galilee Mountain Bike Trail opened this summer in the Upper Galilee region. Stretching from Capernaum to the Arik Bridge, the first leg features several rest and picnic areas, easily navigable trails and unrestricted access to beaches and nature reserves. Once completed, the trail will bring cyclists through Tiberias, the Golan Heights, Ein Poriya, the Kinneret, the Yardenit baptismal site on the River Jordan, Almagor, the Church of the Beatitudes, Mount Arbel and Kfar Hittim.

• Hapag-Lloyd Cruises is bringing back Great Lakes cruises in 2011 via their ship, MS Columbus, which was specifically designed to navigate the locks of the Great Lakes. The company offers two itineraries that take in seven U.S. states, two provinces and all five lakes. A highlight of the journeys comes when the ship navigates the eight locks of the 28-mile-long Welland Canal, tackling a height difference of some 328 feet. www.hl-cruises.com

SERVICE DIRECTORY

370 CATERING

SHIVA MEALS • BRIT MILAH • HOME • OFFICE
SHORT NOTICE & SAME DAY SERVICE • DELIVERY AVAILABLE
416-789-7651
3457 BATHURST ST.
www.milknhoney.ca
milk 'n honey THE DAIRY RESTAURANT

Dairy Treats Restaurant & Catering
Brit Milah • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
Home or Office • Shiva Meals • Corporate Accounts
3522 Bathurst St. (S. of Wilson) 416-787-0309
www.dairytreats.com

395 ELECTRICAL

All kinds of electrical jobs. For great service call Serge, 416-834-4312. Licensed.

405 FURNITURE

Marcantonio Furniture Repair Specializing in touchups. Restoration & general repairs done on premises. 416-654-0518.

Earl Bales Sr. Woodworkers. Caning, chair repairs, reglueing, custom, reas. 416-630-6487.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS

Master Quality Home Improvement and Renovation. Repairing, painting-interior/exterior, flooring. 416-450-3889, 416-602-1755.

BATHURST CONCRETE HOME IMPROVEMENTS INC. *Concrete stairs *Garage floors *Sidewalks *Walkways *Leaking basements, repair bricks, flagstone & tuckpointing. 30 yrs. experience, lic. joe 416-451-8958

415 HOME IMPROVEMENT

Hardwood Floor sanding, staining, refinishing, new floors, installation & repairs. Jules - 416-726-5338.

General Contractors for all your renovations. Very experienced. Great service. Reasonable rates. SB Construction. 416-834-4312.

HANDYMENCH. SHOWER REPAIRS. Bath. & Kit. renov., cabinet reface, paint/tile, water damage. Call 416-826-0574.

Best Prices!!! Best Quality!!! Best Service!!! Home Improvements & painting. Licensed & Bonded Call Shlomo 416-804-1706.

Odd jobs, small repairs, painting, etc. Please call Fred at 416-420-8731.

HANDYMAN. Plumbing, electrical, carpentry, plastering, ceramics, locks. Ephram, 416-630-3047.

445 MOVING

GEMINI MOVERS & STORAGE LTD.
• Homes • Apartments • Offices
• Professional Piano Movers
Tel: 416-782-8736
Call until 11 p.m.
Fax: 416-240-9133
Top quality service is mandatory!

G&M Moving and Storage. Apts., homes, offices. Short notice. Large or small. We carry supplies. 905-738-4030.

srmmovers2009@hotmail.com A-1 Short Notice. Insured. Home, apt, office, bus. 416-747-7082.

450 PAINTING/ WALLPAPER

Prof. painting/paper-hanging 416-857-9869 or 905-762-1657 Jacob. No Shabbos calls.

Painting, res., commercial, interior/exterior. Ceramic Tile & Drywall. Reasonable. FREE ESTIMATES. PAINT HOUSE ENT. 416-459-1383.

452 PARTY SERVICES

A-M-A-Z-I-N-G Bar/Bat Mitzvahs at LOOTS LOUNGE
On Bayview
All Inclusive Packages from $5900
416-787-5668
lootslounge.com

455 PHOTOGRAPHY /VIDEO

Memories fade. Slides, home movies, and videos collect dust. We're Specialists in DVD transfers and Preserving Memories. Fred; 416-229-6000; fredrelson@madisonvideo.tv

472 RETIREMENT HOME

Ahavath Achim Retirement Home. The home with a Neshama. Planned activities, 24 hr. supervision. For information contact Joseph Sahar, office 416-398-5486 or 905-660-4831.

500 TUTORING

THE TUTORSHIP ADVANTAGE Math, Chemistry, Physics, Biology, English, French, Essay Writing. 416-386-1585 www.tutorship.ca

Exper. teacher specializing in special ed., for students K-6. I come to you 416-705-5856 or a_moskovitz@hotmail.com

510 UPHOLSTERY

Bathurst Upholstery. Reupholstering sofas, chairs. Low prices 416-781-1995, 905-886-3148.

Bernie the upholsterer has all fabrics 1/2 price. Dining room seats $25/ea. 416-931-26609.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING
to place an ad call
Monday to Thursday
(CLASSIFIED DEPT. CLOSED FRIDAYS)
416-391-1836 (ask for classified advertising)
Classified Deadlines:
Wednesday at 4:00 p.m.
8 days prior to issue date.*
*PLEASE NOTE: On a week before a statuatory or Jewish holiday, the deadline will be earlier. Please call for exact times.
All Classified ads require prepayment before deadline.
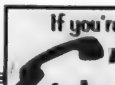
The CJN accepts Visa, Mastercard, American Express, Cheque or Cash
The CJN cannot be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. Please bring any problems to the attention of your sales representative before your ad is repeated.

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES 905-886-5610 Call ext. 369
ISRAEL FALL/WINTER
FROM $686* +tax
*Specific dates apply

Sports & Leisure

If you're reading this


ADVERTISING WORKS!
To book your ad in this spot call
416-391-1836

CHAT golfer wins TDCAA tournament

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

Sam Harris got a relatively late start at golf – at least when compared to Tiger Woods.

Woods is famously remembered for being only two years old when he first appeared on television to wow spectators with his ability to hit the ball. Harris had already hit the ripe old age of 12 when he first picked up a club.

Still, that's pretty young for a sport more commonly associated with, let us say, more mature individuals. Now 16, Harris is a member of the Anne and Max Tanenbaum Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto's four-man golf team, and last month he surprised a lot of people, including himself, when he shot 77 and tied for first place in the TDCAA fall playoffs at Station Creek Golf Club.

TanenbaumCHAT's Brandon Lustig scored an 85, good for 15th, and TanenbaumCHAT finished sixth out of 17 schools in the team competition. The TDCAA is a sports league that includes athletes from mostly Catholic high schools.

Harris' performance earned him a place in the two-day OFSAA Golf Festival at the Barrie Golf and Country Club. Overall, he played well, except for a disaster on one hole that left him a disappointing 54th.

On the first day playing the par-5 12th, one error led to another, which led to another and so on until Harris entered the dreaded realm of double figures. He scored an 11 en route to a disappointing 85. He parred the hole the second day and scored a 78, but it was too late. The 11 killed his chances for a good finish. A par or even a bogey on the hole probably would have left him around 13th place, the same score that guys with U.S. golf scholarships registered, he said.

Harris – who admits he "tried to be a hero" and played "stupid shots" instead of safer ones – learned an important lesson.

"I don't need to overpower courses in order to succeed," he says now. "Just stick to the game plan and putt well."

Although only 5-9 and 147 pounds, he's quite a ball striker. He can drive the ball 280 to 290 yards and his seven irons fly 175 yards. (What are they feeding kids these days?) He clearly has the tools to be a really good golfer.

His accuracy is pretty good, but one area of his game that he admits needs work is his chipping and putting. "I hit farther than my coach does, but he's a more consistent ball-striker, chipper and putter," Harris said.

"You lose confidence if you begin missing putts."

Bill Walsh, a club pro at Beacon Hall Golf Club, has been working with Harris for almost four years. "He's made a lot of progress," Walsh said. "Every shot he hits, he tries his best, which is a great trait."

To take the step to the next level, "he has to understand the mental aspect," Walsh said.

"He goes for everything, and he has to learn golf is not always about the perfect shot. He wants the perfect swing, but golf is about a repeatable swing that won't melt under pressure."

Course management is key for a player of Harris' abilities, Walsh said, and that can only come by playing more.

"He spends a lot of time at the range. He needs to play more," Walsh said.

Harris got into golf "because I wanted to do something with my dad." His father, a nine-handicap, is a member of Beacon Hall in Aurora, a bit of a shlep from their home in the Yonge and York Mills area.

His interest in swing mechanics started early, when his father got him a golf magazine with instructional photos featuring pros Colin Montgomerie, John Daly and Ernie Els.

Harris particularly liked Els' smooth motion, and practised it over and over again, watching himself in the reflection of a glass door.

Harris played in his first tournament at the end of Grade 8 and shot an 86. His scorecard was marked with three or four birdies, but it also had a few double and triple bogies. The next day, he scored a 95.

It was "a learning experience," he said, and now he knows, "everything counts and you need to focus and pay attention to details. It takes a lot of tournaments to know how you can do."

The next year, he twice broke 80 in tournaments, but he still wasn't playing like he hoped.

This year, he believes, he really turned his game around. At the Ontario Junior Qualifier at Bushwood Golf Club, he shot a 74, and at the Ontario Match Play Qualifier at Glenway Country Club, he scored 76. He continued to show consistent play at a subsequent CJGA tournament, scoring 77 and 76.

"In the middle of the summer, I was playing good golf," he said, but he felt he was also getting worn out. He was at the Beacon Hall range almost every day for up to six hours at a time.

After a disappointing performance at a tournament in mid-August, he took more than a month off, not striking a ball again until TanenbaumCHAT's school trials at Oakdale.

He made the team, and he won the TDCAA event "because I didn't make any mistakes."

"I didn't have any expectations for it, and I didn't think about my score."

"To score well, you have to limit your mistakes and think your way around the course. I only hit driver twice that day, because I wasn't hitting it well. I kept the ball in play, hit greens and made a couple of putts."

Entering Grade 12 next year, Harris is hopeful he can improve his play and attract attention from golf recruiters at NCAA Division I schools.

"Of course," he replies when asked if he'd want to one day play golf professionally. "I think I'm good enough. I barely practised for 1-1/2 months and shot a 77 when it was rainy and cold. I can compete with kids with Division I scholarships."

The Canadian Jewish news
CONGRATULATIONS
In honour of your marriage, The Canadian Jewish News is pleased to present you with a 6 month subscription.
Please fill in the requested information and fax to (905) 946-1679 or mail to P.O. Box 819 STN Main, Markham, Ontario, L3P 8A2
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Province _____ Postal Code _____
Phone number _____
Email _____
Date of wedding _____
Location of wedding _____
CANADIAN DELIVERY ONLY
Subscription will begin two weeks after receipt of information.
If you wish, please enclose a photo - we'd be honoured to publish it in an upcoming issue.

NEW TEAM HAS A BALL!

The Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School boys soccer team enthusiastically joined other Jewish day schools at the TanenbaumCHAT Junior Soccer Invitational Tournament. It was the first time Paul Penna took part in the annual event, which brings together teams from Associated Hebrew Schools, Robbins Hebrew Academy, Netivot HaTorah Day School, Leo Baeck Day School, the Toronto Heschel School and Bialik Hebrew Day School. Although the downtown boys failed to win a game, their spirit remained high. The boys' championship game saw Associated B defeat Leo Baeck's south campus, while Heschel defeated Leo Baeck north campus in girls' competition.

Artwork saved centenarian's life

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

Irene Greenbloom, who turned 100 years old on Sept. 28, says without hesitation that her artwork saved her life.

Born in Lodz, Poland, Greenbloom studied art in France before the war broke out and she was taken away to Auschwitz.

"I survived because the Nazis used me to make greeting cards."

She also saved two other women, she said, because they helped her make the cards.

Greenbloom, who speaks Russian, Polish and French in addition to English, credits her art with helping her to carry on after she lost her first husband, seven-year-old son and parents in the Holocaust, and later when her second husband – who was saved by Oskar Schindler – died at age 62. She met him when she went back to Lodz after the war, looking for family.

"I always did art. It kept me alive," says Greenbloom, who has two children – her eldest, a daughter, was born in Poland – and a 24-year-old grandson.

A resident of Baycrest's Apotex Centre for about six years, she continued painting and creating pottery until the last couple of years, when her eyesight began failing.

Her room is decorated with her paintings, and she has a file folder filled with art that she hasn't framed. Each work is signed "Irene."

She says she's especially proud of a painting of her father that she reproduced from a small photograph she was able to save throughout the war.

Irene Greenbloom holds a painting she painted of her father.

Greenbloom, who goes to her daughter's home for dinner weekly, says she is always happy to eat there, "because she cooks delicious, low-fat meals – lots of vegetables and fruits. I get too many carbs here."

She appreciates everything, she says. "I don't complain, and I don't let things get to me. There's no point.

"I went through the war, but I don't believe that all people were bad. A German person kept my husband alive. To be alive after the war is a miracle. I'm not bitter."

After celebrating her birthday at three parties and attending a Baycrest concert where 300 people sang Happy Birthday to her, Greenbloom says that "suddenly I'm old."

POTATO PARSNIP LATKES

Recipe is for one batch; make multiples as necessary

1 lg baking potato
1 tblsp fresh lemon juice
2 medium parsnips, peeled and coarsely grated
1/4 c flour
2 lg eggs, lightly beaten
3 tblsp finely chopped fresh chives
3/4 tsp salt
1/4 tsp black pepper
3/4 c vegetable oil

Peel potato; coarsely grate in food processor. Add lemon juice. Drain mixture very well in towel. In large bowl, stir potato with parsnips, flour, eggs, chives, salt, pepper until combined well.

Heat oil in nonstick skillet over moderate heat. Carefully spoon mixture into skillet, flatten to 3" in diameter. Cook until golden, about 1 1/2 min. on each side. Transfer to paper towels to drain. Make more latkes in same manner. Accompaniment: applesauce and/or sour cream.

CAPLAN'S

experience
the Caplan's difference

1111 Weston Road (just south of Eglinton)
416-767-1655 • caplans.ca
Caplan's parking lot. Simply across from the store.

A Family Business for over 60 Years

About Life

Dear Ella,

Adam and I have been together for a year. We're both divorced and have children from our previous marriages. Adam is a wonderful man, and he tries very hard to be a good dad. He has one six-year-old boy, Josh, who is capable of being a sweet kid, but is usually an intolerable brat. I'm embarrassed to say that I can't stand being around this kid. As I see it, Adam parents with guilt as his guide. Because of his limited visitation, he tries to be a Disneyland dad, doing only fun things and letting Josh run amok. Adam rarely corrects Josh and feels terribly guilty when he upsets his son, and Josh knows it. When I try to intervene, I end up being seen as the bad guy.

I love Adam, but I'm not sure if I can commit to a life like this. I welcome any advice so that we can work this out as a family.

Blended Battles

Dear Blended Battles

Blended families have become more common, and along with them come all kinds of problems that don't always exist in a nuclear family. You have two sets of parents in a blended family, and that can be very confusing for children. Since there's no manual, people tend to go with their gut on how to raise kids, and clearly Adam feels that Josh needs fun more than discipline at this stage. Blended families have a whole myriad of challenges. Navigating through parenting differences is probably the biggest hurdle. You and Adam need to come up with a game plan. You need to analyze what works and what doesn't, and survey the results of your parenting actions. Is Adam truly happy with the results he sees in his son?

Guilt isn't a productive emotion. It causes people to make all sorts of bad decisions. Children need consistency and boundaries. They need to know what's expected of them as they transition from one home environment to the other. You and Adam need to explore all these expectations together. This isn't easy for Josh. His stable family environment has been dissolved, and re-establishing a new one will take time.

Setbacks along the way are inevitable, but if you both approach this with the same goal, using tolerance, patience, communication and love, you'll end up with a successful family unit.

Readers may submit their questions to Ella at The CJN, e-mail: eb@cjnews.com. But Ella is not a professional counsellor. She brings to the questions posed by readers her unique brand of earthy wisdom. Her advice is not a replacement for medical, legal or any other advice. For serious problems, consult a professional.

Simple secrets of happy people

I feel very blessed. We are celebrating our son Max's bar mitzvah, and when I look around at the people in our lives, our family, friends, and especially the friends that we have known since the children were little, I am filled with gratitude.

Life Coach Corner

By JUDY SIBLIN-LIBRACH

I felt so happy at my son's tfillin bar mitzvah (the first step in this very auspicious occasion) and realized that what really counts are the moments that make you realize how meaningful and precious life can be. But on a daily basis, it's also important to be happy and to appreciate the little things that make you happy and that bring joy into your life and the life of others.

There are very simple secrets happy people know about, and it often all begins by just believing in your own abilities, talents and special gifts.

We think that happy and unhappy people are just born that way. But through writing this column, I have learned that happy people let happiness come to them and unhappy people continue to do things that upset them.

Every disappointment or hurt can be transformed into such rich learning and joy, and sometimes it's just a matter of waking up one morning and deciding that you are going to be happy.

As David Niven writes in 100 Simple Secrets of Happy People, there are some basic rules to live by. For one, "You don't have to win every time." He talks about learning how to "accept yourself unconditionally," and choosing your comparisons wisely.

"Many of our feelings of satisfaction or dissatisfaction have their roots in how we compare ourselves to others. When we compare ourselves to those who have more, we feel bad."

"Don't Dwell on Unwinnable Conflicts" is a wonderful section in the book that reminds us to go to the well for water, not to a stone. "Move on. The problems you spend your time and energy on should be both important and improvable. Otherwise, you are better off moving on to things you can change."

One of my favourite "secrets" in the book is to "believe in ultimate justice. That there are many problems in the world is obvious to anyone, but take comfort in the notion that eventually good prevails," Niven writes. "Whether you focus on the criminal justice system or a spiritual system, realize that those who have wronged the world will eventually pay some price."

Sometimes your life is perfect, but you may not realize it and focus on the one element that isn't. Learn to say "whatever" and let it go.

This links beautifully to the section "Don't Let Your Entire Life Hinge on One Element." Niven writes, "Your life is made up of many different factors. Don't focus on one aspect of your life so much that you can't experience pleasure if that one area is unsettled…

"Build your hopes around the many things that are important to you and allow yourself to benefit from the different things that contribute to your life, rather than allowing yourself to be devastated by a single bump in the road."

Try to think less about the people and things that bother you and focus on all the great people in your life. Enjoy what you have. Remember, how we see the world is more important than how the world is. Learn to count your blessings, and don't forget to laugh.

Judy Siblin-Librach is an Adler-trained coach. Website: www.findingyourbliss.com; e-mail: judyelle@ican.net.

Any donation, large or small, makes a difference to me.

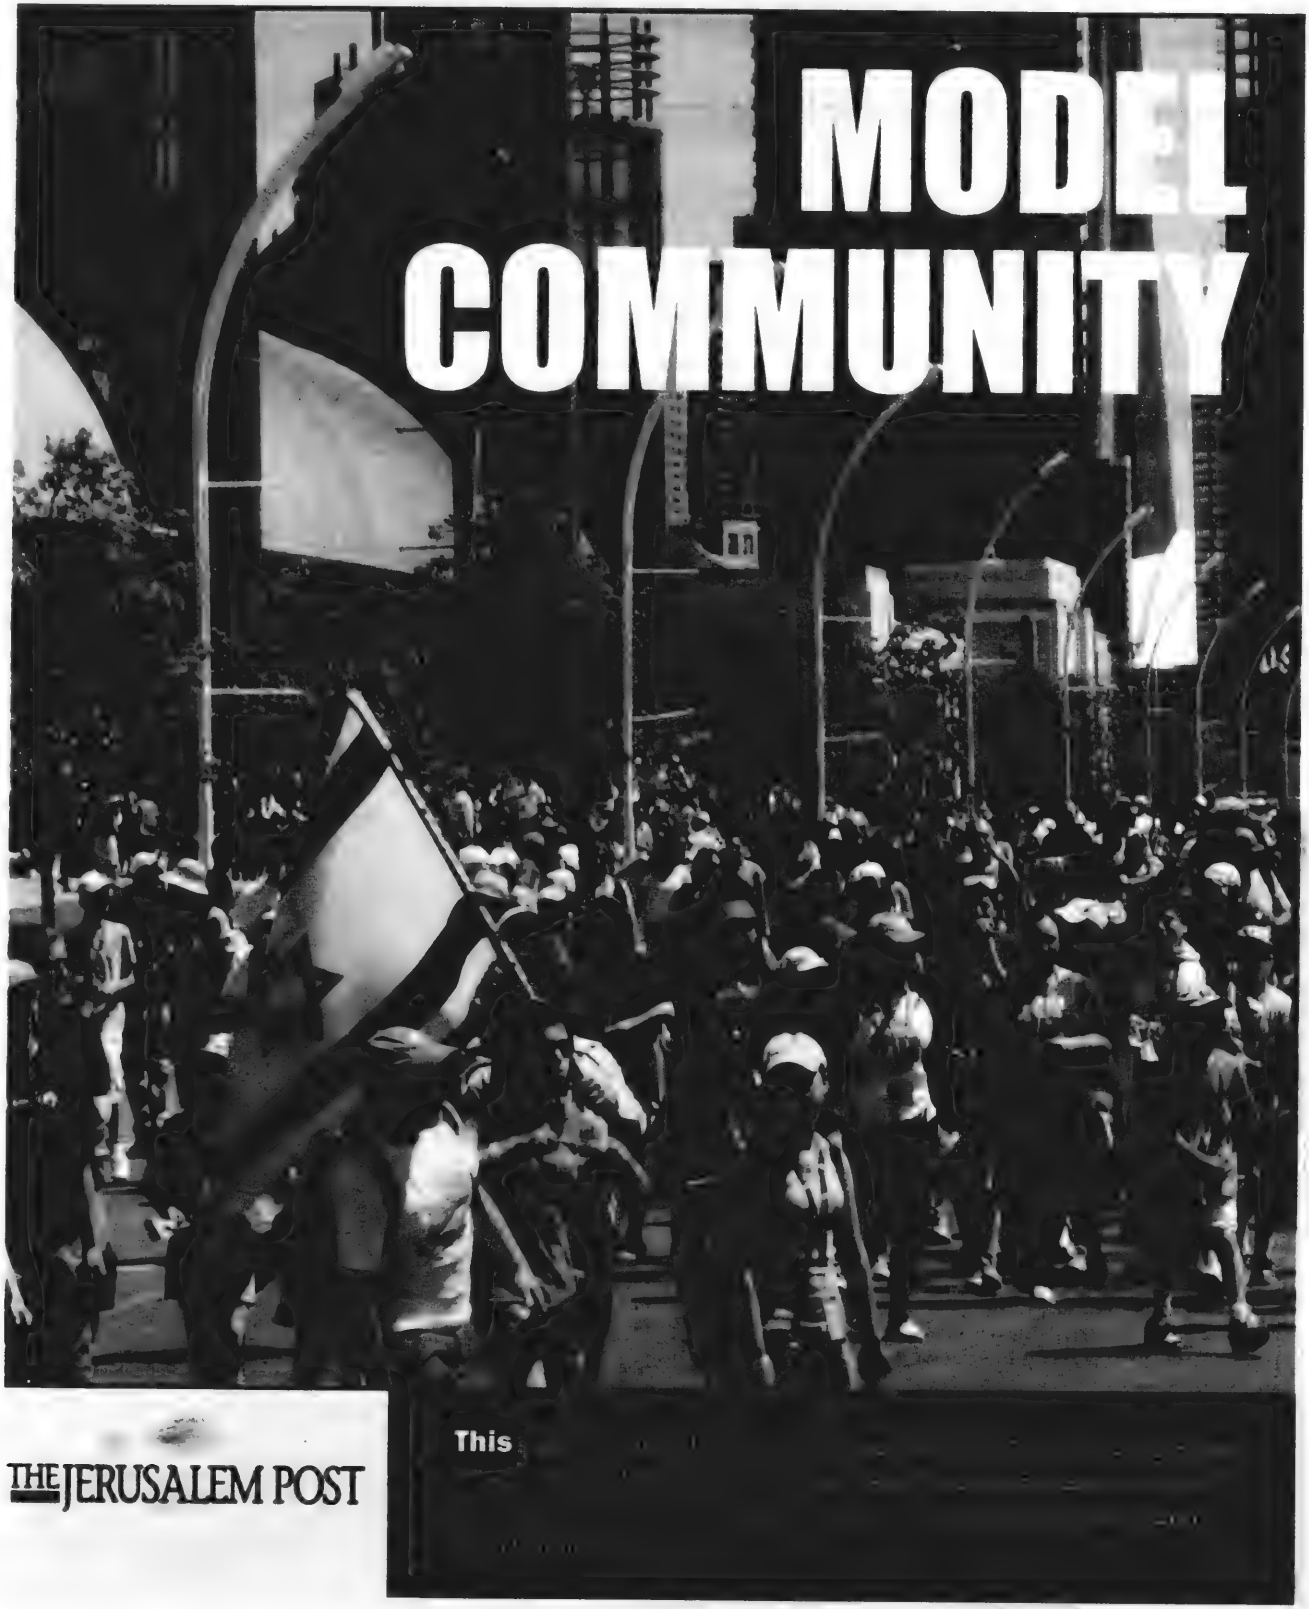
So ask yourself what makes a difference to you.

Your gift is vital in helping us provide The Best Medicine to each one of our patients. We see your generosity every day throughout the hospital where it allows us to provide the very highest standard of health care. Visit supportsinai.ca to make a donation or call 416-586-8203.

Dr. Tom Stewart
Physician-in-Chief and Chief Clinical Officer

MOUNT SINAI HOSPITAL FOUNDATION
Joseph and Wolf Lebovic Health Complex

supportsinai.ca



THE JERUSALEM POST

This

MODEL COMMUNITY

Toronto's generous Jewish community has made UJA's annual campaign the 3rd largest in North America only behind New York and Los Angeles.

It somehow seemed appropriate that, two nights before Prime Minister Binyamin Netanyahu received a hero's welcome from the Toronto Jewish community as he launched the annual Walk with Israel last May, legendary singers James Taylor and Carole King were serenading a Toronto audience at the Air Canada Center with their King-penned signature tune, "You've Got a Friend." Because, the wide world over, Israel may not have a better friend than the 200,000 Jewish residents of Toronto.

And it's not just a "call me if you need me" type of support. It's exemplified on a 24/7 basis: on the ground – with almost 10,000 people, only 24 hours before the Gaza flotilla raid would curtail his Canadian visit, greeting Netanyahu with rapturous applause before walking seven kilometers through Toronto waving Israeli and Canadian flags at the 42nd annual Walk with Israel; in the air – with almost 75 percent of Toronto Jewry having visited Israel at least once, a huge spike over their American Jewish neighbors; and out of their pockets – Canadian Jewry contributes around $60 million to Israel each year, and UJA Federation of Greater Toronto gives more than all the other Canadian Jewish communities combined, to programs developing what they like to call Israel's "frontier."

"We're the third largest Jewish Federation UJA Campaign in North America, only behind New York and Chicago and ahead of many communities much larger than ours. That says so much about the amazing commitment of our community and its connection to Jewish identity and Israel," explained UJA Federation of Greater Toronto president Ted Sokolsky.

Driving north out of Toronto's downtown area along famed Bathurst Street on the way to the Federation's bustling Sherman Campus, there are indications for miles and miles of a strong, vibrant Jewish community – day schools, synagogues, kosher bakeries and restaurants.

More than 10,000 participants took part in UJA Federation's annual Walk with Israel in May, 2010.

The Sherman Campus is currently undergoing a huge overhaul, and along with a refurbished downtown area Jewish community center and construction under way on the even more northward Joseph and Wolf Lebovic Jewish Community Campus in the heart of York Region – new facilities and services are being created to meet the needs of the diverse and growing community – which now includes an influx of 60,000 Russian Jews and Israelis.

ACCORDING TO Alan Winer, the volunteer chairman of the Federation, the bond between Toronto Jews and Israel is a natural one and, bucking international trends, is being strengthened among the younger generation.

"If I look at the generation before me, it was incredibly Zionistic, incredibly community oriented. And it's been able to pass on that kind of feeling to the next generation. That's been the real success," he said. "The challenge is to make sure my kids or my children's children have that same feeling. So we spend about 20 percent of our budget on Jewish education, on tuition assistance, on programming. And on top of that we spend a lot on supplementary education, formal education, along with a strong camping system and great involvement from parents. It all brings home the message to the kids."

Confident, financially secure and basking in the staunch support Israel receives from the government of Prime Minister Stephen Harper, the Toronto Jewish community is able to put its full and vocal backing behind Israel. The Walk with Israel, undeterred by the protests of a few hundred pro-Palestinian demonstrators, boosted by a contingent of Natorei Karta supporters, was an impressive show of force.

"The Walk is the one time of the year that all the different faces of the community come together," said Sokolsky. "In Toronto, like in Israel, we have a really diverse community, whether it's religious, Russians or Israelis. But when they all come together to walk for a common purpose and love, it's really a heartwarming event."

Understanding the clout of the Toronto Jewish population, a long line of national and provincial elected officials and candidates – including former Montreal Canadiens goalie

Ken Dryden, now a Liberal Party MP for York-Centre – crowded the CNE Direct Energy Center along Lake Ontario to hear Netanyahu speak and to show their support for Israel.

"Nowhere in the world have I met such a strong, well organized and self-confident community," said Amir Gissin, the consul-general for Toronto and Western Canada, who said he receives some 500 requests to attend Israel-related events each year ("I'm starting to be a bit more picky, but I accepted over 200 last year").

"The Toronto Jewish community is the most Israel-supportive community I've encountered, starting from the percentage of resources of its campaign that goes directly to projects in Israel, through visits, through the centrality of Israel in the Jewish education system."

Gissin always seems to be ahead of the curve. When he served as the head of public diplomacy at the Foreign Ministry, he was on the ground floor of the multi-year undertaking to rebrand Israel as a country not seen entirely through the lens of conflict. He was instrumental in retooling its advocacy doctrine away from the concept of "Israel vs. Palestinians" and toward a more global "moderates vs. extremists" messaging platform. And now, after nearly three years in Toronto, the youthful looking 45-year-old Jerusalemite is touting some new ideas on how to continue improving Israel's image in Canada – by taking Taylor and King's lead and making friends.

Gissin has not had that problem since beginning his stint in Toronto, enjoying excellent relations with the Jewish community and the professional organizations that he deals with on an ongoing basis.

"Toronto has become the most important arena for advocacy work by Israel," said Gissin, sitting in his spacious office in downtown Toronto. "And, as opposed to the general concept of hasbara being seen as constantly failing, here we are winning."
Gissin isn't just saying that because he's in charge. Two days before the Gaza flotilla became an international incident with the deaths of nine passengers, a small group of protesters were demonstrating outside the building calling for the flotilla to be allowed to pass through. But the protest was muted and most passersby stepped away from the curb to avoid the group.

Gissin called the protesters "the usual suspects. There are many demonstrations of this size, of people who have free time on their hands – and it's always the same people. The important thing is that they're not managing to attract lots of attention. In general, the media find the Middle East conflict less interesting, and 10 or 15 people carrying signs is not a story."

Indeed, the next day, there's nary a mention of the protest in the daily papers or on the local TV news. There are, however plenty of generally favorable stories about Netanyahu's imminent arrival later that day.

Today, it's a victory – two days later it would be a media disaster following the IDF raid on the Mavi Marmara. It's all part of what Gissin calls a war, and it includes events such as the annual Israel Apartheid Week on campuses, past boycott attempts against the Toronto International Film Festival for its focus on films from Tel Aviv and against the Royal Ontario Museum for its Dead Sea Scroll exhibit.

"There is a war, the most severe war, in North America, in terms of the level of organization and the resources that our adversaries have. I'm not talking about one city or one university. I'm talking about a concentrated anti-Israel effort. Here in Toronto, I believe it is well organized, more than in any North American city. But here again, we're winning," he said.

THAT MAY be in part due to the ambitious pilot project to reframe how Israel is viewed in the eyes of Torontonians that Gissin was finally

model community

The revitalized Lipa Green Centre for Jewish Community Services and the Prosserman JCC at the Donald Gales Family Pavilion on Sherman Campus.

able to implement after developing the concept the previous five years in Jerusalem.

Featuring print ads prominently at bus stops and billboards across the city, along with radio spots and concerted efforts to pitch "non-conflict" stories about Israel to the Toronto media, residents were exposed to a country being portrayed as an innovative leader in technology that brings real benefits to their own lives. One ad depicted an Indian mother and daughter smiling under the words "Coronary stent. Lifesaver," with a logo underneath saying "Innovation Israel," and the tag line "Touching lives."

"In the minds of Westerners, Israel equals conflict. That is the problem. For me personally, the problem is not hasbara, or the level of our sound bites or the English spoken by our spokespeople. The problem is that Israel equals conflict. And we contribute to it regularly," said Gissin.

"Toronto is the first place where there's a real understanding of the need to emphasize Israel through a wider angle than the conflict. There are other places where it's being developed, but in Toronto it's actually happening," he added, refusing to take credit for the movement.

"It's a process that started some years ago, before my time, with a realization in the Jewish community here – including all of the major professional organizations like the Canada-Israel Committee, Canadian Jewish Congress, the Federation, Hillel – that there's a need to find a way to present to the local public opinion arena the idea of this other side of Israel, and they started emphasizing the concept of shared values that Israel has with Canada.

"The branding effort was a development on that, which added one important component – and that is relevancy. On a grassroots level, there is an understanding in Toronto within the Jewish community and among Christian supporters of Israel that to cope with the propaganda campaign against Israel, you have to be relevant. Because most Canadians don't want to hear about conflict – and it's the same elsewhere. And they want to hear about things that are relevant to their lives. The Middle East conflict is not relevant to their lives."

According to Gissin, the year-long campaign has resulted in the perception of Israel shifting within Canada – not only among the rank and file, but in more non-conflict stories appearing in the Toronto media. In September, 2008, 86 percent of the stories about Israel that appeared were about the conflict. In September 2009, it had shifted to 50/50.

Internet-based studies commissioned by the consulate that were conducted following the campaign, showed that more than 30% of those exposed to the campaign think today that Israel is attractive, innovative, creative.

"The attributes which are part of the way we see ourselves and what makes us be proud of ourselves are now being shared by Canadians in a very significant way," said Gissin. "The ultimate result of that is happening right now – the premier of Ontario, Dalton McGuinty, is in Israel right now, saying, 'We came to learn Israel's innovation model.'"

(He was referring to the business delegation led by McGuinty late last month.)

ACCORDING TO Howard English, the Federation's director of strategic communications, the city was the perfect place to test the concept.

"Canadians are to some extent indifferent to the Middle East conflict – they think there should just be peace. On the other hand, we also know that most Canadians don't harbor any innate hostility toward Israel."

Federation president Sokolsky also praised the campaign, but said he would have preferred a lower profile surrounding its existence.

"When you're launching a branding campaign, you shouldn't be announcing that it's a branding campaign," he said.

Despite scattered criticism about the tactics employed, the bottom line for Gissin is that, according to his results, people in Toronto are being exposed to positive things that Israel does that are relevant to their lives, and therefore they look at the country more positively.

"We've made this connection – this is why we're winning the war," he said. "And it's gone far beyond the consulate or the pro-Israel advocacy organizations. It's now a grassroots situation. More than any country, the interest of Canada in Israel is not travelling through the lens of the conflict. That's an achievement and if we can copy that reality to other countries, then I believe that Israel's image will change in the long term."

As successful as the pilot campaign may have been, Gissin is already looking ahead to what he sees as the next way to cement Israel's positive image in Toronto – and the world over. And it's another "ahead of the curve" idea which he sees as the future of the relationship of Israel and the Diaspora, at least from the aspect of advocacy.

"We need to use the Jewish communities all over the world – and I think the Toronto community will be a leader in this – to build bridges to other emerging communities in North America. To do it, we must use the strength of the Jewish community, not in terms of resources or philanthropy, but through its expertise," said Gissin.

"Jewish communities in North America started very low, very poor with lots of anti-Semitism. Look where they are today – very rich, organized sophisticated communities. The knowledge and experience gained during those years from being a neglected, poor community to where they are today, there are so many newcomers to North America that can use this knowledge of building a functioning community, institutions and organizations – all we have to do is share this experience."

Gissin admitted that it will take time to implement his plan because it's not in the DNA of most Jewish communities.

"We have a tendency for self-isolation," he said. "We have our own fears of getting our young generation in touch with the young generation of other communities. It's part of who we are as Jews, we need to secure our youngsters, we're well aware of that.

"But to share information and give a hand to emerging communities on the adult professional level is, I believe, the future of cross-communal relationships that in time will help the Jewish community bring friends on board to support and accept Israel and declare that friendship loudly."

James Taylor and Carole King couldn't have said it better.

CAMPUS CRASHES

Are 20,000 Jewish students taking their lives in their hands by making pro-Israel statements on campus? The reality is considerably more docile.

York University students during Israel Apartheid Week

If Toronto is generally a bastion of goodwill for all – including Israel – the one crack in the surface where anti-Israel sentiments regularly seep through is on college campuses.

Events like the annual Israel Apartheid Week on the campuses of the University of Toronto, York University and Ryerson University, and a widely covered incident more than a year ago at York in which 100 anti-Israel activists surrounded a campus building belonging to the university's Hillel chapter, forcing students to barricade themselves inside, are the manifestations of an organized campaign on the campuses targeting Israel.

While they may lead one to believe that the 20,000 Jewish students at the three universities are taking their lives in their hands by making a pro-Israel statement on campus, the reality is considerably more docile, and according to campus representatives and community professionals who gathered at a roundtable discussion at the Hillel of Greater Toronto headquarters at The Wolfond Center for Jewish Campus Life, the changing attitudes on Toronto campuses is due in part to the outrage caused by the York incident.

For Ryan Luckner, who was the vice president of York's Hillel and one of the students who had run into the Hillel building to avoid the mob, the incident was the culmination of a growing anti-Israel sentiment he's felt during his three years at the school.

"At York, there's a strong anti-Israel overtone and ideal. The York Federation of Students put a motion forward saying it supports the people of Gaza and the people of Palestine and condemns the idea of Israeli apartheid as part of its mandate. That's something we have to challenge every day," he said.

According to Hillel of Greater Toronto director Zac Kaye, the York incident has forced administration officials at all three universities to reassess their roles in curbing the anti-Israel vitriol on campus.

"What happened at York sent shock waves. It caused everybody in the Jewish community, and more importantly at the university, to say 'no more.' It crossed a red line; it has caused the universities to respond in extremely positive ways. Jewish students, just like all students, have a right to feel safe when they enter the campus," said Kaye, adding that a fairer environment on campus has ensued.

All the universities have resisted banning anti-Israel events over the issue of free discourse, but they now certainly try to marginalize the impact of those events. They send out very strong messages, meet with the groups in question, saying we respect the freedom of speech but we expect civil discourse, and this should be the context.

"The administration now has no problem saying, 'You're making Jewish students feel very uncomfortable on campus and that shouldn't be where it's at.' There are red lines, and what the universities didn't do in the early years the anti-Israel campus movement was emerging was to enforce those red lines," Kaye said.

Jordan Kerbel, the national director of public affairs of the Canadian Jewish Congress, stressed that the troublemakers on campus were "small, fringe groups." "It's important to remember that the vast majority of students could care less. We're talking about maybe 200, 300 students out of the 50,000 who attend York," he said.

WITH PRO-ISRAEL students often grasping for direction in ways to defend Israel, Federation system funded organizations like Hillel, the CJC and the Canadian Council for Israel and Jewish Advocacy (CIJA) abet the students in finding ways to go on the offensive – like this year's "Size Doesn't Matter" campaign, timed to coincide with Israel Apartheid Week.

Students from 23 universities across Canada participated in promoting a multimedia campaign that received tons of coverage due to a viral video which touted Israel's achievements in a PG-13 way that some people criticized as lewd, but many saw as innovative.

"We're investing huge amounts of money on student activism on Israel's behalf," said Howard English, the Federation's director of strategic communications. "The Size Doesn't Matter campaign, despite the controversy, certainly struck a chord with students who would otherwise not show any interest in Israel. It showed them aspects of Israel they had never thought of before."

The students, too, were overjoyed at the success of the campaign, especially the YouTube video featuring a strategically placed map of Israel and a young, attractive couple.

"We weren't promoting a negative message. It wasn't, 'We're right and they're wrong.' It was a 'this is what Israel has to offer,'" said York's Luckner.

"It got the message out to people, and everyone was talking about it. They saw the positive messaging from it," added Beca Bookman, a first-year University of Toronto student.

"The video that circulated has something like a million hits worldwide," said Jay Solomon, the advocacy manager of CIJA. "And the Web site during Apartheid Week had 75,000 hits, many of them going to information about Israel pages or to our events page. So it was a positive engagement tool that not only brought people to the site but brought them to see Israel in a positive light because of the information and events that were contained there."

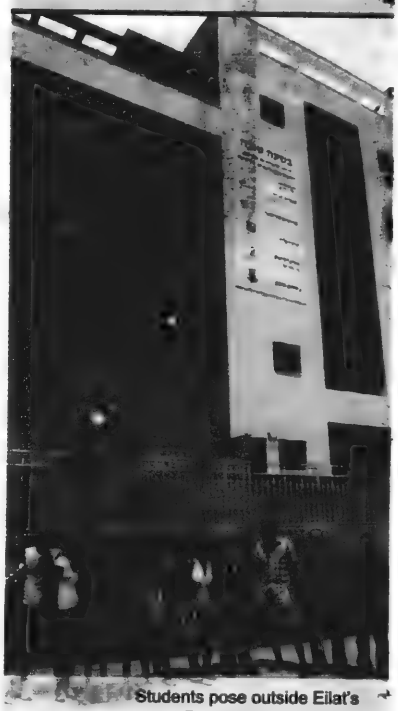
According to Hillel director Kaye, the scope and flavor of the campaign proved that the pro-Israel students can take back the agenda.

"We've always taken the position of being proactive. The problem was that the Israel Apartheid Week was strong and created such a roar it placed us in a reactive mode rather than a proactive one," he said. "So, for a few years, yes, we were on the defensive, but when we pushed back, as we did this year, it showed the strength of Toronto's Jewish students."

"One-hundred percent of the credit has to go to the students," added the CJC's Kerbel. "They're incredibly committed. We've recognized that the anti-Israel environment is doing nothing but creating an extreme way of thinking – there is not intellectual discourse involved – there's just tit for tat going back and forth, and there is no appetite on campus for this anymore. I think they present a shining example of what other pro-Israel students on campuses across North America and the world can do."

THE BANG BEHIND THE BUCKS

"Canadians are used to talking about 'frontiers' and we can understand very well how in Israel the 'periphery' is very much a frontier," says Sokolsky.



Students pose outside Eilat's Ben-Gurion University.

"The term periphery is a difficult concept for Canadians to grasp," says Ted Sokolsky, the energetic president of UJA Federation of Greater Toronto. "On the other hand, Canadians are used to talking about 'frontiers' and we can understand very well how in Israel the 'periphery' is very much a frontier – in more ways than one."

Sokolsky was explaining how the Federation has succeeded in convincing not only the Toronto Jewish community, but Israeli partners to buy into the plethora of projects it funds in Israel.

In fact, according to Sokolsky, one of the main reasons the Federation has been so successful in implementing projects is through its ability to find compatible partners.

"The bigger component is when you put $1 million into a project and raise two more million with leveraging, and it turns into a $100 million program through either the government or industry. And that's what we're trying to focus on today," he said.

"Whether it's through the Israeli government, organizations in the country or private philanthropists, we've been able to leverage the money we put into projects and get a much better bang for our buck in terms of what you're doing."

THAT BANG is being felt throughout Israel in ways that many of those being affected aren't even aware of. Working through the Magbit Canada office in Jerusalem, the Federation identifies areas in which its involvement can make a tangible difference in the lives of the community.*

For example, proceeds from this year's Walk with Israel have been allocated toward programs for Ethiopian immigrants in Bat Yam, the home of the fastest - growing Ethiopian community in the country, with more than 650 families, 30 percent of whom arrived within the last three years.

After several years of funding a successful program for the Ethiopian community in the Rehovot neighborhood of Kiryat Moshe, the Federation has initiated similar programs in Bat Yam. The Youth Futures program employs professionally-trained "trustees" to serve as big brothers and liaisons between home, school and social services for children. The Mirchav-Spaces program, in partnership with the Rashi Foundation, identifies and monitors the needs of 230 children, and provides a slew of other services aimed at giving the next generation of Ethiopian Israelis a fighting chance.

This past May, the Federation dedicated the first student dormitories on the campus of the Eilat branch of Ben-Gurion University of the Negev. They were built at a cost of $4.5 million, including an initial $2.3 million grant from the Federation, which is twinned with the Eilat region through the Jewish Agency's Partnership 2000 program. Additional funding was provided by the Rashi Foundation, Ben-Gurion University and the Eilat Municipality.

"The dormitory project is based on a very ambitious objective of transforming the region from one which is uniformly focused and dependent on tourism into a region that is highlighted by higher education and renewable energy innovation," said Howard English, director of strategic communications.

"So when you think about it, it's actually a startlingly ambitious goal – to take an area which is so strongly associated with tourism and low-paying jobs and to try to transform it. Over the past five years or so, we've been working steadily toward those twin objectives.

"In terms of higher education, we defined it very broadly, not just as a BGU campus in Eilat, but as improving the quality of education in the public school system. The rate of matriculation had been relatively low and the number of kids who went to university was low. So we work in partnership with the municipality and the Education Ministry on measures to improve the quality of education."

The Federation has also introduced work /study programs which allow young people to work in the tourism industry and attend university at the same time – with the cooperation of the tourism and hotel industry, as well as BGU. And another program enables high-school seniors to attend university once a week.

"I talked to many of these kids when I was there a couple of years ago, and they said things to me that you would never hear in Canada – like 'my mother is so proud of me' – they would never have dreamed that their daughter or son would be at attending a university. The self-esteem gained by making the university so accessible to high-school kids in Eilat was heartwarming and palpable," English said.

IN THE same geographical area, the Federation has committed funds over the last three years to develop the Hevel Eilot region as a leader in the field of renewable energy.

Funding for the Renewable Energy Project has supported research and development at the Arava Institute for Environmental Studies, the first renewable energy faculty in Israel where students can obtain a master's degree in the field. The renewable energy initiative also extends to educational programming in high schools and local communities, the goal being to nurture a thriving industry for residents.

"It's been a great success, and today you've got government involvement in building power plants in that area, people like Siemens making major investments in the area, you've got the International Conference for Renewable Energy, a conference that we helped fund initially – it's basically self-supporting today and a profit maker for the city," said Brian Schachter, chairman of the Federation's overseas committee.

Udi Gat, chairman of the Eilot Regional Council, praised the Toronto Jewish community for being the first to believe in the region and its potential with renewable energy.

"Renewable energy will generate job opportunities and prosperity for the residents and make us leaders in the global effort to sustain our planet. All of these factors will contribute to establishing the region as the Silicon Valley of renewable energy," he said.

According to Federation chairman Alan Winer, the way the Federation has maneuvered within these various projects to bring in community partners is helping to change the way philanthropy for Israel is perceived.

"I think our relationship historically, between the Diaspora community and Israel, has been more like a poor cousin type of relationship," he said. "And I think it's developed a lot more into partnerships, into helping disadvantaged people in Israel, and in a lot of our projects now, whether they be in Bat Yam or Eilat, we really partner up."

Gissin agreed that the Federation has been especially adept at finding the right projects in which to invest and promote. "There's a real understanding here of the strengths and weaknesses of Israeli society. The true partnership is the development of more than the traditional model of philanthropy; it's a real two-sided relationship," he said.

Members of the overseas committee of the Federation travel to Israel a number of times a year to monitor the various projects and, according to Winer, roll up their sleeves to volunteer.

Model of Eilat's Ben-Gurion University Campus.

"I went on one of these 'holiday' trips – and you're working literally 14-16 hours a day – and you're going down and meeting your partners and making a difference in lives," Winer said. "When you meet with the people in Bat Yam for example, or go to the Eilot region and visit some of the projects in the schools, and you see it really makes a difference in peoples' lives. Unlike here in Toronto, where the people benefiting from social services don't really come out and talk to you, there they'll bring out the parents and the kids who are impacted and you see firsthand how lives are being changed. It's really rewarding.

The approach that the Federation takes with its projects is similar to the way the founding fathers of the country developed the infrastructure, claimed Schachter.

"The two big picture concepts in our approach involve vision and expanded partnerships. What we were doing in the past was meeting immediate needs. We would go to the Eilat area and we would receive presentations on its immediate needs and we'd agree and help to fix the immediate needs," he said.

"But where was the vision, the big idea? In a sense this new approach was very Israeli. We now go into an area with an approach that's like the foundation on which Israel was built and continues to thrive – which is to think as big as you possibly can – to think of everything that could be possible and then design the mechanism to achieve it."

The end result, according to Sarah Mali, director of Israel engagement at the Federation, is an expanded sense of community.

"That's the added value of what we do behind the dollars – one of real conversation and dialogue, encouraging community," she said, referring to another project, the current upgrading of the emergency room facilities at Eilat's Josephthal Hospital.

Neglected and unprepared to fill the community's growing needs, the emergency room comprises only eight stations in a single hall separated by curtains. Women giving birth can find themselves next to patients with contagious diseases. Through the Federation's involvement, construction is now under way to expand the emergency room by 500% and introduce sorely needed state of the art equipment.

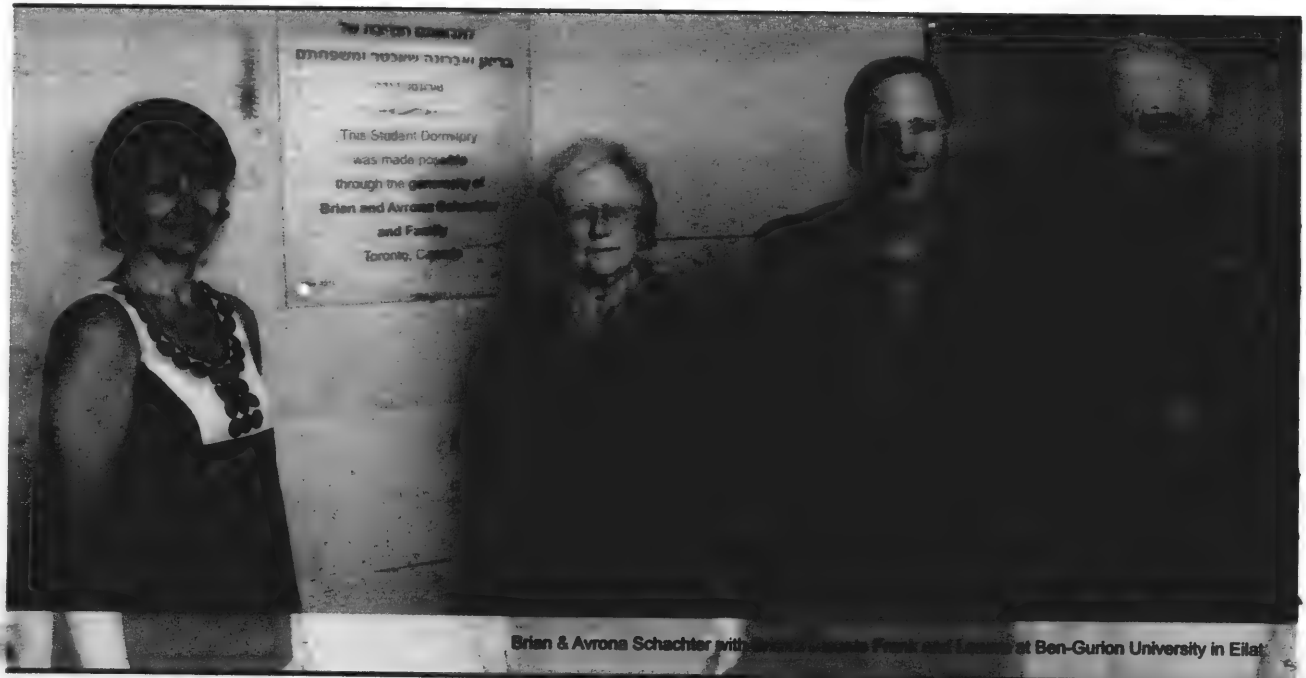
"We got involved with both the government and the Clalit Health Fund and leveraged our offer of first funding into building a new emergency department in Eilat," said Mali.

According to Schachter, it's all about partnership and involvement.

"Instead of saying, 'Here's some money and I'm going to tell you what you're going to do with it,' we really work very differently," he said. "We're sitting around a round table and we discuss, 'How do we help you, how do you help us, how do we integrate this, how do we create something?' When we come and sit with mayors or other leaders of the community, it's so unbelievable when you hear them talking as a we.'"

Funds raised by UJA for Israel and overseas needs are allocated to United Israel Appeal Canada inc. (UIA) for which authorized organizations deliver services.*

The writer was a guest of the UJA Federation of Greater Toronto.



Brian & Avrona Schachter with [illegible] at Ben-Gurion University in Eilat.

SABRAS AND MAPLE LEAFS

18.06.2010

"Because the Israelis that come here are, on the whole, young, we emphasize the issue of developing young leadership," says Toronto UJA director.

Strolling along picturesque Lake Ontario during the Toronto Jewish community's annual Walk with Israel this past May, the dominance of English among the nearly 10,000 participants receives some stiff competition – not from French, the other official language of Canada – but from Hebrew.

The number of Israelis living in Greater Toronto has expanded to almost 30,000, with around 500 new families arriving each year, according to Galya Sarner, the director of the Israeli Council of UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, who is in charge of attempting to implement the seemingly contradictory tasks of integrating the transplanted residents in their new community and helping them keep strong ties to Israel.

"Since many Israeli Canadians are very secure in their Israeli and Jewish identity, they feel that they don't need to actively maintain it, and as a result, their children are very vulnerable to losing that connection," said the Jerusalem-born Sarner, 48, who moved to Canada four years ago with her husband, Robert, a former IBA TV anchorman, and their three children.

Because Israelis also shied away from getting involved with communal Jewish activities through the traditional Federation avenues, there was rarely an overlap between Toronto Jews and the burgeoning Israeli community in their midst. After a study that UJA Federation of Greater Toronto commissioned from the Board of Jewish Education five years ago revealed that Israelis felt excluded by the Jewish community, the Federation's president, Ted Sokolsky, hired Sarner to establish the UJA Israeli Forum Committee to do something about it.

"Ted recognized the potential power of the Israeli community here, he understood that they could provide a certain infrastructure, and instead of being a separate entity, they were an integral part of the Jewish community," said Sarner.

Through programs aimed at Israelis – ranging from establishing a center for Hebrew and Israel studies for children through eighth grade called Kachol Lavan, the strengthening of the Tzofim movement, the Mifgash program aimed at bringing together adult members of the Jewish and Israeli communities and a Hebrew community theater program in conjunction with the Cameri – there's been success in bringing them into the community, according to Sarner.

"Because the Israelis that come here are, on the whole, young, we emphasize the issue of developing young leadership, the goal being that they end up taking major roles in the future of the Federation," she says.

"Galya's done an amazing job in integrating the Israelis who have moved to Toronto within the Jewish community here," says Sokolsky. "In addition, whether it's the Walk with Israel, the annual Yom Hashoah ceremony, or special campaigns we had to help Israel during the Second Lebanon War and Operation Cast Lead, the Israeli community plays a leading role."

The Federation programs for the Israeli Canadians have proven to be so effective that they've rekindled in some the lost spark of Zionism, resulting in 700 people returning to Israel last year, according to statistics provided to Sarner by the Israeli Consulate in Toronto.

"In many ways, in terms of Zionism, our project is a great tool," she says.

"We think that the place for Jews is Israel and we've passed that on to our children. But if we do live here, for whatever reasons, we never forget our roots and we'll always be Israeli first. We always put the option on the table of them going to Israel and giving back to the country what we received by living there."

UNITED JEWISH APPE
OF GREATER

Walking the fine line between making them feel at home by creating attachments to the Jewish community and safeguarding and strengthening their already established ties to Israel, Sarner thinks she has found a happy medium that meets many of the needs of the Israelis living in Toronto.

"What we're really saying is okay, we have a large number of Israelis that chose to leave their country and live here. But let's not close the door on them, let's open it – in both directions."

Downtown Toronto's Finest Boutique Hotel
The GRAND HOTEL TORONTO
Reservations 1-877-32-GRAND
www.grandhoteltoronto.com
aeroplan Earn 500 Aeroplan Miles per night and up to 15,000 Aeroplan Miles for Extended Stays

The Canadian Jewish news

60 Pages | Thursday, November 11, 2010 | 4 Kislev, 5771 | $1.25

MERKAZ 2010–2011 SEASON
MERCAZ NOW
MERKAZ.COM

This Week

National

Tarek Fatah says anti-Semitism is endemic to Islamic societies. Page 3

Exploring the changing kosher world. Page 42

Remembrance Day

We haven't forgotten them. Special Report. Page 44

Arts & Travel

Kosher Lutherans explores issues of morality. Page 52

Sports & Leisure

Group spurs youth development through sport. Page 58

Index

National 3
Editorials & Letters 8
Perspectives 9
Opinions 10
The Kirshner File 11
Jewish Life 22
Holocaust Education Week .. 26
Family Moments 29
What's New 30
Obituaries & Notices 32
On Campus 32
According to Reports 34
Yiddish Corner 38
Spice of Life 42
Israel & the Jewish World 45
Arts & Travel 51

www.cjnews.com

Canada Post Publication Agreement #40008484
Publication Mail Registration #09894

PM pledges government's support for Israel

Prime Minister Stephen Harper speaks at the Inter-Parliamentary Coalition for Combating Antisemitism conference in Ottawa. [Herman Cheung/PMO photo]

By MORDECHAI BEN-DAT
Editor

OTTAWA – Prime Minister Stephen Harper pledged on Monday that his government will always stand up against the campaign of demonization, double standards and the delegitimization of Israel.

"When Israel – the only country in the world whose very existence is under attack – is consistently and conspicuously singled out for condemnation, I believe we are morally obligated to take a stand," Harper said at the Ottawa Conference on Combating Antisemitism.

"It is a responsibility of us all," the prime minister added, to stand up to what he referred to as the "three D's" – demonization, double standards and delegitimization.

More than 150 parliamentarians from 53 countries were on hand to hear Harper speak. They were in Ottawa to take part in the conference, which was organized by the second Inter-Parliamentary Coalition to Combat Antisemitism (ICCA). The inaugural conference was held in London, England, last year. The co-founders of the conference are John Mann, a Labour party MP from the United Kingdom, and Irwin Cotler, the Liberal MP for Westmount.

Referring to Canada's recent loss in its bid for a seat on the United Nations Security Council, Harper said: "Whether it is at the United Nations, or any other international forum, the easy thing to do is simply get along and go along with this anti-Israel rhetoric, to pretend it is just being even-handed, and to excuse oneself with the label of 'honest broker.' There are, after all, a lot more votes in being anti-Israel than in taking a stand. But as long as I am prime minister, whether it is at the UN or the Francophonie or anywhere else, Canada will take that stand, whatever the cost."

Harper said that he had just returned from an official visit to Ukraine, where he laid a wreath at the monument at Babi Yar, the site of a massacre where more than 30,000 Jews and thousands of non-Jews were slaughtered. He referred to it as "a place of evil, evil at its most cruel, obscene and grotesque."

He spoke emphatically about the importance and the need to remember the Holocaust. "Remembering the Holocaust is not merely an act of historical recognition.

Continued on page 35

Legislators meet in Ottawa to discuss anti-Semitism

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

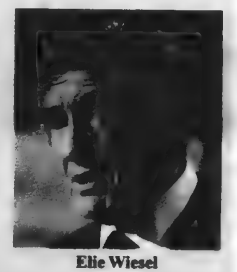
How best to fight anti-Semitism?

That was the burning question addressed by some 250 politicians, observers and experts from 53 countries as they gathered in Ottawa earlier this week for the 2010 Conference on Combating Antisemitism.

Sponsored by the government of Canada and organized by the Inter-Parliamentary Coalition to Combat Anti-Semitism (ICCA) – a group co-founded by Canadian Liberal MP Irwin Cotler and British Labour MP John Mann – the Nov. 7 to 9 conference was billed as the world's largest gathering of delegates dedicated to eradicating the age-old hatred.

"Anti-Semitism is the oldest and more enduring of hatreds – a lethal obsession, as it has been called – which has caused untold catastrophes," Cotler said in a statement. "As it has been said, 'while it may begin with Jews, it doesn't end with Jews.' We ignore anti-Semitism at our peril."

The Ottawa meeting is the second such event of its kind. The inaugural ICCA conference was held in London last year and resulted in the "London Declaration," signed by lawmakers from around the world who pledged to "affirm democratic and human values, build societies based on respect and citizenship and combat any manifestations of anti-Semitism and discrimination."



Elie Wiesel

Continued on page 35

Vayetzei
Candlelighting: 4:38
Havdalah: 5:44
Greater Toronto Area

CJN0000860064 12000 13JAN11
PATTI RENIHAN XXDIR(J)
MCLAREN MICROPUBLISHING LT 017
PO BOX 972 STATION F 863
TORONTO ON M4Y 2N9

Federations' General Assembly opens in New Orleans – please see pages 45 and 46

The News in Brief

Canada

Symphony Performs

OTTAWA — The Raanana Symphonette Orchestra made its Canadian debut this week at the Nov. 9 opening of the Jewish Federation of Ottawa's Holocaust Education Week. The 46-member ensemble, established in 1991, performed at the Shenkman Centre in the suburb of Orleans in a concert that paid tribute to Alma Rose, a prominent violinist virtuoso from Vienna and niece of composer Gustav Mahler, who died in Auschwitz. Before her death, she formed an orchestra, and many of the musicians chosen for it were able to avoid death as a result.

New 'Buycott' Guide

TORONTO — The creators of the Buycott Israel campaign have issued a guide to help supporters of Israel counter backers of the boycott, divestment and sanctions (BDS) campaign. Divest This! How to Stop the Global Boycott, Divestment and Sanctions 'Movement's' Attack on Israel and Ensure Its Second Decade of Defeat is described as a "comprehensive, colourful guide designed to help everyone dealing with BDS in their community."The 41-page document has sections on talking points, case studies of successful anti-BDS campaigns on campuses, strategies and tactics and answers to frequently asked questions. It's available free at buycottisrael.ca/alerts.

Geldof Speaks

TORONTO — Bob Geldof, the musician and activist who organized the Live 8 concerts in 2005 and the Band Aid and Live Aid fundraisers for African relief in the 1980s, was the keynote speaker Nov. 7 at a fundraiser for Ve'ahavta – the Canadian Jewish Humanitarian & Relief Committee. The Irish-born Geldof, who was also the lead singer of the British rock band the Boomtown Rats, was knighted by Queen Elizabeth II in 1986. The event's MC was David Shore, creator, writer and executive producer of TV's House.

World

Rutgers Gaza Event

NEW YORK — A student group at Rutgers University held a fundraiser in support of a blockade-busting flotilla to Gaza. The Nov. 4 event, which featured a halal buffet, was held by the campus organization BAKA: Students United for Middle Eastern Justice. The dinner and speakers were advertised as in support of the group U.S. to Gaza, which plans to sponsor a boat in a flotilla to break Israel's Gaza blockade. BAKA reportedly used student activity fees to sponsor the event. The Anti-Defamation League reportedly and Rutgers Hillel opposed the event.

Former President Recalls Rabin Fondly

NEW YORK — If Israel and the Palestinians cut a peace deal, Syria likely would ally itself with the West over Iran, and Lebanon would be truly independent, Bill Clinton said.

Bill Clinton

The former U.S. president also warned that Israel will need friends in the region for a future when attacks from Gaza are conducted, not with crude, inaccurate rockets, but with rockets that inevitably will make use of technological advances to stage GPS-like precision attacks.

Clinton spoke at a Nov. 4 memorial service in New York aboard the U.S.S. Intrepid marking the 15th anniversary of the assassination of Israeli prime minister Yitzhak Rabin. He said Rabin recognized early on that demographics in the Holy Land made a Palestinian state necessary to preserve Israel's democratic and Jewish character.

Calling the day Rabin was shot "one of the saddest days of my life," Clinton shared personal memories of Rabin, who died Nov. 4, 1995, after a peace rally in Tel Aviv.

Clinton said he thinks of Rabin all the time, including five minutes before the wedding of his daughter, Chelsea, to Marc Mezvinsky, her longtime Jewish boyfriend. Clinton said he imagined having a conversation with Rabin, who would have said Clinton finally got something right by having his daughter marry a Jewish guy.

Speakers at Brandeis

BOSTON — Two Jewish student groups sponsored Israeli Occupation Awareness Week at Brandeis University. Students for Justice in Palestine and Jewish Voices for Peace co-hosted four days of speakers and films on what they said is the Israeli occupation of Palestinian lands. The events at the school in Waltham, Mass., a non-sectarian university founded by the American Jewish community, took place Nov. 8 to 11.

IZENBERG GOLDBERG Monuments

Nov. 1 – Dec. 31/10 SAVINGS

SINGLE MONUMENTS any colour granite $1400 | DOUBLE MONUMENTS any colour granite $2400

Be an educated consumer, compare quality and price.
We do not pay any funeral home commissions for their recommendations.
Our prices are therefore lower. We will not be undersold!

Serving generations of families in Toronto's Jewish community for over 90 years

We are a family owned and operated with informed, impartial Monument specialists in a no-pressure, non-commissioned sales environment.

3173 BATHURST ST.
(4 blocks north of Lawrence)
416-787-0319
www.izenberggoldberg.com

Steeles Memorial Chapel

www.steelesmemorial.com

- Current Listing of Funerals
- Listing of Cemeteries and Maps of Sections
- Yahrzeit Calculator for Civil & Hebrew dates
- Kaddish Texts
- Educational Information about Shiva - Unveiling - After-Care - Prayers - Jewish Burial Rites
- Jewish Holiday Dates

905-881-6003

Serving the Jewish Community since 1927.

The security of a GIC. A 7.25%* rate of return.

Yes, really.

Suitable for ages 60-80.
Minimum investment $50,000.
Certain conditions apply.

*Rate based on a 70 year old male.

GIC Income Exchange Inc. Call for details. 416.787.1366

The Canadian Jewish News

Vol. XL, No. 44 (1,973)*

Gary Laforet
General Manager

Mordechai Ben-Dat
Editor

Vera Gillman
Advertising & Assistant General Manager

Carol Jamieson, Controller

Jeff Rosen, News & Internet Editor

Joseph Serge
Arts, Travel and Supplements Editor

Janice Arnold, Carolyn Blackman, Sheldon Kirshner, Frances Kraft, David Lazarus, Elias Levy, Andy Levy-Ajzenkopf, Paul Lungen, Sheri Shefa, Laura Stricker
Staff Reporters

G. Gall, J. Gerber, B. Gladstone, M. Gordon, N. Joseph, Rabbi J. Kelman, M. Lockshin, P. Michaels, M. Mietkiewicz, A. Rosensweig, L. Speisman, L. Weinberg
Columnists

Cynthia Gasner, Joel Jacobson, Diane Koven, Lauren Kramer, Myron Love, Rhonda Spivak
Canadian Correspondents

Jenny Hazan, Israel Bureau

Carolan Halpern, Ruth Schweitzer, Daniel Wolgelerenter
Copy Editors

Ella Burakowski
Assistant Advertising Manager

Bev Bergman, Gloria Clamen, Lisa Freid, Sarah Laiken, Honey Mahl, Elie Malka, Sholom Wargon, Grace Zweig
Sales Representatives, Toronto

Doris Perez
Office Manager

Alma Delory, Lucy Semtchenko, Karen Syptak
Office Staff, Toronto

David Collin
Promotions Manager, Circulation

Brian Stoneman
Composing Room Manager

Leo Berlin, José De Freitas, Trevor Miller, Anahit Nahapetyan, Nick Radelja, Lila Sarick, Michael Stavsky
Production Staff

Donald Carr, George A. Cohon, Steven Cummings, Betty Elkaim, Julia Koschitzky, Albert J. Latner, Lionel H. Schipper, Shoel Silver, Robert Vineberg, Elizabeth Wolfe, Rose Wolfe, Rubin Zimmerman
Directors

Ray D. Wolfe
Founding President (1971-1990)

CIRCULATION
Total circulation: 35,160 copies.
Total paid circulation: 34,313 copies.
CCNA verified circulation July 28, 2010

SUBSCRIPTIONS
Canada: $37.80, 1 yr. incl. taxes
$68.00, 2 yr. incl. taxes
Online edition:
$20.95 1 yr. incl. taxes
U.S.A. / Foreign:
$135 Cdn. funds, 1 yr.

Postmaster: Please return 2985 and changes of address to CJN, 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4.

Postage Paid at Toronto
Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09854

*Under current ownership

We acknowledge the financial support of the Government of Canada, through the Publications Assistance Program, towards our mailing costs.

Canada

The Canadian Jewish News

How To Reach Us

Head Office: 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4 Tel: 416-391-1836
Advertising Fax: 416-391-0949 Editorial Fax: 416-391-0829
Advertising E-mail: adscjn@gmail.com Editorial E-mail: cjninfo@gmail.com
Website: www.cjnews.com
Subscription Inquiries: Toll Free: 1-866-849-0864 Fax: 905-946-1679
E-mail: cjnews@indas.on.ca
IMP - Israel Advertising Representatives
POB 7195, Jerusalem, Israel Tel: 02-625-2933 Fax: 02-624-9240 E-mail:info@impmedia.co.il

FRIENDS OF
SIMON WIESENTHAL CENTER
FOR HOLOCAUST STUDIES
416-864-9735
www.fswc.ca
DIRECT ACTION NOW

National

Greater Toronto Area

Sonny Goldstein, CFP
President
Planning For Retirement?
Confused about your financial future?
Let us help you understand how
to reach your financial goals
Call Sonny Goldstein
Chartered Life Underwriter
Chartered Financial Consultant
416-221-0060
HIGHEST QUOTES ON RRIF s, ANNUITIES, etc.
Creative Ideas in Financial Planning

Canadian Muslim author fights anti-Semitism

Fatah maintains Qur'an essentially preaches respect for Judaism

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

In an era when anti-Semitic notions and reactionary beliefs are prevalent in the Islamic world, Tarek Fatah, a Canadian of Pakistani Muslim ancestry, stands out boldly and courageously as a refreshing exception.

Fatah, a founder of the Muslim Canadian Congress, is a secular liberal democrat who upholds social and political pluralism, promotes progressive ideas such as gender equality, despises Islamic radicalism, opposes Shariah law and supports Israel's right to exist as a Jewish state.

Now, in a move bound to rally his friends and upset his enemies, Fatah has written a hard-hitting book, The Jew Is Not My Enemy (McClelland & Stewart), in which he roundly denounces and condemns anti-Semitism and hatred of Israel.

Fatah claims anti-Semitism is "endemic" in Islamic societies and quite common in Canada among Muslims.

"So much so, I had to write a book about it," he said in an interview last week. "I wanted to put this information out into the open."

According to Fatah, Muslim anti-Semitism is largely rooted in the Hadith, a collection of the Prophet Muhammad's oral proclamations written centuries after his death. Israel and its policies have contributed to anti-Semitic feelings, he noted.

Although he admits the Qur'an contains "some pretty harsh language about Jews," he maintains it essentially preaches respect for Judaism.

Far from considering himself a lonely voice in the wilderness, Fatah, a journalist and broadcaster who worked in Pakistan and Saudi Arabia before settling in Canada, says his unorthodox views are not really that uncommon among his fellow Muslims.

Tarek Fatah

"In my fight against Muslim anti-Semitism, I am not alone," he writes in his latest book. "Muslim voices around the world are making brave attempts in the face of intimidation and slander to fight the rise of jihadi Islamism."

Although he has never personally met an anti-Semitic Iranian, Indonesian, Turk or Bosnian, Fatah believes anti-Semitism enjoys a disturbing degree of acceptance in Canada's Muslim community.

The virus has particularly affected young, Canadian-born Pakistanis, who cloak their animus in leftist rhetoric. He branded them "the foot soldiers" of Islamic radicalism.

Fatah denounced Omar Khadr – the Pakistani-Canadian Al Qaeda recruit who gained notoriety and a long prison sentence after killing a U.S. soldier in Afghanistan – as "a very dangerous man" and "self-confessed killer" who has never renounced the doctrine of armed jihadism or Shariah law.

Describing himself as "a thorn in the side" of Islamists, Fatah said he has a "moral and ethical duty" to combat Islamic radicals. "They're not just anti-Jewish, but anti-Canadian. I want to drag them out of the ninth century."

Continued on page 18

Here Come The Holidays!
Pay No HST*
Visit our new 10,000 sq. ft. Leather Gallery plus our new SleepWorks mattress gallery!
DECORIUM
www.decorium.com
Just what you're looking for in a furniture store.*
416 736 6120 • 1 800 232 2267
363 Supertest Rd. Toronto, ON M3J 2M4
Join us on: facebook
www.facebook.com/decorium
Proud Supporters of: Baycrest
*Not to be combined with any other offer, not subject to prior sales, we will pay the equivalent of the hst, all sales final, event ends 30/11/10.

THE KASHRUTH COUNCIL OF CANADA

COR

Please be advised that

Compliments brand Chocolates, Candies, and Nuts

which bear a COR 345 "sticker" are not kosher certified.

These products, (found at Sobeys: Jefferson Square, Vaughan/Thornhill, and Clark & Hilda stores) should not be used even when bearing the COR 345 "sticker". For a complete list of affected Compliments products, visit Alerts! on our website.

Corrective measures have been taken.

Important to note: This Alert applies only to products which have "stickers". If the COR 345 is imprinted on the label, the item is kosher approved.

* * * * *

To receive Kosher Alerts via e-mail, visit our website at www.cor.cq and click on "Kashruth Alerts"

Benjamin's Park Memorial Chapel

Through the generations ...a sacred trust

JEWISH FUNERALS

"Know that the highest standard of observance is here for you, in times of sorrow."

Michael Benjamin

People often tell me our strict adherence to the principle of kavod ha-met, respect for the dead, reassures them that they are doing the right thing. Our devout Chevra Kadisha has operated since 1922. Every year, we commission a new keepsake plate for members – tangible evidence that they are part of the longest serving burial society in Toronto. You can see the plates from each of our 87 years in a cabinet in the chapel foyer.

2401 Steeles Ave., West, Toronto

416-663-9060

www.benjamins.ca

The Benjamin Group companies:
Benjamin's Park Memorial Chapel, Benjamin's Landmark Monuments, The Benjamin Foundation, The Benjamin Institute, Benjamin's Lifecycle Financial Services

Greater Toronto Area

Song of peoplehood

From the editor's desk...

The image of the flowing moustache cushioning the riveting, pinpoint eyes, inset, is the visual signature of the American folk-rock band of songwriters and musicians, Safam. (Safam, in Hebrew, means moustache. Hence the image.)

The group was founded some 36 years ago. It was after the Yom Kippur War, a time when Israel's enemies, with increasing audacity and mendaciousness in their hearts, began their program of peddling anti-Israel rhetoric and propaganda in North America.

Zionism-as-racism was the rallying cry of the impassioned, yet unknowing social activists on campuses across the continent. For the ill-informed, highly agitated campus ideologues who saw Yasser Arafat's people as the newly wretched of the earth of author and revolutionary Franz Fanon, Israel was emerging as the oppressor and the new international villain.

That malign, false image of the Jewish state took root in many poisoned young hearts. The generation that imbibed the Arafatian message – even, alas, including many Jews – has since raised its own children and helped send them to their own campus experience. Almost four decades later, we are witnessing the bitter harvest.

But not everyone who was on campus in the mid-'70s when the PLO leader ascended to the dais of the UN General Assembly, accepted his message.

Many students searching for their own Jewish bearings or for a milieu of peer group, social solidarity found part of the anti-Arafat antidote in the poetry, music and energy of Safam.

They wrote and sang to the very heart of Jewish America, and in particular to inquisitive hearts of young, campus-age Jewish America.

Many were we who marched to the driving beat and inspiring message of Safam's music, the certainty of the justice of Israel's cause stirring our souls to courage and commitment.

Last week, Safam played one of their rare concerts in Canada. They appeared at Beth Tikvah Synagogue, which is known for its musical programming and innovation. How good it was to see them and to feel again the flow of their music coursing with the same electricity as in our youth through our less youthful Jewish veins.

The original founding four of Safam bounded onto stage: Joel Sussman, Robbie Solomon, the group's writers and composers, Alan Nelson and Dan Funk – sparser on top and somewhat rounder at the middle than they were three decades ago.

Very quickly however, it became apparent that their talent and charisma were unabated. Mark Snyder on bass and Bob Weiner on percussion completed the six-person group.

Robbie Solomon sang World of Our Fathers, which was, perhaps, the signature piece of their third album, Sons of Safam.

"Just keep the faith of your people wherever you go/ There a friend you will find" is the emotional message of the poem/song. It tells the story of a man who immigrated to America, whose children turned away from their traditions to embrace the exhilarating life of the New Land and who eventually lived to see "[his] father's world begin to rise in [his] great-grandchildren's eyes."

Solomon's voice is soft and soaring at the same time. The song sings of the prototypical Jewish immigrant experience at the turn of the last century.

But it ends redemptively with hope and possibility.

Sussman sang Moranno from their eighth album, On Track. Velvet and emphatic, Sussman's voice virtually caresses the senses. The song tells of a lonely New York boy whose Jewish soul was dead until he falls in love with Maria.

A descendent of Marranos (hidden Jews of the Inquisition), Maria, through love and tender assertiveness, teaches the New York boy "who they are." The song is a moving, expressive peaen to belonging and history.

And so it was the entire night. Alternating between original compositions and their stylized renditions of traditional prayers, Safam performed 20 songs to the great delight of the audience, who clapped, hummed, sang and rocked along with the group on stage.

"Their music has never been duplicated," we were told as the group was introduced. "Safam occupies a vital place in Jewish-American music. They instilled a sense of pride in being Jewish in North America, along with an overwhelming social consciousness and a sense of tikkun olam."

These words were no overstatement. They were and are true. As was once written about them, "the music of Safam gave us courage to contend with intimidation, or just as often, the encouragement to seek our own Jewish paths."

Safam sings about peoplehood.

Thus wherever and whenever Jews, strive to find the pilot light of their respective identities, their music will find a place and will help the flame glow higher.

Safam's music is everlasting.

–MBD

SeeJN

SABBATH QUEENS

To ensure that their Sabbath meals are not lonely, a group of single Jewish women in London, Ont., ranging in age from mid-40s to mid-60s, meet once a month for a potluck Shabbat dinner. The dinners are hosted at group members' homes on a rotating basis, as is the preparation of a dvar Torah. From left are Anna Leich, Rosie Harris, Renee Silberman, Sharon Richman, Robin Israel, D'vorah Elias, Gail Silverman Bass, Gayle Marcus and Jacquie Brodsky.

THE ISRAELI SOURCE

WHY WAIT UNTIL CHANUKAH TO BUY YOUR CHANUKAH NEEDS AT CLEARANCE PRICES?

THE CLEARANCE SALE BEGINS ! SHOP EARLY AND !

SAVE 33%
FROM 20¢
Dreidels, Plastic or Wood Assorted Sizes

SAVE 40%
$5.99
Crayola Chanukah Cookie Kit

SAVE 60%
$1.99
Musical Light-Up Dreidels Assorted Colours

SAVE 30%
$27.99
Pre-Filled Olive Oil "EZ-Lite" Chanukah Lights, 44 Pcs

SAVE 40%
$1.25
Chanukah Candles 44 Pcs, Assorted Colours

SAVE 25%
FROM $29.99
Electric Menorah Assorted Colours and Designs

SAVE 36%
$31.99
KidKraft Wooden Chanukah Set 31 Pieces

SAVE 40%
$2.99
Hanukkah-Themed Silly Bands

SAVE $75
$24.99
Silver Plated Oil Menorah 12"

PLUS Get 1 Package of EZ-Lites For Only $17.99!
LIMIT ONE PER MENORAH

SAVE UP TO 40%
FROM $10.99
Chanukah Plush Toy Sets 11 or 14-Pieces

SAVE UP TO 40%
HUGE SELECTION!
Chanukah Partyware Disposable Plates, Cups Etc.

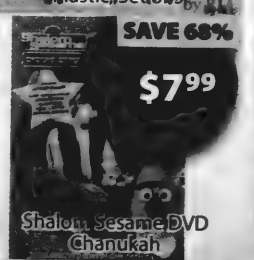
SAVE 50%
$3.49
Chanukah Cookie Cutters Plastic, Set of 5

SAVE UP TO 60%
FROM 89¢
Assorted Chanukah Colouring and/or Activity Books

SAVE 50%
$9.99
Eight Nights of Chanukah 8 Assorted Toys

SAVE 50%
$4.99
Large Plush Dreidel

SAVE 25%
BONUS - GET A FREE PACK OF CANDLES!
$2.49
Menorah, Disposable Tin, Gold or Silver Colour

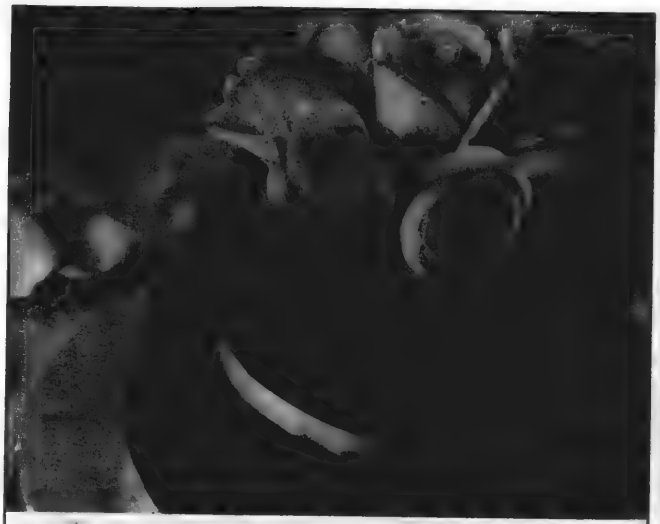


SAVE 68%
$7.99
Shalom Sesame DVD Chanukah

SAVE 50%
FROM $2.49
Chanukah Giftwrap Assorted Patterns

40% OFF ALL STERLING MENORAHS

60 Doncaster Ave., Thornhill · (905) 482-2025 · 1-877-613-1818
Sunday 10-5 · Monday-Thursday 10-6 · Friday 10-2



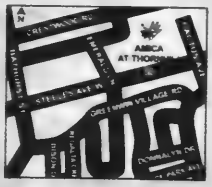
2nd Year Anniversary Celebration

Tuesday, November 16th, 2010
2:00 pm to 4:00 pm

Amica at Thornhill is turning Two! You are invited to an afternoon of entertainment, hors d'ouvres, and tours. Please call to RSVP.

Limited suites available starting from $2850.00

Amica at Thornhill
A Wellness & Vitality℠ Residence
546 Steeles Avenue West
Thornhill, ON L4J 1A2
905.886.3400



10-1638

- Luxury Independent Rental Retirement Living
- All Inclusive - Full Service Fine Dining
- Wellness & Vitality℠ Programs
- Amica VITALIS℠ Assisted Living Suites & Services

www.amica.ca

AMICA

Israeli rabbi to discuss conversion issues

Conference set for Toronto

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

A little while ago, an elite athlete who had been a swimmer for Israel at the Olympics walked into the offices of Itim, the Jewish Life Information Centre in Jerusalem, to ask for help.

The young woman wanted to get married, but she had been stymied in her efforts by the Orthodox rabbi in charge of a local marriage bureau, who demanded she provide documentary proof that her mother was Jewish.

Unable to do so, the Russian-born woman and her betrothed travelled abroad where they were legally married before returning to Israel.

Rabbi Seth Farber, founder and director of Itim, was unable to help her, but he worries about the implications of her story. "Sixty per cent of North American Jews would not be able to break the threshold of proving they're Jews, even though they may care deeply about the Jewish peoplehood," he said. "This is an alarming fact."

Rabbi Seth Farber

Rabbi Farber, who also heads a congregation in Ra'anana, will be in Toronto for two lectures as part of the Renewing Our Spirit 9th annual conference at the Shaarei Shomayim Congregation. Sponsored by Torah in Motion, the event will be held on Saturday night, Nov. 13, and Sunday Nov. 14.

Rabbi Farber will speak on "new Halachot emerging from Israel's rabbinic courts" and "the subtle delegitimization of the majority of the Jewish people during the past decade."

Itim helps Israelis navigate the conversion process, but Rabbi Farber admits the athlete's case is still unresolved, even though she considers herself a Jew.

He's worried about the rabbinic attitude that is making it harder to prospective jews to enter the Jewish fold. "It is creating two different Jews here in Israel. They all have seders on Pesach and they celebrate Chanukah, but they don't share the same definition of Jews."

While the athlete was able to resolve her issue in the near term, Rabbi Farber, who is Orthodox, worries about difficulties she and her family may experience down the road. "Her children will not be considered Jewish, and they may be in trouble in the future when can't get married [to other Jews]. They won't be part of this commonwealth. They won't be part of the collective entity called the State of Israel," he said.

While the athlete's case is not strictly one of conversion, Itim's mandate "is to help people navigate the labyrinth of religious bureaucracies in Israel," Rabbi Farber said.

One avenue Itim has been pursuing runs through the secular courts. In April, after more than 40 complaints from people who'd converted to Judaism, primarily in the army, but who were turned down when they tried to marry, Itim sued the Chief Rabbinate and four local rabbis. (In Israel, personal status issues for Jews, such as marriage and burial, are controlled by the Chief Rabbinate, which appoints local rabbis who perform the marriages.)

The first hearing was in September, and the second is expected in the next few weeks.

"We insisted the court discipline the rabbis who refuse to recognize the conversions and provide alternative marriage registration," Rabbi Farber said.

"This has become a very big issue in Israel," he said. "It highlights the difficult place converts find themselves in… because of the politicization of the Chief Rabbinate."

Critics have lamented the apparent "haredization" of official religious authorities in Israel. State-appointed rabbis have rejected conversions by a special Orthodox conversion court set up to address the Jewish status of hundreds of thousands of immigrants, mostly from the former Soviet Union, who are descended from Jews or who can't prove their Jewish lineage. Rabbi Farber calls their status "a demographic time bomb."

"I've been very much on the record opposing the Rotem conversion bill, which sought to improve the conversion situation, but in its latest version makes it more difficult. It allows for the first time in law for a conversion being annulled," he said.

Rabbi Farber, who has lived in Israel for 15 years after immigrating from New York, said Halachah must be flexible to be able to address the current situation.

"Halachah has always had a plurality of opinion," he said. "What makes Halachah so dynamic is the way it is able to respond to different situations. We need today the creative application of Halachah."

SUMMIT VIEW

RARE. VALUABLE.
AND BRIEFLY AVAILABLE TO
THOSE WHO ACT SWIFTLY.

Previewing this November in the heart of Thornhill Woods.

Crescent enclave of singles and semi-towns from the upper $400's

TO PREVIEW CALL

416-746-1234
www.summitviewhomes.com

The Canadian Jewish news

An independent community newspaper serving as a forum for diverse viewpoints

Publisher and Proprietor
The Canadian Jewish News, a corporation without share capital.
Head Office
1500 Don Mills Rd., Suite 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4

We will remember

It is Remembrance Day. Canadian society no longer sets aside a few moments, stops in its tracks, as it once did each year, at the sounding of the 11th moment of the 11th hour of the 11th month, to remember fallen soldiers. There are indeed ceremonies of remembrance throughout the country. But it would strain truth, alas, to say that we are a society that remembers.

This is both to our peril and to our shame.

It is to our peril because there are vital lessons of history, vital instructions of nation building, we risk never learning by choosing not to remember. It is to our shame because it is egregiously dishonorable not to acknowledge a debt. And there is no higher debt owed than to those who paid for our security, our freedom, our shores untouched by war, with their lives.

World War I, the Great War to End All Wars, came to its shrivelled, scorched close 92 years ago. But it ended no wars. For merely 21 years later, World War II began and a new generation was sent to slog through and die in the mud of many of the same blood-soaked European fields of battle.

Tyrants and dictators – champions of brutality, subjugation, racism and genocide – arose who needed to be stopped. That they were not stopped in the mid-'30s on the fields and cities of Ethiopia or Spain meant that they would be stopped in 1945.

But it was not an anonymous mass of Allied soldiers who stopped them. They were people, individuals we knew and loved, or whom our friends knew and loved. They were our parents, our grandparents and their peers.

They were, for example, as CJN reporter Frances Kraft has written in this issue, Harry Ratner of Winnipeg who was killed at the age of 26; Morley Bernard Stock of Regina, who was killed at 21, and Robert Sirluck of Winnipeg who was killed at 22.

And there were so many more, most of them, too, so very young when their lives ended saving civilization from the tyrants and dictators.

Stock wrote four poems in his flight logbook. The CJN reporter recorded a portion of one of them called To The Fallen Pilot.

"Grieve not, because an eagle
Was from the sky hurled.
His soul will inspire others
To build a new and better world."

"He wasn't blind to the danger," Ernest Sirluck said of his brother Robert, "but he was very resolute, very clear about the absolute necessity of overcoming that scourge."

The new and better world of which Stock wrote is in fact our world in Canada today. How can we not remember him? How can we not remember them all, from all wars, in which they fell?

Indeed, we will. We will always remember them all.

25 years ago in The CJN

Mojad Molki, the leader of the four Palestinian hijackers of the Italian Achille Lauro cruise liner who were awaiting trial in Italy, confessed to U.S. authorities that he himself murdered an elderly Jewish passenger, Leon Klinghoffer, a U.S. citizen, on the ship, Rome's La Republica newspaper reported.

Dry Bones
WITH EUROPEAN BIRTH RATES FALLING
AND MUSLIM IMMIGRANTS GROWING IN NUMBER EUROPE IS NOT CHANGING ITS OPINION . . .
. . . IT'S CHANGING ITS POPULATION.
DryBonesBlog.com

Editorial Advisory Board: Guy Abeodi, Maurice Benzacar, Michael Brown, Donald Carr, Rabbi Michael Dolgin, Daniel Ferman, Igor Korenzvit, Keith Landy, Hindy Najman, Lou Rosson, Alan Sandler, Rabbi Philip Scheim, Mike Shriqui, Pamela Medjuck Stein, Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, Ehud Teleni, Nelson Wiseman.

Ignatieff on Mideast policy

On Nov. 2, I spoke to the Montreal Council on Foreign Relations about rebuilding Canada's leadership on the world stage. In my speech, I discussed Canada's policy in the Middle East. Here's an excerpt.

"Since the State of Israel was officially recognized, Canada has had a bipartisan policy… Two states for two peoples. Recognition of both. Peace, freedom and justice for both. That has always been the basis of Canadian policy. That is a balanced policy.

"But I think that we have to be very clear that being balanced with respect to the Middle East does not mean being neutral. We are not neutral between terrorists and a democratic state. Balance means that there are two peoples and that the land has to be shared – out of fairness for both, and out of a need for security for both.

"In my opinion, what has happened is that the prime minister of Canada has made the Middle East a domestic policy issue for political reasons. And that means that we're starting to get away from the necessary balance that is needed to ensure our influence in the Middle East. And that has been very costly to Canada.

"Losing a seat on the [UN] Security Council has consequences – not only for Canada, but also for our friends in the Middle East. If we want to control the greatest threat to peace in the Middle East, which is Iran, then we have to have a seat on the Security Council. In order to protect Israel against threats, to protect Israel against human-rights resolutions which are not balanced – and also to advance the rights of the Palestinian people – then we need a seat on the Security Council."

Our friends need friends who have friends. Canada will always be a friend to Israel. By rebuilding Canada's leadership on the world stage, we can be a more valuable ally. And by renewing our influence in the international community, we can do more to advance the real objective of our policy in the Middle East: peace.

Michael Ignatieff
Leader of the Liberal Party of Canada.

* * *

Woman desperately needs kidney

Janet Boidman, who attends our synagogue, is fighting for her life and in desperate need of a new kidney. Janet was born on March 3, 1960, in Montreal to Evelyn and Saul Boidman. She is a beautiful lady whose career in early child education at Concordia University was halted due to chronic kidney failure. She is currently on dialysis three times a week. I am calling upon the community to please consider saving this life. If your blood type is A positive and you are in good health and a willing donor, please contact Dr. Barry Barre at the Royal Victoria Hospital at 514-934-1934, ext. 35208, or Dr. Tomoko Takano or the transplant department at 514-934-1934, ext. 34653. If you would like more information about Janet or wish to help in other ways, please contact me at 514-482-3366, ext. 225. Please pass this urgent call to save a life to anyone that you believe can be of help.

Rabbi Asher Jacobson
Chevra Kadisha B'nai Jacob - Beit Hazikaron
Montreal

* * *

Request to Carter about Schalit ignored

As you know, I recently wrote to former U.S. president Jimmy Carter asking that he use his warm relations with Hamas to plead for the release of Gilad Schalit ("Carter urged to take up case of Gilad Schalit," Sept. 16). It was my suggestion that he travel to Gaza and personally offer to bring Schalit out of captivity and safely home to his family in Israel. I received no response to that request nor to a followup letter. I read recently that Carter met with Syrian President Bashar Assad and Hamas leaders residing in Syria. Although he made some anti-Israeli statements about the Israeli blockade of Gaza, he apparently never raised the issue of Schalit. Carter absurdly suggests that the blockade is one the most serious human rights violation on earth. He completely ignores the constant flow of rockets from Gaza into Israel and the fact that the blockade prevents Hamas from acquiring more and more weapons. Carter has lost his creditability as a world leader and a compassionate human being.

Bert Raphael
Thornhill, Ont.

* * *

Figures wrong

The photo caption "Exhibit chronicles Babi Yar massacre" (Nov. 4) claims that "some 150,000 Jews were slaughtered at Babi Yar, just outside Kiev, over a three-day period." The accepted number of deaths over the three-day period in late September 1941, is just under 34,000. There were other mass murders at Babi Yar during the Nazi occupation, over the following years, but these executions, which might conceivably have reached the number of 150,000, were largely of Gypsies, dissident Ukrainians and other targeted groups, not Jews.

C. Peter Herman
Toronto

LET THEM GO…

Ron Arad, Zachary Baumel, Zvi Feldman, Guy Hever, Yehuda Katz

1601

The number of days Hamas has held Gilad Schalit captive

The Canadian Jewish News reserves the right to refuse advertising that in its opinion is misleading, in poor taste or incompatible with the advertising policies of the newspaper. Acceptance of advertising does not imply endorsement by The Canadian Jewish News. The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Letters are welcome if they are brief, in English or French, typewritten with lines double spaced, and of interest to our reading public. Readers are cautioned not to make sweeping claims against persons or institutions which they cannot verify, as libel laws are very stringent. We reserve the right to edit and condense letters, which must bear the sender's address, phone number and both handwritten and typed signatures. Letters sent by e-mail must also include the sender's municipal address. cjninfo@gmail.com

Perspectives

Obama must not force a final peace deal

By ARI SHAVIT
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

There were no real surprises in the U.S. midterm elections. The Republicans gained control of the House of Representatives but not the Senate, came out strong in Kentucky but not California, grabbed a majority of seats but did not enjoy a overwhelming victory.

President Barack Obama is still there. He's weakened but undefeated, bruised but not beaten – moderately wounded.

If anyone in Jerusalem had hoped the Tea Party would save the settlers' party, they were seriously mistaken. The 2010 midterm election time-out is over.

The real game begins now and the name of the game is Palestine. The endgame: establishing a viable Palestinian state within a year.

Why? Because the incumbent American president identifies with the Palestinians and their suffering and wants to do right by them. Because the American president believes establishing a Palestinian state would placate the Arab Muslim world, which he wishes to appease. Because the American president knows that, in the absence of good news in Iraq, Iran and Afghanistan, Palestine is his only chance of making positive headlines.

Only a Palestinian state would justify the Nobel Peace prize he received; only it can give Obama the international legacy he craves; only it can lift the spirit of Obama's self-defined liberal camp.

So in 2011, Palestine will be to the resolute president what health-care reform was to him in 2009. For better or worse, through fire or water, wisely or foolishly, Barack Hussein Obama will see to the establishment of the state of Palestine.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and U.S. President Barack Obama in serious discussion at the White House in September. [Israel Sun photo]

In a certain sense, the president's resolve is to be commended. It's good to have a world leader trying to save the two-state solution at the last moment. It's good to have a world leader willing to invest huge resources to implement the two-state solution. It's good to have a statesman who still has a sufficient sense of justness to understand that the present situation is intolerable. It's good to have a statesman naive enough to think he can fix the world.

But in another sense, Obama's determination is dangerous. Speed is from the devil, as the Arab saying goes. Simplism is a recipe for disaster. The path to hell is paved with good intentions not anchored in reality.

Former U.S. president Bill Clinton tried to impose democracy on the Middle East and failed. If Obama tries to impose an end to the conflict prematurely, he will upset the stability, encourage violence and leave chaos in his wake.

The dilemma is acute: political correctness or political reason, puristic policy trying to build a castle in the sky or sober policy trying to change reality on the ground.

In actuality, the most positive process taking place in the region is Palestinian Prime Minister Salam Fayyad's. A new, building, thriving Palestinian society is being formed in the West Bank.

Unless the Fayyad process is given a substantial political dimension, it will collapse. But it will also collapse if it is given an an unachievable political horizon. The wise thing to do is to tailor for the quiet Palestinian revolution a political suit that fits it – not to try to resolve the refugee dilemma in two months, not to try to resolve the Jerusalem problem in two weeks, not to let ideology and theology place impassable hurdles before the Palestinians and Israelis.

The only way is to have an interim agreement that would minimize the occupation without ending the conflict and without endangering Israel.

The coming weeks will be decisive. Obama, even after losses at home, has enough power to coerce Israel. He can confront the Jewish state, isolate it and impose a false peace on it.

But Obama does not have enough power to turn the fake into real. He cannot topple Hamas, revoke the demand for return and turn a Palestine into a peace-loving state. So if he insists on forcing the issue, all hell will break loose.

In contrast, if he chooses the pragmatic path, he has a good chance of making a change. Only a partial, not final, peace, will grant the Nobel laureate the peace he is pursuing.

Refusal to extend settlement freeze hurting Israel, Livni says

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

JERUSALEM — Israel must yield to the U.S. proposal to extend by two months its recently expired settlement-building freeze, Opposition leader Tzipi Livni said last Friday, blaming Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu's government for weakening Israel's security and world standing.

Peace talks between Israel and the Palestinians have been deadlocked over Israel's refusal to extend its moratorium on settlement construction, with U.S. President Barack Obama reportedly pressuring Israel to extend the freeze by two months in order to allow recently relaunched direct peace negotiations to resume.

Referring to the reported American offer, Livni, speaking before the Israeli Farmers Association on Friday, asked: "Why not comply with the demand to extend the freeze by two months? So certain people can hold onto their seats in the coalition who would have stayed there anyway? Does that compare to our strategic relationship with the United States? Israel needs to stop defining itself by the threats surrounding it and start promoting a vision. We don't have to be united by threats – that is not a common factor."

Livni continued her attack on Netanyahu's cabinet, saying his "rightist government has been outspoken, pounding on the table, but Israel is weaker for it.

"The government talks tough, but Israel's interests are being damaged. They spoke of security, and damaged security. We can't rally the world by constantly saying no. We need to say yes from time to time, too," Livni said.

She also spoke of the possibility of her party, Kadima, entering the coalition in order to advance Israel's peace drive, saying that Israel wishes to enter talks under "conditions much worse than before.

"I've told the prime minister in the past, and have also told the public, that a completely different government needs to be formed, a Likud-Kadima government, one which would do the right thing in both domestic and foreign matters," Livni said, adding, however, that "the prime minister chose differently, and this is his choice."

In the past few weeks, some observers have speculated that Netanyahu and Livni were trying to resolve differences in an effort to create a new coalition agreement. The Prime Minister's Office, however, has responded to reported contacts between the two, saying that the prime minister is "currently not engaged in any talks to expand the coalition."

In related developments, Chief Palestinian negotiator Saeb Erekat said last Thursday that the Palestinians will give the United States several more weeks to try to relaunch direct peace talks with Israel, but will not buckle on their key demand for a halt to Israeli settlement activity.

An Arab League decision on Oct. 9 giving the United States one month to persuade Netanyahu to stop settlements could pass by, but the core demand would remain unchanged, Erekat said.

"If the Americans need two more weeks they can have the two more weeks," Erekat told reporters after a meeting with U.S. Mideast peace envoy George Mitchell in Washington.

"The key is in Netanyahu's hands," Erekat said. "The choice is his: settlements or peace. He cannot have both."

Netanyahu visited the United States this week to attend the annual gathering of the General Assembly of Jewish Federations of North America and meet with both Vice-President Joe Biden and Secretary of State Hillary Clinton.

Direct talks between Netanyahu and Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas began on Sept. 2 in Washington but broke down several weeks later when Netanyahu refused to submit to Abbas' demand to extend a 10-month partial freeze on settlement-building in the West Bank.

Netanyahu has resisted U.S., Palestinian and international calls to impose a new building moratorium on settlements in the West Bank. Palestinian officials have accused Netanyahu of destroying prospects for peace by allowing settlement-building to continue on land that Palestinians want for a future state.

Erekat said Palestinians remain focused on the direct talks as a way of achieving a two-state solution that U.S. President Barack Obama hopes will see an independent Palestine living peacefully beside Israel within one year.

But he said the Palestinian leadership is also considering other options, including seeking both U.S. and UN Security Council recognition of a Palestinian state.

"I hope that the United States of America, when we go to the Security Council to seek a full membership for the State of Palestine, will not oppose us," Erekat said.

Erekat did not give a time line for this possible move, which the U.S. State Department said last Thursday could be an unwelcome complication.

"We have made clear all along that unilateral steps, either by the Israelis or by the Palestinians, undermine the direct negotiation which is the only way to resolve the core issues, reach an agreement and end the conflict," State Department spokesperson P.J. Crowley said.

Erekat said other suggested resolutions to the impasse, including that the Palestinians should insist on a "one-state solution" where the Arab majority with Israel demands equal rights, were unrealistic, at least for now.

"Those who continue with the settlement activities may end up with the one-state solution, whether they like it or not. But that's not my option," he said.

Opinions

Pondering retirement

There's a great debate even unrest in France about the age of retirement. The discussions it has generated should provoke some thought of our own on the issue.

What does retirement mean to us as individuals and to our society?

Norma Baumel Joseph in Montreal

Concisely, it signifies the withdrawal from income-producing work. After years of salaried work, people get to pursue other interests, and hopefully one is no longer dependent on wages.

In this scenario, retirement looks rosy. But reality is often not so blissful. Many experience retirement as a time of uselessness, shunted aside like last year's fashions. No one is interested in you, and you're not interested in anything. Although there are all sorts of clubs offering courses and volunteer work to fill up one's time, filling up doesn't equal purposefulness. If you haven't prepared for this phase, it's hard to change the habits of a lifetime.

As to the social implications, caution is advised, as we may be losing our best resources to retirement. How do we compensate for the retiree's lack of place and leadership? Now that they are not "working,"does that mean they can no longer be at the forefront of our community? Do they retire from everything? The question isn't so easy to answer. I know there's a knee-jerk rebuttal to my inquiry, but in all honesty, we do put people out to pasture as they themselves revoke their own active involvement? How can we maximize the resources of our retirees?

My husband retired last year, and he's inordinately busy. He writes. After a life dedicated to study, he's well-suited to the retirement he so richly deserves. Many of my friends are in the process of retiring or have retired. I see successes and problems.

Hence it might seem natural for me to retire. I am of age. But I'm not ready. In fact, I vehemently object. I love teaching and am not ready to relinquish that part of my world. Regrettably, I'll be forced out at a certain age.

In Pirkei Avot, we read that there's an age or time for everything – a time for wisdom and study and learning. I don't see a time for retirement, for withdrawal or detachment. Perhaps we need to view retirement as my husband does: a time for sharing what we know and continuing those processes that deepen our wisdom or our special abilities.

A good retirement is doing something good with your own goodness.

Observing the mitzvah of ba'al tashchit

God said to Adam: "Be fruitful and increase, fill the earth and master it; and rule the fish of the sea, the birds of the sky, and all the living things that creep on earth."

"The Lord God took the man and placed him in the Garden of Eden to till it and tend it." (JPS translation).

Jean M. Gerber in Vancouver

From these simple statements flows an abundance of discussion over what role is assigned to humankind regarding care of the earth.

Our congregation's mitzvah initiative began last year with the selection of two mitzvot, one ben adam l'chavero and one ben adam l'Makom. This year we continue our collection of food for the Jewish food bank, but what should we choose as our second mitzvah? We decided on the mitzvah of ba'al tashchit, our response and responsibilities to the natural world, which we were enjoined to "master and rule," "till and tend," or "work and guard."

I maintain that environmentalism has for centuries been embedded in our tradition, with spiritual guidelines that distinguish it from the modern, secular environmental movement.

Arthur Green, teacher and theologian of Judaism, writes in Seek My Face: A Jewish Mystical Theology: "The rabbis tell us that shortly after Adam was created, God walked him around the Garden of Eden and told him to guard the world he was being given. 'If you destroy this world,' he was told, 'there is no one to come and set it right after you.'"

How true that is.

In A Kabbalah for Tomorrow, Green writes: "Too much of our communal religious energy is devoted to singing the praises of our glorious past [I admit it, me too] rather than facing the challenge of the present hour. What is the point of observing shmitah, the sabbatical year that gives rest to the land, while using earth-destroying pesticides?… How can carefully pious Jews who take care to wash the bugs out of lettuce to make it kosher go on investing that other green stuff in multinational corporations that daily destroy whole forests?"

"How can we today create a civilization and a law that will be torat chayim, a teaching that enhances life? Surely a return to the reverence for air, water and soil would be a good place to start."

Full disclosure: I benefit from the modern luxuries of a dishwasher, clothes washer and dryer, garbage disposal, vacuum system and other wonderful inventions typical of a middle-middle class household. Kashrut is a meaningful experience in our home. But – there's always a but – how can I possibly begin to repair the damaged world we live in when I benefit from so many things that can further harm our planet?

The news media tell us that as a species, we have failed in our stewardship of the world we inherited. Our fish are disappearing, our forests are devastated, and our air and water are increasingly dense with pollutants.

The mystic in Green sees the entire world – the biosphere – as a system in which each part of the natural flora and fauna integrates into a whole. While such a view can verge on animism – seeing everything as alive with a cosmic soul – we need not go that far in appreciating the interconnectedness of every living thing.

It's a tall order. Green links our response not just to the need to salvage a planet under great stress because of human actions. Rather, he makes it a direct call to spiritual renewal. We are commanded to repair the world. We are commanded to show love to everything God created. Green writes that "each person or community has to find ways to fulfil these commandments."

So when our congregation chooses the mitzvah of ba'al tashchit for this year, we will have plenty of choices. Work on energy-saving? Recycle till it hurts? Make sure that our recycled electronics don't end up in a Third World landfill where starving children poison themselves seeking metals and minerals to resell?

When we've made our choices, may they truly be a mitzvah.

Ethnocultural/religious minorities in Canada

Statistics Canada's population projections, based on the last national census, sets out the demographic makeup of Canada in the years 2017 and 2031. In each case, the future Canada will have a significantly higher proportion of visible minorities than today, primarily as a result of immigration patterns.

Gerald L. Gall in Edmonton

For example, the percentage of the population that is Christian or Jewish will decline, while the percentage that is Muslim will increase. Overall, the Jewish population will become an increasingly smaller proportion of the Canadian population. The result is that our community, as an ethnocultural/religious entity, will experience a minority status. This, in turn, invites a consideration of government policy in respect of the status of ethnocultural minorities in Canada. More specifically, it requires us to examine Canada's multicultural policies.

Canada may be the only country in the world to have adopted multiculturalism as official state policy. The year 2011 will mark 40 years since we did so. On the eve of this anniversary, however, the federal Canada has adopted a new policy in relation to multiculturalism. The government will now fund only multicultural initiatives that are consonant with the objectives of the new policy.

The new policy on multiculturalism has three objectives.

1) Building an integrated, socially cohesive society by building bridges to promote inter-cultural understanding and by fostering citizenship, civic memory, civic pride and respect for core democratic values grounded in our history.

2) Improving the responsiveness of institutions to the needs of a diverse population by assisting federal and public institutions to become more responsive to diversity.

3) Actively engaging discussions on multiculturalism and diversity at the international level.

The first objective represents the most significant element of change. The consequence of this policy change relates to the funding of future multicultural initiatives. Under the Inter-Action Projects and Inter-Action Events program, funding will now be available only if an initiative includes an inter-cultural or cross-cultural component. The corollary, of course, is that the federal government will no longer fund intra-cultural projects and events such as the celebration of the Chinese New Year or similar parochial festivities.

The emphasis is now on the promotion of integration. Integration does not mean assimilation, but rather, greater participation by members of ethnocultural minority groups in the mainstream political and social life of the country. This may not have a significant impact on the activities of Canada's Jewish community, but it does convey a message. In order to underscore and advance the notion of social cohesion, Canada's ethnocultural communities must become less insular. They must reach out to one another and/or embrace mainstream components of Canadian society. Essentially, the new policy may be described as the cultural equivalent of the interfaith movement in the realm of religion.

One continuing component of our long-standing multicultural policy is the Community Historical Recognition Program. Under the program, the Canadian Jewish Congress recently received a grant to establish an exhibit marking the abysmal Canadian policy in 1939 that denied entry to the passengers of the St. Louis, a ship carrying Jews who were desperate to escape the Nazi regime.

The "older" multicultural policy has been described by some as a top-down, elite-generated form of noblesse oblige to satisfy and placate our growing diverse minorities. The newer policy might be described as a retreat from our traditional notion of a Canadian mosaic and somewhat encourages the adoption of an American-style "melting pot" as a means to accommodate our ethnocultural religious minorities. Although I do not subscribe to this characterization, it is important to observe, on the occasion of the upcoming 40th anniversary of official multiculturalism in Canada, that the federal government's multiculturalism policy is undergoing change.

Notwithstanding either the older or the prevailing policy, the reality is that many ethnocultural minorities across Canada are not peripheral, powerless entities. Some communities are politically sophisticated. They possess wisdom and savvy in mastering the art of influencing policy in respect of many aspects of public affairs.

The Kirshner File

A survey of a catastrophe

On Aug. 22, 1939, in a sombre allusion to the growing political crisis in Europe, Chaim Weizmann, the president of the World Zionist Organization, observed, "There is darkness all around us, and we cannot see through the clouds."

Two weeks later, following the outbreak of World War II, the director of a Hebrew school in Warsaw, Poland, Chaim Kaplan, wrote, "This war will indeed bring destruction upon human civilization."

Sheldon Kirshner in Toronto

He added presciently, "As for the Jews, their danger is seven times greater. Wherever Hitler's foot treads, there is no hope for the Jewish people."

Kaplan's sense of dread was not misplaced. The war proved utterly catastrophic for Jews in Poland and the rest of Nazi-occupied Europe.

Saul Friedlander's magnum opus, The Years of Extermination: Nazi Germany and the Jews 1939-1945 (HarperCollins), is a survey of the fate of European Jews during this dark period. Based on documents, letters, diaries and memoirs, it is one of the finest single-volume accounts of Hitler's genocidal campaign.

That Hitler intended to murder Jews so as to fulfil his warped racial fantasies is not in dispute. In a prewar speech, he made it abundantly clear that this was his objective. Reacting to his cue, German Labour Minister Robert Ley predicted in 1942 that the war would end with "the extermination of the Jewish race." A year later, the SS commander, Heinrich Himmler, issued a similar comment, prompting the propaganda minister, Joseph Goebbels, to remark, "It is certainly a logical solution, even if it is a brutal one."

In his book, Friedlander, a professional historian and a Holocaust survivor, ranges far and wide as he discusses the persecution of Jews in Germany and elsewhere in Europe.

Germany's modus operandi in persecuting Jews was to reduce them to the level of sub-humans so that they would be socially isolated and not an object of sympathy. In this malevolent spirit, Goebbels, an arch anti-Semite who referred to Jews as "a waste product," said, "Pity… is completely out of place in this case."

Once the war started, the Nazi regime struggled to define its guidelines regarding half and quarter Jews, known as mischlinges, but these edicts remained confusing.

Germans of partial Jewish ancestry were allowed to serve in the army and could even be decorated for bravery, but they were not permitted to fill positions of authority, while fully Jewish members of their families were mistreated.

Eventually, families where a son was killed in battle were exempted from anti-Jewish measures. In 1940, Hitler tweaked the mischlinge policy, allowing only soldiers of one-quarter Jewish ancestry to serve. In the Afrika Korps, commanded by Gen. Erwin Rommel, this rule was entirely disregarded. In the navy, it was postponed.

The "aryanization" of Jewish-owned firms proceeded apace without any problems, says Friedlander. Yet when the world famous Rosenthal porcelain company passed into Christian hands, the new owners insisted on keeping its Jewish name. The Nazis were not pleased, but finally gave in.

Nazi accommodations to the marketplace did not slow the march of anti-Semitic restrictions. By 1942, German Jews were forbidden to buy newspapers, own telephones, cameras, household appliances and bicycles or attend even Jewish schools.

For a while, the Nazis toyed with the idea of deporting Jews to the formerly French island of Madagascar. Genocide became Germany's policy after it conquered the Soviet Union. The atmosphere was such that, in a letter, a German soldier wrote, "The Jews are fair game." Special killing units swept across occupied territories, murdering Jews by the thousands. In at least two cities, Brest Litovsk and Zhitomir, local residents refused to participate in pogroms.

Interestingly enough, Karaites – a Jewish sect that broke away from Judaism – were seen by the Nazis as a Turkic-Tatar group.

Friedlander is keenly attuned to nuances. Writing about the formation of the Council to Aid Jews in Poland, Friedlander observes that one of its founders, Zofia Kossak-Szezucka, perceived Polish Jews as enemies of Poland. Similarly, a representative of Poland's underground dispatched this letter to the Polish government-in-exile in London: "The return of masses of Jews would be experienced by the population… as an invasion against which they would defend themselves, even with physical means."

In Romania, anti-Jewish animus was also deeply entrenched. There was a widespread belief that Jews were a foreign and hostile element who had somehow been complicit in the loss of Bessarabia and Bukovina to the Soviet Union and of northern Transylvania to Hungary.

By 1941, the Jewish population in Hungary, a Nazi ally, had risen to 825,000 with the conquest of territory from Romania, Slovakia, the Soviet Union and Yugoslavia.

The Hungarian leader, Miklos Horthy, enacted a series of anti-Semitic laws and handed over Polish Jews to the SS in western Ukraine.

The ruins of a Nazi crematorium in Auschwitz-Birkenau, where European Jews perished [Sheldon Kirshner photo]

He refused to deport native-born Hungarian Jews, but with Germany's occupation of Hungary in March 1944, the rules of the game changed. Deportations to Auschwitz-Birkenau got under way in May, at a rate of 12,000 to 14,000 deportees a day.

Reacting to domestic and international pressure, Horthy ordered a halt to the deportations on July 8. But on Oct. 15, the day he pulled Hungary out of the war, German forces took control of Budapest and installed a viciously anti-Semitic Arrow Cross government, which ramped up the persecution and murder of Jews.

Friedlander is implicitly contemptuous of the leader of France's Jewish community, Jacques Helbronner, describing him as a member of the assimilated "Jewish haute bourgeoisie" who was close to Henri Philippe Pétain, the president of Vichy France.

Helbronner petitioned Pétain to exempt native Jews, but not foreign or recently naturalized Jews, from Vichy's anti-Semitic regulations. Pétain ignored Helbronner's request. Nor did he act on his subsequent "futile and demeaning entreaties."

Friedlander is critical of the Jewish leadership in the United States. He suggests that its embargo on aid to Jews in Nazi-occupied countries, taken in compliance with Washington's economic boycott of the Axis powers, was counter-productive. Friedlander has a point, but could American Jews have realistically defied the U.S. government?

He lauds Italy, Germany's ally, for having played a positive role in saving Jews. In Greece, for example, the Italian consul in Salonika, Guelfo Zamboni, spared no efforts to protect Jews of Italian nationality. His efforts were supported by Italy's minister plenipotentiary in Athens and by the foreign ministry in Rome, but to no avail. The Nazis succeeded in virtually destroying Salonika's venerable Jewish community.

Nazi relentlessness was boundless. Himmler, in the summer of 1942, visited Finland and demanded the delivery of foreign Jews living there. The Finnish secret police compiled a list of 35 Jews, but due to protests, the Nazis could deport only eight Jews, all of whom were sent to Estonia.

The church in Europe was stained by silence. As Friedlander puts it, "Although sporadic protests by some Catholic bishops and Protestant leaders did take place, the vast majority of Catholic and Protestant authorities remained publicly silent in the face of the deportations of Jews and the growing knowledge of their extermination."

Sadly, Chaim Kaplan was right when he predicted a disaster for European Jews.

A Simple and Proven Investment Strategy

We are brothers and businessmen. We investigate and weigh our decisions carefully. Investing in the Romspen Mortgage Fund was and continues to be a great decision. We both agree the other funds out there do not support the same kind of wealth preservation and consistent performance. History has proven this to be so. With the Romspen Fund we enjoy real yields delivered monthly, managed by professionals with deep expertise.

We have since brought our whole family in, because we have the confidence that Romspen will continue to help us achieve our financial goals.

Carl and Jeff Posluns

Introductory Seminar Wednesday, December 8 at 6:00 p.m.
Refreshments and hors d'oeuvres 5:30 RSVP as seating is limited

ROMSPEN
mortgage investment fund

162 Cumberland Street, Suite 300
Toronto, Ontario M5R 3N5

416.966.1100
1.800.494.0389

www.romspen.com

Debaters clash over Israel's 'lurch to the right'

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Intellectual sparks flew as two seasoned debaters clashed over reasons why young American Jews appear to be increasingly alienated from Israel.

The topic of the debate at Holy Blossom Temple was "Zion: Home or Harm to the Jews?" It was sponsored by the Gerald Schwartz/Heather Reisman Centre for Jewish Learning.

The moderator was Heather Reisman, founder and chief executive officer of Indigo Books and Music.

Peter Beinart, the former editor of the New Republic, charged that Israel's rightward political shift has disaffected Jews in the United States aged 18 to 30.

Last spring, in an essay in the The New York Review of Books titled "The Failure of the American Jewish Establishment," Beinart attributed this phenomenon to two interrelated factors: Israel's policies toward the Palestinians and the lock-step support they garner among U.S. Jewish community leaders.

Peter Beinart

Rabbi Daniel Gordis, the senior vice-president of the right-of-centre Shalem Center in Jerusalem, generally agreed that American Jews in this age category have grown distant from Israel.

Describing himself as a liberal Zionist, he linked Israel's "lurch to the right" to the outbreak of the second intifadah and Palestinian recalcitrance.

Kicking off the debate, Beinart – a senior political writer at the Daily Beast blog and an associate professor of journalism and political science at City University in New York – accused the American Jewish establishment of trying to "desensitize" young Jews to Israel's post-1967 occupation of Arab territories. They have been asked to "check their liberalism at the door" while supporting Israel, he declared.

Citing a recent survey, Beinart said only 16 per cent of young secular Jews feel close to Israel. The corresponding figure among young Orthodox Jews is much higher.

Zionism in the United States is vibrant only in the Orthodox Jewish community, he added. But in these circles, the connection is not to a liberal, democratic and humanistic Israel, but rather to a Jewish state upholding traditional Jewish values, he suggested.

Rabbi Daniel Gordis

Beinart praised Israel's "flourishing democracy," but voiced regret that no such thing exists in the West Bank.

Echoing warnings by Ehud Olmert, Israel's former prime minister, and Ehud Barak, its current defence minister, Beinart claimed that Israel will become an "apartheid state" if it continues to occupy the West Bank without granting its Palestinian Arab inhabitants the right to vote in Israeli elections.

Calling for "a rebirth" of liberal democratic Zionism, Beinart likened Israel to an ideological battleground in which Israelis who love liberal democracy struggle against Israelis who hate it.

Rabbi Gordis, an American who made aliyah in 1998, acknowledged young Jews are "turning away" from Israel. Such Jews, he said, were raised in homes where universal rather than clannish values were cherished.

He wants Israel to be a liberal Jewish state, but realizes that anti-democratic currents and latent hostility to Israel's Arab minority are present in Israeli society today.

He conceded that Israel's electorate has moved to the right, but chided Beinart for not having offered an explanation for this trend in his essay.

In a reference to the second Palestinian uprising, Rabbi Gordis said "four years of horrific war," punctuated by a spate of suicide bombings in buses and restaurants, have disillusioned, exasperated and frustrated Israeli Jews.

The land-for-peace formula, which he said he endorses, was undermined by the Palestinian Authority's refusal to strike an agreement with Israel during the Camp David summit in 2000.

Criticizing Beinart for not having defended Israel in the pages of the New York Review of Books as it was being attacked by the left and the right, Rabbi Gordis said liberal values cannot be promoted when Israel is under siege and is being delegitimized by its enemies.

"Israel is vulnerable again, and the Jewish people is hated again," he observed. For the liberal brand of Zionism to thrive, Israel as a Jewish state must be able to survive.

"We can't figure out how to end the conflict," said Rabbi Gordis in a lament, explaining that Israel can't afford to

Continued on page 24

DINNER CO-CHAIRS
LAWRENCE S. BLOOMBERG
MICHAEL D. HARRIS

HONOURARY CHAIRS
ELIZABETH COMPER
SYDNEY COOPER
LESLIE L. DAN, C.M.
HOWARD DAVIDSON
SAUL FELDBERG, LL.D. (HON.)
LORNE WEISS

GENERAL CANVASS CO-CHAIRS
ANTHONY HOFFER
IRA KUCHINSKY
BEN SPRINGER

ADVERTISING COMMITTEE
TONY GENCO
BILL LAMPERT

JNF FUTURE
JESSICA FENTON
JIAN MAGEN

ARRANGEMENTS
PATRICIA FRIEDLAND

JNF TORONTO PRESIDENT
NATHAN DISENHOUSE

CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD
JERRY WERGER

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR
JOSH COOPER

MASTER OF CEREMONIES
BELINDA STRONACH

JNF 100% ISRAEL

JEWISH NATIONAL FUND OF TORONTO
2010 NEGEV TRIBUTE DINNER
IN HONOUR OF
FRANK STRONACH

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 2010 | THE FAIRMONT ROYAL YORK HOTEL TORONTO
FOR INFORMATION, RESERVATIONS & ADVERTISING OPPORTUNITIES:
TEL:416.638.7200 FAX:416.638.7345 TOR@JNF.CA WWW.JNFTORONTO.CA

SPECIAL PERFORMANCE: JEFF MADDEN, "FRANKIE VALLI" OF THE TORONTO JERSEY BOYS

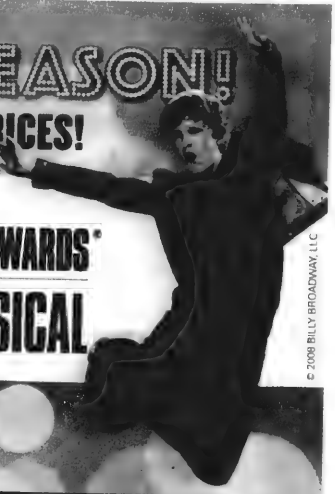
DAVID MIRVISH PRESENTS THE 2010/2011 MIRVISH THEATRE SUBSCRIPTION SEASON

AN ELECTRIFYING THEATRE SEASON!

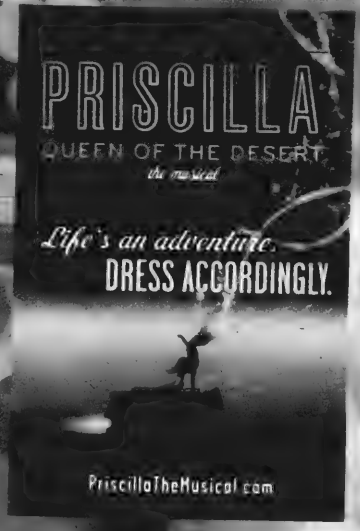
SUBSCRIBE NOW AND SAVE UP TO 35% OFF REGULAR PRICES!

BILLY ELLIOT THE MUSICAL

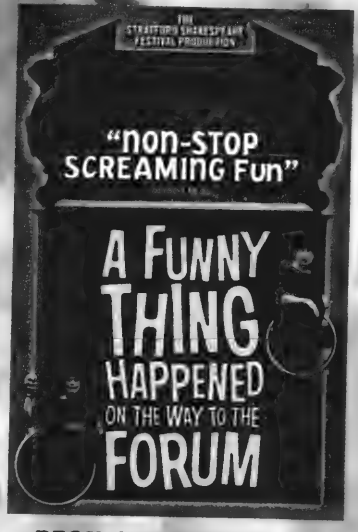
10 2009 TONY AWARDS® BEST MUSICAL



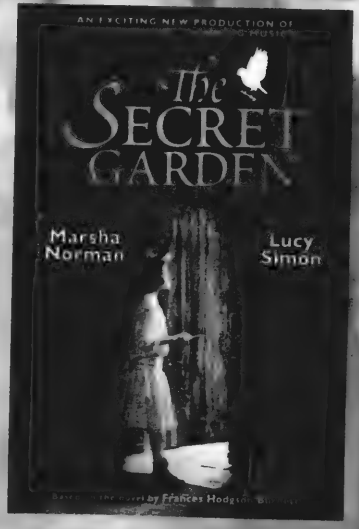
© 2008 BILLY BROADWAY, LLC



ON STAGE NOW

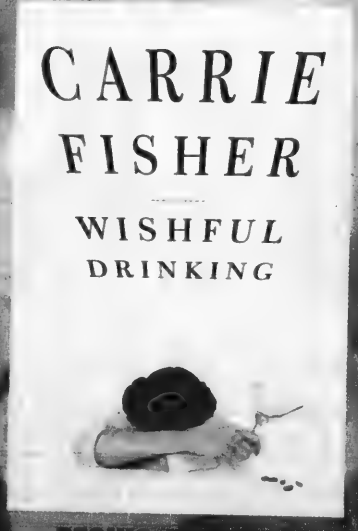


BEGINS DECEMBER 15

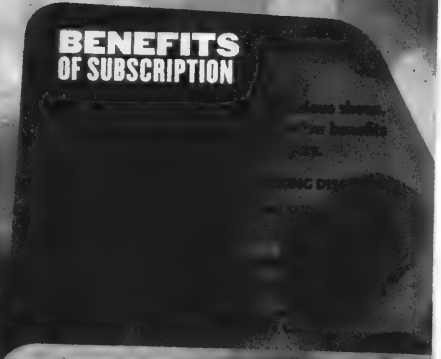


BEGINS FEBRUARY 2011

BEGINS APRIL 201



BEGINS



SUBSCRIBE NOW
416-593-4225
mirvish.com

Adbusters pulled from Shoppers' shelves

JTA

A leading drugstore chain has pulled a controversial magazine from its racks, but it insists the decision has nothing to do with complaints that its latest issue contained anti-Semitic images.

Shoppers Drug Mart said last week it will no longer sell Adbusters, an anti-consumerist/activist magazine based in Vancouver.

Lisa Gibson, a spokesperson for Shoppers, told the Globe and Mail that the decision was unrelated to a campaign by Canadian Jewish Congress against the magazine, which in its last issue ran a photo essay equating Israel's military actions in Gaza with the destruction of the Warsaw Ghetto.

Congress and Honest Reporting Canada had urged supporters to "take the magazine up the cashier, open it to the appropriate page and tell the clerk or the owner that "this is anti-Semitic and shameful,' and walk away."

"We only have a certain amount of magazine shelf space allotted to us in each store," Gibson explained, "so we do a fairly regular review of the magazine assortment and look at sales and other things. So it was actually pulled as part of that review."

Congress CEO Bernie Farber denied his organization had lobbied Shoppers to pull Adbusters.

In 2004, Adbusters was condemned in Jewish circles for running a list of influential neo-conservative U.S. policymakers and placing an asterisk next to the Jewish names.

Responding to the move by Shoppers, Adbusters asked its supporters to "send an e-mail to Shoppers Drug Mart's CEO Jürgen Schreiber and tell him that until Adbusters is back on the shelves, you won't step foot in their store.

"Then send a note to the Canadian Jewish Congress... reminding them that in a free country, we debate rather than censor."

Interpol seeks Hossain

Compiled by CJN Staff

Interpol has issued a warrant for the arrest of a Bangladeshi-born former student at York University who authored a website that called for the mass murder of Jews.

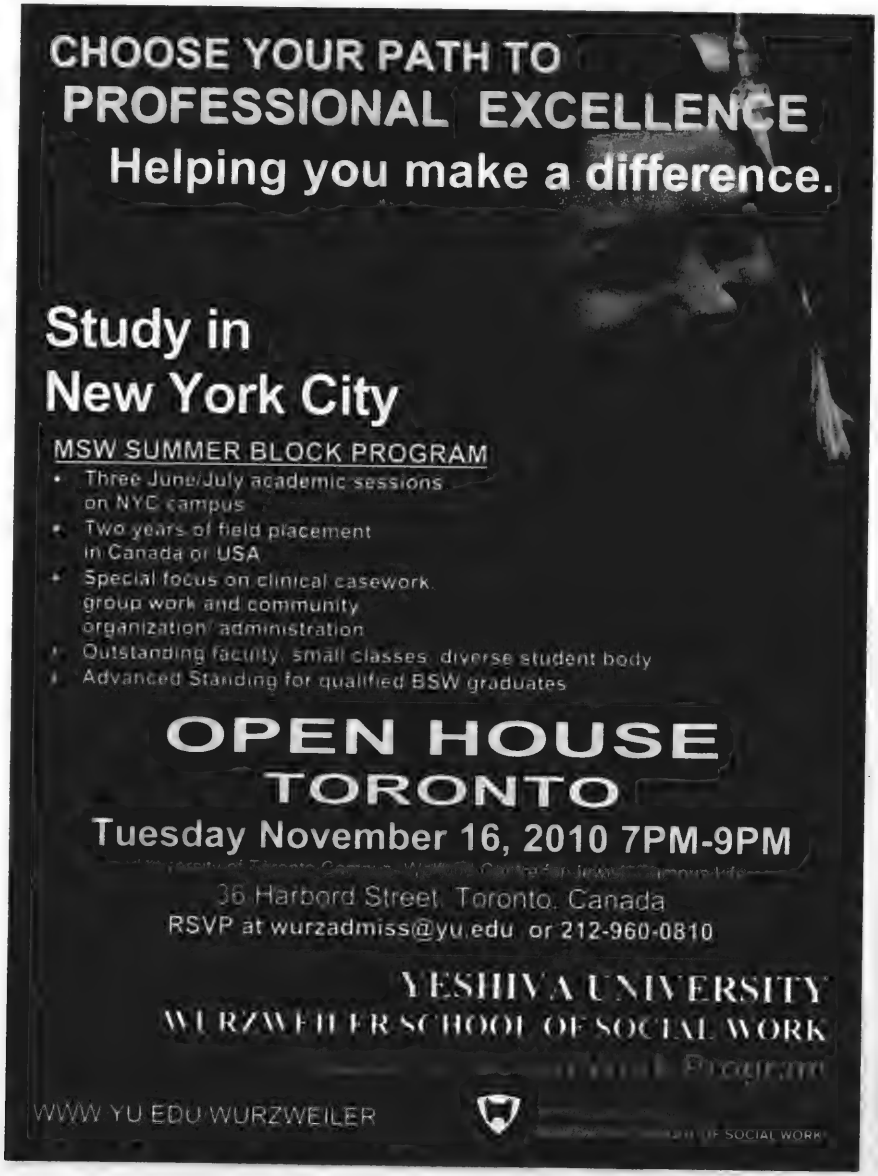
Salman an-Noor Hossain, 25, was added to the international police organization's database of fugitives at the request of the Ontario Provincial Police (OPP).

Last summer, the OPP charged Hossain with promoting hatred against Jews and advocating genocide. It is believed to be the first time anyone was charged with promoting genocide under Section 318.1 of the Criminal Code.

On his website, "filthyjewishterrorists.com," Hossain openly called for the mass murder of Jews and their supporters – even after he was charged. In a posting dated July 8, he responded to the OPP's charges by stating: "It has very little to do with calling for the revenge slaughter of the Jews and their Allies. Of course by calling for their extermination and genocide, I did the right thing."

Hossain first came to the attention of police three years ago over postings to a website that attacked Jews. Following an investigation, OPP recommended to Ontario Attorney General Chris Bentley that Hossain be prosecuted. Bentley withheld his consent for prosecution, saying Hossain could potentially rehabilitate himself.

Interpol described him as 5-2 and 119 pounds with black hair and brown eyes. His photo can be found at www.interpol.int.



CHOOSE YOUR PATH TO
PROFESSIONAL EXCELLENCE
Helping you make a difference.
Study in
New York City
MSW SUMMER BLOCK PROGRAM
• Three June/July academic sessions on NYC campus
• Two years of field placement in Canada or USA
• Special focus on clinical casework, group work and community organization/ administration
• Outstanding faculty, small classes, diverse student body
• Advanced Standing for qualified BSW graduates
OPEN HOUSE
TORONTO
Tuesday November 16, 2010 7PM-9PM
36 Harbord Street, Toronto, Canada
RSVP at wurzadmiss@yu.edu or 212-960-0810
YESHIVA UNIVERSITY
WURZWEILER SCHOOL OF SOCIAL WORK
WWW.YU.EDU/WURZWEILER

PAYLESS TRAVEL
and Cruises
Israel Specialist, Professional Agents, Superior Service

Israel Culinary Tour:
Led by Rabbi Elyse Goldstein & Bonnie Stern
Feb. 6 – 15, 2011
Learn more about this unique trip: Sun., Nov 28, 4 pm
Bonnie Stern School of Cooking, 6 Erskine Ave.
RSVP by Nov 26: 416-922-0116 ext. 1 – Michelle

Pathway of our Biblical & Cultural Heritage
Rome & Israel with Channa Sargon
May 22 – June 5, 2011

Jewish Heritage Tour – CHINA
May 9 - 24, 2011
Call Miki at 416-840-0855/1-877-840-0855 ext. 222

EL AL SPECIAL
Flight + 3 Nights - INBAL Hotel
From $1515.00 + Tax (per person)
Based on 2 adults sharing a room

ISRAEL WEEKLY GUARANTEED DEPARTURE TOURS
VISIT OUR WEBSITE - goisraeltravel.com

Downtown Office - 416-922-0116 Michal ext. 1
Toll Free 1-888-344-6642 – 1027 Yonge Street, Toronto, ON
Promenade Office - 905-770-3300
Toll-Free 1-888-900-4747
7700 Bathurst Street & Centre, Thornhill, ON

Greater Toronto Area

Shomrai Shabbos celebrates 120 years

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Shomrai Shabbos Chevrah Mishnayos is celebrating its 120th anniversary, making it the oldest Orthodox synagogue in Toronto and likely Canada.

To mark the occasion, there will be a fundraising dinner Nov. 17 with guest speaker Rabbi Avraham Twerski, honouring the shul's spiritual leader Rabbi Yacov Felder and his wife, Raisy, as well as 10 congregants: Bentzion and Miriam Heitner, Harry and Shirley Marder, Moshe and Lea Reichmann, Rochelle Reiter, Bonny Silver, and Jack and Ann Weinbaum. Funds raised will support shul programming.

Rabbi Yacov Felder

The synagogue, which recently underwent a major renovation, has been at its current location on Glengrove Avenue West for 40 years, said dinner chair Aaron Wagschal.

The renovation includes an expanded social hall, completed just over a year ago, and a new beit midrash that will allow more programming for men, women and youth to take place, Wagschal said.

As well, a mikvah that will be open Friday evenings – a rarity in the area – is under construction and is expected to be opened in the spring.

Harry Marder

Shomrai Shabbos, with about 350 member families, is "an active member within the Toronto Jewish community," Wagschal said, citing a long history of outreach including Toronto's Orthodox beit din for gittin (rabbinical court for Jewish divorces) and the Kashruth Council of Canada, which was strongly associated with the synagogue and Rabbi Gedalia Felder, the current rabbi's father, who was spiritual leader from 1951 until his death in 1991.

The synagogue's newest initiative is Netzach, created to foster harmonious marriages and home life. The shul also has a number of gemachs that provide things such as yom tov necessities, food throughout the year, and funding for members buying homes in the neighbourhood.

"That speaks to the theme of the dinner – building the Jewish community brick by brick," Wagschal said.

The shul serves the full spectrum of the Orthodox community from wearers of kippot srugot (crocheted kippot) to shtreimlach, he added.

Former president Harry Marder, 81, a member since he arrived in Canada in 1949, says Shomrai Shabbos is "a very warm congregation."

He remembers the senior Rabbi Felder as a man with a warm personality who respected Jews of all religious affiliations – and who also served as his shadchan, having gotten to know Marder's wife's family when he served the Jewish community in Brantford, Ont.

The younger Rabbi Felder, 49, is well-liked and has been instrumental in building up the shul, Marder said.

Rabbi Felder, the current rabbi, said the congregation is diverse in terms of age and background, but that "there's no divisiveness. There's a sense of unity and friendship and working together both for the benefit of the shul and organizations within the community.

"Although the shul is 120 years old, it still remains strong and vibrant… and it continues to play a pivotal role in the community at large," the rabbi said.

He said the original founders "probably wouldn't believe it" if they could see the shul and the Toronto Jewish community today. "I think they would be amazed how from humble beginnings… they planted the seeds, and they continue to blossom over 120 years later."

The original congregation, known as Shomrai Shaboth Anshei Estreich Minhag Sefard, was established by a group of Galitzianer immigrants and was first housed in various locations on Richmond Street.

In 1899, a permanent home was purchased on Chestnut Street, in a building with a women's balcony and seating for 100 men. The shul moved to the corner of Brunswick and Sussex Avenues in 1933.

Rabbi Yosef Weinreb served as the shul's first rabbi for more than four decades, until his death in 1942, and the congregation was without a spiritual leader for almost a decade afterward.

"We're continuing from Rabbi Weinreb and my father, and building upon the foundations that they laid – the ideals and the values they set up," Rabbi Felder said.

RUSSELL

You are cordially invited to join us for one of our

November Events

Followed by a guided tour of our elegant residence and amenities.

A taste of Holland Themed Dinner followed by a Music History Lecture
Wednesday, November 10: 5pm Cocktails, 6pm Dinner

Healthy Aging Seminar: Part 2 of 3 with Mahaya Forest Hill Integrative Health
Wednesday, November 17 at 3pm

Cocktail Hour with Daniel Domb former Toronto Symphony Orchestra Cellist
Wednesday, November 24, at 5pm

At the Russell Hill Retirement Residence we are committed to an unparalleled level of service and elegance so that you may continue to enjoy a lifestyle to which you are accustomed. Kosher food available on request.

262 St. Clair Avenue West, At Russell Hill Road
(416) 922-8005

www.therussellhill.com

GREAT GULF HOMES

RENTAL RETIREMENT LIVING AT YONGE & EGLINTON

YONGE & SOCIAL

Step into Toronto's premiere resort-inspired retirement residence. From the smiling faces of our attentive staff to the hustle and bustle of our residents and guests heading off to a fitness or aqua fit class, lecture, computer tutorial, book club, dance class, art class or acting class...this is a very unique community that enjoys life to the fullest!

Perhaps it's dinner in the Bistro or the Classic fine dining rooms, followed by the latest movie release or attend a musical recital or concert. If meeting positive, interesting, like minded people is of interest to you, then you have come to the right place!

If feeling young again is what you are looking for... then you have just found it!

The Dunfield
RETIREMENT RESIDENCE

Limited SNOWBIRD SUITES Now Available*

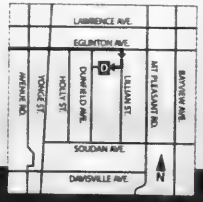
BOOK NOW AND SAVE THOUSANDS!*

ALL INCLUSIVE FROM $3,500/MTH

FULLY FURNISHED SUITES NOW AVAILABLE
Tour Today-Move In Tomorrow!

77 Dunfield Ave., Toronto
Call today for more information or personal tour.
416-481-8524

*See sales representatives for details.
Prices and specifications subject to change without notice. E. & O. E. 2010.



WWW.THEDUNFIELD.COM

Marylin and Rabbi Martin Berman

UTJ to honour local rabbinical couple

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Rabbi Martin Berman, spiritual leader of Thornhill's Shaar Shalom Synagogue, and his wife, Marylin, are being honoured by the Union for Traditional Judaism (UTJ) at the organization's annual dinner.

The Bermans are receiving UTJ's Emunah v'Yosher (Faith and Integrity) award at the Nov. 10 event in Teaneck, N.J.

Actor Mayim Bialik (best known as Blossom Russo in the 1990-1995 television series Blossom) is also being honoured at the dinner. The UTJ is presenting her with its MTV (Media and Torah Values) Challenge Award. Bialik is working on the UTJ's MTV Challenge curriculum, a program designed to respond to television and other media from a Jewish perspective.

Rabbi Berman, 60, who serves on the UTJ board, has been involved with the organization since its inception in 1984, a year before the first woman was ordained as a Conservative rabbi, an issue that was part of the reason the organization was formed.

At the time, it was known as the Union for Traditional Conservative Judaism, but later came to include elements of the left wing of the Orthodox world as well, the rabbi said.

Under UTJ's umbrella, members created a rabbinic group called Morashah, of which Rabbi Berman was a founding member. The group brings together like-minded rabbis for study and chizuk (moral support), he said.

UTJ members part ways with their more liberal counterparts over issues including homosexuality, particularly as it relates to same-sex marriage and whether gays can serve as rabbis and educators, as well as over new prayerbooks that have eliminated or changed some of the traditional prayers.

The rabbi, who has led Shaar Shalom for 16 years, grew up in a Conservative home in Jacksonville, Fla., and attended afternoon Hebrew school. He and his wife – who now have three adult children and five grandchildren – met at Camp Ramah in 1967, when they were 17.

Later, he studied psychology as an undergraduate at Yeshiva University, considered the flagship institution of modern Orthodoxy. "They had a good program, and I learned a lot," he said.

However, he says, he "wasn't happy with what I saw in those days as a very closed-minded Orthodoxy." His two younger brothers both work at Orthodox yeshivot in Israel, he noted. He described one as "black hat" (haredi) and the other as "kippah srugah" (crocheted kippah, or modern Orthodox).

Rabbi Berman was ordained at the Conservative movement's Jewish Theological Seminary in 1977 and began his career in Sioux City, Iowa, hometown of rabbi and liturgist Jules Harlow, as well as longtime popular advice columnists Ann Landers and Dear Abby (Abigail Van Buren).

Rabbi Berman also served congregations in El Paso, Denver, and Detroit before joining Shaar Shalom. In El Paso, he served as an adjunct associate professor of religion at the University of Texas, and in Denver, he taught Talmud and Jewish law at a local Jewish day school.

In Toronto, where Rabbi Berman has served as president of the Rabbinical Assembly of Ontario and of the Toronto Board of Rabbis, he has taught the "Introduction to Judaism" class of the Rabbinical Assembly, Canadian region, for many years.

He said that UTJ and Morashah have helped strengthen his traditional commitments. "You have a chevrah of rabbis you get together with most summers... We come at Jewish life from the same direction."

Have Your RRSP Returns Been Less Than Stellar These Past Few Years?

TEL AVIV: +35% VS TORONTO: +5%

Put Israel's powerful economy to work for your RRSP.

Questions Answers

An interview with Zale Newman, President, Bond Street Mercantile Inc., who recently launched the Holy Land Investment Fund, said to be, in his words: "a uniquely Canadian opportunity to invest in the world's most dynamic economy AND put your money where your heart is."

Why invest in Israel?

Israel has been the western world's economic success story for the past five years. Israel is an economic miracle and suffered no ill effects from the 2008 recession. The Tel Aviv stock market hit its all time high in late October. (Compare that to most western countries whose stock markets are struggling to get back to where they were 4 years ago.)

Holy Land Investment Fund

Israel is booming in many sectors of the economy including real estate, oil and gas, technology, pharmaceuticals, financial services and tourism. It is hard to see why anyone wouldn't want to put at least some portion of their investments into Israel. Now there is an easy, Canadian way to invest there.

Have any internationally renowned investors invested in Israel?

Absolutely! There are many examples. Warren Buffett, the most recognized international investor, recently addressed the Israel Ministry of Industry and Trade. He told them that he invests almost exclusively in the United States – with ONE exception – Israel! He has now purchased four companies in Israel, including two more this past August. And he is on the lookout for more. He was amazed by, "Israel's combination of brains and energy."

Bill Gates has major investments in Israel, as does Potash Corporation of Canada and David Azrieli, the legendary Montreal real estate mogul who owns the majority interest in Israel's 8th largest public company.

How does the economy in Israel compare to that of Canada and other countries?

Israel's economy is booming and it far outstrips the performance of Canada, the USA and all other major western economies.

	Exchange	4 YR Returns (to Sept 30/10)
1.	TEL AVIV	35.0%	(7.8%/yr)
2.	TSX	5.2%	(1.3%)
3.	FTSE	-6.9%	(-1.8%)
4.	S&P 500	-14.6%	(-3.9%)
5.	Nikkei	-41.9%	(-12.7%)

For example, if you had invested $100 in Canada (via the TSX index) four years ago, you would now have only $105; and had you invested $100 in the USA (S&P 500), you would have only $86 today (as of 9/30/10). BUT, had you invested that same $100 in Israel (TASE) you would have $135 today – 30% more than in Canada and 48% higher than the USA!

What does the HLIF invest in?

The HLIF is a balanced "fund of funds." This means it holds a group of investment funds in Israel that specialize in either Israeli corporate and government bonds or Israeli stocks on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange. Right now the HLIF holds seven funds from Israel's best performing fund managers. Four are bond funds, one is a fixed income fund and two are equity funds, including the best performing fund in Israel last year. On an ongoing basis, we look for additional Israeli investments with excellent management and a stellar track record.

What type of equities do these funds hold?

The HLIF holds investments that Canadians understand. We are primarily invested in Israeli public companies in real estate, oil and gas, financial services and medical equipment.

Did you say "oil and gas" companies? Isn't that for countries in the Middle East other than Israel?

Our world has changed – for the better. As highlighted in the Wall Street Journal on October 13th, Israel is now on the brink of becoming a major player in the world oil and gas market. Last February Israel announced the discovery of the Tamar gas find off the coast of Haifa. It was the world's largest in 2009 and has enough gas to supply Israel's needs for the next 50 years. This past June, the initial results of the Leviatan project were announced, with enough oil and gas to cover Israel's needs for the next 100 years.

When these projects come on stream, Israel will become a major exporter of oil and gas. Our funds have invested in these opportunities and we expect excellent returns from these oil and gas investments.

What is the minimum investment and is this fund RRSP and RRIF eligible?

For Accredited Investors, the minimum investment is only $5,000 for non-registered funds and $22,000 for registered funds (this year's maximum RRSP contribution) that are either being transferred in from an existing RRSP account or from new RRSP contributions.

How do I find out more about the HLIF?

The best way is to attend one of the Wednesday night seminars held at our office at 801 Eglinton (at Bathurst). Additionally we have information available on our website at bondstreetmercantile.com, in our presentation kit (which you can order in a hard copy or electronic version) and through private appointments. Just call our office at 416-783-0505.

Please see our website at bondstreetmercantile.com for more information.

EXCLUSIVE WEEKLY INVESTMENT SEMINARS

Call 416-783-0505 to book your seat

at our for Accredited-Investors-only presentations. Learn how you can participate in HLIF's excellent investment opportunity.

Register Now. Don't Be Disappointed.

Zale Newman, President
zale@bondstreetmercantile.com

BOND STREET MERCANTILE
tel 416 783 05
fax 416
www.BondStreetMercantile.com

*Over the last 36 quarters the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange (TASE) has significantly outperformed the Toronto Stock Exchange (TSX) 30% better As of September 30, 2010.
Past results do not guarantee future performance. Results will vary depending on many factors including market conditions and available opportunities.

ROLEX • PATEK • CARTIER
DIAMONDS
BUY • SELL • TRADE
VAN RIJK • INSTANT CASH
440-1233 vanr@t.com

SWISS ASSET PROTECTION
For Secure Banking and Investment
www.ashstreetmanagement.com
Ken H. Finkelstein, Attorney
250-507-6175

PROVINCIAL TABLE PADS
Manufacturers of Custom-built Table Pads
•Free in-home service
•Made in Canada
•Choose from 3 qualities
•Best service -price -quality
LOWEST PRICES GUARANTEED
Toronto 416-283-2508
Hamilton 905-383-1343
Ottawa 613-247-3334
Canada Wide 1-800-668-7439
www.pfgroup.com

Fatah says Muslims should recognize Israel's legal, moral right to exist

Continued from page 3

Fatah says the doctrine of armed jihadism informs the mindset of the leadership of mosques – imams and boards of directors – across the country.

In his book, he writes "The contemporary narrative of jihad" in mosques around the world has become "a breeding ground for anti-Semitism."

He added, "I don't know of any Canadian politicians, left or right, who have uttered a word against armed jihadism."

Fatah, who has visited Israel, believes Muslims should reconcile themselves to Israel's moral and legal right to exist as a state within secure and internationally recognized borders.

At least two verses in the Qur'an, 5:20 and 5:21, he holds, authenticate Jewish claims to Palestine and Jerusalem.

Fatah does not believe Israel is an apartheid state. "That's bullshit, and you can quote me. If you want to see an apartheid state, go to Saudi Arabia, which is an oppressive society ruled by the religious police, or Iran."

He calls on Israel to end its "illegal and immoral" occupation of the West Bank, saying a "just peace" and the creation of a Palestinian state is not "a favour" to the Palestinians, but "an absolute necessity for the survival of the Jewish state."

Once this happens, he thinks, Muslim anti-Semites will lose "the most powerful excuse to whip up" anti-Semitism.

"Not that Islamist Judeophobia will disappear, but the oxygen that nourishes it will be cut off."

In his view, Islam can be reconciled with modernism and universal human rights through democracy, which, he acknowledged, is sorely absent in the Middle East.

Fatah was born in Karachi in 1949. His ancestors in the Punjab were Hindus who converted to Islam in the 19th century. Although his parents were Orthodox Muslims, they sent him to a Catholic school. His father has an adopted Jewish sister.

At the end of 2001, following 9/11, he and like-minded Muslims established the Muslim Canadian Congress (MCC). Its advocacy of "progressive" forms of Islam, gay rights, separation of religion and state and opposition to Shariah law aroused criticism and indignation in some Muslim circles.

Fatah was the MCC's communications director and spokesperson until the summer of 2006, when he resigned over concerns for his safety.

He stepped down from his position after he and other members objected to the MCC's participation in anti-Israel demonstrations during which banners of Hezbollah and Hamas and posters of Iran's president, Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, were raised.

Last year, in an article in the National Post, Fatah accused the Canadian Arab Federation of having turned itself into "a mouthpiece for Hamas and Hezbollah in Canada."

Fatah's first book, Chasing a Mirage: The Tragic Illusion of an Islamic State, was a finalist for the Donner Prize.

JOIN OUR FAMILY AS BIALIK GROWS NORTH

Bialik is excited to announce the opening of registration for our future northern branch to be located on the Lebovic Campus in September 2013

Applications are now being accepted for students entering JK – Grade 1 in 2013 and beyond

Join us for an Information Session at
TanenbaumCHAT Kimel Centre
Perlis Boardroom
9600 Bathurst St. Vaughan

Wednesday, November 24 – 7:00 pm

Please RSVP to Danielle Waltman at 416 783 3346 ext 285
www.bialik.ca

Bialik Hebrew Day School
בית ספר יומי ע"ש ביאליק טאג שול
UJA FEDERATION OF GREATER TORONTO

Lodz-born rabbi celebrating 90th birthday

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

When Rabbi Peretz Weizman used to go on his customary walks down Main Street in Winnipeg, he often sang an unusual song that puzzled the shopkeepers he had come to know.

"What is that tune and why are you always singing it?," they asked him.

Weizman kept mum about it but in an interview with The CJN last week, he explained the origins of that unusual melody that had puzzled his friends in the prairie city.

It was an old tune sung by a cantor that he had heard as a youth in his native city, Lodz. As a boy, he loved to attend Kabalat Shabbat services at the city's famous Altshtot, Old City Shul. Although his family attended a simple shtibl, he used to sneak out on Friday night to the ornate and beautiful synagogue, where he was awed by the splendour of the building, the solemnity of the service and the stature of the cantor.

He remembered the cantor's song welcoming the Sabbath and kept it alive. "That was the song I sang on Main Street," he said. "I never walked alone. I saved something from the Old City Shul. I rescued the melody. This Hitler could not destroy."

Rabbi Weizman, who has moved to Toronto to be closer to his family, will celebrate his 90th birthday on Nov. 23. A man of the old school, he recalls vividly the life he led in Lodz before the Nazi invasion of September 1939, as well as the subsequent destruction.

The memory of his beloved synagogue going up in flames in November 1939 is burned into his consciousness. It was so beautiful, "I didn't believe the Temple was nicer than this shul," he said.

"When I saw the synagogue going up in flames, the entire sky was covered in sparks – a remnant. When I say that, I feel that I was one of the sparks."

Like other survivors of the Holocaust, Rabbi Weizman represents one of the ever-declining number of Yiddish-speaking European Jews. Surprisingly, he eschews use of the word "survivor" when describing himself, even though he alone from his parents, brothers, sisters, nieces, nephews, cousins – more than 60 people in all – escaped the Nazis.

"I am not a survivor," he said. "Let me explain. I was a nephew, I was a son, a brother. All these titles gone. Only the naked Peretz survived. All the titles are gone. Only a fraction survived, the naked "I" survived... I felt naked, unprotected."

Rabbi Weizman had three brothers and two sisters. His father, Shmuel, was a successful businessman who manufactured and sold chemicals and some pharmaceuticals. At age three, Rabbi Weizman began to attend cheder at the Yeshiva Yesodai HaTorah, where he learned traditional Jewish subjects along with secular material, which was compulsory. The school days were long, beginning at 8 a.m. and going until 8:30 p.m., with a break for dinner.

Rabbi Peretz Weizman
[Paul Lungen photo]

At age 15, his family arranged for a private tutor. "In Poland, in my circle, you didn't study to become a rabbi. If you wanted to be a Jew and respected in the community, you had to be a scholar."

He didn't decide to become a rabbi until after the creation of the Lodz ghetto by the Nazis.

"I felt I should contribute to the Jews, that Judaism will need me, if I survive," he said.

Remembering the cantor's rendition of Kabalat Shabbat was part of that and later, when he met the cantor in the ghetto, Rabbi Weizman recalled that the man, who had seemed so tall and grand in the synagogue, was "shrunken" and beaten down.

"I sang for the chazzan, Kabalat Shabbat, and tears welled in his eyes and he said, 'preserve it.'"

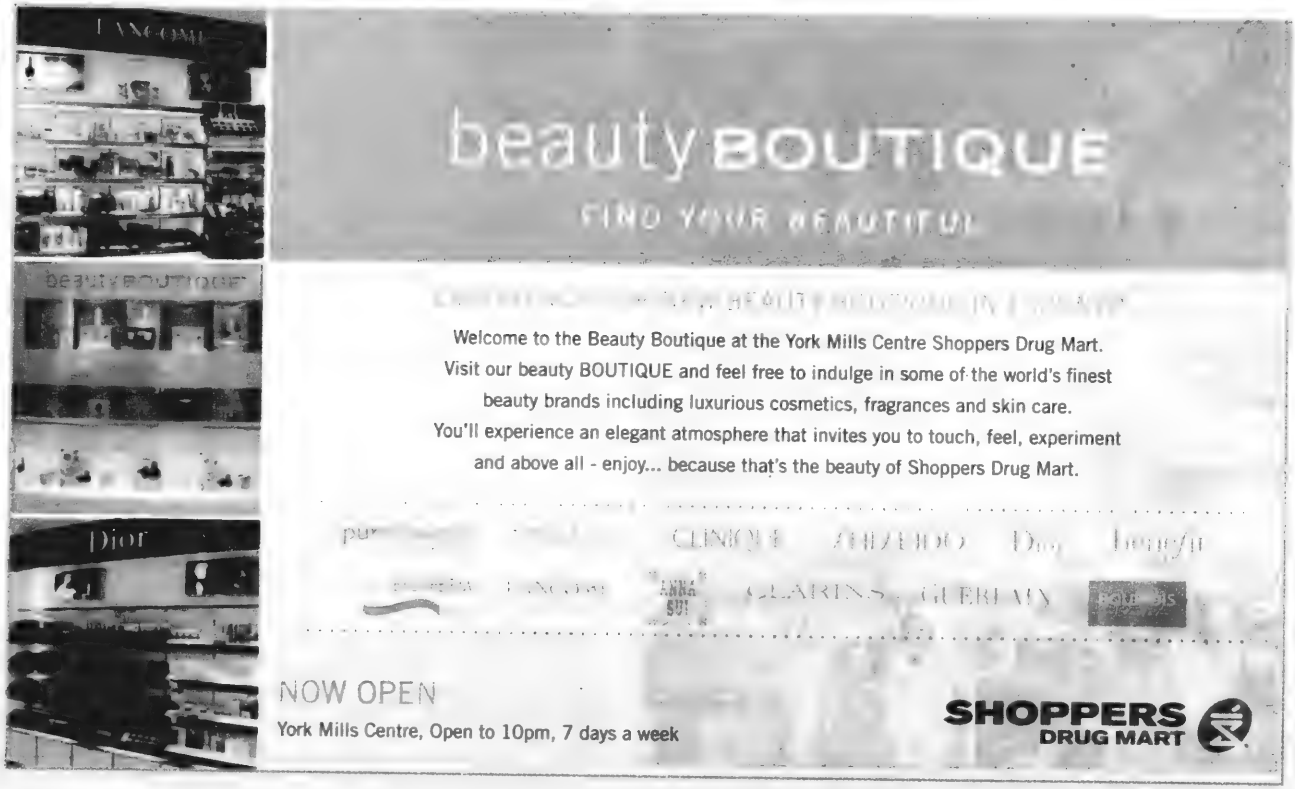
Preserve the song, he did, though all around him was starvation, misery, death and destruction. He managed to survive the war as a labourer in a laundry. "We laundered the garments of the Jews who were gassed and sent it back, cleaned, to Germany. We didn't know they were gassed then, but we noticed five shirts, one over the other, and found diamonds in brassieres, and dollars."

Rabbi Weizman was liberated by Soviet forces and met his future wife, Riva, after the war. After a few years in Europe, they moved to Israel where she had family, but Rabbi Weizman couldn't cope with the hot Mediterranean climate. When he learned of an opening at a synagogue in Winnipeg, they left for Canada, arriving in 1953.

In 1960, he became rabbi at the newly formed Bnay Abraham Congregation, and he served there for almost 40 years.

"I love Winnipeg," he said. "I feel very comfortable there. It has a very nice, comfortable element there. It's heimishe, a cold climate, but warm people."

Continued on page 24



beauty BOUTIQUE
FIND YOUR BEAUTIFUL
Welcome to the Beauty Boutique at the York Mills Centre Shoppers Drug Mart.
Visit our beauty BOUTIQUE and feel free to indulge in some of the world's finest beauty brands including luxurious cosmetics, fragrances and skin care.
You'll experience an elegant atmosphere that invites you to touch, feel, experiment and above all - enjoy... because that's the beauty of Shoppers Drug Mart.
NOW OPEN
York Mills Centre, Open to 10pm, 7 days a week
SHOPPERS DRUG MART

Rosenbergs' son helps kids of targeted activists

By CARA EDELL
Special to The CJN

Robert Meeropol, one of Ethel and Julius Rosenberg's sons, visited Toronto recently for his only Canadian stop on a 20-city tour.

The New York native spoke about his work with the Rosenberg Fund for Children at his Oct. 30 lecture held at the Winchevsky Centre.

Twenty years ago, Meeropol said he was an unfulfilled corporate lawyer with an extraordinary personal history – he was orphaned at age six when his parents were executed in 1953 for conspiracy to commit espionage. To fill the void in his life, he founded the Rosenberg Fund for Children, to help the children of targeted activists.

The fund is an American-based public foundation that provides a supportive community for children whose parents are working for social justice and, as a result, have lost their jobs, freedom, physical or emotional well-being, and even their lives.

It has awarded millions of dollars to benefit hundreds of children whose parents have been targeted because of their involvement in progressive movements. Such causes have included struggles to wage peace, preserve civil liberties and safeguard the environment.

In addressing his own parents' case in his lecture, Meeropol spoke about his past before outlining dramatic new developments that have recently come to light. His memoir, An Execution in the Family, was published on the 50th anniversary of his parents' executions.

The U.S. government executed the Rosenbergs for "conspiring to steal the secret of the atomic bomb," Meeropol said. Because the charge was conspiracy, their conviction did not require concrete evidence that they had stolen anything or given it to anyone. The key government witnesses were all charged with the same conspiracy and received more favourable treatment if they testified the Rosenbergs were guilty.

Ethel and Julius Rosenberg

David and Ruth Greenglass, Ethel Rosenberg's brother and sister-in-law, testified that Julius, with Ethel's help, recruited David into an atomic spy ring in 1944, Meeropol said. At that time, David worked in New Mexico, where the first atomic bomb was being built. The Greenglasses swore that David provided a sketch and a description of the bomb to Julius in September 1945, and that Ethel was present to type David's notes.

In return for the Greenglasses' co-operation, Ruth Greenglass, who swore she helped steal what the prosecution called "the most important scientific secret ever known to mankind," was never indicted, Meeropol said. His parents testified and denied all charges.

In 2008, the transcripts of the testimony of 43 witnesses who appeared before the jury that indicted the Rosenbergs were released to the public. This included the testimony of Ruth Greenglass, who had died earlier that year, but not David, who is still alive. Ruth's testimony did not mention the 1945 meeting, any sketches or notes, Meeropol said.

In October 2010, the publication of the book Final Verdict: What Really Happened in the Rosenberg Case by Walter and Miriam Schneir revealed that when Julius was fired from the Army Corps of Engineers in February 1945, the USSR removed him from all espionage activity in fear that the United States had discovered he was an espionage agent. Therefore, the supposed September 1945 espionage meeting between the Rosenbergs and Greenglasses could not have taken place, Meeropol said.

Instead, the Greenglasses, without the Rosenberg's involvement, met with Soviet agents and delivered the sketch that the government called "the secret of the atomic bomb" three months later. This new information supports that neither Julius nor Ethel was a member of an atomic spy ring that stole the secret of the atomic bomb, Meeropol said.

In recent years, we have witnessed "the most rapid and widespread erosion of our civil liberties since the 1950s," he said. "Those who speak out in opposition to our criminal war abroad and the growing repression at home are condemned as traitors and treated as enemies of the state."

After his parents' arrests in 1950, Meeropol's relatives were so scared of being associated with "Communist spies" that they refused to take him and his brother into their homes. After his parents' executions, police seized Meeropol from the home of his future adoptive parents and placed him in an orphanage.

"Bad as this was, it could have been much worse," he said. "As I grew older, I came to realize the debt I owed to so many generous individuals whom I never met, but who rallied to my support. As a result of their collective efforts and generosity, I grew up in a loving household and flourished in the supportive environment provided by child-oriented progressive institutions."

Meeropol said the fund for children helps kids who are enduring the same kind of nightmare that he experienced as a child. "My parents wrote that they died secure in the knowledge that others would carry on after them. That's what I've done, and that is what the Rosenberg Fund for Children seeks to do."

Experience Judaism from Around the World in November Admission is FREE

Watermarks | Film screening
Sunday, November 14 - 7PM
Learn the story of the Hakoah Vienna Jewish women's swim team of the 1930s, their forced separation, and their reunion decades later. Discussion led by film critic Shlomo Schwartzberg follows film screening.

The Ancient Cemetery of Sambir, Ukraine | Mark Freiman
Thursday, November 18 - 7:30PM
Mark Freiman, National President of Canadian Jewish Congress will present a fascinating seminar in support of the restoration of Jewish Holocaust memorial sites in Ukraine. Discussion to include the political perspectives and the practical issues involved in restoring Sambir's Jewish cemetery.

A Scholar's View from China Today | Professor Xu Xin
Sunday, November 21 - 7:30PM
Professor Xu Xin is author and educator, Director of the Glazer Institute of Judaic Studies, Nanjing University and founding President of the Association of Jewish Studies in China. Join us for a fascinating lecture which surveys his journey into Jewish Studies and explains his love of Jewish history, culture, religion, literature and Israel.

Darchei Noam
Toronto's Reconstructionist Synagogue
864 Sheppard Avenue West
darcheinoam.on.ca 416.638.4783

Number Four in a Series New Challenges. Eternal Strength.

FREEDOM AND TOLERANCE SPOKEN HERE.

Throughout history, the Jewish People have endured unimaginable hardships that threatened our values and Jewish existence itself. We have survived them all. Today, with the same steadfast determination, we cherish our values and stand strongly against new threats.

A global movement is denying Jewish Peoplehood, questioning Israel's right to exist, while ignoring her values of freedom and tolerance. Our community has an historic opportunity to reaffirm those values.

Your support will allow UJA Federation to fund bold programs that strengthen Jewish identity and encourage more of our young people to experience Israel, inspiring a new spirit of Jewish activism.

Let's work together to keep our youth proud and strong.

NEW CHALLENGES. ETERNAL STRENGTH. OneUJA.ca

ROBBINS HEBREW ACADEMY

Looking for an Exceptional Jewish Education?

Contact us for a personal tour to see the special things your child will experience at our school.

Contact Michele Viner:
416.224.8737 x 137 or mviner@rhacademy.ca

Visit either of our two campuses:

Bayview Campus
3080 Bayview Avenue
(Nursery – Grade 8)

Bathurst Campus
1700 Bathurst Street
(JK – Grade 8)

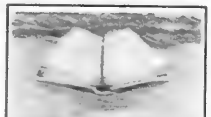
www.rhacademy.ca

Jewish Life

If I forget thee, Yerushalayim

By RABBI URI KAUFMAN

I recently spent Shabbat in Yerushalayim, celebrating with my children the birth of my first grandchild. Holding your first granddaughter for the first time is intensly moving. Grandchildren reinforce our sense of mortality and eternity, as we see ourselves aging, reaching a new milestone of life. We are thankful to HaShem for being blessed with a new generation connecting us to the future.



Rabbinic Reflections

Holding a grandchild born in Jerusalem creates the additional awareness that our lives are eternally bound with the destiny of our people and its history.

My mother and father were children of young parents who left Europe for North America years before World War II to allow my grandfathers to escape conscription into the Polish and Russian armies.

My mother-in-law escaped the destruction in Europe as a young child hidden with a gentile family in her native Romania, later coming to Canada with her parents who miraculously also survived the war. My father-in-law emigrated with his family from Iran, first to Eretz Yisrael and then to New York, escaping the devastation and upheaval that would come to his world decades later.

My son-in-law's grandparents are all survivors of the death camps who came here with unshakable faith in HaShem, unwavering commitment to their traditions and superhuman determination to rebuild their lives and families.

All these Diaspora stories came together two weeks ago in a delicious little girl, a new chapter – this time written in Yerushalayim. When the diplomats and politicians negotiate the Jews' right to live in Yerushalayim, I think my granddaughter should join that conversation and remind them that she was born in the eternal homeland of our people because, for over 2,000 years, our people never forgot their true home.

The Polish tailor, the Hungarian shopkeeper, the Iranian artisan, the Brooklyn lawyer all kept in their hearts and hopes for the future the psalmist's cry, "If I forget thee, Yerushalayim, let my right hand forget its cunning."

The great irony of history and current world politics is that this fact of Jewish history is our most powerful claim to the holy city. English historian Arnold Toynbee, in a public debate over 50 years ago with then-Israeli ambassador to Canada Rabbi Yaakov Herzog, claimed that Jews were a fossilized nation, who, by the rules of history, should have disappeared centuries ago and therefore have no claim to the Land of Israel. Rabbi Herzog responded that our existence despite history is due to the protection of God, and our unceasing desire to return to Eretz Yisrael has kept us alive, with legitimate historical rights to our ancient homeland.

It is this historical reality that U.S. President Barack Obama chooses to ignore in discussing the Jews' rights to their own land, arguing that our right to a homeland is only a result of the Holocaust. His intent is to lessen our claim to Yerushalayim or any part of our land that doesn't fit his vision of "Pax Obama."

I don't know if my granddaughter is ready to join the discussions, but I believe that into those rooms will sneak many of the souls, of the tailors, shopkeepers and artisans who kept the yearning for Jerusalem alive. They will be smiling, knowing that what they did is now the true basis for our right to have little Jewish girls again born in our home.

Rabbi Uri Kaufman is the rav of the Agudas Yisroel Anshei Kielce and associate principal of Eitz Chaim Schools Patricia campus.

May God give Rob Ford strength

Money Matters

By Rabbi Jay Kelman CA

Voters in the city of Toronto, in electing Rob Ford as mayor, have voted for change. Our mayor-elect has been most forthright about his plan of action, with a focus on the need to cut city spending. Yet despite his wide margin of victory and clear mandate from the voters, it's far from clear how much of his agenda he will mange to have implemented.

Unlike our federal and provincial parliamentary systems where leaders are able, for better or worse, to enforce party discipline, our elected representatives to Toronto City Hall consist of 44 independent councillors who have no one to answer to save for the voters themselves – what a novel concept! The gap between the election campaign and the reality of office will, by necessity, be wide indeed. Major initiatives will go through much negotiation, with the likely result being greatly watered down legislation.

A similar fate potentially awaited millions of Americans who, as of this writing, were just one day away from likely changing the makeup of the U.S. Congress, setting the stage for political gridlock. The stakes were high, and economists were concerned that with the world economy still teetering on the brink, a high degree of partisanship and subsequent inaction could lead to a double-dip recession.

I leave it to the political scientists to debate the merits of our democratic process while I attempt to focus on the ethical underpinning of the choices we make. The Torah has very little to say about the type of economic (or political, for that matter) system that should be in place. Rather, whatever system is chosen must be implemented in a way that's fair, transparent and meets high ethical criteria. These are, admittedly, very broad and vague goals, and well-meaning people will argue about how best to attain them. Many will argue as to what constitutes the best communal policy that we must aim to promote.

The level of taxation and the proper allocation to health care, defence, education, welfare, foreign aid and a host of other worthy causes is something that has no definitive guidelines in our tradition. Those authorities who have addressed these issues try to balance the many competing needs of the individual and community.

Thus the most important factor is electing people with integrity who can be trusted to act with the best interests of the electorate at heart. In the end, specific policy initiatives are more, often than not, a reflection of the people who initiate them.

I have previously noted the provision of Jewish law that says a voter must vote for the sake of heaven. Whatever its exact meaning, this law would preclude voting for initiatives that one feels are against the public good, despite the fact that one might personally benefit. While citizens vote infrequently, our elected officials are constantly called on to vote, and the level of integrity and selflessness required of them is much higher.

It is not for naught that synagogues across the world publicly proclaim each week on Shabbat that God should bless those who toil in the public sector b'emunah, with faith and integrity. Sadly, many public servants aren't actually included in these blessings. And tellingly, we don't bless those who "succeed" in communal life. Rather, it is those who faithfully toil in such "holy" work who are worthy of blessings.

Our tradition recognizes that "success" is often out of our hands. With so many factors – economic surprises, the realities of politics, a new perspective gained when actually in power – at work in the political sphere we should try and ensure that those who attain office are those who will faithfully deal with the myriad of unexpected issues that come their way.

Comments to rabbijay@torahinmotion.org.

'KOSHER' LABEL IN ADVERTISING

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency Guide to Food Labelling and Advertising reads as follows:

"In the labelling, packaging and advertising of a food, the Food and Drug Regulations prohibits the use of the word kosher or any letter of the Hebrew alphabet, or any other word, expression, depiction, sign, symbol, mark, device or other representation that indicates or that is likely to create an impression that the food is kosher, if the food does not meet the requirements of the Kashruth applicable to it.

The terms "kosher style" and "kind of kosher" are not allowed, unless they meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish-style food" or "Jewish cuisine" are not objected to, although the foods may not necessarily meet the requirements of the Kashruth.

Rationale: "Kosher style" is considered to create the impression that the food is kosher, and therefore the food must meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish style" food may not necessarily create this impression."

The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Jewish Life

Writer says Hinduism, Judaism have much in common

We Jews tend to understand our own identity in two contradictory ways – either we highlight our similarities with other groups or we highlight our differences.

If our identity is based on difference, then we structure our religion to be as different as possible from gentile religions or, in the political sphere, we structure our nation to be as different as possible from non-Jewish states. It's easy to find support for this approach in classical Jewish literature. The Bible instructs our forefathers who left Egypt (Leviticus 18:3), "Do not copy the practices of the land of Egypt where you dwelt, or the practices of the land of Canaan to which I am taking you; nor should you follow their laws." Rabbinic legend teaches us that Abraham was called ivri (meaning Hebrew, a name ostensibly derived from the Hebrew word ever (side), because "all the world was on one side and he [Abraham, alone] was on the other side."

By Martin Lockshin

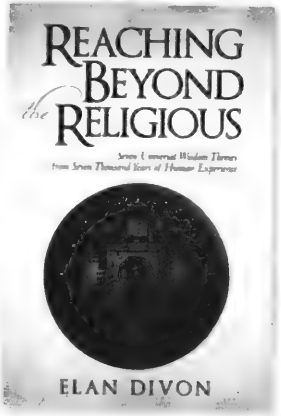
Many modern Jewish nationalists proudly describe the Jews, using the words of Balaam (Numbers 23:9), as "a people that dwells alone." It is likely that Moses Maimonides and other Bible scholars who followed in his footsteps were right when they suggested that some of the obscure laws of the Torah were designed to lead the Jews away from pagan practices (some often long-lost).

On the other hand, if our identity is based on similarity, then we Jews should try to be as similar as possible to the rest of the world. We can see this tendency in the old Yiddish adage, "Vi se kristlt zikh, azoy yidlt zikh" (literarily, "The way it is with Christians is the way it is with Jews," i.e., Jews who live in Christian countries tend to do things the way Christians do them) or in the bon mot of unknown origin "Jews are just like everyone else, only more so."

The different religious customs of Ashkenazi and Sephardi Jews are often a function of differing local gentile customs. For example, Jews in Christian countries generally sat in pews in their synagogues, but in Sephardi countries, they often sat on the floor. Some Jewish nationalists have understood Zionism as the "normalization of the Jewish people," a movement that should make us more like everyone else.

The truth, of course, lies somewhere in between. In some periods of history, Jews tended to adopt the behaviours and values of their gentile neighbours. In other periods, Jewish values centred around rejecting the gentile world and following the biblical charge to refrain from following the gentiles' laws and customs. In most periods of history, both factors were at work.

Elan Divon's new book, Reaching Beyond Religious: Seven Universal Wisdom Themes From Seven Thousand Years of Human Experience, falls squarely into the similarity camp. This is not surprising. Divon is the executive director of Peace Camp Canada, a non-profit organization that promotes dialogue and cross-cultural understanding between Israeli and Palestinian teens. He was born in Jerusalem and currently lives in Toronto. He has also lived in India, Sri Lanka and Ethiopia and has studied at Harvard University, Brandeis University, McGill University and the University of London. His interest in cross-cultural comparisons seems to be a natural outgrowth of his cosmopolitan background.



Written for the layperson in an informal style (which could have used a little more editing), the book contains several close readings of biblical stories. In each case, Divon discovers a universal religious moral, often with a self-help message. Divon's approach – that Jewish religious texts promote values that are also found in other religions – is not unusual. Many people in North America, both Jews and Christians, enjoy speaking of the "Judeo-Christian heritage" – suggesting that, on the issues that count, Jews and Christians think alike. Some even speak of the "Abrahamic Faiths," (i.e., Judaism, Christianity and Islam), again implying that the commonalities between the three religions are more important than their differences.

But Divon's thesis in this book is more radical. His central argument is that Judaism and Hinduism, two religions that are rarely considered similar, actually have a lot in common. For example, Divon walks his readers slowly and intelligently through a close reading of the stories of Joseph in the Book of Genesis. He points out a number of ways in which the tables turn surprisingly against characters who overstep. For example, Joseph ends up (according to Divon, inadvertently) enslaving the Egyptians (Genesis 47:18-23), and a few years later, the Egyptians enslave the Israelite people (Exodus 1).

Divon argues that the inexorable way that the plot unfolds is very similar to the Hindu idea of karma. He suggests that the biblical text is better understood if we realize that the effects of karma are often unpredictable, in part because of our inheritance of "karmic debt" from our ancestors.

In another chapter, Divon grapples with the age-old problem that the Bible sees some people as chosen and others as not. He suggests that "the very notion of chosenness and unchosenness exemplified in the Torah, and the duties that are contingent on each, is very akin to the Hindu concept of dharma." He concludes that a crucial lesson of the Torah and of dharma is "acceptance… since we cannot alter and change who and what we are."

Right at the beginning of the book, Divon admits that there are many differences between the two religions (to name just one, Judaism is monotheistic and Hinduism is not). But he chooses to highlight the similarities.

I have no doubt that some Jewish readers who are attracted to emphasizing Jews' similarities to others will enjoy this book. It is comforting to think that even two religions as ostensibly disparate as Judaism and Hinduism share some universal truths. While Divon does not say so explicitly, I sense that the book is dedicated in part to the promotion of tolerance by highlighting how we are all the same.

Readers who prefer to think of Judaism as very different from other religions may not find the book as attractive.

A book that enumerated the many divergences between Judaism and Hinduism would presumably have been easier to write. And it would probably have been a more precise description of the facts. A frank but respectful acknowledgement of real differences between Judaism and other world religions does not necessarily lead to intolerance. In fact, true tolerance is only possible between those who disagree. Should we be tolerant and respectful only to those who have a message that is the same as ours?

ManChef.ca
Mature Gentlemen · Caregivers · Baby Boomers · Stags · Bachelors · GenXers · Poker Nights 416-967-1818
peter@manchef.ca · www.manchef.ca

Good News For All Dialysis Patients !
ESCAPE THE BITTERLY COLD WEATHER
Dialyze at Universal Kidney Center in South Florida
You do not have to make payments for your dialysis treatments.
We will bill Provincial Health Care directly.
Call now for reservations
(954) 802 - 8100

ISRAEL 2010-2011
COMPARE APPLES to APPLES
The BEST Family Tours in North America!!!
Call us for Recent References
Bar/Bat Mitzvah Ceremony Included
All-inclusive deluxe hotels
• More days of sightseeing
• More meals
• A true family itinerary
www.israelfamilytours.com
or call Kathy ext. 345
WINTER SPECIAL 2010 BOOK NOW AND SAVE
SPACE VERY LIMITED
Dec. 16 - Dec. 30
Dec. 19 - Jan. 2/11
MARCH BREAK 2011
Mar. 9 - Mar. 20
PASSOVER 2011
April 16 - April 30
SUMMER 2011
Jun. 26 - Jul. 10
Jun. 3 - Jul. 17
Jun. 17 - Jul. 31
Jun. 24 - Aug. 7
Jun. 31 - Aug. 14
Aug. 14 - Aug. 28
PROMOTION PACKAGE
AIR INCL. 3 NT. in 5 STAR HOTEL
FROM $1266
Community Mission
May 12 - 26 2011
If you've been to Israel before or you're a first timer...
THIS IS THE TOUR FOR YOU!!
Call Kathy ext. 345
PRIVATE CUSTOM TOURS
INNOVATIVE ITINERARIES & GREAT PRICES!
No one is more experienced than we are!
DON'T TRY TO DO IT ON YOUR OWN BOOK WITH US AND SAVE!
Call Ehud Ext. 322
Air Canada online
For more tours & to book visit:
www.peerlesstravel.com
BEST AIRFARE TO ISRAEL
Don't book with anyone else before talking to us first!
PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES
YOUR FULL SERVICE TRAVEL AGENCY
905-886-5610
800-294-1663
info@peerlesstravel.com
7117 Bathurst St. Just N. of Steeles Thornhill ON L4J 2J6

Rabbi Weizman spent year at Beth Emeth

Continued from page 19

In 1999, he spent a year in Toronto as a replacement rabbi at the Beth Emeth Bais Yehuda Synagogue after he received a good response when he delivered a dvar Torah.

He enjoyed the experience at the shul. "We had a common language, and a common expectation and a common past. They could appreciate a newcomer. They appreciated my sense of humour. It's a Jewishly-intelligent congregation... They like European sechoireh [merchandise]."

Last year, the Winnipeg Jewish community honoured Rabbi Weizman with a tribute dinner and the establishment of the Rabbi Peretz Weizman Holocaust Education Trust fund, housed at the Jewish Foundation of Manitoba. More than $40,000 was raised to support the establishment and maintenance of a Holocaust education display showcase as a lasting legacy.

Today, Rabbi Weizman is a Torontonian. His wife is a resident at Baycrest, and his nine grandchildren and six great-grandchildren live here.

He still studies every day or two at a local yeshiva where the young people "look at me like someone from a different age."

"I'm a true believer that God has blessed me with a long life. I believe my brothers and sisters and parents gave me their years. I lived their lives, and I must confess that the less future I have, the more the past is taking a hold of me. As the past is taking a hold of me, it robs me of my present. I have such a desire to be with them, to see them. I have this longing. I miss them more than I missed them 50 years ago. They say time cures: no."

As this reporter takes leave of Rabbi Weizman – I confess that I've known him a long time; he "bar-mitzvahed" me years ago – there's always one more story, one more parable for him to tell, one more mishnaic interpretation to impart.

Like the old shul burning, Rabbi Weizman continues to give off sparks, hoping that a new generation will preserve and pass along the wisdom and flavour of the nearly destroyed Old World.

Israel must 'get rid' of West Bank to ensure survival

Continued from page 12

come to terms with the Palestinians unless its security is assured and its cities don't come under further Palestinian bombardment, such as the town of Sderot.

In a rebuttal, Beinart said the campaign to delegitimize Israel can be stopped in its tracks if Israel ends its occupation.

"A colonial occupation can't be defended in the modern world," he said, pointing out that Israel's presence in the West Bank violates the Geneva Conventions, while settlements there inhibit the movement toward peace.

He added that the doubling of the Jewish population in the West Bank during the Oslo peace process was not a wise move.

Beinart characterized his opponent's presentation as "too comforting a narrative."

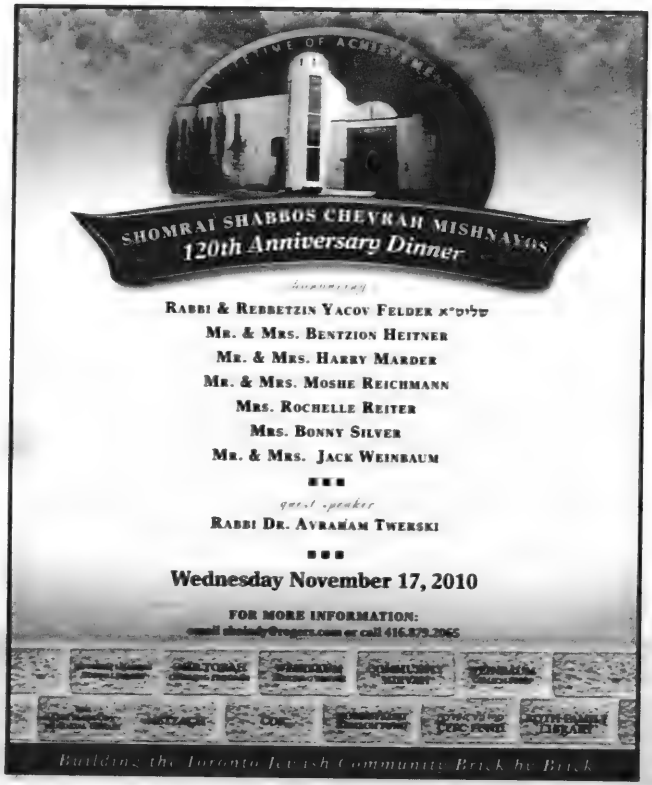
Rabbi Gordis said Israel has "to get rid" of the West Bank to ensure its survival as a Jewish state. By way of elaboration, he said Israel should keep settlement blocs, but give up "outlying areas" of the West Bank.

He said Israelis are eager to end their conflict with the Palestinians and would agree to a two-state solution.

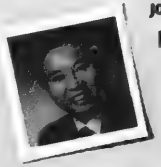
"It would be better not to have Palestinians under our thumb," he said. "But we haven't figured out how to do that. You can't play Russian roulette with the lives of your family."

Israelis have every reason to desire peace. "We just need a partner who can meet us halfway," he said.

THREE CUTS FOR CANCER:
Tamar Sonenberg, a Grade 4 student at Eitz Chaim Schools, recently cut her hair and donated it to help make wigs for children with cancer. This is the third time the nine-year-old has cut and donated her hair to help cancer patients. When she was three, she donated the hair from her first haircut, and three years later, she did so again. Immediately after her recent haircut, Tamar announced that she plans to let her hair grow until her bat mitzvah, and then she will be able to donate her hair for the fourth time.



SHOMRAI SHABBOS CHEVRAH MISHNAYOS
120th Anniversary Dinner
Rabbi & Rebbetzin Yacov Felder שליט"א
Mr. & Mrs. Bentzion Heitner
Mr. & Mrs. Harry Marder
Mr. & Mrs. Moshe Reichmann
Mrs. Rochelle Reiter
Mrs. Bonny Silver
Mr. & Mrs. Jack Weinbaum
guest speaker
Rabbi Dr. Avraham Twerski
Wednesday November 17, 2010
FOR MORE INFORMATION:
Building the Toronto Jewish Community Brick by Brick



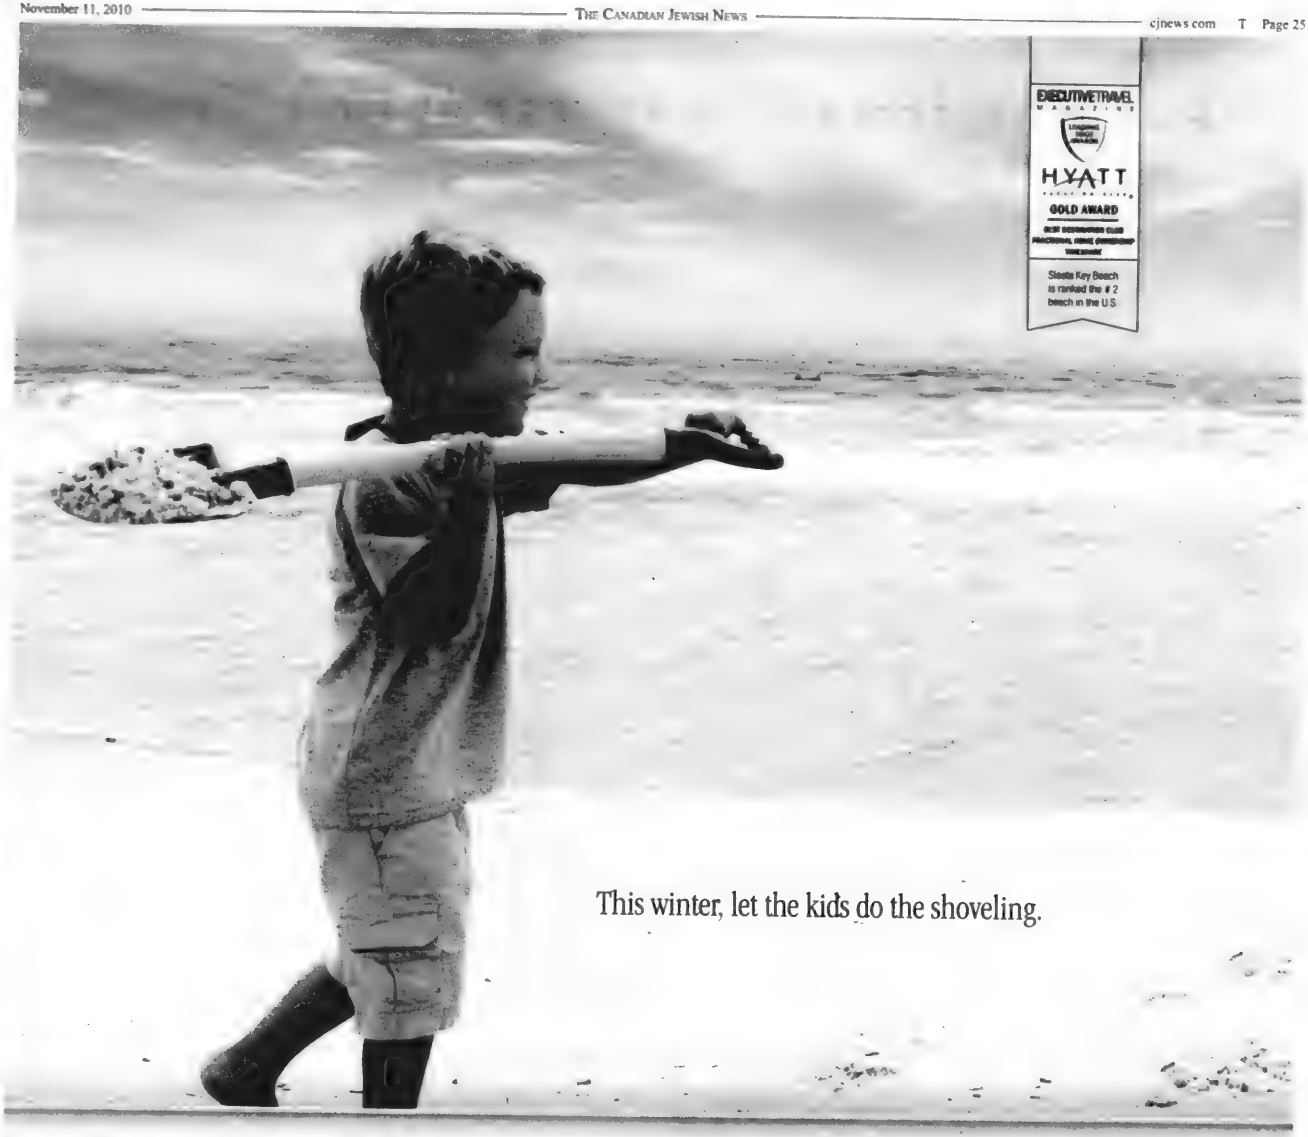
JOIN US FOR
Israel Through Chinese Eyes
Professor Xu Xin
School of Religious Studies, Nanjing University, China
November 21, 2010, 3:30pm
Executive Learning Centre, Schulich School of Business, Rm W136 – Free parking

Director of the Glazer Institute for Jewish Studies at Nanjing University, Xu Xin is the recipient of an honorary doctorate from Bar Ilan University in Israel and the only Professor of Jewish Studies in China.

The event is co-sponsored by York University's Israel and Golda Koschitzky Centre for Jewish Studies, Centre for Asian Research and Department of Humanities.

For further information:
www.yorku.ca/cjs
cjs@yorku.ca
416-736-5823

YORK UNIVERSITY
redefine THE POSSIBLE.



Nothing warms your heart more than a beautiful moment in time, when family traditions are built alongside sandcastles, and barefoot luxury becomes an everyday reality. Welcome to Hyatt Siesta Key Beach, where owning a fractional beachfront residence means enjoying our world-class resort amenities and services, with the added benefit of access to other Hyatt Vacation Club properties across the country. This winter, lose the layers and experience the warmth of a luxurious getaway that can last a lifetime, and longer.

Call 866.982.4546 today to learn more about our special offer to experience Hyatt Siesta Key Beach. Deeded fractional ownership starting at $110,000.

HYATT
HYATT RESIDENCE CLUB™
SARASOTA

Real Luxury. Extraordinary Value.

www.HyattSiestaKeyBeach.com

HYATT VACATION CLUB PROPERTIES

Aspen, Carmel, Beaver Creek, Breckenridge, N Lake Tahoe, Sedona, San Antonio, Bonita Springs, Puerto Rico, Key West, Northstar at Tahoe, Siesta Key.

Holocaust Education Week

Plan to canonize Pius XII called 'highly political'

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

The long-running effort by the Vatican to confer sainthood on a controversial pope, Pius XII, accused of having remained largely silent during the Holocaust, is really about an internal power struggle within the Roman Catholic church, says Canadian historian Michael Marrus.

The current debate on his possible canonization is a Catholic rather than a Jewish issue, asserted Marrus, a member of a short-lived Catholic-Jewish commission whose mandate was to examine Vatican policy during World War II.

Michael Marrus

"It's not a matter in which Jewish decision-making is involved one whit," said Marrus, a University of Toronto professor emeritus whose book, Holocaust in History, studied the Vatican's role during this period. "What is going on is highly political."

Arguing that the debate is polemical, runs deep and has "little to do with Jews," Marrus likened it to a theological battle between two opposing forces in the Vatican – "preservationists" who want to maintain orthodoxy and "revisionists" who are champions of reform and change.

Pope Pius XII

Speaking at a Holocaust Educational Week forum at Holy Blossom Temple last week, he said the preservationists regard Pope Pius XII as "a kind of symbol" of their conservative beliefs. They also believe he acted boldly on behalf of Jews and saved hundreds of thousands of them.

Their opponents, the revisionists, fear Pope Pius XII's canonization will undermine the church's relationship with Jews, he noted.

In general, preservationists hail him as a paragon of Christian virtue who guided the Vatican through an immensely difficult time, while revisionists regard him as a morally ambiguous figure who could have done much more to help Jews threatened by the Nazis.

To Marrus, this divergence of views is proof that the church is a very pluralistic institution. "It's not a unified, monolithic body obedient to a single authority," he said.

Jews generally oppose the process to confer sainthood on Eugenio Pacelli, who was pope from 1939 to 1958.

The World Jewish Congress has characterized Vatican plans to canonize him as "inopportune and premature," while the American Gathering of Holocaust Survivors and Their Descendants has condemned it as "profoundly insensitive and thoughtless."

Some Jews, however, disagree with this line of thinking, Marrus said.

The British historian Sir Martin Gilbert, Winston Churchill's biographer, has said Pope Pius XII deserves thanks rather than blame. The late Golda Meir praised his attempts to rescue Jews when she was Israel's foreign minister.

Pope Paul VI launched the campaign to canonize Pope Pius XII in 1965. The current pope, Benedict XVI, shelved his canonization pending the expected opening of Vatican files in 2014, on his papacy. Last year, however, Benedict XVI declared Pope Pius XII "venerable," a step short of sainthood.

In his talk, Marrus said Pope Pius XII will not be declared a saint any time soon. No one can be certain where the debate over his sainthood is heading. "Your guess is as good as mine. No one knows for sure."

But among preservationists, who have lobbied on his behalf for years, there is "a sense of urgency," he said.

By contrast, revisionists have implored Pope Benedict XVI to slow down the consideration of Pope Pius XII's case for canonization, to let it rest for another century.

Marrus argued the Vatican would be unwise to canonize Pope Pius XII.

"The repercussions would be very significant if canonization took place," he said. "Let the issue pass."

Education called best way to refute Holocaust deniers

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Education is ultimately the best tool there is to combat Holocaust denial, says Deborah Lipstadt, the American historian who won a historic court case against British Holocaust denier David Irving 10 years ago.

"Teaching the facts is the way to confront deniers' rubbish," she said at a Holocaust Education Week forum last week at Beth Sholom Synagogue.

Deborah Lipstadt

"One of our best weapons is survivors' stories," she added. "This is crucial, but we won't have this resource around very much longer. That's why videotaping their stories is so important."

Lipstadt, a professor of modern Jewish history and Holocaust studies at Emory University in Atlanta, Ga., and her publisher, Penguin Books, were sued for libel by Irving in 1996 after she accused him in her book, Denying the Holocaust: The Growing Assault on Truth and Memory, of falsifying the facts.

During the trial, her defence team proved beyond a doubt that Lipstadt's accusations against Irving were substantially true and therefore not libelous.

"We proved that what deniers claimed didn't happen," said Lipstadt, who wrote History on Trial: My Day in Court with a Holocaust Denier in the wake of the trial.

After the judge ruled that Irving had systematically distorted the historical record, the Times of London observed, "History has had its day in court and scored a crushing victory."

Lipstadt, the bane of Holocaust deniers ever since, said three new trends have emerged in Holocaust denial in recent years.

It has gone viral on the Internet. Israel and Zionism have been equated with Nazi Germany and Nazism and the Arab and Muslim world has become "one of the most productive areas" for Holocaust deniers.

In a general survey of Holocaust denial, Lipstadt said deniers do not subscribe to identical beliefs.

But all of them, while not denying that Jews were persecuted by the Nazis, believe that Adolf Hitler did not intend to exterminate the Jews of Europe.

Deniers claim that Germany's intention to commit genocide is nothing but a big lie, disseminated by the victorious Allies and the Zionist movement.

Deniers further claim that the gas chambers did not exist and that the Holocaust enriched Jews and provided the justification for Israel's creation at the expense of the Palestinian Arabs.

At its heart, Holocaust denial is a form of anti-Semitism, an attempt to perpetuate age-old stereotypes about Jews' lust for money, power and political manipulation, she said.

Deniers also take Nazi euphemisms such as "resettlement," a word for murder, at face value, Lipstadt noted.

As well, they try to capitalize on the fact that Hitler did not sign a single document ordering the genocidal treatment of Jews.

Deniers skate on thin ice because the Holocaust has the dubious distinction of being the "best-documented genocide" in the annals of history, she said.

"There are reams of documentation," she said, citing the accounts of perpetrators, bystanders and victims.

In addition, deniers engage in immoral equivocation by comparing the Allied bombing of Dresden with the murder of six million Jews.

And in an effort to sow doubt about the veracity of the Holocaust in the minds of the young, they have tried to discredit The Diary of Anne Frank.

Frank's diary, however, has been subjected to forensic examination and found to be authentic, Lipstadt pointed out.

You asked for it. We're making it happen.
Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School is opening a second SK class in September 2011 to support growing demand.
Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School
INSPIRING CURIOSITY HONOURING DIVERSITY CREATING COMMUNITY
Learn more at our open house:
November 24th, 2010 at 10:00 AM
BAR & BAT
13
MITZVAH YEAR
ENROL NOW FOR 2011 NEW SK CLASS

Learn more about Holocaust Education Week on our website at cjnews.com

WHAT'S AT KOFFLER

koffler
centre of the arts

NOVEMBER 2010

A weekend of culture with "taboo-breaking scholar" David Shneer

November 13 – 14 | Miles Nadal JCC, 750 Spadina (at Bloor)

kofflerkultura presents two special pre-show talks before performances of Lenin's Embalmers, an absurdist dark comedy about two Jewish scientists chosen to embalm Lenin after his death.

"Embalming hasn't been this much fun since Six Feet Under!" – Joff Schmidt, CBC Radio

To see the play and get discounted tickets at the special Koffler group rate, call today: 416.638.1881 x4333

Lenin's Embalmers, co-produced by the Harold Green Jewish Theatre and the Winnipeg Jewish Theatre, runs from October 30 – November 21 at the Al Green Theatre.

Preserving Lenin
Saturday, November 13 | 7 PM Pre-show Talk | 8 PM Performance
An illustrated talk drawing upon Shneer's original research on Soviet Jewish photographers, looking at the integral role of Jews in preserving Lenin's image as well as his body.

Lenin's Legacy & Russian Jews Today
Sunday, November 14 | 1 PM Pre-show Talk | 2 PM Performance
Insights into the contemporary Russian Jewish Diaspora in light of the Soviet era.

Support for kofflerkultura is provided by Alex and Simona Shnaider, and Fred and Linda Waks.

One World, Double Take – a panel discussion moderated by David Shneer
Sunday, November 14, 4 PM | Pay-What-You-Can
Alumni Hall (Room 112), Victoria College Building, University of Toronto, 91 Charles St. W
A panel of artists looks at creators who cross boundaries: geographic, societal and artistic.

Presented together with the Centre for Diaspora and Transnational Studies, University of Toronto.

David Shneer's residence at the Koffler Centre of the Arts is made possible by the Miriam and Allan Memorial Fund for Jewish Culture.

MAMF Miriam & Allan Memorial Fund for Jewish Culture | JEWISH FOUNDATION OF GREATER TORONTO | HAROLD GREEN JEWISH THEATRE COMPANY | jcc

TBF

34th Annual Toronto Jewish Book Fair
October 23 – 31, 2010
Beth David Synagogue, 55 Yeomans Road

This year's Fair was a huge success, featuring an incredible selection of books of Jewish interest and over 25 authors, including David Grossman and Tarek Fatah. Koffler Centre of the Arts is truly grateful to the Steering Committee and dedicated volunteers who work tirelessly each year to make Toronto Jewish Book Fair a success.

Steering Committee: Machi Steinberg (Chair), Dorothy Brown, Phyllis Chisvin, Eileen Cole, Ro Cook, Naomi Freeman, Barbara Held, Ellen Hersh, Marilyn Holtzman, Eileen Kobrin, Barbara Lampcov, Ryna Langer, Pat McCormack, Margie Nightingale, Margie Posluns, Carol Rosenthall, Marlene Ruderman, Judy Salamon, Trudy Sassoon, Charlotte Sasto, Judy Saul, Rachel Schlesinger, Helen Sheffman, Molly Swartz, Estelle Viner, Howard Weinroth, Helen Redner (Director).

Volunteers: Annie Adda, Marlyne Abramson, Ruth Berger, Hannah Brown, Jack Chisvin, Babs Friedman, Judy Ghert, Sarah Glatt, Rose Haspel, Daisy Jacobs, Frances Klinger, June Levine, Liora Levy, Miriam Meiri, Zelda Melamed, Esther Moss, Elaine Norris, Charlotte Nowack, Sarah Perlis, Shirley Rochman, Robert Ruderman, Anita Shedletsky, Edward Sheffman, Lyle Stanway, Lynn Stone.

SIGN UP NOW FOR WINTER CLASSES & WORKSHOPS
VISUAL ARTS, MUSIC, CERAMICS, CREATIVE WRITING & MORE!
REGISTER NOW ONLINE
www.kofflerarts.org

koffler
centre of the arts

Come early. Stay late.
(and bring your mother!)

4588 Bathurst Street | 416.638.1881 | info@kofflerarts.org | www.kofflerarts.org

CULTURAL SEASON SPONSOR: CBC Wood Gundy
PRINT MEDIA PARTNER: National Post — A Better Read.

Arts. Culture. Heritage.
POWERED BY UJA FEDERATION

Stories will keep Holocaust message alive, panel says

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

Elly Gotz, a Holocaust survivor, is not concerned that the Holocaust will be forgotten.

"I'm sure it will be remembered through literature, theatre and the arts," he said at a panel discussion sponsored by Shaar Shalom Synagogue as part of Holocaust Education Week.

Also on the panel, titled "Keeping the Message Alive When There Are No Eyewitnesses," was Sara Horowitz, a professor at York University, and Jan Van Pelt, a professor at Waterloo University. Moderator was Howard Adelman.

Gotz said that as a young boy, he learned history from novels such as War and Peace, and from Shakespeare. "We remember history through these stories."

Students learn more than anything they can learn in class when they have contact with survivors, he said, "but it is a temporary tool because we don't have survivors forever."

He said that at the UJA Federation of Greater Toronto's Sarah and Chaim Neuberger Holocaust Education Centre, where he has been a longtime speaker, they have created survivor video testimonies "that are touching and moving, and convey a lot of information. Indeed, there are mistakes, but they are important because they are all we have."

Horowitz said that when we talk about keeping the message alive, "we want it to be living and vibrant, not distant and historical. How do we keep events relevant to a new generation when the eyewitnesses are no longer alive?"

When students meet survivors, she said, it gives life to the story. But who will bear witness when there are no witnesses around?"

Video testimonies, "which are absorbing, disturbing and electrifying, give students presence of a person."

The irony of these testimonies, she said, is that they are at once private and public. "They are [shown in public], but because the interviews are conducted in a private space, people give vent to memories that they wouldn't share with a large audience. These testimonies will be enormously important."

She agreed with Gotz that literature will also be very important. "Literature humanizes the story, but it also makes the reader think about complicated issues. In some ways, it is a meditation on the implication of history."

Stories that survive, she said, whether they are poems or novels, are the stories of people's lives. "They are not the same as imaginative literature, and they are not the same as history. They have fallen into a no-man's land.

"They are not factual because memory is fallible, but they are not [imagination.] They have elements of literature, and elements of history. Our challenge is to give these life stories their full due."

WE WHO SURVIVED: As part of Holocaust Education Week, middle school students at Associated Hebrew Schools heard a gripping tale of survival by author Régine Sosiewicz-Lilensten, centre, who wrote the book Les Etoiles Cachées (The Hidden Stars), on Nov. 1. The novel, which details her story of being hidden in the French countryside during the war, is used in France to educate high school students about the Holocaust. Pictured with Sosiewicz-Lilensten are, from left, Eilat Assif, Zoe Nadler, Miriam Maes and Lindsay Bloom.

JACS TORONTO
Jewish Addiction Community Services
DAILY CRISIS SUPPORT
Are you or is someone you love struggling with a drug, alcohol or gambling problem?
Thursday night Here to Help meetings at 8 PM for newcomers and family support
Saving Lives by Solving Addiction Problems.
Call 416-638-0350 for help
858 Sheppard Avenue West
Toronto, Ontario M3H 2T5
UJA Federation
TEAM UP FOUNDATION
www.jacstoronto.org

Baycrest
Back by popular demand!
Aging, Innovation & the Mind THE SPEAKER SERIES
Nutrition and Brain Function:
The relationship between your diet and your mind
Are you really what you eat? Find out about the different ways food can affect your brain and the impact your food choices may have on the way your brain ages. This talk could change the way you shop for groceries!
>>> HOST
Avery Haines
Reporter, 'CityNews'
Citytv
Wednesday, November 24, 2010 7:00 - 8:30 p.m.
Winter Garden ~ Baycrest ~ 3560 Bathurst Street, Toronto
Free admission and parking. Seating is limited.
For information please call 416.785.2500 ext. 6218
>>> FEATURED SCIENTIST
Dr. Carol Greenwood
Senior Scientist,
Kunin-Lunenfeld Applied Research Unit (KLARU)
Register ON-LINE at
www.baycrest.org
Watch the talk live via webcast at www.baycrest.org/speakerseries

Class Acts

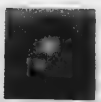
IN THE BEGINNING: Robbins Hebrew Academy Grade 2 student Zachary Wayne locates the first word in the book of Bereshit – and the entire Torah – under the watchful eye of Beth Tikvah Synagogue's Rabbi Jarrod Grover. Grade 2 students are starting Bible studies for the first time and visited Beth Tikvah's chapel as part of their introduction to the subject.

BOOK AWARDS: Three Grade 5 students at Leo Baeck Day School's Thornhill campus – from left, Emily Blum, Annalee Dimpfel and Alana Reich – had their short stories published in The Dragons Tale, an anthology of writing by elementary school students aged seven to 11, published by Young Writers of Canada. Emily's story won second prize for all of Ontario.

Ask us how to

Capture the Upside and Neutralize the Downside in a Tax Efficient, Low Cost Way

Finally a Unique, Better Solution for Today's Markets



Scotia McLeod

The Newman Group
Wealth Advisors
Expect More
416-863-7756 or 800-387-0489

Allan Newman
H.B.A., LL.B.

Greg Newman
B.Comm., LL.B.

E-mail us to receive a brief e-mail explanation (PDF) or call for a Brochure
greg_newman@scotiamcleod.com

* Registered trademark used under authorization and control of The Bank of Nova Scotia. ScotiaMcLeod is a division of Scotia Capital Inc. Member CIPF

FAMILY MOMENTS

Mazel Tov

The Canadian Jewish news

Love and gratitude to Arlette & Peter Schulman. Together for 50 years! Steve, Janice, Lisa, Chaim, Jacob, Elijah, Yissy, Aaron, Daniel, Noach, Tehilla and Yoni.

Mazel tov Ettie & Nathan Sugar on your 55th anniversary! May you have many years of good health. Love, your children and grandchildren.

Mark & Brenda Halberstadt are thrilled to announce the engagement of their son, Jarryd, to Shannon Kadlovski, daughter of Rhonda Spigelman.

Mazel tov to Yitzy Stavsky on his 10th birthday.

Congratulations Brian & Samantha on your recent engagement. We look forward to your wedding date of July 10, 2011. Love, Lloyd & Beverly Segal.

Mazel tov to Jordan Barsky, 13, and Bubbie Edith Barsky, 83, who celebrated their b'nei mitzvah Oct 4. Love, Mel, Cori, Sammy, Talia, Ben, Rachel.

SEND US YOUR PHOTOS!!

Email your digital photos to cblackman@thecjn.ca or go online to WWW.CJNEWS.COM and click the Family Moments button!

JNF
Say it with Trees
"Mazel Tov on Your Simcha"
JEWISH NATIONAL FUND
416-638-7200

What's New

By LAURA STRICKER

Weather: Ft. Lauderdale, Florida
TRAVEL INSURANCE
• Snowbirds
• Visitors to Canada
• Trip Cancellation
25% OFF LIMO VOUCHER
TO TORONTO PEARSON AIRPORT WITH PURCHASE
call 416-636-3575
e-mail alina@travel-secure.com
Travel Secure

Deadline for Nov. 25 is Nov. 15. Deadline for Dec. 2 is Nov. 22. Phone 416-391-1836. Fax 416-391-0829. E-mail cjnwhatsnew@gmail.com.

Thursday, Nov. 11

JEWISH THINKERS

Series on the thought, world-view and influence of medieval Jewish thinkers: Ibn Ezra. 8 p.m. Yeshivat Or Chaim, 159 Almore Ave. torahinmotion.org, 416-633-5770.

Saturday, Nov. 13

TORAH CLASS

Beth Tikvah Torah class, Saturdays to December. Rabbi Jarrod Grover on parshah Vayetzei. 9:45 a.m.

JEWS AND CONVERSION

"Who Will Be a Jew? Conversion and the Jewish Future." Shaarei Shomayim. 8-10:30 p.m. torahinmotion.org, 416-633-5770.

Sunday, Nov. 14

'STRAIGHT TALK'

Educational and inspirational course for women. Move through a full curriculum of Judaism. Sundays, 8 p.m. at Westmount Shul and Learning Centre. Six weeks. Info: shareen@westmountshul.com.

MOROCCAN CUISINE

Learn to cook Moroccan food with Emunah Canada and Raquel Sultan. Terrace Garden, 3705 Bathurst St. 7 p.m. $54. RSVP required. Bring non-Emunah member and save $10. 416-636-0036.

RENEWING OUR SPIRIT

Annual Conference – Renewing Our Spirit. Shaarei Shomayim. 9:15 a.m.-3 p.m. torahinmotion.org, 416-633-5770.

USED BOOK SALE

9 a.m.-1 p.m. at BAYT. Yiddish, Hebrew, halachic, religious texts, tapes, CDs, children's books. Proceeds to purchase new books, CDs for BAYT'S library. Free admission.

Monday, Nov. 15

'AN EDUCATION'

At Beth Tzedec's Book and Film Club meeting, Heather Kassel analyzes the film An Education. 12:30 p.m. To be viewed before the review. $15 at the door. 416-781-3511.

'U.S. FOREIGN POLICY'

"Providence, Power and Peril: U.S. Foreign Policy in the 21st Century," with Arne Kislenko, professor of history at Ryerson U. Temple Emanu-El. 2-4 p.m. $10. 416-449-3880.

Tuesday, Nov. 16

BOOK REVIEW

Review of The Mistress of Nothing by Kate Pullinger. 8 p.m. Adath Israel. Members $10, guests $15. Beverley, 416-499-6920.

LECTURE AT HAR ZION

Temple Har Zion presents Arne Kislenko on "An American World: The Myths and Realities of U.S. Foreign Policy." Bring your lunch anytime after 12 p.m. Presentation at 1 p.m. Members $3, guests $5. 905-889-2252.

LUNCH & LEARN

Corey Keeble, Royal Ontario Museum curator, on "An Architectural History of Toronto – 1800 to 1970." RSVP: 416-221-3433.

POMEGRANATE GUILD

"One Artist's Journey." Pamela Chasen, Montreal fabric artist, presents fibre and fabric designs relating her belief system and geneaology. Shaarei Shomayim. 8 p.m. $5.

Wednesday, Nov. 17

'BEADS AND BOOZE'

Learn to bead bracelets with Esther of Beading Buds, while sampling liqueurs and drinking speciality teas and coffees. 7:30 p.m. Borochov Cultural Centre. $25. Tickets: 416-636-5425.

Continued on page 31

THE FINEST IN RETIREMENT LIVING
- Elegantly appointed studio, one & two bedroom suites with weekly housekeeping
- Three meals daily including snacks
- Professional staff and 24 hr Emergency Response
- Brain Gym® & More – A multi-sensory Brain Stimulation Program exclusive to Diversicare
- Stylish amenity spaces including a Library, Media Room, Computer Lounge, Wellness Centre and Fitness room
- Secure Assisted Living Floor

CALL TODAY TO RESERVE YOUR SUITE!
905-738-0905
FOUR ELMS RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
1500 Steeles Ave. West, Thornhill, ON L4J 4H6 | Visit our website: www.fourelms.ca
Join us on Thursday, November 11, 2010 at 10:30am to 1:00pm for a Remembrance Day Presentation by Gerry Grossman, followed by a Delicious Four Elms Lunch
Please RSVP at 905-738-0905 as space is limited.

the Biggest. the Best. the Original.
Wm. Ashley Annual November
Warehouse SALE
save up to 90%*
SALE IS ON NOW!
DON'T MISS Our Best Sale Ever!
save up to 90%* on Brand Names
Wedgwood
Royal Doulton
Waterford • Lenox
Aynsley • Krups
Portmeirion • Atlantis
Rosenthal • Aram
Denby • Dansk
Royal Crown Derby
Villeroy & Boch
Mikasa • Noritake
CANADA'S LARGEST GIFT CENTRE
Amazing Warehouse Sale Savings
ReStocked Daily
Over 40,000 Sq. Ft. of Incredible Savings
62 RAILSIDE RD TORONTO
SALE HOURS
Wednesday Nov. 10 10 AM – 9 PM
Thursday Nov. 11 10 AM – 9 PM
Friday Nov. 12 10 AM – 9 PM
Saturday Nov. 13 10 AM – 6 PM
Sunday Nov. 14 10 AM – 6 PM
(Closed Monday & Tuesday)
WILLIAM ASHLEY
62 Railside Rd, Toronto • 416-515-SALE
www.WilliamAshley.com/WarehouseSale
*Save up to 90% off the Mfr. Sugg. Price or Comp. Reg. Value. We reserve the right to limit quantities. No strollers or car seats permitted. Personal shopping only. Cash, Debit, Visa, Mastercard & Amex. All sales are final. No cheques or credit notes. Not all items illustrated are available. E. & O.E.

What's New

Continued from page 30

SPIRITS WITH SINAI

Next Generation Group presents Spirits with Sinai. Spend an evening at the Duke of Kent with Rabbi Eleanor Steinman. Meet young professionals for a discussion on strengthening our spirits. 7-9 p.m. 2315 Yonge St. Register: education@templesinai.net.

'POWER STRUGGLES'

"Power Struggles: Who Is in Charge Here Anyway?" Adults only. 7 p.m. Danilack Middle School, 252 Finch Ave. W. $10 advance, $15 at door. Small Chanukah gift boutique before and after presentation. 416-993-9900 or 416-450-7531.

Other News

FOLK DANCING

Kehillat Shaarei Torah Sisterhood presents an evening of women's international folk dancing. Nov. 18, 7:30 p.m. Proceeds to Israel Guide Dog Center for the Blind. $10 at the door. 416-229-2600 ext. 3.

AVIVA CHERNICK

Beth Sholom Synagogue music series presents Aviva Chernick in concert. Nov. 18, 8 p.m. $18, dessert reception follows. 416-783-6103.

RABBI SPERBER SPEAKS

Rabbi Daniel Sperber, Talmud professor at Bar Ilan University, speaks at TPM Central. Morning of Nov. 20. www.torontopartnership-minyan.com

DIABETES MEETING

Jewish Diabetes chapter meeting. "Superfoods for Diabetes Management," with Fran Berkoff. Shaarei Shomayim. Nov. 18, 8 p.m. $1. 416-363-0177, ext. 7403.

WELLNESS PROGRAM

Frumba, women's cardio Dance-Fit program at Shaarei Shomayim. 10 classes. Starts Nov. 14, 10 a.m. Shaarei members $80, guests $90. $10 per class.

'ADVANCE CARE PLANNING'

Association of Jewish Seniors meeting. Nov. 18, 10 a.m. Shaarei Shomayim. Judith Wahl discusses "Advance Care Planning." Free, guests $2. Tammy: 416-635-2860 ext. 458.

MONEY MANAGEMENT

"Daily Money Management for Family Caregivers." Nov. 18, 6-8 p.m. Loftus Hall, Baycrest. RSVP: 416-635-2900, ext. 498.

'ANCIENT WISDOM'

"Ancient Wisdom for Modern Living," with Esther Friedman. Nov. 15 and 22. 7:30 p.m. $10 per lecture. Kehillat Shaarei Torah. 416-229-2600 ext. 3.

GIFT SHOW

Shaar Shalom Religious School's second annual Chanukah Boutique Holiday Gift Show. Nov. 21, 9:30 a.m.-2 p.m. Shaar Shalom Synagogue. Free with Second Harvest donation. Esther, 905-889-4975.

NEW YORK TRIP

Rabbi Danny Bahar with Project Inspire is running a New York trip with shopping, kosher restaurants for high school girls. Dec. 2-6. $150 US. 905-882-6755.

NCSY CONCERT

30th annual NCSY concert and gala dinner. Eli Gerstner and Yeshiva Boys Choir perform. Dec. 12, 7:30 p.m. Toronto Centre for the Arts. ncsyconcert.com, 905-761-6279, ext. 230, for tickets.

100TH ANNIVERSARY

Talmud Torah School in Edmonton celebrates its 100th anniversary in May 2012. Visit http://tt100.ca for updates about celebrations, from May 18-20, 2012. 780-481-3377.

HEALING PROGRAM

Jewish Healing Service. Nov. 28, 3-4 p.m. Temple Har Zion. 416-638-7800, ext. 6287. Free.

THE JEWISH WORLD

Israel and the Jewish World on CTS Channel 9. Nov. 14, 21, 28 and Dec. 5. 9-11 p.m.

DINNER & DRAW

Temple Sinai's 45th event for youth, raising money for educational trips to Israel and Jewish camp experiences. Nov. 18. $5,000 grand prize, auctions, martini bar and more. Dinner and draw ticket: $180. Additional dinner ticket $100. Cocktails 6:30 p.m. 416-487-3281.

CHALLAH BAKING

Learn to bake challah. Nov. 18. $15. Register: Westmount Shul. 10 Disera Dr., Unit 250. shareen@westmountshul.com.

FOR SENIORS

Active Seniors Miles Nadal JCC: Nov. 18, 1:30 p.m. "Great Jewish Canadian Personalities: J. B. Salzberg," with Adam Fuesrstenberg.

Free computer workshop. Nov. 14, 2:15 p.m. Bring questions. Register: 416-924-6211 ext. 155.

Connecting the generations. Meet a student over catered lunch. Enjoy Jewish heritage tour at the ROM. 416-924-621, ext. 155.

Adath Israel Congregation. Wednesday social afternoons. Bridge, mah-jong, Rummikub, refreshments. $2. Pearl, 416-635-6317, or Marcia, 416-932-1229.

Earl Bales Seniors Club in the Park, 416-395-7881. Casino Rama Nov. 17, departs 10 a.m. Lunch and Laughter: latkes, etc. Nov. 30, 12 p.m. Line dancing Thursdays, 10-11:30 a.m. Social bridge Thursdays, 12:30-3 p.m. Canasta Tuesdays and Thursdays, 12-3 p.m. Do you needlepoint, crochet, knit, etc.? Social circle. Tuesdays, 10-11:30 a.m.

For info about seniors woodworking, call 416-630-6487.

Bernard Betel Centre, 1003 Steeles Ave. W., 416-225-2112.

"Cultural History: The 1500s, Christmas, Chinese New Year, Superman and Chess – The Divine Obsession," with Sid Soban. Nov. 16, 10-11:30 a.m. $3 members, $6 guests.

"Uniquely You – Part 2." Nov. 18, 1:30-2:30 p.m. Free.

Yiddish Is Alive and Well is a celebration of Yiddish language, culture and music. Vendors. Nov. 17, 11 a.m.-3 p.m. Free admission.

PROSSERMAN JCC

Sherman Campus, 4588 Bathurst St. 416-638-1881, www.prossermanjcc.com.

20 years ago, Half The Kingdom challenged us to rethink the role of women in Judaism. Now we ask, "What's next?" Nov. 30, 7:15 p.m. Bloor Cinema. Optional screening of movie at 6 p.m.

Nov. 21, 2-4:30 p.m. Mind, Body and Soul seminar series. "Raising and Sustaining Healthy Families." Free. Natalie, ext. 4036.

Try line dancing (all styles) Nov. 12, 10:30-11:30 a.m. Members $2.50, guests $4.50 at the door.

Movie Mondays with Larry Anklewicz. Nov. 15, Heartbreak Kid. 1:30 p.m. $5.

Nov. 16, viewing of Defiance. 7:30 p.m. $8.

Nov. 16: Treasures in Jewish Literature. Memory by Philippe Grimbert, reviewed by Cynthia Good. Members $16, guests $18 at the door. 1:30-3 p.m.

Nov. 17, 1-2:30 p.m. Room 107. Educational entertainment session with Jordan Klapman, sharing humorous information about composer's lives and featuring Broadway songs. Free. Ext. 4235

Jokers Club. Nov. 17, 7:30-9 p.m. Members $1, guests $2 at the door.

Jewish singles group Plenty o' Gefiltefish. Visit the Prosserman website or meetup.com/plenty-o-gefiltefish.

Family Programs: Shabbat party, preschool dance, and Sports with Jay are just a few of the programs for children. New classes coming. Monique, ext. 4012.

"The December Dilemma: Dealing with Christmas and Chanukah." How do you handle social events and decisions about which holidays to celebrate? Discuss in a like-minded group. Dec. 5, 10:30 a.m.-12 p.m. Miles Nadal.

"Who Is a Jew?" with Rabbi Michael Klein-Katz. Dec. 6, 8-9:30 p.m. Prosserman JCC, room 124.

"The Female Ruse: Stories of Women's Deception in Genesis." With Rabbi Elyse Goldstein and Rachel Adelman. Dec. 13, 7:30-9:30 p.m. $10 at the door. Prosserman JCC, room 105.

MILES NADAL JCC

750 Spadina Ave., 416-924-6211, www. mnjcc.org.

Remembrance Day: Nov. 11. Ceremony 10:45 a.m. Moment of silence 11 a.m. Jewish war veterans lead commemoration of Canada's fallen soldiers. Meet at Spadina Avenue MNJCC entrance. Ext. 154.

Lecture – "World Music for the Armchair Traveller." Nov. 11, 7-8:30 p.m. Drop in $18. Ext. 0.

Harold Green Jewish Theatre presents Lenin's Embalmers. To Nov. 21, 2 and 8 p.m. Al Green Theatre. $49-$76. www.stlc.com or 416-366-7723 for tickets.

Toronto Jewish Film Society. 2011 subscription season on sale now. Eight film events from January to December at Al Green Theatre. Speakers introduce and discuss each film. Joelle: ext. 139, joellem@mnjcc.org to register.

Renee Barda: Life Begins Again! With Dorothy Krizmanic, Gideon Wilk and John Lettieri. Dec. 11, 7:30 p.m. Al Green Theatre. $22, $18 group rate (10 or more). Ext. 0, www.algreentheatre.ca.

Gesher Shabbat. Nov. 12, 7 p.m. Family dinner with dancing, trivia and games, plus talk by Shaul Zobary from Camp Gesher about the importance of Jewish overnight camp. RSVP: 416-633-2511.

Nov. 14, 11 a.m. Explore the history and synagogue architecture of Syria's Dura Europos and Amsterdam's Esnoga. $9. Ext. 154.

"New World, New Rules: The Rabbis of Early America," with Rabbi Torczyner. Mondays, Nov. 15-29. 6-7 p.m. Ext. 154.

Eye Weekly film critic Adam Nayman examines the style and substance of recent art-house exports. Mondays starting Nov. 15. 7-9 p.m. $12 per lecture. Ext. 606.

"Feeding Your Finicky Eater," with chef Elise Burton. Nov. 17, 7-9 p.m. Register: ext. 0.

Dec. 5, 12-2 p.m. Family Chanukah celebration. Latkes, music, games. Free. Ext. 277.

What's New is now online, for subscribers only. You can find it at cjnews.com

SINGLES EVENTS CAN BE FOUND ON PAGE 35

Germ Guardian
Cool or Warm Mist
Silent Ultrasonic
Room Humidifier

- Up to 48 Hour Run Time
- Kills Mold & Bacteria
- No White Dust
- Easy to Use, Fill and Carry

Lowest Price In Ontario

99.99

Compare at 149.99

Full Money-Back Refund Policy!

Pay Cash 2% OFF Your Total Purchase

Cayne's

The SUPER HOUSEWARE Store

Shop Online at www.caynehousewares.com

Always 1st Quality!

112 DONCASTER, Thornhill, Ont. One Traffic Light North of Steeles Ave. East of Yonge St. 905-764-1189

Mon-Fri 9-9 Sat+Sun 10-6

Bridal Registry

OBITUARIES
and Related Notices

Steeles Memorial Chapel

Kaushansky, Rivka	Oct. 27/10	Private
Matskin, Lev	Oct. 22/10	100 Antibes Dr
Garfinkel, William A	Oct. 22/10	Private
Liner, Genia	Oct. 23/10	Private
Barna, Roza	Oct. 23/10	Private
Lindsay, Solly	Oct. 2210	Private
Falk, Gabriel	Oct. 23/10	65 Spring Garden Ave
Beck, David	Oct. 25/10	155 Marlee Ave
Pivovarov, Fruma	Oct. 26/10	Private
Naft, Sadie	Oct. 2510	3270 Bathurst St
Yelenbaugen, Beylya	Oct. 2610	Private
Shievitz, Jack	Oct. 26/10	56 Bay Hill Dr
Schwartz, Irene	Oct. 26/10	Private
Ubogi, Mauricio	Oct. 27/10	Private
Maister, Esther	Oct. 28/10	65 Skymark Dr
Levin, Eileen	Oct. 28/10	88 Daniel Reaman Cr
Reichner, Oscar	Oct. 27/10	10 Elderberry Crt
Dutch, Benjamin	Oct. 28/10	Private

BENJAMIN'S PARK MEMORIAL CHAPEL

Louis Wingold	Oct 16/10	61 Yorkville Ave
Helen Rubenstein	Oct 17/10	65 Spring Garden Ave
Helen Kamper	Oct 18/10	3560 Bathurst St
Lynn Field	Oct 18/10	6 Doral Gate
Lillian Nish	Oct 18/10	3560 Bathurst St
Nell Warren	Oct 19/10	103 Old Forest Hill Rd
Lt. Col. Irwin B. Weisba	Oct 19/10	1555 Finch Avenue E
Lucy Goldstein	Oct 19/10	138 Baskin Drive
Vicki Campbell	Oct 21/10	95 Donwoods Drive
Della Swadron	Oct 22/10	65 Spring Garden Ave
Larry Levenstein	Oct 22/10	76 Prue Avenue
Wilfred Weisbrod	Oct 21/10	15 McMurrich St
Shirley Levinsky	Oct 23/10	3560 Bathurst St
David Rozen	Oct 23/10	41 Thomson Legge Cr

The family of the late
HARTLEY JACOBS ז"ל
Would like to express our heartfelt gratitude and appreciation to all our friends and family for the many acts of kindness and support, and to the many donations given in Hartley's memory. Your thoughtfulness has been a great source of comfort during our loss.

Ruth Jacobs, Michael, Pamela, Warren and families

Kahn, Nathan ז"ל - loving husband of the late Clara Kahn, brother of the late Carolla Heursman , passed peacefully on shabbath October 30th, 2010 at Sunnybrook hospital at age 97. Nathan will be sadly missed by his loving daughter Rozanne Kahnlsen, his grandchildren David, Jeremy, Jamie and his great-grandchildren Mackenzie and Madeline, and will also be greatly missed By Darley Louis, his full time caregiver of 16 years. Would like to thank all the doctors and staff at Sunnybrook on the 4th floor for their kindness and compassionate care. Donations to Congregation Habonim Synagogue - Children Hebrew Schooling Fund. 416-638-0693 would be greatly appreciated.

NOTICE OF PASSING בס"ד

PLACHTA, NATHAN - On Tuesday, November 2, 2010 at Baycrest Hospital. Nathan Plachta, beloved husband of Helen Plachta. Loving father and father-in-law of Frances Lewis, Mel Plachta, and Paula and Dave Linklater. Devoted grandfather of Jimmie, Kenny, Amanda, and Tasha. Great-grandfather of Chayan, Elijah, Jacob, and Adam. At Dawes Rd. Cemetery on Thursday, November 4, 2010 at 11:30 a.m. Interment: Zion Benevolent Section. Memorial donations may be made to the Association for Soldiers of Israel 416-783-3053 or to the United Jewish Appeal 416-631-5685.

SHIVA MEALS • BRIT MILAH
• HOME • OFFICE
SHORT NOTICE & SAME DAY SERVICE
• DELIVERY AVAILABLE
416-789-7651
3457 BATHURST ST.
www.milknhoney.ca
milk 'n honey
THE DAIRY RESTAURANT

To place an unveiling notice, please call at least 15 DAYS prior to the date of the unveiling.

On Campus
Holocaust Education Week

Hillel launches exhibit

By JORDAN PRESS
Special to The CJN

KINGSTON — Every November for the past four years, students with Hillel at Queen's University have turned one of the busiest campus buildings into a hub of Holocaust education.

Again this year, Hillel set up a walk-through Holocaust exhibit in the John Deutsch University Centre, a central hub of campus life for students, faculty, staff and members of the wider Kingston community.

By all accounts, the exhibit has been a success every year.

This year, the students charged with organizing Holocaust Education Week, which runs to Nov. 12, decided to redo the exhibit. Unlike previous exhibits, this year's version doesn't require viewers to have any background knowledge about the Holocaust.

Hillel partnered with another student group for a section of the exhibit that focused on current genocides, such as the one in the Darfur region of Sudan.

"It is historical, and it is a commemoration of what happened, but it is [also] a call to action today," Hillel organizer and third-year student Josh Litwin told The CJN prior to the start of Holocaust Education Week.

"It's a big step forward and [the exhibit] will stand for the next five years."

After looking at exhibits from previous years, Hillel organizers decided to create one that guides visitors through the events and factors leading up to the Holocaust. The exhibit then explains the creation of Jewish ghettos, the rise of the death camps and finally the liberation and post-Nazi Europe.

The exhibit also features videos of Holocaust survivors telling their stories.

Litwin said he and co-organizers Naomi Rosenfeld and Brenna Singer hope the exhibit's historical narrative will serve Jewish and non-Jewish students alike.

"We started at the base, and we tried to make it as ground-up an explanation as we can," said Litwin, 19. "It's an educational piece designed to educate people with no background knowledge [of the Holocaust]."

The exhibit not only focuses on Jewish victims of the Holocaust. Litwin said other groups that were persecuted by the Nazis, such as Jehovah's Witnesses, are also highlighted. Organizers also created a section on Righteous Gentiles, Litwin said, referring to non-Jews who helped Jews or stood up against the Nazis.

Another part of the exhibit deals with the problem of Holocaust denial, Litwin added.

While Litwin, Singer and Rosenfeld are organizing the event, every Hillel member is taking a turn staffing the exhibit to talk with visitors.

Litwin said Hillel's goal for the week is to attract a diverse group of visitors, and that everyone leaves having connected to and learned about the Holocaust.

Along with the exhibit, Queen's Hillel hosted a movie night and brought in two speakers. Scott Miller, director of curatorial affairs at the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington, D.C., gave a talk about his research into the fate of the St. Louis, a ship that sailed from Germany to Cuba in 1939 with Jews fleeing the Third Reich. Auschwitz survivor Nate Leipciger also spoke at the university.

Litwin said the speakers nights are usually well attended. Many attendees come away with a better personal connection to the Holocaust, he said.

RYERSON REMEMBERS: On Nov. 2, as part of Holocaust Education Week, students from Hillel at Ryerson – including first-year Ryerson University student Juliana Kaiser – read names of victims who perished during the Holocaust.

On Campus

Tensions rise ahead of Galloway's McMaster visit

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Controversial former British MP George Galloway will be speaking later this month at McMaster University, where his visit is sparking disagreement among campus groups.

Galloway, who was expelled from the Labour party in 2003 because he criticized the invasion of Iraq, is coming to the university Nov. 21 as part of his 10-city "Free Afghanistan, Free Palestine, Free Speech" tour of Canada, Nov. 16 to 27.

The McMaster visit is being organized by the campus groups Solidarity for Palestinian Human Rights (SPHR), Students Resisting War and Occupation, Independent Jewish Voices and Students for Social Justice, as well as the Hamilton Coalition to Stop the War.

None of the student groups responded to The CJN's requests for comment.

But SPHR co-president Omar Saif told the Hamilton Spectator that the "idea is not to just bring a controversial speaker," but to foster dialogue. He said Galloway would be discussing Canada's role in the war in Afghanistan.

Jackie Brown, president of the McMaster chapter of Israel on Campus, says she has no issue with Galloway coming to speak at the university. She is concerned, however, that students don't know the full story about him.

"Obviously he has a right to his own opinion and student groups are welcome to bring him [to McMaster]," Brown said. "We're not trying to limit anyone's free speech. I just think it's really important that students are aware that he openly fundraises for Hamas, a known terrorist organization. I really don't think students are being made aware of that fact."

Galloway was banned from entering Canada last year by the office of federal Immigration Minister Jason Kenney because of his support for Hamas, but a federal court judge accepted Galloway's contention that federal authorities were motivated by political considerations in barring him. He spoke in Toronto last month.

Brown disagreed with Brendan Stone, co-chair of the Hamilton Coalition to Stop the War, who told the Spectator that "Galloway does speak for Canadians."

"I don't believe that Canadians support terrorism," Brown said. "It's against Canadian law to fundraise for a terrorist organization, so I do not believe he speaks for Canadians."

Brown said McMaster Jewish groups don't plan to protest the talk, so as not to give it any more publicity.

It's scheduled to be held in a 600-seat lecture hall, the school's largest.

Galloway will also be speaking Nov. 18 at St. Mary's University in Halifax and Nov. 25 at the University of Alberta.

JBN launches in Winnipeg

By RHONDA SPIVAK
Prairies Correspondent

WINNIPEG — About 30 Jewish students enrolled both in the University of Winnipeg and the University of Manitoba came out to the Fairmont Hotel for the inaugural event of the Winnipeg Chapter of the Jewish Business Network, [JBN] on October 20.

To read story, please go to cjnews.com

THE COLE FAMILY
&
CLUB DAYAN NA'AMAT CANADA
invite you to

THE SHARON COLE MEMORIAL LECTURE
Guest Speaker Kathy Kacer

Award-winning children's author, Kathy Kacer, has now expanded to the realm of adult nonfiction. Herself a child of Holocaust survivors, Kathy travels around the world speaking to young people about the importance of understanding the Holocaust.

The true story of four paintings and one family's enduring spirit. Europe, on the eve of the Second World War, and a Jewish family feels the Nazi danger closing in. Led by their indomitable mother, Marie, the Reesers make a daring escape from under the watchful eyes of the Gestapo, fleeing their comfortable home in Czechoslovakia to safety and a new life in Canada.

Monday, November 22, 2010 at 8:00 pm
Temple Sinai – 210 Wilson Avenue

PUBLIC INVITED – FREE ADMISSION
REFRESHMENTS WILL BE SERVED

For further information; call 416-636-5425

You are cordially invited to attend the OU/NCSY Gala Dinner Reception & Concert

In support of

THE CAMPAIGN FOR YES!
Youth Education Scholarships at NCSY

and
Honouring

No Frills Ontario Represented by Al Tornatore & John Ciarallo John's No Frills

Recipients of the OU/NCSY National Business Leadership Award

which will be presented at the Toronto Centre for the Arts
on Sunday December 12, 2010
Gala Dinner Reception 5:00 p.m.
Followed by the Concert 7:30 p.m.

featuring
Eli Gerstner and the YESHIVA BOYS CHOIR

NCSY ORTHODOX UNION

Funds raised by this event will go in part to scholarships for Jewish teenagers who cannot afford to participate in Jewish educational programs.

For Dinner Ticket information please call 905.761.0279 ext. 242
For Concert Ticket information please call 905.761.0279 ext. 240

Coast to Coast

Left-wing writers offer nuanced views of Israel

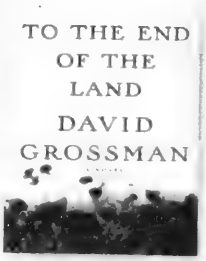
Grossman and Jacobson offer articulate, humane voices about Israel, in all its complexity

Two famous Jewish authors, one Israeli, one British, were recently featured in the Canadian media.

According to Reports
By PAUL MICHAELS

In the Oct. 3, Toronto Star, Leslie Scrivener profiled Israeli novelist David Grossman, whose latest work, To the End of the Land, has been receiving rave reviews internationally. Grossman was interviewed while in Toronto for last month's Jewish Book Fair.

Scrivener's report, though relatively brief, managed to capture Grossman in his complexity, including his anguish and yet his hope. Grossman's experience is unfortunately typical of the lives of many Israeli families that have endured painful loss.



While Grossman was writing his novel on the anxiety of a mother whose son is serving in the Israeli army, he learned that his own son, Uri, was tragically killed in the final hours of the 2006 Lebanon War. As devastating as that loss was, Grossman was able to find solace in his family and in completing his book.

In the report, Scrivener wrote: "Grossman insists that he not be treated differently, more delicately, since Uri's death. 'When people argue with me, I demand that they argue with my opinions, not my bereavement.'"

Scrivener also referred to Grossman's peace activism, for which he is well known and admired. Yet she ended her profile by citing Grossman's realism about Israel's precarious security situation.

"Grossman has served in the army, in intelligence, but he does not see that as being at odds with his advocacy for peace. 'I am a very realistic person. I read the Arab papers. I see the hatred toward Israel. I hear [President Mahmoud] Ahmadinejad of Iran promising to eradicate Israel…

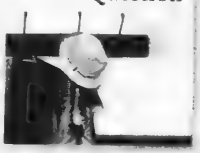
"We need a very strong army to defend ourselves. Yet we need to use this army mainly as a vehicle to achieve peace. To improve our life, to lead a life that is not militarized and is not an end in itself.'"

On the same day, in the National Post, Mireille Silcoff wrote about her interview with British novelist Howard Jacobson, the first Jewish male to win the prestigious Man Booker Prize for fiction. Jacobson won for The Finkler Question, which focuses on one of the author's chief concerns: the rising tide of radical Jewish anti-Zionism in the United Kingdom.

Silcoff asked him what brought him to conceive the "comic" novel's central character, Sam Finkler. Jacobson replied: "I'm writing about true feeling and false feeling. I see a false feeling in the Jews I see around here who make a demonstration of their Jewish shame about the Middle East. I can't pretend I have any patience for it in The Finkler Question. I was writing this novel in 2008, as Operation Cast Lead was happening, and the whole horrible Gaza thing was happening, and some ugly ideas were coming up in the press. I was doing a lot of journalism at the Independent about it, and I was being castigated by some Jews."

In fact, one of Jacobson's columns at the time for the Independent (part of what he calls the "virulent" anti-Israel press in Britain) was a brilliant critique of the feverishly hateful attacks on the Jewish state that are rampant in the United Kingdom under the guise of valid criticism.

As a liberal, he attacked Caryl Churchill's play Seven Jewish Children, calling it a "hate-fuelled little chamber-piece" for portraying Israelis as callous, bloodthirsty murderers of Gaza's children. The play was earnestly promoted in Britain and abroad by radical Jewish anti-Zionists.



Jacobson ripped into those who dare draw any comparisons between what Jews suffered in the Holocaust and what Palestinians endure. He specifically singled out those who hideously liken Gaza to the Warsaw Ghetto. And we've just seen a rare expression of this comparison here in the case of Adbusters magazine, exposed last week in the pages of the National Post.

Grossman and Jacobson offer articulate, humane voices about Israel, in all its complexity. In a world where writers are largely applauded for attacking Israel – regardless of context or truth – we are richer for the contributions of these two authors.

Paul Michaels is communications director for the Canada-Israel Committee.

Ottawa Protocol to make recommendations

Continued from page 1

This time, delegates were scheduled to take part in a mix of activities, including addresses by guest speakers, plenary sessions, expert discussion panels and work groups.

A final document, the Ottawa Protocol, was scheduled to be released at the completion of this year's conference. The document was not available by The CJN's deadline.

"The recommendations made by participants during the conference will be made available broadly and be used as the basis for further action to help put an end to the world's oldest and most enduring form of discrimination," according to conference literature handed out before the event last week.

Nobel laureate, renowned writer, scholar, thinker, lecturer Elie Wiesel was the keynote speaker Sunday night.

Wiesel delivered an impassioned address in which he told his rapt audience that "since 1945, I have not been as afraid as I am now."

In tones that alternated between sorrowful and resigned, single-minded and insistent, he expounded upon the dangers inherent in the persistence of anti-Semitism, which he described as a disease. Like cancer, Wiesel said, it spreads from cell to cell, from person to person, from group to group and from culture to culture.

He singled out the government in Iran as the key disseminator of anti-Semitism today, and Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad as the "No. 1 Holocaust denier in the world."

That Ahmadinejad seeks a nuclear weapon possibly to use against the State of Israel fills Wiesel with dread.

"Why is he [Ahmadinejad] received with honours wherever he visits? How come this man is not excluded from society?" Wiesel asked the audience.

Then, speaking directly to the scores of parliamentarians in the room, he urged them to act in their capacities as legislators.

Wiesel pleaded with them to ensure that Ahmadinejad "be arrested and charged with incitement for crimes against humanity… adopt laws in their respective parliaments declaring anti-Semitism a hate crime punishable by imprisonment, as well as laws declaring suicide bombing to be a crime against humanity.

"We need you to tell us by your actions and your behaviour that my fear is unfounded and that our message [that of the survivor witnesses] has not gone unheeded."

The Ottawa Conference on Combating Antisemitism, began on Sunday with an opening reception sponsored by Minster of Citizenship, Immigration and Multiculturalism Canada Jason Kenney at the Canadian Aviation and Space Museum. Liberal party leader Michael Ignatieff was also scheduled to make remarks on Monday afternoon.

With files from Mordechai Ben Dat and JTA

Harper addresses meet

Continued from page 1

It must also be an understanding and an undertaking – an understanding that the same threats exist today and an undertaking of a solemn responsibility to fight those threats."

Seemingly directing his remarks at Holocaust deniers, and in particular at Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, who was obliquely referred to as among those who threaten to "wipe Israel off the map," the prime minister said: "While evil of this magnitude may be unfathomable, it is nonetheless a fact. It is a fact of history… Let us not forget that even now, there are those who would choose evil, and would launch another Holocaust if left unchecked."

Harper congratulated the work of ICCA as well as that of the Canadian Parliamentary Coalition to Combat Antisemitism, whose chair and vice-chair, respectively, are Conservative MP Scott Reid and Liberal MP Mario Silva.

He unambiguously asserted that "we must be relentless in exposing the new anti-Semitism [that targets the Jewish people by targeting the Jewish homeland]… not just because it is the right thing to do, but because history shows us and the ideology of the anti-Israel mob tells us all too well, if we listen to it, that those who threaten the existence of the Jewish people are, in the longer term, a threat to us all."

Singles Events is an advertising feature of The Canadian Jewish News

For rates or to place an ad, please call 416-737-1836

Deadline:
Wednesday, 4 p.m., 8 days preceding issue date.

OneOnOne בית

MATCHMAKING WITH TOVA

Is the personal attention you deserve.

Let me find the right partner for you. My clients are serious and committed. Each prospective applicant is personally interviewed and screened by me. Don't waste time. Call Tova @ 647-884-6628.

Returning to Israel

For all the reasons in the world

Prime Minister's Office
Ministry of Immigrant Absorption
Ministry of Industry, Trade & Labor

For details about the program, visit our website:
www.klita.gov.il

It's Time to Return Home

The Government of Israel has formulated unprecedented Benefits and Assistance especially for Israelis who have lived abroad for more than 5 years and want to return home.

Montreal Y's Shabbat opening under fire

By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — The YM-YWHA's decision to fully open on Saturdays will alienate more than half of the Montreal Jewish community and may open the door to more non-Jews joining the Y, says one of the rabbis involved last year in trying to reach a compromise to limit the facility's Shabbat operations.

On Nov. 1, the Y's board of directors and board of trustees voted to fully open its main branch, the Ben Weider Jewish Community Centre in Snowdon, on Saturdays. The decision followed on the results of a non-binding poll taken among members, which found 55.5 per cent in favour of the move.

The Y had already been open from 7:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Saturdays since October 2009, but its Cardio Centre, kosher restaurant and front desk remained closed. The new policy will see the Cardio Centre, with its electrically activated exercise machines, open as well. It had been kept closed as part of the compromise that was reached with a group of local rabbis.

Rabbi Chaim Steinmetz, of Congregation Tifereth Beth David Jerusalem, said this decision will "disturb" observant Jews across the spectrum, from modern Orthodox to chassidim, and the great majority of Sephardim, who are deeply traditional.

The Y says it has a duty to serve all of Montreal's diverse Jews, and is especially concerned with reaching the unaffiliated.

"Advocates of opening the Y on Shabbat argue it will attract more Jews," Rabbi Steinmetz said. "By opening on Shabbat, the Y, as a health club, becomes much more attractive to non-Jews. Unquestionably, the Y will see a rise in the percentage of non-Jewish members… and the Jewish community will have lost its opportunity to build a true Jewish community centre."

Protect Your Table
Made-To-Measure Table Pad
Prevents scratches, burns & spills
Factory Direct Pricing
Free in-home service
Dover Pad
UNBEATABLE QUALITY SINCE 1950
Now available in Calgary MagnaLoc
Canada Wide: 1-800 354-4445
www.doverpad.ca

The Y management points out that the overwhelming majority of JCCs in North America are open on Shabbat, either fully or to some extent.

But the American-born Rabbi Steinmetz contends that Montreal, with its strong adherence to tradition, is "dramatically different" from other Jewish communities in Canada and the United States.

Majority of those polled favoured opening Ben Weider JCC.

"We need a Y that represents the mainstream of the Montreal Jewish community," he said.

"Not everyone is observant, but it is easily understood if you call something 'Jewish' that you cannot simply ignore one of the Ten Commandments," he said.

The heads of the (Orthodox) Rabbinical Council of Montreal, the interdenominational Montreal Board of Rabbis and the Jewish Community Council (Vaad Ha'ir) issued a joint public statement urging Y members to vote for closing on Shabbat.

From Oct. 20 to 26, the Y held a poll that allowed adult members to vote for full closure of the Y on Saturday – a return to the schedule that existed before Oct. 31, 2009 – or full operation. The only exception is that the front desk and the restaurant will not be open to avoid the exchange of money, which is proscribed on Shabbat.

The results, which were made public the day after the boards' decision, were 55.5 per cent, or 945 votes, for opening, and 44 per cent, or 750 votes, for closing. With 4,200 eligible voters, the turnout was slightly more than 40 per cent.

The new policy will be implemented "as soon as reasonably possible," said Y executive director Michael Crelinsten. Time is needed for "logistical" reasons, but full operation will be in effect "well before the end of the year."

In August 2009, the Y management, to the surprise of many, announced that the Y would be opening its fitness facilities on Saturdays, originally starting at 1 p.m.

After an outcry from not only the rabbinate, but a significant number of both observant and non-observant Jews, the Y agreed to negotiate with a small group of rabbis from major mainstream congregations, Rabbi Steinmetz among them.

The main compromise that came from those talks was that the Y would keep its popular Cardio Centre, with its electrically activated training machines, closed on Saturdays, and the concession to the Y was that it would open from early morning.

Crelinsten conceded that the deal pleased nobody and angered many. Over the past year, an average of 200 to 250 people have been coming to the Y on Saturdays, far lower than the number on Sunday. The Y's management felt the status quo could not continue and decided to put a "clear and simple" question to the membership.

The hope is that the reopening of the Cardio Centre will bring more people in on Saturdays. The Y is also considering holding fitness classes that day.

While the poll didn't yield a resounding majority, Crelinsten believes that "a 10-point spread is significant on an issue where people have such deeply held feelings."

Join us for a musical Shabbat morning featuring our Hazzan-in-Residence
HAZZAN ALBERTO MIZRAHI

Cantor of Anshe Emet Synagogue in Chicago
Saturday, November 27, 2010
•Greek-born tenor, Alberto Mizrahi has thrilled audiences worldwide in recitals, symphony concerts and opera.
•Affectionately known as the "Jewish Pavarotti"
•One of the world's leading cantors
•Well known for his brilliant tenor voice
Kiddush following services
Beth Sholom Synagogue, 1445 Eglinton Ave. W. Toronto. ON. (across from the Eglinton Ave. W. subway)

RUBY FOO'S HÔTEL
Experience a Montreal tradition

A dreidel, a menorah, some Chanukah gelt... Chanukah gifts you gave your children

Now that they're all grown up, give them something that will connect them to the community throughout the year

Give them their own subscription to The Canadian Jewish News

From now through the holiday The CJN is accepting gift subscriptions by $10

To order, call

1-866-849-0864

The Canadian Jewish news

P.O. BOX 819 STN MAIN,
MARKHAM, ON, L3P 8A2
P: 1-866-849-0864,
F: 905-946-1679
www.cjnews.com

New addresses only
$27.80* for 1 YR in PRINT
Quote Code: N10CHK
Canadian Delivery, New Address Only
*Expires Dec. 31st 2010

Doc key: S10PHCJN, S10WMCJN

CJN SUBSCRIPTION RATES

$68.00*	2 YR. CANADA	❑
$37.80*	1 YR. CANADA	❑
$20.95*	1 YR. digital edition (eCJN)	❑

*H.S.T INCLUDED H.S.T. #R105201149

$135.00 CND 1 YR. U.S.A. / FOREIGN ❑

Name _____

Address _____

City _____

Province _____ Postal Code _____

Telephone _____

Email _____

❑ I am purchasing this subscription as a gift

Subscriber No. _____

PLEASE RETURN WITH YOUR PAYMENT.

AMOUNT ENCLOSED $ _____

CHEQUE ENCLOSED ❑

❑ ❑ ❑

NUMBER _____

EXPIRY DATE _____

Coast to Coast

'Prank' threatens shul's future

By JANICE ARNOLD
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — A synagogue in Laval is fighting for its life after an act of vandalism left it on the brink of bankruptcy.

The Young Israel Synagogue of Chomedey is facing a possible bill of $100,000 or more for the cleanup of heating oil on its property.

On the night of Oct. 6, someone put the synagogue's garden hose into the external pipe leading to the oil tank and forced 2,300 litres of fuel out onto the back of the building.

The congregation's insurer says it will pay a maximum of $25,000 toward the costs, said shul president Frank Cwilich. "At this point, the cost is at least $65,000 above that, and could go to $100,000 or two or three times that if they find the oil has leaked underneath the building.

"This is a devastating blow. Our future is in jeopardy," he said.

Cwilich is terming the incident a "prank" at this point because there is no evidence of an anti-Semitic motive.

The synagogue at 1025 Elizabeth Blvd., just north of the main thoroughfare, Notre-Dame Boulevard, is next to a strip mall, where youths often congregate, he said.

Excavation of the property began in late October, and it may be some time before the extent of the contamination is known.

"We are appealing for help from anyone, be it financial, legal or moral," he said. "We really do not know how we are going to handle the bills, and are trying everything we can."

The congregation has no major benefactors or endowments.

The synagogue, which has been at its present site for 50 years, has been struggling for years. It has about 150 members families, a far cry from its peak in the 1960s and early '70s, when it had nearly 900 members and was the centre of the suburb's Jewish life.

The Young Israel of Chomedey has suffered tens of thousands of dollars of damage.

Chomedey's once-thriving Jewish community was in steep decline by the early '80s, with people moving to homes on the Island of Montreal or leaving the province.

Cwilich is hoping some of the past members or their descendants will come to the synagogue's rescue.

The congregation has also contacted the three levels of government to see if it is eligible for any compensation, and will also turn to Federation CJA.

A community-wide meeting is planned for Nov. 11 to discuss the situation.

There has been other trouble since the vandalism. On the night of Oct. 31, a visibly Orthodox member of the congregation was ridiculed and assaulted by youths hanging around the mall when he was on his way to the synagogue, Cwilich said. "They called him terrible names and threw a chair at his head, hurting him slightly."

The jibes, however, were not of an anti-Semitic nature and the middle-aged man's limp may have been the source of the derision.

Cwilich said the congregation is satisfied that the police are investigating these incidents and have promised to step up their patrols. In the meantime, the Young Israel has put a lock on its oil pipe and installed security cameras.

Canadian Friends of Israel Guide Dog
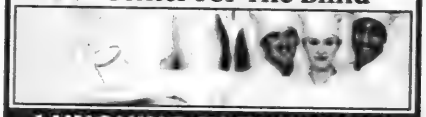
Center For The Blind



LUNCHING IN THE DARK

JOIN US FOR A UNIQUE AND EXCITING DINING EXPERIENCE

Come and enjoy a luncheon with us! You will have a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to enjoy a superb meal in TOTAL DARKNESS!

You will experience the challenge that a visually impaired person faces during a simple meal.

Where: O'Noir Restaurant
620 Church Street

When: Sunday, November 28, 2010
12:00 noon

Limited Space
Tax receipt to maximum allowable amount
$125 per person
For reservations please contact:
Phone: 416-577-3600
Email: sara.israelguidedog@rogers.com
If you have any allergies please let us know.

Dr. Rachael Turkienicz and the students of Rachael's Centre invite you to a study session

honouring the memory of

Vicki Campbell ז"ל

Our beloved friend and fellow student on the occasion of the conclusion of Shloshim

Monday, November 22, 2010
2:00 pm at Rachael's Centre

Space is limited
To RSVP and for further details please e-mail info@rachaelscentre.org
or call 416-630-6488

Rachael's Centre
for Torah, Mussar & Ethics

דער יידיש ווינקל

דזשערי קעין

ביז הונדערט און צוואַנציק

לאָמיר הערן גוטע בשורות

How do you say it in English

פֿון דזשערי קעין

ס׳קומען בריוו פֿון לייענער וואָס בעטן אַז מיר זאָלן שרייבן מער וועגן יידישע שפּריכוואָרטער – יידישע ברכות און קללות. אַזוֹי בקשה איז פֿאַר מיר אַ פֿאַרנעגיגן און מיר וועלן דאָס טאָן אין יידיש, און אויך אין יידיש אויסגעלייגט מיט ענגלישער פֿאָנעטיק און מיט אַן ענגלישער איבערזעצונג. די שפּריכוואָרטער וואָס מיר דרוקן אָפּ הײַנט קומען אַרויס פֿון לאָמיר הערן גוטע בשורות-יידישע ברכות און קללות, אַ זאַמלונג צונויפֿגעשטעלט פֿון יסף גור, און אַרויסגעגעבן פֿון דעם העברעישען אוניווערסיטעט אין ירושלים.

- A brokhe un hatslokhe oyf dayn kepele –Blessing and success on your little head. (to a child
- Trog gezunt un tserays gezunt –Wear it in good health and wear it out in good health
- Got zol dir bentshn mit dray mentshn: eyner zol dir haltn, der tsveyter zol dir shpaltn under driter zol dir bahaltn. God should bless you with three persons. One should hold you. The second should kill you and the third bury you.
- S'zol dir vaksn a geshvir oyfn pupik –May a boil grown on your belly button.
- Filn zolstu remates in di pyates: You should, with every step, feel the pain of rheumatism in both your heels.
- Shteyner zol zi hobbn – nit kayn kinder. She should give birth to stones – not children.
- Gekhapt zol vern di babe vost hot dir opgenumen – The Devil take the midwife who brought you into the world.
- Zolst zayn vi a lomp: hengen bay tog, brenen bay nakht un oysgeyn zolstu in der fri –May you be like a lamp: hang by day, burn by night, and be snuffed out in the morning.

די איר דעם פֿון אונזערע אויסצוגן איז יידיש אַ שפּראַך רײַך אין ברכהות און קללות: רייכער אין צאָל אָדער פֿאַרשידנאַרטיקער וי אַ סך אַנדערע שפּראַכן.

פֿון רעדאַקציע: אויב איר האָט נאָכאָמקען וועגן אונזער וויקל לעזט מיטן, שרייבט מיר אויף מײַן אַדרעס, דורך פּאָסט אָדער בליץ-פּאָסט: info@thecjn.ca

Coast to Coast
Holocaust Education Week

Survivor launches memoirs in Halifax

By JOEL JACOBSON
Atlantic Correspondent

HALFAX — For 40 years, Philip Riteman remained silent.

Then, the Halifax man was convinced to tell his story as a Holocaust survivor.

For 60 years, Philip Riteman refused to write his memoirs.

Then, he made the decision that his story should be told and remembered, even when he and the other Holocaust survivors are gone.

On Oct. 26, Riteman launched his book, Millions of Souls, as told to author Mireille Baulu-MacWillie, and published by Flanker Press of Newfoundland.

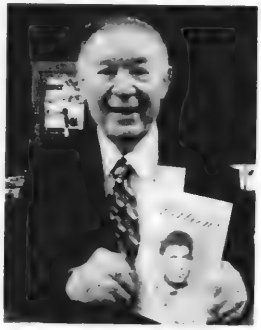
In front of a class of 30 Dalhousie University students and about 40 members of the Jewish and non-Jewish communities, Riteman verbally abridged his story, one he has told hundreds of times to junior high, high school and university students and community audiences across Canada and into New England. He has received two honorary degrees from Atlantic Canadian universities for his dedication to history.

He has always preached the same message: "It is better to love than to hate. Be aware of evil. Think for yourself. Don't be brainwashed."

He stresses that he has accepted the obligation to speak about the horrors of Nazi Germany "so it won't happen again. I'm booked [to speak] for the next year. I'd like to give up, but I can't."

Riteman is 85 years old. He was incarcerated in concentration camps from 1941 to 1945, from the time he was 16 years old and in good health, until he was almost 21 and liberated, weighing a scrawny 75 pounds.

In Millions of Souls, Riteman describes the meagre portions of "food" the camp inmates received, the thousands of killings he witnessed, the work he did in the camps, including carting the dead to mass graves, the feeling when he knew he had seen his parents, brothers, sisters, cousins and other relatives for the last time and the constant cold and hunger.



Philip Riteman
[Joel Jacobson photo]

He praises the American soldiers who liberated him, and about 1,000 survivors, who were on a death march through the Tyrol Mountains. He writes about discovering he had aunts living in Canada and the United States and being reunited with them in Newfoundland, the only country willing to take him in in 1946.

He concludes with stories of gratitude for Newfoundlanders who supported him as a pedlar who knew little English, who took him into their homes for food and lodging in the small fishing villages on the island.

Baulu-MacWillie, a university professor for 20 years at College Ste. Anne in Nova Scotia, knew of the Holocaust from reading the Diary of Anne Frank at age 13 and many other books on the history of the period.

"I met Philip three years ago at a Holocaust Education Week session in Halifax on teaching the Holocaust in the classroom," she recalls. "I looked on the Net to see if his story had been told and it hadn't, so I asked him if I could. He refused, but invited me to visit him at his home. We talked some more and finally he said 'Let's do it!' It took hours of interviews with this marvellous man, who at times had emotional difficulty telling the story, and I know there are still things he didn't reveal."

Most of the students attending had never heard Riteman speak, nor did they know a lot about the Holocaust.

"This gave us so much more insight into what happened," said Rachel Murphy, a first-year commerce student who is taking an eastern European film course as an elective.

"We saw one movie about a 17-year-old in the camps, like Mr. Riteman. That made it a bit easier to relate to what Mr. Riteman was saying. Because he went through it, he shouldn't be responsible to tell everyone, but he's a great person who wants to do this. He relives it every time. It's awesome he survived it."

Nora Bercovici, a third-year English student from Toronto, said she's heard so much and read so much about the Holocaust, "but to hear it from someone who was there, to look into his eyes which are so intense, I just want to thank him for being so strong to talk about it."

The Riteman book launch was the start of a busy Holocaust Education Week in Halifax. There were film showings, an education program for teachers on how to teach the Holocaust in their classrooms, and an art exhibit of ceramic works by an artist and professor from the Studio of Sculpture in Ceramics at the Academy of Fine Arts in Krakow, Poland.

The week concluded with Dignity Day, a remembrance of Kristallnacht, on Nov. 7.

INAUGURAL LAUNCH OF THE MIND, BODY & SOUL SERIES

Growing Healthy Families
Learn from the experts

mind, body & soul

For parents, grandparents, child caregivers, teachers, social workers and anyone who works with, plays with and loves children!
EVERYONE IS WELCOME

MIND/ Ariel Dalfen
Mt. Sinai Psychiatrist and Maternal and Infant Mental Health Specialist

BODY/ Joe Rich
Parenting Expert, Guest therapist on City TV, City Line and Author of Parenting: The Long Journey

SOUL / Elyse Goldstein
Prosserman JCC Director of Jewish Programs and Collaborations

MODERATOR/Molyn Leszcz
Psychiatrist-in-Chief, Mount Sinai Hospital

Our featured speakers will be available to answer individual questions after the formal presentation

Sunday, November 21
1:30-4:00 pm / free event

Tamari Family Hall
Lipa Green Centre / Sherman Campus
4600 Bathurst Street

Babysitting available FREE of charge for children ages 3-11.

Advance registration is required.
Register on line at www.prossermanjcc.com or call 416.638.1881 x.4235 no later than Wednesday, November 17.

For more information call 416.638.1881 x. 4036

The Mind, Body and Soul Series is made possible through the support of the following

Ontario
Ontario Ministry of Health Promotion and Sport
UJA Federation of Greater Toronto
prosserman
Jewish Family & Child
Mount Sinai Hospital
United Way Toronto

RESPITE CARE
ASSISTED LIVING
PALLIATIVE CARE

L'CHAIM GROUP HOME FOR SENIORS

A dignified middle ground between the independence of a retirement home & the dependence of a nursing home

As we remember...
...let us give thanks to all those who fought for our most precious commodity: Freedom.

L'chaim occupies a unique middle ground between retirement and nursing homes. It's a perfect fit for seniors who require special attention for physical and cognitive impairments BUT who also want to retain their sense of independence and dignity. Our assisted living programs and caring staff allow them to do just that. Discover everything L'chaim has to offer. — Judy Cohen, Founder

416.398.7898 L'chaim 718 Sheppard W.
www.lchaimretirement.ca Open house every Thurs. 10-4
Full-time residence • Respite Care • Assisted Living • Palliative care

Join us for
Scholar-in-Residence
Rabbi Daniel Sperber

- Professor of Talmud, Bar Ilan University
- Expert on Women's Roles in Halacha
- Halachic Advisor to Partnership Minyanim

THE TORONTO PARTNERSHIP MINYAN

Saturday November 20, 2010 - 9:00 am
Toronto Partnership Minyan
at the Toronto Heschel School - Sheppard and Faywood

- D'var Torah:
  - Friendly and Unfriendly Halacha
- Kiddush and shiur following minyan:
  - Women's Roles in Synagogue Ritual
- Shabbat lunch (moderate cost - please reserve by Nov 17th):
  - Customs of Chanukah: These Candles are Holy

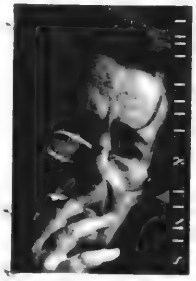
For more information and to reserve for lunch, e-mail tpmcentral1@gmail.com
www.TorontoPartnershipMinyan.com

Mordecai: The Life & Times



Beth Tzedec Max & Beatrice Wolfe Library presents a book launch for this definitive, detailed, intimate portrait of Mordecai Richler, the lion of Canadian literature, and the turbulent, changing times that nurtured him.

Mordecai Richler was an outsized and outrageous novelist whose life reads like fiction. Award-winning author Charles Foran presents a portrait alive and intimate alongside the account of an extraordinary love story that lasted half a century—this is the first major biography of Richler in which the author was given access to family letters and archives. Join us for this rare opportunity to hear Charles Foran discuss the writing of his comprehensive work.

Wednesday, November 24 at 7:30 PM. Free admission.
For more information call 416-781-3514 ext. 225.

Beth Tzedec Congregation 1700 Bathurst Street, Toronto, Ontario M5P 3K3
Tel: 416.781.3511 Fax: 416.781.0150 email: info@beth-tzedec.org

בית צדק Beth Tzedec Congregation

Coast to Coast
Holocaust Education Week

Exhibit depicts Albanian Muslims who saved Jews

By LAUREN KRAMER
Pacific Correspondent

VANCOUVER — Few Jewish communities in Europe increased in number during the Holocaust years, but Albania's was one of those that did.

That's because many citizens in the predominantly Muslim country hid Jews from the Nazis during the war, welcoming into their homes both Albanian Jews and Jewish refugees from other countries.

Seven years ago, American photographer Norman H. Gershman travelled to Albania and Serbia to photograph those rescuers and their descendants, and to document their stories. The result, an exhibit titled Albanian Muslim Rescuers During the Holocaust, opens in Vancouver's Holocaust Education Centre this week, telling a story of friendship, compassion and moral honour.

Even before the war began, Albania's King Zog issued 400 Albanian passports to Jews, particularly those fleeing Nazi Germany and Austria. Many more Jews passed through Albania en route to other countries, and those who could not obtain foreign visas were allowed to stay. The exhibit notes that an underground network was spontaneously created to shelter those seeking refuge from the Nazis.

It's reported that Mehdi Frasheri, the Albanian prime minister at the time, declared: "All Jewish children will sleep with your children, all will eat the same food, all will live as one family."

At the core of personal and family life for most Albanians is the concept of besa, which means "to keep the promise." The promise is a code of honour linked to an Albanian folk principle of taking responsibility for others in their time of need. Because of that code, between 1,800 and 2,000 Jews were saved in Albania during the Holocaust.

The stories of the Albanian rescuers are relatively unknown because of the country's political isolation under communism. It wasn't until the late 1980s that their stories came to light, and in 1987, some of them were recognized as Righteous Among the Nations by Yad Vashem.

The moving story of these rescuers is told in the exhibit through Gershman's lens, which poetically captures their portraits, and through their words, which reflect their deep humility and respect for their fellow man.

In one picture, Fatime Veseli, an Albanian Muslim woman, stands beside a portrait of her late husband, a photographer who learned his trade from a Jewish man named Mandil. Later, the Mandil family and their four cousins were hidden in the Veseli family home in the mountain village of Kruje, until liberation.

"Our moral code as Albanians requires that we be hospitable to guests in our home and in our country," she explains. "If an Albanian had reported the presence of Jews to the Germans, he would have disgraced his village and family. At minimum, his home would have been destroyed and his family banished," she says. "The Qur'an teaches us that all people – Jews, Christians and Muslims – are under one God."

Another image depicts the family of the late Hasan Kalaja, another Muslim Albanian who sheltered a Jewish couple between 1943 and 1944. "The entire neighbourhood, even the local prefect, knew we were sheltering Jews," Sadik Kalaja relates. "We listed them with false names as our aunt and uncle, and lived day to day as one family."

"My father said that the Germans would have to kill his family before he would have them kill his Jewish guests," Menishe Kadiu says.

[Photo courtesy Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion]

None of the Albanians quoted accepted any kind of remuneration for their acts of rescue, nor felt any was necessary.

"How could I not save Jews?" Hasan Reme Xerxa wondered. "I felt their suffering. I never lost faith as a Muslim or in the tradition of besa."

Most of the Albanian Muslims depicted in the photographs are humble individuals with few material assets and no financial means to visit the Jews they once rescued, who now live in Israel or North America.

"Electricity and water was scarce," Gershman recalled of his trip to Albania. "Yet, the people always welcomed me with food and warmth. None spoke English and none sought any compensation. They wished only to honour their family tradition and to be remembered."

At the Vancouver Holocaust Education Centre, most of the audience for this exhibit will be senior elementary and secondary school children, says Frieda Miller, executive director. "Our focus with the kids is moral decision-making, and this is a wonderful bridging opportunity between Jews and Muslims for us. It's nice to be able to point to people who did the right thing."

The exhibit at the VHEC is ongoing through May 27, 2011. www.vhec.org

Health & Lifestyles

Rabbi says he donated kidney to inspire his kids

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

Rabbi Ephraim Simon says it was because of his nine children that he donated his kidney to a stranger one year ago.

"By donating my kidney, I knew I could inspire my children and be an example of everything I teach them," he said recently at an evening sponsored by Chabad Lubavitch of Markham and Renewal Toronto, a non-profit organization working in the Jewish community to help people suffering from irreversible kidney failure.

Rabbi Ephraim Simon

Rabbi Simon, co-director of Friends of Lubavitch of Bergen County, in Teaneck N.J., said he was originally motivated to donate a kidney after he received an e-mail in August 2008 about a 12-year-old girl who needed one.

"It could have been my daughter. The least I could do was offer to be tested," he said.

Before responding, he said, he and his wife spent a couple of days doing research "and found that the surgery was minimal, and the risks were minimal. I learned that I could live a long and healthy life with one kidney. We all take risks every day, but the rewards of living our lives outweighs the risks."

When he called back, however, and offered to test, someone else had already stepped forward. "I felt disappointed. I had had the opportunity of saving a life."

Rabbi Simon said he was subsequently called a couple of times to test, but he did not turn out to be a match. "I felt like I couldn't give my kidney away."

Finally on Erev Pesach, he said, the phone rang and he was told that he was a match for a 51-year-old man who had 10 children. "I felt incredible joy. Although my wife and I kept the news to ourselves, the seder took on tremendous meaning for us."

Following the surgery, he said, his reward was seeing that the dark cloud had lifted over the other man's family. "I feel blessed that I could do that."

As a rabbi, he said, "my only sermon is how I live my life. People are inspired, not by what I say, but how I live. That was the underlying motivation behind what I did."

He said that we wants the parents of the 12-year-old girl to know that she was responsible for ultimately saving the man's life.

Also on the program was Kathy Laszlo, founder of DANI, Developing and Nurturing Independence, an organization that helps young adults with special needs. In June, Laszlo donated her kidney to Terri Quint, who attended the evening to thank her publicly. For further information on Renewal, call 416-628-7633, e-mail toronto@renewal.org, or visit www.renewal.org.

Yeshiva University
is saddened by the passing of Mr. Oscar Reichner ז"ל of Brooklyn, New York and Toronto, Ontario

Heartfelt condolences are extended to his beloved wife, Magda Reichner, his daughters, Chani (and Yisroel) Braunstein of New York, Renée (and Robert Eli) Rubinstein of Toronto, who is a member of the Stern College for Women Board of Overseers, and with her husband is a YU Benefactor, and to his seven grandchildren and seventeen great grandchildren.

May the entire family be comforted among the mourners of Zion and Jerusalem.

Yeshiva University

Richard M. Joel, President, Yeshiva University
Kurt Rothschild, Ontario President, CFYU
Dr. Norman Lamm, Chancellor
Dr. Herbert C. Dobrinsky, Vice-President of University Affairs
Mo Lidsky, National Director, CFYU
Samuel Z. Eltes, Chair, National Board of CFYU
Rabbi Kenneth Brander, Dean, Yeshiva University, Center for the Jewish Future

Have you seen it yet?
www.cjnews.com

32ND ANNUAL DINNER & DRAW
CHABAD LUBAVITCH OF SOUTHERN ONTARIO
HONOURING

Tom Mihalik

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 2010
BETH AVRAHAM YOSEF CONGREGATION
613 CLARK AVENUE, THORNHILL

Couvert: $540.00
For information or reservation please contact:
Chabad Lubavitch of Southern Ontario - 770 Chabad Gate, Thornhill, ON Tel: 905.731.7000 Fax: 905.731.7005 Email: info@chabad.ca Website: chabad.ca

Dinner Co-Chairs
Mr. Mark Altow
Mr. Martin Richman
Mr. Martin Teplitsky Q.C.

Special Gifts Chair
Mr. Joey Tanenbaum, C.M.

Spice of Life

Where's the kosher broccoli?

By JENNIFER M. MACLEOD
Special to The CJN

You can still get a kosher stir-fry in Toronto – just as long as you don't want broccoli. Other veggies you might not see on the menu are asparagus, romaine lettuce, brussel sprouts and even herbs like curly parsley, coriander or dill. And then there are the rumours: what seemingly innocent bite will join the list next?

The problem, according to Rabbi Tsvi Heber of the Kashruth Council of Canada (COR), lies with infestations of tiny insects.

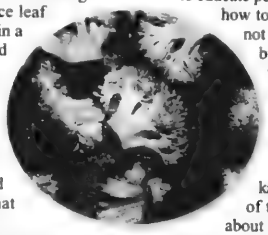
"Tolaim are the insects that are forbidden by the Torah for consumption," Rabbi Heber says. They include aphids and thrips, along with tiny worms and other almost-unseen perils. These creatures hide – inside florets, under leaves, even inside fruits or fish.

These insects have been forbidden as long as Jews have been eating kosher. But a few factors have brought the issue to light – sometimes literally. While only insects that can be seen with the naked eye are generally prohibited, fluorescent light boxes now allow for extremely close, accurate inspection to determine the degree of infestation. As well, kosher consumers are more aware of insect problems than they were in past.

There may also be more insect infestation now than in the past century. "We see them using less pesticides," says Rabbi Moshe Bensalmon of Badatz Toronto, a kashrut agency that began operating nearly two years ago. Imports and organic produce also demand greater vigilance.

But the role of kashrut organizations is not only to check and forbid, but also to permit foods wherever possible.

Rabbi Bensalmon recalls an all-organic wedding that was very successful despite the effort involved in ensuring insect-free produce. Every romaine lettuce leaf had to be prewashed, "agitated with soap in a sink," then rinsed and individually checked on the light box.



The COR is also leading the way in permitting foods wherever possible. Early in 2009, when it was discovered that raisins contain tiny fruit fly eggs, which can hatch into larvae, many agencies rushed to forbid them. After extensive entomological and talmudic research, the COR declared that raisins could still be eaten.

However, when it comes to ingredients like asparagus or broccoli, "it's not that we can't check," Rabbi Heber says. It's simply not practical. "Broccoli… needs to be thoroughly checked. Infestation levels are high; many bugs can be adhesive and don't rinse off easily under a stream of water."

In other communities, there may be more demand. One New York restaurant does offer fresh broccoli, employing two full-time mashgichim (kosher supervisors): one for the establishment, the other to check broccoli.

For Rabbi Heber, consistency doesn't have to mean increased stringency. "That's a misconception."

He adds that "all of our policies are in writing… from top to bottom."

He believes standardization will pay off in efficiency and transparency. "The community is seeing the COR take control of its establishments, making sure every establishment is in line with our policies."

Isaac Drookman of Zuchter Berk Caterers agrees. "Since they came out with a fruit and vegetable policy a few years ago, there have been no new restrictions." He praises the COR's responsiveness. "The rabbis are flexible… that's more important than if I have broccoli or not."

In fact, Rabbi Heber says, "our policies, if anything, have become more inclusive." For example, COR establishments can now be certified even if they are not serving exclusively chalav Yisrael, kosher-certified dairy products.

The COR has begun going out to synagogues and homes to educate people about kashrut issues and demonstrate how to check and wash produce. "Our motive is not to forbid all the different types of produce, but rather to give them the skills to be able to enjoy the product."

But restaurant consultant Marvin Greenberg believes the COR could do more to communicate its standards to restaurateurs and caterers.

"This is not about circumventing kashrut," says Greenberg, a founding member of the Ontario Restaurant Association. "It's about the lack of communication and the inconsistency of regulations." He'd like to see more training for mashgichim as well as a more positive attitude toward food businesses taking on kosher supervision.

The COR should "encourage people to become kosher and make it easier, not a point of stress."

One Toronto restaurateur feels frustrated juggling the COR's requirements with his customers'. "You're bound in what you can sell," he says. "Lettuce, for example: they require a mashgiach to check it.

"People ask, 'How come you don't have enough?' Because the guy has to spend six hours checking lettuce.

"That's not the way to create a positive attitude for remaining kosher," says Greenberg, who feels that the COR's standards may not reflect the true diversity among Toronto's kosher consumers. "Ninety per cent of people couldn't care less if I have [checked] broccoli or not."

Filling in for the missing menu items just takes creativity, Drookman says. "Broccoli is not the only item in Chinese food; it's one of 200."

L'Chaim
CANCER SUPPORT FOR JEWISH WOMEN
Cancer?
We've "been there".
We are Jewish women cancer survivors who can "be there" for you during your cancer journey.
We provide confidential peer support to Jewish women undergoing cancer treatment.
Hotline: 416-630-0203
A project of National Council of Jewish Women of Canada, Toronto Section

Times have changed, not kashrut laws

By JENNIFER M. MACLEOD
Special to The CJN

A deepening sense within the Jewish community that kashrut is tougher now than it was a century ago may in part be fuelled by mistrust of kashrut organizations, and not a result of kashrut laws themselves.

"When they tell you that you can't use a certain type of vegetable, you can't use [that] type of vegetable," says one caterer, who asked to not be named. "But they don't have the right to dictate how my business is run."

Among a handful of caterers around the city who are now under the supervision of Badatz Toronto, she says Badatz offers comparable kashrut services, with less intrusiveness into the company's business practices. COR, for example, generally demands that a partner in the organization be shomer Shabbat. "We have Yiddishkeit in our hearts, and we know how kosher we are – we're very, very careful."

BT Badatz Toronto

According to Badatz's Moti Bensalmon, it's certainly more common that at least one partner in the business is shomer Shabbat. However, Badatz's standard now is the same as that of the Orthodox Union (O-U), requiring that all caterers, regardless of ownership, must have a mashgiach temidi – constant oversight by a recognized Badatz supervisor.

The caterer above chose Badatz partly out of concern over COR's inconsistencies, and others have also questioned issues like the seeming variability of rates for mashgichim and even kashrut standards. She feels that practices like kosher and non-kosher kitchens working in parallel at the same time in certain venues would not be tolerated under Badatz, yet are tolerated at certain COR-approved venues.

While her venue offers both kosher and non-kosher kitchens, the mashgiach holds the key to the kosher kitchen at all times and will not open the door, even for advance preparation work, while the non-kosher kitchen is operating.

As a businessperson, she ultimately believes she should be able to freely choose a kashrut organization, as is already common in other cities.

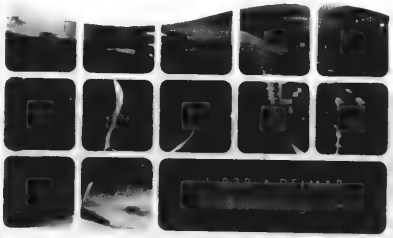
"Slowly, very slowly, a lot of the banquet halls and synagogues will go over to Badatz. They're tired of the tyranny."

"People think food is either kosher or not kosher," says Rabbi Benjamin Hecht, founding director of Nishma, a Toronto organization that critically investigates contemporary Jewish issues. He believes this reflects a serious lack of understanding of kashrut and of Jewish law.

It's actually possible for one rabbi to study a situation and determine that a food product is kosher, while another rabbi examines the same facts and concludes that it is not kosher. And, as in the famous argument from Fiddler on the Roof, they're both right.

Hence, the common misunderstanding that kosher standards which were "good enough" for our grandparents in Europe have been superseded by today's more stringent laws.

Continued on page 57

DELMAR®
www.delmarcargo.com
FREIGHT FORWARDING
CUSTOMS BROKERAGE
& LOGISTICS SERVICES


SERVICING THE WORLD COMES NATURALLY

Conference puts a positive spin on aging

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

While we wait for a pill to forestall aging, there are things we can do to help maintain brain function, says William Reichman, president and CEO of Baycrest.

Speaking on Oct. 28 at the third conference sponsored by CARP, Canada's largest not-for-profit, non-partisan advocacy association for aging Canadians, Reichman said the techniques are similar to things we do to keep our hearts healthy.

Reichman said that the majority of risk factors of heart disease are the risks for brain failure too, "but the good news is that if we make important lifestyle changes, we can have control."

He said that 10 years ago, he decided that there was no reason he couldn't be in good physical shape, "and I believe that I can do the same thing with my brain."

Physical exercise and keeping weight down is essential for a healthy brain, he said. "Mid-life obesity is a risk factor for Alzheimer's disease."

Lifestyle is also important, Reichman said. "A senior who volunteers shows an increase in cognitive ability. At Baycrest, there are 3,000 active, mostly senior volunteers who take care of 2,500 [other] seniors a day."

He said evidence suggests that seniors who are more socially engaged have stronger memories. "These are not magic pills. We are all excited about the promises of science, but we must put our time to good use now."

Leonid Gavrilov, who along with his wife, Natalia, was awarded a research grant from the U.S. National Institute on Aging to study exceptional human longevity, said it's a myth that aging starts with old age. "Aging starts as early as age 10, when the death rate is the lowest."

It's also a myth, he said, that humans are complex, and it is difficult to understand aging. "We are not much different than worms and flies. When we compare fruit flies to humans, the law of mortality is the same. There is a quantitative difference, not a qualitative difference."

Moses Znaimer

Natalia Gavrilov said that small things that happen early in life may have a profound effect later on in life. "We believe that these conditions shape aging 80 years later."

In their research, she said, they discovered that people who are born in November have twice the chance of living to 100 years old, and people born to young mothers have twice the chance. "For centenarians, it all began at birth."

Elkhonon Goldberg, an author and scientist in the field of neuropsychology and cognitive neuroscience, said that when we talk about cognitive changes in our brains, we usually talk about losses, but there are also positive gains.

"That is the puzzle of aging. The paradox is that many professionals are still experts in their field [at an advanced age], and their practices are quite successful. The brain and the mind are not all or none. Some aspects decline, while others are preserved."

There is good news and bad news about neuroplasticity, the ability of the brain to restore itself. "The good news is that there are benefits for parts of the brain that we engage, but the parts we don't suffer consequences."

Rabbi Yehuda Berg, an authority on Kabbalah, who was named by Newsweek in 2007 as one of the top five rabbis in the United States, said that our own personal power can help with regeneration.

"If our focus remains on the future, we can combat the aging process. [Don't] look back on what you should have done."

CARP's executive director, Moses Znaimer – the founder of ZoomerMedia Limited, which owns VisionTV and New Classical 96.3 FM – said that he wanted people to come away from the conference "refreshed, recharged and revitalized, and use what you learn to embrace the spirit of the 'zoomer,' which insists that aging doesn't have to mean retreating from life."

Golden age of Catskills is back

By CYNTHIA GASNER
Special to The CJN

More than 100 residents of a local retirement home and their guests recently danced, laughed and dined on kosher cuisine while they relived the golden age of the Catskills.

Residents of the Kensington Place Retirement Residence in Toronto and their guests stepped back in time, from the 1930s to the 1960s, at a fundraiser for the Jewish National Fund (JNF) called Memories of the Catskills, held on Oct. 28.

The nostalgia for the golden years of New York State's famous Catskills resorts, where many performers got their start, was evident at the evening's opening cocktail reception and throughout the evening.

Residents and their guests were welcomed by Kensington Place staff members, including a Marilyn Monroe lookalike, white dress and all; Elvis Presley and Danyelle Gatsos, Kensington Place's social director, who organized the event.

The Welcome to the Catskills Bar displayed photographs of some of the stars of the Catskills, including Jackie and Rachel Robinson, with Karla Grossinger of the famed Catskills hotel.

At the event, JNF Toronto president Nathan Disenhouse spoke of the accomplishments of JNF, from the purchase of land that became the State of Israel to its continued work for Israel for more than 100 years. He thanked those present for their support.

The event was Kensington Place's inaugural fundraiser.

Michael Ayers, general manager of Kensington Place, told The CJN that the staff members at Kensington Place "are committed to making our community a better place to live.

"Through partnership with worthy organizations such as Jewish National Fund, we can live our philosophy – that we can make a bigger difference together than we can individually"

Kensington Place resident Leon Kane opened the fun-filled program with a tap dance, to the delight of the audience. Comedians Stewart Silver and Lawrence Morgenstern also performed.

Leon Kane, a resident of Kensington Place Retirement Residence, dances at the Memories of the Catskills evening.
[Karen Miller photo]

Kane said he visited the Catskills many times, "enjoying the great amount of food, entertainment, music and dancing. I feel that we have been able to recreate the ambience of the resort."

MC Page Magen, along with Magen Boys Entertainment, kept the event lively. Residents, guests and staff danced to the music of the past, while old movies were projected on screens.

"Living Life has always valued the importance of the community at large and… looks forward to establishing future partnerships," said Jason Pantalone, a partner in Living Life Retirement Residences, the company that owns Kensington Place.

DRIVE FOR DREIDELS

2010 COMMUNITY CHANUKAH GIFT DRIVE

There are thousands of Jewish children in the GTA whose parents cannot afford to buy Chanukah gifts without your help.

Please share some holiday happiness by dropping off new, unwrapped toys or gifts between

November 22nd and December 6th, 2010

DROP OFF LOCATIONS AND TIMES:

NATIONAL COUNCIL OF JEWISH WOMEN OF CANADA
4700 BATHURST ST | 416.633.5100

MONDAYS - THURSDAYS | 8:30 AM - 4:00 PM
SUNDAY DECEMBER 5TH | 10:00AM - 2:00PM

MILES NADAL JCC | 750 SPADINA AVE | 416.924.6211

DONATIONS CAN BE DROPPED OFF IN THE LOBBY & OUTSIDE THE FITNESS CENTRE DURING MNJCC HOURS

Gift cards and monetary donations are especially needed and should be delivered/mailed to:
Leah Marmer | JF&CS | 4600 Bathurst St., 1st Floor | M2R 3V3
For more information contact 416 638 7800 x 6312 | lmarmer@jfandcs.com

The Cooper/ Shear Family

National Council of Jewish Women of Canada, Toronto Section

'We haven't forgotten them'

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Last month, Alan Caplan – a British war veteran living in Leeds, England – wrote to The CJN seeking family members of seven Jewish airmen who are buried in nearby Harrogate.

I contacted Caplan the following week, thinking there could be a good followup story and – truth be told – because I have a personal interest.

Twenty-three years ago, I was in Harrogate, a picturesque garden town in Yorkshire, and visited the cemetery that Caplan refers to in his letter. Also, 42 years before that trip, my late father was among a group of young Royal Canadian Air Force members who presented a plaque to the Harrogate Hebrew Congregation expressing thanks for hospitality to Canadian Jewish members of the forces during the war.

I visited the Harrogate synagogue when I was in town and took a picture of the plaque for my album. I also have pictures of the graves that Caplan mentioned in his letter, each stone marked by a Star of David among the many crosses in the military section of Stonefall Cemetery. I'd been told that the local Jewish community tended the graves and said Kaddish annually for those who are buried there.

Caplan was among approximately 30 members of the Association of Jewish Ex-Service Men and Women (AJEX) who visited the graves of the Canadian Jewish servicemen to say Kaddish this year, following a Sept. 19 parade at the cemetery commemorating the 70th anniversary of the Battle of Britain.

"We remember them because they gave their lives for us," he wrote. In his letter, he included the names of the following men with some pertinent details.

- Jack Tass of Prince Albert, Sask., air gunner, RCAF, died May 15, 1944, aged 29
- Harry Ratner of Winnipeg, air bomber, RCAF, died May 25, 1944, aged 26
- Ernest Israel Glass, pilot, RCAF, died Jan. 2, 1944, aged 27
- Robert Sirluck of Winnipeg, air bomber, RCAF, died March 1, 1944, aged 22
- Morley Bernard Stock of Regina, flying officer, RCAF, died Feb. 18, 1944, aged 21
- R.P. Marks, flight engineer, died Dec. 16, 1943, aged 22
- Joseph Zareikin, air gunner, RCAF, died Oct. 5, 1944, aged 36

Harry Ratner

Within a week, Caplan had received some two dozen e-mails and heard from family members of two of the men. A third family made contact with him shortly afterward.

The extent of the response came as a surprise to him, because, he said, another AJEX member tried to locate surviving relatives a few years ago with no success.

Caplan, 76, was born in Manchester, England, and spent two years in Britain's Royal Air Force as compulsory national service, before moving to Toronto for a three-year stint in the late 1950s.

"Our main aim is that we make contact, and that people should know that the graves of their loved ones are visited at least annually – and that we haven't forgotten them," Caplan said. "There's not so many people around who remember the war."

* * *

Montrealer Morley Stock – the nephew and namesake of one of the men – was the first person to call Caplan.

"I was quite impressed with the fact he made the effort to try and find these families," Stock told The CJN.

Stock's uncle died piloting a Halifax bomber in an abortive mission. The plane crashed, killing all the crew except one.

The mission is the last entry in Stock's logbook, now a keepsake for his nephew.

Previous missions, recorded in Stock's tidy upper-case printing, took him over German cities including Cologne, Karlsruhe, Stuttgart and Berlin. Conditions were often perilous, as indicated in his terse remarks: "Lite flak, lost motor over France, second over Eng. coast;" "many searchlights with moderate flak no mishap" and "intense heavy flak with enemy fighters throughout no mishap."

The logbook also includes four poems, typed and signed by Stock. Halfway through the third, To The Fallen Pilot, he wrote: "Grieve not, because an eagle/ Was from the skyway hurled/ His soul will inspire others/ To build a new and better world.

"It's almost like he had a premonition," his nephew said. "He didn't really express any regrets about what he did."

Stock said he doesn't think his generation has a sense of what it was like to experience a world war. "My father was a broadcaster. He went into the army. My uncles were professionals. They all went in the army or air force. Today, if you had a kid and the kid was a lawyer, do you think the kid would run to enlist?"

* * *

In Winnipeg, Marcy Secter – who is married to Harry Ratner's nephew, Lloyd Secter – heard about Caplan's letter from her son, who had seen it online, as well as from a cousin in Calgary.

Her husband has been to his uncle's grave, as has her sister-in-law who lives in London, but "it's nice to know that someone is tending to things there," said Secter.

As well, former Winnipeger Nathan Isaacs, who now lives in Toronto, contacted the Ratner family. Isaacs, 88, had taken Ratner's sister, Minnie Karlinsky, to his high school graduation. The two families lived near each other, and Isaacs, a navigator during the war, arrived at the air-force station in Leeming, Yorkshire, shortly after Ratner was killed.

Losing their only son was "quite traumatic for the family," said Secter.

Karlinsky, 86, the youngest and last surviving sibling, expressed the same sentiment with a poignant recollection. Her mother used to sing all the time, she said, but "never sang a note" after losing her son. "It was a real tragedy."

Morley Stock

Karlinsky, who lives in Winnipeg and has been to Harrogate, remembers her older brother as handsome, kind and generous. He used to call her "Duchess" or "Princess" to get her to polish his shoes, she recalled. "Hey, Princess, how about polishing my shoes?" he would ask.

"He was a really sweet young man."

Ratner had worked at his father's lumber camp in Jones, Ont., and his father had wanted him to take it over, Karlinsky said. "That was his dream, which didn't materialize."

* * *

Ernest Sirluck – whose brother, Robert (Bert) – is buried in Harrogate – was an army major stationed in Leatherhead, in southern England, when Robert was killed in a bombing mission. He just missed the funeral, because a wire from the RCAF informing him about it had been intercepted by the British censor. By the time he received the notice by mail and rushed to Harrogate, the funeral had already taken place.

He has been there many times since, he said. Now 92, Sirluck – the second youngest of five children and the last surviving sibling – has lived in Toronto for many years. His parents, who immigrated from Russia, lived in Winkler, Man., about 75 miles southwest of Winnipeg.

Robert was killed on a bombing mission. "His promotion from flight sergeant to pilot officer came through the day after he was killed," his brother said. "He was a very committed fighter against the Nazis… He left university in order to enlist. He was actually a little under age, but he falsified his age, and stated it to be a year more than it really was."

Before the war, Robert had studied agriculture at the University of Manitoba, where a scholarship in Canadian history is named for him. "We were farmers, and the plan was for him to take over the farm when my father retired."

All five of the Sirluck children attended the university. Ernest, who studied 16th- and 17th-century English literature, was its president from 1970 to 1976, and was vice-president of the University of Toronto before that.

Robert Sirluck

His younger brother had flown more than a dozen missions, including over Berlin and Hamburg. "Bert told me the runs were becoming more and more difficult and more and more fraught. The defences were constantly increasing.

"He wasn't blind to the danger, but he was very resolute, very clear about the absolute necessity of overcoming that scourge."

* * *

Morley Stock said that as Remembrance Day approaches, "it's a situation of respect, and remembering that these guys made a pretty big sacrifice. Their careers went on hold. Many of them didn't come back. It's a tough situation for families. I think it's good to remember once in a while."

Now, I have global perspective.
Macquarie Private Wealth Inc. is a member of Canadian Investor Protection Fund & IIROC.

International

Israel & the Jewish World

At Macquarie, I can deliver more.
Monica Weiss... Associate Portfolio Manager
416 512 3658
monica.weiss...
Macquarie Private Wealth Inc. is a member of Canadian Investor Protection Fund & IIROC.

U.S. VP stresses country's support for Israel

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

NEW ORLEANS — U.S. vice-president Joe Biden pledged that he and President Barack Obama would continue to support Israel and said they are committed to preventing Iran from acquiring nuclear weapons.

Biden spoke at the annual General Assembly (GA) of Jewish Federations of North America on Sunday. The keynote speaker at the GA's opening plenary, he had just met with Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, who was scheduled to address delegates on Monday.

For further coverage from the General Assembly, please go to cjnews.com

"This government will stand with Israel," said Biden. "It's in our own self-interest, beyond it being an absolute moral necessity."

As well, he referred to the necessity for peace talks. "There is no substitute for direct face-to-face negotiations leading eventually to states for two people secured – the Jewish State of Israel and the viable independent state of Palestine," he said.

"That is the only path to the Israeli people's decades-long quest for security, and the only path to the Palestinian people's legitimate aspirations for nationhood."

The three-day event brought together more than 3,100 delegates – lay and professional leaders of the Jewish community, and 600 students and student leaders – representing 157 member federations and 400 affiliated Jewish communities. There were about 130 Canadians at the Nov. 7 to 9 GA and the concurrent Lion of Judah conference for women who donate at least $5,000 to their annual UJA campaign.

Linda Kislowicz, executive director of the United Israel Appeal Federations Canada (UIAFC), said that it's "extremely valuable for Canadians to participate as part of a larger North American family of organizations. There's a tremendous focus on the future and on youth [at this GA]. We share the same concerns as our American colleagues in encouraging and engaging the next generation of leaders."

Shaun Bernstein, a Humber College journalism student, said he was there to learn to become a better reporter by focusing on Jewish ethics.

Joel Zimmerman, a second-year psychology student at Mount Royal University in Calgary, where he is president of Hillel — was attending his first GA.

Continued on page 46

David Engel and Linda Kislowicz at the General Assembly.
[Frances Kraft photo]

Thanks to Disabled Veterans like Dor, there is an Israel for all of us.

Dor Cohen was only a month short of completing his service in the Paratroopers Special Division.

It was the dead of night in Nablus, September 5, 2007. Dor's unit moved toward their target. Their mission was to capture an engineer known to produce lethal explosive devices, but they didn't find him. Instead, they found another terrorist involved in manufacturing and detonating deadly materials.

As Dor made his way back to his jeep, his life would suddenly change forever. He stepped on a hidden explosive device which was detonated via remote control. He suffered severe injuries to his right arm and leg. After many difficult surgeries and ongoing rehabilitation, Dor, once a champion long-distance runner, courageously took it all in stride.

Besides his own sheer determination and bravery, one of the most important reasons for Dor's successful recovery has been Beit Halochem in Tel Aviv, which is now a vital part of his life.

Dor works out in the fitness hall regularly and has joined the Beit Halochem kayaking group to further strengthen his body. "I am still a newly disabled veteran who is trying to find his way."

Today, with the help of a Beit Halochem scholarship, Dor is studying Agronomy and hopes to work in wine production.

With your support, Beit Halochem Canada, Aid to Disabled Veterans of Israel, can continue to provide a home away from home for our wounded members at the Beit Halochem Centres in Tel Aviv, Haifa, Nahariya, Jerusalem and Beer Sheva. Help us care for Dor, and the other 51,000 extraordinary and courageous heroes who have given so much of themselves to protect Israel.

PLEASE ASSIST the more than 51,000 disabled war veterans and victims of terror who rely on Beit Halochem to help them in their REHABILITATION.

AID TO DISABLED VETERANS OF ISRAEL (CANADA)

1600 Steeles Ave. W., Suite 219, Concord, ON L4K 4M2
info@beithalochem.ca • www.beithalochem.ca

Charitable registration #11877 9081 RR0001

Join us in CELEBRATING HANNUKAH with a dinner & dance party. WEDNESDAY, DEC. 1, 2010, 7 p.m. La Primavera Banquet Hall, Vaughan, Ont. Kashrut observed. Reserved seating; no tickets will be sold at the door.

Call 905-695-0611 / 1-800-355-1648
Or, order online: www.beithalochem.ca

Sharansky praises young delegates at GA

Continued from page 45

"I thought it was an opportunity I should jump on," he said. "I think it's good to see the amount of connection the Jewish community has."

Jewish Agency for Israel chair Natan Sharansky, speaking at a UIAFC reception, said it is important that young people are at the GA. Having visited several university campuses beleaguered by anti-Israel activity, he said he knows very well "how difficult it is to be a proud Jew in these universities, and how difficult it is to speak your mind."

Natan Sharansky [Frances Kraft photos]

Andres Spokoiny, CEO of Montreal's Federation CJA and a panellist at a workshop on "Finding Community in Difficult Economic Times," told The CJN there is a lot of "cross-pollination between communities" at the GA.

Ted Sokolsky, president of UJA Federation of Greater Toronto, was heartened that the American federation system "has come on board in fighting the delegitimization of Israel."

Earlier, at the plenary, Biden had lauded the federations' new Israel Action Network, launched for that purpose. Sokolsky and the Toronto federation played a key role in getting it off the ground.

The location of the meeting was significant, an apt place to include a half-day of community service for the first time. Delegates were scheduled to assist in ongoing projects, five years after New Orleans was devastated by hurricane Katrina. The city was selected so the federations could celebrate and build on the $28 million provided by federations following the hurricane, a news release stated.

Biden lauded the federations for their "daunting but worthy goal" of repairing the world, and said that policymakers could learn a lesson from them: "To prevent poverty, make sure you're out there doing what you're doing."

He spoke of the federations' efforts both at home and in Israel, a country he said is close to his heart.

"My love for Israel was nurtured by my father, but was cemented after I made my first visit there in 1973 as a 30-year-old senator," said Biden, who is Catholic. He said that Golda Meir, Israel's prime minister at the time, told him that Israelis have a secret weapon: "We have nowhere else to go.

"All these years later, I find both alarm and solace in those words," he said. "I feel so absolutely certain that our support of Israel must continue forever."

He said any disagreements with Netanyahu, whom he referred to as his close friend, have been tactical but never fundamental. "The ties between our countries are literally unbreakable."

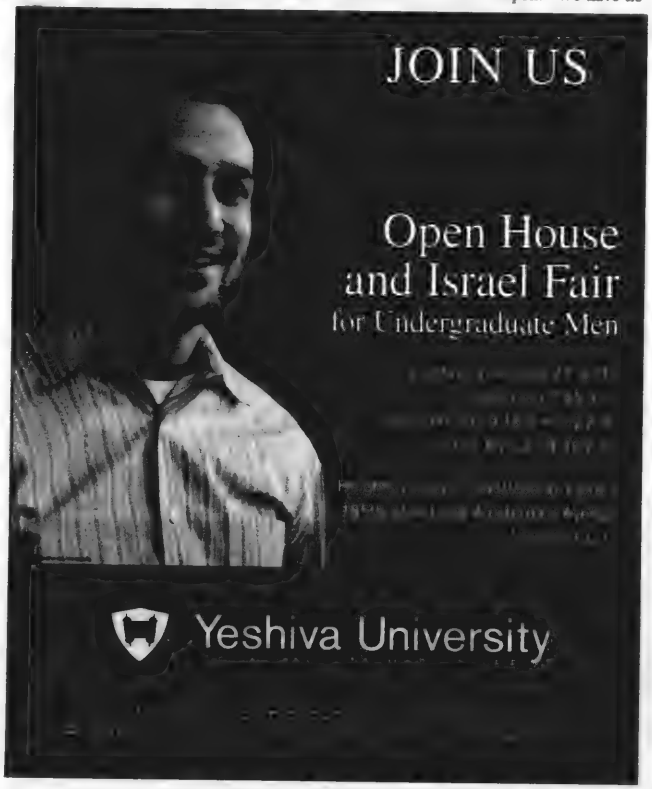
As well, he said, "it must be clear to all that efforts to chip away at Israel's legitimacy will only be met by unshakable opposition by the United States of America."

Television producer David Simon, creator of HBO's The Wire, who also spoke at the opening plenary, alluded to the significance of the location for this year's conclave, recalling that convention organizers cancelled bookings after Katrina, and also noted that federations are now focusing on non-Jewish causes as well as Jewish ones. "We are all connected, and New Orleans is living proof of that.

"The need [in New Orleans] is unbelievable. It's not just need. It's desperation," Simon said.

His speaking fee would go to help an organization that benefits musicians, he noted. "You might be shocked to know that the people who make New Orleans, New Orleans, are the ones with the least health care."

Volunteer Jessica Sharafi, of Montreal, and Toronto-based Dan Hadad of CIJA, the Canadian Council for Israel and Jewish Advocacy, staff a table at the General Assembly.



'Big Embrace' kicks off

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

NEW ORLEANS — The annual General Assembly of the Jewish Federations of North America got started on Nov. 6 (after Shabbat, of course) in the heart of New Orleans, under the moniker "The Big Embrace in the Big Easy."

Some 4,000 people from more than 150 organizations, NGOs and charities flocked to the city for the conference and the biannual Lion of Judah gathering, which runs almost concurrently.

The conferences coincided with a massive real estate convention also taking place in New Orleans over the weekend, and the streets were packed with out-of-towners carrying paraphernalia from their respective gatherings, but almost all wearing Mardi Gras beads in gold, purple and green. "We are thrilled and proud to be gathering here in New Orleans for the 2010 General Assembly and International Lion of Judah Conference," said Jerry Silverman, president and CEO of the Jewish Federations of North America.

"More than 4,100 Jewish Federations and communal leaders of all ages are coming together to meet the challenges we face, from advocating for Israel to engaging young people in meaningful opportunities like Jewish service, to raising funds for meeting global Jewish needs.

"New Orleans, where Jewish federations helped rebuild after Hurricane Katrina, provides an especially fitting and powerful backdrop for our work together. We are honoured to be here and look forward to memorable events."

The GA traditionally tackles hot topics within North American Jewish communities – last year's gathering dealt with the challenges faced by the twin blows of the financial crisis and Bernard Madoff's Ponzi scheme. This year, the themes include Israel's image, with workshops such as "Confronting Israel's Delegitimizers: The Jewish Community Responds" and "U.S.-Israel Relations in a Changing World."

U.S. recommits to peace after electoral power-shift

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

The United States remains committed to forging an Israeli-Palestinian peace deal despite recent electoral gains by Republicans, who are traditionally more sympathetic to Israel.

U.S. State Department deputy spokesperson Mark Toner said President Barack Obama's administration still views the peace process as a priority and will work with Congress to see it through.

"It's going to remain a priority for this administration. And obviously, we're going to work hand in glove with Congress to advance direct negotiations and to ultimately reach a settlement," he said.

Voters swept Republicans into control of the House of Representatives and weakened the Democratic majority in the Senate in an election largely seen as a referendum on Obama's domestic policies.

President Barack Obama

Although Israel enjoys broad support across both parties, Republicans are seen as taking a more hardline approach. The incoming chairwoman of the House foreign affairs committee, Ileana Ros-Lehtinen, is strongly pro-Israel.

The Israeli government is hopeful that a Republican majority House come January will be able to alleviate the pressure Obama has placed on Israel to negotiate peace with the Palestinians and to place a freeze on settlement expansions.

"The fact that Obama lost the majority in the House of Representatives will play into Israel's hands," a senior Israeli official, quoted anonymously by Israel Army Radio, said.

Nazi SS guard dies in Italy

JTA

ROME — A Ukrainian-born Nazi SS guard serving a life sentence for murders committed during World War II has died.

Officials said Michael Seifert, known as the "beast of Bolzano," died last Saturday in a hospital in Caserta, Italy, where he had been transferred Oct. 25 from the Santa Maria Capua Vetere prison because of a broken femur. He was 86.

In 2000, a military court in Verona convicted Seifert, who had lived in Canada since 1951, in absentia of murdering inmates while a guard at an SS-run prison transit camp at Bolzano in northern Italy.

Witnesses said Seifert tortured prisoners and committed other atrocities.

Seifert was extradited from Canada in 2008 to serve out his sentence after the Supreme Court refused to hear his appeal of a 2007 Federal Court ruling that he lied about his wartime past in order to enter Canada and obtain citizenship.

The 2007 Federal Court ruling, which came after years of legal wrangling in the case, was welcomed by Canadian Jewish Congress, which has long urged more urgent action against Nazi war criminals.

The camp at Bolzano had served as a transit camp for Italian partisans, forced workers, German army deserters and Jews being shipped north in 1944-45.

Seifert's lawyer, Paolo Giachino, complained to the ApCom news agency that judges had rebuffed efforts to allow Seifert to serve his sentence under house arrest because of "continued demonization by extremists in the Jewish community.

Germany ordains first female rabbi since Holocaust

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd.

BERLIN — The first female rabbi to be trained in Germany since the Holocaust was ordained Nov. 4.

Thirty-one-year-old Alina Treiger was born in Ukraine and came to Germany in 2002 after studying music in Moscow. She will oversee Jewish communities in Lower Saxony in eastern Germany.

She told Germany's ZDF TV that she recognizes the Holocaust is part of German Jews' past, but hopes Jews can identify with positive experiences they have today.

The German-Jewish community ordained its first female rabbi, Regina Jonas, in 1935. She was killed in Auschwitz in 1944.

Some 200,000 Jews live in Germany, more than half of whom came after the fall of the Berlin Wall in 1989.

Rabbi Treiger was one of three rabbis ordained by Germany's Reform rabbinical seminary, the Abraham Geiger College. Ceremonies at Berlin's Pestalozzistrasse Synagogue marked its third ordination of graduates since it opened in 1999. Germany was the birthplace of Reform Judaism in the early 19th century.

Israel Briefs

Israel rises in ranks

The United Nations last week issued its annual Human Development Report, which, over the last 20 years has become a trusted indicator of development among nations. It ranked Israel at No. 15. The report is based on a composite national measure of health, education and income for 169 countries. Norway, Australia and New Zealand top this year's list, while Niger, Congo and Zimbabwe were at the bottom. For the first time, the report surveyed non-economic aspects of development, from political freedoms and empowerment to sustainability and human security. A spokesperson for the UN Development Program said Israel ranked relatively high thanks to life expectancy, gross national income per capita, and, most importantly, education.

Israel protests British law

Israel reportedly postponed a strategic dialogue with Britain to protest a law that allows for the prosecution of Israeli officials for alleged war crimes. Strategic dialogue between Israel and Britain on defence and security issues occurs annually. This year's strategic dialogue meeting, scheduled for last month in Britain, didn't take place, AFP reported. The British law provides the country's courts with "universal jurisdiction" to issue arrest warrants for alleged war crimes, including to visiting foreign politicians. British Foreign Secretary William Hague, who was in Israel last week for meetings with top Israeli officials, was set to discuss amendment of the law. Last month, Israeli Intelligence Minister Dan Meridor cancelled a visit to London because of rumours he would be arrested on charges stemming from Israel's interception of a Gaza-bound flotilla from Turkey, which led to the death of nine Turkish citizens. A British court issued an arrest warrant for opposition leader Tzipi Livni last December for her actions as foreign minister in the Gaza war of 2008-09, forcing her to cancel her visit.

UNESCO ties suspended

Israel suspended ties with the cultural body of the United Nations over its decision to classify the Cave of the Patriarchs and Rachel's Tomb as Palestinian. At the end of its biannual session last week, UNESCO, which is in charge of preserving historical sites, adopted several proposals by Arab states classifying Jewish and Muslim holy sites. It referred to Rachel's Tomb in Bethlehem as a mosque, in addition to using its Jewish designation ,"Rachel's Tomb," and said the Tomb and the Cave of the Patriarchs was "an integral part of the occupied Palestinian Territories." It called both "Palestinian sites." Last February, Israel included both sites on its new national heritage list and allocated money to refurbish them. The decision was condemned by the international community, and UNESCO asked Israel to remove the sites from the list.

– from JTA and Ha'aretz

Nobel laureates denounce anti-Israel boycotts

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Thirty-eight Nobel Prize laureates have signed a statement denouncing academic boycotts and divestment campaigns against Israeli scholars and educational institutions in Israel.

The statement, issued by Scholars for Peace in the Middle East (SPME), was by chance released on Nov. 2, the 93rd anniversary of the Balfour Declaration.

SPME is a grassroots network of more than 60,000 scholars on 4,000 campuses around the world that believes Israel has right to secure borders and peace with its Arab neighbours.

"Academic boycotts are completely antithetical to the freedom of ideas and interchange, which have historically characterized academic life," observed Eric Kandel, one of the signers, in an interview last week.

"Boycotts are completely counter-productive," said Kandel, a Columbia University neuroscientist who shared the 2000 Nobel Prize in medicine for research on the physiological basis of memory storage in neurons.

Roald Hoffman, a Holocaust survivor and theoretical chemist on the faculty of Cornell University who won the 1981 Nobel Prize in chemistry, said, "One may disagree with Israeli government policy, but to institute a boycott against Israeli scholars is nonsensical."

He added, "Freedom of scientific exchange of ideas, for instance through seminars or meetings, is a fundamental part of the way science operates today. Scientists from all countries are welcome, provided they have something of interest to say."

Another signer, Sidney Altman, a professor of molecular, cellular and developmental biology and chemistry at Yale University who shared the 1989 Nobel Prize in chemistry, was equally dismissive of boycotts.

"I'm against boycotting any institution in the world, unless that institution is clearly a tool of any government propaganda effort," said Montreal-born Altman in an interview.

Sidney Altman

The statement was initiated by Roger Kornberg, a biochemist, professor of structural biology at Stanford University and the winner of the 2006 Nobel Prize in chemistry, and Steven Weinberg, a physicist at the University of Texas who won the 1979 Nobel Prize in physics.

The statement denounces academic and cultural boycotts, divestments and sanctions in the academy on three grounds.

They are antithetical to principles of academic and scientific freedom, contrary to principles of freedom of expression and inquiry and possibly discriminatory by virtue of national origin.

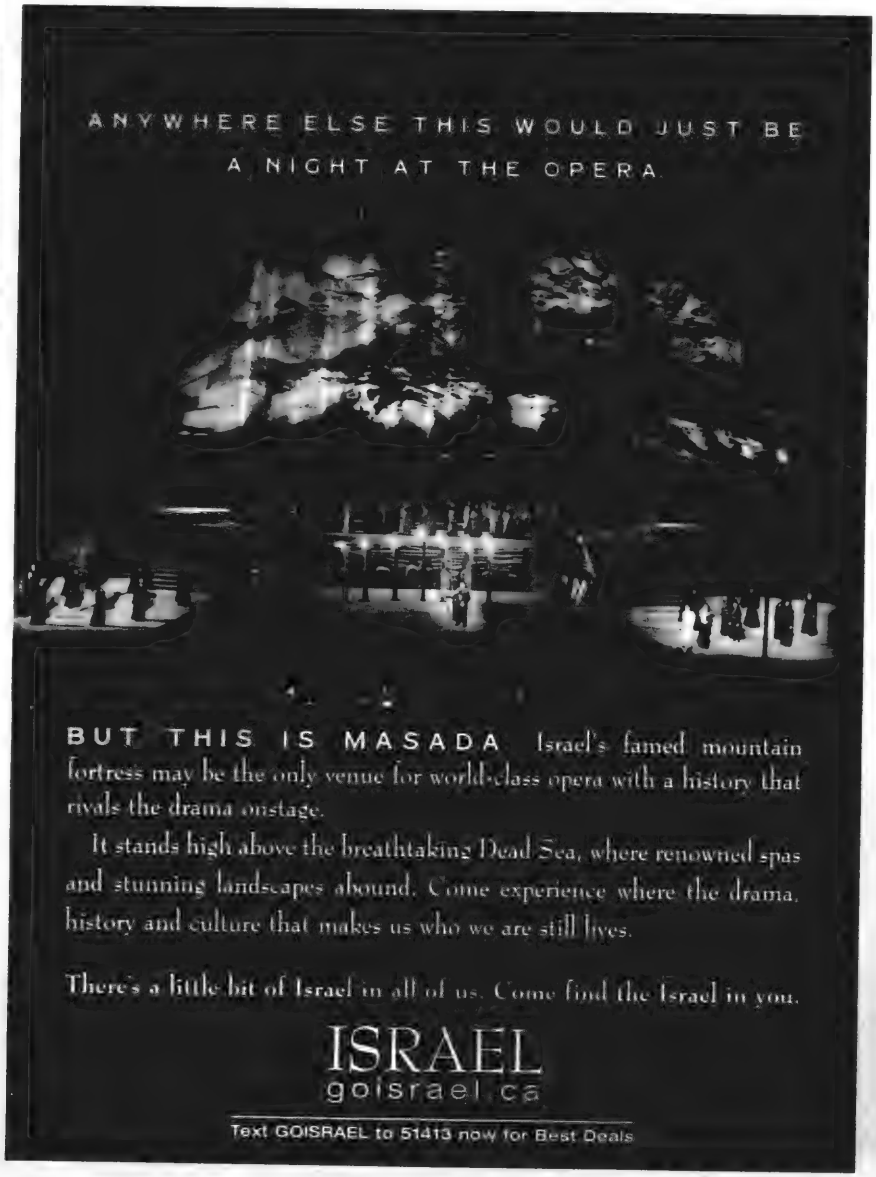
The signers appeal to students, faculty colleagues and university officials to denounce the BDS (boycott, divestment and sanction) campaign, which was launched in 2005.

They further encourage such persons to promote and provide opportunities for dialogue.

In closing, they say, "We believe that the university should serve as an open, tolerant, respectful, cooperative and collaborative community engaged in practices of resolving complex problems."

Apart from Kornberg, Weinberg, Altman, Kandel and Hoffman, the signers are: Lawrence Klein, Kenneth Arrow, Walter Kohn, Robert Aumann, Mario Capecchi, Harold Kroto, Aaron Ciechanover, Finn Kydland, Claude Cohen-Tannoudjil, Leon Lederman, Robert Curl, Tony Leggett, Edmond Fischer and Robert Lucas, Jr.

Additional signers are: Jerome Friedman, Rudolph Marcus, Andre Geim, Roger Myerson, Sheldon Glashow, George Olah, David Gross, Douglas Osheroff, James Hackman, Martin Perl, Avram Hershko, Andrew Schally, Richard Schrock, Russell Hulse, Phillip Sharp, Tom Hunt, Daniel Kahneman, Elie Wiesel and Torsten Wiesel.



ANYWHERE ELSE THIS WOULD JUST BE
A NIGHT AT THE OPERA
BUT THIS IS MASADA Israel's famed mountain fortress may be the only venue for world-class opera with a history that rivals the drama onstage.
It stands high above the breathtaking Dead Sea, where renowned spas and stunning landscapes abound. Come experience where the drama, history and culture that makes us who we are still lives.
There's a little bit of Israel in all of us. Come find the Israel in you.
ISRAEL
goisrael.ca
Text GOISRAEL to 51413 now for Best Deals

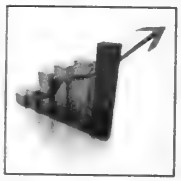
If you care about Israel
don't just wring your hands,
put them to civilian work for
2 or 3 weeks on an Israeli supply base
Free: army accommodations, kosher meals, trips and events.
Cost: air fare, $100 registration fee weekend expenses.
SAR-EL CANADA
416-781-6089 toronto@sarelcanada.org
514-735-0272 montreal@sarelcanada.org
www.sarelcanada.org
Groups start approximately every 3 weeks

Luxury coach promotes travel to Israel

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

The Israel Government Tourist Office last week announced the launch of its fall campaign, featuring a bus to the Holy Land.

The luxury coach will not actually drive passengers to Israel on some imaginary land bridge, but it has been decorated with images of Israel on either side, promoting travel to the Jewish state.



The six-wheel coach will ferry travellers between Toronto's Pearson International Airport and several high-end downtown hotels for the next four months.

In addition to the images of Tel Aviv and Jerusalem on either side, it carries the ad campaign's slogan, "There's a little bit of Israel in all of us. Come find the Israel in you."

"The exposure will be enormous," enthuses Oded Grofman, head of the Israeli tourist office in Toronto. The bus, which shuttles between the airport and downtown 10 times a day, will raise awareness of Israel as a travel destination and will supplement the broader campaign that will employ traditional means such as television, radio and print, as well as the new social media.

The bus ad is part of a $250,000 spend by the tourist office and is somewhat unorthodox for the government agency, said Grofman. After receiving approval for the project from the regional head office in New York, it was determined it would be operated as a pilot project and, if successful, be emulated in other North American cities, he said.

Altogether, some $15 million (US) has been allocated by the Tourism Ministry for North American advertising campaigns, said Grofman.

It appears the promotions are paying off. Israel is well on its way to setting a new record for tourism in 2010. In the first 10 months of the year, travel to Israel jumped by 17 per cent from the same period the year before, and altogether, 3.3 million visitors are expected for the year. Among them will be 75,000 to 80,000 Canadians, also a new record.

In addition to the country's traditional market of Jews and Christian supporters, a number of ethnic groups are discovering Israel as a travel destination, Grofman said. Filipino and Chinese groups are travelling to the Holy Land in substantial numbers, while the "Christian market" is expanding, as is interest from other organizations. The Royal Winnipeg Ballet recently visited Israel, as did a group from the Royal Ontario Museum.

In November, "a huge group," 550 strong, is expected to set out from Toronto.

Grofman believes a number of factors have led to the surge in travel. Since 2002, Israel has been experiencing a long-term trend in tourism growth, with numbers up almost every year. "Of course, geopolitics is a big factor," he said. "People feel safe. They see what happens in other countries, and people realize Israel is as safe as any other destination."

The advertising campaign has had an impact, he continued, and as demand for travel has increased, supply has attempted to keep up. "We now have more channels with tour operators and airlines, and that enables more and more tourists to come."

In the winter low season, El Al and Air Canada will offer three direct flights each, while during the peak summer season that just concluded, the airlines flew to Ben-Gurion International Airport a total of 12 times a week. That doesn't include flights through New York or Europe, he added.

But has the constant demonization of Israel and the calls for boycott by its opponents had any impact on travel, he's asked. "I never met any company that didn't want to meet us or sell Israel. I never heard any comment about boycott," he said.

The travel industry is increasingly interested in promoting Israel as a destination, he said, and he's constantly being asked for promotional material or to attend events and trade shows to highlight travel to the Jewish state. He's been invited on an almost weekly basis to address church congregations, including one event that drew 1,000 people.

Grade 1 students from the Paul Penna Downtown Jewish Day School, pictured here with the head of the Israel Government Tourist Office, Oded Grofman, whose son attends the school, took part in the recent launch of a tourism promotion that features a bus decorated with images of Israel.

It's not just evangelical Christians interested in visiting the Holy Land. Half of Christian travellers to Israel are Roman Catholic, many of them from Quebec, "and it's growing," he said.

"That doesn't mean they're in love with Israel. But we don't deal with politics. We speak about the landscapes, food, hotels, the experience they can have in Israel."

So far, the experience appears to be a positive one. Post-visit surveys indicate more than half of travellers were on at least their second trip to the country.

To meet increasing demand, which is hoped will reach five million travellers by 2012, Israel is embarking on ambitious expansion of the hospitality sector. In October, the number of visitors was so high, the industry had trouble coping with the demand.

The government has been offering incentives for hotels to locate in Israel, and the Ritz-Carlton and the Waldorf Astoria, two prestigious names, are slated to open locations in Herzliya and Jerusalem respectively.

"Boutique hotels" in trendy parts of Tel Aviv are also being developed, he said.

Tourism remains an important part of the Israeli economy, Grofman said. Tourism provides employment for everyone from cooks and cleaners to management and guides, and it's not limited to the larger centres. Smaller communities also benefit from the influx of foreign travelers, he said.

In 2010, tourism constituted 6.4 per cent of the country's GDP. Earnings in 2010 from international visitors and tourism goods are expected to generate 6.5 per cent of total exports ($4.8 billion US). The contribution of the tourism sector to employment is estimated at 223,000 jobs in all, or 7.9 per cent of total employment, while investment in tourism-related industries is believed to be $2.3 billion (US) or 7.6 per cent of total investment.

KPMG
cutting through complexity

KPMG is a leading professional services firm providing Audit, Tax, and Advisory services. We take deep personal accountability to deliver exceptional service and value in all of our client interactions. Ultimately, we measure our success from the only perspective that matters—that of our clients.

And now for something completely different: HEEBONICS

L.A. children's film festival to screen student's animated short

By CARA EDELL
Special to the CJN

Her film is called The Little Things, but Kayla Cooper's accomplishments are far from small.

The 22-year-old's animated movie will be screened at the sixth annual Los Angeles International Children's Film Festival on Nov. 13 at the Martin Luther King Jr. Theatre in Santa Monica.

Currently a student at York University in the faculty of education, Cooper graduated from the school's film program in June of this year.

Her children's movie was originally a project for one of her fourth-year courses, intended to be viewed by her professor and classmates. After sharing her work of art and receiving rave reviews, Cooper decided that her brainchild deserved a broader audience.

"There is no better outlet for this film than a festival that caters specifically to kids. I'm hoping to get my movie out there. It's tough when you're dealing with a short film, especially a five-minute one, so it needs to get this exposure at a festival directed towards children."

Cooper's film is categorized as Claymation (clay animation) and is a form of stop-motion (when an object is moved by hand in small increments between individually photographed frames, creating the illusion of movement when the series of frames is played as a continuous sequence). Each of her animated pieces is made of Plasticine, with unique and eye-catching details.

"I've always been interested in stop-motion. It's quite an interesting process," Cooper said. "Growing up, I loved Shel Silverstein's poems and Barbara Reid's children's books, which feature two-dimensional Plasticine illustrations. I figured I could experiment with it all and make a film out of it."

The idea behind the film's storyline is a story in itself.

"I woke up in bed one day and had a picture of an ice cream shop in my head from a dream. The last two lines of the film came to me first – 'If your eyes are bigger than your mouth, your heart best be even bigger.' I knew I had to elaborate on this."

A scene from Kayla Cooper's animated film, The Little Things.

Her ending phrase became the film's moral, and the script, written in rhyme, creatively narrates the lesson. "It's all about treating others the way you want to be treated and not being greedy. The main character does have eyes that are bigger than her mouth, so it's a very literal interpretation of the figurative expression."

Cooper said she has always loved rhyming. In Grade 3, she made it her mission to write as many poems as possible and ultimately surpassed her goal of 100. While she didn't realize the significance back then, this achievement was the first of many.

The Little Things was a year-long project that Cooper finished this past April. "The poem came together in the spring of 2009, and I created the sets that summer. My family's living room was covered with Plasticine for quite a long time. They were very patient with me."

The filming was a painstaking process, Cooper said. She borrowed a camera from her boyfriend and a set of lights from the school's film department. She then stayed at home in her pyjamas for four days straight.

Kayla Cooper

"I just moved the little pieces and took picture after picture, almost 1,200 photos in total. Every picture you take only counts for about a 30th of a second, so by the time you do the calculations, it's a lot of work!" she said.

"Time moves incredibly slowly when you're doing something like that. But then at the end, when you look at the objects move as you're fast-forwarding the pictures on your camera, it's pretty rewarding."

Cooper's first version of Stephanie, the film's main character, was unattractive and awkward, she said. A few sketches later, Cooper was able to bring Stephanie to life with features that really stand out.

"If you look at Stephanie compared to the other children in the story, their eyes are just black dots, while hers are big and beautiful, providing contrast to the rest of the kids."

Cooper said her film would not be the product it is today without the support of her loved ones. Her mother helped build the wire frames for the Plasticine characters, her friend Cassandra Luftspring helped with the music, her cousin helped make the gumballs and his girlfriend helped make the popcorn machine.

In the future, Cooper hopes to turn her story into a children's book and bring it into schools. "It would be a really great tool to incorporate literacy with the arts as well as video and Claymation for elementary school children," she said. "I've always loved kids and children's literature, which is why I'm going into education."

Cooper has spent a lot of time teaching art to children. For the past several years, she has worked at Seneca Summer Camp as an art instructor and supervisor. She now teaches art one-on-one, as well as a course at Curry's, an art supply store that offers classes for kids and adults in the GTA.

"In the long-term, I would love to do Claymation with children at a summer camp or in an extracurricular program. In the shorter term, I would love to get a job at a school and implement my arts background and interest into the programming," she said.

"What I would really and truly love to do is work with kids and have them create films – design the characters, write scripts, animate and edit. That would be the most rewarding thing. I want to help others and guide them along, to help them create something so that they can explore the medium and process."

Cooper said she can't wait until she travels to Los Angeles to see her film on the big screen.

"It's a good excuse to go and a really exciting reason to go. I'm so happy that people outside of Ontario are going to see my movie. I put in so many hours of work.

"When you're doing it, you feel like no one will ever see it or care. It's amazing that someone so far away will see it, thanks to this festival," she said. "My film is just starting its journey!"

For more information about The Little Things, contact Kayla Cooper at thelittlethingsanimation@gmail.com.

Arts & Travel

EYE ON ARTS

By BILL GLADSTONE

SLOVAKIAN FILM BROKEN PROMISES TO BE SHOWN AT CHAI TEA, NOV. 21

Toronto Jewish Film Festival presents Broken Promises, Slovakian director Jiri Chlumsky's 2008 film about the experiences of a Slovakian Jewish boy and his family in Nazi work camps and then in the partisan underground. With a script that spans over a decade, Chlumsky captures an impressive 140 locations across four seasons, using a total of 130 actors. English subtitles. Chai Tea and a Movie, SilverCity Richmond Hill, 8725 Yonge St. (at Hwy 7). $15. Sunday Nov 21; tea 4 p.m., film 5 p.m. 416-599-8433. www.tjff.com

• • •

Media Mondays: Film critic Adam Nayman presents "Surfing the New Waves – Contemporary Foreign-Language Cinema," with film clips. Nayman tries to define the term "new wave" as he discusses recent art-house exports from numerous countries. A new series going over six Mondays, starts Nov. 15, 7 to 9 p.m. First lecture on the origins of new-wave cinema. $12 drop in per lecture. 416-924-6211, ext. 606.

• • •

Awards & Prizes

• A book of selected poems by Ottawa-based poet Seymour Mayne as rendered into Hebrew by Moshe Dor has been chosen to receive the J.I. Segal Award for the translation of a book on a Jewish theme. The prize is being given to Fly Off Into the Strongest Light: Selected Poems (Keshev Publishing House) this week at the Gelber Conference Centre in Montreal.

• Toronto klezmer folk band Beyond the Pale has been nominated in four categories of the Canadian Folk Music Awards. The band consists of six musicians who play a mix of klezmer, Balkan, Romanian and other styles. The awards are scheduled for Nov. 20 in Winnipeg.

• On the international scene, a graphic novel rooted in the Holocaust won the grand prize at an international cartoon and comics festival. The Gateway to Zion, by Walter Chendi, was awarded the prize at the International Comics and Games festival in the Italian city of Lucca.

• • •

Arts in Brief

• Active Seniors at the Miles Nadal Jewish Community Centre presents "Great Jewish Canadian Personalities – J. B. Salsberg." Adam Fuerstenberg discusses the life and times of this colourful personality. Thursday, Nov. 18, 1:30 p.m. Refreshments. 416-924-6211, ext. 155.

• Harold Green Jewish Theatre presents Lenin's Embalmers, an "absurdist, savagely funny dark comedy" about two Jewish scientists chosen to embalm Vladimir Lenin after his death in 1924. $49 to $76. Miles Nadal JCC, Al Green Theatre. Until Nov. 21. 416-366-7723. www.stlc.com

• Planet Music, Lectures on World Music for the Armchair Traveller. Series continues at Miles Nadal JCC, Nov. 11 & 18, 7 to 8:30 p.m. Drop-in for $18 per lecture. 416-924-6211, ext. 0.

• Toronto not-for-profit theatre company Steppin' Out Theatrical Productions presents Oliver!, featuring a cast of local performers. The play is at the Richmond Hill Centre for the Performing Arts, Nov. 18 to 21. The company also presents a holiday show with the Renanim Youth Singers under the direction of Susan Michael and others, Dec. 2. www.steppinout.ca

• Dogs, a series of paintings by Julie Glick, is on view in the Jacobs Lounge Visual Art Space, Miles Nadal JCC, until Nov. 21.

Broken Promises* screens at SilverCity Richmond Hill on Nov. 21

THERE SHOULD BE A LAW AGAINST THIS MUCH LAUGHTER JACKIE MASON IS...
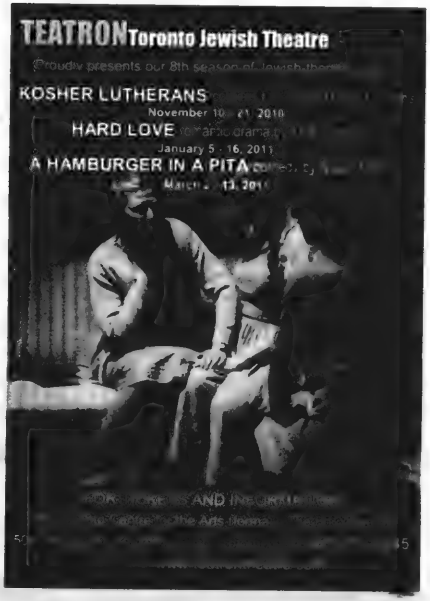
ONE
ANGRY
MAN
See Jackie Mason in person on Sat. Nov. 13*
EXCLUSIVE ENGAGEMENT BEGINS TOMORROW
NOVEMBER 12 AT CINEPLEX SHEPPARD CINEMAS
*FOR SHOWTIMES AND EVENT DETAILS VISIT CINEPLEX.COM



Conductor awarded peace prize

JTA

BERLIN — Conductor Daniel Barenboim was awarded a German peace prize for his efforts to bring Israelis and Palestinians together.

The Westphalia Peace Prize, worth about $70,000 (US), was presented by German Foreign Minister Guido Westerwelle in ceremonies on Oct. 30 in Muenster City Hall.

Barenboim, 67, a pianist and music director at Berlin's State Opera, was honoured particularly for his creation, with the late Palestinian scholar Edward Said, of the West-Eastern Divan Orchestra, which brings together Jewish, Christian and Muslim musicians. The award will be shared with the orchestra, according to news reports.

Several musicians from the West-Eastern Divan Orchestra performed at the ceremony.

Westerwelle praised the project as "an orchestra without borders" that brings younger generations together. He said that peace talks between Israel and the Palestinians must continue, with European support, but that Israel's security is top priority and "not up for debate."

Barenboim called the award "a great and deep honour" and added that a two-state solution to the conflict was urgently needed.

"It is not five before midnight, but 30 seconds before midnight," said Barenboim, who has passports for Israel, Argentina, Spain and a pass for the Palestinian territories, which he was given after a concert in Ramallah in January 2008.

The prize is given every two years by the Economic Association of Westphalia and Lippe to individuals or institutions considered role models in building peace. Past recipients include former UN secretary general Kofi Annan and conductor Kurt Masur.

Play examines big issues with big laughs

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

A Jewish couple who cannot have children is set to adopt a baby from a pregnant young woman living in a small town in Iowa. Realizing the woman doesn't know they're Jewish, the couple decides to pose as Lutherans until the adoption goes through.

Or so the story goes in Kosher Lutherans, onstage at the Toronto Centre for the Arts until Nov. 21.

The play is being staged by Teatron Toronto Jewish Theatre, a company that puts on Jewish-themed plays. Teatron has presented two plays every season since 2002, and this season, it's staging three due to popular demand.

Ari Weisberg, Teatron Theatre's founder and artistic director, says Kosher Lutherans is a play that a lot of Jewish people will be able to relate to.

"[The play takes] a light, comic look at a dilemma that some Jewish couples could easily be facing... [the] situation of looking to have a child when you can't, and the relationship with friends and tradition."

Weisberg received the play two years ago from U.S. playwright William Missouri Downs. It has been produced a few times in the United States, but this is the first time it's being presented in Canada.

"I liked it," Weisberg says of his reaction when he first read the script. "It hit right in the niche that I was looking for."

Kosher Lutherans examines issues of morality, particularly when Franklyn (the husband of the couple trying to adopt), played by Ron Boyd, attempts to convince his best friends, Ben and Martha, played by played by Richard Hoffman and Jada Rifkin, to pretend they are Lutherans as well.

"Is it moral?" Franklyn gets asked when he's trying to get his friends to go along with the ruse.

"There are many levels of morality here... you could consult the highest rabbinical authorities on the nuances of our actions but... No! It's not moral! It's totally immoral!" is his response.

Kosher Lutherans is the first play Teatron is staging this season. From Jan. 5 to 16, 2011, Hard Love, by the Israeli playwright Motti Lerner, will be presented. Wrapping up the season, from March 2 to 13, 2011, is A Hamburger in a Pita, a comedy by Nina Shenhav, who is also a CJN columnist.

Kosher Lutherans runs Tuesdays to Thursdays and Saturdays and Sundays at 8 p.m., with Sunday matinées at 2 p.m. For tickets, call 416-616-5350 or visit www.teatrontheatre.com.

From left are Ron Boyd, Melissa Battey-Pratt, Veronika Brylinska, Jada Rifkin and Richard Hoffman, the cast of Teatron Theatre's Kosher Lutherans.

SUBSCRIBE TO
The Canadian Jewish News

FLORIDA, ARIZONA, CALIFORNIA, CANADA
WE SEND YOUR CAR & CONTENTS (and return)
CALL 416-225-7784
www.torontodriveaway.com
TORONTO DRIVEAWAY AND TRUCK SERVICE
5803 Yonge St., #101
North York M2M 3V5
Since 1959

CJN Snowbirds

1) Arrange for Canada Post to forward The CJN to your winter address with the rest of your regular mail.

2) Advise our Circulation Department to suspend delivery until you return to Canada with your expiry automatically extended. You can still access the eCJN while away.

3) Arrange for our Circulation Department to redirect The CJN to your winter address at a cost of $10.00 per month for U.S. and foreign addresses.

This charge – payable by cheque, Visa, Mastercard or American Express before departure covers the cost of additional postage incurred for out of country mailings.

Fax changes in your delivery to 905-946-1679 or call the Circulation Department at 1-866-849-0864 allowing two weeks notice.

Singer is an award-winning sensation

By RHONDA SPIVAK
Special to The CJN

WINNIPEG — Opera singer Lara Secord-Haid, 21, celebrated her capture of five gold medals in the Manitoba Music Festival with a special concert recently at the Mennonite University.

A graduate of Joseph Wolinsky Collegiate, the Winnipeg native is currently in her third year at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston studying with Lorraine Nubar.

"It always feels good to get some positive recognition for the work you're doing, and I always find the assessment of my weaknesses to be helpful, too," Secord-Haid says.

"In any festival, I hear so many other singers who have their own set of strengths, so it all comes down to the preferences and esthetic values of one judge to assign marks."

Secord-Haid, a lyric coloratura soprano, won in the categories of Italian art song, French melody, Aria, German Lieder and Spanish cancion, as well as one silver medal in Oratorio.

She won the Alma Wynn Memorial Trophy at the 2006 Winnipeg Music Festival.

Her father, Marshall Haid, says that when she first began singing, "it was hard to believe that such a powerful voice could come out of her small frame."

Secord-Haid says she was drawn to opera because the drama always captivated her.

"Like an actor, an opera singer can express with the body and with the voice, but composers write subtext, implications, feelings or psychology that can't be shown with the body into the orchestral part, and to me, that's where the magic comes. Opera has the means to express some of the most intense aspects of the human experience."

Lara Secord-Haid

In 2010, Secord-Haid performed the role of Mme. Silberklang in The Impresario, put on by the Little Opera Company, as well as the role of Daria Garbinati in Viva la Mamma, put on by the New England Conservatory. This season, Secord-Haid was added to the artists' roster of the Boston Metro Opera.

For her concert here, she performed selections from Donizetti's opera Don Pasquale and was joined on piano by Darryl Friesen, who made his professional orchestral debut with the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra.

Secord-Haid, who undergoes rigorous training to prepare for her roles, wowed the audience to a standing ovation with her powerful voice.

"My training consists of a one-hour voice lesson and two musical coachings every week, as well as diction and repertoire lessons in German, French and Italian. I practise generally between one and two hours a day, depending on vocal health and fatigue," she says.

As for what her future holds, Secord- Haid says, "My next step will, I think, be grad school and competitions. I will only take the professional auditions I am ready for. It's really easy to be overly ambitious."

Secord-Haid says she chose to hold her recent concert in Winnipeg at the Mennonite University "because they have a lovely auditorium with nice acoustics and a beautiful piano. What more could I want?"

Foran writes definitive biography of Mordecai Richler

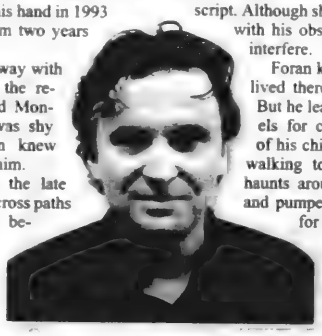
'It was all about trust'

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Charles Foran, a Toronto novelist and non-fiction writer, met Mordecai Richler only twice, shaking his hand in 1993 and chatting with him two years later.

Beyond coming away with the impression that the renowned and outsized Montreal-born novelist was shy and reserved, Foran knew precious little about him.

Although he and the late Richler would never cross paths again, Foran would become his biographer. It is probably fair to say that no one outside Richler's immediate family and circle of close friends and relatives knows more about him today than Foran.



Charles Foran
[James Lahey photo]

Foran, 50, spent four years researching and writing Mordecai: The Life and Times (Alfred A. Knopf Canada), the definitive biography. It was officially published on Oct. 23.

Given Richler's integral role in Canadian literature, Mordecai is not the first biography on Richler. But it is the first to draw on family letters and the Richler archive at the University of Calgary.

Of Irish and French ancestry, Foran was drawn to Richler because no other Canadian novelist meant as much to him. From the moment he read The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz in high school to the time he finished Barney's Version, Richler's last novel, Foran enjoyed his satiric humour and pathos and admired his craft.

Foran also appreciated Richler's public persona, a bracing mix of reserve, irascibility and candour, and shared with him an interest in Jewish Montreal, fishing, snooker and Scotch.

"Everything about Richler was fascinating," Foran said in an interview at his publisher's office.

He suspects he could not have delved as deeply into his subject without the help of Richler's widow, Florence, the executor of his estate and the person who smoothed his rough edges and made him a better man.

Florence read a couple of Foran's books and liked them. His body of work runs the gamut from Sketches in Winter and Butterfly Lovers to House on Fire and Carolan's Farewell.

After Foran talked to her and visited Richler's grave on Mount Royal, she granted him access to all materials, including medical records.

Satisfied that Foran was the man for the job, she gave him her blessings and urged her five children – Daniel, Noah, Emma, Martha and Jacob – and Richler's best friends – filmmaker Ted Kotcheff, journalist Bill Weintraub and editor Robert Gottlieb, among others – to cooperate.

"It was all about trust," Foran said.

Florence, who divides her time today between Montreal and Toronto, wanted a fair, balanced and unauthorized book.

To ensure accuracy and richness of detail, Foran allowed her to read the manuscript. Although she did not always agree with his observations, she did not interfere.

Foran knew Montreal, having lived there from 1989 to 1995. But he leaned on Richler's novels for constructing a portrait of his childhood there, went on walking tours of Richler's old haunts around St. Urbain Street and pumped more of his friends for vital information.

As well, Foran read the fragments of Richler's final, unfinished novel, which he describes as "ribald" and "really wild." Reflecting on its 50-odd pages, he said, "For an old guy, he had a lot of juice left."

When he finally finished Mordecai, he had written 315,000 words, the equivalent of about 1,000 book pages. The manuscript being too long, Foran deleted 70,000 words. Cut out were his observations on Richler's books and on about 100 people Richler had known.

Far from being a self-hating Jew, an accusation levelled against Richler after the publication of his second and third novels, Son of a Smaller Hero and A Choice of Enemies, he was actually "a natural-born provocateur," Foran said.

As he grew older, he added, Richler took a greater interest in his maternal grandfather, Yudel Rosenberg, an Orthodox rabbi from Poland, and steeped himself in Jewish tradition, albeit on his own terms.

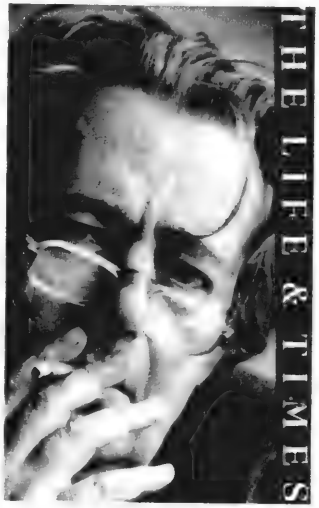
Richler irretrievably distanced himself from his mother, Lily, whose divorce and sexual indiscretion caused him immense distress. Yet Foran is sympathetic to Lily. "She was born into a community that didn't give her a chance to breathe and develop, and she was betrayed by being married off to an unsuitable man in an arranged marriage."

In his view, Richler's finest novels were his last three: Joshua Then and Now, Solomon Gursky Was Here and Barney's Version.

"He got better as he went along. He took risks."

His earliest novels, he noted, were "apprentice works." Before The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz, his breakthrough novel, Richler did not make use of his comedic talents.

To Foran, Richler is one of the handful of "essential" Canadian novelists, in a league with, say, Margaret Atwood and Alice Munro.



"He informed his novels with vitality, passion and humour. He is a singular figure."

Charles Foran will appear at Beth Tzedec Congregation on Nov. 24 at 7:30 p.m. A book review of his biography will soon appear.

Jackie Mason promotes new comedy film

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Mister? You wanna see a new movie?

Legendary Jewish comedian Jackie Mason will be in Toronto on Friday to perform at and then host the Canadian première of his new film, One Angry Man.

Based on the 1957 classic courtroom drama Twelve Angry Men, Mason said it had always been a dream of his to re-enact the film, only as a comedic satire. And revolving around one angry guy... him, starring as himself.

The premise has Mason being called in for jury duty just weeks before he is to begin a new Broadway show run. This upsets him and biases his participation on the jury.

"It aims a lot more for laughs, and I think it's a hilarious comedy," Mason told The CJN in an interview from his New York office last week.

He added that the reaction in focus-group screenings of the film was positive, and he knows because he snuck in to the screenings and hid to gauge reactions.

"I like to see how the audience reacts to the picture. Every time a person confronts you directly, they always tell you how brilliant it was, even if it stinks. It's the same way you can't ask a person, 'How good do I look?' Not too many people answer, 'You don't look so hot,'" Mason quipped.

The movie's plot revolves around the fate of a man who's up on murder charges and the jurists' deliberations about his guilt or innocence.

And there's more than a smattering of one-liners and comedic timing as jury member battles jury member.

"The arguments go back and forth and become hilarious as they fight it out among themselves," he said.

Mason said while he didn't personally script the film, he worked hard on the editing. He added that while there's no specific Jewish angle in the film, "I add a Jewish angle just by showing up."

One Angry Man opens at the Cineplex Odeon Sheppard (4861 Yonge St., 416-590-9271) on Nov. 12.

Mason will also be in town to perform at a Canadian Friends of Hebrew University tribute gala on Monday, Nov. 15, at the Toronto Centre for the Arts, in honour of former Senator Jerry Grafstein's philanthropic contributions to the university's Institute for Medical Research Israel-Canada.

For more information about the gala, call 416-485-8000, ext. 123.

Traveller's experiences coloured by ghosts of the Holocaust

By GREGORY LEVEY
Special to The CJN

On Oct. 14, Rachel Shukert, author of the recently released memoir Everything Is Going to Be Great: An Underfunded and Overexposed European Grand Tour (Harper Perennial), visited Toronto to do a public reading of her book.

Afterward, she sat down with Gregory Levey, author of How to Make Peace in the Middle East in Six Months or Less Without Leaving Your Apartment (Free Press), to discuss writing, Jewish identity, and being a young Jewish author today.

Gregory Levey: Rachel, your book is about your travels and experiences living in Europe shortly after you graduated from university. It seemed to me, particularly in the sections where you write about your time in Vienna, that a lot of your experience was coloured by the lingering ghosts of the Holocaust. Would you say that's true, and why?

Rachel Shukert: Well, like a lot of Jewish kids of my generation, I grew up at a remove from the immediacy of the Holocaust, but I was raised on a lot of literature about it – much of it written for children. I grew up in Omaha, Nebraska, where the Jewish community was very small and relatively insular compared to those in larger cities, like Toronto or Montreal. So I really internalized this sense of difference, at how that could make you a target for persecution, and that grew into this sort of preoccupation with the Holocaust that really haunted me for much of my childhood. I mean, to the point where my mother was a little worried about me. It went away as I got older, but when I went to Europe and was confronted by this kind of collective memory, and in some cases physical evidence, it came back a bit.

GL: What kind of physical evidence?

Gregory Levey

Rachel Shukert

RS: There's a story in the book that takes place in Vienna, where I go to a flea market with this Austrian man I've been dating, and I actually find an old yellow Star of David, like the Nazis made the Jews wear, in this box with a bunch of old papers and things. That's not something that's easy to forget.

GL: But I noticed that you were actually criticized in some quarters for pointing this stuff out. How is that possible?

RS: It's weird, right? You'd think the Holocaust wouldn't exactly be a lightning rod for debate, but in some of the angrier parts of the Internet, there's been some weird stuff. When this part of the book was excerpted, some Internet commenters really went crazy, accusing me of being some kind of Zionist secret agent trying to drum up sympathy for an impending attack on Iran. And I'm like, seriously? I'm just trying to write about my dating life!

GL: Sounds familiar.

RS: Right. You must get a lot of the same thing, writing about the Middle East and your adventures in its more extreme wings.

GL: Absolutely. In my new book, for example, I mention one e-mail I got where the writer tells me that neither I nor my ancestors could possibly be Jewish, because I'd written something satirical about Israel.

RS: Yeah, it's not something people tend to have much of a sense of humour about, which is why your book is so great. It wouldn't be so terrible if both sides of the Middle East conflict would take themselves a little less seriously.

GL: There's something else I've been wanting to ask you, which you touch on a bit in your book. There's so much going around now about how Europe is becoming more anti-Semitic. Do you there's truth in that, or is it overstated?

RS: It's a bit of both, I think. There's certainly a groundswell of anti-Zionist feeling in Europe, some of it based on legitimate critique of Israeli policy, and some of it completely irrational. There's some truth in the idea that for some, anti-Zionism has become a way to be anti-Semitic in public and maintain a veneer of respectability. But on a day-to-day, interpersonal level, I think it's important not to generalize. Being Jewish in Europe is a bit more exceptional than it is in North America. You're a bit more conspicuous. Eventually, someone might say something a little awkward, and you can choose to get really offended, or you can recognize that it's probably not coming from a malicious place. And I think that it's a more powerful tool in eradicating prejudice to give people the benefit of the doubt. Not everyone who asks you a question about being Jewish is a closet Nazi, and when you take offence where it's not meant, it lets the real bigots off the hook. It normalizes them.

CLASSIFIED DIRECTORY

5 HOUSES FOR SALE
10 HOUSES FOR SALE PRIVATE
15 HOUSES FOR RENT
20 HOUSES FOR SALE/RENT
24 HOUSES WANTED TO BUY
25 HOUSES WANTED TO RENT
30 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE
35 CONDOMINIUM FOR RENT
40 CONDOMINIUM FOR SALE/RENT
45 CONDOMINIUM WANTED
50 ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
55 ACCOMMODATION WANTED
60 SHARED ACCOMMODATION AVAILABLE
62 SHARED ACCOMMODATION WANTED
65 ACCOMMODATION/SWAP/EXCHANGE
67 HOUSE SITTERS
70 UNIVERSITY ACCOMMODATION
75 APARTMENT FOR RENT
78 SHORT TERM RENTAL AVAILABLE
80 SHORT TERM RENTAL WANTED
81 APARTMENT TO SUBLET
82 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT
84 ROOM WANTED FOR RENT
85 APARTMENT WANTED
87 PROPERTY MANAGEMENT
105 COTTAGE FOR SALE
110 COTTAGE FOR RENT
115 COTTAGE FOR RENT/SALE
120 COTTAGE WANTED
122 TIME SHARE FOR SALE
123 TIME SHARE FOR RENT
124 ARIZONA PROPERTIES
125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE
130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT
135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
140 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION WANTED
143 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM. AVAIL
145 FLORIDA SHARED ACCOMM. WANTED
147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION
150 FLORIDA TRANSPORTATION
155 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE
160 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR RENT
165 ISRAEL PROPERTY FOR SALE/RENT
170 ISRAEL PROPERTIES WANTED
175 ISRAEL ACCOMMODATION WANTED
178 ISRAEL TRANSPORTATION
180 OUT-OF-TOWN PROPERTIES
185 OUT-OF-COUNTRY PROPERTIES
190 VACATION PROPERTY AVAILABLE
195 VACATION PROPERTIES WANTED
196 VACATION PROPERTIES-EXCH./SHARE
198 SPACE FOR LEASE
199 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY AVAILABLE
200 OFFICE SPACE AVAILABLE
201 OFFICE SPACE WANTED
202 STORAGE SPACE WANTED
203 STORAGE SPACE AVAILABLE
205 LAND/LOTS FOR SALE
210 LAND/LOTS FOR LEASE
220 INVESTMENT PROPERTIES
225 INVESTMENT OPPORTUNITIES
230 BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES
232 BUSINESS FOR SALE
235 BUSINESS WANTED
237 CAREERS/RECRUITMENT
240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES
245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED
246 VOLUNTEERS
247 DAY CARE AVAILABLE
248 DAY CARE WANTED
250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE
255 DOMESTIC HELP WANTED
257 HEALTHCARE AVAILABLE
258 HEALTHCARE WANTED
259 SENIORS
260 BUSINESS PERSONALS
265 PEOPLE SEARCH
270 PERSONALS
273 INTRODUCTION SERVICES
275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED
279 PROFESSIONAL DIRECTORY
280 ANNOUNCEMENTS
290 LOST & FOUND
295 PETS
300 ARTICLES FOR SALE
305 ARTICLES WANTED
313 BOATS
315 CARS
320 CONTENTS SALE
325 GARAGE SALE

SERVICE DIRECTORY

345 ACCOUNTING
350 APPLIANCES
355 AUDIO-VISUAL SALES/REPAIRS
357 AUTOMOTIVE
358 BRIDAL
365 CARPENTRY
368 CARPETS
370 CATERING
372 CHUPPAHS
375 CLEANING/CLEANING SUPPLIES
379 CLOCKS/WATCHES
380 CLOTHING
382 COUNSELLING
385 COMPUTER
386 DANCING
387 DECORATING
390 DRIVING
392 DRY CLEANING/LAUNDRY
394 EDUCATION
395 ELECTRICAL
396 ELECTRONICS
400 ENTERTAINMENT
402 FINANCIAL
404 FITNESS & WEIGHT LOSS
405 FURNITURE
406 GARAGE DOORS
407 GIFTS
410 HEALTH & BEAUTY
412 HEATING/AIR CONDITIONING
415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS
416 HOME INSPECTION
419 INTERNET SERVICE
420 INVITATIONS/PRINTING/CALLIG.
425 JEWELLERY
427 JUDAICA
430 LEASING
431 LANDSCAPING/LAWNCARE
432 LAWYERS
433 LESSONS
434 LIMOUSINE/TAXI
435 LIQUIDATION
436 LOCKSMITH
439 MAKE-UP
440 MISCELLANEOUS
442 MUSICAL SERVICES
443 MORTGAGES
445 MOVING
449 PEST CONTROL
450 PAINTING/WALLPAPERING
452 PARTY SERVICES
455 PHOTOGRAPHY/VIDEO
460 PLUMBING
465 PROFESSIONAL SERVICES
470 RENOVATIONS
472 RETIREMENT HOMES
475 ROOFING
478 SATELITE & EQUIPMENT
480 SECURITY SYSTEMS
481 SEWING
485 SNOW REMOVAL
490 TABLE COVERING
493 TAILORING/ALTERATIONS
495 TILING
496 TRAINING
498 TRAVEL & TOURISM
500 TUTORING
510 UPHOLSTERY
512 WAITERING SERVICES
515 WATERPROOFING
520 WINDOW SERVICES
550 WORKSHOPS

REAL ESTATE Section

5 HOUSES FOR SALE

"WE OPEN DOORS FOR YOU"

DAVID EICHORN REALTY LIMITED BROKERAGE

416-787-1712

www.eichornrealty.com • david@eichornrealty.com

GREAT TIME TO LIST!
Call today for a free evaluation of your property.

STRATHALLAN WOOD
Spacious custom built 4+1 bdrm family home in prestigious Lytton Park enclave. 4 baths, hrdwd flrs, combined lr/dr, gourmet kitchen with w/o to deck. Superior quality finishes thruout, ideal for entertaining! $1,149,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

* * *

BATHURST / SHELBORNE — BRING AN OFFER!
Exquisite brand new custom home, 3600+ sq ft. Attention to detail thruout. 5+1 bdrms, 6 baths, hrdwd flrs on 2 levels, sep entry to in-law suite. Fab design, ideal for entertaining & family use. A bright, spacious gem @ $1,299,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

ARMOUR HEIGHTS ESTATE SALE — CLASSIC 3 BDRM
Attn builders & renovators! 2 storey home on 41 x 130 ft lot in desirable location close to many newly renovated homes, TTC, shops, schools. $649,000. Call Moshe Eichorn, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

* * *

2 NEPTUNE CONDO CORNER UNIT — NEW PRICE!
The ideal home for seniors. Eligible buyer must be 65+. Rare, bright & spacious 2 bdrm + den, 2 full baths, large lr/dr combo. Sw exposure. 24-hr security, amenities incl rooftop garden, library, exercise room, party room. Lowest priced 2 bdrm + den in building @ $329,000 — ACT NOW! Call Richard Cash, Sales Rep (416) 787-1712.

*BROKER OF RECORD

SOLD

PRIMROSE CONDO
Bright, spacious corner unit. Rare 1,272 sq ft, magnificent South-East view, fabulous design, combined lr/dr ideal for entertaining. Both bedrooms w/o to generous balcony, w/o from kitchen to solarium. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

2 COVINGTON CONDO
Highly sought after corner unit! Bright & spacious 2 bdrm, 2 baths, approx. 1150 sf, se exposure, upgraded finishes throughout. 2 parking spots, luxurious lobby, fantastic amenities. Close to Lawrence Plaza, TTC. $399,000. Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

* * *

BATHURST / LAWRENCE
3 + 1 bdrm bungalow on generous 47 x 120 ft lot in desirable location surrounded by million $ homes. Live in now, build later — an ideal spot for your dream home. PRICED FOR IMMEDIATE SALE AT $549,000 — ACT NOW! Call David Eichorn* (416) 787-1712.

New Listing
29 Esther Crescent $549,000
Open House Sun 2-4.
Beautiful 3 bdrm. 4 bath. home plus fam. rm. with fireplace. Updated eat-in kit, walk out to large yard.
Carol Lou Spiegel, Sales Representative
Harvey Kalles Real Estate Ltd, Brokerage
416 441-2888 X 316

SEIDMAN REAL ESTATE LIMITED BROKERAGE
416-633-7373

BATHURST/CENTRE
3 bdr, 2-storey, 2 bth, fam rm, lrge kit, w/o to SOLD fin lwr lvl, dble gar, quiet Cr. Great buy!

BATHURST/SHEPPARD
3 bdr, 2 bth, liv & din comb, fin bsmt, dble drive, gar. Many extras!

416-633-7373

FOR SALE BY OWNER
At reduced price, Bathurst - Lawrence Area

5+1 bedrooms, 5 baths, 3000 sq. ft. executive home on beautifully landscaped 41' x 124' lot, close to shuls, schools, kosher stores. Custom upgrades throughout, incl. hardwood floors, granite counters, crown mouldings, and marble fireplace.

By appt. 416-781-4115
No Agents Please

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING
to place an ad call
Monday to Thursday
(CLASSIFIED DEPT. CLOSED FRIDAYS)
416-391-1836 (ask for classified advertising)
Classified Deadlines:
Wednesday at 4:00 p.m.
8 days prior to issue date.*
*PLEASE NOTE: On a week before a statutory or Jewish holiday, the deadline will be earlier. Please call for exact times.
All Classified ads require payment before deadline
Th... Ple... before your ad is repeated ...tive

15 HOUSES FOR RENT

Rutherford/Duff., 1 yr. new beautif. lrge. semi, almost 2,000', 4 bdr., 3 bth., cac., cvac., close to Go train, shops, schools. Exc. area. $1850/mo. Call 416-435-4535.

35 CONDOMINIUMS FOR RENT

Central North York, furn. 1 bdr. + den, balc., a/c + appls., new bldg., TTC to subway in front of bldg., immed. Call 416-616-5195.

30 CONDOMINIUMS FOR SALE

IN THE HEART OF BATHURST/STEELES
Rare opportunity to buy 2 bdrm., fully furn. penthouse. 1,650 sq. ft., hrdwd. flrs. throughout, pkg. and locker, walking distance to banks, supermarket & restaurants. $549,000. Please send me a quote.
ELEONORA MICHAILOV
Right At Home Realty Inc., Brokerage
Office : 416 391-3232 Cell : 416 450-8114
Email: sunlightelana@yahoo.ca

40 CONDO FOR SALE/RENT

Bath./Glencairn, lease/own-1 bdr. + den,1.5 bth., wshr/dryer, 1,010 sq. ft., hrdwd. flrs., undrgnd. pkg., mo. - mo., transit at door. View on: www.mls.ca at C1959642. $1699. + hydro. Call Keith 416-995-8209.

45 CONDO WANTED

Looking to rent/buy condo in Jewish area, not facing traffic, approx. 1200 sf, 2 bdrm., reno'd if in older bldg. Or I would consider sharing your home. Needed asap! 416-224-8406 leave message.

60 SHARED ACCOM. AVAILABLE

Looking for reliable, clean, organized roommate for 1 yr. lease. Non-smkr. Preferably young professional. Spac. room (master bedroom w/ensuite) on high floor of lux. condo. Access to gym & pool, laundry in suite, untils. incl. (not cable/internet). Right next to the 401 & TTC subway station. Across the street from grocery store & other amens. Avail. mid - February 2011. $950/month. h_goodman@rogers.com

125 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR SALE

CENTURY VILLAGE DEERFIELD BEACH, FL

"Our prices start at $18,000 up to $94,000"
Close to plaza, Shopping Centers, Blue Wave Award-Winning Beach
Multi-Facility Club House
Units located in: Berkshire, Grantham, Harwood, Keswick, Newport, Oakridge, Upminster, Westbury
MARLENE WEISS & PAT O'NEIL - Lic. Realtors
DUBMAN REAL ESTATE
954-401-0260 - paodbfla@aol.com

DELRAY/BOCA
Addison Reserve
An Award Winning Country Club w/ Magnificent Homes from $400's to $4 mil.
CALL: Prudential Florida's On-Site Realtors Cherie & Larry Gross 561-702-7828 Or Visit Us @ HomesBuytheGross.com

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Century Village Deerfield. Most gorgeous renovated unit in the village. Two bedrooms, 2 bathrooms. Furnished. 514-287-1256.

150 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Inverary - 2 bed., 2 bth. on golf course. Avail. Jan. - Apr. 2011. Call 416-733-0411 extn. 23.

Boynton Beach. Gated, adult comm., 2 bed., 2 bth., solarium, fully furn'd., avail. for season. 647-407-2987,416-785-8188 aaronlang@aaronlang.ca

Aventura/Waterways. Intracoastal condo, designer's own, 2 bed., full svc. bldg., 2 pools, avail. immed. Call 212-585-0441.

Boca Raton. Spacious sunny 3 bedrooms, 2.5 bathrooms. 4 to 6 months. Available Jan. 3, 2011. Ocean clubhouse/new gym. $4,500 negotiable. Mary Ann 1-561-866-8544.

Delray Beach, mod., 2 bdr., 2 bth., 1 km to bch., trendy Atlantic Ave. Available Dec. - Apr. $2300./mo. Call 416-540-3176.

100 Arlen House East, 1 bdrm. convertible. 2nd floor. 3 mos. min. U.S.$1500/mo 416-636-6470.

Hallandale Beach Club. 3 bed., 3 bath. Brand new condo, tastefully furnished. 40th floor with spectacular views. gym and self parking. Kosher Kitchen. Minimum 4 months. $4800 US monthly. 514-229-7429.

Beach condo in Miami area, ocean view, 2 bed., 2 bath., 1730 sq. ft. available Nov - Mar. Address: Sands Point, 16711 Collins Ave. 20th floor in Sunny Isles Beach, 33160. $3300/mo. 847-707-2353. ashvedc@yahoo.com

Beautiful Palm Beach Ocean Front. Two bedrooms, two bathrooms. 2 to 4 months. $3,000 monthly. 514-341-6732; 514-944-8160.

Hollybrook, Pembroke Pines, 2 bdr., 2 bth. condo, 1st flr., fully renov., new appls., Jan. - Mar. (3 months). Call 905-881-6677.

Arlen House East, 1 bed., 1.5 bth., parking, overlooking ocean, CLEAN. 905-886-0347 Lv. msg.

North Miami Beach - Arlen House. Two bedrooms, 2 bathrooms. Furnished. December - March $2300 monthly. 514-488-7724.

Delray - KP, 2/2, 55+, bright, golf view, breezy, all new, 4 mo. min,. $1450/mo. Call 561-272-1859.

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

36-Holes of Championship Golf, 21-Competitive Har-Tru Tennis Courts & the Florida Sunshine You'll Love...
...An elegant atmosphere boasting an unparalleled lifestyle!

- Prime Delray Beach, Florida Location
- State-Of-The-Art Fitness Center
- Magnificent Clubhouse & Fine Dining
- 8-Sparkling Swimming Pools
- 24-Hour Gated & Manned Security
- Annual/Seasonal Rentals & Sales

Gleneagles is centrally located less than 30-minutes from the West Palm Beach and Ft. Lauderdale International Airports. All ages are welcome. Homes and condominiums offered from the low $100,000's to over $500,000 USD.

www.GleneaglesFlorida.com • Tel: 561.819.5397

Ben G. Schachter,
Licensed Real Estate Broker

75 APARTMENTS FOR RENT

Bigger Than the Average Condo!
3638 Bathurst, "The Empress House"
LARGE 2 bdrm SPECIAL! Central a.c. Hardwood. New Appliances. Ceramic [illegible] New Kitchens. Quiet Professional Type Building. Secure Entrance System. FREE Membership to the Empress House Club: Pool, Sauna, Exercise, Laundry on Site, Underground Parking 416-931-2206 • 416-781-4672 • 416-663-8662

BATHURST-SHEPPARD
ELEGANT TWIN BLDS.
Very lrg. 1, 2, 3 Bedrooms. 2 & 3 Bdrms. w/2 balconies and 2 baths.
Ample closets plus cedar. Roof laundry, pool, ravine setting.
6 Apts. per flr.
canyon@greenwingm.com
416-631-0277, 416-631-0328

130 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT

Luxurious 3 bedroom 3 bath townhouse Pool, Golf, PGA National, Palm Beach Gardens Available Dec.-Apr.
514-276-9597

82 ROOM AVAILABLE FOR RENT

For male in condo-safe Bath./Steeles/Shepp., shared kit., liv. rm. & den, incl. util.,cable, indry. & priv. wshrm. Near TTC, No smking./ pets. Call 416-522-8147.

124 ARIZONA PROPERTIES

PHOENIX
Sensational 2BD/2BA patio home located in North Central. $199,750.
Neil Schneider
Prudential Arizona Properties
602-571-4586, NeilAZ@cox.net
www.OpeningAZDoors.com

IT'S 78 & SUNNY IN ARIZONA
Now is a great time to buy! Prices and Rates are Low! Vacation, Investment, Relo
PENNY FIELD, Broker
480-282-0964
penny@pennyfield.net
HomeSmart Real Estate
Phoenix, Arizona

BOCA RATON, FL
Century Village West
Seasonal/Annual Rental
End Unit Sunny Garden Condo 2 Bedroom 1.5 Upgraded Baths Newly Painted. Fully Furnished Walking Distance to Synagogues, Near Pool/Buses Avail Dec 1st.
Includes Amenities
Call Owner: 301-758-7750

Boca Raton, Intercoastal. Renovated. Beautifully furnished. Two bedrooms, 2 bathrooms. Great views, large terrace, security, pool, tennis, $2,700 monthly inclusive. 514-287-1256.

Miami Beach. Oceanfront view. Nicely furnished. One bedroom, 1 1/2 bathrooms. 3 months $1700 monthly 4 months $1600 monthly. 1-918-361-3222.

Hallandale condo. 3 1/2 sleeps 4, fully furnished, 2 bathrooms, KOSHER KITCHEN, overlooking Intercoastal, min. 3 months: Barbara, 514-683-7683.

147 FLORIDA ACCOMMODATION

Miami Beach - New spacious, lux., furn'd. studio, 1 bed. & 2 bed apts. w/balcs. avail. at oceanfront Crown, 40th & Collins. Avail. daily, wkly., mnthly. Daily hskpg., outdr. pool, gym, valet pkng. incl. 877-424-7848, stay@churchillsuites.com, www.churchillSuites.com

Sunny Isles - Lux. spacious, furn'd. 1 bed., 2 bed. & 3 bed. apts. w/ balcs. & intracoastal views. 2 bl. from beach. Avail. daily, wkly., mnthly. Daily hskpg., outdr. pool, gym, marina. Call 877-424-7848, iyc@churchillsuites.com, www.churchillSuites.com

135 FLORIDA PROPERTY FOR RENT/SALE

Canadian realtor. Florida sun.
The perfect combination to find your next property to rent or buy.

ELIE KOFFMAN

MONTREAL
C: 514.518.3543
O: 514.937.1767

FLORIDA
C: 305.613.4[illegible]
O: 30[illegible]

LONDONO REALTY GROUP, INC.

ECP Equity for Life

199 COMMERCIAL PROPERTY AVALABLE

FOR SALE 3 TWO STORY NEWLY RENOVATED COMMERCIAL TORONTO PROPERTIES, ALL WITH PARKING

344 WILSON AVE PART OF BUSY STRIP PLAZA FULLY LEASED 8.5 CAP ASKING $788K for 2500 sf	846 SHEPPARD AVE W AT WILMINGTON VACANT PERFECT FOR OWNER/USER ASKING $788K for 1700 sf	1048 EGLINTON AVE W FOREST HILL NEAR ALLEN ASKING $1.39M for 2400 sf NET LEASES $100K

VISIT THESE AND OTHER LISTINGS AT ROBERTESCOE.COM
416 968 3434 X 114 SALES REPRESENTATIVE
CITY COMMERCIAL REALTY GROUP LTD. #207, 1240 BAY ST TORONTO M5R 2A7

240 EMPLOYMENT OPPORTUNITIES

EXECUTIVE ASSISTANT POSITION

Jewish Charitable Non-Profit requires an Executive Assistant - duties include program development & admin., assistant to Rabbi, corporate, info. mngmnt., office admin. & project support. 4+ years admin. & related experience. Excellent computer skills, familiar with Jewish law & customs. Covering letter should detail why you would be an asset to our organization as well as salary expectations. Include at least 2 letters of reference with resume. Send to executive.assistant18@gmail.com

245 EMPLOYMENT WANTED

Accountant/Bookkeeper seeks P/T position. Experienced with Quick Books, I.O.A, Excel & Word. Call Gerry at 416-733-8013.

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Exper. caregiver for elderly. Full or part-time or long-term. Driver's lic. Avail. to travel. 416-258-0742.

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Nanny, Housekeeper, elderly care, NO fee to employer, Filipino from Israel, Singapore & Hong Kong & from the islands. Live in/out, screening guar. Call 416-733-3915.

Caregivers/Nannies/Housekeepers Filipino, Local & Europe. Live in/ live out. 416-932-3042.

250 DOMESTIC HELP AVAILABLE

Shiny cleaning for houses, apts. & condos., 15 yrs. exper., refs. Call 416-820-5925 (leave msg.).

Exper. Israeli lady looking for job to take care of elderly or disabled. Refs. 416-509-1333.

If you require live-out help for a senior residing in the Bathurst - Steeles - Lawrence & Yonge - Sheppard corridors with meal prep., shopping & lt. housekeeping or require a companion for a resident in a retirement or long-term facility, call Gail 416-665-3815. References available.

Lady seeks work in homes, apts., offices, days only , refs., exper. 416-827-1059.

259 SENIORS

Reliable, exper. lady, companion for seniors. Own car. Avail. for errands, dr's./ hospital appts., etc. 905-886-1700.

275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED

Vivacious, active, 59, loyal female, seeking 50+ sincere, active guy. Write to CJN Box #5254.

Marriage-Minded Mench Wanted! Let's spoil each other. Pretty, witty TO lady, 60, retired, kind, bright & sensitive, loves cooking, fishing, theatre. Seeks kind, non-smkng., independent TO man, financially secure (retiree/widower welcome), 55+. Own home/car. Please call 416-224-8406.

2 brothers, handsome & estab., 50'ish, looking to date 2 sisters or friends, 35-45 for fun & friendship. CJN Box # 5308.

I am a secular (but open to all) mother of a 23 yr. old son with mild to moderate development disabilities who functions adequately in everyday living. He is shy, kind & gentle. Seeking company of young woman of similar age for our son to go on outings, watch TV, go to the movies. If you have a daughter with similar challenges, let's talk. Everyone deserves love & companionship. Call Linda @ 416-203-1038.

275 PERSONAL COMPANIONS WANTED

Young looking, traditional woman, effervescent, sociable, seeking 60-70 yr. old male, non-smkr., reasonably fit, honest, sincere, mensch, good sense of humour, interested in theatre, movies, travel & concerts. CJN Box #5307.

Soft spoken Cdn. Jewish lady, in her early 70's, nice looking, seeks fine gentleman to share friendship & companionship & some nice moments. Living in north end of city. Able to drive day & night. CJN Box #5301.

I am an attr., fit, 52 yr. old male, who is understanding, fun loving & wants to share life with a candid, fresh, positive woman like you! Call 647-456-1584/416-229-2685.

300 ARTICLES FOR SALE

Sterling silver Shabbat candle sticks. 12", 486 grms. $550 firm. No Shabbat calls. 647-897-0507.

305 ARTICLES WANTED

Seeking Holocaust/Shoah, Founding of Israel, Ghetto, Camp, Pogrom documents, letters & papers for historical preservation. Ben. Discretion assured. 416-890-9644.

Ben Buys Book Collections, manuscripts, diaries, letters, documents & militaria. 416-890-9644.

Spice of Life

Kosher laws have not changed

Continued from page 42

Kosher laws haven't changed, Rabbi Hecht says. What they ate was 100 per cent kosher. But "our grandparents were living in a different world. There were not as many kosher products on the market, and there were a lot of issues. Rabbis very much had to apply more lenient viewpoints.

"Seventy-five years ago, when there was one product on the market, the kashrut agency [might have said,] 'we'll apply this leniency, because without [this product], people who want to keep kosher will have a really difficult time.'"

The COR's communal kashrut standard has had the benefit of unifying our community, Rabbi Hecht says, in a way that's rarely seen in areas with multiple kashrut organizations.

On the other hand, multiple organizations usually serve different populations. "Certain hashgachahs [kosher agencies] apply leniencies because, through their leniencies, they're able to get certain products to be kosher and therefore open up some standard of kashrut for people who may not otherwise keep kosher."

Rabbi Hecht disagrees with the language used in some circles of "not trusting" a particular organization or kosher symbol. "Those symbols are applying certain standards of Jewish law; they are reaching out to a certain community. It's valid to say, 'I personally don't want to rely upon those leniencies,' but not to use deprecating or suspicious language. The key is simply understanding that organization's mandate and the population it serves.

"If people were more aware of how Jewish law worked, then some people might say, 'We don't agree with COR's conclusions,' but then they'd be able to… create an intelligent debate, based upon real issues."

For instance, some observant Jews are "very angry" over standards requiring a lightbox and magnifying glass to search for insects (which are only forbidden if they're visible to the naked eye), saying these new devices "take away from the integrity of the halachic system."

Proponents of the tools, however, say the insects are definitely visible to the naked eye: the lightbox and magnifier simply clarify whether the specks are dirt or insects.

"It's important for people to know the real way the decisions are made. If people don't understand how Jewish law really works, it's very hard to have intelligent debate."

SERVICE DIRECTORY Guide

370 CATERING

Dairy Treats Restaurant & Catering
Brit Milah • Bar/Bat Mitzvahs
Home or Office • Shiva Meals • Corporate Accounts
3522 Bathurst St. (S. of Wilson) 416-787-0309
www.dairytreats.com

REGINA'S CATERING & FINE FOODS
A Family Tradition for 48 Years
• BRIT MILAH & NAMINGS
• SIMCHAS
• SHIVA MEALS
• SHABBOS DINNERS
844 Sheppard Ave. W.
(at Wilmington)
www.reginasfinefoods.com
416-636-1044

GLATT
Take-out & Catering
Shiva Meals
Pesach Specials
Simchas COR
Shabbat Dinners
905 - 597 - 7571

395 ELECTRICAL

All kinds of electrical jobs. For great service call Serge, 416-834-4312. Licensed.

405 FURNITURE

Marcantonio Furniture Repair Specializing in touchups. Restoration & general repairs done on premises. 416-654-0518.

Earl Bales Sr. Woodworkers. Caning, chair repairs, regluing, custom, reas. 416-630-6487.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS

Hardwood Floor sanding, staining, refinishing, new floors, installation & repairs. Jules - 416-726-5338.

General Contractors for all your renovations. Very experienced. Great service. Reasonable rates. SB Construction. 416-834-4312.

HANDYMENCH. SHOWER REPAIRS. Bath. & Kit. renov., cabinet reface, paint/tile. water damage. Call 416-826-0574.

Best Prices!! Best Quality!! Best Service!!! Home Improvements & painting. Licensed & Bonded Call Shlomo 416-804-1706.

415 HOME IMPROVEMENTS

Odd jobs, small repairs, painting, etc. Please call Fred at 416-420-8731.

HANDYMAN. Plumbing, electrical, carpentry, plastering, ceramics, locks. Ephram, 416-630-3047.

Master Quality Home Improvement and Renovation. Repairing, painting-interior/exterior, flooring. 416-450-3889, 416-602-1755.

BATHURST CONCRETE HOME IMPROVEMENTS INC.
Concrete stairs *Garage floors *Sidewalks *Walkways *Leaking basements, repair bricks, flagstone & tuckpointing. 30 yrs. experience, lic. joe 416-451-8056

A-1 Handyman. Expert kitchen repairs and refacing. New kitchens and countertops, plumbing and electrical. For free estimate call 647-887-5075.

445 MOVING

GEMINI MOVERS & STORAGE LTD.
Since 1972
• Homes • Apartments • Offices
• Professional Piano Movers
Tel: 416-782-8736
Call until 11 p.m.
Fax: 416-240-9133
Top quality service is mandatory!

445 MOVING

G&M Moving and Storage. Apts., homes, offices. Short notice. Large or small. We carry supplies. 905-738-4030.

srmmovers2009@hotmail.com A-1 Short Notice. Insured. Home, apt, office, bus. 416-747-7082.

450 PAINTING/ WALLPAPER

Prof. painting/paper-hanging 416-667-9869 or 905-762-1657 Jacob. No Shabbos calls.

Painting, res., commercial, interior/exterior. Ceramic Tile & Drywall. Reasonable. FREE ESTIMATES. PAINT HOUSE ENT. 416-459-1383.

Before signing any contract, make sure your contractor is appropriately licensed with the Metropolitan Licensing Commission 416-392-3000

470 RENOVATIONS

KRAV RENOVATIONS. General renovations - big or small. Best quality work and reliable service. 416-508-6654.

460 PLUMBING

PLUMBER ON CALL!
Drain, Plumbing, Heating, A/C
Call TOM the Plumber
647-654-8099

500 TUTORING

THE TUTORSHIP ADVANTAGE Math, Chemistry, Physics, Biology, English, French, Essay Writing. 416-386-1595 www.tutorship.ca

English Tutor/Performance Coach (Elementary through High School). Specializes in helping boys prepare for Bar Mitzvah with dynamic lessons that ensure a well-written speech, voice projection, confident delivery & communication skills that will last a lifetime. For more information please call Harlen at 416-787-4575.

510 UPHOLSTERY

Bernie the upholsterer has all fabrics 1/2 price. Dining room seats $25/ea. 416-931-2660.

Replying to an ad with a CJN Box Number?
Address your mail to:
The Canadian Jewish News
1500 Don Mills Rd.
Suite 205
North York, Ont.
M3B 3K4
Don't forget to put the Box Number on your envelope.
CJN Box #'s are valid for 30 days.

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES 905-886-5610 Call ext. 369
ISRAEL FALL/WINTER
FROM $686* + tax
*specific dates apply

Sports & Leisure

If you're reading this
ADVERTISING WORKS!
To book your ad in this spot call
416-391-1836

Mifalot brings together youth through soccer

By CORY SCOTT STERLING
Special to The CJN

TEL AVIV — In the steaming temperatures of a September afternoon in Tel Aviv, I stepped off the bus and quickly found my destination: Hapoel Tel Aviv FC's headquarters.

The green grass of the soccer fields was a foreign sight to my eyes, even after having lived in Israel for a month. It was the day before Rosh Hashanah 5770 (2009) and I was about to meet my new co-workers at Mifalot, an organization that supports development through sport, for a New Years l'chaim.

As I lifted my cup of wine and participated in a prayer for a sweet year, I looked around the smiling faces in the room and immediately knew that I had found the right place.

Mifalot was founded in 1997 by the then-owners of the Hapoel Tel Aviv soccer team with a mission to provide all young people with opportunities to learn, grow, excel and be active members of their community and the world. Mifalot's core business is education and youth development through soccer.

I had originally sought out an organization such as Mifalot after growing frustrated and exhausted with the bombardment of media negativity concerning Israel. I decided it was time to dedicate a chapter of my life to living in Israel and focusing on making a positive impact instead of brooding on the negatives. Once I learned about the variety of programs Mifalot organizes, I decided to get involved.

The work I was able to do with Mifalot varied greatly throughout the nine months I spent living in Israel. At first, I was placed with two different Mifalot "teams" and helped coach their weekly classes. One class put me with a group of Sudanese children who had recently fled their perilous homeland and had been accepted by Israel.

In the other class, I was helping a group of children who all had different challenges ranging from autism to Asperger's syndrome to ADHD. All the children were very sweet and appreciative of the free programs that Mifalot facilitated and organized for them.

Cory Scott Sterling poses with some of the Sudanese kids he met while working in Israel.

It didn't take too long before I was able to connect my passion for travelling with my contribution at Mifalot. My job description quickly changed from static to mobile, as I was assigned to visit Mifalot classes across the country and blog about my experiences. Soon, I was boarding Egged buses heading in every direction, from the Negev to the north, learning about all of Mifalot's different programs, meeting with their staff and learning more about the work the organization does.

In every single instance, I was moved. Whether it was the warmth and friendliness showed by the coaches, the joy on the children's faces or the endless falafel lunches, each trip forged a new special memory. Slowly, I was starting to realize just how substantial an impact Mifalot's work was making on thousands of children across every inch of Israel.

At the moment, there are more than 20,000 children active in Mifalot programs throughout the Middle East. Their programs focus on the promotion of coexistence and friendship between Israelis, Palestinians and Jordanians, the inclusion of new immigrants into Israeli society, teaching life skills to youth with special needs and providing assistance and social integration to at-risk or disadvantaged youth.

Undoubtedly, I was most intrigued and impressed by Mifalot's programs that brought Israeli and Palestinian children together through soccer.

One day, I was brought along to the small village of Tuena in the Palestinian territories, where a think-tank involving Israeli and Palestinian teachers and a special EU envoy was located. The afternoon was a parade of languages – a comment would be made in Hebrew, then translated into Arabic and explained in English. At the end of afternoon, we cheerfully broke bread and exchanged contact information to keep in touch. We became friends that day, which fills me with an optimism to believe that a road for peace will always exist, as much as we choose to embrace it.

It seems that Mifalot's incredible programs have started to gain the international exposure and attention they so rightly deserve. In this past year, they have won two prestigious awards – the European Club Associations Best Social and Community Project 2010 and Beyond Sport 2010 Team of the Year given to Hapoel Tel Aviv. These accolades demonstrate that Mifalot is a global and industry leader in the sport for development field, which is a great boost to Israel's fragile public image.

I will always be grateful and deeply indebted to Mifalot for letting me contribute to their amazing work. The best part of the entire experience was working with such incredibly wise and welcoming people whom I was able to learn so much from and I still think of each and every day.

You can learn more about Mifalot from its website (www.mifalot.co.il/mifalot/language/english).

Cory Scott Sterling graduated from the University of San Francisco with a degree in sports management.

The Canadian Jewish news
CONGRATULATIONS
In honour of your marriage, The Canadian Jewish News is pleased to present you with a 6 month subscription.
Please fill in the requested information and fax to (905) 946-1679 or mail to P.O. Box 819 STN Main, Markham, Ontario, L3P 8A2
Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Province _____ Postal Code _____
Phone number _____
Email _____
Date of wedding _____
Location of wedding _____
CANADIAN DELIVERY ONLY
Subscription will begin two weeks after receipt of information.
If you wish, please enclose a photo - we'd be honoured to publish it in an upcoming issue.

Media hypes health-care crisis

By MICHAEL GORDON

The Senior Side of Life

Newspapers often print headlines such as this one in the January 2010 Winnipeg Free Press: "Baby-boomer dementia a rising national crisis, study says," or this one from a report in a recent Toronto Dominion Bank economic-position paper: "Make rich seniors pay for drugs, health-care report says."

You get a sense from such articles that Ontario and the rest of western civilization awaiting a veritable "tsunami" of seniors coming over the hills in their wheelchairs and walkers, ready to take over the finances of society and selfishly bankrupt them by illness and disability.

To counteract this vision, Moses Znaimer, the president of the Canadian Association of Retired Persons, wrote a refreshing article for the May 30 edition of the Toronto Star titled "Demographic tsunami? Let's dance!"

Znaimer makes cogent arguments that seem to have been ignored by those who predict doom and gloom for western countries because of their aging populations. It is his positive view that I believe should be the focus of those who are entering their zoomer/boomer period and those who are already in their senior years. One of the many important points made in the article is that current zoomers and those in the younger cohort have a distinctly different view of lifestyle and health promotion than those who are currently more senior.

It is bizarre that with all the effort that's going into encouraging people to eat well and exercise, with the observed effect of their living longer and being healthier and less disabled and dependent in their senior years, seniors are being vilified for being the cause of an upcoming national financial health-care crisis. Maybe we should stop exhorting everyone to exercise and eat smartly, and encourage them to take up smoking again, with the hope that if they do everything possible to counteract good and active living, they might die before they are eligible for drug-benefit programs. What a money saver!

What is easily forgotten is that one of the great miracles of modern medicine, which builds on healthier lifestyles, is the use of medications for conditions that previously led to severe disability, medical dependency and premature death. We now can treat such conditions as high blood pressure, heart disease and arthritis, to name a few, turning them into chronic diseases that can be managed so that individuals with these conditions can continue to function well and lead productive lives.

It is easy to forget the fantastic contributions that seniors make to our society, not only in terms of the richness they bring to families, but also their legacies, stories and observations and commentaries. They bring much to contemporary life, and their perspective should go into important societal decisions.

Can anyone imagine a world devoid of loving grandparents in the lives of grandchildren, or seniors acting in the volunteer roles that they increasingly undertake late into their mature years? It is also forgotten that seniors spend money, contributing financially to society, as does everyone else.

Meanwhile, until all the pundits figure out what the solutions are to the financial implications of the international mortgage crises, failed banks and other financial disasters, let the world's seniors prosper and continue to contribute to their families and societies, and let us stop blaming them. Instead, let's honour them for what they give us.

Dr. Michael Gordon is medical program director of palliative care at Baycrest and co-author with Bart Mindszenthy of Parenting Your Parents (Dundurn Press). His latest book, Moments that Matter: Cases in Ethical Eldercare, follows his previous book, Brooklyn Beginnings: A Geriatrician's Odyssey. All can be researched at his website: http://www.drmichaelgordon.com.

MALAYSIAN LATKES

1/2 c chopped peanuts
1/4 c chopped fresh flat-leaf parsley
1/4 c finely chopped red pepper
2 tsp grated fresh ginger
1 1/2-2 tsp salt
1 tsp curry powder
3 eggs
2 lg baking potatoes, peeled, cut into wedges
1 medium onion coarsely chopped
1/4 c flour
Vegetable oil for frying

Combine nuts, parsley, red pepper, ginger, salt, curry powder & eggs in large bowl. Shred potatoes & onions in food processor with shredding disk. Drain well in paper towels squeezing to release as much liquid as possible. Add potatoes & onions to egg mixture; combine well. Stir in flour. In large skillet, heat enough oil to cover bottom of pan on medium-high heat. When oil is quite hot, add scant 1/4 c batter per latke without crowding; flatten with fork. Cook on 1 side until crisp & brown; turn over and repeat. Remove patties to paper towels to drain.

CAPLAN'S
experience
the Caplan's difference
1111 Weston Road (just south of Eglinton)
416-767-1655 • caplans.ca
Caplan's parking lot directly across from the store
A Family Business for over 60 Years

How to eat healthy when travelling

About Nutrition
By LISA WEINBERG

Most people find it a struggle to maintain their diet and good eating habits when they are away. Many report gaining weight – a common but avoidable problem.

Whether you are on a 24-hour business trip, a weekend away, a family vacation or spending the winter in a warm destination, you can avoid gaining weight.

The first thing to keep in mind is that when eating out frequently, or for all meals, you must watch three things: your choices, the portions and the hidden fat and calories. For example, you order hot oatmeal for breakfast, a healthy choice, rather than a greasy three-egg cheese omelette with home fries and buttered toast. But how much oatmeal have they served you? Remove some and eat a sensible portion.

When ordering, ask for food to be prepared the way you want it – that omelette could be ordered with veggies instead of cheese, egg whites only, spray in the pan instead of butter and dry whole wheat toast. Or order poached eggs – no added fat possible there – with dry toast and jam.

When eating so many meals out, you can't afford to order the food you love every time. You often have to order the healthy choice, not the tempting one.

Watch calories from beverages: avoid pop and juice, and control alcohol consumption. Avoid the bread basket and limit dessert frequency and portion – share!

If you are staying someplace where you have access to a kitchen, plan to prepare some meals yourself. Make fruit and yogurt or cottage cheese or cereal for breakfast, salads or lean sandwiches at lunch and fruit for snacks.

In airports, look for yogurt parfaits, turkey sandwiches, fruit, salads with grilled chicken, skim milk lattes or nuts, and lots of water for hydration.

Most importantly, plan ahead! And be active – take walks, swim, play tennis, golf without a cart, bike, run. The extra calories you burn can help offset the extra calories you may be eating. Bon voyage!

Lisa Weinberg is a registered dietitian/nutritionist in Toronto, in private practice and at the Genesis Professional Group. You can also follow Weinberg at http://www.lisaweinberg.ca. If you have any nutrition questions, please send them to The CJN.

Thank you to all good soldiers

By AVRUM ROSENSWEIG

URBAN WRITER

Emma Gold rushed past the shoppers in the long lineups in the grocery store and asked people in one of the lines if they would let her go to the front. Shabbat was early, and she was hoping her daughter would call before sunset.

It had been three weeks since she had communicated with her daughter, Leah, as Leah's field commander had banned e-mails, knowing they could be intercepted by the enemy.

The world was at war once again. There was word on the street that enemy troops were planning to attack Toronto, Halifax and Vancouver to secure our water supplies.

Jewish boys and girls had been inducted into the Canadian Armed Forces, and after four years of fighting, thousands had perished. There was an awful feeling in the world, one of gloomy darkness, as if that finger from hell was on all of us.

Emma longed to hold her daughter in her arms, to kiss her and tell her over and over she loved her. She and her husband would get out of bed, often at 3 a.m., to watch their daughter's bat mitzvah video. It seemed like yesterday that she had read the Torah on Beth Tzedec Congregation's bimah.

At night, Emma cried, thinking about her only daughter's graduation from Community High only three years before, and the grace she displayed while accepting her awards.

She was their little girl, and it was unfathomable that she was a medic on the front lines. Emma looked at pictures of her little girl at Kibbutz Sh'alavim and shuddered, knowing Israel was in tatters and fending off more enemy battalions than it could handle.

"Thank God Israel exists," she thought. "So many Jews saved."

Shabbat was approaching. The table was set, and all the children were in white. Since Leah had gone to join the war effort, the family had started keeping Shabbat. It gave them peace and a sense that God was in the world, as many felt He was when the Jews were in concentration camps and the world was under attack.

She approached the table, her head was covered, and she stared at the candles. Slowly, she struck a match and extended her arm to light the candle. She waved her hands to invite Shabbat in and covered her eyes. Silently, she said to God, "God please end World War III. I cannot bear the suffering of the innocent and pledge to become a better Jew should you answer my prayers. Thank you for our blessings and bring Leah home safely, and all our children."

The phone rang. Emma hesitated. Having children at war creates a terror every time the phone rings. She ran for the phone and picked it up.

It was Leah. "Eema," she yelled above loud noises in the background.

"I'm safe. I love you. Good Shabbos," she sobbed.

"Good Shabbos," Emma cried. "I love you. Please come home. Please come home, my Leah."

On Remembrance Day, remember those who fought and those who died for us, Jew and non-Jew. Commit to fighting injustices so that we never need to face hell, as our parents, grandparents and great-grandparents did.

Thank you to all Canadian soldiers and all good soldiers everywhere, then and now. It is because of you I am able to write this column. It is because of you we can live freely as Jews and citizens of this great country, Canada. It is because of you the State of Israel was born. God bless.

Go to http://avrum.net to comment.

act now

RICHMOND HILL

Preview Opening

Smart

SINGLES & SEMIS*

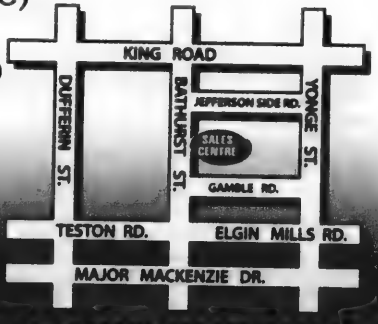
FROM THE $300's

This new dream home destination Opportunity will only come around once in a lifetime – so ACT NOW!

- Walking Paths • Ponds • School
- Established Community • Shopping Nearby • William Neal Park

- Only a Limited Release- (Then they'll all be gone)
- Touchsational Pricing - (Unbeatable)
- Outstanding location - (Richmond Hill's Best)
- Exceptional Designs - (Stone & Brick)

Models up to 2638 sq.ft.



Sat. & Sun. 12pm-6pm
Mon. to Thurs. 12pm-8pm
Fri. Closed

905 737-5300

touchstone HOMES

RICHMOND HILL

mytouchstonehome.com

Downtown Toronto's Finest Boutique Hotel
The GRAND HOTEL TORONTO
Reservations 1-877-32-GRAND
www.grandhoteltoronto.com
aeroplan
Earn 500 Aeroplan Miles per night and up to 15,000 Aeroplan Miles for Extended Stays

The Canadian Jewish news

96 Pages | Thursday, November 18, 2010 | 11 Kislev, 5771 | $1.25

This Week

National

Survivors light candles during Holocaust Education Week event. Page 3

Jews must defeat the bigots, journalist says. Page 12

Party Planner

See inside for our special supplement. Section B

Books & Authors

New collection of Vasily Grossman stories and essays. Page 50

On cjnews.com

Vichy regime was anti-Semitic, Nazi fighter says.

Index

National 3
Editorials & Letters 8
Perspectives 9
Opinions 10
The Kirshner File 11
Jewish Life 25
Family Moments 29
What's New 30
On Campus 34
Spice of Life 38
Health & Lifestyles 39
Heebonics 40
Israel & the Jewish World 41
Business 45
Arts & Travel 46
Books & Authors 50
Sports & Leisure 54

www.cjnews.com

Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

Netanyahu mulling new construction freeze

U.S. requests 90-day moratorium

© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

JERUSALEM — U.S. President Barack Obama on Sunday praised Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu for trying to win approval from his coalition government for a U.S. proposal to extend a freeze on West Bank settlement construction.

"I commend Prime Minister Netanyahu for taking, I think, a very constructive step," Obama told reporters upon arriving in the United States after a trip to Asia. "It's not easy for him to do, but I think it's a signal that he is serious."

The Palestinians halted peace talks after the 10-month Israeli moratorium on settlement construction expired in September.

The Obama administration has offered Israel diplomatic and defence incentives to renew the freeze for 90 days.

An Israeli political source said earlier Sunday that Netanyahu would probably win narrow approval from his coalition for the U.S. package of incentives.

Netanyahu, who visited the United States two weeks ago, convened his cabinet to outline the proposal, which he said was still being drafted with the Americans. Once ready, it would be put to a vote in Israel's 15-minister security cabinet, he said.

"In any event, I insist that any proposal meet the State of Israel's security needs,

Continued on page 41

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and U.S. President Barack Obama at their White House meeting in September. [IGPO photo]

Ontario partners with Israel for brain research

Ontario Premier Dalton McGuinty, left, and Israeli President Shimon Peres met in May during the premier's economic mission to Israel. [Sasson Tiram photo]

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

Israel and Ontario are teaming up to combat neurological disorders.

On Monday, the province announced it will provide $15 million over three years in startup funding to establish the Ontario Brain Institute at Sunnybrook Hospital's Health Sciences Centre in Toronto.

Ontario Premier Dalton McGuinty said the new institute is a direct outgrowth of talks he had with Israeli President Shimon Peres while on an economic mission to Israel last May.

At that time, Peres proposed the creation of a joint Israeli-Ontario "virtual institute" on brain research.

According to the province, this new institute will help its life-sciences companies "win a bigger share of the global market for products that support patients with brain diseases and disorders" such as Alzheimer's, Parkinson's disease, dementia, autism and schizophrenia.

Israeli medical sector organizations will be among the first to sign partnership agreements with the Ontario Brain Institute.

A spokesperson for the premier told The CJN that although there were "no official" Israeli partners signed to collaborate with the institute yet, the province and institute are currently in preliminary discussions with potential Israeli partners who will be "determined in the months to come."

The initiative aims to pair the top brain researchers with "people who know how to commercialize good ideas.

Continued on page 42

Vayishlach
Candlelighting: 4:32
Havdalah: 5:38
Greater Toronto Area

Do
Acc
CJN0000860064 12000 13JAN11
PATTI RENIHAN XXDIR(U)
MCLAREN MICROPUBLISHING LT 019
PO BOX 972 STATION F 858
TORONTO ON M4Y 2N9

Arrests made for alleged fraud at Claims Conference – please see page 42

The News in Brief

Canada

New Holocaust Poll

MONTREAL — French-Canadians are significantly less likely than English-Canadians to say Jews share their values – 34 versus 73 per cent, respectively – a new poll says. The survey, conducted in Canada, the United States, Germany and Spain for Postmedia News by the Association for Canadian Studies in Montreal, was released last week to coincide with a conference in Ottawa on anti-Semitism. Some 51 per cent of anglophones think anti-Semitism is a problem in Canada, compared to 45 per cent of francophones. Germans were most likely – 56 per cent – to say anti-Semitism is a problem in their society, and to say Jews share their values, while about 85 per cent claimed good knowledge of the Shoah. In Spain, only 49 per cent cited anti-Semitism as a problem and 39 per cent pointed to shared values, while Spaniards were least likely to claim good knowledge of the Holocaust.

Prostitution Laws

MONTREAL — Temple Emanu-El-Beth Sholom is one of just two Canadian Reform synagogues – and possibly the only two Jewish congregations in North America – fighting to abolish prostitution in Israel by calling for a law there that would jail johns. The synagogue is collaborating with Israel's ATZUM Task Force on Human Trafficking on a North American letter-writing campaign urging Israel to pass such a law that will culminate with a "Stop the Traffic" mission to Israel on Jan. 12 and 13.

Alzheimer's Disease

MONTREAL — Researchers at the Jewish General Hospital's Lady Davis Institute for Medical Research (LDI) believe they may have discovered one of the root causes of Alzheimer's disease, and it's not where anyone else was looking. A research team headed by Dr. Andréa LeBlanc, of the LDI's Bloomfield Centre for Research in Aging, is pointing to Caspase-6, an enzyme that belongs to a family of similar enzymes that play a role in cell death and inflammation, but has never before been linked to Alzheimer's.

World

Rabbi Convicted

NEW YORK — A Brooklyn rabbi faces up to 20 years in jail after he was convicted Nov. 10. Rabbi Milton Balkany, 64, director of a Jewish day school, was convicted of trying to extort a $4-million donation to his school, Bais Yaakov of Midwood, from billionaire Steven Cohen's SAC Capital using damaging information he obtained from an inmate at a prison where he served as a spiritual adviser. He's to be sentenced Feb. 18.

Film Trailer Released

ISTANBUL — A trailer for an anti-Israel Turkish movie, filmed in part aboard the ship the Mavi Marmara, has been released. Valley of the Wolves-Palestine, to be released in Turkish theatres Jan. 28, dramatizes the May 31 boarding of a Turkish ship in a flotilla trying to break Israel's blockade of Gaza. Nine Turkish nationals were killed. The movie, the third in a series, follows a fictitious hit squad that travels to Israel to kill military officers who directed the operation. It's a spinoff of a TV show that often demonizes Israel and Jews, and has contributed to a rift in diplomatic relations. A previous film in the series showed Israeli doctors harvesting Iraqis' organs for transplant in Israel.

Prize Targets Boycotts

LOS ANGELES — In response to the anti-Israel boycott movement, the U.S.-based Israel-education organization StandWithUs recently announced a "Divest from Terror" writing and cartoon contest, intended to spotlight those who delegitimize Israel. Winning entries will be incorporated into the StandWithUs campaign. Deadline for submissions is Dec. 31. First prize is a trip to Israel. Cash and other prizes will also be awarded. Details are at www.standwithus.com/contests.

Leaders Meet

WASHINGTON — Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton ended a six-hour meeting with little more than an agreement on the usefulness of direct negotiations between Israel and the Palestinians.

Art Returned

NETHERLANDS — The government of the Netherlands will restitute a valuable painting to the estate of prewar Jewish art dealer Max Stern. An Old Master painting will be turned over to the Stern estate and three university beneficiaries – Concordia and McGill universities, both in Montreal, and Hebrew University in Jerusalem – at the Netherlands Institute for Cultural Heritage in The Hague. The Nazis ordered Stern, who ran the Julius Stern Gallery in Dusseldorf, Germany, to liquidate his gallery's artwork of more than 400 pieces after Jews were banned from selling art. In 1943, after recovering a fraction of the works, Stern moved to Canada and purchased the Dominion Gallery of Fine Arts.

Marrow Registry Founder Wins Hero Title

NEW ORLEANS — Jay Feinberg, founder of the Gift of Life Bone Marrow Foundation, has been tapped as the second Jewish Community Hero.

Jay Feinberg

The announcement came Nov. 9 in New Orleans at the General Assembly of the Jewish Federations of North America, which sponsored the online contest. Judges picked Feinberg, 42, of Boca Raton, Fla., from among five finalists for a $25,000 Jewish Federations grant. More than 300,000 people cast online votes to determine 20 semifinalists. The panel whittled the list to five before choosing Feinberg. The other four will get $1,000 grants.

Feinberg founded Gift of Life in 1991 to search for a bone marrow donor after being diagnosed with leukemia. He found his match in 1995. He has developed the organization into a major public registry for bone marrow, blood stem cell and umbilical cord blood.

This was the second Jewish Community Hero campaign sponsored by Jewish Federations.

The Canadian Jewish news

Vol XL, No 45 (1,974)*

Gary Laforet
General Manager

Mordechai Ben-Dat
Editor

Vera Gillman
Advertising & Assistant General Manager

Carol Jamieson, Controller

Jeff Rosen, News & Internet Editor

Joseph Serge
Arts, Travel and Supplements Editor

Janice Arnold, Carolyn Blackman, Sheldon Kirshner, Frances Kraft, David Lazarus, Elias Levy, Andy Levy-Ajzenkopf, Paul Lungen, Sheri Shefa, Laura Stricker
Staff Reporters

J. Dahan, S. Epstein, B. Gladstone, N. Gilletz, D. Heid, S. Horowitz, G. Koren, Rabbi D. Marmur, M. Mietkiewicz, A. Rosenweig, L. Speisman
Columnists

Cynthia Gasner, Joel Jacobson, Diane Koven, Lauren Kramer, Myron Love, Rhonda Spivak
Canadian Correspondents

Jenny Hazan, Israel Bureau

Carolyn Halpern, Ruth Schweitzer, Daniel Wolgelerenter
Copy Editors

Ella Burakowski
Assistant Advertising Manager

Bev Bergman, Gloria Clamen, Lisa Freid, Sarah Laiken, Honey Mahl, Elie Malka, Sholom Wargon, Grace Zweig
Sales Representatives, Toronto

Doris Perez
Office Manager

Alma Delory, Lucy Semtchenko, Karen Syptak
Office Staff, Toronto

David Collin
Promotions Manager, Circulation

Brian Stoneman
Composing Room Manager

Lbo Berlin, José De Freitas, Trevor Miller, Anahit Nahapetyan, Nick Radelja, Lila Sarick, Michael Stavsky
Production Staff

Donald Carr
George A. Cohon, Steven Cummings, Betty Elkaim, Julia Koschitzky, Albert J. Latner, Lionel H. Schipper, Shoel Silver, Robert Vineberg, Elizabeth Wolfe, Rose Wolfe, Rubin Zimmerman
Directors

Ray D. Wolfe
Founding President (1971-1990)

CIRCULATION
Total circulation: 35,160 copies.
Total paid circulation: 34,313 copies.
CCNA verified circulation
July 28, 2010

SUBSCRIPTIONS
Canada: $37.80, 1 yr. incl. taxes
$68.00, 2 yr. incl. taxes
Online edition:
$20.95 1 yr. incl. taxes
U.S.A. / Foreign:
$135 Cdn. funds, 1 yr.

Postmaster: Please return 29Bs and changes of address to CJN, 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4.

Postage Paid at Toronto
Canada Post Publication Agreement #40010684
Publication Mail Registration #09894

*Under current ownership

We acknowledge the financial support of the Government of Canada, through the Publications Assistance Program, towards our mailing costs.

Canada

Stone Craft MONUMENT FACTORY

Large inventory of top quality

Granite Monuments

in our own North York factory

Nov. 1 – Dec. 31/10 SAVINGS
SINGLE $1400 | DOUBLE $2400

•Monuments Available Within 1 week

121 BRISBANE RD., #1 DOWNSVIEW 416-667-1474
WWW.STONECRAFTMONUMENTS.COM

Steeles Memorial Chapel

www.steelesmemorial.com

- •Current Listing of Funerals
- •Listing of Cemeteries and Maps of Sections
- •Yahrzeit Calculator for Civil & Hebrew dates
- •Kaddish Texts
- •Educational Information about Shiva - Unveiling - After-Care - Prayers - Jewish Burial Rites
- •Jewish Holiday Dates

905-881-6003

Serving the Jewish Community since 1927.

The Canadian Jewish news

How To Reach Us

Head Office: 1500 Don Mills Rd., Ste. 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4 Tel: 416-391-1836
Advertising Fax: 416-391-0949 Editorial Fax: 416-391-0829
Advertising E-mail: adscjn@gmail.com Editorial E-mail: cjninfo@gmail.com
Website: www.cjnews.com
Subscription Inquiries: Toll Free: 1-866-849-0864 Fax: 905-946-1679
E-mail: cjnews@indas.on.ca

IMP - Israel Advertising Representatives
POB 7195, Jerusalem, Israel Tel: 02-625-2933 Fax: 02-624-9240 E-mail:info@impmedia.co.il

PROVINCIAL TABLE PADS
• FREE IN-HOME SERVICE
• MADE IN CANADA
• BEST SERVICE-PRICE-QUALITY
LOWEST PRICES GUARANTEED
TORONTO 416-783-2308 | HAMILTON 905-383-1343
CANADA WIDE 1-800-668-7439
www.ptpads.com

National

Holocaust Education Week

Planning For Retirement?
Confused about your financial future? Let us help you understand how to reach your financial goals
Call Sonny Goldstein
Chartered Life Underwriter
Chartered Financial Consultant
416-221-0060
HIGHEST QUOTES ON RRIF's, ANNUITIES, etc.
Creative Ideas in Financial Planning
Sonny Goldstein, CFP

Survivors take 'revenge' by having grandkids

Two Canadian Jewish War Veterans and the bugler during the Remembrance Day ceremony on Nov 9. [Jeremy Cartridge photo]

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

The 30th Holocaust Education Week wound up last week at Shaarei Shomayim Congregation with a candlelighting tribute to the six million dead, a stirring call to remember the ultimate triumph of survivors, and a military procession to honour Canadian soldiers who fought the Nazis and who fight today in Afghanistan.

Survivors lit six candles during the closing event, recalling the six million Jewish victims of the Nazis. At the same time, tribute was paid to those who survived the Holocaust and gained "revenge" not through violence, but by making new lives, marrying, and having children and grandchildren, said Ephraim Kaye, director of international seminars for educators at Yad Vashem, Jerusalem.

Delivering the closing event's keynote address, Kaye said the first post-Holocaust wedding took place in the summer of 1945, only months after the defeat of the Nazis. By 1946 displaced persons at Bergen-Belsen celebrated the 1,000th Jewish wedding.

They took "revenge" by "replacing sorrow with happiness, death and destruction with birth and creativity," he said.

"But the real revenge was not in having children, but in having grandchildren."

Speaking on the theme "may your memory be love," Kaye said that "the family cycles that had been destroyed by the Nazis and their collaborators had been recreated."

Quoting from the Talmud – whoever saves a life, it is considered as if he saved an entire world – Kaye noted that German businessman Oskar Schindler didn't just save 1,200 Jews. Today, those survivors and their descendants number some 15,000 people.

"One person can make a difference," he said.

The film Schindler's List was followed by creation of the Shoah Foundation, a project spearheaded by director Steven Spielberg to catalogue the testimony of Holocaust survivors. More than 55,000 testimonies have been recorded.

Continued on page 18

Attention Accredited & Other Qualified Investors.

Have your RRSP returns been less than stellar these past few years?

TEL AVIV: +35% VS TORONTO: +5%

Put Israel's powerful economy to work for your RRSP.

BOND STREET PROUDLY INTRODUCES THE

Holy Land Investment Fund

... a uniquely Canadian opportunity to invest in the world's most dynamic economy.

Here's why you should consider the Holy Land Investment Fund (HLIF):

- The HLIF is a conservatively weighted, balanced fund of Israeli equities, bond and fixed income funds, which provides a lower risk way to invest in Israel.
- The HLIF includes the HA Opportunities Fund, the #1 performing fund in Israel in 2009 (244% return), higher than any fund in Canada.[1]
- RRSP and RRIF eligible.
- Low minimum investment.
- Consider investing 10% of your investment funds in Israel.

At last... the chance to put your money where your heart is.

THIS JUST IN!
The HLIF has achieved a return of 10.25%[2] in its first four months.
As of October 15, 2010

EXCLUSIVE WEEKLY INVESTMENT SEMINARS
Call 416-783-0505 to book your seat
at our for Accredited-Investors-only presentations. Learn how you can participate in HLIF's excellent investment opportunity.
Register Now.
Don't Be Disappointed.

Zale Newman, President
zale@bondstreetmercantile.com

BOND STREET MERCANTILE
www.BondStreetMercantile.com

[1] Over the last 16 quarters the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange (TASE) has significantly outperformed the Toronto Stock Exchange (TSX). 30% better. As of September 30, 2010
[2] Past results are not a guarantee future performance. Results will vary depending on many factors including market conditions and available opportunities.

REDUCE RISK?
ENHANCE RETURNS?
ACHIEVE THE GOALS MOST IMPORTANT TO YOU.

Irwin Igra, Investment Advisor
Tel: (416) 646-6926
Wellington West Capital Inc
Suite 501, 4100 Yonge Street
Toronto, Ontario M2P 2B5

WELLINGTON WEST
Capital Inc.
Wellington West Capital Inc. Member CIPF

Benjamin
Group
Through the generations
...a sacred trust

TAKING CARE OF OUR PEOPLE

"However our organization evolves, our wonderful employees will be key to its success."
Barbi Benjamin-Levitt

I joined the business about 20 years after the photo above, at a time when our growing staff needed a formalized human resources function. My job is an absolute pleasure. We have such a dedicated, professional team that I don't have to deal with most of the issues other companies face – such as retention issues – our people stay for years! They're part of our family.

2401 Steeles Ave., West, Toronto
416-663-9060
www.thebenjamingroup.ca

The Benjamin Group companies:
Benjamin's Park Memorial Chapel, Benjamin's Landmark Monuments, The Benjamin Foundation, The Benjamin Institute, Benjamin's Lifecycle Financial Services

Greater Toronto Area

Upholding freedom and liberty

By any measurement, last week's Ottawa Conference on Combating Antisemitism was a remarkable event.

The most riveting headline, indeed, the most riveting story, to emerge from the 2-1/2-day gathering was of the landmark statement by Prime Minister Stephen Harper on the first morning of the conference in which he pledged: "As long as I am prime minister, whether it is at the UN or the Francophonie or anywhere else, Canada will take that stand [exposing and fighting anti-Semitism] whatever the cost."

From the editor's desk...

But there were many worthwhile and compelling stories to emerge from the conference. It is important to note at least the newsworthy gist of some of them.

• The mere holding of the conference was itself an important story. It was the continuum of a project started by British MP John Mann and Canadian MP Irwin Cotler. Mann and Cotler founded the Interparliamentary Coalition for Combating Antisemitism (ICCA), which held its founding meeting last year in London.

Unlike many ennobling endeavours, this one did not founder and lose energy after the exciting flush of the first meeting. There was neither loss of enthusiasm nor abatement of commitment.

In fact the very opposite occurred.

With the support of Jason Kenney and the partnership of the Ministry of Citizenship, Immigration and Multiculturalism, the Ottawa meeting was more extensive in breadth than the inaugural conference and attended by a larger number of individuals. More than 150 parliamentarians from 53 different countries, along with some 100 experts and observers, attended the conference.

• The international steering committee of the ICCA is comprised of serious individuals, each committed to the high values and permanence of democracy and proven, through long years of arduous endeavour, to be a true fighter for the protection of human rights worldwide. The group consists of Irwin Cotler; Yuli Edelstein, member of the Knesset and minister of public diplomacy and Diaspora affairs; John Mann, member of the British Parliament; Fiamma Nirenstein, member of the Italian Parliament; Christopher Smith, member of U.S. Congress, and Gert Weisskirchen, former member of the German Bundestag. Cotler is chair of the committee.

• Deliberations at the conference were divided into two very busy, very activity-oriented working groups, namely of parliamentarians and of experts, specialists and observers in the field. In addition, there were plenary sessions in which all attended for wider discussions. Among the subjects discussed were: State-sanctioned Anti-Semitism; Hate on the Internet; Hate on Campus; Policing, Prosecutions and Legal Remedies; and Anti-Semitic Discourse. The panelists and experts who participated in the various working groups travelled from all over the world to share their experiences, expertise and ideas.

Each working group submitted suggestions for policy recommendations to the conference organizers, most of which were distilled into the final document of the conference called the Ottawa Protocol.

• The protocol is a serious document intended to build upon the one issued by the London conference, which was signed by then-British prime minister Gordon Brown.

The Ottawa document will further anchor the standard of international conduct by which propagators of anti-Semitism and other forms of hatred and ethnic calumny can be called to account.

It is divided into two sections: (1) the preamble which sets a historical, social, political and intellectual context for the need to oppose and combat anti-Semitism, and (2) the commitments agreed to by the parliamentarians who attended the conference. (The protocol appears on the Perspectives page in this issue.)

• • •

As if announced in a long-reach echo chamber, the words of the Ottawa Protocol demonstrated their immediate relevance three days later.

Liberal Democrat peer, Jenny Tonge, the iconic, anti-Israel activist in the United Kingdom, renewed her attacks on Israel. She told the House of Lords last Friday that "the treatment of Palestinians by Israel is the root cause of terrorism worldwide.

"Why do we let it continue?" she rhetorically asked. "Is it Holocaust guilt? Is it the power of the pro-Israel lobby here and in the U.S.A.?"

Tonge's scurrilous accusation against Israel (and Jews) is precisely the sort of statement that the protocol would capture within the definition of anti-Semitism. The following appears in the Protocol.

"Making mendacious, dehumanizing, demonizing, or stereotypical allegations about Jews as such or the power of Jews as collective – such as, especially but not exclusively – the myth about a world Jewish conspiracy, or of Jews controlling the media, economy, government or other societal institutions."

The ICCA was created to help create tools to fight anti-Semitism on an international basis. Yuli Edelstein expressed why it is important to do so. "In combating anti-Semitism, we not only defend the rights of the Jews, but we also defend our way of life, upholding freedom and liberty for all citizens of democracy."

–MBD

SeeJN

CONFERENCE WRAPS UP

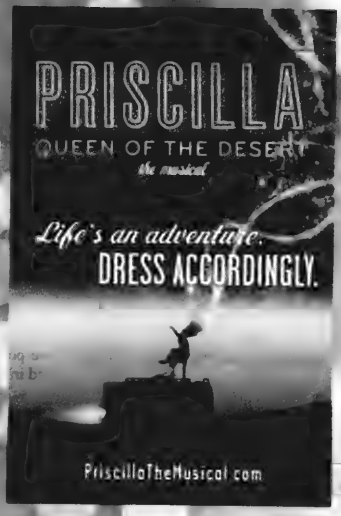
The Canadian Jewish Political Affairs Committee Fellowship Conference recently wrapped up in Ottawa. The conference brings together university-aged political activists and provides opportunities for them to hear from officials across the political spectrum. This year, Prime Minister Stephen Harper, New Democratic Party leader Jack Layton and Liberal MP Ken Dryden spoke. Above are the conference participants.

[CJPAC photo]

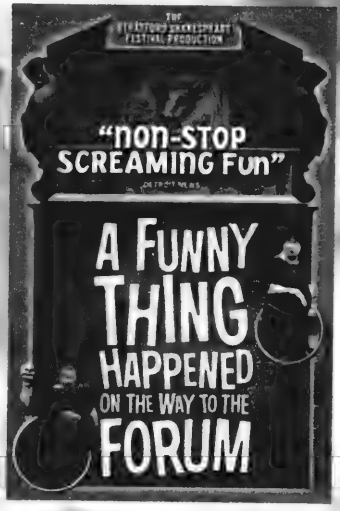
DAVID MIRVISH PRESENTS THE 2010 / 2011 MIRVISH THEATRE SUBSCRIPTION SEASON

AN ELECTRIFYING THEATRE SEASON!

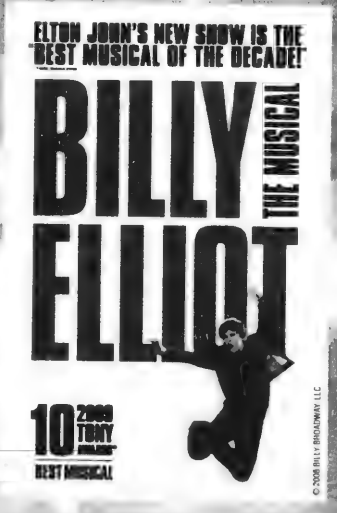
6 HIT SHOWS FOR AS LITTLE AS $146!



ON STAGE NOW

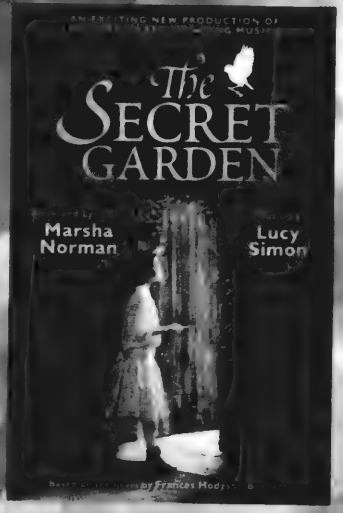


BEGINS DECEMBER 15

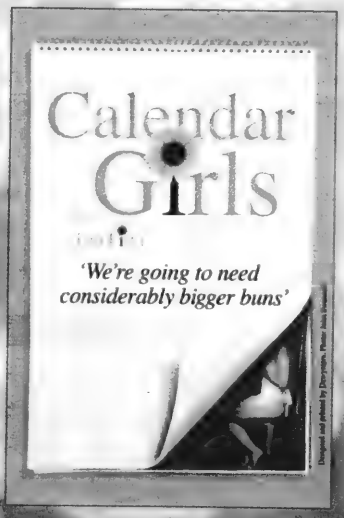


ELTON JOHN'S NEW SHOW IS THE BEST MUSICAL OF THE DECADE!
BILLY ELLIOT THE MUSICAL
10 2009 TONY AWARDS
BEST MUSICAL
© 2008 BILLY BROADWAY LLC

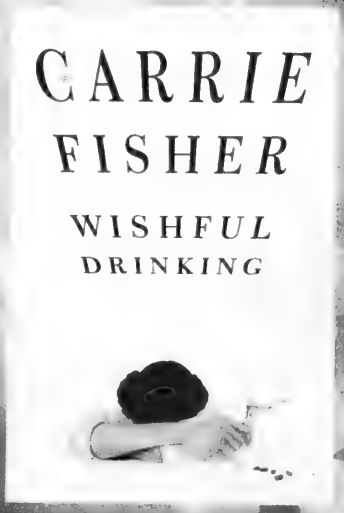
BEGINS FEBRUARY 2011



BEGINS FEBRUARY 2011



BEGINS APRIL 2011



BEGINS JULY 2011

BENEFITS OF SUBSCRIPTION

DISCOUNTS
EMAIL NEWSLETTER
REMINDER
DINING DISCOUNTS
GIFT CARD

SUBSCRIBE NOW
416-593-4225
mirvish.com

Chinese academic focuses on Jewish culture

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

In 1988, university lecturer Xu Xin was intensely curious about life in Israel. For about a decade, he had made Jewish studies the focus of his academic career, and he had managed to get permission to travel abroad, where he lived with the Friend family in Chicago for two years.

He attended life-cycle events, celebrated Jewish holidays and got first-hand exposure to a culture that fascinated him.

But expanding his studies by travel to Israel seemed out of reach. At the time, the two countries had no formal diplomatic relations. Xu was surprised to learn that while he couldn't travel directly to Israel from China, he could do so from the United States, so that year he accepted an invitation from the Hebrew University of Jerusalem and made the trip.

It was a real eye-opener, Xu said on the telephone from East Lansing, Mich., where he is a visiting as part of a 14-city tour.

"I saw that all the stereotypes [about Israel], the negative things were gone. Seeing it is different," he said.

Xu, professor and director of the Institute of Jewish Studies at Nanjing University, will be in Toronto for 11 days beginning Nov. 19. On Nov. 21, he will lecture at Congregation Darchei Noam, discussing the Jewish Diaspora in China, including contemporary Jewish communities. He is scheduled to deliver a Shabbat morning talk on Nov. 27 at Temple Emanu-El, and he will also meet academics and religious leaders while he's here.

Four years after his first of seven visits to Israel, the two countries established diplomatic relations. That opened the academic floodgates, Xu recalled, and Chinese researchers who, like himself, were interested in all things Jewish, began to study Jewish civilization and Israel in a big way. Today, 10 universities offer programs in Jewish studies.

"This is a field people are interested in," said Xu, founder and president of the China Judaic Studies Association.

"I realized that as China was about to open to the world and become part of the global village, to do business and have good relations with western countries, you have to understand their culture."

Xu Xin

Western nations owe their civilizations to the Greco-Roman and the Judeo-Christian traditions. For years, study of the latter was frowned upon by the officially atheistic Chinese government but with the thaw, that changed. He and other academics began to look at Jewish culture, history, life and literature.

"Now we focus on Judaism," he said. "Jews have a different tradition with a long history and have a unique lifestyle.

"In China, most Chinese were very impressed by Jewish achievement and admire [Jews]. We admire that they didn't have a home and they kept their traditions and culture and in modern times, integrated into the modern world," said Xu, who has taught at Nanjing University for more than 30 years.

Chinese academics and even government officials, especially admired "how you went from the ghetto, were segregated, and became part of the modern world."

China, too, was isolated and segregated. "Jews could provide lessons in how to integrate into the modern world, modernize and be democratic, rather than just be an ancient people with a long tradition. There is lots of discussion about that," he said.

Chinese also share "the belief that the Jewish element is important in American politics. That is why most want to improve the relationship with Israel."

"The relationship [with Israel] is much better than is being reported. China is officially more pro-Palestinian, but the relationship is very good with Israel, too. The people, especially academics, have a more positive view of Israel and people are more pro-Israel than pro-Arab, in general."

Shanghai University's Jewish studies department is often consulted by government, while policy papers by Israel experts are widely read in government circles, he added.

As to the Jewish presence in China, Xu traces it back to at least the seventh century. By the 11th, there was a substantial community in Kaifeng, then the capital and a trade centre on the Silk Road. By the end of the 19th century, the organized community in Kaifeng, which had consisted of Persian Jewish immigrants, had disappeared save for a few people who did not practise Judaism but who claimed descent from the city's original Jewish inhabitants.

In the mid-19th century, Jews came to China with other westerners and established a community in Shanghai. In the early part of the 20th century, about 15,000 Russian Jews, fleeing pogroms and the Communist Revolution, entered Harbin and established a community there. During World War II, some 20,000 central European Jews fleeing the Nazis settled in Shanghai. Most of the latter two groups have left for the West or Israel, he said.

Currently, there are communities of 2,000 to 3,000 Jews in several major cities, including Hong Kong, Shanghai, Beijing and Tientsin. "Most are business people, diplomats, students," he said.

Jewish studies continue to expand in China but "it needs support" – everything from books to funds for scholarships, Xu said.

Thanks to Disabled Veterans like Falah, there is an Israel for all of us.

Falah El-Hiyab, an Operations Officer of the Bedouin Tracking Regiment in Gaza, was the last casualty of Operation Cast Lead in 2009.

The war had just ended when Falah's unit was searching the area for infiltrators, lethal booby traps and explosive devices. After 15 minutes of patrolling, six explosive devices turned the area into a hailstorm of burning metal and fire.

Severely wounded, Falah and his unit came under further heavy enemy attack. As more forces rushed in to cover them, his wounds were dressed by a medic, and he was evacuated to hospital.

Six surgeries later, Falah's right leg was amputated. He was also left with limited use of his right hand.

The entire El-Hiyab family is distinguished for their loyal and courageous service to the State of Israel since pre-1948. Falah still dreams of going back to serve in the IDF, despite his physical condition.

He frequents Beit Halochem in Haifa, where he receives physiotherapy, occupational and hydrotherapy. He also swims and cycles with the hand-biking group, and participates in specialized fitness programs.

Falah visits Bedouin schools and encourages children to volunteer in the army, defend their country, their people and our freedom.

Help us care for Falah and the other 51,000 extraordinary heroes like him, who have given so much of themselves to protect Israel. With your support, Beit Halochem Canada, Aid to Disabled Veterans of Israel, can continue to provide a home away from home for our wounded members at the Beit Halochem Centres in Tel Aviv, Haifa, Nahariya, Jerusalem and Beer Sheva, where they receive important rehabilitative therapies.

PLEASE ASSIST the more than 51,000 disabled war veterans and victims of terror who rely on Beit Halochem to help them in their REHABILITATION.

AID TO DISABLED VETERANS OF ISRAEL (CANADA)

1600 Steeles Ave. W., Suite 219, Concord, ON L4K 4M2
info@beithalochem.ca • www.beithalochem.ca
Charitable registration #11877 9081 RR0001

Join us in Celebrating Hannukah with a dinner and dance party, WEDNESDAY, DEC. 1, 2010, 7 p.m. La Primavera Banquet Hall, Vaughan, Ont. Kashrut observed. Reserved seating; no tickets will be sold at the door.

Call 905-695-0611 / 1-800-355-1648
Or, order online: www.beithalochem.ca

A GIFT FOR ALL SEASONS
THE MULTI-AWARD WINNING
2011 DANCAP SUBSCRIPTION SERIES

BUY A SUBSCRIPTION

6 GREAT SHOWS FROM $210!*

BOOK BY DECEMBER 3RD TO SAVE UP TO 25%

AND SECURE THE BEST SEAT LOCATIONS!

DancapTickets.com
Fast and convenient 24/7

416-644-3665
Mon.–Fri., 9am–5pm,
Sat. 10am–4pm

Gift Certificates Available!

VISA

Captivating Broadway Theatre

with Dancap facebook twitter

dancap

The Canadian Jewish news

An independent community newspaper serving as a forum for diverse viewpoints
Publisher and Proprietor
The Canadian Jewish News, a corporation without share capital
Head Office
1500 Don Mills Rd., Suite 205, North York, Ont. M3B 3K4

Bold and principled

The photo inset of a mobile bulletin board outside the Anne and Max Tanenbaum Community Hebrew Academy of Toronto conveys the emotion that so many Canadians felt last week after seeing, hearing or reading Prime Minister Stephen Harper's landmark statement regarding the government's determination to stand with the State of Israel and against the purveyors of anti-Semitism.

His remarks to the Ottawa Conference on Combating Antisemitism, the second gathering of the 50-nation Interparliamentary Coalition for Combating Antisemitism (ICCA), displayed acute insight into the modern manifestations of that "most ancient of hatreds," rock solid loyalty to his principles and steadfastness of character.

The prime minister first staked out the nature of the problem: "We must also combat anti-Semitism beyond our borders, – an evolving, global phenomenon. And we must recognize, that while its substance is as crude as ever, its method is now more sophisticated. Harnessing disparate anti-Semitic, anti-American and anti-western ideologies, it targets the Jewish people by targeting the Jewish homeland, Israel, as the source of injustice and conflict in the world, and uses, perversely, the language of human rights to do so."

Then, in plain, succinct language he staked out a course of action: "But when Israel, the only country in the world whose very existence is under attack, is consistently and conspicuously singled out for condemnation, I believe we are morally obligated to take a stand [our emphasis]. Demonization, double standards, delegitimization – the three Ds – it is a responsibility, to stand up to them."

And then he staked out what Canada will do: "As long as I am Prime Minister, whether it is at the UN or the Francophonie or anywhere else, Canada will take that stand, whatever the cost [our emphasis]. Not just because it is the right thing to do, but because history shows us, and the ideology of the anti-Israeli mob tells us all too well, that those who threaten the existence of the Jewish people are, in the longer term, a threat to all of us."

The prime minister's remarks reverberated far beyond the House of Commons committee room where they were delivered. For example, David Harris, executive director of the American Jewish Committee, praised the speech as being "nothing short of historic." "Prime Minister Harper minced no words in speaking with a remarkable moral courage and clarity that, sadly, is all too rare in today's world," Harris said.

Harper's statement gives heart to the supporters of the beleaguered Jewish state. It also puts on notice those who wish to do it harm that there are bold, principled, democracy-loving leaders in the world who will not pander to Holocaust-deniers, anti-Semites, Israel bashers and their evil schemes.

And for that, just like the students at TanenbaumCHAT, we convey our deepest appreciation.

25 years ago in The CJN

Shoshana Cardin, the president of the Council of Jewish Federations told her organization's 34th General Assembly, held in Washington, D.C., that "the single greatest threat to our Jewish community is disaffiliation and non-affiliation." She urged the 3,000 delegates to encourage fellow Jews to join and participate in Jewish groups and organizations.

Editorial Advisory Board: Guy Aboodi, Maurice Benzacar, Michael Brown, Donald Carr, Rabbi Michael Doigin, Daniel Ferman, Igor Korenzvit, Keith Landy, Hindy Najman, Lou Rouson, Alan Sandler, Rabbi Philip Scheim, Mike Shriqui, Pamela Medjuck Stein, Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, Ehud Telem, Nelson Wiseman.

Ignatieff resurrecting 'moral equivalence'

Liberal party Leader Michael Ignatieff states in his letter to the editor, "Balance means that there are two peoples and that the land has to be shared – out of fairness for both, and out of a need for security for both" ("Ignatieff on Mideast policy," Nov. 11) But is security for the Palestinians really as much of an issue as it is for the Israelis? And does he really believe that creating a 23rd Arab state is a goal as important as preserving the one and only state of the Jewish people? In reality, he is just resurrecting the tired, old Liberal "moral equivalence."

Contrast Prime Minister Stephen Harper who last week denounced anti-Semitism more forcefully than any predecessor has done, and who has steadfastly defended Israel's right to exist and defend itself ("PM pledges government's support for Israel"). Sadly, instead of seizing the opportunity to agree that anti-Semitism is bad and the only democracy in the Middle East deserves our fullest support, Ignatieff instead chose to politicize the issue with partisan rhetoric, attacking the prime minister for taking these positions for only "domestic… political reasons." In fact, the prime minister may actually lose votes over his principled stance on Israel and anti-Semitism. At least Ignatieff's letter helps shed light on what the election of a Liberal government would really mean for Israel.

Rabbi Yisroel Janowski
Thornhill, Ont.

* * *

Ignatieff shows contempt for Jewish state

Michael Ignatieff attempts to demonstrate his party's support for Israel, but skilfully does so by simultaneously showing his contempt for the Jewish state ("Ignatieff on Mideast policy, letters, Nov. 11). While the Conservative government has become a staunch ally of Israel in its fight against radical Islam, Ignatieff calls for a return to the previous Liberal governments' "more balanced" approach to the Mideast conflict. This Liberal party leader would presumably favour more condemnations of Israel in the United Nations and other world bodies, as Canada traditionally engaged in such outrageous conduct against our democratic ally in the past. With friends like this, who needs enemies?

Joseph Y. Adler
Toronto

* * *

Jewish community should reject militarism

Prime Minister Stephen Harper is trying to get the Canadian Jewish community to sell our birthright as a peace-loving nation for a mess of pottage. While I am pleased that someone with a greater grasp of global peace, like Liberal party Leader Michael Ignatieff, got the lead letter to the editor in The CJN last week ("Ignatieff on Mideast policy"), Harper seems able to grace the cover of your paper at will ("PM pledges government's support for Israel," Nov. 11).

As Ignatieff reminds us, the loss to Canada of a UN Security Council seat is highly significant. We should join other peace-loving nations in asserting that you cannot bring peace to a fractious region by continually pouring weapons into it. It is appalling that the United States is about to sell some $60 billion worth of high-tech weaponry to the Saudis, whose second-greatest export is the extreme Wahhabi variant of Islam. The superpowers keep inadvertently fuelling this global mess, and nations like Canada should be too smart to have any part of it. Our Jewish community should be at the forefront of rejecting militarism as a substitute for hard diplomacy, diplomacy that includes tough oil sanctions.

Ron Charach
Toronto

* * *

LET THEM GO...

Ron Arad, Zachary Baumel, Zvi Feldman, Guy Hever, Yehuda Katz

1608

The number of days Hamas has held Gilad Schalit captive

Harper is a shaliach of peace

As a Holocaust survivor, I remember vividly the years 1933 and after, when Nazi Germany and its European friends spread hatred and anti-Semitic slogans against the entire Jewish population. Prime Minister Stephen Harper is a shaliach of peace, harmony and humanity to all people of goodwill ("PM pledges government's support for Israel," letters, Nov. 11).

Baruch Cohen
Montreal

* * *

Incorrect information in obituary

The obituary "Winnipeg's Gray was a philanthropist" (Oct. 21) states that Gerald Gray was a nephew of M.A. Gray, the first Jewish MLA in the Manitoba legislature. That is incorrect. My father, S. Hart Green, was the first Jewish member of the Manitoba legislature. He was elected in 1910 as a Liberal member for the North End. He was probably the first Jewish member of a provincial or federal government in Canada since Confederation. In a recent book called Coming of Age, by Allan Levine, a history of the Jews of Manitoba, there is a very good article about S. Hart Green.

Patrick Hart Green
Toronto

The Canadian Jewish News reserves the right to refuse advertising that in its opinion is misleading, in poor taste or incompatible with the advertising policies of the newspaper. Acceptance of advertising does not imply endorsement by The Canadian Jewish News. The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

Letters are welcome if they are brief, in English or French, typewritten with lines double spaced, and of interest to our reading public. Readers are cautioned not to make sweeping claims against persons or institutions which they cannot verify, as libel laws are very stringent. We reserve the right to edit and condense letters, which must bear the sender's address, phone number and both handwritten and typed signatures. Letters sent by e-mail must also include the sender's municipal address. cjninfo@gmail.com

Ottawa Protocol on Combating Antisemitism

Parliamentarians from six continents were on hand on Nov. 9 to release the Ottawa Protocol – a document which represents global co-operation in the fight against anti-Semitism.

The Ottawa Protocol is a major outcome of the 2010 Conference on Combating Antisemitism, where parliamentarians and experts from over 50 countries gathered in Ottawa from Nov. 7-9 to take part in it.

The conference, which was hosted by the Inter-Parliamentary Coalition for Combating Antisemitism (ICCA) and is the largest of its kind, provided the opportunity for delegates to explore data and exchange best practices to learn about the best ways to combat anti-Semitism around the world.

Preamble

We, representatives of our respective parliaments from across the world, convening in Ottawa for the second conference and summit of the Inter-parliamentary Coalition for Combating Antisemitism, note and reaffirm the London Declaration on Combating Antisemitism as a template document for the fight against anti-Semitism.

We are concerned that, since the London Conference in February 2009, there continues to be a dramatic increase in recorded anti-Semitic hate crimes and attacks targeting Jewish persons and property, and Jewish religious, educational and communal institutions.

We remain alarmed by ongoing state-sanctioned genocidal anti-Semitism and related extremist ideologies. If anti-Semitism is the most enduring of hatreds, and genocide is the most horrific of crimes, then the convergence of the genocidal intent embodied in anti-Semitic ideology is the most toxic of combinations.

We are appalled by the resurgence of the classic anti-Jewish libels, including:

- The Blood Libel (that Jews use the blood of children for ritual sacrifice)
- The Jews as "Poisoners of the Wells" – responsible for all evils in the world
- The myth of the "new Protocols of the Elders of Zion" – the czarist forgery that proclaimed an international Jewish conspiracy bent on world domination – and accuses the Jews of controlling government, the economy, media and public institutions.
- The double entendre of denying the Holocaust – accusing the Jews of fabricating the Holocaust as a hoax – and the nazification of the Jew and the Jewish people.

We are alarmed by the explosion of anti-Semitism and hate on the Internet, a medium crucial for the promotion and protection of freedom of expression, freedom of information and the participation of civil society.

We are concerned over the failure of most OSCE [Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe] participating states to fully implement provisions of the 2004 Berlin Declaration, including the commitment to:

"Collect and maintain reliable information and statistics about anti-Semitic crimes, and other hate crimes, committed within their territory, report such information periodically to the OSCE Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights (ODIHR), and make this information available to the public."

We are concerned by the reported incidents of anti-Semitism on campuses, such as acts of violence, verbal abuse, rank intolerance and assaults on those committed to free inquiry, while undermining fundamental academic values. We renew our call for national governments, parliaments, international institutions, political and civic leaders, NGOs, and civil society to affirm democratic and human values, build societies based on respect and citizenship and combat any manifestations of anti-Semitism and all forms of discrimination.

We reaffirm the EUMC – now Fundamental Rights Agency (FRA) – working definition of anti-Semitism, which sets forth that:

"Contemporary examples of anti-Semitism in public life, the media, schools, the workplace, and in the religious sphere could, taking into account the overall context, include, but are not limited to:

- Calling for, aiding, or justifying the killing or harming of Jews in the name of radical ideology or an extremist view of religion.
- Making mendacious, dehumanizing, demonizing, or stereotypical allegations about Jews as such or the power of Jews as collective – such as, especially but not exclusively – the myth about a world Jewish conspiracy, or of Jews controlling the media, economy, government or other societal institutions.
- Accusing Jews as a people of being responsible for real or imagined wrongdoing committed by a single Jewish person or group, or even for acts committed by non-Jews.
- Denying the fact, scope, mechanisms (e.g. gas chambers) or intentionality of the genocide of the Jewish people at the hands of National Socialist Germany and its supporters and accomplices during World War II (the Holocaust).
- Accusing the Jews as a people, or Israel as a state, of inventing or exaggerating the Holocaust.
- Accusing Jewish citizens of being more loyal to Israel, or to the alleged priorities of Jews worldwide, than to the interests of their own nations.

Examples of the ways in which anti-Semitism manifests itself with regard to the State of Israel taking into account the overall context could include:

- Denying the Jewish people their right to self-determination, e.g., by claiming that the existence of a State of Israel is a racist endeavour.
- Applying double standards by requiring of it behaviour not expected or demanded of any other democratic nation.
- Using the symbols and images associated with classic anti-Semitism (e.g. claims of Jews killing Jesus or blood libel) to characterize Israel or Israelis.
- Drawing comparisons of contemporary Israeli policy to that of the Nazis.
- Holding Jews collectively responsible for actions of the State of Israel.

However, criticism of Israel similar to that levelled against any other country cannot be regarded as anti-Semitic.

Let it be clear: Criticism of Israel is not anti-Semitic, and saying so is wrong. But singling Israel out for selective condemnation and opprobrium – let alone denying its right to exist or seeking its destruction – is discriminatory and hateful, and not saying so is dishonest.

Seen are, back row from left, U.S. Congressman Chris Smith, Israeli MK Yuli Edelstein, Guillaume Ngefa of the Democratic Republic of Congo, Gert Weisskirchen of Germany, Belgian MP Vivienne Teitelbaum and Father Nortbert Hofmann of the Vatican); front row from left, Italian MP Fiamma Nirenstein, Canadian MP Irwin Cotler and British MP John Mann. [Victor Turco Photo]

Members of Parliament meeting in Ottawa commit to:

Calling on our governments to uphold international commitments on combating anti-Semitism – such as the OSCE Berlin Principles – and to engage with the United Nations for that purpose. In the words of former UN secretary general Kofi Annan, "It is… rightly said that the United Nations emerged from the ashes of the Holocaust. And a human rights agenda that fails to address anti-Semitism denies its own history";

Calling on parliaments and governments to adopt the EUMC working definition of anti-Semitism and anchor its enforcement in existing law;

Encouraging countries throughout the world to establish mechanisms for reporting and monitoring on domestic and international anti-Semitism, along the lines of the "Combating Antisemitism Act of 2010" recently introduced in the United States Congress;

Encouraging the leaders of all religious faiths – represented also at this Conference – to use all means possible to combat anti-Semitism and all forms of hatred and discrimination;

Calling on the Parliamentary Forum of the Community of Democracies to make the combating of hatred and anti-Semitism a priority in their work;

Calling on governments and parliamentarians to reaffirm and implement the Genocide Convention, recognising that where there is incitement to genocide, state parties have an obligation to act;

Working with universities to encourage them to combat anti-Semitism with the same seriousness with which they confront other forms of hate. Specifically, universities should be invited to define anti-Semitism clearly, provide specific examples, and enforce conduct codes firmly, while ensuring compliance with freedom of speech and the principle of academic freedom. Universities should use the EUMC working definition of anti-Semitism as a basis for education, training and orientation. Indeed, there should be zero tolerance for discrimination of any kind against anyone in the university community on the basis of race, gender, religion, ethnic origin, sexual orientation or political position;

We encourage the European Union to promote civic education and open society in its European Neighbourhood Policy (ENP) and to link funding to democratic development and respect for human rights in ENP partner countries;

Establishing an international task force of Internet specialists comprised of parliamentarians and experts to create common indicators to identify and monitor anti-Semitism and other manifestations of hate online and to develop policy recommendations for governments and international frameworks to address these problems;

Building on the African representation at this conference, to develop increased working relationships with parliamentarians in Africa for the combating of racism and anti-Semitism;

We urge the incoming OSCE chair, Lithuania, to make implementation of these commitments a priority during 2011 and call for the reappointment of the special representatives to assist in this work.

The Inter-Parliamentary Coalition for Combating Antisemitism (ICCA) brings together some 46 countries and over 250 parliamentarians from around the world to lead the fight against resurgent global anti-Semitism. Its principal purpose is to share knowledge, experience, best practices and recommendations, encouraging their dissemination in an attempt to deal more effectively with contemporary anti-Semitism.

For more information on the ICCA, please visit www.antisem.org.

Correction

The caption under the photograph that accompanied the Perspectives piece "Nazi crimes have been downgraded in Lithuania" (Oct. 7) included incorrect information. Rachel Kostanian is not under investigation by the Lithuanian authorities. The CJN apologizes for the error.

Opinions

Outreach, not outrage

Pamela Geller, a notorious and much read New York Jewish blogger, describes herself as a "racist-Islamophobic-anti-Muslim-bigot." A recent profile in the New York Times suggests that the way she spreads fear of Islam and dehumanizes Muslims is comparable to the anti-Semitism and anti-Catholicism of earlier eras.

Rabbi Dow Marmur in Toronto

Though even some of her allies now say that she has gone too far, I hear versions of her views at respectable dinner parties in Toronto. The fact they're expressed by Jews is cause for added alarm. Though psychologists may have something to say about how victims yearn to become victimizers, such disregard for Jewish history and teaching is ominous.

Doing it in the guise of defending Israel is no excuse. There are compelling reasons for eradicating Islamic jihad in the Middle East and guarding Israel against its repercussions, but promoting guilt by association that indiscriminately condemns all Muslims is unconscionable, especially by those whose forbears have been subject to it for centuries.

Abraham Foxman, the national director of the Anti-Defamation League in the United States, isn't known as a bleeding-heart liberal. Yet he has come out strongly against such profiling when he wrote: "The Muslim community in America is being confronted by ugly in-your-face religious bigotry, and we must speak out against it, educate against it and label it anti-American." It's no less anti-Canadian.

The way some people seem to get around it is by expressing feigned disappointment that exponents of mainstream Islam don't publicly condemn the militants. A Rosh Hashanah sermon by an Atlanta rabbi – widely circulated on the Internet and even highly recommended by the editor of this paper – seems to have been calculated to radicalize congregants. Deploying the fashionable cliché, it compared Muslim militants to German Nazis.

It also implied that in the same way as ordinary Germans became passive bystanders implicitly condoning the Nazis and their crimes, so ordinary Muslims today condone, perhaps even protect, extremists in their midst.

Recently I had an opportunity to meet with a few such ordinary Muslims, many of them young, at an interfaith event in a mosque. Allowing for the limitations of anecdotal evidence, it struck me that they're no less worried about the effects of militant Islam than we are. But in the same way as we're inhibited from attacking fellow Jews in public, so they refrain from criticizing their own in front of strangers.

Reaching out to them with sympathy and understanding, and finding practical ways to co-operate, is likely to be much more effective than venting outrage at worshippers in Atlanta or spreading panic in Canada.

Small people, small world

The world is small and rapidly getting smaller. While that's no great revelation, it's noteworthy that this bit of conventional wisdom is but a metaphor for our earth, which has not changed in size over the millennia, and that this radical idea of a small world is as ancient as our own people.

Seymour Epstein in Toronto

When we utter this notion, we are relating to travel at speeds beyond our ancestors' imaginations, and instant communication via the ether that even our parents couldn't have dreamed of. But when our Creation story became the formative myth of early Israelite culture and ultimately a Jewish belief shared by most of western civilization, the idea of a small world created by one God was indeed radical. Early humans couldn't see beyond their horizon and couldn't travel much further. How did they fathom the earth as one system designed and governed by one creator?

Later, but not much later, Isaiah (in Chapter 2) had this vision of Jerusalem: "And it shall come to pass that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established as the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it… And He shall judge between the nations, and shall decide for many peoples; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

Isaiah the prophet clearly had a broader view of the world than early man, and he could not be as innocent. Yet, he, too, shared this idea of a small manageable (and managed) world, and further developed the idea many centuries before the League of Nations and the United Nations.

Even Rashi, in 11th-century France, saw the world as one entity, with Jerusalem as its capital. In his commentary on the Song of Songs, Rashi echoes Isaiah by stating that Jerusalem is destined to be the capital of the entire world.

It's ironic that this notion of reducing the vastness of our earth – with its huge oceans, vast mountain ranges, wild variety of biology, hundreds of languages and rainbow of ideas – into a smaller metaphor that has system and design came from one of the smallest peoples that ever inhabited the planet. All of us have seen that map of the Middle East, with its vast Muslim-controlled tracts of land and the tiny sliver that is Israel, justifiably demanding its place under the sun as a Jewish nation. We know of the famous quip by a sociologist that the world's entire Jewish population is equivalent to a statistical error in the Chinese census.

Yes, despite God's promise to Abraham that we would become as numerous as the stars in the heaven, we've remained a small people. Indeed, every time we've started to grow and multiply, another of God's children – from Pharaoh to Haman to Hitler – has tried to thwart our growth.

Another irony is to be found in the expansion of the star metaphor. We moderns can barely see the stars at night because of light pollution from our great cities, but we know through science that they're infinite in number. Abraham probably had an awesome view of thousands of stars and could easily have believed that to be their true number.

From our earliest days, we Jews have been contemplating our relationship to the wider world, small as we are and vast as is the planet. That's why our story begins with the Creation of the universe and not merely with our own national history. We're not alone in that type of story. Other cultures, including some of our Canadian aboriginal myths, begin in a somewhat similar fashion, but ours is unique to us. Our life story demands that we see the world as a designed system in which we humans share God's sense of responsibility to make it a better place – to repair this small world.

Anti-Semitism: looking for solutions

I was heartened by the resolve of the parliamentarians from almost 50 countries attending the Inter-Parliamentary Coalition to Combat Antisemitism to commit their countries to opposing anti-Semitism. But I was struck, too, by the hard work ahead in bringing that resolve to fruition – hard work that must be borne not only by governments but by ordinary citizens.

Sara R. Horowitz in Toronto

The 2-1/2 day meeting on Parliament Hill featured panels of experts on anti-Semitism describing the full scope of this hatred. Participants weren't just seeking more information and analysis, but a solution. What will staunch the growth of anti-Semitism? The development and enforcement of legislation is profoundly important in this struggle. But so, too, is the engagement of ordinary citizens in winning over their neighbours.

Several concrete ideas emerged from the conference.One recurrent emphasis is that we work to put anti-Semitism back on the anti-racist agenda, making it a shared concern of our community – whether that be our campus, neighbourhood or civic culture – rather than a parochial focus of Jews alone. Today – odd as it may seem to CJN readers – anti-Semitism has fallen out of the mission of many groups concerned with combating racism, sexism and other nefarious "isms."

To do so, we need to be willing to get our hands dirty – to enter the fray, to be willing to take on anti-Semitic speech, imagery and other acts. This isn't as easy as it sounds. It goes beyond writing letters to editors, politicians and others in positions of power from the safety of our computers – although that kind of speaking out remains important. It involves stepping outside our comfort zones, speaking with people who think differently from us and engaging them and their ideas.

It's easy to denounce blatant behaviour, imagery and rhetoric. But anti-Semitism comes in many guises, and its proponents have learned to deploy an increasingly sophisticated arsenal of strategies. Except on rare occasions, I don't believe we can persuade extremists to change their views. But the audiences that extremists target – people of goodwill who want to do the "right" thing, but are only vaguely informed – are open to reason and persuasion. That audience is, essentially, our fellow citizens. We need to speak to them in the language of shared Canadian values, and we need to fine-tune arguments that can puncture the manipulative and insidious language in which anti-Semitism is couched today.

For example: "I'm Jewish, so you can't call me anti-Semitic." Those who say that would be the first to point to the fallacy of a woman declaiming: "I am against a women's legal right to abortion or to birth control. You can't call me sexist, because I am a woman." It's not about the person saying the words, it's about the words that are said.

Another example: "Here they go again, the Jews crying 'wolf.' So predictable." Such statements pull anti-Semitism off the agenda entirely. It's an old tactic, one I remember from the beginning of my career, when a colleague at an American university declined to include the perspective of Jewish studies in a conference on "the other" that included presentations from African-American studies, women's studies, Chicano studies and so on. Why? "Oh, you know Jews. They'll just sit around and talk about anti-Semitism." So why not turn the tables? "So predictable, the 'apartheid' rhetoric. Anyone who knows anything about South Africa knows it doesn't hold water."

Produced two years after World War II, Gentleman's Agreement was one of the first major Hollywood movies to take on anti-Semitism in America. In it, a Jewish soldier returning from the battlefield tells a high-placed friend that Americans need to fight anti-Semitism not because of the "poor, poor Jews" but because America cannot be America if it tolerates this hatred. The same is true of Canada and all democratic societies. Our country's commitment to oppose anti-Semitism isn't merely to protect a minority vulnerable to prejudice, but to protect itself, to prevent its foundational principles from unraveling.

The Kirshner File

A warts-and-all portrait of Mordecai Richler

It has been left to Charles Foran, a Canadian novelist, journalist and book reviewer of Irish and French descent, to write what is surely the definitive biography of Canada's most accomplished Jewish literary figure, Mordecai Richler, who died at 70 in 2001. Foran's Mordecai: The Life & Times (Alfred A. Knopf Canada) takes a reader on a never less than interesting journey from his birth to his death in Montreal, with prolonged stops in Europe, where Richler honed his craft as a writer. The book benefits from its access to family letters, private archives and posthumous interviews with his wife and friends.

Sheldon Kirshner in Toronto

Yet Mordecai is not an authorized work. Published on the heels of Reinhold Kramer's Mordecai Richler: Leaving St. Urbain, Michael Posner's The Last Honest Man, Joel Yanofsky's Mordecai & Me and Ada Craniford's Mordecai Richler: A Life in Ten Novels, Foran's work is a full-blooded, warts-and-all account of an irreverent man who challenged hypocrisy and valued the truth and was sometimes accused of being a self-hating Jew. It is also a portrait of a son who was estranged from his mother, a husband who dearly loved his second wife and a father who was devoted to his children.

A secular Jew who traded on his roots, he was the scion of Orthodox Jews from Poland. Richler was raised in Montreal's Mile End district, a city-within-a-city whose poor residents were mostly immigrants. The house on Esplanade in which he, his older brother and parents lived was near local landmarks that found their way into Richler's satirical and evocative novels: Paperman's Funeral Home, Baron Byng High School, Schwartz's Hebrew Deli, the Colonial Baths and the Balfour building, the hub of the garment industry.

Lily, his intense and difficult mother, had contempt for his father, Moses, a gentle and passive person. Lily, whose father, Yudel Rosenberg, was a respected rabbi, divorced Moses as she was having an affair with her boarder, a German-Jewish refugee named Julius Frankel. Lily's infidelity had a detrimental effect on Richler's relations with her, as Foran documents at some length. The searingly frank letter Richler wrote Lily in 1976, contained in a chapter titled "Dear Maw," shattered their relations for good.

Richler was a bold and outspoken boy, and at the Talmud Torah where he studied, his pisk – his mouth – earned him a measure of admiration from fellow students. Although smart, he was not a stellar student. He managed a 78 per cent in English literature, but his overall average on graduation from Baron Byng was 64.6. Falling just short of being admitted to McGill University, he enrolled at Sir George Williams University, where, as an aspiring journalist, he wrote for the campus paper, the Georgian.

In his final year at Sir George, the only "A" he got was in an English course. By then, he was freelancing for the Herald, a racy tabloid that bought his unsigned stories on social and sporting events in and around Sir George at five cents a word.

Foran describes the youthful Richler as a "poser" whose manner resembled that of a pool-hall hustler rather than an up-and-coming man of letters. The only person he could confide in was Evelyn Sacks, his former teacher who may have been his first lover.

At her suggestion, Richler visited her cousin in New York City, Elie Abel, a Montrealer who wrote for the New York Times. Abel advised him to stay in school if he wanted to be a reporter and start writing if he wished to be a novelist. So at the ripe old age of 19, Richler, unhappy at home, set sail for Europe, having decided that Montreal was a boring provincial backwater. Moses, who had bought him a typewriter two years before, voiced support for his decision. Lily cashed in his $800 insurance policy for him.

Richler landed in Paris, where Ernest Hemingway, F. Scott Fitzgerald and Morley Callaghan had preceded him in the 1920s. "Did I tell you about this Richler?" Richler's older friend and fellow Montrealer, Bill Weintraub, wrote in a letter to aspiring novelist Brian Moore. "He's from Montreal, has a peculiar first name and wants to be a writer. Very young and rather cheeky."

Subsisting in Paris on care packages from home, Richler decamped to the unspoiled Spanish island of Ibiza, which was considerably cheaper in terms of its standard of living. From Ibiza, Richler informed Moses that he could no longer accept "the ritualistic dogma" of Orthodox Judaism.

Mordecai Richler as a young man

In his one-dollar-a-day room, he mapped out a novel, The Rotten People, which, Foran observes, was "a screed, cross-eyed with self-absorption and judgmental to the point of being hateful." Mavis Gallant, then an acquaintance, found it a juvenile and pointless exercise in revenge. It remained unpublished.

Returning to Paris, Richler enjoyed its pleasures through alcohol, hash, carousing and jazz and through friendships with Terry Southern and James Baldwin. Still broke, he resided in a grimy hotel that had once been a brothel. Although one of his short stories had already been published, others were summarily rejected by the likes of Harper's and Atlantic. But he struck paydirt when a British agent accepted The Acrobats, his first published novel.

Back to Montreal for a brief period before settling in Britain for an extended stay, he worked at odd jobs and cranked out radio news copy for the CBC. Richler, then known as Mort, married Cathy Boudreau, a Franco Canadian, in 1954. His parents were not amused.

Richler's next novel, Son of a Smaller Hero, was generally panned, with the Globe and Mail saying it would hardly "further the interests of the Jewish race." The newspaper, however, praised his fourth novel, The Apprenticeship of Duddy Kravitz, which came out two years after A Choice of Enemies. Calling it Richler's breakthrough novel, the Toronto daily noted that he had now proved himself "a mature and brilliant writer" after three false starts. Richler's subsequent novels, from The Incomparable Atuk and Cocksure to St. Urbain's Horseman and Joshua Then and Now, generally impressed readers and critics alike. But in Foran's considered view, Solomon Gursky Was Here, which was published eight years before his final novel, Barney's Version, was his magnum opus, one he had been born to write after decades of "lived experience, literary training and deepening wisdom about human affairs."

As Foran tells it, Richler was a workaholic, hewing to a seven-day work week and always "novelizing." His second wife, Florence Wood Mann – a beauty with brains and a warm personality whom he married in a church because no rabbi in Montreal would bless an intermarriage – accepted his work ethic because she believed in his gift and loved him.

Apart from novels, as Foran notes, Richler produced one short-story collection (The Street), children's fiction in the form of the Jacob Two-Two triology, travelogues (including This Year in Jerusalem), film scripts, essays (Shovelling Trouble and Belling the Cat, among other works), magazine and newspaper journalism and anthologies. He had no trouble providing for his growing family, often demanding stratospheric fees.

Foran burrows deeply into his personality, taking note of his silences, his discomfort with strangers (as I personally discovered in two separate interviews with Richler in the 1980s), his enjoyment of material pleasures – whisky and cigars in particular – and the company of old and new friends. Foran, too, delves into Richler's acrimonious battle with the Quebec separatist movement and cursorily looks at his position on Israel. Foran's reflections of Richler's last days before he tragically succumbed to an assortment of ailments is poignant. Mordecai is well worth reading.

Capital preservation and monthly income we can count on

I'm done with risk. I work too hard for my money. A friend introduced me to the Romspen Mortgage Fund and I soon realized that this is totally different from any other investment we had made.

There have been no surprises or up and down swings. Romspen gives us a consistent strategy managed by a team that has integrity, disciplined management principles and years of experience in mortgage administration.

It's important for me to believe that my family has a secure future.

Ron Pearlstone

You've heard of the Romspen Mortgage Investment Fund. Isn't it time you found out more? Call us to receive an information package or visit www.romspen.com.

ROMSPEN
mortgage investment fund

162 Cumberland Street, Suite 300
Toronto, Ontario M5R 3N5

416.966.1100
1.800.494.0389

www.romspen.com

Jews must go on offensive: British journalist

By RON CSILLAG
Special to The CJN

It is time Jews and other victims of "western irrationality" stopped playing defence and went on the offensive.

"We have to stop trying to argue with bigots, and set out to defeat them instead. Diaspora Jews have to rethink. It's time to change the narrative. Time to stop the handwringing."

It was a no-punches-pulled address last week by British journalist and author Melanie Phillips to a lunchtime gathering of the Friends of Simon Wiesenthal Center for Holocaust Studies in Toronto.

Melanie Phillips

A columnist for the Daily Mail and author of The World Turned Upside Down: The Global Battle over God, Truth and Power, Phillips, known for her bluntness, did not disappoint at the event, billed as a "State of the Union" luncheon also featuring conservative pundit David Frum.

It's time, said Phillips, "to stop conniving with the premise of our enemies that the Middle East impasse would be solved by establishing a state of Palestine to which the [Jewish] settlements – and thus by extension, Israel – are the obstacle. [It's] time for us to stop agreeing that the Jews are to blame for their own predicament."

To applause, Phillips said Jews should demand of the world "why it expects Israel to make compromises with people who have tried for nine decades to wipe out the Jewish presence in the land and are still firing rockets at it."

'It's time to change the narrative. Time to stop the handwringing.'

They should ask "why America, Britain and the EU single Israel out for pressure which they apply to no other victims of genocidal aggression. For in any other such conflict, their cause of the aggressors would be deemed totally forfeit by their behaviour."

Jews should also be asking left-leaning progressives – including Jewish ones – why they support the "racist ethnic cleansing of every Jew from a future state of Palestine.

"Why they are not marching against Hamas on account of its tyrannical oppression of Palestinians in Gaza?" wondered Phillips, a popular figure in right-wing circles. "Why they are not mounting a boycott, divestment and sanctions campaign against Mahmoud Abbas' Palestinian Authority on account of his Holocaust denial and the PA's continued incitement of Arab children to Jew-hatred, murder and genocide?"

She conceded that prejudice cannot be fought with reason.

"We have a duty as Jews to bear witness to the truth," she said. "And we have a duty to fight in our defence. We can best do this by getting off our back foot and putting them on theirs. We should accuse them not of anti-Semitic motives we cannot prove, but of absurdities and contradictions and untruths they cannot deny."

She drove the point home: "We should ridicule them, humiliate them, destroy their reputations; boycott them, not invite them to our houses, show them our disapproval and contempt. Treat them as pariahs. Turn their own weapons against them.

"In short, we must get up off our collective knees and fight. Justice, human rights and truth are on our side, not theirs. We must reclaim them as our own."

In his remarks, Frum, a columnist and speechwriter for former U.S president George W. Bush, recapped the results of the recent U.S. midterm elections, which saw the Republican party surge in popularity.

David Frum

Frum said relations between the two American political parties "have broken down," and the Republicans are "now splitting" into "formal and informal" camps, the latter the populist, right-wing Tea Party movement.

"You have to wonder who's really in charge," he said.

Because it's going to be "more difficult" for the Congress to act, the "action" will shift to the U.S. Federal Reserve, Frum predicted.

He said the United Nations' sanctions against Iran have been "reasonably effective" because the country's nuclear ambitions appear stalled.

Sounding a note of optimism, Frum said he sees a "new global movement" of support for Israel as a symbol of freedom in the Middle East.

Hurry in. Don't pay til May!

HONDA Certified Used Vehicles

We've cut our prices on pre-loved Hondas and are offering financing as low as 1.9% or no payments due until May 2011. Now, for this month only get a BONUS of winter tires or $500 gas card AND three oil changes.

SISLEY HONDA family driven

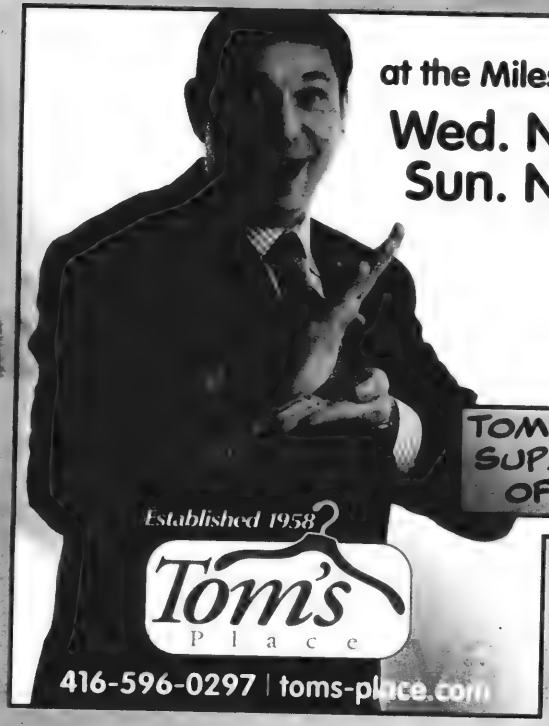
Greg Ashkenazy
Used Vehicle Sales
gashkenazy@sisley.ca
800-211-0931 ext.356

Seymour Ezer
New Vehicle Sales
sezer@sisley.ca
866-384-7916 ext.333

88 Steeles Ave. W,
SISLEY.ca
866-490-6721

TOM'S PLACE • MILES NADAL JCC WAREHOUSE SALE



at the Miles Nadal JCC
Wed. Nov. 24 - Sun. Nov. 28

TOM MIHALIK, SUPERHERO OF SUITS

Established 1958
Tom's Place
416-596-0297 | toms-place.com

SUPER SUITS at SUPER PRICES

SELECTED MEN'S SUITS 5 FOR 1 LESS $250 (WITH THIS AD)

ITALIAN & GERMAN DESIGNER SUITS 50-75% OFF (REGULAR RETAIL)

WOMEN'S WEAR Up to 90% OFF — REDUCED ANOTHER 50% OFF

SELECTED MEN'S SHIRTS & SWEATERS 5 FOR 1

MEN'S SPORTS JACKETS — REDUCED ANOTHER 50% OFF

LEATHER JACKETS Men's & Women's, starting at $199 — REDUCED 50%

Miles Nadal JCC Fall Warehouse Sale
750 Spadina Av. (Bloor St. near Spadina Subway)
Wednesday, Nov. 24 – Sunday, November 28
Wed 11-8 • Thurs 10–5 • Fri 11-8 • Sat 10-6 • Sun 11-6

JOIN US

Chabad Lubavitch 32nd Dinner & Draw

Honouring Tom Mihalik

Thursday, November 25, 2010
Tickets $540 or $5,400 for a table of 10

JOIN US

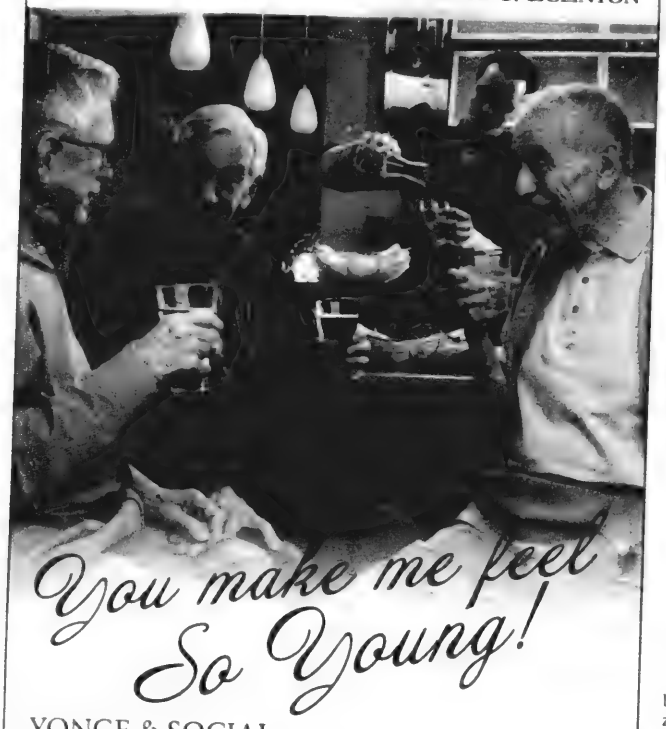
Chabad Lubavitch 905-731-7000 www.chabad.ca
Beth Avraham Yoseph Congregation, 613 Clark Avenue, Thornhill
Rabbi Z. A. Grossbaum

Special Gifts:
Joey M. Tanenbaum

Chairmen:
Mark Altow
Martin Richman
Martin Teplitsky

Committee:
Ronald Appleby
Yosi Behar
Samuel H. Cohen
Eli Dadouch
Charles Diamond
Allan Erlick
Dr. Louis Fields
Dr. Charles Gold
Leslie Goldberg
Richard Goldberg
Morton Goldhar
Murray Goldman
Martin Goose
Stephen Green
Yitzchok Grossbaum
Steven Handelman
Michael Harris
Joseph Kerzner
Steven Latner
Shelly Libfeld
Shawn Marr
Harley Mintz
Saul Rabinowitz
Gerry Richler
Alex Richman
Robert Schacter
Henry Schnurbach
Jack Schwartz
Allan C. Silber
Eddy Sonshine
Sidney Spiegel
Harold Spring
Fred Waks
Jay Waks
Allan Werger
Jerry Werger

RENTAL RETIREMENT LIVING AT YONGE & EGLINTON



You make me feel So Young!

YONGE & SOCIAL

Step into Toronto's premiere resort-inspired retirement residence. From the smiling faces of our attentive staff to the hustle and bustle of our residents and guests heading off to a fitness or aqua fit class, lecture, computer tutorial, book club, dance class, art class or acting class...this is a very unique community that enjoys life to the fullest!

Perhaps it's dinner in the Bistro or the Classic fine dining rooms, followed by the latest movie release or attend a musical recital or concert. If meeting positive, interesting, like minded people is of interest to you, then you have come to the right place!

If feeling young again is what you are looking for... then you have just found it!

The Dunfield RETIREMENT RESIDENCE

Limited SNOWBIRD SUITES Now Available*

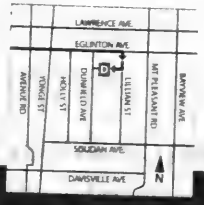
BOOK NOW AND SAVE THOUSANDS!*

ALL INCLUSIVE FROM $3,500/MTH

FULLY FURNISHED SUITES NOW AVAILABLE
Tour Today-Move In Tomorrow!

77 Dunfield Ave., Toronto
Call today for more information or personal tour.
416-481-8524

*See sales representatives for details.
Prices and specifications subject to change without notice. E. & O. E. 2010



WWW.THEDUNFIELD.COM

Holocaust Education Week

Levent Bilgen, Turkey's consul general in Toronto, left, and Arnold Reisman. [Uluc Ozguven photo]

Wartime ambassador's actions focus of debate

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

The heroism of a Muslim Turkish ambassador who saved Jewish lives in Nazi-occupied France was the subject of a sharp but friendly debate between a Jewish researcher and Turkey's consul general in Toronto.

The encounter, which took place recently at Temple Sinai Congregation during Holocaust Education Week, pitted Arnold Reisman against Levent Bilgen.

Reisman, the author of An Ambassador and a Mensch: The Story of a Turkish Diplomat in Vichy France, claimed that Behic Erkin's decision to rescue some 3,000 Jews of Turkish origin was personal and altruistic, but at variance with official Turkish policy.

"It's my position, in all friendship and respect, that there was not a policy by the Turkish government to help Jews," said Reisman, a professional engineer who survived the Holocaust in Poland and immigrated to the United States after World War II.

Bilgen, a Turkish diplomat who was posted to Turkey's embassy in Israel from 1999 to 2002 before assuming his current position in Toronto, sharply disagreed with Reisman.

Far from being a loose canon, he asserted in a rebuttal, Erkin acted in accordance with directives from the Turkish government.

Bilgen claimed that Reisman's presentation was implicitly disrespectful of Turkey's genuine efforts to help Jews during the Holocaust and was part of a "sinister" campaign to defame and harm Turkey.

The object of their clash, Behic Erkin, was Turkey's ambassador to France from 1939 to 1943. He arrived in Paris several weeks before the outbreak of World War II and about nine months before Germany's conquest of France.

Born in 1876 in Istanbul, Erkin was a close friend of Mustafa Kemal Ataturk, the revered founder of the Republic of Turkey after World War I and the first president of Turkey.

During World War I, when Ottoman Turkey was aligned with Germany, Erkin won a German Iron Cross medal for bravery. Later, he fought in Turkey's War of Independence and served in Ataturk's cabinet as a minister.

From 1928 to 1939, he was Turkey's ambassador to Hungary, and on the eve of World War II, he was hand-picked by the Turkish president, Ismet Inonu, to be Turkey's envoy to France.

Reisman, who until recently was a professor of operations research at Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, began his lecture on an upbeat note by saying that Turkey, a neutral power during the war, should be commended for having come to the assistance of Jews in their darkest hour.

As the United States and Canada dithered while Jews in Nazi-occupied Europe were murdered, Erkin and his staff worked hard to rescue Jews in France who had Turkish passports or an ancestral connection to Turkey, said Reisman, who started taking a serious interest in Turkey after visiting that predominantly Muslim nation as a tourist some years ago.

By his estimate, France was home to 20,000 Jews with Turkish roots when it was invaded by Germany in 1940. Jews of Turkish descent comprised slightly more than six per cent of France's Jewish population at the time.

About eight per cent of such Jews were deported to German concentration camps, he said.

In saving some 3,000 Jews, Erkin contravened Turkish policy, he said. "In Turkey today, the politically correct view is that it was the policy of Turkey to help Jews." But in fact, Erkin risked his career to assist Jews.

Continued on page 15

50 Jews rescued by Turkish consul general

Continued from page 14

In German-occupied Greece and Yugoslavia, he noted, Turkey did not extend assistance to Jews with Turkish roots out of fear of angering Germany.

On the island of Rhodes, however, Turkey's consul general, Selahattin Ulkumen, incurred the wrath of the Nazis by rescuing about 50 Jews, Reisman acknowledged. After the war, he noted, Ulkumen was honoured by Yad Vashem as a Righteous Gentile.

In an explanation of Erkin's unilateral behaviour, Reisman suggested he had a well-established record for acting independently and traded on his excellent connections in Turkey.

As well, German officials in France deferred to Erkin, not wishing to offend Turkey, which maintained cordial diplomatic and substantial commercial relations with Germany throughout the war.

Behic Erkin

Finally, the Germans were in awe of Erkin's status as one of the very few foreigners who had ever won the coveted Iron Cross medal.

According to Reisman, the pro-German Vichy French regime pressured Turkey to recall Erkin in 1943. Shortly afterward, he said, Erkin submitted his resignation. He died in 1961.

Reisman said Erkin deserves to be recognized by Yad Vashem as a Righteous Gentile, and will support all such efforts.

Taking the floor again after Reisman's talk, Bilgen said Erkin was not recalled after three tours of duty, since he had already reached retirement age.

In an allusion to Reisman's accusation that Turkish diplomats in Greece and Yugoslavia had not come to the aid of Jews, Bilgen said moral judgments are improper in light of the difficult circumstances that prevailed in those countries during that period.

Turkey allowed Jewish refugees to transit through Turkish territory and permitted the Jewish Agency to maintain an office on its soil, he said.

Turkey's centuries-old bonds of friendship with the Jewish people cannot be broken, notwithstanding current political tensions between Turkey and Israel, Bilgen said.

Reisman, in an attempt to credit Turkey for humanitarian work, praised the Turkish government for having admitted 190 German Jewish refugees, all academics, fleeing Nazism. And he absolved Turkey for the Struma tragedy. The Struma, a passenger ship filled with hundreds of Romanian Jews bound for Palestine, was ordered out of Turkish territorial waters and then sunk by a Soviet submarine. Reisman blamed Britain, the mandatory power in Palestine, for the Struma disaster.

HOLOCAUST EDUCATION: Grade 8 students from the Toronto Heschel School and Claude Watson School for the Arts learned about the Holocaust and genocide at a workshop entitled, "Everyone Has a Name," in partnership with Holocaust Education Week. The students heard the testimony of a Righteous Gentile and reflected on their experience through writing, visual arts and drama. Pictured are students Dorothy Lin and, left, Shalhevet Gobrin talking about their backgrounds following an ice-breaker exercise facilitated by two students.

Bath n' Bedtime

...where the white sale never ends

Semi-Annual Clearance

15–80% OFF

Everything in the store

Wed Nov 24 through Sun Nov 28

Extended Sale Hours

Wed 10-7 • Thurs 10-9 • Fri 10-7 • Sat 10-6 • Sun 11-5

502 Lawrence Ave. West (at Bathurst)

Lawrence Plaza • 416-781-8600

Holocaust Education Week

Polish hero Jan Karski remembered

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

He was described as a hero who desperately tried to save Polish Jews during the Holocaust.

Jan Karski, a courier for the Polish underground during Germany's wartime occupation of Poland, twice snuck into the Warsaw Ghetto and once visited Izbica, a concentration camp where Jews were sent before being transferred to the Belzec and Sobibor death camps.

Karski took his report of Nazi atrocities in Poland to Britain and the United States, speaking to British Foreign Minister Anthony Eden and U.S. President Franklin Roosevelt, but his pleas for help were reportedly met with incredulity and indifference.

And so the Nazis were able to murder three million Jews in Poland with impunity.

Karski's mission, the stuff of heroism, was recalled at a recent forum sponsored by Holocaust Education Week at Pride of Israel Synagogue.

Jan Karski

Poland's consul general in Toronto, Marek Ciesielczuk, credited Karski with having provided the Allies with the first "trustworthy" report about conditions in Poland under the Nazis.

Ewa Wierzynska, the featured speaker and manager of a project to perpetuate Karski's memory, expressed hope that he can be a bridge between Poles and Jews, whose historic relationship has been uneasy and unsettled.

"He had empathy for the Jewish people," said Wierzynska, who initiated and now manages the Jan Karski Unfinished Mission. "He was haunted by the Holocaust."

Wierzynska, a journalist and an adviser to the Polish History Museum currently under construction in Warsaw, listed the biographical highlights of Karski's life.

Born as Jan Kozielewski in 1914 in Lodz, he was the eighth child of a Catholic leather worker and grew up in a largely Jewish neighbourhood. He joined the diplomatic corps after his university studies.

Mobilized after the outbreak of World War II, he served in an artillery detachment on the eastern front. Taken captive by the Red Army, he was released in a prisoner exchange.

He was recruited by the Polish resistance movement, taking the nom de guerre of Jan Karski. Due to his photographic memory, Wierzynska noted, he became a courier, making secret trips to France, Britain and Slovakia, where he was arrested and tortured by the Gestapo. After escaping, Karski returned to active service in the Home Army's information and propaganda bureau.

In 1942, just months before the Nazis rounded up and deported tens of thousands of Jews in the Warsaw Ghetto to the Treblinka death camp, he undertook one of his most courageous missions.

Ewa Wierzynska

At the behest of Polish Jewish leaders, he visited the Warsaw ghetto, witnessing deprivation and terror on a grand scale. "He was profoundly affected," said Wierzynska.

Karski also went to Izbica. "I came out sick, seized by fits of nausea," he would write years later. "I vomited blood. I had seen horrifying things there."

Karski, whom she called "this most incredible witness," delivered a report on his visits to the British and U.S. governments, but to no avail. Neither Britain nor the United States, caught up in a monumentally difficult war, took steps to stop the machinery of the Holocaust.

The skepticism and indifference Karski encountered in government circles in the United States must have been demoralizing. Roosevelt was not really interested in Karski's findings about the Holocaust, she said, while Roosevelt's friend, the Jewish Supreme Court justice Felix Frankfurter, voiced utter disbelief.

After meeting Karski, Frankfurter said, "A man like me talking to a man like you must be totally frank. So I must say I am unable to believe in what I have just heard."

Unable to return to Poland after his cover had been blown, Karski remained in the United States, writing a best-seller about his horrific experiences in Poland.

In the aftermath of the war, Karski, a staunch anti-Communist, became a U.S. citizen as well as a political science professor at Georgetown University in Washington, D.C.

Continued on page 17

ROLEX • PATEK • CARTIER
DIAMONDS
BUY • SELL • TRADE
VAN RIJK • INSTANT CASH
440-1233 vanrijk.com

JOIN OUR FAMILY AS BIALIK GROWS NORTH

Bialik is excited to announce the opening of registration for our future northern branch to be located on the Lebovic Campus in September 2013

Applications are now being accepted for students entering JK – Grade 1 in 2013 and beyond

Join us for an Information Session at
TanenbaumCHAT at the Kimel Family Education Centre
Perlis Boardroom
9600 Bathurst St. Vaughan

Wednesday, November 24 – 7:00 pm

Please RSVP to Danielle Waltman
at 416 783 3346 ext 285
www.bialik.ca

Bialik Hebrew Day School
בית ספר יומי ע"ש ביאליק טאג שול

UJA FEDERATION OF GREATER TORONTO

joseph • wolf lebovic jewish community campus

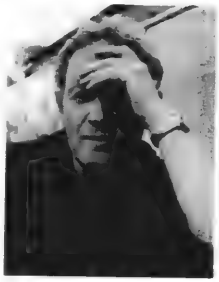
Honour pays tribute to Canadian war vets

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

The idea was formed in Yuri Dojc's mind 13 years ago.

Dojc, a Jewish photographer who settled in Canada as a refugee in 1969, was flying back from his father's funeral in Czechoslovakia when he struck up a conversation with his seat mate.

Gerald Fry



Yuri Dojc

The man, a Jew, told Dojc about his ordeal in the Auschwitz concentration camp.

Dojc was moved by his words.

The man said soldiers, not governments, had liberated Nazi concentration camps.

"Those words rang in my ears," Dojc recalled.

Spurred on by their conversation, Dojc, one of Canada's pre-eminent photographers, began taking pictures of Canadian veterans of World War II.

Many of his subjects lived in the Chartwell seniors' home in Mississauga.

Chartwell operates more than 150 retirement homes and long-term residences in North America.

Last week, 65 years after the end of World War II, Dojc paid tribute to Canada's vets by bringing out a book about them.

Honour, published in a hardcover edition by Chartwell, contains 35 black-and-white and colour photographs and stories of the old soldiers.

Remembrance Day 2010

Dojc, whose photographs have appeared in art magazines and books, is pleased with Honour.

"It was one of the most fulfilling experiences I have been involved in," he writes in the forward.

He adds, "It was evident early in this project that we were not just photographing people, we were capturing history."

Among the vets featured in Honour is Gerald Fry, who was born in Karlsruhe, Germany, in 1924.

The son of a Jewish physician who served in the German army in World War I and was murdered in Auschwitz, Fry was sent to Britain by his parents in 1939, when he was 15 years old.

Fry, who lived with foster parents, never saw his mother and father again.

When he was of age, he enlisted in the British army. "I had a score to settle with the Germans," he says in Honour.

Net proceeds from the book will be donated to Canadian organizations committed to the remembrance of Canada's vets.

Clinton was one of Karski's students

Continued from page 16

One of his students would be a future U.S. president, Bill Clinton.

In 1965, he married the Polish Jewish dancer Pola Nirenska, whose family was murdered during the Holocaust and who committed suicide in 1992.

Recognized as a Righteous Gentile by Yad Vashem in 1982, Karski was made an honorary Israeli citizen in 1994. He died in 2000.

On the 10th anniversary of his death, Wierzynska, in conjunction with the Jewish Historical Institute in Warsaw, established the Jan Karski Unfinished Mission to commemorate a Pole who risked life and limb to alert the world to the unfolding tragedy of the Holocaust.

Karski, she observed, was a good Christian who was ready to stand up for and defend people of a different faith.

The Jan Karski Unfinished Mission is not the only project of its kind in Poland today, said Wierzynska, who has worked for the Museum of the History of Polish Jews, which is scheduled to open in Warsaw in 2012.

She cited the Jan Karski International Institute for Dialogue and Tolerance in Ruda Slaska, the Jan Karski Society in Kielce and the Stradomskie Dialogue Center in Cracow.

Taste The Good Life

If you're too busy to act retired take a bite out of life at a Tridel inspired retirement rental residence in your neighborhood. Enjoy hotel style service from a staff that knows you don't live in their building, they work in your home:

- 1 and 2 bedroom rental suites
- 24 hour concierge
- Healthcare professionals on staff
- Hotel-style services
- Dining room with table service
- Piano, pub and fireplace lounges
- Patio café
- Serenity Spa and massage
- Personal LivingWell coaching
- Hair salon and esthetician
- Housekeeping and laundry services
- Transportation for scheduled events
- Building wide emergency response system
- Cable and telephone included

Act now for move-in and rental bonuses

DELMANOR
Northtown

(416) 225-9146
5351 Yonge Street,
south of Finch

TRIDEL

Visit www.delmanor.com for all our GTA locations.

Grandchildren were key to reliving experiences

Continued from page 3

Kaye said a lot of time had to pass before survivors were willing to tell their stories publicly. He believes it was the arrival of grandchildren with their questions about the war that finally prompted an outpouring of their Holocaust experiences.

"Survivors needed time, a sense of continuity and that's what grandchildren are."

Yad Vashem, Israel's Holocaust Memorial authority, in conjunction with the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, has produced eight films that followed survivors back to their birthplaces in Salonika, Greece, Hungary, Ukraine, Poland, Belarus and the Netherlands. It reflects "a kaleidoscope of the Jewish people before World War II."

The survivors spoke about their lives before the Holocaust, their experiences during the war and then "their return to life" afterward.

Kaye presented excerpts from the films, one of which – May Your Memory be Love – featured Hanna Bar Yesha, in which the retired school principal revisited her home in Hungary and then travelled to Birkenau, where she was sent with her mother and aunt.

"The film connects youths to people who had lives, who were not born in concentration camps. They came from rich, caring homes," Kaye said. "That creates empathy."

Holocaust survivor and Canadian army veteran Martin Maxwell, a Viennese Jew who witnessed Kristallnacht, said he was moved by the respect the Dutch still show Canadian veterans. The Canadian army liberated Holland, and the Dutch make sure their children and grandchildren know that history and "the sacrifices made to free them."

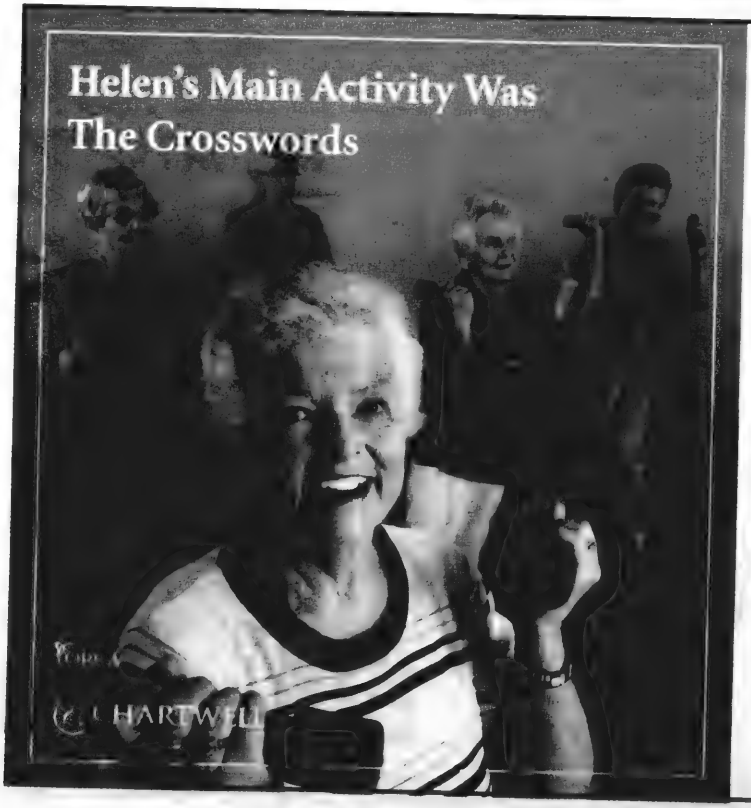
"Today we remember the 42,000 Canadians who did not come home and the 152 military who came home to us in coffins from Afghanistan," he said.

Shaarei Shomayim's spiritual leader, Rabbi Chaim Strauchler, delivered a dvar Torah in which he lamented the political correctness that inhibits discussion of "good and evil." A pernicious form of Holocaust denial attempts to put the Holocaust in the past and rejects the need to remember it and take lessons from it.

That Holocaust, he said, "makes us look evil in the eye and say it happened."

MONTREAL JEWISH COMMUNITY REMEMBERS

Survivor Leo Dortort lights the memorial candle at the annual Kristallnacht commemoration in Montreal. To read full story, please go to cjnews.com.



Now she has other options to weigh

Staying active can mean many things. Playing cards with friends may be fun, but for circulation, flexibility and overall good health Helen needs more rigorous activities.

At Chartwell we offer residents a mix of activities from musical presentations to card tournaments, as well as yoga, and exercise classes for those looking for something a little more active.

CHANUKAH PARTY!
Wednesday, December 1
from 3pm-4pm
Join us in celebrating the Festival of Lights.
Enjoy entertainment and refreshments.

Chartwell
CLASSIC
CONSTANTIA
RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
784 Centre St., Thornhill, ON • 905-771-1013

Blue Ribbon committee ensures Jewish Toronto reaches its full potential

Community's business leaders help oversee over one million square feet of community space

By Daniel Horowitz

In order to effectively oversee and operate UJA Federation of Greater Toronto's rapidly expanding real estate portfolio, its Campus Management Committee, headed up by chair Leo Goldhar and vice-chair Ariella Rohringer, has enlisted some of our community's best and brightest.

The Committee, which began operations in 2009, was established to ensure that UJA Federation's Tomorrow Campaign campuses: The Joseph and Wolf Lebovic Jewish Community Campus in Vaughan; Sherman Campus at Bathurst, north of Sheppard, and downtown's Miles Nadal JCC and The Wolfond Centre for Jewish Campus Life, and other properties owned and operated by UJA, were run as efficiently and professionally as possible, something that Goldhar sees as vital.

"As chair of the Campus Management Committee, I have the privilege to coordinate management of all of UJA Federation's capital projects, as well as its complete real estate portfolio, and to make a difference in the way they're managed," says Goldhar, a Tomorrow Campaign pioneer who, in 2000, along with Lou Greenbaum, had the vision and imagination needed to help UJA Federation acquire the 50-acre parcel of what was then nothing more than farmland, on which the Lebovic Campus now stands. Today, Vaughan is home to one of the fastest growing Jewish communities in North America. To keep up with that growth, the Tomorrow Campaign is currently building a new, 200,000 square foot community complex on the Lebovic Campus, complete with more than 350 underground parking spots.

"It's absolutely vital that when you're talking about something with the breadth and scope, and importance, of the Tomorrow Campaign, there is transparency and that it's managed responsibly and professionally," adds Goldhar.

Leo Goldhar

Ariella Rohringer

Construction of the Schwartz/Reisman Centre on the Lebovic Jewish Community Campus in Vaughan is well under way.

Together, the committee members make up a formidable team that brings considerable business acumen and real estate experience to the table.

Rohringer, herself a lawyer with over 24 years of experience in the real estate sector, and a former chair of the annual UJA Campaign, is a prime example.

"As a former chair of UJA's campaign, I gained a great deal of knowledge of the many agencies that UJA serves and I wanted to couple that knowledge with my legal expertise," says Rohringer.

"My role as vice chair of this committee permits me to use my experience, and assist in ensuring that UJA Federation's real estate assets are managed in the most cost efficient, productive, effective and prudent manner possible from a cost and use perspective, and in line with industry standards and in accord with the wishes of our community," she says.

Besides the three community campuses created by UJA Federation's Tomorrow Campaign, UJA Federation also owns, among other holdings, Haliburton Properties, the site of Camp Northland.

The Campus Management Committee is divided into five taskforces, all of which include Goldhar and Rohringer:

- The Facilities Taskforce includes Lillyann Goldstein, David M. Peltz and Jeff Ross.
- The Seniors Taskforce is made up of Leonard M. Abramsky, Richard Diamond and Louis I. Greenbaum.
- The Prosserman JCC Advisory Taskforce includes Jeffrey I. Cohen, Peter Cohen, David M. Peltz and Harold Wolkin.
- The Schools Taskforce includes Warren Kimel and Marty Rochwerg
- The Downtown Taskforce includes Sheldon H. Goodman, David Y. Green, Michael Harris and Harold Wolkin.

The new Lipa Green Centre, including the Prosserman JCC and Donald Gales Family Pavilion on Sherman Campus.

"As the Tomorrow Campaign and UJA Federation continues to expand Toronto's Jewish community, and its outreach to Jews across the GTA, this committee will ensure that growth and future development reach their capacity, and that our community continues to benefit," says Sherry Kulman, a well-respected executive director of large non-profit agencies for over 20 years, and currently the vice president of Campus Operations, UJA Federation.

"It's true we have aimed to create compelling campuses with inspiring architecture that will capture the imagination of a new generation. However, as valuable and impressive new buildings might be, what's far more important to all of us is what will be happening – and what is happening – on those properties and within those buildings that will help to enrich Jewish life in the Greater Toronto Area," says UJA Federation of Greater Toronto President and CEO, Ted Sokolsky. "This is not just about real estate and construction, it's about celebrating life. We're striving to provide a platform to highlight the best contributions our partner agencies and schools have to offer. Through effectively managed campuses, we can help in creating efficient behind-the-scenes support that will enable them to deliver services and programs that best suit the uniqueness of the local campuses and neighborhoods."

"I've travelled to many, many Jewish communities across North America and the world, and I'm proud to say that when the Tomorrow Campaign has completed its work, Toronto will stand tall as one of the world's preeminent Jewish communities, outside of Israel, and I'm so proud and excited to be part of it all," says Goldhar.

The Miles Nadal JCC

The Wolfond Centre for Jewish Campus Life

SWISS ASSET PROTECTION
For Secure Banking and Investment
www.ashstreetmanagement.com
Ken H. Finkelstein, Attorney
250-507-6175

REGINA'S CATERING & FINE FOODS
A Family Tradition for 48 Years
SHIVA MEALS
SEUDAT HAVRA'AH
(Traditional Meal After Funeral)
844 Sheppard Ave. W.
(at Wilmington)
www.reginasfinefoods.com
416-636-1044

NER ISRAEL YESHIVA
250 Bathurst Glen Drive, Thornhill, Ont. L4J 8A7
Celebrating 50 Years of Torah Continuity
Provides for
KADDISH SERVICES, OBSERVING YAHRZEIT and MEMORIAL PLAQUES
Please invest in the future. Remember Ner Israel in your will.
CALL 905-731-1224

Makom makes it to the top 50

By VICKY TOBIANAH
Special to The CJN

Makom, a new non-profit organization that serves downtown Toronto's growing Jewish community, has been named one of North America's 50 most innovative Jewish non-profits by Slingshot '10-'11, a guidebook that helps funders identify up-and-coming organizations.

Founded in 2009 and based in Toronto's historic Kensington Market, it brings together a variety of Jewish traditions and serves as a place for learning and connecting to Judaism, as well as working for social and environmental justice.

"I had come to Toronto to be the campus rabbi at Hillel of Greater Toronto. While living downtown, I felt a distinct lack of Jewish life that spoke to me," said founder Rabbi Aaron Levy. "And from conversations I had with my friends, I knew others felt disconnected from Jewish life, but they were not averse to connecting if an organization emerged that appealed to them."

The decision to locate the organization – whose full name is Makom: Creative Downtown Judaism – in Kensington Market, the epicentre of an area that was once home to more than 60,000 Jews in the early to mid-20th century, was intentional.

"We are rooted in the space of downtown Toronto, literally a makom [place] for creating an organic Jewish community for downtown Jews," Rabbi Levy said. "We're unique, because we focus equally on the creative arts, learning and social justice. We're primarily concerned with creating a unique Jewish community, focusing on downtown spaces, such as holding services in the Kiever Shul and doing Tashlich on Lake Ontario."

Rabbi Aaron Levy drumming at Makom Kabbalat Shabbat Services.

[Andrea Toole photo]

Makom offers a mix of programming, such as a partnership minyan that requires a minimum of 10 men and 10 women to participate, as well as meditation and contemplative Judaism and what it calls a "Jewish Urban Homesteading Workshop Series."

"There were needs that were not being met in the downtown Jewish area, and I felt a desire to reconnect to the Jewish downtown past," Rabbi Levy said.

"We hope that in the long term, there will be a revitalized Jewish community downtown, in which Makom will have been the catalyst."

Since its founding, Makom has been hosted by the Kiever Shul for biweekly Friday night services and many other programs. It's allowed Makom to facilitate Jewish renewal in a beautiful and historic shul that's a tangible reminder of downtown Jewish history.

Rabbi Levy grew up in Maryland and moved to New York to study neuroscience research

"I never had the intention to become a rabbi Over the course of my undergraduate degree, I realized that the volunteer work I was doing as an informal Jewish educator for high school students was much more meaningful to me," he said. "It was thrilling and then it dawned on me to become a rabbi and do it full time."

He was ordained in 2004 in the first graduating class of Yeshivat Chovevei Torah, a modern Orthodox seminary in New York City. In 2006, he moved to Toronto to work at Hillel

Rabbi Levy said he was was thrilled to hear Makom made Slingshot's Top 50 list. It's the first time a Canadian organization has been recognized in the guidebook's six-year history. Since 2005, Slingshot has become the recognized source for identifying new and innovative organizations dealing with concerns such as Jewish identity, community, and tradition.

"It's a real validation of our hard work and the success of building a new, inclusive Jewish community to fill the gaps of downtown Jewish life. Hopefully, we're just the first of many Canadian organizations who will make the list, as more and more Jews start thinking positively about Jewish life."

To learn more, visit www.makomto.org or e-mail info@makomto.org.

WELCOME HOME

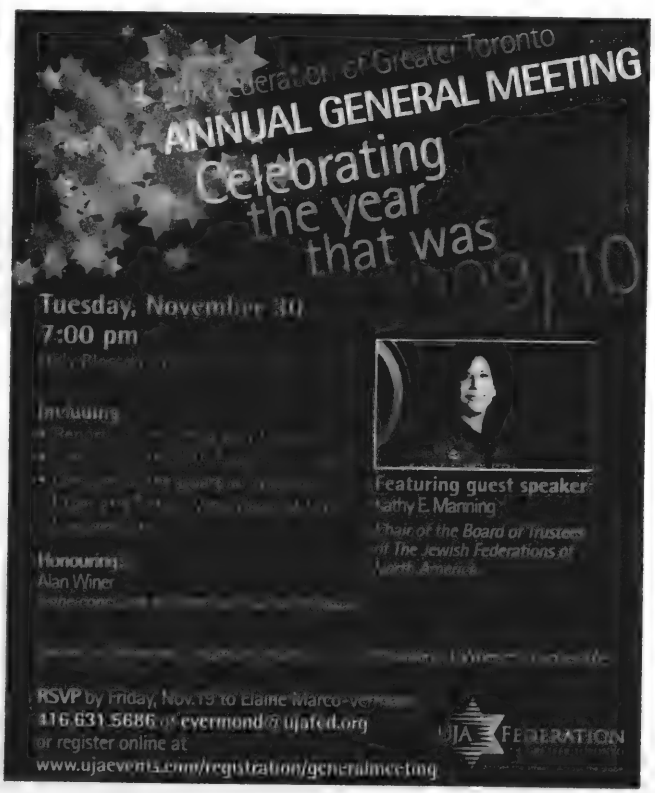
Whether it's our pets in residence, our flowering plants or our employees that act more like family than staff, Thorne Mill on Steeles provides day-to-day experiences that are truly the best.

At Thorne Mill on Steeles, we believe your home should also be where new possibilities exist. We provide a welcome environment for people who want to reconnect with their active lifestyle or enhance their current one. Drop in today to experience the energy, activities and choices that await you. You deserve nothing less.

You don't have to travel far to take a holiday. Enjoy a week in our Get-a-way suite and experience senior living at it's finest.

THORNE MILL
ON STEELES
A SUNRISE SENIOR LIVING COMMUNITY

484 Steeles Ave. W
(between Yonge and Bathurst)
Thornhill, ON L4J 0C7
905-731-4300
www.thornemillonsteeles.ca
INDEPENDENT LIVING
Assisted Living • Memory Care



Coast to Coast

Alleged Paris bomber seeks stay of extradition hearing

Compiled by CJN Staff

The extradition hearing against alleged terrorist Hassan Diab began last week with his lawyer asking the court to stay the proceedings.

Defence lawyer Donald Bayne told Ontario Superior Court Justice Robert Marager that evidence against Diab is unreliable and suspect because it may have been acquired through torture.

Bayne argued that evidence provided by France may have come from unknown sources, perhaps foreign intelligence agencies, including those of Germany and Israel. "We don't know where Israel obtained its intelligence," said Bayne.

"If it's from foreign sources as opposed to your own, you have no control over the circumstances in which the intelligence was produced," Bayne said, according to the Ottawa Citizen.

Diab, a Lebanese-born former sociology professor at the University of Ottawa, is facing extradition to France in connection with the 1980 Rue Copernic Synagogue bombing.

Four people were killed and 40 wounded when a bomb placed in the saddle bag of a motorcycle outside the synagogue exploded. French police allege five men from the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine were responsible, and they fingered Diab as being in Paris at the time with false papers and living under an assumed name. They allege Diab made the bomb and planted it in the motorcycle.

Diab has denied the allegations. Last week he released a statement saying he was innocent and that the accusations against him were motivated by his Middle Eastern heritage.

"Since Sept. 11, 2001 the presumption of innocence and other core values of our legal system have eroded, especially for people from particular minority backgrounds," he stated.

Crown prosecutors had yet to present their case when The CJN went to press. The hearing is expected to run into December and its outcome will determine whether Diab will be sent to France for trial.

THE FIRST STEP: Quebec Premier Jean Charest, third from right, takes part in the official groundbreaking for the Jewish General Hospital's (JGH) new critical-care pavilion. The Quebec government has committed $93.8 million for the first phase of construction of Pavilion K, which will replace the over-stretched emergency department that now receives 70,000 patients annually. It will also eventually house intensive, coronary and neonatal intensive care units. Others seen are, from left, D'Arcy McGee MNA Lawrence Bergman, Finance Minister Raymond Bachand, Environment Minister Pierre Bachand, JGH executive director Hartley Stern, Health Minister Yves Bolduc, JGH president Bernard Stotland, and planning director Philippe Castiel.

Israel's finest memories...

Eldan, Israel's leading car rental company, offers you
The Best Way to Experience Israel

eldan

www.eldan.co.il/en

the Biggest. the Best. the Original.

Wm. Ashley | Annual November
Warehouse SALE
save up to 90%*
SALE IS ON NOW!
DON'T MISS Our Best Sale Ever!

save up to 90%* on Brand Names
Wedgwood
Royal Doulton
Waterford • Lenox
Aynsley • Krups
Portmeirion • Atlantis
Rosenthal • Aram
Denby • Dansk
Royal Crown Derby
Villeroy & Boch
Mikasa • Noritake

CANADA'S LARGEST GIFT CENTRE
Amazing Warehouse Sale Savings
Holiday Gifts • Contemporary Gifts • Christmas Décor
Home Decor and Furnishings • Housewares • Children's Toys
Casual and Formal Dinnerware Sets • Bath Accessories

ReStocked Daily — Over 40,000 Sq. Ft. of Incredible Savings

SALE HOURS

Wednesday	Nov. 17	10 AM – 9 PM
Thursday	Nov. 18	10 AM – 9 PM
Friday	Nov. 19	10 AM – 9 PM
Saturday	Nov. 20	10 AM – 6 PM
Sunday	Nov. 21	10 AM – 6 PM

(Closed Monday & Tuesday)

William ASHLEY
62 Railside Rd, Toronto • 416-515-SALE
www.WilliamAshley.com/WarehouseSale

*Save up to 90% off the Mfr. Sugg. Price or Comp. Reg. Value. We reserve the right to limit quantities. No strollers or car seats permitted. Personal shopping only. Cash, Debit, Visa, Mastercard & Amex. All sales are final. No cheques or credit notes. Not all items illustrated are available. E. & O.E.

Conference releases Ottawa Protocol

'Selective condemnation of Israel is hateful'

By ANDY LEVY-AJZENKOPF
Staff Reporter

"Criticism of Israel is not anti-Semitic, and saying so is wrong. But singling Israel out for selective condemnation and opprobrium – let alone denying its right to exist or seeking its destruction – is discriminatory and hateful, and not saying so is dishonest."

That's the blunt statement of the Ottawa Protocol on combating anti-Semitism, which was drafted last week as the outcome of the three-day 2010 Conference on Combating Antisemitism held in Ottawa.

(The protocol is reproduced in its entirety on The CJN's Perspectives page this week.)

On Nov. 9, the Inter-Parliamentary Coalition to Combat Antisemitism (ICCA) – which co-hosted the conference along with the government of Canada – ratified the protocol, a series of recommendations that seeks to end hateful propaganda online and in places such as university campuses.

The 250 experts and politicians from 53 countries who attended said in the protocol that the coalition aims to stop the growth of the kind of criticism of Israel that the delegates say is increasingly a vehicle for anti-Semitism.

The coalition also called on universities to "combat anti-Semitism with the same seriousness with which they confront other forms of hate."

The Internet is the next frontier in the fight against anti-Semitism, the protocol says, adding that the "explosion" of hate on the web needs to be addressed, as it is "a medium crucial for the promotion and protection of freedom of expression, freedom of information, and the participation of civil society."

The coalition hopes to convince major Internet companies such as Google and YouTube to play a bigger role in the fight against anti-Semitism and remove offensive material from their websites.

Mount Royal Liberal MP and ICCA co-founder Irwin Cotler told The CJN that the conference – the second such event after an inaugural one in London last year – was a success.

Aside from the number of delegates in attendance, Cotler said it was the "representative character" of the event that was important to note.

Irwin Cotler

"We had important representation from Africa, Kenya, Rwanda, the Congo and from Asia… all unanimously battling anti-Semitism," he said, adding that delegates from these areas of the world weren't present at the inaugural conference in London last year.

"It's difficult to ever get a consensus [on an issue], let alone unanimity. But here you had parliamentarians from more than 50 countries who adopted the protocol. And the protocol reflects both the compelling nature of the concerns and the unanimity with respect to what had to be done," Cotler said.

As a result of this conference, going forward, the ICCA steering committee will now include African and Asian members, he said.

Protocol signatories also committed to various actions to confront the spread of anti-Semitism and racism in general. These include, the establishment of "an international task force of Internet specialists" to identify and monitor anti-Semitism and other manifestations of hate online and the development of policy recommendations "for governments and international frameworks to address these problems," the protocol says.

U.S. Congressman Chris Smith will head up the task force and chair a special forum on the subject in the United States next year.

Signatories also promised to build on African representation at the Ottawa conference in order to "develop increased working relationships" with that continent's parliamentarians to help fight racism and anti-Semitism.

The Ottawa Protocol expands on the Declaration on Combating Antisemitism crafted in London last year – also known as the London Declaration – at the founding conference of the coalition.

With files from JTA

STOREWIDE
PRE-CHANUKAH SALE

Everything 20% Off!
Sunday November 21
One Day Only!

DOORCRASHERS
Silverplated Kiddush Cup & Tray
WAS $49.95 - NOW $39.95
Silverplated Candlesticks
WAS $49.95 - NOW $39.95
Rosewood & Silverplated
Challah Board/Knife
WAS $89.95 - NOW $39.95

Limited Quantities - While Supplies Last

ISRAEL'S
THE JUDAICA CENTRE

870 Eglinton Ave. West 441 Clark Ave. West
Toronto 416.256.1010 Thornhill 905.881.1010
www.israelsjudaica.com

New For September 2011!

Netivot HaTorah Day School
- Grade 1 -
South Campus

Please join us for an information evening
Wednesday, December 8, 2010 at 8:00 p.m.

Shaarei Shomayim
470 Glencairn Avenue
905-771-1234

Netivot HaTorah
נתיבות התורה
Torah. Israel. Derech Eretz.

Become a part of the only Orthodox Zionist Day School of Toronto.

Sharing the Light of the Menorah...

...across the city

Chanukah

DOWNTOWN
Miles Nadal JCC
750 Spadina Avenue

6:30 pm doors open
7:00 pm candle-lighting
7:15 pm celebration continues

MIDTOWN
Sherman Campus
Prosserman JCC
4600 Bathurst Street

6:30 pm doors open
7:00 pm candle-lighting
7:15 pm celebration continues

VAUGHAN
Lebovic Campus
Schwartz/Reisman Centre
9600 Bathurst Street

6:30 pm doors open
7:00 pm candle-lighting
7:15 pm celebration continues

[illegible] Party

FOR MORE INFORMATION, VISIT
chanukahTO.com

SPECIAL START TIME!

4 locations.
One community.
One Chanukah.

Don't miss this unique opportunity to celebrate Chanukah with friends and neighbours!

- Magen Boys entertainment!
- Chanukah treats!
- Great prizes!

FREE EVENT
everyone is welcome

No matter who you are or where you live, you are invited to enjoy Chanukah in a unique way this year, as Toronto's Jewish community comes together to celebrate this special time of the year with a multi-location celebration.

Whether you call downtown, midtown, or uptown home, this year's Chanukah celebration offers something for everyone with live entertainment, great prizes, free Chanukah treats, and, of course, the menorah lighting!

Saturday, December 4th, 6:30 pm

POWERED BY
UJA FEDERATION

For more information and pre-registration please visit: chanukahTO.com

Karsenty continues to expose al-Dura 'hoax'

By PAUL LUNGEN
Staff Reporter

When French media analyst Philippe Karsenty first expressed doubts that the Israeli army had killed 12-year-old Mohammad al-Dura at the onset of the second intifadah, he was widely reviled as a nut case or right-wing extremist.

After all, everybody knew that al-Dura had been killed at the Netzarim junction in Gaza, as his father and he huddled behind a concrete barrel to avoid Israeli fire. The prestigious government-owned France 2 network had reported it, hadn't they? And France 2's Jerusalem bureau chief, Charles Enderlin, who narrated the news story, was acclaimed as a top-notch journalist, wasn't he?

Today, however, if you Google "al-Dura hoax," some 19,000 results pop up. Two years ago, a French appeals court ruled in Karsenty's favour in a case brought by Enderlin, finding that Karsenty did not libel the France 2 journalist when he claimed Enderlin's al-Dura coverage was a fabrication.

Today, Karsenty is finding a much more receptive audience when he argues that the al-Dura incident was a concoction of Palestinian media misinformation, a technique that has been dubbed "Pallywood."

Philippe Karsenty

"At first, people said Karsenty was a nut case. I wasn't mainstream," Karsenty said last week. "Now it's mainstream."

Karsenty, who doggedly continues to expose the al-Dura case 10 years after the event, was in Toronto as part of a four-day trip that saw him address audiences in London, Toronto and Ottawa. He appeared on CTS' Michael Coren Show, where he debated the veracity of media coverage of the incident. He was in Toronto as a guest of the International Free Press Society and in Ottawa he appeared at the 1st Annual Free Thinking Film Festival.

His North American tour also includes stops in Los Angeles, Berkeley, Palm Beach, Washington and New York City.

Clearly the al-Dura case continues to motivate him and interest the public, even after so much time has passed. Why so?

"The truth," he said. "The truth is an icebreaker. This is why the truth will prevail. We're not working for the news of tomorrow, but for history. This is a historical case that has caused so much damage and which proves the reporting of news from the Middle East is inaccurate."

Karsenty asserts that the al-Dura coverage and photos from the incident "have inflamed the Muslim world against the western world and Israel." The incident has been cited by Al Qaeda leader Osama bin Laden, a still image of the incident was visible in the background when Islamic extremists murdered American journalist Daniel Pearl, and "Muslim and Arab states have issued postage stamps with al-Dura."

"It's been hard to convey the message that it was a hoax," Karsenty said. "For most of the time, people wouldn't even listen to me or debate. Yesterday was the first debate we ever had [on the Michael Coren Show]. It's [hard] to believe it was such a fabrication. It took time for people to admit the concept of a huge fraud."

Take a look at the last video image of the boy, in which he is apparently dead, Karsenty said. There is no blood, even though he and his father were supposed to have been hit by 15 bullets altogether.

Even after he exposed the incident as a fabrication, the French establishment rallied to support Enderlin, Karsenty said.

Enderlin recently published a book, A Child Was Killed, in which he continues to assert the veracity of the al-Dura narrative.

"All the book is about his suffering, that he's the victim of conspiracy theorists," Karsenty said.

"I'm getting more and more allies," Karsenty continued. "At the beginning, most of my support was from the right, but now extreme leftists [from Israel's Meretz Party and Ha'aretz newspaper] are coming on side. The truth is stronger than politics."

The Israeli government is now offering stronger refutation of the al-Dura allegations, and even in his home in Neuilly, France, fellow Frenchmen are ignoring the "character assassination" campaign aimed at him, Karsenty said.

Two years ago, he won a race for deputy mayor of the Parisian suburb, where French President Nicolas Sarkozy once served as mayor. He defeated one of Sarkozy's aides in the race.

Karsenty believes he won because "the constituents are more intelligent than the establishment. People have common sense and understand they have been manipulated by the media."

Karsenty urges consumers of Middle East news to be skeptical about reports from the region.

"A narrative was created 30, 40 years ago that depicts Israel as monsters and criminals and the Palestinians as victims. Since then, in every case the media try to make [events] fit this narrative, so Israel is always criticized."

That perspective doesn't necessarily put him on the Israeli side. He wants the public to be skeptical even when hearing the views of Israeli authorities.

"Bring me evidence," he said. "I'm cautious... Nobody will deliver bad information about themselves."

Good News For All Dialysis Patients !

ESCAPE THE BITTERLY COLD WEATHER

Dialyze at Universal Kidney Center in South Florida

You do not have to make payments for your dialysis treatments.

We will bill Provincial Health Care directly.

Call now for reservations (954) 802 - 8100

MARK LASH

30% OFF HOLIDAY SHOPPING EVENT

PLEASE JOIN US FOR THE MARK LASH HOLIDAY SHOPPING EVENT
THURSDAY NOVEMBER 18 THROUGH SUNDAY NOVEMBER 21.

RECEIVE 30% OFF A FABULOUS SELECTION OF SPARKLING JEWELRY AT EITHER LOCATION.

MARK LASH THE PERFECT GIFT FOR THIS HOLIDAY SEASON.

THURSDAY	NOVEMBER 18	10-9
FRIDAY	NOVEMBER 19	10-9
SATURDAY	NOVEMBER 20	10-6
SUNDAY	NOVEMBER 21	12-5

9033 LESLIE STREET RICHMOND HILL 905 881 5229 938 EGLINTON AVE WEST TORONTO 416 256 5229
MARKLASH.COM 1 866 881 5229 JOIN US ON FACEBOOK ALL MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ARE ACCEPTED.

Ordination in Berlin: a cantor's account

From left are Rabbi Robert Jacobs, Cantor Gershon Silins, Rabbi David Lilienthal and Rabbi Walter Rothschild. [Tobias Barniske photo]

By CANTOR GERSHON SILINS

The Reform Judaism of my childhood in Chicago was imbued with a German spirit, of which I was barely aware.

I did not know then that Reform Judaism had begun in Germany in 1810 and had flourished there until it was sent into exile by the murderous betrayal that was the Holocaust.

Guest Voice

This liberal German Judaism featured remarkable figures such as Rabbi Herman Schaalman, the Munich-born rabbi of the Chicago congregation I grew up in, and Max Janowski, the Berlin-born, Chicago-based musician and composer perhaps best known for his wonderful setting of Avinu Malkenu and with whom I sang when I was a teenager. And there were those that I met later, such as Rabbi Gunther Plaut in Toronto and Rabbi Walter Jacob, whom I met in the early 1990s, when I was the cantor in Ernest Bloch's Sacred Service at the rededication of the Pittsburgh congregation Rabbi Jacob has served for so many years. The German Reform Jewish Diaspora, with its values of scholarship, liberalism and nobility of the human spirit, has spread through the entire world. It was the air I breathed as a child and youth.

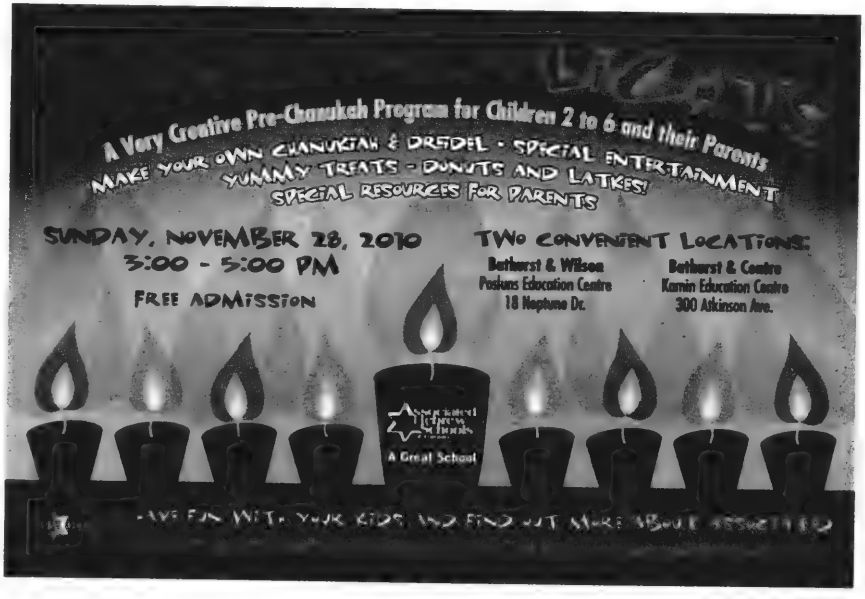
On Nov. 4, 2010, Reform clergy gathered to participate in the ordination of rabbis at the Abraham Geiger College in Berlin. They were joined by clergy of all denominations, as well as diplomats and political figures from Europe, North and South America and Africa. Featured prominently among them was Christian Wulff, the president of Germany, something unimaginable only a few decades ago.

It was an extraordinary honour for me to be invited to serve as cantor at this service at the historic Pestalozzi Street Synagogue, one of the few German synagogues to survive Kristallnacht. The world press had its imagination further captured by Alina Treiger, the first woman rabbi to be ordained in Germany in 75 years. Her predecessor, Regina Jonas, the first female rabbi ever to have been ordained, died at Auschwitz.

In so many ways, this event marked the powerful resurgence of progressive Jewish life not only in Germany but in all of Europe. The three rabbis who were ordained were all from the former Soviet Union, the children of yet another Jewish Diaspora, exiled from a regime that sought to destroy Judaism. And now here, they were bringing back to Germany the values that German Reform Judaism had given to the world. Extraordinary, too, is the fact that the Abraham Geiger College, the seminary that has produced these new rabbis, is located in Berlin.

It was inspiring for me to sing the music of Janowski, which I had sung with him as a teenager, as well as two settings by Ben Steinberg, who has made the Reform values so manifest in his music, and with whom I have worked closely for many years. As I stood on the bimah facing the open ark, I could see the tears on the face of Rabbi Treiger and I heard the voices of my childhood, and the spirit of a people who have, despite all, not been vanquished, sing through me.

Gershon Silins is the cantor of Temple Sinai Congregation of Toronto



A Very Creative Pre-Chanukah Program for Children 2 to 6 and their Parents
MAKE YOUR OWN CHANUKIAH & DREIDEL - SPECIAL ENTERTAINMENT
YUMMY TREATS - DONUTS AND LATKES!
SPECIAL RESOURCES FOR PARENTS
SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 2010
3:00 - 5:00 PM
FREE ADMISSION
TWO CONVENIENT LOCATIONS:
Bathurst & Wilson
Posluns Education Centre
18 Neptune Dr.
Bathurst & Centre
Kamin Education Centre
300 Atkinson Ave.
Associated Hebrew Schools
A Great School

TORONTO JEWISH FILM FESTIVAL PRESENTS

BROKEN PROMISE

The true story of Martin, a Jewish boy living in Slovakia, who has to make some risky lifetime decisions in order to survive World War II. When Fascists take over, Martin's family is sent to a work camp. He volunteers at one of these camps and is consequently assigned to a transport leaving for Poland. Only luck saves him from almost certain death.

Sunday, November 21
4:00 pm – Chai Tea
5:00 pm – Film

Silver City
Richmond Hill
Yonge and Highway 7

$15 door or advance
Subject to availability

Tickets & Information
416 599 8433
tjff.com

CINEPLEX
ONTARIO ARTS COUNCIL
CONSEIL DES ARTS DE L'ONTARIO
UJA FEDERATION

TJFF.COM

IS YOUR FUR COAT HIDING IN THE BACK OF YOUR CLOSET?
We can make it into a beautiful fur-lined All-Weather Microfibre Coat.
www.benderfurs.ca
L. Bender Fur Co. Ltd.
Beautiful furs since 1923
By appointment only
416-593-2767

Dr. Rachael Turkienicz and the students of Rachael's Centre invite you to a study session
honouring the memory of Vicki Campbell z"l
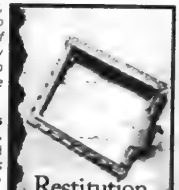
Our beloved friend and fellow student on the occasion of the conclusion of Shloshim
Monday, November 22, 2010
2:00 pm at Rachael's Centre
Space is limited
To RSVP and for further details please e-mail info@rachaelscentre.org or call 416-630-6488
Rachael's Centre for Torah Mussar & Ethics

THE COLE FAMILY
&
CLUB DAYAN NA'AMAT CANADA
invite you to
THE SHARON COLE MEMORIAL LECTURE
Guest Speaker Kathy Kacer
Award-winning children's author, Kathy Kacer, has now expanded to the realm of adult nonfiction. Herself a child of Holocaust survivors, Kathy travels around the world speaking to young people about the importance of understanding the Holocaust.
The true story of four paintings and one family's enduring spirit. Europe, on the eve of the Second World War, and a Jewish family feels the Nazi danger closing in. Led by their indomitable mother, Marie, the Reesers make a daring escape from under the watchful eyes of the Gestapo, fleeing their comfortable home in Czechoslovakia to safety and a new life in Canada.



Monday, November 22, 2010 at 8:00 pm
Temple Sinai – 210 Wilson Avenue
PUBLIC INVITED – FREE ADMISSION
REFRESHMENTS WILL BE SERVED
For further information; call 416-636-5425

Jewish Life

Chanukah 'app-ticipation'

Jewish & Digital
By Mark Mietkiewicz

Chanukah is quickly approaching but if you can't wait and want a quick holiday fix, just head over to the Apple iTunes store. You'll find an assortment of free and low-cost apps for your iPhone and iPod Touch to put you in the holiday mood.

Menorah is not only free, it's great. You can choose to read the Chanukah blessings in Hebrew, English or transliterated into English script. And during the holiday, the animation will show you which direction to light the candles. [http://bit.ly/chapp1]

If you don't happen to have a real dreidel around, Dreidel, Dredel, Dradel (free) can come in handy. Double-tap on the screen to watch the virtual dreidel spin and eventually stop. You'll have to keep track of bets and who's winning manually. (And yes, that is how this app is spelled.) [http://bit.ly/chapp16]

Dreidel Dreidel Dreidel ($1.99) gives you another version of the game (along with more consistent spelling). The game works fine, but I'm perplexed by a game that has a dreidel spinning and landing on sheets of matzah! [http://bit.ly/chapp17] I also did a double-take when I saw its oh-so-serious warning: "Rated 12+ for the following: frequent/intense simulated gambling."

Save your money for Super Dreidel (99¢). Finally, a game that lets you select the number of players, enter their names, choose how much money you want in your bank and keeps score, too. You can even select variations of the game, including Traditional, Vegas and Turbo. (My only gripe is that some of the Hebrew letters are printed backwards on the dreidel!) [http://bit.ly/chapp18]

Dreidel tap (free) doesn't really have anything to do with Chanukah but that doesn't mean it's not fun. You are presented with an assortment of dreidels careening around the screen. Your goal is to tap them as quickly as possible without hitting any of the floating burning candles. [http://bit.ly/chapp19]

I found Hanukkah Match (free) even more addictive. In the manner of the old Concentration memory game, you tap on the screen and are presented a glimpse of symbols of the holiday (menorahs, gelt, latkes, etc.) Your goal is to remember where each symbol is and match it up to its twin as quickly as possible. [http://bit.ly/chapp20]

Chanuka Guide (free) has a great deal of valuable information about the holiday and even some humour. Unfortunately, I can't give it a complete thumbs-up because I found the interface confusing. To get the most out of the guide, you'll have to learn how to manoeuvre through it. [http://bit.ly/chapp14] Unless you need info at your fingertips, consider doing a simple online search.

Almost all the apps that I came across were designed for iPhone and iPod Touch. But if you happen to have an Android-based phone, you're in luck. Happy Chanukah (free) lets you "light" the candles on the go. [http://bit.ly/chapp13]

Although many Apple apps cost only 99¢, sometimes I felt even that low price was way too steep. For example, do I really need an app like Hanukkah Gift Tracker just so I can write down all the Chanukah gifts that I have received? [http://bit.ly/chapp11] And although I'm sure that Days to Hanukkah does precisely what it sets out to do, I think I'll save the buck and check out my calendar. [http://bit.ly/chapp12]

Mark Mietkiewicz is a Toronto-based website producer who writes, lectures and teaches about the Jewish Internet. He can be contacted at highway@rogers.com.

An open-source Jewish future

Class Act
By Daniel Held

If the headliners at the federation system's General Assembly in New Orleans last week were Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and U.S. Vice-President Joe Biden, the warm-up act was the Jewish Futures Conference. A collaborative effort of the Covenant Foundation, JESNA's Lippman Kanfer Institute and New York's Board of Jewish Education, the two-hour conference was designed as a TED Talk (www.ted.com), brief 18-minute presentations to showcase the types of creativity and innovation that will drive Jewish education in the 21st century.

I have been to many conferences that discussed and debated the Jewish future. This one brought new ideas and new voices to the table in two ways.

First, the speakers weren't the usual Jewish-conference-philes. Ori Brafman, an Israeli who founded healthy fast food restaurants; Laurie Karr, a marketing and strategy expert, and Marc Prensky, creator of educational gaming software, bridged their areas of expertise with the needs of today's Jewish community. I was particularly excited to learn – via live Twitter feed – from Prensky, who coined the phrases "digital native" and "digital immigrant" that I've used in previous columns.

Second, in the lead-up to the conference, organizers convened the Jewish Futures Competition. Young innovators from around the world were asked to submit short videos of their ideas. The winners were invited to speak at the conference.

Russel Neiss and Charlie Schwartz created one of the winning entries. The pair met during the PresentTense summer fellowship for social innovators, and their partnership birthed www.mediamidrash.org, an online platform that links YouTube-type videos with educational lesson plans.

Neiss and Schwartz's animated video is pithy and fun to watch. Telling the story of the Cohens, a fictitious family of four, Neiss and Schwartz lay out what they believe to be the four cornerstones of 21st-century Jewish education: that it be open, remixable, meaningful and relevant, and community-building. Each of the Cohens – four-year-old Rose, college-aged David, Mother Molly, a physician, and father Robert, a teacher – is engaged in Jewish learning that represents these values. The final submission – both its animated clips and its central ideas – is fascinating. But rather than focus on their pitch, which you can find at www.sendcharlieandrusseltonola.com, I'd like to focus on how they developed their ideas.

Neiss and Schwartz used open-source technology to garner ideas and contributions from a wide range of thinkers. Open source is a system that promotes the transparency and sharing of source data. In the computing world, Wikipedia and Linux are examples of open, collaborative projects that believe they can garner the best results by sharing their intellectual property and asking for refinements and contributions. Recently some pharmaceutical companies have tried a similar tactic in malaria research by opening their research databases to speed up development of drugs treat the mosquito-borne disease.

Rather than hide their ideas from potential competitors, Neiss and Schwartz put their plans online and asked for feedback. Contributors posted questions and comments, links to articles and videos that helped fine-tune the vision. The final submission was created out of this collaborative and open process.

In addition to visions, the Jewish future needs more thinkers such as Neiss and Schwartz who are willing to share their ideas and open them to critique and collaboration. By engaging in open-source thinking, leaders in Jewish education will be able to harness the new forms of creativity demanded by a diverse and dynamic Jewish community.

Jewish Life

AEPi fraternity stresses philanthropy

Oct. 3 marked the Alpha Epsilon Pi (AEPi) Canadian conclave in the nation's capital, Ottawa. At the University of Ottawa, brothers from across the country met with one another and with international delegates to discuss the future of the fraternity.

ON CAMPUS
By Justin Dahan

After the meeting, AEPi members decided to participate in a small philanthropic event. They took a large case of fresh DiRenzo's turkey, roast beef sandwiches and two large containers of pasta to the Ottawa Mission on Daly Avenue, just a few minutes away from the university campus. The mission helps the homeless and those at risk of being homeless in the Ottawa region.

Two Ottawa brothers went into the mission's office and spoke to the staff about donating food. The mission's staff members took the fraternity members to the kitchen to set up the food for the homeless.

"The staff seemed thrilled when we told them we were donating all this food. It always feels good to help out the community. It is events like this that make me proud to be part of AEPi," said Mark Klibanov, one of the brothers who made the donation. Klibanov is an active member of AEPi Ottawa, and he's also the president of the Israel Advocacy Committee at the university. He has always been active in AEPi's philanthropic events.

The second brother who was involved in the food donation to the mission is Ilan Orzy. Orzy, who is the philanthropy chair for the Ottawa chapter of AEPi, carried the sandwiches to the mission. He believes that events like this are important and was pleased to take part in it. "I was glad that we were able to help out, even by doing something as simple as taking a box of sandwiches to hungry people," Orzy said.

Robert Rinkoff, the president of AEPi Ottawa, spoke about the emphasis the fraternity puts on philanthropic events. "Every year at our conventions [this past year in New Orleans], AEPi national is always stressing philanthropic events, and the building of AEPi and surrounding communities," Rinkoff said.

The donation to the Ottawa Mission is neither the first nor will it be the last event to demonstrate AEPi's philanthropy. Philanthropic events such as AEPi's participation in the Chabad Food Bank menorah drive show that AEPi cares about the availability of kosher food for the community, he added.

"Every person has something to give during this time of the year, and AEPi wants to show that everyone should be able to have food on Chanukah or Christmas. It's a great feeling to be a part of something we all believe is special," Rinkoff said.

Every year the Ottawa chapter holds annual philanthropy events, including a blood drive and volunteering for a heart institute telethon. As well as their annual events, the chapter has always added events that soon became traditions. Hopefully, donating sandwiches and participating in the Chabad Food Bank menorah drive become annual events.

Both Orzy and Rinkoff are aware that although they have started this year off strongly as far as philanthropic events go, they still need to continue to plan more events that will continue to enhance AEPi's reputation in Ottawa.

My new take on turning 40

In my youth, I remember people talking about turning 40. Many said it was the time when aches and pains begin to appear, the time of mid-life crises, the age when you begin to realize that you are getting old.

Consequently, it always seemed to me an age that I should approach with trepidation.

Turning 40 recently, I started to think about the significance of this number, and my feelings about turning 40 began to change.

SEPHARDI WINDOW
By Rabbi Ilan Acoca

Columbia University professor Walter Plitkin, considering the age-old question of whether or not life really does begin at 40, emphatically says "yes" in his famous and oft-quoted 1932 bestseller Life Begins at 40. The Torah agrees that life does begin at 40, though not in the same way that Plitkin maintains it does. Forty is a richly symbolic number in the Torah, as we shall see.

The number 40 is ubiquitous in the Torah, where it consistently underscores themes of transformation and renewal. Yom Kippur, for instance, is the 40th day of the repentance period. The Torah tells us that Moses ascends Mount Sinai to commune with God for 40 days and to receive the life- and world-transforming Torah.

Moses, having returned to a people worshipping a golden calf, smashes the tablets and returns on Rosh Chodesh Elul to climb the mountain yet again to convene with God for another 40 days. We observe the day of Moses' second descent as Yom Kippur, the 10th day of Tishrei. He returns this day with a second set of tablets, signifying God's forgiveness of His people, His acceptance of their repentance, and His people's new lease on life.

In Deuteronomy, Moses, after leading the Jewish people for 40 years in the wilderness, tells them, "God has not given you a heart to know, and eyes to see, and ears to hear, until this day" (29:3-4). Here we see that it took the Jewish people 40 years in the desert before they could internalize, mentally and spiritually, the events that took place.

Furthermore, the Mishnah in Ethics of Our Fathers (5:24) tells us, "A person of 40 attains understanding." Rashi's comment on this Mishnah is that a person who turns 40 has the maturity to understand the essence of the issues and challenges confronting him throughout his life.

Elsewhere, the Torah states that, when a person becomes ritually impure, he must immerse himself completely in a mikvah, a ritual bath, which the Talmud (Yoma 4b) tells us must be filled with 40 measures of water. After this immersion, he leaves the mikvah ritually pure, just as the world emerged pure after it rained for 40 days and 40 nights, as we learn in the story of Noah.

When I ponder these ideas at some length, I feel reassured that 40 is indeed a positive, even hopeful, number. We see that 40 is truly a recurring and powerful symbol of birth, rebirth and change. Just as Rabbi Akiva started his Torah life at the age of 40, I suspect that all of us, upon review and inspection, may well find that the number 40 features significantly in each of our lives.

I understand now that, in many ways, life really does begin at 40!

ECOFLEXTRA - Guaranteed Income for Life

- Guaranteed income for life - no matter how markets perform!
- Lock-in market growth with automatic tri-annual resets
- 5% Annual bonus* up to 15 years
- Death Benefit Guarantee
- Tax efficient for non-registered accounts

KENSTERN
500-1867 Yonge St.
Toronto, ON M4S 1Y5
T: 416-545-5323 | www.kenstern.ca

IA CLARINGTON INVESTMENTS
IA INDUSTRIAL ALLIANCE

Provided no withdrawals are made. Industrial Alliance Insurance and Financial Services Inc. is the issuer of the ECOFLEXTRA Individual Variable Annuity Contract. Certain restrictions apply. The IA Canadian Equity and the IA Clarington Target Date Funds are managed by IA Clarington Investments Inc. IA Clarington is a trademark of IA Clarington Investments Inc. and used. Clarington logo is a trademark of Industrial Alliance Insurance and Financial Services Inc. and are used under license. Sponsored in part by IA Clarington Investments Inc.

Did your son just have a birthday? Did your daughter just have a baby?
SEND US YOUR PHOTO ALONG WITH 25 WORDS.
GO TO WWW.CJNEWS.COM
CLICK THE FAMILY MOMENTS BANNER

ISRAEL 2010-2011

COMPARE APPLES to APPLES
The BEST Family Tours in North America!!!
Call us for Recent References
Bar/Bat Mitzvah Ceremony Included
All-inclusive deluxe hotels
• More days of sightseeing
• More meals
• A true family itinerary
www.israelfamilytours.com
or call Kathy ext. 345

WINTER SPECIAL 2010
BOOK NOW AND SAVE
SPACE VERY LIMITED
Dec. 16 - Dec. 30
Dec. 19 - Jan. 2/11
MARCH BREAK 2011
Mar. 9 - Mar. 20
PASSOVER 2011
April 16 - April 30
SUMMER 2011
Jun. 26 - Jul. 10
Jun. 3 - Jul. 17
Jun. 17 - Jul. 31
Jun. 24 - Aug. 7
Jun. 31 - Aug. 14
Aug. 14 - Aug. 28

PROMOTION PACKAGE
AIR INCL. 3 NT. in 5 STAR HOTEL
FROM $1266

Community Mission
May 12 - 26 2011
If you've been to Israel before or you're a first timer...
THIS IS THE TOUR FOR YOU!!
Call Kathy ext. 345

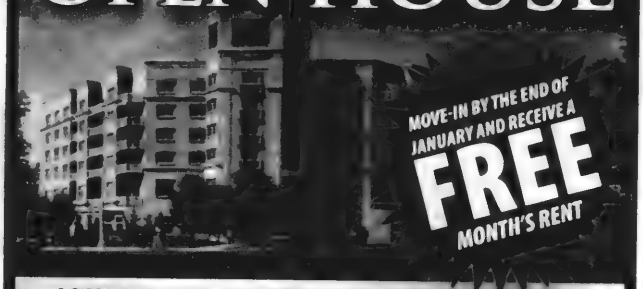
PRIVATE CUSTOM TOURS
INNOVATIVE ITINERARIES & GREAT PRICES!
No one is more experienced than we are!
DON'T TRY TO DO IT ON YOUR OWN BOOK WITH US AND SAVE!
Call Ehud Ext. 322

Air Canada online
For more tours & to book visit:
www.peerlesstravel.com

BEST AIRFARE TO ISRAEL
Don't book with anyone else before talking to us first!

PEERLESS TRAVEL & CRUISES
YOUR FULL SERVICE TRAVEL AGENCY
905-886-5610
800-294-1663
info@peerlesstravel.com
7117 Bathurst St., Just N. of Steeles, Thornhill, ON L4J 2J6

YOU'RE INVITED TO OUR
OPEN HOUSE



JOIN US FOR A WEEK LONG CELEBRATION
NOVEMBER 22ND - 26TH
FROM 10:00 A.M. - 3:00 P.M. DAILY
Enjoy refreshments and a tour of our beautiful new residence!

FOUR ELMS
RETIREMENT RESIDENCE
1500 Steeles Ave. West, Thornhill, ON L4J 4H6
905-738-0905
Visit our website to learn more - www.fourelms.ca
Diversicare
www.diversicare.ca

Israel and Golda Koschitzky
Centre for Jewish Studies
at York University
המרכז ללימודי היהדות

JOIN US FOR
Israel Through Chinese Eyes
Professor Xu Xin
School of Religious Studies, Nanjing University, China
November 21, 2010, 3:30pm
Executive Learning Centre, Schulich School of Business,
Rm W136 - Free parking

Director of the Glazer Institute for Jewish Studies at Nanjing University, Xu Xin is the recipient of an honorary doctorate from Bar Ilan University in Israel and the only Professor of Jewish Studies in China.

The event is co-sponsored by York University's Israel and Golda Koschitzky Centre for Jewish Studies, Centre for Asian Research and Department of Humanities.

For further information:
www.yorku.ca/cjs
cjs@yorku.ca
416-736-5823

YORK UNIVERSITE UNIVERSITY
redefine THE POSSIBLE

Class Acts

REAL RUNNERS: Bialik Hebrew Day School Grade 4 girls, from left, Kylie Barkin, Kaylen Soriano, Lauren Lewis, Margot Sigel, Jayden Rouhi, Shira Wine and Carly Lanfer, pose with their coaches Poppie Butler, left, and Robyn Rosen Codas after finishing in top spots at the recent Jewish Day School Cross Country Meet.

ISRAELI PROMOTION: Senior kindergarten students at Leo Baeck Day School's Thornhill campus place handmade badges on Israeli Defence Forces emissary Roi Zohar-Melamud after a visit and discussion about army life in Israel.

TZEDAKAH LESSON: Grade 4 and 5 students at Netivot HaTorah Day School recently learned about the important work of the Hazon Yeshaya Humanitarian Network, which serves thousands of hot meals daily and provides free dental and vocational services for Israelis in need. Pictured after the assembly on the topic are, standing from left, Grade 5 students Tohar, Daniel, Dveer and Rena with, seated, Sharon Bobrove, a Hazon Yeshaya volunteer, and Rabbi Abraham Israel, the group's founder and director. [Rebecca Ansel photo]

FAMILY MOMENTS

Mazel Tov

The Canadian Jewish news

Only paid Family Moments announcements can be guaranteed to appear in a specific issue, when received by deadline, 10 days prior to publication date. All other items will appear on a first-come, first-served basis, as space allows.

Mazel tov announcements featured on onlysimchas.com will appear as space permits.

SEND US YOUR PHOTOS!!

Label the back of all photos and enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for return. Please keep all announcements to 25 words, maximum.

To send in digital photos, please visit

www.cjnews.com

and click the Family Moments banner at the top.

Congratulations Jenn & Joe on your recent engagement. We are so happy for both of you. We love you both. From your family.

Yoel Aharon, you were brilliant at the Kotel and stupendous at shul on Sukkot! Mazel tov on your bar mitzvah celebrations. Love, the Yakobi family.

Mazel tov Ronnie & Bella Weber on your 50th anniversary. Love, Danny, Sandy, Hillel, Emily, family and friends.

Mazel tov Tola & Ben Granek, celebrating their 65th wedding anniversary. Life partners, inspiring us with their quiet heroism. Love, Marvin, Joanne, Justin, Willie, Henry.

Mazel tov to Harry & Hanna Fisher celebrating their 70th anniversary and 90th birthdays in 2010. Love your children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Mazel tov to Jackie Sherkey & Dave Schwartz on their engagement. Delighted parents are Shelley & Evelyn Sherkey and Jack & Nina Schwartz and families.

REGENCY INTERIORS 2000 INC.

MANUFACTURERS OF CUSTOM FINE FURNITURE

T: (416) 661-9100

sal@regencyinteriors.info

kitchens bedrooms bathrooms living rooms dining rooms

www.regencyinteriors.info

JNF
Say it with Trees
"In Loving Memory"
JEWISH NATIONAL FUND
416-638-7200

What's New

By LAURA STRICKER

Our regular columnist, Leila Spetsman, is away on medical leave.

Weather: Ft. Lauderdale, Florida
TRAVEL INSURANCE
• Snowbirds
• Visitors to Canada
• Trip Cancellation
25% OFF LIMO VOUCHER TO TORONTO PEARSON AIRPORT WITH PURCHASE
416-636-3575
alana@travel-secure.com
Travel Secure

Deadline for Dec. 2 is Nov. 22. Deadline for Dec. 9 is Nov. 29. Phone 416-391-1836. Fax 416-391-0829. E-mail cjnwhatsnew@gmail.com.

Thursday, Nov. 18

INTER-GENERATIONAL JAZZ

Jazz for Juniors and Spirited Seniors at Baycrest, Winter Garden Court. 7-8 p.m. Meet neighbours of all ages by enjoying jazz together.

FRIENDSHIP GROUP

Rabbi Jared Grover talks about Jewish websites. Beth Tikvah. 2-4 p.m. $3. Refreshments served.

Friday, Nov. 19

SOUNDS OF SINAI

"Jews and the Jazz They Made," with Cantor Gershon Silins. Hear Andrew Scott and friends play music from the Andrews Sisters, Johnny Mercer and Al Jolson. 8 p.m. Temple Sinai. 416-487-3281.

Saturday, Nov. 20

SHABBAT SERMON

Shaar Shalom social action team presents "Homelessness and Poverty in the Suburbs." With Rehana Sumar, executive director of the Mosaic Interfaith Out of the Cold. All welcome. Service at 8:45 a.m. Sermon at 10:45 a.m.

SHABBAT SERVICE (1)

B'nai Shalom Congregation of Halton-Peel's monthly Shabbat service, 10 a.m. in Oakville. Conservative, egalitarian congregation. bnaishalom.ca, 905-901-9889.

SHABBAT SERVICE (2)

Kol Yisroel is a Conservative synagogue. 9:30 a.m. Kiddush follows. No membership fees. Borochov Cultural Centre. 416-930-9444.

TWINNING WEEKEND

Temple Emanu-El and Noor Cultural Centre. 7:30 p.m. Noor Cultural Centre, 123 Wynford Dr. "Inner Battles and Outer battles – Struggling With the Language and Imagery of War Within Our Traditions." Free.

TPM MEETS

Rabbi Daniel Sperber, Talmud professor at Bar Ilan U, speaks at TPM Central. 9 a.m. torontopartnershipminyan.com. TPM South – next meeting Nov. 27 at Beit Habonim, 9 a.m. TPM Thornhill next meeting Dec. 4 at Reena Centre, 9 a.m.

'WOMEN AND RITUAL'

"The Changing Role of Women and Ritual," panel discussion with Rahel Bercovits, Rivkah Blau, Rabbi Aryeh Frimer and Rabbi Daniel Sperber. Or Chaim Yeshiva. 8 p.m. 416-633-5770.

CHINA AND ISRAEL

Xu Xin, director of the Glazer Institute for Jewish Studies at Nanjing University. "Chinese-Israeli Relations: Past, Present and Future." 8 p.m. Congregation B'nai Torah.

Sunday, Nov. 21

MEET THE SHADCHANS

Unique opportunity to network face to face with male and female shadchanim. Clanton Park Synagogue, 11 Lowesmoor Ave. Men: 9:30 a.m.-12:30 p.m. Women: 1:30-4:30 p.m. All ages. Bring multiple shidduch profiles with photos. First come, first served. 416-256-4497.

AARON NUSSBAUM SPEAKS

Beth David Brotherhood presents Aaron Nussbaum on "Dead Sea Scrolls – Miqsat Ma'ase Torah – MMT – the beginnings of Rabbinic Judaism." 9:15 a.m. following breakfast. All welcome. $5 at the door covers breakfast.

JUDAICA SALE

Beth David Synagogue's Judaica-shop sale. 9 a.m.-1 p.m. Up to 50 per cent off selected items.

WOMEN'S BEIT MIDRASH

Featuring Elana Stein Hain on "The Role of Rabbinic Loopholes." Ulpanat Orot, 45 Canyon Ave. 9:30-11:45 a.m. 416-633-5770.

Continued on page 31

THIS CHANUKAH WHY DREI YOUR KOP...
FOR 20 YEARS WE'VE SHOWN WE HAVE ALL YOU NEED
PARTY SUPPLY DEPOT
92 Doncaster Ave. • Thornhill 905-764-5457
DOZENS OF GREAT CHANUKAH DECORATIONS TO CHOOSE FROM BOXED CHANUKAH CARDS MSRP 13.99 NOW $3.99
CHANUKAH •GIFT WRAP •PACKAGING •GIFT TAGS
Lasagna FOIL PANS Reg .99¢ Ea NOW 3 FOR $1.00
LIEBERS MILK CHOCOLATE GELT BOXES OF 24 BAGS NOW $8.99
Dreidle Dreidle Dreidle
GIANT "MENORAH" FOIL BALLOONS Reg. 17.99 NOW $7.99
24 ct - 5oz WINE GLASSES NOW $3.99
SOLID COLOUR PLASTIC TABLE COVERS 54 X 108 Reg $1.99 NOW $1.59
LOTS & LOTS OF CHANUKAH LOOT
LOADS OF STOCK • WAREHOUSE PRICES • WHILE STOCK LASTS • SALE ENDS DECEMBER 1, 2010

Continued from page 30

Tuesday, Nov. 23

LUNCH AND LEARN

Gary Clement, political cartoonist for the National Post, on "Seriously Funny: My Life as a Cartoonist." 12:15 p.m. Beth Tikvah. By reservation only. 416-221-3433, ext. 352

Wednesday, Nov. 24

PAUL PENNA OPEN HOUSE

Paul Penna Day School, senior kindergarten to Grade 6 open house 10 a.m. 750 Spadina Ave. RSVP: 416-928-3537 ext. 135.

BIALIK INFO SESSION

Bialik Hebrew Day School invites prospective parents living in the north GTA to attend an upcoming session about their new branch on the Lebovic Campus, Bialik North. 7 p.m. TanenbaumCHAT Kimel Centre. 9600 Bathurst St. Perlis boardroom Danielle, danielle_waltman@bialik.on.ca.

Other News

NCSY CONCERT

30th annual NCSY concert and gala dinner. Eli Gerstner and Yeshiva Boys Choir perform. Dec. 12, 7:30 p.m. Toronto Centre for the Arts. ncsy-concert.com, 905-761-6279, ext. 230, for tickets.

WEEKEND RETREAT

Beth Tikvah weekend retreat: "Pathways to Faith and Prayer through Mussar," with Alan Morinis. Nov. 26-28. 416-221-3433.

'NEW JEWISH PHILOSOPHY'

Temple Har Zion adult education committee presents Michael Morgan on "New Jewish philosophy: New Ideas for a New Millennium." Nov. 25, 7:30 p.m. 905-889-2252.

MICHAEL WEX

Author Michael Wex comes to Beth David with his new book, The Frumkiss Family Business. Nov. 25, 7:30 p.m. Free. All welcome. 416-633-5500.

SHABBAT SERVICE

Join Temple Har Zion for Shabbat. 8 p.m. After the service, Marilyn Eisenstat on "China Remembered." Nov. 26. 905-889-2252.

FILM FESTIVAL

Renaissance Film Festival at Temple Sinai. Nov. 26-28. Temple members $95, non-members $115 for four films. Visa or MasterCard. Advance registration. 416-487-3281.

ALBERTO MIZRAHI

Cantor Alberto Mizrahi will be cantor-in-residence at Beth Sholom. Nov. 27, 9 a.m.

HEALING SERVICE

Jewish Healing Program presents a healing service. Nov. 28, 3-4 p.m. Temple Har Zion. Free. 416-638-7800 ext. 6287.

GIFT AND CRAFT SHOW

Kinda Gift and Craft Show, in support of Hospice Thornhill. Nov. 28, 10:30 a.m.-3:30 p.m. North Thornhill Community Centre, 300 Pleasant Ridge Ave.

EDMONTON DAY SCHOOL

Talmud Torah School in Edmonton celebrates its 100th anniversary in May 2012. Visit http://tt100.ca for updates about celebrations, from May 18-20, 2012. 780-481-3377.

JF&CS GROUPS

Call Shawna Sidney, 416-638-7800, ext. 6215, or visit jfandcs.com. Registration required.

How to achieve a good divorce. Workshop for people thinking of separating or in the beginning stages of separation and divorce. Presented by lawyer and divorce coach/mediator. Nov. 23, 7-9 p.m. Promenade Mall, Suite 313.

Effective parenting. For parents with kids ages 2-11. Nov. 25, 7-9 p.m. Lipa Green Centre.

Dating in midlife. For men and women 40+ who have been single 2 or more years and want to nurture a lasting relationship. Nov. 25, 7-9:30 p.m. Lipa Green Centre.

FOR SENIORS

Active Seniors Miles Nadal JCC: Nov. 18, 1:30 p.m. "Great Jewish Canadian Personalities: J. B. Salzberg." Adam Fuerstenberg.

Connecting the generations. Meet a student over catered lunch. Enjoy Jewish heritage tour at the ROM. 416-924-621, ext. 155.

Adath Israel Congregation. Wednesday social afternoons. Bridge, mah-jong, Rummikub, refreshments. $2. Pearl, 416-635-6317, or Marcia, 416-932-1229.

Association of Jewish Seniors annual Chanukah luncheon. Dec. 2, 12 p.m. Shaarei Shomayim. Doors open at 11 a.m. Pre-paid reservation only: $20 members, $25 non-members. Tammy: 416-635-2860, ext. 458.

Earl Bales Seniors Club in the Park, 416-395-7881. Casino Rama Dec. 15, departs 10 a.m. Lunch and Laughter: latkes, etc. Nov. 30, 12 p.m. Line dancing Thursdays, 10-11:30 a.m. Social bridge Thursdays, 12:30-3 p.m. Canasta Tuesdays and Thursdays, 12-3 p.m. Social circle – needlepoint, etc. Tuesdays, 10-11:30 a.m. For info about seniors woodworking, call 416-630-6487. Open to members.

Bernard Betel Centre, 1003 Steeles Ave. W., 416-225-2112.

"Famous Jewish Trials – Julius and Ethel Rosenberg." Nov. 23, 10-11:30 a.m. $3 members, $6 guests.

Wellness lecture: "Fall Prevention" with Bayshore Home Health. Nov. 25, 1:30-2:30 p.m. Free.

Retirement Living Fair. Nov. 24, 11 a.m.-2 p.m. Free.

PROSSERMAN JCC

Sherman Campus, 4588 Bathurst St. 416-638-1881, www.prossermanjcc.com.

Half The Kingdom challenged us, 20 years ago, to rethink the role of women in Judaism. Now we ask, "What's next?" Nov. 30, 7:15 p.m. Bloor Cinema. Optional screening of movie at 6 p.m.

Nov. 21, 2-4:30 p.m. Mind, Body and Soul seminar series. "Raising and Sustaining Healthy Families." Free. Natalie, ext. 4036.

Registration for Prosserman JCC Daycare and Preschool for Sept. 2011 is now open. Ext. 4351.

Nov. 24, 12-1 p.m. crEATivity club – Susan Walker performs flamenco and talk about its origin. Professional Retirees Organization will stay on from 1-2 p.m. for program meeting. New participants welcome. Janet, ext. 4259.

Friday dinner, Nov. 26, with the Jewish singles group Plenty-o-Gefiltefish. Visit JCC website or meetup.com/plenty-o-gefiltefish.

Line dancing – variety of dance styles. No partner necessary. Fridays, 10:30-11:30 a.m. Pay at the door.

Movie Mondays with Larry Anklewicz. Nov. 29, Watermarks. 1:30 p.m. Doors at 1 p.m. $5.

Family Programs: Shabbat party, preschool dance, Sports With Jay and sing-along with Deborah Maes. Monique, ext. 4012.

MILES NADAL JCC

750 Spadina Ave., 416-924-6211, www.mnjcc.org.

Michael Bernstein Chapel holds services Sundays, 8 a.m., and Thursdays, 7:15 a.m. Complete kosher breakfast after services. Coleman Bernstein, 416-968-0200.

Toronto Jewish Film Society. 2011 subscription season selling out. Eight great films from January to December on selected Sundays at Al Green Theatre. Noted speakers introduce and discuss each film. Joelle: ext. 139 to register.

Renee Barda: Life Begins Again! With Dorothy Krizmanic, Gideon Wilk and John Lettieri. Dec. 11, 7:30 p.m. Al Green Theatre. $22 regular, $18 group (10 or more). Tickets/info: ext. 0.

Harold Green Jewish Theatre presents Lenin's Embalmers. Closes Nov. 21. 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. Al Green Theatre. $49-$76. 416-366-7723.

Media Mondays, lectures with film clips. "Surfing the New Waves: Contemporary Foreign-Language Cinema." Eye Weekly film critic Adam Nayman examines the style and substance of recent art-house exports. Nov. 22, 7-9 p.m. $12 drop in per lecture. Ext. 606.

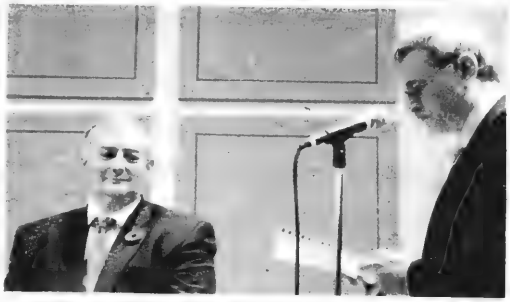
1960s-themed Book Salon and Coffee House. Nov. 25, 7:30 p.m. Harold Troper discusses his new book, The Defining Decade, with Dan Mendelsohn Aviv. With musical performances featuring songs from and inspired by the '60s. Ext. 154.

Book launch, Nov. 29 7 p.m. Jacobs Lounge. Adam Seelig's literary debut, Every Day in the Morning (slow). Ext. 154.

Chanukah cooking workshop. Nov. 30, 7-9 p.m. Join Elise Burton to cook dishes perfect for your Chanukah party. Ext. 154.

Dec. 5, 12-2 p.m. Family Chanukah celebration. Latkes, music, games and crafts. Ext. 277.

What's New is now online, for subscribers only. You can find it at cjnews.com



RABBI SMILEY RECEIVES HONORARY DEGREE: Barry Holtz, right, dean of the Jewish Theological Seminary's William Davidson Graduate School of Jewish Education, presents Rabbi Mark Smiley, director of education at Associated Hebrew Schools, with an honorary doctorate of pedagogy from JTS. Rabbi Smiley was the only Canadian to receive an honorary doctorate. [JTS and JEA photo]

SINGLES EVENTS CAN BE FOUND ON PAGE 34

Dolce Hot Air Theatre Style Popcorn maker
Perfect for Parties or Movie Night!
• Keeps Warm for Hours • Holds up to 55 Cups
Lowest Price In Ontario
79.99
Compare at 129.99
POPCORN
Full Money-Back Refund Policy!
Always 1st Quality!
Pay Cash 2% OFF Your Total Purchase
Cayne's
The SUPER HOUSEWARE
Shop Online at www.cayneshousewares.com
112 DONCASTER, Thornhill, Ont.
One Traffic Light North of Steeles Ave. East of Yonge St.
905-764-1188
Mon-Fri 9-9
Sat&Sun 10-6
BRIDAL REGISTRY

OBITUARIES
and Related Notices

BENJAMIN'S PARK MEMORIAL CHAPEL

Shirley Levinsky	Oct 23/10	3560 Bathurst St
David Rozen	Oct 23/10	41 Thomson Legge
Freda Weiner	Oct 24/10	2 Buchin Crt
Ben Kanter	Oct 27/10	147 Spring Gate
David Fine	Oct 26/10	133 Gypsy Roseway
Esther Walsh	Oct 27/10	54 Blue Forest Drive
Mania Dattner	Oct 29/10	2 Covington Road
Sonya Kachkina	Oct 31/10	99 Brightsview Drive
Gideon Feldman	Nov 1/10	100 Canyon Avenue
Mary Hain	Nov 2/10	1101 Steeles Ave W
Henia Goldstep	Nov 2/10	11 Townsgate Drive
Leona Hurwitz	Nov 3/10	21 Mayfair Avenue
Ethelda Weinstein	Nov 4/10	21 Mayfair Avenue
Ann Bell	Nov 5/10	3048 Uplands Drive
Allen Cole	Nov 4/10	19 Lower Village Gt
Sandra Johnson	Nov 4/10	250 St. Clair Ave W
Gerald Rose	Nov 5/10	4300 Bathurst St.

HEBREW BASIC

Michael Lustgarten	Oct 14/10	17 Dallington Drive
Margot Needemyer	Oct 15/10	5935 Bathurst St.
Betty Wasserstein	Oct 30/10	1001 Peter Robertson
Ruth Diament	Nov 4/10	1318 Wilton Avenue

The President and Board of Trustees of BATHURST LAWN MEMORIAL PARK
express sincere condolences to the family of the late

Marvin Fox ז"ל
Past President

Philip Covshoff, President — Sol Zeifman, Past-President

The family of the late
ROSE FOGLE ז"ל
wishes to express our gratitude to all our family and friends for the support extended to us during our recent loss of a remarkable mother, grandmother, great-grandmother and special Auntie Ruchel.

We have been comforted by your expressions of love.

IZENBERG GOLDBERG Monuments
Nov. 1 – Dec. 31/10 SAVINGS
SINGLE MONUMENTS $1400 any colour granite | DOUBLE MONUMENTS $2400 any colour granite
Be an educated consumer, compare quality and price.
We do not pay any funeral home commissions for their recommendations.
Our prices are therefore lower. We will not be undersold!
Serving generations of families in Toronto's Jewish community for over 90 years
We are a family owned and operated with informed, impartial Monument specialists in a no-pressure, non-commissioned sales environment.
3173 BATHURST ST.
(4 blocks north of Lawrence)
416-787-0319
www.izenberggoldberg.com

On Campus

Iran developing missiles to be fired from space: journalist

By LAURA STRICKER
Staff Reporter

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu has "among the most difficult jobs in the world," an Israeli journalist said recently – bringing peace to the Middle East and preventing the nuclearization of Iran.

Speaking to a large crowd at York University on Nov. 4, Gil Hoffman, chief political correspondent for the Jerusalem Post, discussed "Peace, Politics and Plutonium."

While a small group of protesters congregated outside, the atmosphere inside the university's Founders Assembly Hall remained mostly respectful.

The event was sponsored by a number of campus groups, including Canadian Network for Israel Affairs, B'nai Brith on Campus, Christians United for Israel at York, Hasbara at York, Jewish National Fund, Model N.A.T.O, York Campus Conservatives and York Young Liberals.

> 'A military strike is never the best option'

"I'm so happy that so many organizations came together to organize this event," Hoffman said. "The fact that you've got the Liberals and the Conservatives working together… shows that Israel is the kind of issue that unites people from all different backgrounds."

Hoffman, who is from Chicago and now lives in Jerusalem, said he is proud to be both Israeli and American.

"With the [recent United States] election, I made sure to vote.

"Nowadays I think I look at who I decide to vote for in a different way. Right now, I really just vote on the Israel issue. I look at all the names on the ballots, and then I write in Stephen Harper," he joked.

Hoffman said that there's more to Israel than just conflict.

"So much of the focus on Israel is regarding the peace process and security issues. I think it's really important to stress, before I get into those issues that Israel, is a country that shares Canada's liberal values, whether it's women's rights, gay rights, protecting minorities."

Right now, Israelis are especially concerned with preventing Iran from acquiring nuclear weapons, Hoffman said.

"Allowing a man [Iran's President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad] who denies the Holocaust and wants to make a new one… is not an option for the world. He's very serious when he talks about destroying Israel, and not only Israel but Europe as well.

"He's developing missiles that can be fired from space. He said as soon as he gets long-range capabilities, he's going to share it with his buddies, including the president of Venezuela, which would threaten America as well. So this is being taken very seriously."

Hoffman touched on four possible ways to halt Iran's nuclearization: the political approach, diplomatic approach, economic approach and military approach – "in that order," he said.

"The political approach was tried and failed, that was the election in Iran. The people in Iran deserve to have a democracy, they deserve to be treated better.

"Then when that didn't work," Hoffman said, "the world tried to reach out to Iran.

"Iran has said they want their nuclear power for energy, so Russia said we will take your uranium and enrich it and bring it back to you… in a way that can't be used for weapons. And Iran said no, really proving to the international community that they are aiming [to be] a military threat."

When the first two approaches didn't work, the focus then shifted to an economic approach – sanctions.

"Unfortunately, it took a good six months for sanctions to pass in the UN, but they passed in June," he said. "If given time, Netanyahu believes it can work.

The sanctions are definitely having an effect on the Iranian regime, Hoffman said, but added there is still work to be done.

"The sanctions are working. They are having a significant effect on putting pressure on the Iranian regime – and not on the Iranian people.

"Banks are not transferring money, insurance companies are not insuring Iranian ships docked around the world… planes are not being allowed to refuel in airports around the world, the Chinese have stopped using Iranian oil, the Iranian leadership has had to stop subsidizing food and gas and the Iranian administration has complained that the cost of imports has gone up by 30 per cent.

"It's having a significant impact, but the Israeli government believes that you have to keep tightening the sanctions.

"Unfortunately so far, even though the economic approach is putting pressure on the Iranian government, there are no signs that it's rethinking its nuclear program due to this pressure," Hoffman said.

If the sanctions don't work, that leaves the military approach, which is something no one in the Israeli government wants, Hoffman said.

"A military strike is never the best option… it's a horrible option that no one wants. Not Netanyahu, not anyone in the Israeli government currently. They want the economic approach to work, to bring down the Iranian regime or at least ramp up the pressure on Ahmadinejad to stop the nuclear program.

"I think it won't come to there being any kind of military strike," he added.

Something else Hoffman talked about was the many attempted boycotts of Israeli-made products and businesses.

"Whenever a cellphone goes off, it fills me with pride as an Israeli," he said, as his cellphone vibrated loudly, "because Israelis invented so many things that you use here at York. If anyone wants to boycott Israeli products, then you can't have a cellphone, any laptop computer on this campus… so [you would] go back into prehistoric times."

Vichy regime anti-Semitic, says Nazi fighter

By ELIAS LEVY
Staff Reporter

MONTREAL — Lawyer, historian, Nazi fighter Serge Klarsfeld recently unveiled an original, unedited, historic French government document annotated in Marshal Philippe Pétain's handwriting, establishing the Law Regarding the Status of Jews in October 1940.

"This indisputable document is formal proof that Vichy was a fiercely anti-Semitic, pro-Nazi regime led by a notorious anti-Semite – Marshal Pétain," Klarsfeld said in an interview from Paris.

Read Elias Levy's interview with Serge Klarsfeld on our website at cjnews.com

A dreidel, a menorah, some Chanukah gelt... Chanukah gifts you gave your children

Now that they're all grown up, give them something that will connect them to the community throughout the year

Give them their own subscription to The Canadian Jewish News

From now through the holiday The CJN is discounting gift subscriptions by $10

To order, call

1-866-849-0864

and use promo code N10CHK

or complete the coupon

New addresses only

The Canadian Jewish news

P.O. BOX 819 STN MAIN,
MARKHAM, ON, L3P 8A2
P: 1-866-849-0864,
F: 905-946-1679
www.cjnews.com

New addresses only
$27.80* for 1 YR. in PRINT
Quote Code: N10CHK
Canadian Delivery. New Address Only
* Expires Dec. 31st 2010

Doc key: S10PHCJN, S10WMCJN

CJN SUBSCRIPTION RATES

$68.00*	2 YR. CANADA	❑
$37.80*	1 YR. CANADA	❑
$20.95*	1 YR. digital edition (eCJN)	❑
*H.S.T INCLUDED	H.S.T. #R105201149
$135.00 CND	1 YR. U.S.A. / FOREIGN	❑

Name_____

Address_____

City_____

Province _____ Postal Code _____

Telephone_____

Email _____

❑ I am purchasing this subscription as a gift

Subscriber No._____

PLEASE RETURN WITH YOUR PAYMENT.

AMOUNT ENCLOSED $ _____

CHEQUE ENCLOSED ❑

VISA ❑ MasterCard ❑ American Express ❑

NUMBER_____

EXPIRY DATE _____

Experienced Mohel

Rabbi Avraham Sultan

Cantor Shaarei Shomayim

Performs lifecycle events
Sephardic & Ashkenaze rituals
Bar/bat mitzvah lessons. Weddings

FREE CONSULTATIONS
FREE FIRST BAR MITZVAH LESSON

Contact: rabbisultan@yahoo.ca
Cell: 416-735-8736

Cleaning Protection Restoration

For All Your Stone Surfaces

MARBLE RESCUE

Insured and Bonded

Technicians with over 15 years experience.
We'll beat any written residential quote by 20%
416-782-BUFF(2833)
Don't replace your dull, damaged stone & marble. Turn to us!

TORONTO JEWISH FILM SOCIETY

A SUBSCRIPTION SERIES OF 8 GREAT FILM EVENTS

Miles Nadal JCC

January to December 2011
4:00 & 7:30 PM Memberships available: $103 ages 18-35: $60 (7:30 pm only)
Al Green Theatre, MNJCC, 750 Spadina Ave & Bloor, mnjcc.org

SIGN UP NOW: joellem@mnjcc.org (416)924-6211 x 139

'KOSHER' LABEL IN ADVERTISING

The Canadian Food Inspection Agency Guide to Food Labelling and Advertising reads as follows:

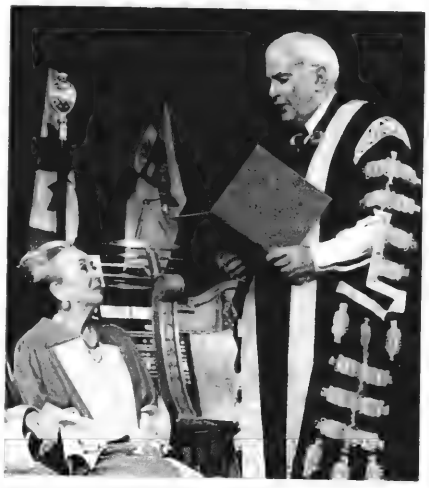
"In the labelling, packaging and advertising of a food, the Food and Drug Regulations prohibits the use of the word kosher or any letter of the Hebrew alphabet, or any other word, expression, depiction, sign, symbol, mark, device or other representation that indicates or that is likely to create an impression that the food is kosher, if the food does not meet the requirements of the Kashruth applicable to it.

The terms "kosher style" and "kind of kosher" are not allowed, unless they meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish-style food" or "Jewish cuisine" are not objected to, although the foods may not necessarily meet the requirements of the Kashruth.

Rationale: "Kosher style" is considered to create the impression that the food is kosher, and therefore the food must meet the requirements of the Kashruth. "Jewish style" food may not necessarily create this impression."

The CJN makes no representation as to the kashruth of food products in advertisements.

On Campus



HONORARY DEGREE AWARDED: On Nov. 10, the University of Toronto awarded Dorothy Cohen Shoichet an honorary doctor of laws degree in recognition of her business leadership and tireless volunteer efforts, particularly in the areas of education and the arts. Shoichet, a Toronto native, earned a political science and economics degree from the University of Illinois before getting her start in the business world as co-manager of the Oxford Picture Frame Company. While raising three children, Shoichet helped grow the company into Canada's largest manufacturer of picture frame moulding and accessories. Shoichet is a strong advocate of education, and has dedicated much of her life to volunteerism in this field. Her efforts have included serving as director of Dare Arts, a program for at-risk children, and also as both vice-president of the World ORT Union and president of the Canadian Women's ORT, one of the world's largest non-governmental education and training organizations. Her commitment to the arts is also reflected in her volunteerism with the Koffler Centre of the Arts and the Obsidian Theatre. Shoichet is an avid supporter of the University of Toronto, Mount Sinai Hospital and Baycrest. Here, U of T chancellor David Peterson, presents Cohen Shoichet with her degree.

Singles Events is an advertising feature of The Canadian Jewish News

For rates or to place an ad, please call 416-391-1836
Deadline: Wednesdays, 4 p.m., 8 days preceding issue date.

"SOULMATES"
Personalized Jewish matchmakers.
Matches are made in heaven, we just assist! Register FREE on our confidential website!
www.soulmates.net
905-709-3868

Jewish Connections Inc.

Hey Guys . . . Are you looking for :

Stunning blonde beauty, 32, 5' 7", slim, never married, fun, energetic and professional

♥ ♥ ♥

Very attractive brunette, 34, 5' 4", athletic, slim, never married, Medical Specialist

. . . Are you the one . . .

For a complimentary consultation call Carole: 905-889-3900
carole@jewishconnectionsinc.com
www.jewishconnectionsinc.com

ש'שאר ב'נ'נ

גידי קורן וחברים

כנס היסטורי- ישראלים בתפוצות

רישמו לפניכם: בין ה-13 ל-15 בדצמבר ייערך בטורונטו כנס היסטורי, ראשון מסוגו, של מנהיגי הקהילות הישראליות ברחבי העולם. בכנס, בתמיכת משרד הקליטה הישראלי והסוכנות היהודית, ישתתפו השר יולי אדלשטיין וראש הסוכנות נתן שרנסקי. לכנס יש שלוש מטרות מוצהרות:
ללמוד זה מזה מה יכול להביא לבנייה נכונה של קהילה ישראלית בניכר.
איך לשפר את היחסים בין הישראלים בניכר לקהילות היהודיות.
איך לשפר את תמיכתם של הישראלים בניכר במדינת ישראל.
חלק מהאירוע סגור לנציגים בלבד, אבל חלקו יהיה פתוח לקהל הרחב. לפרטים: אורית בן אור , טל. 4166352885 שלוחה 5434

נאוות יחידה

"שישאר בינינו" משיק היום מדור חדש, שיעסוק בהישגים ישראליים מעוררי נאווה. והיום, לחגוג את ההשקה- שני הישגים שונים זה מזה בתכלית.
זה שיש לישראל אלופי עולם בשחמט ומתימטיקה- מתאים לציפיות מן הגנים היהודיים. זה שמפעם לפעם מצליחה ישראל להשיג פרס נובל במדעים- גם לזה התרגלנו. אבל אליפות עולם באינגוף!!! בסדר, כל ילד ישראלי הולך קצת מכות בהפסקת עשר ואולי גם בשכונה. אבל מזה ועד לאליפות עולם באינגוף!! ועוד אשה!!!!! ולא די בכך למפלס הנאווה- הגר פיינר הגנה על תוארה העולמי בטורונטו, תוך תמיכה בולטת של הקהילה היהודית.
בכתבה איתה ב"שלום טורונטו" מספרת הגר לשמעון זר אביב על אבא אלים, ועל זה שהיא בעצם די שבורה לרסיסים מהחבטות שכל השימפנזות החזקות בעולם חובטות בה, כולל שבר דורש ניתוח בפנים. מה עוד שמעבר לכבוד יש מזה מעט מאוד כסף.
יד על הלב- לדעתי צריך להוציא את האינגוף מחוץ לחוק! ספורט שמאפשר לאנשים לחבוט זה לזה בראש, כשכל חבטה מחשלת עם קבלת מאות תאי עצבים במוח- אסור שיקרה, ולבטח אסור שיזכה בתמיכה כלשהיא. רק לראות את מוחמד עלי , קאסיוס קליי האגדי מדדה בקושי ממחלת הפרקינסון שתקפה אותו בגיל צעיר- והנקודה ברורה. אבל בינתיים- שיא עולמי לישראלית דקיקה.
נאוות היחידה השניה להיום באה מארגון האומות המאוחדות, שמזה שנים מדרג אחת לשנה את כל מדינות העולם לפי איכות החיים שלהן. המדדים כוללים תמותת תינוקות, תוחלת חיים, חינוך ועוד כהנה וכהנה עשרות מדדים שמכונסים למספר סופי. בליגה הזאת הגיעה ישראל למקום ה- 15 המכובד, כשקנדה במקום השמיני, ארה"ב ברביעי, ובראש הרשימה נורבגיה.
אינני מוחה חס ושלום על הישגה המדהים של ישראל, אבל מאוד מעניין אותי איך מדדו המדענים של האו"ם את מפלס המתח, ואיך משוקללת שם נקודת הבטיחות האישית והעובדה שמשאבים כל כך רבים מושקעים כדי למנוע את פעולת הטרור הבאה? למען האמת-כבר זמן רב שמתי לב לעובדה שבעוד שהעיתונים הישראלים מקפידים לפרסם כמה רע בישראל, בכל משאלי דעת הקהל אומרים תושבי ישראל ברוב גדול שהם בעצם שבעי רצון ממצבם האישי. אבל שישאר בינינו.

הנערה שבעטה בקן הצרעות

זהו חלקה השלישי והאחרון של טרילוגית המתח שמשגעת את העולם מזה כשנה. להזקירכם: עיתונאי שודי, סטיג לארסן, כותב שלושה ספרי מתח, ובטרם הם יוצאים לאור הוא נפטר מהתקף לב בגיל חמישים. הספרים עוסקים בעיתונאי חוקר ובנערה מוזרה, האקרית של מחשבים, שביחד מגלים שערוריות חובקות עולם. הסרט האחרון שווה ראיה אם ראיתם את קודמיו- הוא מסכם ושוגר בצורה הרמטית את סיפורי קודמיו. אם לא ראיתם את קודמיו-הם עדיין בבתי הקולנוע, והם יציגו לכם סרטי מתח שלא לפי הז'אנר האמריקאי או הבריטי, הכל כך מוכרים וצפויים.
עשר בסולם קורן.

On Campus

'We are all in this world together'

By JONATHON LIEDTKE

Guest Voice

At the beginning of October, students from across Canada (myself included) gave up our Thanksgiving weekends – sacrificing seeing friends and family, studying for midterms and our regular campus activities, in other words, a "normal weekend" – for the pursuit of something bigger

We took part in a social justice excursion organized by the Canadian Federation of Jewish Students. It led us to New York City to volunteer, do social justice work and study. From Thursday to Monday, our schedule was packed.

We worked at soup kitchens and participated with Midnight Run (an organization with volunteers from churches, synagogues and schools that provides basic survival items to the homeless), delivering food, blankets and clothing.

We learned about and canvassed for Uri L'Tzedek, an organization that is concerned about the fair and equal treatment of all workers, documented and undocumented, in kosher restaurants. Some kosher restaurants in New York and Brooklyn employ the same business strategy as non-kosher restaurants: paying below minimum wage if they can get away with it.

Uri L'Tzedek believes, as do we, that this strategy does not fit with Torah values or laws defined by the United States (or Canada for that matter). After a rigorous qualifying period, Uri L'Tzedek's seal is affixed to an ethical restaurant alongside its seal of kashrut, to let patrons know that the restaurant's workers are treated fairly. With 60 restaurants across America co-operating, the organization continues to expand.

Each student who went to New York represented a different faculty and program from universities across Canada, but it became quite evident that we had much in common. Aside from the fact we were all Jewish, there was something that resonated with all the students – a drive toward justice and a passion to do.

Never were complaints made about the amount of work, the situations that were presented, or the little time for sleep – quite the opposite, as most students seemed to want to do more.

The 10 student leaders had all participated in similar programs before, working within the Jewish community and in the community at large.

The economic downturn and the housing market crisis are not isolated events that leave the Jewish community untouched: we are not immune. Though some members of the public might not believe there is a need for Jews to be helped, I can certainly say that now, more than ever, there is a need. While at face value, Jewish people may appear to be in better financial positions than the general population, this does not mean people are not dependent on the services that Jewish organizations provide (and these services are not restricted entirely to Jewish people, either).

Working with Midnight Run delivering food to the homeless at various locations throughout downtown Manhattan, a night that ended at Penn Station, helped us to see the inconsistencies and cracks in the social fabric.

Posters for Broadway shows lined the walls of these disenfranchised people's home. "The Lion King: eight performances a week!"; "Free wi-fi for all"; "Swarovski diamonds and jewels." All seemed oddly out of place when the audience at night for these advertisements is the homeless. When people are using Penn Station as a home, the luxury of "free wi-fi" almost seems like a slap in the face.

Arriving home after a trip like this one, and like many before it, I had the all-too-familiar feeling of emptiness. It's reminiscent of the day after summer camp ends, or moving out of a house, or leaving a job after a number of years. You're left with a sense of "what now?"

"What now?" is exactly the kind of question you want resonating through you after a trip such as this. I found myself pacing my bedroom, with thoughts racing a mile a minute: what project to start, how to go about it and where to begin?

I got right down to it, wrote out a plan and started making phone calls. There was no need for someone to tell me what to do: initiative took hold. Initiative is what these trips breed; it is what the world needs.

We all know there are problems facing our world, both big and small, and they are all manageable. However, pursuing social justice isn't easy. It is not a one-day quest; the world cannot change overnight.

What I have learned now, more than ever, is that the change you can effect is monumental. Even if you make one person's life a bit happier, easier, even less hectic, that is what counts. We are all in this world together, as one team: we need to work together.

Jonathon Liedtke is a student at the University of Windsor. He helped establish Windsor's mayor's youth advisory committee.

Protect Your Table
Made-To-Measure Table Pad
Prevents scratches, burns & spills
Factory Direct Pricing
Free in-home service
Dover Pad
UNBEATABLE QUALITY SINCE 1950
Now available in Calgary
MagnaLoc
Canada Wide: 1-800 354-4445
www.doverpad.ca

INAUGURAL LAUNCH OF THE MIND, BODY & SOUL SERIES

Growing Healthy Families
Learn from the experts

mind, body & soul

For parents, grandparents, child caregivers, teachers, social workers and anyone who works with, plays with and loves children!
EVERYONE IS WELCOME

MIND/ Ariel Dalfen
Mt. Sinai Psychiatrist and Maternal and Infant Mental Health Specialist

BODY/ Joe Rich
Parenting Expert, Guest therapist on City TV, City Line and Author of Parenting: The Long Journey

SOUL / Elyse Goldstein
Prosserman JCC Director of Jewish Programs and Collaborations

MODERATOR/Molyn Leszcz
Psychiatrist-in-Chief, Mount Sinai Hospital

Our featured speakers will be available to answer individual questions after the formal presentation

Sunday, November 21
1:30-4:00 pm / free event

Tamari Family Hall
Lipa Green Centre / Sherman Campus
4600 Bathurst Street

Babysitting available FREE of charge for children ages 3-11.

Advance registration is required.
Register on line at www.prossermanjcc.com or call 416.638.1881 x.4235 no later than Wednesday, November 17.

For more information call 416.638.1881 x. 4036

The Mind, Body and Soul Series is made possible through the support of the following

Ontario
Ontario Ministry of Health Promotion and Sport
UJA Federation of Greater Toronto
prosserman
Jewish Family & Child
Mount Sinai Hospital
United Way Toronto

General Assembly

Israel and youth top agenda in New Orleans

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

NEW ORLEANS — Confronting delegitimization of Israel and engaging youth, were two major themes that emerged at last week's annual General Assembly (GA) of Jewish Federations.

Their immediacy became dramatically apparent when Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu was heckled loudly by five Jewish college students at a plenary Nov. 8, the second day of the three-day event in New Orleans, La.

The consecutive disruptions arose when members of the Young Leadership Institute of Jewish Voices for Peace stood – one at a time and several minutes apart, in different areas of the cavernous room – yelling slogans like "The settlements delegitimize Israel."

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu addresses delegates at the GA. [Frances Kraft photos]

Netanyahu, addressing more than 3,000 delegates, said he would talk about delegitimizing Israel. "But they really have the wrong address," he countered in an understated aside while he focused on the nuclear threat from Iran.

"If the international community hopes to stop Iran's nuclear program without military action, it will have to convince Iran that it is prepared to take such action," he said.

But the assault on Israel's legitimacy is another danger, Netanyahu added. "We know from our history, that attacks on Jews were often preceded by attempts to delegitimize the Jewish people." Hatred against Jews has been redirected toward the Jewish state, he said.

He commended the Jewish Federations of North America for establishing the Israel Action Network, a new initiative that it launched with the Jewish Council for Public Affairs to combat anti-Israel campaigns.

"A lie that is unchallenged spreads and grows until it assumes the cachet of truth," he warned.

Netanyahu said he would not gamble with the security of the Jewish state. Israel is ready to recognize a Palestinian state as a state for the Palestinian people, he said, "and we expect the Palestinians to recognize Israel as a Jewish state for the Jewish people."

• • •

Other speakers at the meeting's three plenaries included U.S. Vice-President Joe Biden, Israeli opposition leader Tzipi Livni, and Jewish Agency for Israel chair Natan Sharansky.

GA workshops addressed issues ranging from conversion to tightened budgets, from the use of social media to reaching out to marginalized groups.

• • •

New Orleans mayor Mitchell Landrieu, speaking at the same plenary as Netanyahu, told delegates that, like Israel, New Orleans did not have an option. He was referring to Biden's remarks the previous day, when Biden recalled Golda Meir telling him in 1973 that Israelis' "secret weapon" was that they had nowhere else to go.

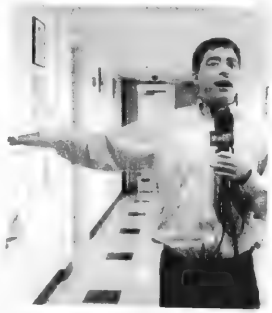
"Perhaps New Orleans can serve as a model for how to heal... so that we can live in peace and harmony," Landrieu said.

Five years after the city was devastated by Hurricane Katrina, it is still recovering.

For the first time in its 79-year history, participants at the GA took part in half-day service projects to help in the rebuilding.

The federations have contributed $28 million and sent thousands of volunteers to take part in hands-on projects.

In St. Bernard Parish, a 71-year-old great-grandmother who is raising four young children met with reporters outside her long, narrow "shotgun house," a style that is common in certain areas of the city. The house had to be gutted because of water damage, and she was able to move back only a few weeks ago.



Bob Berk, head of school of the New Orleans Jewish Day School, shows the height of the water at its worst in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina.

In Metairie – a New Orleans suburb that is home to four synagogues and a Jewish campus housing a Jewish community centre and a day school – the Jewish community has made much progress toward recovery.

At the time of the hurricane, a Chabad rabbi and his family in Metairie sheltered a vacationing Thornhill student on the top floor of their house until the water subsided.

An Orthodox synagogue, Beth Israel, which was too damaged to reopen, has been housed with a local Reform temple, Gates of Prayer. The Orthodox synagogue is rebuilding adjacent to the temple, and the two congregations are building a joint playground.

The New Orleans Jewish Day School, on the Jewish community campus in Metairie, was closed for a year after the hurricane. It reopened with a significantly smaller student population, but grew 10 per cent this year and now has 51 students. Before Katrina, 90 students attended the school.

The first floor of the building had to be "basically gutted, re-drywalled, powerwashed and all the stuff you do to get rid of fungus," head of school Bob Berk said. Holding his hand almost at shoulder-height to show visitors how far the water rose, Berk said everything below that level had been replaced.

He told of a high school group from New York, N.Y., that travelled to New Orleans to bury what turned out to be "a dump truckful" of damaged prayerbooks in the Orthodox cemetery, according to Jewish custom. Someone found a man with a truck – a Southern Baptist – to help them. He waited for hours for them to finish so he could cover the site with dirt, Berk said.

"The man felt like... here were people trying to do something that is part of their religion, and he was somebody of faith.

"Everyone has these stories," Berk added.

JEWISH FOUNDATION OF GREATER TORONTO

The Professional Advisory Committee presents

Cross Border Challenges: Planning for U.S. Citizens in Canada and Canadians in the U.S.

Thursday, December 2, 2010

Breakfast: 7:30 am (Kashruth Observed)

Program: 8:00 – 10:30 am

Sherman Campus, Lipa Green Centre, Tamari Family Hall
4600 Bathurst Street, Toronto

Generously sponsored by feigelsohnbellar.com expertly structuring estates

Presentations will include:

- Unique Issues with U.S. Income, Gift and Estate Taxes
  Jim Yager
  Partner, KPMG LLP
- Current U.S. Filing Issues
  Kevyn Nightingale
  Partner, Director of Expatriate Taxation
  Meyers Norris Penny LLP
- Registered Plans for U.S. Citizens
  Maria Weiss
  Senior Associate, Hodgson Russ LLP
- Canadians Holding U.S. Property
  Jack Bernstein
  Partner, Aird & Berlis LLP

Registration: $75

Email: jewishfoundation@ujafed.org
Phone: The Jewish Foundation at 416-631-5703
Online: ujaevents.com/registration/seminar2010

Space is limited

Continuing education credits available

We Welcome Julia from Yorkville!

Colour, partial highlights, cut, blow dry
+ FREE treatment
All for $99* We pay the tax valid only Tuesdays, Wednesdays & Thursdays with coupon. Expires 12/31/2010.*

5997 Bathurst Street
at Dewlane
Free Parking

Tues - Wed 9-5.30
Thurs - Fri 9-7
Saturday 8-5
OPEN
Sunday 11-4

Ruffles Hair Design
Visit us on the web: www.ruffleshairdesign.com

General Assembly

Jewish peoplehood is a new buzzword, GA told

By FRANCES KRAFT
Staff Reporter

Jewish institutions need to figure out how they wish to respond to new ways of thinking among younger adults, Jack Wertheimer told a packed room at the General Assembly of Jewish Federations last week.

Speaking at a workshop titled "Visions for the Jewish Community," which focused on generational differences, the Jewish Theological Seminary professor of American Jewish history said he is not only lamenting the loss of the past but recognizing "important gains."

Among the changes he cited, Wertheimer noted the loss of a "reflexive" identification with Israel, a lack of experience with anti-Semitism, and an acceptance of intermarriage to the extent that "in some sectors of the community to speak negatively about intermarriage is taboo."

His co-panelist Noam Pianko, an assistant professor of Jewish history at the University of Washington, said that centralized institutions are not going to be relevant to young people. "They're looking for individual experiences," he said.

As well, he talked about a "blurring of the boundaries," citing people with non-Jewish names who are "engaged members of the community," and people with typically Jewish-sounding names who aren't sure they are Jewish.

"I don't see this is a negative," he said. "I see a lot of possibilities in that these boundaries aren't there any more... It's certainly the case in Seattle, and I imagine it will be the case in other communities as well."

Pianko said he finds it interesting that Jewish "peoplehood" has become a buzzword. "My working hypothesis is that 'peoplehood' has come to be a synonym for support of the State of Israel... We're trying to hold on to that 'in' and 'out' boundary.

"The more we're focused on boundary maintenance, the more alienating it is for the group you're concerned about," he said.

Jack Wertheimer, at microphone, expresses concern over fragmentation of the Jewish community. At left is co-panelist Noam Pianko, while moderator Joanne Moore of the Jewish Federation of Greater Washington is at right. [Frances Kraft photo]

Bringing young leaders into existing leadership structure is only a band-aid solution, Pianko believes.

Instead, he suggested that organizations need to be creative and adaptive "to transform yourself into a new model. You may even alienate some of your leadership, but I think it's necessary to ensure your organization is going to thrive."

More specifically, he mentioned pulling back and relinquishing control, focusing less on boundaries, and building on existing social networks both in the real world and online.

Wertheimer noted that there are young Jews who care enough about Jewish life to become leaders, based on his research, which focuses on trends in American Jewish life since World War II, including a recently released report.

However, he expressed concern that the American Jewish community is fragmented into "smaller and smaller sub-units," and is losing a sense of "pulling for something far larger."

At the same time, he acknowledged that the flip side is "a greater acknowledgement of diverse groups who are given voice. I acknowledge that and I celebrate that."

Pianko said older and younger generations can learn from each other, but that sometimes there are different basic assumptions. He added that he thinks those assumptions have more to do with perspective than generation.

As a professor who teaches about Israel and sees students facing delegitimizers of the Jewish state, he said he believes it's the Jewish community's obligation "to give a more nuanced view of Israel, so [students] are not forced to choose Israel right no matter what, or Israel always wrong.

"We are not helping if we're afraid to acknowledge the challenges Israel faces.... I think it's going to be much more engaging if we see our community as having multiple perspectives, instead of creating communities where certain voices are not permitted to be heard."

Wertheimer said that significant populations of American Jews are "far more conflicted" about Israel government policies than in the past.

"We do need to educate our young people in some of the nuances." At the same time, he added, some "basic Jewish values," like the importance of Israel, are at stake.

Canadian Associates of Ben-Gurion University requires a dynamic

EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Experience working in not-for-profit, volunteer-based organization and knowledge of the Jewish Community are prerequisites. Five year work related experience is required.

The successful candidate has strong staff management, administrative and financial planning skills, and proven fundraising experience. Excellent interpersonal skills are required along with the ability to work well with members and volunteers.

Reporting directly to the President, the Executive Director is responsible for the implementation of programs, projects and fundraising activities as determined by the Executive and Board.

Resume and two references should be forwarded to:
CJN Box # 5309
1500 Don Mills Rd, Suite 205 Toronto, Ontario M3B 3K4

PYA IMPORTER LTD

SAMPLE SALE

You are cordially invited to PYA Importer Ltd's Sample Sale with up to 80% off the following collections:

Ted Baker Mens & Ladies Collections, Ted Baker Mens & Ladies Accessories, Earnest Sewn, Line Knitwear, Corpus, Loomstate, J Fedders, Toscano, Nove, PYA Black Label, Great China Wall, Edun, Olga Berg, John Smedley, Ruby Rox, Jaidan, DKNY Intimates and Sleepwear

(collections subject to change without notice)

Dates & Hours:
OPEN TO PUBLIC

Tues	Nov 23	12 - 9pm
Wed	Nov 24	12 - 9pm
Thurs	Nov 25	12 - 9pm
Fri	Nov 26	12 - 6pm
Sat	Nov 27	11 - 6pm
Sun	Nov 28	11 - 6pm

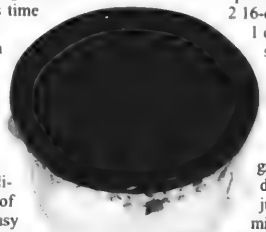
PYA IMPORTER
15 Apex Road, Toronto, M6A 2V6, 416 929 3300
jaime@pyaimporter.com

Cash, Visa, Mastercard, Amex and Debit accepted. No personal checks.

It doesn't get any easier than this

By SUE EPSTEIN
Special to The CJN

With colder weather coming up, it's time to start thinking in terms of hot, satisfying meals for the family once again – but meals that don't require a lot of ingredients and time to prepare. It's time to think crockpot.



The crockpot is often the most underused appliance in most kitchens. It is so much more versatile than using it just for Shabbat cholent. Why not take advantage of the possibilities that this workhorse of an appliance offers us busy cooks? A few minutes of simple effort in the morning produces a great hot meal at dinner time.

Aside from cholent, I often make my Shabbat chicken soup in it. I put up the soup Thursday evening and when I wake up on Friday morning, my soup is done. I then transfer it to another pot and it's ready to go on the blech for Shabbat dinner.

Make your favourite potato kugel or other kugels in the crockpot. The shape may be different (and attractive), but the taste is the same.

If you don't already have a crockpot, make sure to get one with a removable liner. It's easier to clean and more versatile. If you think you'll be out of the house for longer than the maximum time the recipe calls for, use a household timer to start the crockpot at the appropriate time.

MACARONI AND TOMATO CASSEROLE

2 lb. ground beef
1 cup onion, chopped
1 1/2 cups water
1 clove garlic, minced or 1 tsp. garlic powder
1/4 cup chopped green pepper
2 16-oz. cans tomatoes, chopped
1 cup tomato juice
salt and pepper to taste
1 tsp. oregano
2 cups uncooked macaroni

Brown the meat, onion, green pepper and garlic and drain. Combine tomatoes, juice and the drained meat mixture. Stir in the seasonings. Mix well and cook on low for 6-8 hours. Stir in uncooked macaroni and cook 2-3 hours longer. Makes 6 servings.

GARLIC ROAST

3 1/2 pounds boneless chuck roast
1 tbsp. oil
salt and pepper to taste
1 large onion, sliced
3 cloves garlic, peeled
1 cup beef broth

Heat oil in a pan over medium-high heat and cook roast about 10 minutes, turning occasionally, until brown on all sides. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Place onion and garlic in the crockpot. Place roast on top and pour broth over roast. Cover and cook on low for 8-10 hours or until meat is tender.

Note: shred the leftovers while still warm, using two forks. Add some barbecue sauce to it and you have another delicious meal.

SPICY CHILI

Another meal that you can make from the roast leftovers.

2 cups shredded garlic beef roast, thawed if frozen
1 cup hot or medium salsa
1 to 2 tsp.chili powder
1 15-oz. can pinto or kidney beans, rinsed and drained
4 medium green onions, sliced

Mix all ingredients in a saucepan and heat to boiling. Cover and simmer about 10 minutes or until hot, or cook in microwave until hot. Serves 2.

BUTTERNUT SQUASH CASSEROLE

5 lb. butternut squash or pumpkin
4 large baking apples
1/2 cup margarine
1 cup packed brown sugar
2 tbsp. flour
2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. cinnamon

Cut squash in half, remove seeds and fibres. Pare and cut into 1/2-in. pieces. Pare and core apples and cut into 1/2-in. slices. Combine the melted margarine, brown sugar, flour, salt and cinnamon. Layer one half of the squash in the bottom of the crockpot, top with one-half of the apple slices and one-half of the sugar mixture. Repeat layers. Cover and cook on auto for 5 hours, low 6-7 hours or high 3-1/2 hours. Serves 6.

ANNE FONTAINE
at
QUASAR
MODE
IMPORTED FASHIONS
FROM FRANCE
Anne Fontaine • Chacok
Zapa • Rodika Zanian

30% off

1240 BAY ST.
416-964-1214
(on Bellair at Cumberland, adjacent to subway entrance)
www.quasarmode.com

Take your latkes south

By RANDY FINGRUT
Special to The CJN

Ever since Jews arrived in Mexico from Spain during the Inquisition, they blended in well to the Mexican way of life. With over 50,000 Jewish Mexicans at present, daily and holiday cooking has become a mix of European and Mexican cuisines: chicken soup with matzah balls speckled with green poblano chilli peppers or jalapeños; meat stews with salsa on the side; European tortes made with Mexican vanilla and chocolate; and delicious pies, served with berries sweetened with raw Mexican brown sugar, and flavoured with lime juice.

Mexican cooking is known for intense flavours, colourful presentation, unique spicing, and seasonings. Tomato and chilli pepper, along with garlic and onion are very popular flavourings in Mexican cuisine and are easily melded into many traditional Jewish recipes. You will find these ingredients are a foundation in most main dishes.

Create a fun Chanukah fiesta of your own with these appetizing Mexican inspired latkes. These latkes are very delicious on their own, and are even more festive served up with all the delightful accompaniments associated with Mexican recipes.

MEXICAN STYLE LATKES

2 lb. (about 6-8 large) potatoes, cleaned and unpeeled
1 tsp. salt
2 eggs, beaten
1 medium onion, finely chopped
1/4 cup flour
2 tsp. chili powder
2 tsp. ground cumin
1 tsp. baking powder
1/2 cup fresh coriander, finely chopped (optional)
canola oil for frying

Grate potatoes in food processor or with hand grater, rinse grated potatoes in colander and squeeze out water. Move potatoes to large bowl and add salt, eggs, onion, flour, spices, baking powder and coriander. Mix well until combined. In a large heavy pan, heat about 1/4 in. of oil. Drop about 1/4 cup of latke mixture into hot oil, no more than 4 or 5 at a time. Flatten each latke with a spatula, and fry for 4-5 minutes until golden brown and crispy on the bottom. Carefully turn over latkes and fry another 4-5 minutes. Continue with the remainder of the mixture, add more oil only if needed. To avoid latkes becoming too oily, do not turn latkes more than once. Drain on paper towels. To keep latkes warm, place on a cookie sheet in a 200 degree oven.

ENCHILATKES

Mexican Enchiladas and latkes intermingle to create a delicious holiday treat.

Enchilada Sauce – recipe follows
1/2 cup Cheddar Cheese, Monterey Jack Cheese or mixture of both fresh cilantro, chopped lettuce
sour cream

Enchilada Sauce
1 tbsp. canola oil
3 tbsp. finely chopped onion
1 tbsp. flour
1/2 tsp. ground cumin
1/4 tsp. garlic powder
1/2 tsp. salt, or to taste
1 1/2 cups tomato sauce

Heat oil and add onion, cook until soft. Add flour and spices and cook for 1-2 minutes. Add tomato sauce and cook until mixture thickens, stirring occasionally, about 6-8 minutes.

To serve Enchilatkes:

Dip Mexican latkes in enchilada sauce, sprinkle with cheese, and lettuce. Garnish with fresh coriander and sour cream.

Social Networking @ The Canadian Jewish News for the :-) generation

Health & Lifestyles

"YOU DIDN'T GET MY CHEQUE? IT'S IN THE MAIL, HONEST!" Sound Familiar?
Michael Lebovic, Paralegal
25 Years in Debt Recovery (416) 784-3770 x 224
www.theydidntpay.com • theydidntpay@cciclaw.ca

Toronto hospital honours 81-year-old doctor

By CAROLYN BLACKMAN
Staff Reporter

At 81 years old, Dr. Douglas Wilansky, a full-time physician at Etobicoke General Hospital, says he may be slowing down a bit.

He now jogs only two or three miles, three or four times a week.

The founding chief of the hospital's department of internal medicine and of nuclear medicine, Wilansky was recently honoured at a dinner where it was announced that the name of the department has been changed to the Dr. Douglas Wilansky Nuclear Medicine Service.

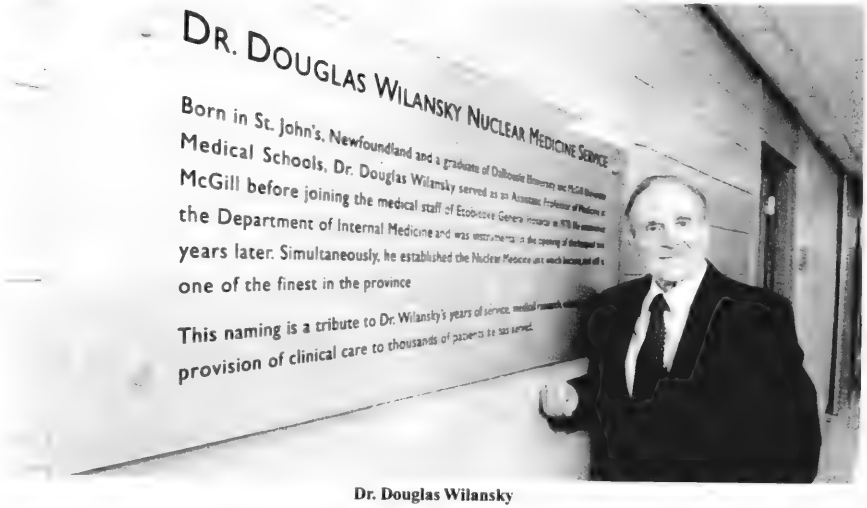
Dr. Eli Bienenstock, president of the EGH professional staff association, said in a statement that he is "delighted that this honour was given to my mentor and colleague. This tribute is our hospital's way to say thank you for the many years of education, research, dedication and the provision of outstanding medical service and care to thousands of patients in our community."

Wilansky said that he feels good about the honour, because it strengthens nuclear medicine at the hospital.

"Nuclear imaging, which studies functions, is one of the divisions of diagnostic imaging. [We use nuclear medicine, for example] to determine the cause of chest pain. Is it due to heart trouble, or to rheumatism of the chest wall? It's not always clear, and the best way to determine it is with nuclear medicine."

Born in St. John's, Nfld., Wilansky, who has been married for 60 years and has two children, graduated from medical school at Dalhousie University. Before joining EGH, he was on staff at the Jewish General and Queen Elizabeth hospitals in Montreal, and was assistant professor of medicine at McGill University.

While in Montreal, he was the recipient of a grant at the JGH to study pre-diabetes. He and a colleague showed that the temporary and judicious use of certain blood-sugar-lowering medication could deter the onset of diabetes, which provided a model for intensive study in this area during the past decade.



DR. DOUGLAS WILANSKY NUCLEAR MEDICINE SERVICE
Born in St. John's, Newfoundland and a graduate of Dalhousie University and McGill University Medical Schools, Dr. Douglas Wilansky served as an Associate Professor of Medicine at McGill before joining the medical staff of Etobicoke General Hospital in 1970. He established the Department of Internal Medicine and was instrumental in the opening of Etobicoke years later. Simultaneously, he established the Nuclear Medicine unit which became one of one of the finest in the province
This naming is a tribute to Dr. Wilansky's years of service, medical research, education provision of clinical care to thousands of patients he has served.

Dr. Douglas Wilansky

Since coming to Toronto in 1970, he has served on the board of the Toronto Diabetes Association, and on a panel on early diabetes and its prevention with the late Dr. Charles Best, the co-discoverer of insulin.

He was also founding chair of the education committee of Tifereth Beth David Jerusalem Synagogue in Montreal, and together with his wife, worked to promote Jewish education and helped to formulate the early curriculum of the Shalom Hartman Institute, a pluralistic research and leadership centre at the forefront of Jewish thought and education in Israel and the Diaspora. He has been vice-chair of Canadian Friends of Shalom Hartman Institute since 2007.

Wilansky said that since he has been "blessed with fitness, and his brain keeps chugging along," he has no plans to retire. "I am taking on less work, however, so I have more time for my personal life."

He keeps fit through running, and by maintaining "a moderately strict eating habit. I liberate myself from time to time, though, and have a scoop of ice cream."

TZEDKAH PROJECT: A joint program was recently held between Beth Sholom Hebrew School and Beth Tzedec Congregational School. Grade 6 and 7 students are seen here with some of the Kinderkits packed for donation to Ve'ahavta which was the tzedakah aspect of a Global Day of Jewish Learning. Kinderkits are a backpack with basic school supplies – pencil case, pencils, pens, erasers, notebooks and a ruler which are then distributed to children in Toronto and around the world who do not have access or cannot afford these supplies. They cost $18 a kit. The students in the picture are, from left, Emily Froman, Joey Caplan, Jamee Nepon, Ethan Leider, Jordan Tepper, Tomer Narvey, Leah Kaminker, Cleo Fruitman, Laura Phillips.

fitness DEPOT
EXERCISE EQUIPMENT SUPERSTORES
fitnessdepot.ca

And now for something completely different: HEEBONICS

Latino singer Amanda Martinez strikes the right chords

By SHELDON KIRSHNER
Staff Reporter

Toronto chanteuse Amanda Martinez is living her dream and doing it to the mesmerizing and infectious beat of Latin American jazz, Brazilian bossa nova and Mexican and Afro-Cuban rhythms.

"I feel very lucky," said Martinez, the first hostess of Cafe Latino, Jazz.FM's popular Saturday afternoon radio program dedicated to Latin music. "I'm really enjoying myself."

Having released two albums, Sola and Amor, and a sizzling single, Suenos Posibles, in the past four years, she may well be en route to stardom, not only in Canada but in the United States, too.

Amanda Martinez
[Joanne Klimaszewski photo]

For as long as she can remember, she has aspired to be a professional singer.

"I always had music in me," said Martinez, 39, who as a little girl put on faux performances for her dolls in her bedroom and who as a child and teenager studied piano at the Royal Conservatory of Music.

Her yearning to be a singer notwithstanding, Martinez was given to understand by her pragmatic parents that music might not be a practical choice in terms of earning a livelihood one day.

Being level-headed, she shelved her musical dreams and studied science at the University of Western Ontario, specializing in biology, and took a master's degree in international business, working for a bank in sales and marketing.

"I was searching for security," she explained.

For most people, financial stability usually comes before anything else, but for Martinez, there was more to life than just bringing home a regular pay cheque.

In an allusion to her job at the bank, which lasted less than a year, she said, "I can't say I enjoyed it. I was stressed out. I felt the world closing in on me. I couldn't bear the thought of not trying to follow my dream. I knew, in my heart of hearts, I shouldn't be doing this."

One day, during a lunch break in the concourse of the office building in which she toiled, Martinez stopped to listen to Amy Sky, a Toronto-based performer.

She was instantly smitten.

"She helped me realize I wanted to be up there on the stage, like her."

Martinez asked Sky for advice, and Sky gave Martinez the name of her singing coach. Seriously committed to changing her vocation, Martinez hired Sky's coach and went into reflective mode. "I took time off to figure out what to do," she recalled.

Then, in a courageous leap of faith, she resigned, ditching corporate Canada and doffing her power outfits, and proceeded to pursue her childhood dream.

"I couldn't ignore my calling. I jumped right into it. I was confident I was doing the right thing. My parents were very worried. Now they're my biggest fans and come to most of my concerts."

In 2001, Martinez landed her first gig, in a jazz club in midtown Toronto. To make ends meet while she completed her apprenticeship, she also worked for a local cable-TV provider.

For the next few years, she performed in a variety of venues in Toronto, from the Sassafraz restaurant and the Rex Hotel to Harbourfront and the Lula Lounge.

She sang mostly in Spanish, a language she learned as a child and perfected as an adult.

Her strong, tender voice, registering a range of emotions from passion and joy to plaintiveness and reflection, touched people.

Not one to depend on a single source of income, she auditioned for and got acting roles at CBC, Global, City TV and the Disney Channel.

In 2005, she was hired to host Cafe Latino after sending Jazz.FM a demo tape – "a pretend show" – that impressed the powers-that-be.

She left in 2008, handing the baton to the current hostess, Laura Fernandez.

"I was getting too comfortable. I wanted to put all my energy into my singing career and didn't want to be tied down. But I loved Cafe Latino, and still miss it."

While hosting Cafe Latino, she recorded her first album, the template for her second album, released three years later. The songs, written mainly by Martinez about relationships, love and the joys of motherhood, were primarily in Spanish, with a sprinkling of Portuguese and English numbers.

Since then, Martinez, accompanied by her band, has blossomed as a performer.

She has sung at folk and jazz festivals throughout Canada, appeared at clubs and concert halls in New York City and popped up at pay-the-bills corporate events here and in Mexico.

Last summer, as part of the World Cup festivities in South Africa, she sang her new, uplifting song, Suenos Posibles (Dreams Realized), at three concerts over two days in Johannesburg and Soweto. She was invited to South Africa by the International Federation of Association Football, known as FIFA.

It was an overwhelming experience for Martinez.

She was cheered on by her greatest fans – her mother, Hilary, a native of South Africa and a school teacher; her father, Gustavo, a convert to Judaism and engineer who was born and raised in Mexico and arrived in Canada in 1956; her sister, Michelle, an occupational therapist, and her husband, Drew Birston, a composer, bassist in her band and the father of her two-year-old boy, Leo.

Currently working on her next album, Martinez is now focused on polishing her skills as a musician so she can accompany herself on piano and guitar in the not-too-distant future.

Although she has been quite successful, Martinez hopes to do even better in the future. She believes time is on her side. "I do feel I have an audience that is very receptive to my music."

She added, "I feel there is a lot further I can go. I hope to do more touring in the United States and Latin America, break into the European market and start working with a record label, which could take my career to a new level."

Judging by the body of her work so far, it may just be a matter of time before Martinez hits the big time.

Now, I have global perspective.
Monica Weissmann — Investment Advisor
416 512 3658
monica.weissmann@macquarie.com
Macquarie Private Wealth Inc. is a member of Canadian Investor Protection Fund. MKT-1

At Macquarie, I can deliver more.
Monica Weissmann — Investment Advisor
416 512 3658
monica.weissmann@macquarie.com

International

Israel & the Jewish World

What exactly does Obama expect from Netanyahu?

By ALUF BENN
© Ha'aretz Daily Newspaper Ltd

OPINION

Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu returned from his journey to the United States with an American dictate: freeze settlements for three months, during which time speedy negotiations will be held to determine the future border between Israel and Palestine.

To soften the impression that this would be seen as giving in to U.S. pressure and to make it easier to gain cabinet approval for the freeze, the dictate was padded with political and security goodies, which can be summed up as such: stealth military aircraft in exchange for an end to Netanyahu's evasive tactics.

The prime minister rejected the offer when it was made before the U.S. midterm elections, but now he understands that the game is up and he has to fall in line. He has displayed similar patterns of behaviour in the past when confronted with specific demands by the Obama administration.

Initially, he'd say "no" and explain that he had political difficulties, but when the Americans insisted, he'd succumb. This was the case when he accepted the "two state solution," the 10-month settlement freeze, the suspension of construction in east Jerusalem, and easing the siege on the Gaza Strip.

But now the challenge before Netanyahu is much more daunting. The F-35 fighter jets will land at the Tel Nof and Hatzerim bases in a few years, and the American proposal will make his life much more complicated.

Assuming Israel approves the proposal and the Palestinians agree to resume talks, what happens on the 91st day, after the latest settlement freeze comes to an end? Will Netanyahu submit a detailed proposal on the future borders? And what will the Americans do if the prime minister and Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas do not reach an agreement in three months? Will U.S. President Barack Obama then try to impose his own map? And if the two stick to their refusal, how will the administration respond?

The second major question the deal raises pertains to Iran. At last Sunday's cabinet meeting, Netanyahu said that during every one of his meetings in the United States he raised "first and foremost the need to stop the Iranian nuclear project." The jet fighters the United States has promised Netanyahu are not meant to protect Israel from the Palestinians, but to bolster Israeli deterrence capabilities vis-a-vis Iran. According to intelligence assessments, however, Iran will have a nuclear weapon long before the F-35s become operational in Israel.

Did Netanyahu signal to the U.S. administration that he would avoid an attack on Iran in return for advanced fighters and the defence agreement he requested? It's hard to believe the Americans offered to provide the Israel Air Force with such advanced weapons in exchange for just a three-month settlement freeze. It's more likely that they offered to strengthen Israeli deterrence capabilities in order to prevent a war in the region.

Alternatively, does Netanyahu believe that with a settlement freeze, a resumption of negotiations and the improvement that will ensue in Israel's international standing, he will be able to strike Iran and the "world" will avoid condemnations and sanctions, while it waits for signs of Israeli generosity toward the Palestinians in the West Bank?

The third question, which is more immediate, has to do with the integrity of the coalition. To date, Netanyahu was able to obtain cabinet approval for all U.S. dictates The right-wing ministers in his coalition were not enthusiastic and did not go out of their way to sell the decisions to the public, but neither did they oppose the prime minister publicly. Now the situation is different. Shas announced that it will abstain and Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman declared that "we will not agree to even a single day of freeze."

If Lieberman votes in favour or abstains, and it does not matter what his excuse will be, he will be called a pushover. So it appears that for the first time, Netanyahu will face a divided vote on an important political issue.

But this is precisely what the Americans want: they want Netanyahu to change the composition of his coalition, bring in the Kadima party in place of the right-wing factions and replace Lieberman with Kadima leader Tzipi Livni.

That way the world will see that he's serious about negotiations with the Palestinians. Netanyahu has opted to date to maintain his alliance with the right, fearing that Lieberman would steal voters away from him and that Livni would try to undermine him and push him out of office. But as the 91st day approaches, it may be that he has no choice.

Netanyahu proposes settlement freeze

Continued from page 1

both in the immediate term and vis-a-vis the threats that we will face in the coming decade," Netanyahu said in remarks broadcast by Israeli media.

The deal includes a U.S. undertaking not to request a further extension of the freeze, and to veto any attempt by the Palestinians to win UN recognition of their state unilaterally.

The Obama administration would also ask Congress to approve a $3-billion sale of warplanes to Israel and, should there be peace with the Palestinians, guarantee its wider security needs. These would supplement the 20 F-35s Israel already plans to buy for $2.75 billion drawn from annual grants it gets from Washington.

An Israeli political source said the security cabinet vote was expected later this week and that seven ministers – Netanyahu among them – were likely to back the U.S. proposal, against six who would vote against and two who would abstain.

The forum includes representatives of major coalition partners, from the centre-left Labor party of Defence Minister Ehud Barak and Netanyahu's rightist Likud to the far-right Yisrael Beiteinu party of Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman.

In private, Palestinian officials have expressed anger over U.S. incentives to get Israel to prolong the partial moratorium on settlement building, saying it effectively constituted bribing Israel to fulfil basic international obligations.

A spokesperson for Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas said there had been no formal word regarding a renewed freeze on housing starts in the West Bank, which, along with adjacent east Jerusalem and the Gaza Strip, Israel occupied in the 1967 Six Day War.

"An official Palestinian commitment will come only after President Abbas hears officially from the American administration what is going on between them and the Israelis," Nabil Abu Rdainah told Reuters.

The Palestinians said the original moratorium was too limited in scope, as it did not include public buildings or settler projects already under way. They have also demanded that any new freeze include Jewish districts in east Jerusalem.

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton shared the U.S. proposal at a meeting in New York last week, Netanyahu said.

Israeli officials said Netanyahu, who faces a tough political sell within his own coalition on the settlement issue, had pushed Clinton for the broad understandings.

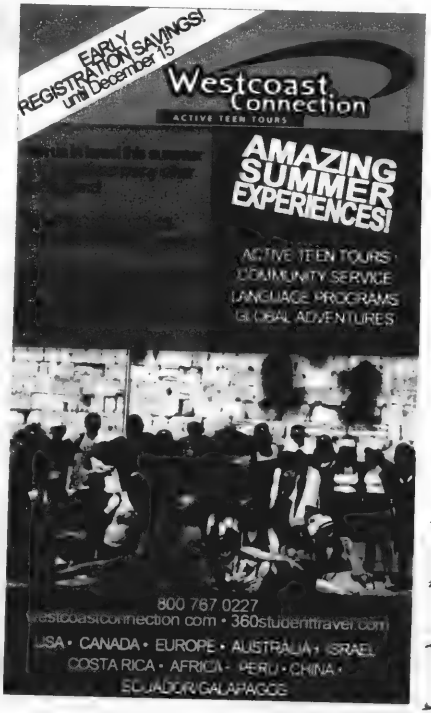
Arab League unlikely to endorse proposal

Meanwhile an Arab League official said Monday that a possible three-month-long temporary freeze on settlement construction in the West Bank would be unlikely to be enough to prompt Palestinian and Arab support for Mideast peace talks.

"If the news is true about there being a settlement freeze that excludes Jerusalem and that takes the criticism off Israel, I cannot imagine that would be acceptable to the Palestinian side or the Arab side," said Hesham Youssef, an official with the office of the secretary general of the Arab League.

He said the Arab League is waiting to see what Israel and the United States are going to offer the Palestinians before making any decisions, though. The Arab League is also mulling over alternative options to direct Palestinian-Israeli talks, one of which may include seeking United Nations recognition of a Palestinian state.

The Arab nations have made clear that, from their vantage point, talks cannot take place while Israel continues to build settlements in the West Bank, a swath of land that would be the cornerstone of any future independent Palestinian state.



17 arrested in $42.5-million fraud at Claims Conference

By URIEL HEILMAN
JTA

NEW YORK — The U.S. Attorney's Office in New York has arrested 17 people for participating in a $42.5-million fraud at the Claims Conference.

Those arrested include former and current employees of the Claims Conference, which distributes more than $400 million per year from the German government to victims of Nazism. The alleged ringleader oversaw the two funds from which the tens of millions of dollars were allegedly fraudulently obtained.

In a news conference on Nov. 9, Claims Conference officials stressed that no Holocaust victims were deprived of any funds because of the crime. Manhattan district attorney Preet Bharara praised the Claims Conference for contacting the authorities as soon as the seriousness of the fraud became apparent and for co-operating with the FBI throughout its investigation.

"If ever there was a cause that you would hope and expect would be immune from base greed and criminal fraud, it would be the Claims Conference, which every day assists thousands of poor and elderly victims of Nazi persecution," Bharara said. "Sadly, those victims were themselves victimized. Without the extraordinary co-operation of the Claims Conference in ferreting out this alleged scheme to defraud them, it never would have been exposed."

Claims Conference officials first noticed about a year ago that several claimants had falsified information to receive payments from the Hardship Fund, an account established by the German government to give one-time payments of approximately $3,600 to those who fled the Nazis as they moved east through Germany.

The officials were tipped off when multiple claimants used the same language and details in forms in which they documented evidence of victimization by the Nazis. That prompted a wide internal investigation that turned up thousands of additional fraudulent claims. The alleged fraud, which dates back to the mid-1990s, remained hidden so long because Claims Conference staffers at various levels conspired to hide and manage the false claims.

In all, 4,957 one-time payments totaling $18 million were obtained from the Hardship Fund through the alleged fraud. Another $24.5 million went to 658 fraudulent pension claims drawing from the Article 2 fund through which the German government gives pension payments of roughly $411 per month to needy Nazi victims who spent significant time in a concentration camp, in a Jewish ghetto in hiding or living under a false identity to avoid the Nazis.

Alleged ringleader Semyon Domnitser oversaw the two funds for the Claims Conference until he was fired in February. Domnitser could not be reached by JTA for comment for this story.

The other 16 people involved with the fraud all reside in Brooklyn and have been charged with mail fraud and conspiracy to commit mail fraud. Eleven were arrested on Tuesday morning last week. Charges against five others, four of whom pleaded guilty, were unsealed the same day. The charges carry possible sentences of up to 20 years in prison and fines of up to $250,000.

Since its founding shortly after the Holocaust, the Claims Conference has processed more than 600,000 individual claims with total payments exceeding $4.3 billion. The money came from the German government following negotiations with Claims Conference officials and Jewish leaders. The Claims Conference continues to negotiate with the German government for the expansion and continuation of various restitution programs.

In addition to processing restitution payments from the German government to Nazi victims, the Claims Conference is the trustee of money from the sale of heirless Jewish properties in the former East Germany that had been seized by the Nazis and are now being restituted to the Jewish community. It uses the money from the sale of those properties to fund institutions that aid survivors and Holocaust education programs, distributing approximately $135 million per year.

About four months after the fraud was discovered, Claims Conference officials went public with the news. In July, the agency announced the discovery of at least $7 million in allegedly fraudulent payments and said it had dismissed three employees in New York. Of those charged last week, six worked for the Claims Conference and 11 did not.

Claims Conference officials stressed that the fraud represents a minimal amount of the annual payouts to survivors through the Hardship and Article 2 funds.

"The stealing of $40 million is disgusting," Gregory Schneider, the executive vice-president of the Claims Conference, told JTA. "But it's less than one per cent of funds distributed under those programs.

"No amount of fraud will be tolerated," he said. "We identified it, documented it, investigated and brought it to the FBI."

In recent months, the Claims Conference said, it has taken steps to strengthen anti-fraud safeguards, overhauling procedures and shifting some claims processing away from New York. The Claims Conference also said it retained K2 Global Consulting, an international firm, to review its procedures and make recommendations.

JTA intern Uri Fintzy contributed to this story.

PERES HONOURS BEN-GURION: Israeli President Shimon Peres spoke at 38th annual memorial ceremony for Israel's first prime minister, David Ben-Gurion, last Sunday, referring to him as "the greatest of leaders in Israel's modern history." The ceremony was held at Sde Boker, where Ben-Gurion lived in the later part of his life and where he was buried. [Moshe Milner/GPO photo]

Improving quality of life

Continued from page 1

Together, they will turn health-care discoveries made in the lab into products and services to help people who are affected by brain diseases and disorders," the province said in a statement.

More than one million Ontarians currently suffer from neurological disorders, and according to the province, some 2.6 million will be affected by a neurological condition in their lifetime.

"We're turning our best research and ideas into new products and services that will create good jobs and improve the quality of life for Ontario families. We're supporting this work to help export our discoveries to the world," McGuinty said.

The institute is part of Ontario's Open Ontario Plan, which seeks to export local expertise worldwide for economic gain.

According to the province, two-way trade between Ontario and Israel is worth about $1.1 billion annually. The Jewish population of Ontario is estimated at around 200,000 people.

Israel Briefs

Sharon moved to ranch

Ariel Sharon was returned to a Tel Aviv hospital after spending a weekend at his ranch for the first time since he fell into a coma in January 2006. The former Israeli prime minister spent the weekend at the ranch in the Negev desert after being moved there last Friday. Since shortly after suffering a massive stroke when he was prime minister, Sharon has remained in a Tel Aviv hospital. The weekend trial was deemed a success, and he's expected to be returned to the ranch in coming weekends to test the possibility of moving him home permanently.

Training crash kills two

An Israeli pilot and navigator were killed when their fighter jet crashed during a training flight in southern Israel. The two-seater F-16I fighter jet, nicknamed Soufa, or storm, crashed last Wednesday night near the Ramon Crater. The bodies were found the following afternoon, several hours after the crash, after an extensive search. Human error is suspected in the accident. Four planes took part in the exercise on the Israeli Air Force's newest plane. Until the exact cause of the crash is found, training on the planes has been halted, the military said. In September 2009, an Israel Air Force F-16A fighter plane crashed during a training flight, killing pilot Assaf Ramon, son of Israeli astronaut Ilan Ramon, who died in the crash of the U.S. space shuttle Columbia in 2003.

Israel called ecology leader

Israel is poised to be a leader in developing solar energy and other renewable energy sources, an American leader in the energy field said while visiting the Jewish state. In addition, "There are real opportunities for U.S.-style venture capital investment in Israel," Michael Eckhart, president of the American Council on Renewable Energy, said during a visit to Israel with a delegation of leading American energy specialists.

"Israel's world-class expertise in solar power, biofuels and electric vehicles can be a catalyst for a global shift to low carbon and secure energy systems," said Marilyn Brown, the 2007 Nobel Peace Prize co-recipient, who was on the trip. The delegation was visiting Israel to discuss best practices in the fields of renewable energy and reducing dependence on fossil fuels.

Abbas slams settlements

Mahmoud Abbas told thousands of Palestinians gathered for a Yasser Arafat memorial that the "the Palestinian state will arise when it is cleared of settlements." The Palestinian Authority president also told the crowd in Ramallah marking the sixth anniversary of his predecessor's death that he wouldn't sign a peace deal unless it included the release of all Palestinian prisoners, Ynet reported. Memorial participants were bused to Ramallah from all over the West Bank. In Gaza, Hamas officials broke up an Arafat memorial consisting of two dozen people screening a film about him.

Egypt nabs terror cell

Egypt arrested a terror cell planning an attack on Israeli tourists in Sinai, the Ma'an Palestinian news agency reported. Some 25 members of the cell were arrested Nov. 11 by Egyptian security forces, according to the agency. Several of those arrested admitted to being part of a terror group. Also Nov. 11, Time magazine reported that Egypt provided information to Israel that allowed the Shin Bet security agency to assassinate Palestinian terrorist Mohammed Namnam in Gaza City last week.

Gates rejects military pressure

U.S. Defence Secretary Robert Gates pushed back against Israeli demands that the United States amp up the threat of military action against Iran. "We are prepared to do what is necessary, but at this point, we continue to believe that the political-economic approach that we are taking is in fact having an impact in Iran," Gates told reporters last week in Australia, where he was on an official visit. Gates was reacting to reports that Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu had made the demand of U.S. Vice-President Joe Biden, whom he met on the sidelines of the Jewish Federations of North America General Assembly last week in New Orleans.

–files from JTA

8,000 more Falash Mora coming to Israel

JTA

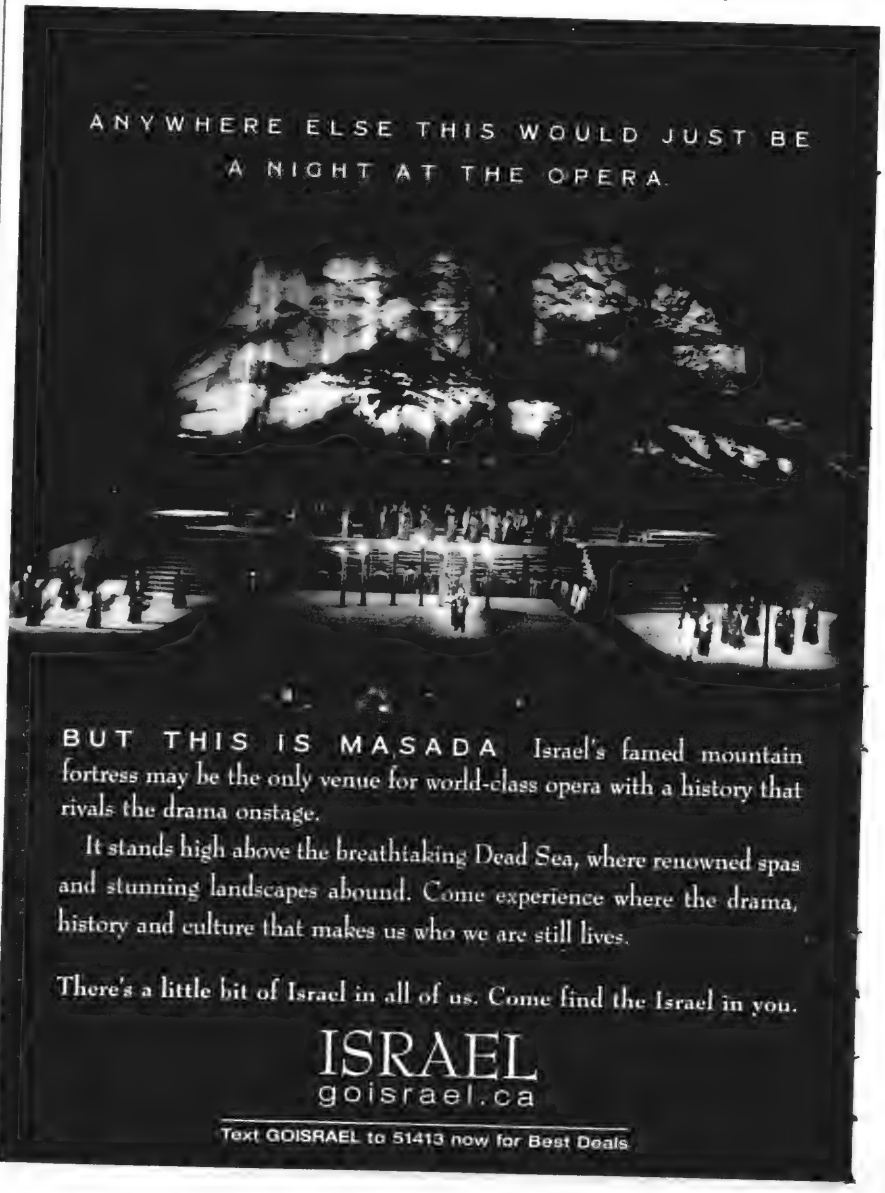
JERUSALEM — Israel's cabinet approved a plan to bring about 8,000 more Ethiopians to Israel over the next four years.

The cabinet's approval came as aid groups involved with Ethiopian aliyah reached an agreement under which mass Ethiopian aliyah will end once these 8,000 Ethiopians are brought to the Jewish state. The would-be immigrants are considered so-called Falash Mora – Ethiopians who claim family links to descendants of Ethiopian Jews who converted to Christianity generations ago. They must embrace Judaism as a condition of their aliyah.

"From my perspective, this closes a cycle because during my first term as prime minister, I brought approximately 5,000 Falash Mora to Israel," Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu told his cabinet on Sunday. "Today we are discussing an agreed-upon arrangement with all of the relevant bodies, and there are many, so that we might finally resolve this painful and complicated problem."

The Ethiopians currently awaiting aliyah live in the Ethiopian city of Gondar, where they receive aid services from the North American Conference on Ethiopian Jewry and health services from the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee. Under the deal reached by the aid groups, the Jewish Agency will take over many of the aid operations, which will cease once the 8,000 people are brought to Israel.

The Ethiopians will be brought at the rate of approximately 200 per month over the course of four years.



ANYWHERE ELSE THIS WOULD JUST BE
A NIGHT AT THE OPERA.
BUT THIS IS MASADA Israel's famed mountain fortress may be the only venue for world-class opera with a history that rivals the drama onstage.
It stands high above the breathtaking Dead Sea, where renowned spas and stunning landscapes abound. Come experience where the drama, history and culture that makes us who we are still lives.
There's a little bit of Israel in all of us. Come find the Israel in you.
ISRAEL
goisrael.ca
Text GOISRAEL to 51413 now for Best Deals

Army converts dragged into conversion wars

By DINA KRAFT
JTA

TEL AVIV — For years, army conversions were seen by many as a convenient solution for resolving at least part of the "Who is a Jew?" question that hangs like a cloud over the lives of tens of thousands of Israelis.

In the Israel Defence Forces, under the guidance of army rabbis, some 5,000 young soldiers in the last decade have undergone a conversion process seen as rigorous but welcoming. That process stands in contrast to the experiences described by many of those seeking civilian conversions run by the haredi Orthodox-dominated Chief Rabbinate.

Now the issue has come to a head with a decision by the Chief Rabbinate not to continue to stand behind IDF conversions until a panel of its rabbis can scrutinize the process.

Furthermore, the Chief Rabbinate broadened the panel's task to re-examine Israel's conversion process across the board. That has left thousands of converts, most of them immigrants from the former Soviet Union, wondering where they stand.

"I am all for high standards for conversion, and I'm also for clear standards for conversion once a person converts under the Chief Rabbinate, but it's outrageous to throw into question their sincerity or their Jewishness," said Seth Farber, an American-born Orthodox rabbi who is the director of Itim, the Jewish Life Information Center, an organization that helps Jews navigate the bureaucracy of the Chief Rabbinate.

The Chief Rabbinate did not answer requests for a comment on the issue.

It was a lawsuit filed by Rabbi Farber's organization that inadvertently prompted the latest crisis in Israel's conversion wars. In the case, currently being heard by the Supreme Court, Itim is suing the Chief Rabbinate and the rabbis of four cities who have refused to recognize army conversions.

During a hearing in September, the state attorney said there was a procedural problem with recognizing the conversions – a snag that elements in the haredi Orthodox community have seized upon to turn the battle into an ideological one. Rabbi Farber and other more liberal Orthodox rabbis argue.

They point to the full-page ads in two haredi newspapers taken out by the rabbinic leadership of the large Lithuanian haredi community as an example of the pressure being put on Sephardi Chief Rabbi Shlomo Amar, who oversees the issue of conversion, to withdraw his sanction of IDF conversions. The ads rail against what the rabbis call fictitious conversions and say that any conversions done without converts taking on the "yoke of mitzvahs" are to be considered invalid.

Israel Eichler, a former Knesset member from the haredi United Torah Judaism party and currently the editor of a religious newspaper, said he had no specific opinion on army conversions. But he suggested that if soldiers' observance was in doubt, there could be a problem.

"A person who converts and does not fulfil the mitzvahs is not a Jew," he said.

Meanwhile, a bill has been submitted to the Knesset that, if passed, would cement the IDF conversions as valid according to halachah, or Jewish law.

But Rabbi Yakov Ruza, the rabbi of the Tel Aviv suburb of Bat Yam and a member of the rabbinical council – the equivalent of the Chief Rabbinate's high court – said those who have converted in the past through the IDF should not be concerned that their conversions could be revoked.

Rabbi Ruza was appointed as one of the rabbis on the new investigative panel but has stepped down, citing technical reasons.

Taking aim at critics of the Chief Rabbinate, however, he suggested that the whole episode is being overplayed.

